PREFACE

This three-volume compilation contains historical documents pertaining to the Social Security Amendments of 1983. The books contain congressional debate, a chronological compilation of documents pertinent to the legislative history of the 1983 amendments and listings of relevant reference materials. Pertinent documents include:

- Committee Reports and Selected Prints
- Differing Versions of Key Bills
- Summaries of Provisions
- Cost Estimates
- The 1983 Act
- Historical Descriptions

The books are prepared by the Office of Legislative and Regulatory Policy, Legislative Reference Office, and are designed to serve as helpful resource tools for those charged with interpreting laws administered by the Social Security Administration.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

MARCH 11 (legislative day, MARCH 7), 1983.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. DOLE, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany S. 1]

The Committee on Finance to which was referred the bill (S. 1) to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommends that the bill do pass.

SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) PROVISIONS

ACTUARIAL ANALYSIS

The OASDI estimates in the following sectional descriptions were prepared by the office of the Actuary, SSA and are based on 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions. Under those assumptions, the Committee amendments described below would permit the timely payment of social security cash benefits through the short-range (1983-89). In the long-range, the Committee amendments are projected to meet or slightly exceed the long-deficit identified by the National Commission on Social Security Reform of 1.80 percent of taxable payroll (revised under 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions to 2.09 percent of taxable payroll).

These amendments are also projected to have a significant impact on the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund. CBO estimates project an increase in the HI trust fund of $14.6 billion over the period fiscal years 1983-88.

The amendments also impact on other Federal programs. To the extent the cost/savings are reflected in the following descriptions, they have been provided by CBO and are based on CBO's February 1983 assumptions. A table showing the impact of these amend-

SUMMARY OF SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) PROVISIONS

Coverage of newly hired Federal employees

Extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been for one year less), and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current Congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system, as of January 1, 1984. Also, states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Coverage of nonprofit employees

Extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations, effective January 1, 1984.

Prohibit withdrawal of State and local employees

Prohibit State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees. Pending terminations would be invalid, effective on enactment. In addition, provide an opportunity for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

Tax exemption for the Amish

Extend the social security tax exemption now applicable to the self-employed Amish to the Amish who are employees of the Amish.

Delay cost-of-living adjustment to a calendar year basis

Provide the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits on a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. For 1983, the COLA would be calculated as under current law (i.e., the change in the CPI for the third quarter of a year over the CPI for the third quarter of the previous year). This would ensure that the lag between the end of the period over which the COLA is measured and the time the COLA is actually applied to benefits remains 3 months. For 1983 only, the COLA would be given even if it is less than 3 percent. The SMI (Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium increase would also be delayed.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits

Reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period. Social security benefits would in no case be reduced by more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was non-covered employment. Also, the percentage reduction in the benefit formula would be limited to no more than 10 percentage points for each year coverage falls shorts of 30 years. Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

Benefits for divorced or disabled widows or widowers who remarry

Allow benefits to continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarry after age 50, and to surviving divorced spouses who remarry after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn.

Changes in indexing for deferred survivor benefits

Provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. Such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's (or widower's) benefits, whichever is earlier.

Independent eligibility for divorced spouses

Allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not the former spouse has claimed these benefits or has had them suspended because of substantial employment.

Increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers

Increase benefits for disabled widow(er)s age 50-59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60.

Adjustment of cost-of-living increase when trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent

Modify the cost-of-living adjustment formula during periods when trust fund reserves are low in order to help stabilize reserves. Beginning with 1988, if the OASDI trust fund ratio (reserves as a percentage of outgo) as of the beginning of a year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. When the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" payments would be made beginning the following year. This would not apply to the COLA for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program.

Increase delayed retirement credit

Gradually increase, between 1990 and 2010, the delayed retirement credit from 3 percent to 8 percent per year.

Increase social security retirement age

Gradually raise the social security retirement age to 66 by the year 2012, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the actuarial reduction factors would be larger.

Long-range benefit change

For workers first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, reduce initial benefit levels by about 5 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years.

Elimination of retirement earnings test

Gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Child-care dropout years:

Allow two years to be dropped out of the formula for computing social security benefits for persons who leave the workforce to care for children under age 3 at home. Presently, the worker's five lowest years of earnings are dropped in the computation of the worker's earnings history. To qualify for an additional childcare dropout year, a person can not have any earnings during the year.

Prisoners benefits

Eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Limitation on benefits to aliens

In the future, eliminate benefits to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. As a result, no benefits would be paid to alien dependents of alien workers who were acquired (through marriage, birth or adoption) while outside the United States. However, benefits would be paid under the following conditions:

- (1) the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement which provides for reciprocity of social security coverage; and
- (2) benefits would continue until total benefits (excluding any withheld taxes) paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner plus interest.

Fail-safe

To ensure the timely payment of social security benefits during periods when OASDI trust fund reserves are less than 20 percent of annual outgo and are also projected to decline, the Committee agreed to require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to reduce the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline in reserves. The Secretary will first reduce (or withhold) increases for people with benefits which are based on a primary insurance amount above $250 (monthly amount). If necessary, however, people with benefits at or below that level may also have their increases reduced. At a maximum, there would be no benefit increase for anyone. The Secretary would have to notify Congress by July 1 of each year in which he finds that action to limit the next COLA would be required, thereby giving Congress time to enact an alternative solution to the potential funding problem. The provision would apply only after the use of all other provisions, such as interfund borrowing, which are designed to ensure adequate trust fund balances.

Taxation of social security benefits for higher income persons

Subject social security and tier one railroad retirement benefits to income tax based on thresholds of $25,000 for single taxpayers, $32,000 for married taxpayers filing joint returns, and $0 for married taxpayers filing separate returns. To determine whether the taxpayer's income exceeds these thresholds, one-half of social security benefits and all tax-free income would be added to adjusted gross income and tax-exempt interest. For taxpayers over the threshold, the lesser of one-half of social security benefits or one-half of the excess combined income over the threshold amount would be subject to income tax.

Beginning in 1984 the Secretary of the Treasury would be required to transfer to the appropriate trust funds, on at least a quarterly basis, the revenues estimated (on the basis of tax liability to be generated from this provision for that quarter.

Acceleration of increase in FICA taxes; 1984 employee FICA tax

Revise the OASDI tax schedule so that the 1985 rate would be moved to 1984, the 1985-87 rate would remain as scheduled under present law, part of the 1990 rate would be moved to 1988, and the rate for 1990 and after would remain unchanged. The HI tax rates for all years would remain unchanged. For 1984, a refundable tax credit would be provided in the amount of the increase in the employee taxes over what would have been payable under present law: 0.3 percent of taxable wages.

The 1984 refundable tax credit would be allowed against 1984 employee FICA and Tier One Railroad Retirement taxes rather than against income tax.

Self-employment taxes; tax credit against self-employment tax

Make the self-employed OASDI tax rate equal to the combined employer-employee rate, beginning in 1984, as those rates are re-scheduled. In addition, the HI tax for the self-employed would be doubled to make it equivalent to the combined employer-employee rate. A credit against self-employment taxes would be provided.

Reallocation of OASDI tax rate

Reallocate the OASDI tax so that both the OASI and the DI trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of the year as a percentage of outgo during the year).

Interfund borrowing extension

Authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI, DI and HI trust funds, protections provided for each trust fund.

Credit amounts of unnegotiated checks to the trust funds

Provide for a lump sum payment to the OASDI trust fund from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, require credit the trust funds on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months.

Military wage credits

Credit the OASDI trust fund, in a lump sum, with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDHI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for the employer-employee taxes (OASDHI) on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

Trust fund investment procedure

Provide for reinvesting all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest based on the average market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.

Public members on board of trustees

Add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members shall not be considered fiduciaries and shall not be personally liable for any actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.

Accelerate State and local deposits

Apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that presently apply to private employers.

Triggered normalization of tax transfers

When, at the start of any month, the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1½ months of benefits, the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month. Interest would be paid to the General Treasury.

Social security wage base

Expand the social security wage base to include certain deferred compensation.

SUMMARY OF SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME SSI PROVISIONS

Delay the SSI COLA and increase the SSI disregard

Delay the annual cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) for SSI payments from July to January, beginning with the July 1983 benefit increase, thereby maintaining the link between the COLA for SSI and OASDI. In addition, increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the "pass through" requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase.

SSI alert

Require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify elderly OASDI recipients of the availability of SSI and to encourage those potentially eligible to contact their district offices.

TITLE I OF THE BILL

A. PROVISIONS RELATED TO OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS AND DISABILITY INSURANCE

COVERAGE OF NEWLY HIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

(Section 101 of the Bill)

Present law

Approximately 91 percent of the Nation's workers are covered by social security. Federal civilian employees are the only major group excluded from coverage under the social security (OASDI) system. Those excluded (93 percent, or about 2.6 million out of 2.8 million employees) are generally covered by a Federal staff retirement system, engaged in temporary employment, or are members of Congress. (Beginning in 1983, nearly all Federal employees are covered under Medicare.)

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would, effective January 1, 1984, extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been one year or less), and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current Congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system.

This amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to extend coverage to all Federal employees hired after 1983.

The Committee amendment also states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Effective date.—January 1, 1984.

COVERAGE OF NONPROFIT EMPLOYEES

(Section 102 of the Bill)

Present law—Work performed for a nonprofit tax-exempt organization (specified in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) is excluded from social security coverage unless the organization files a certificate with the Internal Revenue Service waiving its exemption from social security taxes. Nonprofit organizations may terminate coverage upon giving 2 years advance notice, providing coverage has been in effect for 8 years or more. Once coverage has been terminated, the organization cannot again cover its employees. About 4.3 million employees of nonprofit organizations (about 80 percent) are covered.

Committee amendment—The Committee amendment would extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date—January 1, 1984.

PROHIBIT WITHDRAWAL OF STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES

(Section 103 of the Bill)

Present law

Employees of State and local governments may be covered under social security at the option of the State and in agreement with the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Coverage may be terminated if the State gives 2 years written notice of such intent, provided that the State or local group has been covered for at least 5 years. Once coverage is terminated, the group can never again be covered under social security.

Committee Amendment

The Committee amendment would prohibit State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees. Pending terminations would be invalid, effective on enactment. In addition, the amendment would provide an opportunity for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

This amendment is similar to the recommendation of National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Exclusion from social security coverage for services performed by members of certain religious sects (sec. 104 of the bill and sec. 3121 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

In general, social security (FICA) tax is imposed on every individual who receives wages with respect to employment. In addition, social security tax is imposed on employers who pay wages with respect to employment. There is no exemption, under present law, for employers or employees who are members of religious sects that oppose the social security system. However, present law does provide an exemption from self-employment tax (SECA) for members of religious sects that are conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provision for the care of their dependent members.

REASON FOR CHANGE

The committee believes that employers and employees who are members of the Amish sect, or other religious sects that oppose participation in the social security system, should be treated the same as self-employed members of those sects. That is neither Amish employers nor Amish employees should be required to pay social security taxes. This provision is necessary because, due to economic conditions, many Amish members cannot afford their own farms, but, rather, must work for other Amish farmers.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

The provision will exempt from social security tax wages paid by individuals who are exempt from self-employment taxes because of their religious beliefs to individuals who are members of religious sects that conscientiously oppose the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provisions for the care of their dependent members. This exemption applies both to the employer and employee portion of social security tax.

The exemption applies only in the case of religious sects that have been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

DELAY COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT TO A CALENDAR YEAR BASIS

(Section 111 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) of social security benefits is applicable to June benefits (payable early in July). The amount of the increase is equal to percentage by which the Consumer Price Index (for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, CPI-W) for the first quarter of the calendar year has increased over the CPI for the first quarter of the previous calendar year. No COLA is paid unless the increase in the CPI is at least 3 percent. By law, cost-of-living adjustments in the SSI program are made at the same time, and in the same amount as the social security cost-of-living adjustment.

The Committee amendment would shift the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits to a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. For 1983, the COLA would be calculated as under current law (i.e., the change in the CPI for the first quarter of 1983 over the CPI for the first quarter of 1982). Beginning with the COLA for 1984, the adjustment would be computed by comparing the increase in the CPI for the third quarter of a year over the CPI for the third quarter of the previous year. This would ensure that the lag between the end of the period over which the COLA is measured and the time the COLA is actually applied to benefits remains 3 months. This is the same proposal recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

In addition, the Committee amendment would, for 1983 only, provide the COLA even if it is less than 3 percent. The SMI (Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium increase would also be shifted to a calendar year basis.

Under the Committee amendment, the SSI COLA would also be shifted to a calendar year basis and would be measured in the same way as for OASDI purposes.

Effective date.—For cost of living adjustment otherwise payable in July 1983 checks.

ELIMINATE "WINDFALL" BENEFITS

(Section 112 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security benefits for workers with low average earnings are a relatively high proportion (up to 90 percent) of their average earnings under social security. No distinction is currently made between persons who have a lifetime of low earnings and those who have low average earnings only because they worked few years in covered employment (possibly at high wages) and many years in employment not covered by social security. Both groups receive the heavily weighted social security benefit intended for the first group. The heavily weighted benefit paid to the second group is often referred to as a "windfall".

The present law benefit formula for persons who reach age 62 or who become disabled before age 62 in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of average indexed monthly earnings in covered employment (AIME), plus 32 percent of AIME over $254 and up to $1,528, plus 15 percent of AIME in excess of $1,528.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers who do not have a long record of substantial work under social security, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period as follows:

Benefit factor

| Year of first eligibility under OASDI: | Percent |
|--|---------|
| 1984 | 78.4 |
| 1985 | 66.8 |
| 1986 | 55.2 |
| 1987 | 43.6 |
| 1988 and after | 32.0 |

To moderate the impact of this provision on people with small pensions from non-covered employment, social security benefits could in no case be reduced by more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was non-covered employment. The offset would not apply to persons with pensions based on one year or less of non-covered employment.

In addition, the Committee amendment exempts from any reduction under this provision those individuals who have a long history of substantial work under the social security program. People who have thirty or more years of covered employment in which they paid social security taxes on at least 25 percent of the maximum taxable earnings would have their benefits computed under the regular provisions without any reduction under the windfall provision. People with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment would have the windfall reduction applied on a phased in basis under which the first factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below thirty years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision however. (A year of substantial employment is a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended modifying the social security benefit formula so as to eliminate windfall benefits received by workers who in the future receive social security as well as pensions from non-covered employment. (No specific formula was recommended.)

Effective date.—January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a non-covered pension after 1983.

BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED OR DISABLED WIDOWERS OR WIDOWS WHO REMARRY

(Section 113 of the Bill)

Present law

Current law permits the continuation of benefits for widows and widowers who remarry after age 60, the age of first eligibility for benefits. If the widow(er) marries after age 60, he or she receives the benefits to which he or she is entitled as a wage earner, widow(er) or spouse, whichever is larger. However, benefits for disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses (payable from age 50 to 60) and for surviving divorced spouses (payable at age 60) are terminated if the individual remarries.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that benefits continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarry after age 50, and surviving divorced spouses who remarry after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn. This is comparable to the present law treatment of widows and widowers.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—For benefits payable for months after December 1983.

CHANGES IN INDEXING FOR DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

(Section 114 of the Bill)

Present law

Survivor benefits (for widows, widowers, and surviving children) are based on the deceased worker's earnings in covered employment. Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes.

Should the worker die long before the spouse is eligible for benefits, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible (in old-age or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus, women who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband's unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide wage increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.

The Committee amendment would provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's benefits, whichever is earlier. In no case would benefits be lower than under present law.

Effective date.—For persons becoming eligible for survivors benefits after December 31, 1984.

INDEPENDENT ELIGIBILITY FOR DIVORCED SPOUSES

(Section 115 of the Bill)

Present law

A divorced spouse, eligible for benefits at age 62, may not begin to draw social security benefits until the worker begins to draw benefits. For some divorced women, this means that they may have to wait several years beyond their own retirement age (either because their ex-spouse delays retirement or otherwise fails to apply for benefits) before they can begin to draw benefits.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not the former spouse has claimed these benefits or has had them suspended because of substantial employment. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that the proposal would only apply to spouses who have been divorced for at least two years.

INCREASE BENEFITS FOR DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS

(Section 116 of the Bill)

Present law

Social Security benefits for widows and widowers are first payable at age 60. Benefits are payable in full (i.e., 100 percent of the worker's primary insurance amount) at age 65, and at reduced rates at ages 60-64 (i.e., phasing up from 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 60). Benefits also payable at reduced rates to disabled widows and widowers aged 50-59 (i.e., phasing up from 50 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 50).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would increase benefits for disabled widow(er)s age 50-59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60. The proposal would be applicable to new beneficiaries and to those on the rolls on the effective date of the provision. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

ADJUSTMENT OF COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

(Section 117 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) in social security benefits is applicable to the June benefit, which is payable at the beginning of July, and is based on the increase in the Consumer Price Index. When increases in prices outrun increases in wages, income to the trust funds falls behind outgo, and cash flow problems may result. There is no mechanism under current law to adjust trust fund outlays and revenues to take account of such adverse economic fluctuations.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would modify the cost-of-living adjustment formula during periods when trust fund reserves are low in order to help stabilize reserves. Specifically, if the OASDI trust fund ratio (reserves as a percentage of outgo) as of the beginning of a year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" benefit payments would be made during the following year, but only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32 percent. Catch-up payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for any COLA losses that result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices. This would not apply to the COLA for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—This provision would first be applicable in 1988.

Cost/savings.—This proposal is estimated to have no impact on the trust funds under 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions.

INCREASE DELAYED RETIREMENT CREDIT

(Section 118 of the Bill)

Present law

A worker who delays retirement beyond age 65 (i.e., does not actually receive social security benefits) is eligible for a delayed retirement credit (DRC). The worker's benefit is increased for each month after age 65 and prior to age 72 for which benefits are not paid, either because of earnings or because the worker does not claim benefits. For workers eligible for benefits after 1978, the DRC is equal to 3 percent per year (one-quarter of 1 percent per month).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually increase, between 1990 and 2010, the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent per year, as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. (The amount of credit would relate to year of attainment of age 65.) Beginning in 1990 the DRC would be increased by ¼ percent each subsequent year until reaching 8 percent in 2010.

OASDI cost: -0.10 percent of taxable payroll.

INCREASE IN RETIREMENT AGE

(Section 119 of the Bill)

Present law

Unreduced retirement benefits are available to workers, spouses, and widows and widowers at age 65. Actuarially reduced benefits are available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually raise the age at which full social security benefits are payable from 65 to 66, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Under this provision, the normal retirement age would be increased one month per year, reaching 66 for those attaining 62 in the year 2012 or later. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available beginning at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the actuarial reduction factors would be larger. The minimum age for eligibility for medicare benefits would continue to be tied to the age at which unreduced retirement benefits are first available.

The majority of the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform made this recommendation. In addition, they recommended indexing the retirement age to changes in longevity, beginning in 2012.

Effective date.—For people attaining 62 in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.40 percent of taxable payroll.

LONG-RANGE BENEFIT CHANGE

(Section 120 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing social security benefits, a worker's earnings under social security are averaged and a benefit formula is applied to those average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents' and survivors' benefits are based on the worker's PIA.

The formula for a worker who becomes eligible for benefits in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of AIME, plus 32 percent of the AIME from $254 through $1,528, plus 15 percent of the AIME over $1,528.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for the new group of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

This system was adopted by the 1977 Social Security Amendments. The annual adjustment of the dollar amounts in the benefit formula, the bend points, by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker's prior earnings that are replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

For people first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, the Committee amendment would reduce initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years. This would have the effect of reducing the ultimate replacement rate by 5 percent.

Effective date.—For people first becoming eligible for retirement or disability in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.43 percent of taxable payroll.

ELIMINATION OF RETIREMENT EARNINGS TEST

(Section 121 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Effective date.—The provision would be phased in between 1990 and 1994.

OASDI cost.—This amendment is estimated to cost 0.05 percent of taxable payroll in the long-range.

CHILD-CARE DROP OUT YEARS

(Section 122 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing a worker's covered earnings history under social security (upon which his and his family's benefits are based), up to five years in which earnings are lowest are dropped.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow up to two additional years to be dropped for persons who leave the workforce to care for a child under 3 in the home. To qualify for a child-care drop year, the worker can have no earnings at all during the year.

Effective date.—For persons first eligible for benefits after 1983.

PRISONERS BENEFITS

(Section 123 of the Bill)

Present law

Persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony may not receive student benefits (which are being phased out anyway), and are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependents benefits are not affected.) Also, impairments resulting from the commission of a crime cannot be the basis for disability benefits and impairments occurring during imprisonment cannot be the basis for disability benefits during the period of imprisonment.

Presently, benefits may continue to be paid to incarcerated felons who are either retired workers, widow or widower beneficiaries, spouses of retired or disabled workers, and to those DI beneficiaries in a court-approved rehabilitation program.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would expand present law to eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Effective date.—Applicable to benefits paid for the month after enactment.

OASDI Cost: Negligible.

ELIMINATE BENEFITS TO ALIENS

(Section 124 of the Bill)

Present law

There are no citizenship or residence requirements for receiving social security cash benefits (OASDI). Any alien in the U.S.—whether legally or illegally, or as a permanent or temporary resident—is eligible for benefits provided he has engaged in covered employment and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements. Dependents and survivors are also eligible for benefits regardless of their immigration status or that of the insured worker.

About $1 billion is being paid annually to the 314,000 beneficiaries who reside abroad. About 70% of these beneficiaries are aliens.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, in the future, benefits would be eliminated to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. No benefits would be paid to alien dependents of alien workers who were acquired (through marriage, birth or adoption) while outside the United States. However, benefits would be paid under the following conditions:

(1) the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement which provides for reciprocity of social security coverage; and

(2) benefits would continue until total benefits paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner.

Effective dates.—This amendment would apply to new eligibles on or after January 1, 1985.

FAIL-SAFE PROVISION

(Section 125 of the Bill)

Present law

Presently, there are no "fail-safe" provisions in the social security system that ensure benefit payments can be met on an ongoing basis in the face of adverse economic conditions. (The Board of Trustees is required to report immediately to the Congress if any of the trust funds is "unduly small".)

Under the Committee amendment, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required to make an annual evaluation of the projected balances in the cash benefits trust funds, taking into account future cost-of-living increases. If the cash benefits (OASDI) fund reserves are projected to decline from the start of the next year to the start of the following year and to then be less than 20 percent of a year's benefits, the Secretary would be required to notify the Congress and if no action is taken, to scale back the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline which would leave the reserves below that level.

Insofar as possible, the limitation on the COLA would be applied to people whose benefits are based on a primary benefit level of more than $250 per month. The determination as to whether a limitation on the cost-of-living increase was necessary would be made only after taking into account all other statutory provisions for assuring adequate funds. The Secretary would have to notify Congress by July 1 of each year in which he finds that action to limit the next cost-of-living increase would be required under this provision. Since cost-of-living increases will be reflected in the January checks, this would give Congress several months in which to provide additional funding or to address the problem in any other manner the Congress might find to be appropriate.

The Committee views this provision as a last resort which would come into play only after all other authorities for maintaining trust fund solvency had been exercised. Thus, for example, other provisions in this legislation for such procedures as interfund borrowing and normalization of tax transfers would be invoked before this provision would be operative to the extent that such procedures are authorized by law. Under current projections such measures should be sufficient to keep fund balances from declining to dangerous levels. If, however, unexpected adverse situations should develop, this provision would assure that sufficient reserves were maintained so that regular, timely payment of monthly benefit checks would not be placed in jeopardy.

This provision would implement the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform that this social security financing legislation include provision for a "fail-safe" mechanism.

Effective date.—Determinations beginning July 1, 1984.

OASDI Cost Impact: This provision is not expected to be utilized under the 1983 Trustees intermediate (II-B) assumptions.

PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

A. Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits (sec. 131 of the bill, new Code secs. 86 and 6050, and Code secs. 861, 871, 1441, and 6103)

Present law

Under present law, social security benefits are excluded from the gross income of the recipient. Their exclusion is based upon a series of administrative rulings issued by the Internal Revenue Service in 1938 and 1941 (see I.T. 3194, 1938-1 C.B. 114, I.T. 3229, 1938-2 C.B. 136, and I.T. 3447, 1941-1 C.B. 191). Railroad retirement benefits are excluded from gross income under the Railroad Retirement Act.

In general, the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodic income (which is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business) received by a nonresident alien from U.S. sources is subject to a 30-percent tax (Code sec. 871); this tax is collected by withholding (sec. 1441). A pension for services performed in the United States would be U.S.-source income and the gross amount of a U.S.-source pension is subject to the 30-percent withholding tax or a lower rate if so provided by treaty. The U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty, as well as a number of actual tax treaties to which the United States is a party, provides reciprocally that pensions received by a resident of one country from sources in the other country are taxable only by the country of residence. However, the United States has reserved the right to tax social security benefits in the U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty and a number of actual tax treaties.

Reasons for change

The Committee believes that the present policy of excluding all social security benefits from a recipient's gross income is inappropriate. The committee believes, further, that social security benefits are in the nature of benefits received under other retirement systems, which are subject to taxation to the extent they exceed a worker's after-tax contributions and that taxing a portion of social security benefits will improve tax equity by treating more nearly equally all forms of retirement and other income that are designed to replace lost wages (for example, unemployment compensation and sick pay). Furthermore, by taxing social security benefits and appropriating these revenues to the appropriate trust funds, the financial solvency of the social security trust funds will be strengthened.

Because Tier 1 benefits provided under the Railroad Retirement Act are largely equivalent to social security benefits, the committee believes that corresponding changes also should be made in the tax treatment of these benefits. That is, a portion of railroad retirement benefits also should be subject to income taxation.

By taxing only a portion of social security and railroad retirement benefits (that is, up to one-half of benefits in excess of a certain base amount), the Committee's bill assures that lower-income individuals, many of whom rely upon their benefits to afford basic necessities, will not be taxed on their benefits. The maximum proportion of benefits taxed is one-half in recognition of the fact that social security benefits are partially financed by after-tax employee contributions. The bill's method for taxing benefits assures that only those taxpayers who have substantial taxable income from other sources will be taxed on a portion of the benefits they receive.

Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits

Under the committee's bill, a portion of social security benefits will be included in the gross income of recipients whose adjusted gross income exceeds certain levels. (This provision is not intended to change the tax treatment of social security benefits paid by foreign governments; these benefits have been held by Treasury to be fully includible in gross income (Rev. Rul. 62-1979, 1962-2, C.B. 20)). The bill defines a "social security benefit" as any amount received by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to either (1) a monthly benefit under title II of the Social Security Act (Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Benefits (OASDI)), or (2) Tier 1 benefit under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974. A Tier 1 benefit generally is a monthly benefit equal to what an individual would receive if the formula for computing social security benefits were applied to the individual's history of covered wages under both the social security and railroad retirement systems.

Social Security benefits, to the extent they are taxable, will be included in the taxable income of the person who has the legal right to receive the benefits. For example, benefits paid to a child (or on behalf of a child under section 203(i) of the Social Security Act) will be considered to be the child's and will be added to the child's other income to determine whether they are taxable. The amount of benefits received refers to benefit payments after reductions under such provisions as actuarial reductions, family maximum, and the earnings test, but includes certain amounts that may be withheld from benefits, such as payments of supplementary medical insurance premiums, where the amounts withheld are for the purpose of meeting a financial obligation incurred by the individual entitled to receive such benefit payments. In addition, the amount of any social security benefits received will include the total amount of the benefits without any reduction for attorneys' fees, if any, paid in order to enable an individual to receive those benefits. The committee expects the Secretary of the Treasury to provide guidance on the extent to which expenses (such as attorneys' fees) incurred in perfecting claims to social security benefits may be deducted, now that some of the social security benefits may be taxed.

Social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of a taxpayer for a taxable year will be limited to the lesser of (1) one-half of the social security benefits received, or (2) one-half of the excess of the sum of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income, interest on obligations exempt from tax, and one-half of the social security benefits received, over the appropriate base amount. Thus, the maximum proportion of social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of any taxpayer will be one-half of benefits. This provision does not affect the exclusion for interest on tax-exempt obligations. Rather, it merely includes that interest in the base for the purpose of determining the amount of an individual's social security benefits that will be taxed.

The base amount is $32,000 in the case of a married individual filing a joint return; zero in the case of a married individual filing a separate return, unless he or she lived apart from his or her spouse for the entire taxable year; and $25,000 in the case of all other individuals.

The base amount is zero for married individuals filing separate returns because the committee believes that the family should be treated as an integral unit in determining the amount of social security benefit that is includible in gross income under this provision. If the base amount for these individuals were higher, couples who are otherwise subject to tax on their benefits and whose incomes are relatively equally divided would be able to reduce substantially the amount of benefits subject to tax by filing separate returns.

For the purpose of determining how much of a taxpayer's social security benefit will be included in gross income, a taxpayer will be permitted to reduce benefits received during the taxable year by the amount of benefits, previously received during the current or any preceding taxable year, that he repays during the taxable year. This provision is necessary to prevent a taxpayer from being subject to taxation on his benefits in those situations in which a taxpayer must repay a portion of those benefits because he has been overpaid previously. A taxpayer will be permitted an itemized deduction, to the extent allowed under section 165, for repayments of social security benefits which had been included in gross income in a previous year, to the extent that the repayments exceed social security benefits received by the taxpayer, and not repaid, during the taxable year. Alternatively, if such amount repaid exceeds $3,000, the taxpayer has the option under section 1341 to compute tax for the taxable year without the deduction and to subtract from that amount the reduction in tax that would have resulted from excluding the amount repaid from income for the year of the overpayment.

The committee's bill provides an elective, special rule for taxpayers who receive lump-sum payments. This rule was determined to be necessary because in some situations involving lump-sum payments of benefits attributable to prior years, the general income-averaging rules may not provide adequate relief.

If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the sum of the increases in gross income that result solely from taking into account the appro-appropriate portions of the lump-sum payment in the taxable year to which they are attributable. The committee intends that when lump-sum payments are made, the Social Security Administration or Railroad Retirement Board will notify the recipients thereof of the taxable years to which the payments are attributable.

Social security benefits are to be treated as a pension or annuity and, therefore, not treated as earned income, for purposes of the earned income credit, the deduction for contributions to individual retirement arrangements, the deduction for two-earner couples, and the foreign earned income exclusion.

Returns relating to social security benefits

Information reporting will be required with respect to benefit payments. Specifically, the appropriate Federal official (i.e., the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in the case of social security benefits, and the Railroad Retirement Board, in the case of railroad retirement benefits) will be required to report to the Treasury (1) the aggregate amount of benefits paid with respect to any individual during any calendar year; (2) the aggregate amount of benefits repaid by the individual during the calendar year; and (3) the name and address of the individual with respect to whom benefits are paid. In addition, each individual receiving social security or railroad retirement benefits will be furnished with a written statement showing (1) the name of the agency making the payments, and (2) the aggregate amount of payments and repayments. This statement will be due by January 31 of the year following the year in which social security benefits are paid.

Treatment of nonresident aliens

The committee's bill provides that social security benefits paid by the United States are U.S.-source income for purposes of the Code, including the foreign tax credit. In addition, one-half of social security benefits paid to nonresident aliens will be subject to the general 30-percent tax which will be collected by withholding. The committee's bill is not intended to override the treatment of social security benefits provided in existing income tax treaties to which the United States is a party.

The committee's bill permits the Secretary of the Treasury to disclose to the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board available return information from the master files of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the address and status of an individual as a nonresident alien or as a resident or citizen of the United States. This information, which may be disclosed upon written request, may be disclosed to the Social Security Administration and the Railroad Retirement Board only for purposes of carrying out their responsibilities for withholding taxes from social security benefits of nonresident aliens. Any return information disclosed under this provision will be subject to the present law requirements regarding recordkeeping and safeguarding of return information.

Transfers to trust funds

The committee's bill appropriates to each payor fund the increase in Federal income tax liabilities attributable to taxing social security benefits. This amount is the difference between total income tax liabilities for the year and what income tax liabilities would have been without the application of the Code sections which provide for the taxation of benefits. A "payor fund" is any trust fund or account from which payments of social security benefits are made.

The appropriated amounts are to be transferred from time to time (but no less frequently than quarterly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury. Transfers to the payor funds may be based on the proportion of each type of benefit as a share of the total benefits potentially includible in gross income under these provisions. For example, suppose that after adding OASI benefits, DI benefits and Tier I railroad retirement benefits the shares of these in the total are 80 percent, 16 percent, and 4 percent, respectively. These percentages of the increase in tax liabilities described above may then be transferred to the respective funds.

Any quarterly payment to a payor trust fund must be made on the first day of the quarter and must take into account social security benefits estimated to be received during the quarter. Proper adjustments are to be made in the amounts subsequently transferred to the extent that prior estimates were in excess of, or less than, the amounts required to be transferred. A final determination of the amount required to be transferred for a year may be based on an estimate derived from the appropriately weighted sample of individual income tax returns for that year which is used as the basis for the Internal Revenue Service's publication of statistics of income for that year under Code section 6108. In making these estimates, the Secretary of the Treasury need not take account of certain provisions of the tax law that might affect an individual's tax liability (e.g., income averaging, loss carrybacks, etc.) if these provisions are judged to have an inconsequential effect on the estimates.

The Secretary of the Treasury will be required to submit annual reports to the Congress and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Railroad Retirement Board concerning (1) the transfers made during the year, and the methodology used in determining the amount of the transfers and the funds or account to which made, and (2) the anticipated operation of the transfer mechanism during the next five years.

Taxation of Tier One railroad retirement benefits

The Committee's bill provides that railroad retirement "Tier 1" benefits are subject to taxation to the same extent and in the same manner as monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act. As a result of this change, certain amounts will be transferred regularly to the Railroad Retirement Account.

Under the financial interchange between railroad retirement and social security, however, the social security trust funds are placed in the same position they would have been in if railroad employment were covered under social security. Therefore, the committee understands that existing law requires that the proceeds of income taxes on those railroad retirement benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits are to be credited to the social security trust funds through adjustments in the financial interchange. This will produce exactly the same result as if the social security system had paid that portion of the tier I benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits and had received the proceeds of the income tax on these benefits.

In general, the provisions will apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending after that date. However, the provisions will not apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, if the generally applicable payment date of these benefits was before January 1, 1984.

B. Acceleration of increases in FICA taxes; 1984 employee tax credit (sec. 132 of the bill; secs. 3101, 3111, and new sec. 3510 of the code)

Present Law

Under present law, several increases in social security payroll tax (FICA) rates are already scheduled to take effect between 1985 and 1990, as shown in the following table:

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RATE (EACH)

| Year | OASDI | HI | OASDI-HI |
|-----------|-------|------|----------|
| 1984..... | 5.4 | 1.30 | 6.70 |
| 1985..... | 5.7 | 1.35 | 7.05 |
| 1986..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1987..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1988..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1989..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1990..... | 6.2 | 1.45 | 7.65 |

Reasons for change

In conjunction with other changes in the law which are designed to help insure the solvency of the OASDI Trust Funds, the committee has found it necessary to advance the OASDI increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1990 to 1988. In order to cushion the impact on workers of the first change, a one-time tax credit is provided to employees equal to the 1984 increase in the employees FICA tax.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides a new schedule of OASDI rates and leaves HI rates unchanged. The new OASDI rates and combined OASDHI rates are as follows:

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RATE (EACH)

| Year | OASDI | HI | OASDI-HI |
|-----------|-------|------|----------|
| 1984..... | 5.70 | 1.30 | 7.00 |
| 1985..... | 5.70 | 1.35 | 7.05 |
| 1986..... | 5.70 | 1.45 | 7.15 |

| Year | OASDI | HI | OASDI- HI |
|-----------|-------|------|--------------|
| 1987..... | 5.70 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1988..... | 6.06 | 1.45 | 7.51 |
| 1989..... | 6.06 | 1.45 | 7.51 |
| 1990..... | 6.20 | 1.45 | 7.65 |

Because railroad retirement (RR) payroll taxes are linked to the rates for social security, the committee's bill also provides similar increases in the corresponding railroad retirement taxes.

The bill provides employees a credit equal to 0.3 percent of compensation subject to the FICA and RR taxes and to payments of amounts equivalent to FICA taxes under section 218 of the Social Security Act. Because the credit is to be taken into account at the time the tax is collected (by deduction from the employees' wages or otherwise), the net OASDI employee tax rate for 1984 will be 5.40 percent. However, employees' annual wage statements are to show the gross FICA tax (7.00 percent of wages) and the credit amount (0.3 percent of wages) separately. As under present law, the appropriation of funds into, for example, the OASDI trust funds will be based on the gross OASDI employee tax rate, which will be 5.70 percent and, thus, will not be affected by the credit.

Effective date.—These provisions will apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

C. Self-employment income tax and credit (secs. 133 of the bill and secs. 43, 164, 275, 401, 1401, and 1402 of the Code)

Present Law

The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax rate that is equal to approximately 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax rate that is equal to 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

The presently scheduled OASDI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1981..... | January 1, 1985..... | 8.05 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1990..... | 8.55 |
| December 31, 1989..... | | 9.30 |

The HI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1980..... | January 1, 1985..... | 1.30 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1986..... | 1.35 |

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR—Continued

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|-------------------------|-------------|----------|
| December 31, 1985 | | 1.45 |

Under present law, the expenses of compensation or purchased services, including wages, the employer FICA tax, and payments to self-employed individuals are deductible, for income tax purposes, as business expenses. However, neither the employee FICA tax nor the SECA tax is deductible.

Reasons for change

The committee is concerned that, under the current system, self-employed individuals pay into the social security system less than employers and employees, taken together, contribute for equal benefits. Thus, even though an employer may take an income tax deduction for his share of the payroll tax paid on behalf of an employee and Federal revenues would be reduced thereby, the social security trust funds received less than is necessary to provide benefits to self-employed individuals. This disparity in receipts contributes to the financial difficulties of the social security system.

Explanation of provisions

Under the bill, the OASDI rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDI rate, and the HI tax rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee HI rate. In order to cushion the impact of the increase, the bill provides a permanent credit against SECA taxes.

The OASDI tax rate on self-employment income will be:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|-------------------------|-----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1983 | January 1, 1988 | 11.40 |
| December 31, 1987 | January 1, 1990 | 12.12 |
| December 31, 1989 | | 12.40 |

The HI rate for self-employed persons will be:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|-------------------------|-----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1983 | January 1, 1985 | 2.60 |
| December 31, 1984 | January 1, 1986 | 2.70 |
| December 31, 1985 | | 2.90 |

Beginning in 1984, self-employed persons will be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984, the credit will be 2.9 percent of self-employment income. For 1985, the credit will be 2.5 percent. For 1986, the credit will be 2.2 percent. For 1987-1989, the credit will be 2.1 percent. For 1990 and subsequent years, the rate of the credit will be 2.3 percent. The SECA tax credits may be taken directly into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

The SECA tax credits will not reduce the revenues of the social security trust funds, since under the Social Security Act, appropriations into the trust funds will be based on the SECA tax rates specified above without regard to the credits allowed against such taxes.

Effective date.—The provisions will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

REALLOCATION OF OASDI TAX RATE

(Section 141 of the Bill)

Present law

The tax rate allocation between OASI and DI is fixed in the law. The following table displays the allocation for employers, employees and the self-employed:

OASDI TAX RATES

(In percent)

| | Employers and employees, each | | | Self-employed | | |
|---------------------|-------------------------------|-------|-------|---------------|--------|-------|
| | OASI | DI | OASDI | OASI | DI | OASDI |
| 1982 to 1984..... | 4.575 | 0.825 | 5.4 | 6.8125 | 1.2375 | 8.05 |
| 1985 to 1989..... | 4.750 | .950 | 5.7 | 7.1250 | 1.4250 | 8.55 |
| 1990 and later..... | 5.100 | 1.100 | 6.2 | 7.6500 | 1.6500 | 9.30 |

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reallocate the OASDI tax so that both trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of a year as a percentage of outgo during the year). This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

The following table displays the new allocation for the OASDI tax rate:

(In percent)

| | Employers and employees, each | | | Self-employed | | |
|---------------------|-------------------------------|-------|-------|---------------|--------|-------|
| | OASI | DI | OASDI | OASI | DI | OASDI |
| 1983..... | 5.075 | 0.625 | 5.7 | 10.4625 | 0.9375 | 11.40 |
| 1984 to 1987..... | 5.20 | .50 | 5.7 | 10.4 | 1.0 | 11.40 |
| 1988 to 1989..... | 5.53 | .53 | 6.06 | 11.06 | 1.06 | 12.12 |
| 1990 to 1999..... | 5.60 | .60 | 6.20 | 11.2 | 1.20 | 12.40 |
| 2000 and later..... | 5.55 | .65 | 6.20 | 11.1 | 1.30 | 12.40 |

Effective.—The first reallocation would apply for 1983.

INTERFUND BORROWING EXTENSION

(Section 142 of the Bill)

Present law

Public Law 97-123 authorized, through December 31, 1982, borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds whenever it was determined by the Managing Trustee (the Secretary of Treasury) that additional funds were needed to pay benefits. The Conference Report specified that amounts borrowed could not exceed what was required to ensure benefit payments through June 1983. Under this authority, and to fulfill this purpose, $17.5 billion was transferred to the OASI trust fund from the DI and HI trust funds in 1982 (of which $12.4 billion was from HI).

Under the law, the borrowing fund is required to make periodic interest payments on outstanding balances. Also the loan must be repaid when the Managing Trustee determines that the assets of the borrowing fund are sufficient to begin repayment.

Committee amendment

Through 1987, the committee amendment would authorize inter-fund borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds. The following protections would be provided for the HI trust fund: (1) interest would be paid monthly to HI on any outstanding loans to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent (with no more to be borrowed than would reduce such ratio to 10 percent); (3) in 1983-87, OASDI would repay loans from HI whenever the OASDI fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 15 percent; and (4) in 1988-89, OASDI would repay HI, in 24 equal monthly payments, the loan balance outstanding at the end of 1987 (plus interest on any outstanding loan balance).

Similar protections would be provided for the OASI and DI trust funds in the event that HI were to borrow from OASDI.

The amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI and DI trust funds and to the OASI and DI trust funds from the HI trust fund.

Under the Committee amendment, using intermediate cost estimates the amounts available from the HI trust fund for loans (in excess of the 10 percent requirement) to the OASDI trust funds would be about $7 billion in 1984, $5 billion in 1985, $4 billion in 1986, and $3 billion in 1987; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87. Under the pessimistic cost estimate, such amounts available from the HI trust fund would be about $6 billion in 1984, $4 billion in 1985, and zero in 1986-87; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87 (although slightly worse experience during that period would make loans necessary).

Effective.—On enactment.

CREDIT AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO THE TRUST FUNDS

(Section 143 of the Bill)

Present law

The social security trust funds are not credited for OASDI benefit checks which remain uncashed. Instead, the value of benefit checks which are not cashed remains in the General Fund of the Treasury.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, it would require the implementation of a procedure under which: (1) the Treasury Department would make it possible to distinguish OASDI checks from other government checks; and (2) the trust funds would be credited on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months. This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform which required only the initial lump sum transfer, assuming that future transfers were already provided for.

Effective date.—The lump sum transfer would be made in the month following the month of enactment of this provision.

MILITARY WAGE CREDITS

(Sections 144 and 145 of the Bill)

Present law

Since 1946, the OASDI system has provided gratuitous wage credits to persons who serve in the military forces. Such military personnel have been credited with earnings (upon which benefits are based) for which no payroll taxes have been paid. Two types of credits have been given: (1) for World War II veterans, noncontributory wage credits of up to $1,920 per year for active military service from 1940 to 1957; and (2) noncontributory wage credits of $1,200 per year for military service performed after 1956 to recognize the value of non-cash compensation, such as food, shelter and medical services. (In 1957, members of the military were compulsorily covered under social security.)

To finance the costs incurred in paying the benefits based on periods of military service for which no contributions were made, the social security trust funds receive reimbursements from the General Fund of the Treasury. The annual reimbursement to the trust funds has been about $700 million in recent years.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would credit the OASDHI trust funds, in a lump sum, with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDHI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for the employer-employee taxes on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform except that the Committee has extended the provision to include HI.

Effective date.—Lump sum is payable in the month following the month of enactment. Lump sums would be payable within 30 days after the enactment of this provision.

TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURE

(Section 146 of the Bill)

Present law

Payroll tax revenues which are in excess of the amount necessary to pay current benefits must be invested, generally in "special issue" obligations available for purchase only by the trust funds. Such obligations have maturities fixed with "due regard" for the needs of the trust funds and bear an interest rate equal to the average market yield on all marketable, interest bearing obligations of the U.S. government which are not due or callable for at least 4 years.

The maturity dates on new special issues and the redemption schedule for trust fund investments are not set by law, but by Treasury procedure. The Treasury attempts to set the maturity dates for special issues from 1 to 15 years—so that about $\frac{1}{15}$ of the total portfolio comes due in each of the next 15 years. When securities must be sold to meet benefit obligations, special issues with the shortest duration until maturity are sold first. In the event that there are several securities with the same duration until maturity, those with the lowest interest rate are sold first.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides for reinvesting all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest based on the average market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.

The amendment would require the Managing Trustee to: (1) redeem all present special issues at their face amount; (2) redeem all flower bonds (marketable government bonds which, for inheritance tax purposes, are redeemable at par) at their current market values; and (3) invest, on a monthly basis, the redeemed investments and all future funds only in separate depository accounts for each of the trust funds.

This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, except that the Commission recommended investing in special issues.

Effective.—The first day of the first month beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment.

Revenue Gain. No significant gain or loss anticipated.

PUBLIC MEMBERS ON BOARD OF TRUSTEES

(Section 147 of the Bill)

Present law

The Board of Trustees of the four social security trust funds (Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Supplemental Medical Insurance) consists of, ex officio, the Secretaries of the Treasury, Health and Human Services, and Labor, with the Secretary of the Treasury serving as the managing trustee. Among other responsibilities, the Board of Trustees is required to report to Congress each year on the operation and status of the trust funds, review the general policies followed in managing the trust funds, and recommend changes in such policies.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members would not be considered fiduciaries and would not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform also proposed that the Board of Trustees of the OASDI trust funds be expanded to include two public members.

Effective.—On enactment.

Cost.—None.

ACCELERATE STATE AND LOCAL DEPOSITS

(Section 148 of the Bill)

Present law

Requires the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees within thirty days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

By contrast, the frequency with which deposits of social security taxes and income taxes are made by private employers is determined under regulations issued by Treasury and vary in accordance with the tax liability of the employer. Deposits are required as frequently as every week for employers with large liabilities and as infrequently as every three months for employers with smaller liabilities.

Although State and local governments are now governed by the same rules as private employers with regard to depositing withheld income taxes, deposits of social security taxes continue to be treated differently.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that now apply to private employers.

Effective date.—Effective for deposits required to be made after December 1983.

TRIGGERED NORMALIZATION OF TAX TRANSFERS

(Section 149 of the Bill)

Present law

Under current procedures, social security taxes are transferred to the trust funds on a daily basis on Treasury estimates of amounts collected. OASDI benefit payments, however, are concentrated at the start of the month creating the need for high balances in the OASDI trust funds during the first week of the month.

The Committee amendment provides that, when at the start of any month, the Secretary of Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1½ months of benefits (reserves less than 12% of outgo), the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month.

Interest would be paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred at a rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.

Effective.—On enactment through 1987 (when the authority for interfund borrowing expires).

Cost.—Negligible.

Present law

Cash or deferred arrangements

Under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)) forming a part of a tax-qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf or to receive such amount directly from the employer in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the employee's election are treated as employer contributions to the plan and are excluded from the employee's taxable income and social security wage base.

Amounts distributed with respect to an employee under a qualified plan generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Tax-sheltered annuities

Under present law, tax-sheltered annuities (sec. 403(b)) may be purchased on an individual basis for employees of public schools or tax-exempt religious, charitable, and other organizations described in section 501(c)(3). Subject to certain limitations, amounts paid by the employer to purchase the annuity are excluded from the employee's income. A tax-sheltered annuity may be purchased for an employee pursuant to a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee.

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that amounts paid for a tax-sheltered annuity pursuant to a salary reduction agreement are includible in the employee's social security wage base, even though such amounts may not be subject to income tax withholding. The validity of the ruling position is in doubt in light of the Supreme Court decision in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States (see following section of this report).

Amounts distributed under a tax-sheltered annuity generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Cafeteria plans

Under an employer's cafeteria plan (sec. 125), a covered employee may choose among various benefits, which may include cash, taxable benefits, or nontaxable benefits. If certain requirements are met, amounts applied under a cafeteria plan toward nontaxable benefits (e.g., accident and health benefits or plan contributions under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement) are excluded from the employee's income and generally from the social security wage base. Taxable benefits chosen by the employee (e.g., cash) are includible in income and generally includible in the wage base.

Eligible State deferred compensation plans

Under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)), an employee of a State or local government or a rural electric cooperative may elect to defer compensation, subject to certain limits. Amounts deferred under an eligible plan are excluded from income until paid to the employee under the plan. Eligible State deferred compensation plans generally are not retirement plans for purposes of the rules defining "wages" includible in the social security wage base. (For example, the income tax rules for eligible plans permit distributions to an employee after age 59½ without regard to whether the employee is retired.) Thus, amounts deferred are includible in the social security wage base at the time of the deferral if the plan is not a retirement plan.

Non-qualified deferred compensation plans

Under present law (sec. 3121(a)), standby pay or payments made to an employee on account of retirement, either on an individual basis or under a plan or system of the employer providing for employees generally, may be excluded from the social security wage base without regard to whether the payments are under a tax-qualified retirement plan (sec. 401(a) or 403(a)) or other tax-favored retirement savings program (e.g., a tax-sheltered annuity (sec. 403(b))).

Reasons for change

Generally, if an employee receives cash and then chooses to use these funds for personal savings or benefits, the amount of cash received is subject to FICA. This is true, for example, for contributions to an individual retirement account (IRA) even if the employer transmits the funds directly to the IRA account.

Under cash or deferred arrangements, certain tax-sheltered annuities, certain cafeteria plans, and eligible State deferred compensation plans, the employer contributes funds which are set aside by individual employees for individual savings arrangements, and thus, the committee believes that such employer contributions should be included in the FICA base, as is the case for IRA contributions. Otherwise, individuals could, in effect, control which portion of their compensation was to be included in the social security wage base. This would make the system partially elective and would undermine the FICA tax base.

The committee also believes that it is appropriate to exclude payments from the social security wage base where the payments are made from a tax-qualified or other tax-favored retirement plan. However, the committee does not believe that such tax-favored treatment under the FICA tax rules generally should be extended to deferred compensation plans which do not qualify for tax-favored treatment under the income tax rules.

Under the bill, an employer's plan contributions on behalf of an employee under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be

includible in the social security wage base for tax and coverage purposes to the extent that the employee could have elected to receive cash in lieu of the contribution. The provision is intended to apply to elective amounts under the cash or deferred arrangement and not to nonelective amounts contributed by employers to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan of which the arrangement may be a part.

The bill also provides that any amounts paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee would be includible in the employee's social security wage base. The committee intended that the provision would merely codify the holding of Revenue Ruling 65-208, 1965-2 Cum. Bull. 383, without any implication with respect to the issue of whether a particular amount paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity is, in fact, made by reason of a "salary reduction agreement".

In addition, amounts subject to an employee's designation under a cafeteria plan that includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee that is not otherwise excluded from the definition of wages under section 3121 of the Code.

The bill would also include in the social security wage base amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)). The payment to such a plan would be treated as wages received in the year in which the services relating to the payment were performed. However, no change is made to the present-law self-employment tax (SECA) rules regarding amounts paid under an eligible State deferred compensation plan on behalf of an independent contractor.

Under the bill, nonqualified deferred compensation generally is includible in the social security wage base when it becomes available to the employee. For this purpose, nonqualified deferred compensation generally includes payments under a deferred compensation arrangement which is not (1) a tax-qualified plan, (2) an individual retirement arrangement (IRA), (3) a simplified employee pension (SEP), (4) a tax-sheltered annuity, or (5) a governmental plan. A governmental plan is one established and maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing. However, elective deferrals under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)) are includible in the wage base as described in the preceding paragraph, and amounts payable under a deferred compensation plan of a State or local government which is not an eligible plan (sec. 457(e)(1) and (e)(2) (D) and (E)) are includible in the wage base when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture by the employee.

The bill also includes conforming changes to the provisions (sec. 3306) defining "wages" for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA). Deferred compensation includible in the social security wage base under the bill would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes. In addition, the bill provides that certain sick pay which is includible in the social security wage base under provisions enacted in 1978 would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes.

Effective date.—These changes apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983. Codification of Rowan decision with respect to meals and lodging (sec. 151 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law

Under present law, amounts which constitute wages for income tax withholding purposes (Code sec. 3401) and amounts which constitute wages for social security tax purposes (Code sec. 3121) are separately defined. However, in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States, 452 U.S. 247 (1981), the Supreme Court held that the definition of wages for social security tax purposes and the definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes must be interpreted in regulations in the same manner in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary.

At issue in Rowan was whether the value of meals and lodging provided employees at the convenience of the employer were wages for social security tax purposes (i.e., were includable in the social security wage base). The value of such employer-provided meals and lodging may be excluded from the income of an employee (sec. 119). Treasury regulations required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base, but excluded such value from the definition of wages subject to income tax withholding. The Supreme Court decision invalidated those Treasury regulations which required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base.

Reasons for change

The social security program aims to replace the income of beneficiaries when that income is reduced on account of retirement and disability. Thus, the amount of "wages" is the measure used both to define income which should be replaced and to compute FICA tax liability. Since the security system has objectives which are significantly different from the objective underlying the income tax withholding rules, the committee believes that amounts exempt from income tax withholding should not be exempt from FICA unless Congress provides an explicit FICA tax exclusion.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that, with the exception of the value of meals and lodging provided for the convenience of the employer, the determination whether or not amounts are includible in the social security wage base is to be made without regard to whether such amounts are treated as wages for income tax withholding purposes. Accordingly, an employee's "wages" for social security tax purposes may be different from the employee's "wages" for income tax withholding purposes. In addition, the bill provides that the definition of wages for social security tax and benefit purposes is revised to exclude the value of employer-provided meals and lodging to the extent such value is also excluded from the employee's gross income.

Effective date.—The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Treatment of contributions under simplified employee pensions (SEPs) (sec. 152 of the bill and sec. 3121(a)(5) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the Internal Revenue Code excludes from the social security wage base employer payments to or on behalf of an employee under a simplified employee pension (SEP). However, such employer contributions are treated as covered wages for social security benefit purposes.

Reasons for Change

The committee believes that it is inappropriate to treat employer payments to a SEP as covered wages for benefit purposes where such amounts are excluded from the social security wage base for tax purposes.

Explanation of provision

The bill amends the Social Security Act to exclude from the definition of covered wages for social security coverage purposes employer contributions to a SEP that are deductible as such by the employer. The bill makes clear that the exclusion applies, for both tax and coverage purposes, only with respect to the employer's contribution to a SEP, not with respect to the amount equivalent to the employee's contribution to an individual retirement arrangement (IRA).

Effective date.—This provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

TITLE II OF THE BILL

INCREASE THE SSI PAYMENT STANDARD AND MODIFY PASS- THROUGH REQUIREMENTS

(Sections 201 and 202 of the Bill)

Present law

The first $20 of income received by an individual in a month is disregarded in determining SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The income may be earned or unearned (except for some income based on need, such as veterans' pensions, which is fully counted). The disregard was provided in the original statute in 1972 to ensure that persons who had contributed toward an entitlement, such as OASDI, were better off than those who had not. The amount of the disregard has not been increased since 1972.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendments would:

A. Increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983; and

B. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the "pass through" requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase. Presently, States which provide payments to supplement the Federal SSI payment are required to pass through to recipients any Federal SSI cost-of-living increases. States have two basic options for meeting the pass through requirements: 1) they may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976, or 2) they may make State supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended that, effective July 1983, the SSI disregard be increased by $30 per month for OASDI income (not other income) in determining an individual's SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The effect would have been to increase by $30 the monthly income of those individuals who are entitled to both OASDI and SSI.

Presently, the maximum Federal SSI payment is $284 monthly for an individual and $426 monthly for a couple. After certain disregards, the amount of SSI actually received by an individual is reduced on account of other income.

SSI ALERT

(Section 203 of the Bill)

Present law

Currently, there is no statutory requirement that OASDI beneficiaries be contacted and informed of potential eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. However, since the beginning of the SSI program, the Social Security Administration has undertaken a number of outreach efforts to identify those potentially eligible. SSA routinely provides information about 581 eligibility and takes applications for SSI payments at the time of application for OASDI benefits if the applicant is potentially eligible for SSI payments. In addition, many State agencies and other private relief groups routinely refer clients to SSA. Presently, about 6.9 percent of elderly social security recipients also receive SSI.

The Committee amendment would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries who are potentially eligible of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact their district offices. In addition, the provision would require that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance.

Despite the current and past activities of the Social Security Administration to make persons potentially eligible for SSI aware of the existence of the program, the Committee believes that there may be currently needy OASDI beneficiaries who have been on the social security rolls for a period of time who may have applied for social security prior to the availability of SSI or who may not have been eligible at the time they applied but whose circumstances have since changed.

The Committee provision would alert those OASDI beneficiaries to the availability of the SSI program and would, in the future, also provide notification to those approaching the age of eligibility (age 65) through information contained with a notice of future eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance which is mailed approximately three months before a beneficiary attains age 65.

Effective date.—Notification to those on the rolls must be made before July 1, 1984.

Cost.—Unable to estimate.

TITLE III OF THE BILL

DESCRIPTION OF MEDICARE PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT PROVISION

GENERAL SUMMARY

Present law

Under current law, medicare reimburses hospitals on the basis of the "reasonable costs" they incur in providing covered services to beneficiaries, excluding any part of such costs found to be unnecessary in the efficient delivery of needed services. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) expanded and added to existing medicare limits on reasonable cost reimbursement for hospitals by (1) expanding the existing "section 223" reimbursement limits to apply to total inpatient operating costs (not just routine costs) and (2) adding temporary growth rate limits (expiring after fiscal year 1985) which would rise annually by one percentage point plus the increase in the "market basket" of goods and services purchased by hospitals. TEFRA also directed the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to develop and report to Congress proposals for the reimbursement of hospitals under medicare on a prospective basis. The Department's report was submitted in late 1982, and its recommendations have been embodied in Administration-sponsored legislation. The Committee amendment is a modified version of the Administration's proposal.

The committee amendment includes a major change in the method of payment under medicare for inpatient hospital services. Medicare payment for inpatient operating costs of hospitals would be determined in advance and paid on a per case basis. A fixed amount would be paid for each type of case, identified by the "diagnosis related group" (DRG) into which the case is classified. These changes are intended to create incentives for hospitals to operate in a more efficient manner, since hospitals would be allowed to keep payment amounts in excess of their costs and would be required to absorb any costs in excess of the DRG rates. Hospitals would be prohibited from charging medicare beneficiaries any amounts in excess of the deductibles and coinsurance provided for by law.

The committee amendment would be effective for individual hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and would be phased-in over a 3-year period.

1. Prospective payment amounts

Present law

Under current law, medicare payments for inpatient hospital services are retrospectively-determined based upon a hospital's reasonable costs, subject to certain limits. These reimbursement limits include (1) limits on a hospital's inpatient operating costs (the "section 223" limits) and (2) rate of increase limits on overall inpatient operating costs (a limit which expires after fiscal year 1985).

Committee amendment

(a) Diagnosis-related groups (DRG's).—Under the committee's amendment, the Secretary would be required to determine prospectively a payment amount for each medicare hospital discharge. Discharges would be classified into diagnosis related groups (DRG's) which classify patients into groups that are clinically coherent and relatively homogenous with respect to resource use. The DRG classification system, developed some years ago, has been improved in recent years and represents the most fully developed case classification system representative of a national data base and readily adaptable to a national program. The committee recognizes that in developing a separate payment rate for each DRG it will be necessary to rely on currently available data sources and to use a sample of cases, e.g., the 20 percent sample of medicare beneficiary bills (MEDPAR), to arrive at the DRG rates. The committee expects that the Secretary will refine the DRG rates as better data become available.

The committee recognizes that there may be insufficient data with which to calculate relative prices for some DRG's. Because of the small number of medicare cases in some diagnosis related groups. While this has not been a major problem in the past in the design of a case-mix adjustment using DRGs (in connection with the section 223 reimbursement limit under current law), it is important in the prospective payment system to establish a rate for every DRG whether or not it is likely that a case will actually occur. Therefore, the committee recognizes that the Secretary will need to rely on an alternative method for setting the prospective rate for low-volume DRG's—for example, by combining MEDPAR data for several years or by reference to an external source in which these DRG's are more common, e.g., data from State systems.

(b) DRG payment rates.—Under the committee's amendment the Secretary would be required to determine a national standard payment rate per discharge for each DRG. The rate would be the product of:

- (1) the average of the standardized cost per discharge, for all hospitals in the country, as determined by the Secretary; and
- (2) a weighting factor for each DRG, as determined by the Secretary.

In addition, DRG payment rates would be established for urban and rural areas both nationally and in each of four census regions of the country (the 50 States and the District of Columbia) in order to moderate the impact of the prospective payment system for urban and rural hospitals in different regions of the country. Using data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, each of these payment rates would be adjusted for area differences in hospital wage levels, in similar fashion to the wage adjustment currently used under the section 223 hospital limits.

Hospitals or units of hospitals which are exempted from the prospective payment system would be subject to the rate of increase limits applicable under present law. The current section 223 limits would no longer apply to any of the facilities not included in the prospective payment system for any cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.

(c) Establishment of initial payment rates.—The process for determining DRG payment rates for the first year of the program (fiscal year 1984) begins with the determination of allowable operating costs for inpatient hospital services for each hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available. These cost data would be updated for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated industry-wide actual increase in hospital costs and further updated for fiscal year 1984 by the hospital market basket increase, plus one percentage point. The resulting amounts would be standardized by excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs, adjusting for area wage variations, and adjusting for variations in case mix. The Secretary would then compute an average of these standardized cost levels per discharge for the urban hospitals (as currently defined for purposes of the "section 223" limits) in each of the four census regions and nationally and also for the rural hospitals in each of the census regions and nationally.

Each of the average standardized amounts would be reduced to account for payment that will subsequently be made (see below) to specific hospitals for atypical cases ("outliers").

These average standardized amounts would then be reduced as may be required, to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement provisions that would have applied under the 1982 TEFRA legislation. In determining budget neutrality for the DRG part of the payment, the Secretary would include in the DRG payment amounts the additional payments for outlier cases, for indirect medical education costs, and for costs of nonphysician services to inpatients previously paid for under part B, and additional payments reflecting other adjustments.

The Secretary would next determine a separate urban and rural DRG-specified rates for each census region and the nation by computing the product of the average standardized amounts described above and the weighting factor for each DRG (reflecting the relative use of hospital resources for specific DRG's compared for resources used for other DRG's).

The DRG-specific rates would be further adjusted to recognize area wage differences both nationally and on a regional basis for purposes of determining the payment amount using methodologies similar to those currently used under the section 223 limits. The actual amount of revenue paid to a hospital, in addition to the DRG-specific payment rate, will be, of course, influenced by such factors as: payment for capital costs and costs of approved educational programs on a reasonable cost basis; adjustments for indirect teaching costs; additional payments for atypical—or outlier—cases; and various other exceptions and adjustments.

Under current law, services provided to medicare beneficiaries who are inpatients of a hospital are generally billed under part A of the medicare program. However, under certain circumstances, payments are made for non-physician services (for example, radiology, laboratory, physical therapy, prosthetics, etc.) which are separately billed by the supplier as a part B service even though they are provided to a hospital inpatient. Thus, under current law, some non-physician services may be billed under part A in one hospital and yet, in another hospital may be billed under part B of the program. However, under the committee's amendment, the prospective payment is intended to be payment in full for all covered items and non-physician services to hospital inpatients. Thus, the current practice of allowing independent practitioners to bill part B for items and services provided to inpatients would no longer be permitted under the prospective payment system. Some hospitals and independent practitioners will have to modify their arrangements.

The committee amendment provides that, effective October 1, 1983, all non-physician services provided to hospital inpatients would be paid only as inpatient hospital services under part A with the adjustments described below.

Because there are some limited situations where particular hospitals have extensively followed the practice of allowing direct billing of part B, modifications of these financial arrangements could threaten the financial stability of some institutions. Under the committee amendment, the Secretary would be granted authority to waive the general rules for these few cases for a limited time period not to exceed the transition period during which the new system is phased in. Upon approval of a hospital's request, the Secretary could allow continued payment of part B billings as long as he subsequently deducted the total payments made for these billings from the payments made under the prospective system to the hospital. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the transition, the Secretary may provide for such methods of payment under Part A, as is appropriate given the organizational structure of the institution.

The Secretary would be required to provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before September 1 of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1983) interim final rates, a description of the methodology and data used in computing the DRG payment rates, any adjustment required to produce budget neutrality in relation to the TEFRA level of medicare reimbursement outlays.

In setting the initial payment rates, the Secretary would also be required to recognize the higher payroll costs some hospitals will incur as the result of being required to enter the social security system, by adjusting base costs for individual hospitals and for the prospective rates to accommodate these additional costs.

(d) Annual Updates of the DRG Payment Rates. For fiscal year 1985, the initial DRG payment amounts would be increased by the marketbasket plus one percentage point. As for fiscal year 1984, reductions would be made in the payment rates for additional costs such as outlier payments, indirect medical education costs, and other adjustments in order to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement provisions which would have applied under the TEFRA reimbursement legislation.

(which it is reasonable to expect would occur more commonly in teaching hospitals than in other hospitals).

3. Effective date/transition

Present law

Under current law, the section 223 limits are authorized indefinitely; the rate of increase limits do not apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.

Committee amendment

The prospective payment system would be effective for individual hospital accounting years beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and would be phased-in over a three year period. In year one, 25 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (25 percent national, 75 percent regional); 75 percent would be based on each hospital's own cost-based experience. In year two, 50 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (50 percent each); 50 percent would be based on each hospital's cost experience. In year three, 75 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of DRG rates (75 percent national, 25 percent regional); 25 percent would be based on each hospital's cost experience. In year four, the entire payment would be based on national DRG rates, calculated separately for hospitals located in urban and rural areas. The phase-in of national DRG rates over the three-year period is designed to minimize disruption that might otherwise occur because of sudden changes in reimbursement levels.

The section 223 limits provided under current law would be repealed effective for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983. However, hospitals or units of hospitals not included in the prospective payment system would be subject to the same rate of increase limitation as contained in TEFRA, including the penalties and bonuses. The rate of increase used to update these limits would be that which is currently contained in TEFRA, market basket plus one percentage point.

4. Exemptions, exceptions and adjustments

Present law

Under current law, section 223 limits do not apply to children's hospitals, psychiatric hospitals, long-term care hospitals or to rural hospitals with less than 50 beds. In addition, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions and adjustments to the limits as he deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of psychiatric, public and other hospitals that serve a disproportionate number of low-income and medicare beneficiaries and sole community providers. Current law also requires the Secretary to provide exemptions, exceptions and adjustments to the section 223 limits as he deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of new hospitals, risk-based health maintenance organizations, and hospitals providing atypical or essential services; extraordinary circumstances beyond a hospital's control; and for other purposes.

Under the committee amendment, psychiatric, long-term care, rehabilitation and children's hospitals would be specifically exempted from the prospective payment system. The DRG classification system was developed for short-term acute care general hospitals and, as currently constructed, does not adequately take into account special circumstances of diagnoses requiring long stays and as used in the medicare program is inappropriate for certain classes of patients. In addition, distinct part rehabilitation or psychiatric units of acute care hospitals would be exempt. The Secretary, under current medicare rules and regulations, has prescribed in detail standards and criteria that distinct parts must meet including establishment of separate cost entities for cost reimbursement and requirements that such units have a sub-provider identification number.

The Secretary would be required to provide for exceptions and adjustments to take into account the special circumstances faced by sole community providers. Such providers will be paid on the same basis as all other providers are paid in year one: 25 percent of the payment would be based on a blend of rural national and regional DRG rates (25 percent national, 75 percent regional); 75 percent would be based on each hospital's own cost experience. In no case would total payments in any one transition year be less than the payments made in the preceding year.

The committee is concerned that, in determining which hospitals have been eligible for exceptions and adjustments as sole community providers in the past, the Secretary has applied different criteria in the different regions of the country, including some which are very narrow and restrictive. Therefore, the committee expects that the Secretary, in making such determinations for sole community providers under the new prospective payment system, will develop and take into account a much broader range of factors relating to beneficiary access to basic hospital services. The committee amendment further directs the Secretary to study the problems of paying sole community providers and report back to the Congress, by April 1, 1985, on equitable methods of paying these small rural hospitals which take account of their unique circumstances, including their vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy rates.

Under this amendment, the Secretary would also be required to provide exceptions and adjustments, as he deems appropriate, to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a disproportionately large number of low-income and part A medicare beneficiaries. Concern has been expressed that public hospitals and other hospitals that serve such patients may be more severely ill than average and that the DRG payment system may not adequately take into account such factors. The Secretary in his report to Congress stated that the Department of Health and Human Services would continue to study ways of taking account of severity of illness in the DRG system.

Exceptions and adjustments would also be permitted to take into account the special needs of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii, as the Secretary now does in applying the reimbursement limits of present law.

This provision would exempt from the prospective payment system hospitals located in geographic areas outside the fifty States and the District of Columbia but within the United States for purposes of medicare (i.e. territories). The cost experience of these hospitals may be so varied that the DRG prospective payment system may not adequately reflect the needs of these hospitals.

5. Peer review

Present law

Under current law the Secretary is required to enter into contracts for utilization and quality control peer review with professional review organizations or other review organizations, including medicare intermediaries (subject to certain conditions and limitations).

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require hospitals to contract with a professional review organization (PRO) selected by the Secretary to serve that area, under title XI of the Social Security Act for the review of admissions, discharges and quality of care. The purpose of this contract is to provide for the review of the accuracy of the diagnostic information on the hospital's bills, the completeness and adequacy of the care provided, the appropriateness of its medicare admissions, and the appropriateness of the care provided to patients designated by the hospitals as outliers. These reviews would be covered as a hospital cost of care under Part A, but the PRO would be paid by the Secretary on behalf of the hospital on the basis of a budget approved by the Secretary.

6. Payments to health maintenance organizations (HMO's) and competitive medical plans (CMP's)

Present law

Under current law, health maintenance organizations (HMO's) and competitive medical plans (CMP's) may be reimbursed either on the basis of reasonable costs or under a risk-based contract, a payment equal to 95 percent of the adjusted average per capital cost (AAPCC) for medicare enrollees in the HMO's area.

Committee amendment

Under the committee amendment, an HMO or a CMP that receives medicare payments on a risk-basis may choose to have the Secretary directly pay hospitals for inpatient hospital services furnished to medicare enrollees of the HMO or CMP. The payment amount would be at the DRG rate and would be deducted from medicare payments to the HMO or CMP. The HMO or CMP may alternatively choose to continue to pay the hospital directly.

7. State cost control programs

Present law

Under current law, the Secretary has authority to establish medicare demonstration projects. There are currently four State-wide medicare demonstrations (Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York) and one area-wide demonstration (Rochester, New York).

In addition, the Secretary is authorized, at the request of a State, to pay for medicare services according to the State's hospital cost control system if such system—

(1) applies to substantially all non-Federal acute care hospitals in the State;

(2) applies to at least 75 percent of all inpatient revenues or expenses in the State;

(3) provides assurances that payors, hospital employees and patients are treated equitably; and

(4) provides assurances that the State's system will not result in greater medicare expenditures over a three-year period than would otherwise have been made.

(To date, no State systems have been approved under this authority.)

Committee amendment

The Secretary would be authorized to make medicare payments under a State system if five conditions were met—the four in current law, plus the condition that the State system will not preclude HMO's or CMP's from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to payments for inpatient hospital services. In approving new waivers for State systems, the Secretary would be prohibited from (1) denying an application of a State on the grounds that the State's system is based on a payment methodology other than DRGs or (2) requiring that payments made for medicare patients under the State's system be less than the payments which would have been made under the Federal prospective payment system.

If the Secretary determines that the test of whether or not a State system is resulting in medicare payments in excess of what would otherwise have been paid under the Federal system is based on the State maintaining a rate of increase in payments for medicare hospital inpatient services at no more than a specified percentage increase above a base payment amount for such services, then the State has the option of applying such test either on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the payment amount per inpatient discharge on admission. If the Secretary determines that the test is based on the State maintaining a rate of increase in aggregate payments for medicare hospital inpatient services compared to a national percentage increase in total payments for such services, the Secretary cannot deny a State's application for a waiver on the ground that State's rate of increase in such payments must be less than the national average rate of increase.

For existing State systems, the Secretary must judge their effectiveness on the basis of their rate of increase or inflation in medicare inpatient hospital payments compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments. The State would retain the option to have the test applied during the transition period (3 years) on the basis of either aggregate payments or payments per inpatient admission or discharge. After the transition period, this test would no longer apply, and such State systems would be treated in the same fashion as other waived systems.

If, subsequent to implementation of a State program, the Secretary determines that the amounts paid over a three-year period under a State system exceed what medicare would have otherwise paid over the same three-year period, the Secretary may reduce subsequent payments to hospitals under the State system by that amount.

For those States which currently have a medicare waiver, the Secretary would be required to continue the State program, if, and for so long as, the five conditions noted above are met.

The committee amendment provides that the Secretary would, upon request of a State, modify the terms of the current demonstration agreement that provides that the State's rate of increase in medicare hospital costs be 1.5 percent below the national rate of increase in medicare hospital costs.

Under the committee amendment, the Secretary would be required to approve any State plan which meets the following requirements in addition to those that are included in the current law and the one noted above: that the system (1) is operated directly by the State or an entity designated by State law; (2) is prospective; (3) provides for hospitals to make such reports as the Secretary requires; (4) provides satisfactory assurances that it will not result in admission practices which will reduce treatment to low-income, high cost, or emergency patients; (5) will not reduce payments without 60 days' notice to the Secretary and to hospitals; and (6) provides satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system, the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals. The Secretary would be required to respond to requests from States applying under these eleven conditions within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

8. Administrative and judicial review

Present law

Under current law, a provider may request administrative review by the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB) of a final decision of a fiscal intermediary regarding rates on the provider cost report, subject to certain conditions. A provider may appeal the PRRB decision to Federal court or, where it involves a question of law or regulation which the PRRB does not have the authority to review, the provider may appeal directly to Federal court.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would provide for the same procedures for administrative and judicial review of payments under the prospective system as is currently provided for cost-based payments. In general, the same conditions, which now apply for review by the PRRB and the courts, would continue to apply.

With respect to administrative and judicial review, your Committee's bill would permit review except in the narrow cases necessary to maintain budget neutrality and avoid adversely affecting the establishment of the diagnosis related groups, the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and the appropriate weighting of such groups.

The committee amendment also permits action to be brought jointly by several providers in a judicial district in which the greatest number of such providers are located. Any appeals for judicial review brought by providers which are under common ownership or control would have to be brought as a group, with the PRRB or the district court, in any appeal involving an issue common to such providers.

9. Studies and reports

Present law

Current law directed the Secretary to develop and report to Congress on proposals to reimburse hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, and, to the extent possible, other providers on a prospective basis.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires the Secretary to conduct studies and to report to Congress on the following:

(a) Report annually, through fiscal year 1987, on the progress of implementation and the impact of the payment methodology on classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, other classes of payers for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(b) Collect the data necessary to determine the relationship between physician charges and inpatient services, and report to Congress by January 1985 with legislative recommendation for prospective payments for physician services based on a DRG-type classification of cases. In addition, the Secretary is directed to examine ways to assure that information is transferred between parts A and B of the program, particularly with respect to those cases when a denial of coverage is made under part A, thereby raising questions about the appropriateness of the reimbursement claimed under part B by an attending physician or physicians.

(c) Study the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or such other modifications to the diagnosis related groups and report to the Congress by December 1985 on the advisability and feasibility of providing for the application of such modifications. In addition, the Secretary should report on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas.

(d) Report on the feasibility and impact of eliminating separate urban and rural prospective payment rates of applying the prospective system to all payers, and the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the levels of payments accepted by both public programs and by classes of private payers.

(e) The Secretary will continue hospital demonstrations in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or of methods of payment. The Secretary is also directed to approve a continuation for the On Lok demonstration.

(f) Study the severity of illness and intensity of care differences between hospital and community-based skilled nursing facilities (SNFs), and make recommendations with respect to SNF payment by December 31, 1983. In addition, the committee amendment delays for one year the implementation of section 102 of TEFRA concerning a single reimbursement limit for skilled nursing facilities.

TITLE IV OF THE BILL

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

EXTENSION OF FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMPENSATION (FSC) PROGRAM

(Section 401 of the Bill)

Present law

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) established the FSC program. This program provides additional weeks of unemployment compensation at the same weekly benefit amount to individuals who have exhausted their State benefits and any extended benefits to which they were entitled. The FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, expires March 31, 1983.

As originally enacted, the FSC program provided 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. The Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-424) increased the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits to 16, 14, 12, or 8, depending on the State where the individual filed for or received the additional benefits.

Beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program began providing the following maximum weeks of benefits:

- (1) 16 weeks in States with an insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent (measured as the average over a moving 13 week period);
- (2) 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
- (3) 12 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 4.5 percent;
- (4) 10 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 3.5 through 4.4 percent; and
- (5) 8 weeks in all other States.

In order to qualify for FSC, a worker must have worked at least 20 weeks or earned its equivalent in wages in his base year, usually defined as the first four of the last five completed calendar quarters before he filed his claim for regular State benefits. He must also have exhausted the regular and extended benefits to which he is entitled. In addition, his benefit year must have ended on or after June 1, 1982 or he must have been eligible for extended benefits for any week beginning on or after June 1, 1982.

If an individual is eligible for FSC benefits, the number of weeks of FSC he may receive is determined in relation to the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled. An eligible individual may receive FSC for the lesser of (a) 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled or (b) the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits provided in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in his former State.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would extend FSC for 6 months from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983. To qualify for FSC, an individual would need at least 26 weeks of work or its equivalent in wages in his base year. This restriction would apply only to claimants who initially become eligible for FSC on or after April 1, 1983.

The number of weeks available in each State would be:

(1) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:

- (1) 14 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above;
 - (2) 12 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent;
 - (3) 10 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent;
- and
- (4) 8 weeks in all other States.

No State would, however, lose more than 4 weeks when compared to present law.

(2) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhaust FSC before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:

- (1) 8 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above
- (2) 6 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent
- (3) 4 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent
- (4) 4 weeks in all other States.

(3) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(4) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted their FSC entitlement on September 30, 1983 when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. No new claimants would be added to the FSC program on or after September 30, 1983.

Effective date.—For weeks beginning after April 1, 1983.

OPTIONAL EXCLUSION FROM DISQUALIFICATION FOR NOT ACTIVELY SEEKING WORK UNDER EXTENDED BENEFITS AND FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMPENSATION FOR CLAIMANTS WHO ARE HOSPITALIZED OR SERVING ON JURY DUTY

(Section 422 of the Bill)

Present law

Present law disqualifies claimants from receiving extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation if they are not actively seeking work. Moreover, the disqualified claimant must go back to work for at least 4 weeks and earn at least 4 times his weekly benefit amount before he can qualify again for Extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would permit States to determine on a weekly basis the eligibility availability of claimants of Extended Benefits and Federal Supplemental Compensation who are serving on jury duty or are hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition. A State must treat these individuals in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

DENIAL OF BENEFITS TO NONPROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEES OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS BETWEEN ACADEMIC YEARS OR TERMS

Present law

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) covers employees of educational institutions. FUTA requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to certain professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities if they have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. FUTA gives the States the option of the same denial of benefits, however, for nonprofessional employees of educational institutions.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the denial of benefits between academic years or terms to nonprofessional employees mandatory if the employees have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. In addition, States would be required to deny benefits between terms to individuals performing services on behalf of an educational institution or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or agency.

Effective date

The provision would be effective on or after October 1, 1984. States in which there is no legislative session before that date would, however, be given additional time to comply with this provision.

MODIFICATION OF CREDIT REDUCTION CAP PROVISIONS

Present law

Employers in all States currently pay the tax levied under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally received a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. Prior to reforms enacted in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, State UC programs could borrow on an interest-free basis from the Federal Unemployment Account. However, once a State defaulted on its loans from the Federal account, employers in the State began to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of a least .3 percent a year.

Specifically, if an advance is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State's employers is reduced by .3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional .3 percent (i.e., .6, .9, 1.2 percent, etc.). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970's, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975-1980 for States satisfying specific requirements. Sixteen states are experiencing a credit reduction for 1983.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan repayment conditions: interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after April 1, 1982 (except those made for "cash flow" purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and States are allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

For a State qualifying for the cap, the annual tax credit reduction is limited to 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year, whichever is higher. These loan reform provisions are in effect from January 1, 1981 to December 31, 1987.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State's total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the FUTA penalty tax a State must demonstrate that:

- (1) the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981-1987);
- (2) there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981-1987);
- (3) its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983-1987; and
- (4) the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983-1987). The comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the credit reduction cap provisions in present law permanent. A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law to qualify for the credit reduction cap in present law. The committee amendment would, however, provide two possible lower credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the credit reduction would be 0.2 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral authorized as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the credit reduction would be 0.1 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points. The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reductions. The credit reduction applicable in each subsequent year after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

MODIFICATION OF INTEREST PROVISIONS

Present law

Present law imposes interest of up to 10 percent per year on loans obtained by the States after April 1, 1982, except for "cash flow" loans that States repay by the end of the fiscal year in which the loans were obtained. A State can defer payment of its interest due for the fiscal year by paying 25 percent in each of four years beginning with the year in which the interest is due. Interest accrues, however, on the deferred interest.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the provisions imposing interest on the States permanent. It would also provide for another deferral and a discounted interest rate for which States could apply if they meet certain conditions as certified by the Secretary of Labor.

The new deferral would be 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet two conditions to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and

(2) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 30 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested. Deferral in the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 40 and 50 percent are made.

The discounted interest rate would be one percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

For purposes of determining whether a State meets the conditions in (2) above, the Secretary of Labor will provide an estimate of the unemployment rate for the base year, the calendar year in which the deferral is requested. The level of benefits and revenue liabilities will be determined using the State law in effect before passage of the legislation. The estimate of changes as a result of new legislation will be made from the base year in each year for which a deferral is requested. Once a deferral is approved, a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so would result in immediate payment of all deferred interest.

Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 after calendar year 1982 and increases in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent after calendar year 1984 will not be counted for purposes of meeting condition (2).

States will not be penalized or rewarded if economic events change from those used in the base year for computing eligibility under condition (2).

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

CHANGE IN SECOND YEAR ADDITIONAL CREDIT REDUCTION

Present law

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable wage base of $7,000, the tax rate base on the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if their taxable wage bases were $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would change the computation of the average tax rate to reflect the ratio of the federal unemployment tax base to the national average wage in covered employment.

Effective date.—Taxable year 1983.

CHANGE IN THE DATE INTEREST IS DUE

Present law

Present law requires that interest is due no later than the first day of the next fiscal year. If the first day of the next fiscal year falls on a weekend, interest is due in the prior fiscal year. Otherwise, it is due on the first day of the next fiscal year.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires that interest be paid before the first day of the next fiscal year.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

COLLECTION INTEREST

Present law

Present law provides no mechanism through which the Federal Government can collect interest from the States if the States do not pay interest when it is due.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require the collection of delinquent interest charges one year after they are due by a reduction in the FUTA credit of 0.1 percentage point. Any amount collected during the imposition of this provision exceeding the overdue interest would be applied to the outstanding loan as an involuntary repayment. This provision would provide a specific collection mechanism to assure the payment of interest pending completion of any conformity proceeding which is implicitly but clearly required for nonpayment of interest by a State.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

COSTS OF CARRYING OUT THE PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, D.C., March 11, 1983.

HON. ROBERT J. DOLE,
Chairman, Committee on Finance,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to Section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Congressional Budget Office has prepared the attached cost estimate for S.1, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983,

Should the Committee so desire, we would be pleased to provide further details on this estimate.

Sincerely,

JAMES BLUM
(For Alice M. Rivlin, Director).

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

1. Bill number: S. 1.
2. Bill title: Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.
3. Bill status: As ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983.
4. Bill purpose: To amend the Social Security Act to assure the solvency of the Social Security trust funds; to accelerate presently scheduled payroll tax increases; to tax 50 percent of certain individuals' benefits; to increase the self-employed tax; to delay the payment of cost-of-living adjustments; to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals; to extend the federal supplemental compensation program; and for other purposes.

5. Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The following table shows the estimated costs of this bill to the federal government.

Because no draft language has been received, CBO cannot estimate certain provisions in this bill at this time. These provisions relate to the Unemployment Insurance and SSI programs. The cost estimate for the remaining provisions present the best estimates based on current information.

The spending effects of this bill fall within budget functions 550, 600 and 700. The budget authority is the net result of higher interest income on higher trust fund balances for the Old Age Survivors Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI) and Hospital Insurance (HI) programs, transfers to the trust funds from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury, and required additional budget authority for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI), Food Stamps, Veteran's Pensions and Medicaid programs.

Basis of estimate: This bill generally incorporates the January, 1983 recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It also incorporates provisions affecting the Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and Unemployment Insurance Programs. Table 2, shows the costs, savings and revenue impacts of this bill to the federal government.

One major purpose of this bill is to ensure the continued payment of all Social Security benefits. The impact of some of the provisions in the bill on the financial status of the Social Security trust funds differs from their impact on the federal budget. Many provisions transfer funds within the government, which has no impact on budget outlays or receipts. In addition, the savings to and income into the trust funds generate additional interest income or budget authority. This income also does not affect the unified budget deficit. The impact of the bill on the trust funds therefore is shown separately in Table 3.

⁴ The cost of this provision cannot be estimated because it depends on the actions of state hospital rate-setting commissions in Massachusetts and New York.

⁵ SSI costs do not include costs of the provision requiring notices to be sent to social security beneficiaries informing them about SSI. See the text for details.

Source: CBO estimates based on February 1983 economic assumptions.

A Section by section description for the basis of the estimates for the provisions in this bill having major cost impact is given below.

These estimates were prepared from a draft of the bill before Committee amendments were added and from mark-up documents. No bill as amended has been received.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING THE FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

Cover new Federal employees

This provision extends Social Security coverage to all new permanent federal civilian employees as of January 1, 1984. The proposal is expected to cover about 150,000 new permanent federal entrants per year through 1988. The proposal raises $61 million in unified budget revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $1.7 billion in revenues from fiscal year 1984 through 1988.

This provision assumes no change in the current Civil Service Retirement system for those federal workers newly covered by Social Security. No impact of any Civil Service change is given in this estimate.

The estimate is based on CBO's current economic and federal employment assumptions.

Cover workers in non-profit organizations

The provision requires mandatory coverage of all employees of non-profit institutions and organizations. Approximately 20 percent of employees of non-profit organizations and institutions are not currently covered by Social Security. Covering the last 20 percent of non-profit employees raises $1 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $8.7 billion in fiscal years 1984 through 1988.

The extension of mandatory coverage to all non-profit employees results in an income tax offset against the increase in OASDHI revenues. The offset equals 25 percent of the employer contribution and reduces income tax revenues. Income tax revenues are estimated to fall because it is assumed that non-profit employers pass the entire payroll tax increase onto their employees in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The estimate was based on CBO's economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Termination of State and local coverage

Currently, state and local governments can terminate Social Security coverage upon giving two years notice of their intention to withdraw, and then doing so. This provision would prohibit any such withdrawals, effective with the bill's enactment.

CBO's current law revenue estimates do not assume reductions in trust fund income that could result from withdrawals of certain state and local governments. Thus, there would be no revenue gain to the CBO baseline estimates from prohibiting such withdrawals.

Delay payment of annual cost-of-living adjustment from July to January of each year

This section delays the payment of future cost-of-living adjustments (COLA's) for Social Security for six months, from July to January of each year. In addition, the provision changes the base period from which the COLA is calculated.

The COLA is measured by the growth in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) from the first calendar quarter of the previous year to the first quarter of the current year. Whenever the increase is greater than three percent, an adjustment to the benefits paid each July is made. The July, 1983, COLA will be paid in January, 1984 under this provision, and will be based on the current law indexing period. Subsequent adjustments will be based on the CPI growth from the third quarter of one year to the next. The table below shows the CBO COLA assumptions under current law and under this provision.

ASSUMED PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS UNDER CURRENT LAW AND UNDER S.1

|-----------------------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Current law—July..... | 4.1 | 4.6 | 4.5 | 4.2 | 4.0 | 3.8 |
| Proposed—January..... | 0.0 | 4.1 | 4.6 | 4.4 | 4.1 | 3.8 |

This bill also guarantees that a January, 1984 COLA will be given, even if the rate of inflation is so low that the adjustment is less than three percent. Since CBO's current economic assumptions have this COLA adjustment at 4.1 percent in 1984, this clause has no cost effect.

The change in the COLA base and date of payment is expected to save $24 billion in Social Security benefits over the period, and an additional $1.3 billion in SSI and other benefits directly linked to this COLA. These COLA changes would increase food costs by $240 million over the period as incomes of food stamps recipients decline.

Taxation of 50 percent of social security and railroad retirement benefits for individuals with income above $25,000 and married couples above $32,000

This provision includes in taxpayers' adjusted gross income (AGI) half of Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance (OASDI) benefits when those benefits plus AGI exceeds a threshold amount. For the purpose of taxing half of OASDI benefits, the interest from tax free bonds is added to AGI. The threshold is $25,000 for single returns, $32,000 for joint returns, and zero for married couples filing separately. This limit would be calculated including an individual's or couple's tax exempt income, although this income would not count towards determining one's marginal tax rates. The amount of benefits included in AGI would be the lesser of either 50 percent of benefits or the one-half of the balance of the taxpayers' summed income over the threshold.

The provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 and $15.3 billion from fiscal year 1984 through 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates based on the Social Security Trustees' II-B assumptions, with benefit amounts lowered to take account of the CBO's lower inflation (and therefore cost-of-living adjustments) projections.

Increase social security payroll tax (FICA) and 1984 tax credit

The provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax (FICA) increases for employees and employers. The payroll tax increases to 5.7 percent from 5.4 percent on January 1, 1984 instead of January 1, 1985. Another tax rate speedup increases the rate to 6.06 percent from 5.7 percent on January 1, 1988 and January 1, 1989. This increase was scheduled to take effect in 1990. The proposal also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

The FICA tax acceleration results in an income tax offset equal to 25 percent of the employer payroll tax contribution. The offset lowers income tax receipts because employers are assumed to pass back onto employees the full payroll tax increase in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The provision is estimated to raise OASDI unified budget revenues $6.4 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $19.0 billion from fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The income tax offset equals $2.2 billion from fiscal years 1984 through 1988. The revenue loss due to the payroll tax credit results in a $4.2 billion loss by fiscal year 1985.

The estimates are based upon CBO's latest economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Increase self-employed tax rate

The provision raises the self-employed payroll tax rate (SECA) to a level equal to the combined employer-employee contribution rate (including the FICA tax acceleration). In 1984 the SECA OASDI rate increases 3.35 percent and the HI rate increases 1.3 percent for a SECA rate of 14 percent. Further, the provision includes a payroll tax credit equal to 2.9 percent of total SECA contributions in 1984 and 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, and 2.1 percent in 1987 and 1988.

The proposal raises $1,408 million in SECA revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $20 billion from fiscal year 1984 through 1988. The income tax loss due to the self-employed payroll tax credit equals $893 million in fiscal year 1984 and $10.9 billion from fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988.

Reallocation of OASI and DI tax rates

This provision has no net cost to the federal government. It realigns the payroll tax portions allocated to the OASI and DI trust funds so as to keep the two funds' balances at approximately the same percentage of outlays at the start of each year.

Benefits to certain widows, divorced and disabled women

These provisions would: (1) allow the continuation of benefits to surviving, divorced or disabled spouses who remarry; (2) change the indexing procedure for benefits for those receiving deferred survivor benefits; (3) allow divorced spouses to draw benefits regardless of whether the former spouse is receiving benefits; and (4) increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers.

Together, these provisions would cost less than $200 million per year once fully effective in fiscal year 1985. The largest cost in this group of provisions would allow disabled widows or widowers ages 50 to 59 to receive benefits at an amount equal to which non-disabled widows or widowers over age 59 currently receive. This provision is estimated to cost $90 million in fiscal year 1984, $125 million in 1985 and an estimated $600 million over the five year period. Based on Social Security Administration data, approximately 200,000 recipients would receive $50 or 20 percent in added benefits per month under this provision.

In addition, a provision in this bill to allow women with children additional years of zero earnings in the calculation of their benefits.

Reimbursement to OASDHI trust funds for military wage credits and unearned OASDI checks

These provisions will credit the three Social Security trust funds with $23.8 billion as part of a transfer in 1983 from the general fund of the Treasury. A total of $22.4 billion of this transfer represents the present value of estimated benefits arising from Social Security credits granted to military personnel for service prior to 1957, and the amount of taxes on these credits between 1956 and 1983. The remaining transfer is for the estimated amounts of uncashed Social Security checks for past years. Checks uncashed for longer than six months will also be credited back to the trust funds in future years.

These estimates were provided by the Social Security Administration. Although they add large amounts to the trust funds, the provisions do not have any cost impact to the federal government as a whole. There are offsetting interfund transfers within the federal unified budget.

State payment speedup

This provision will require state and local governments to transfer their payroll tax collections to the Treasury under the same rules as private sector employers. Currently, state payments are made on the 30th day of each month. The provision requires that states transmit payroll tax collections to the federal government soon after their employees are paid. Therefore, the Treasury would receive state FICA collections more frequently. Thus, the transfer to the Treasury would be hastened, adding to trust fund revenues by $1.6 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $2.2 billion over the period.

This estimate was prepared by the Social Security Administration.

LONG-TERM FINANCING

This section of the bill reduced initial benefit levels beginning in the year 2000. There are no effects resulting from these provisions in the 1983 to 1988 period. In addition, the retirement age will be gradually raised from 65 to 66 beginning in the year 2000.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

These provisions are aimed mostly at work incentives for the elderly, and at insuring the financial soundness of the trust funds. The provisions would eliminate the retirement test for workers over the age of 65 beginning in 1990. This test reduces retirement benefits by $1 for each $2 in earnings over a given amount ($6,600 in 1983). A delayed retirement credit of 8 percent would also be phased in. This credit would increase from 3 percent the added benefit amount paid to a retiree for each year a worker decides to retire after age 65.

Another section of the bill would require Congress to act if the balances in the trust funds fall below 20 percent of a year's outlays. If Congress does not, and interfund borrowing (also provided for in the bill) does not achieve this result in each fund, then the cost-of-living adjustments would be altered until the funds recover. The cost-of-living adjustment would be reduced first for those with higher benefits, but those with lower benefits would also ultimately be reduced, if necessary. This cost estimate does not assume any further cost-of-living adjustment reduction beyond the six month delay discussed above.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME PROVISIONS

This title of the bill raises SSI benefits and makes other minor changes in SSI and AFDC. Together these changes are estimated to add $728 million to federal outlays in fiscal year 1985.

Beginning July 1, 1983, SSI benefits would be increased by $20 a month for individuals living in their own household and by $30 a month for couples. These increased benefits would more than offset the effect on SSI recipients of the COLA delay. The largest part of the added cost comes from the benefit increase for current SSI beneficiaries. In addition, CBO estimates that about 125,000 persons would become new beneficiaries of SSI. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits. For these persons, CBO has assumed a participation rate of 25 percent (that is, of all the newly eligible, 25 percent would actually participate in SSI). Some of the other new beneficiaries would be persons previously eligible who would now choose to participate as a result of the increased benefit levels. There are also an estimated 65,000 persons who were receiving SSI state supplements only who would now become eligible for a small federal SSI payment.

Partially offsetting the costs in SSI from these benefit increases is a savings in the food stamp program as incomes of SSI beneficiaries rise. There are also added costs in Medicaid for those new SSI beneficiaries who also become newly eligible for Medicaid.

This title would also enable temporary residents of emergency public shelters to receive SSI for three months in any twelve-month period. This provision is estimated to cost $1 million in fiscal year 1983 and $3 million a year thereafter. In addition, Title IV would disregard in the determination of benefits any in-kind assistance based on need received by SSI and AFDC beneficiaries. This provision, which is effective only through September 30, 1984, is estimated to cost less than $500,000 a year in SSI and $1 million in 1983 and $2 million in 1984 in AFDC.

The bill also apparently includes a provision that would require the Social Security Administration to send notices to Social Security beneficiaries informing them of their potential eligibility for SSI and urging them to contact a local office if they think they would be eligible. No language is available for this provision and the extent of the notices could vary considerably. Hence, there is no cost estimate for the provision. However, costs under even a fairly limited provision could be significant, perhaps around $50 million. Not only would there be added administrative costs but it would be reasonable to assume that around 5 percent of those receiving a notice who are eligible for SSI would apply for SSI benefits.

Federal supplemental compensation

This section of the bill would extend for six months the federal supplemental compensation program (FSC) now scheduled to terminate March 31, 1983. It would provide up to 14 weeks of additional unemployment compensation benefits for individuals exhausting regular or extended unemployment benefits after March 31, the maximum number of weeks provided varying with a state's insured unemployment rate (IUR). In addition, it would provide those persons who have exhausted their FSC entitlement before March 31 with up to 8 additional weeks of benefits, the maximum number of weeks again varying with a state's IUR. Also, it would allow those persons who have benefit entitlements remaining on September 30, 1983 to receive up to one-half the balance of those entitlements.

The estimate of the fiscal impact of this section of the bill is based upon estimates of the states' IURs and weeks compensated, and the determination of whether a state will be paying extended benefits which underlies the CBO baseline. It is assumed that the national seasonally adjusted IUR will be 4.4 percent for both quarters of the extension. Furthermore, it is assumed that 45 percent of those claimants in the current law FSC program would exhaust and collect added weeks of benefits during the extension. This point estimate is based upon the experience of exhaustees of the federal supplemental benefits program of 1975 to 1978.

CBO estimates that any FSC extension results in a reduction in AFDC and Food Stamp outlays as individuals who exhaust unemployment benefits and would otherwise draw benefits from these means-tested programs continue to draw jobless payments. It is estimated that the extension through September 1983 will cause AFDC and food stamp expenditures to drop by $142 million. In addition, CBO estimates that the six-month FSC extension will cause income tax revenues to increase in fiscal year 1984 by $142 million.

Loan reform

This bill contains a provision relating to limiting the federal tax credit reduction and to paying interest of federal unemployment compensation loans to states. CBO has provided no estimates of the fiscal impact of these provisions.

MEDICARE HOSPITAL INSURANCE PROVISIONS

Conforming changes in medicare premiums

The bill would postpone from July 1 to January 1 of the following year increases in Medicare premiums. Current premium amounts would apply during the interim. Future premiums (and the general revenue contribution to SMI) would be calculated on the basis of estimated incurred costs for the calendar year during which the premium would apply. Consonant with the changes made by TEFRA a year ago, SMI premiums would be set at 25 percent of cost per aged enrollee in calendar year 1984 and 1985, but would be limited in subsequent years by the cost-of-living increase in social security benefits in the previous January.

The estimated costs of this provision are the difference between projections of income from premiums under current law and under the amendment. Premium income under the amendment is the product of monthly enrollment projections and monthly premium amounts computed on the basis of projected incurred costs by calendar year.

General.—The bill would provide for reimbursing most hospitals for inpatient services provided to Medicare enrollees on the basis of payment amounts, varying by diagnosis, fixed in advance of the period in which they would apply. The provision would be effective with hospital cost-reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983. With the exceptions discussed below, for the first two cost-reporting periods affected, the payment rates would be set to assure that total Medicare payments for inpatient hospital services in affected hospitals would be neither greater nor less than under current law. If implemented faithfully, the provision would have no budgetary impact in fiscal years 1984 and 1985. In subsequent fiscal years, however, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, advised by a panel of experts, would have nearly unlimited discretion in setting payment rates. Given that discretion, CBO is unable to determine whether the prospective payment provision would result in federal costs or savings after fiscal year 1985.

The proposed mandatory Social Security coverage of employees of non-profit organizations could raise labor costs for some hospitals. Under the bill, Medicare's share of any such costs would be additional costs to the Medicare program. CBO is unable to estimate those costs at this time.

Change in State Waiver Requirement.—The bill would phase out the requirement that the rate of increase in Medicare hospital costs in states currently reimbursing hospitals under demonstration agreements entered into after August 1982 be less than the national rate of increase in those costs. The provision would affect only Massachusetts and New York, both of which operate hospital rate-setting programs that have for several years held their hospital cost increases well below the national average. If those states were to continue to be as successful as they have been, the provision would have no budgetary impact. On the other hand, the provision would allow larger cost increases than current law. If Medicare hospital costs were to rise one percentage point faster under the provision, federal spending would increase by about $50 million in 1984.

6. Estimated cost to State and local governments: A number of the provisions of this bill would affect budgets of state and local governments. Their estimated net impact on categories of state and local expenditures is shown in the table below.

TABLE 4.—ESTIMATED COST TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

| | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |
|-------------------------------|------|-------|------|------|------|------|
| Payroll costs | | 291 | 159 | | | 446 |
| Speedup of FICA deposits..... | | 800 | 105 | 73 | 57 | 105 |
| SSI State supplements | 35 | 120 | 130 | 125 | 125 | 130 |

| Total..... | -15 | 1,238 | 443 | 258 | 242 | 741 |

Basis of estimate: The acceleration of FICA rate increases would add to state and local government payroll costs. Currently, about 70 percent of total state and local government employment is covered by Social Security. State and local governments would have added payroll tax contributions of $291 million in fiscal year 1984 and $896 million over the entire 1984-88 period. The CBO estimate does not include a future cost to states who would no longer be able to withdraw from the Social Security system under this legislation.

The provision speeding up FICA deposits would require state and local governments to forward their FICA deposits about one month earlier. In the first fiscal year following enactment, states would show higher budgetary outlays for their (the employers') share of the FICA deposits which is one-half of the total savings shown for the federal government. In addition, state and local governments would lose small amounts of interest they would otherwise have earned on the balances over a one month period.

The changes in SSI would increase state and local government costs. Virtually all states supplement federal SSI benefits. The $20 benefit increase would raise state costs unless states were to lower their state supplement benefit levels. Typically, lowering of benefit levels requires action by state legislatures. The CBO cost estimate assumes that current state supplement levels remain in effect. Consequently, it represents a maximum cost to state and local governments.

The CBO cost estimate for the $20 benefit increase incorporates added costs to states and localities for current state supplement only beneficiaries, for new state supplement beneficiaries as a result of the new federal beneficiaries (about one-third of federal SSI beneficiaries receive state supplements), and for new state supplement only beneficiaries who are newly eligible. Costs of this provision are estimated to total $124 million in fiscal year 1985.

In addition to the effect of the $20 benefit increase, SSI state supplement costs would be increased by the COLA delays in SSI and OASDI. When COLAs are made, state supplement costs decline slightly because for state supplement only beneficiaries OASDI increases are larger than SSI increases. The costs of the COLA delays are estimated to total about $6 million a year.

The CBO cost estimate does not include any cost effect of the altered "pass-through" requirements of section 402. Current law requires states to pass through to SSI beneficiaries federal benefit increases unless state payment levels are above their December 1976 levels or unless aggregate state SSI supplement expenditures in the 12 months following a federal payment level increase exceed aggregate state expenditures in the 12 months prior to the federal change. This provision would require states to pass through the dollar amount of the COLA that would have occurred in July 1983 under current law and also all future federal benefit increases, even if state payment levels are above the December 1976 levels. Hence, in future years the provision would limit the flexibility of states to reduce supplement levels when federal SSI benefits increase, raising costs for some states. However, for other states—those with payment levels equal to their December 1976 levels—this provision would result in potential savings because they could pass through the July 1983 cost-of-living adjustment amount (roughly $11) rather than the full $20 benefit increase.

Expenditures of state and local governments would also rise because of higher Medicaid costs occasioned by the SSI benefit increase and the Medicare premium delay discussed earlier. The state and local government financing share of Medicaid averages about 46 percent.

The increased federal supplemental compensation benefits for the unemployed would lower state and local government expenditures in two ways. First, AFDC outlays would decline in fiscal year 1983. The state share of such outlays averages 46 percent. Second, outlays for state and local general assistance (GA) programs would also decline. GA programs are fully funded by state and local governments and are means-tested, typically serving those ineligible for AFDC and SSI. There are no reliable statistics on which to base an estimate of savings in GA. However, a rough estimate of the estimated effect in Michigan provided by Michigan analysts was used to estimate national effects. Michigan accounts for about 15 percent of GA expenditures nationwide.

VOTE OF THE COMMITTEE

In compliance with paragraph 7(c) of Rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the following statement is made relative to the vote by the committee on the motion to report the bill S. 1, as amended, was ordered favorably reported by a vote of 18 yeas, 1 nay.

REGULATORY IMPACT STATEMENT

Because of the urgent nature of this legislation and the necessity for prompt action to assure the financial solvency of the social security program, it is necessary to dispense with the requirements of paragraph 12 of Rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate relating to regulatory impact statements as is provided for in the last sentence of such paragraph.

CHANGES IN EXISTING LAW MADE BY THE REVENUE PROVISIONS OF THE BILL AS REPORTED

In the opinion of the committee, it is necessary in order to expedite the business of the Senate, to dispense with the requirements of paragraph 12 of Rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate (relating to the showing of changes in existing law by the provisions of S. 1, as reported by the committee).

 7 ed, in its entirety or with respect to any coverage group, on 8 or after the date of the enactment of the Social Security
 9 Amendments of 1983."

10 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply
 11 to any agreement in effect under section 218 of the Social 12 Security Act on the date of the enactment of this Act, with-13 out regard to whether a notice of termination was in effect on 14 such date.

15 TITLE II—CHANGES IN BENEFITS

16 SHIFT OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS TO CALENDAR
 17 YEAR BASIS

18 SEC. 201. (a)(1) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Se-
 19 curity Act is amended by striking out "June" and inserting
 20 in lieu thereof "December".

21 (2) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(iii) of such Act is amended by 22 striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof "Novem-
 23 ber".

1 (3) Section 215(i)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by strik-
2 ing out "May" each place it appears and inserting in lieu
3 thereof in each instance "November".

4 (4) Section 202(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by strik-
5 ing out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

6 (5) Section 230(a) of such Act is amended by striking
7 out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

8 (6) Section 215(i)(2) of such Act as in effect in Decem-
9 ber 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provisions
10 of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amended by 11 striking out "June" in subparagraph (A)(ii) and inserting in 12 lieu thereof "December", and by striking out "May" each
13 place it appears in subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu
14 thereof in each instance "November".

15 (7) Section 202(m) of such Act (as it applies in certain 16 cases by reason of section 2 of Public Law 97-123) is 17 amended by striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof
18 "November".

19 (8) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply
20 with respect to cost-of-living increases determined under sec-
21 tion 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years after 1982.

22 (b)(1) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act is 23 amended by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu
24 thereof "September 30", and by striking out "1974" and
25 inserting in lieu thereof "1982".

1 (2) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of such Act as in effect in De-
 2 cember 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provi-
 3 sions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amend-
 4 ed by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu thereof
 5 "September 30".

6 (3) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply
 7 with respect to cost-of-living increases determined under sec-
 8 tion 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years after 1982.

9 (c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting
 10 " , and as amended by section 201 (a)(6) and (b)(2) of the 11 Social Security Amendments of 1982," after "as in effect in
 12 December 1978".

13 (d)(1) Section 1612(b)(2) of such Act is amended by 14 redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) as subparagraphs
 15 (B) and (C) and inserting before subparagraph (B) the follow-
 16 ing new subparagraph:

17 "(A) the first $600 per year (or proportionately
 18 smaller amounts for shorter periods) of benefits re-
 19 ceived under title II of this Act;"

20 (2) Section 1612(b)(2)(B) of such Act (as redesignated 21 by paragraph (1)) is amended by inserting before the semi-22 colon at the end thereof the following: " , reduced (but not 23 below zero) by any amount excluded under subparagraph
 24 (A)".

1 (3) The amendments made by this subsection shall be
2 effective with respect to benefits payable under title XVI of 3 the Social Security Act for months after June 1983.

4 ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS
5 RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

6 SEC. 202. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act
7 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
8 paragraph:

9 “(7)(A) In the case of an individual whose primary in-
10 surance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of 11 this subsection, and who becomes entitled after 1983 to a 12 monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under 13 subparagraph (D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earn-
14 ings for service which did not constitute ‘employment’ as de-15 fined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this 16 paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as ‘noncovered
17 service’), the primary insurance amount of that individual
18 during his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance bene-
19 fits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B)
20 with respect to the initial month in which the individual be-21 comes eligible for such benefits, and shall be periodically re-
22 computed thereafter at such times as the Secretary deter-
23 mines there has been a significant change in the amount of 24 such periodic payment.

1 “(B) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply to
2 that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this para-
3 graph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the
4 individual’s primary insurance amount under this subsection
5 (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such
6 computation the percentage of the individual’s average in-
7 dexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of 8 paragraph (1) shall be 32 percent. There shall then be com-
9 puted (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount,
10 which shall be equal to the individual’s primary insurance
11 amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph),
12 except that such second amount shall be reduced by an 13 amount equal to one-half of the portion of the monthly peri-
14 odic payment attributable to non-covered service to which 15 the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the 16 month for which such old-age or disability insurance benefits
17 are payable. The individual’s primary insurance amount shall 18 be the larger of the two amounts computed under this sub-19 paragraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall 20 be deemed to be computed under paragraph (1) of this sub-
21 section for the purpose of applying other provisions of this 22 title.

23 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
24 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
25 insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

1 “(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the
2 requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other
3 than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent
4 to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and
5 such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly
6 periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

7 “(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to
8 receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to
9 provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the pay-
10 ment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any com-
11 putation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

12 “(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies
13 is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that 14 is subsequent to the month in which he becomes eligible for 15 old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that 16 payment for purposes of subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to 17 be the amount to which he is, or is deemed, to become enti-
18 tled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph)
19 in such subsequent month.

20 “(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘peri-
21 odic payment’ includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it
22 is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.”.

23 (b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at
24 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

1 “(5) In the case of an individual whose primary insur-
2 ance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsec-
3 tion (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection,
4 and who becomes entitled after 1982 to a monthly periodic
5 payment (or a payment determined under subsection
6 (a)(7)(D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings in 7 noncovered service, his primary insurance amount for pur-
8 poses of his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance
9 benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or 10 recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this 11 paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) re-
12 duced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

13 “(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount
14 (computed without regard to this paragraph and before
15 the application of subsection (i)); or

16 “(ii) one-half of the portion of the monthly period-
17 ic payment (or payment determined under subsection
18 (a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which 19 that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for 20 the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or disabil-
21 ity insurance benefits.

22 The amount of such periodic payment for purposes of clause
23 (ii) shall be periodically recomputed at such times as the Sec-
24 retary determines there has been a significant change in the 25 amount of such periodic payment.

1 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
2 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
3 insurance amount as determined under subsection
4 (a)(1)(C)(i).”.

5 (e) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at 6 the end the following new paragraph:

7 “(9)(A) In the case of an individual who becomes enti-
8 tled to a periodic payment determined under subsection
9 (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first
10 month in which he becomes entitled to an old-age or disabil-
11 ity insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount
12 has been computed without regard to either such subsection
13 or subsection (d)(5), such individual's primary insurance
14 amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such
15 subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effec-
16 tive with the first month of his concurrent entitlement to 17 either such benefit and such periodic payment.

18 “(B) If an individual's primary insurance amount has 19 been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it be-
20 comes necessary to recompute that primary insurance
21 amount under this subsection—

22 “(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount
23 payable with respect to such primary insurance amount 24 (other than in the case of the individual's death), such 25 increase shall be determined as though such primary

1 insurance amount had initially been computed without
2 regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

3 “(ii) by reason of the individual’s death, such pri-
4 mary insurance amount shall be recomputed without
5 regard to (and as though it had never been computed
6 with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

7 “(C) In the case of any individual whose primary insur-
8 ance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection
9 (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance amount
10 shall be recomputed as may be required under such subsec-
11 tions by reason of a significant change in the amount of the 12 relevant periodic payment.”

13 (d) Sections 202(e)(2)(B)(i) and 202(f)(3)(B)(i) of such 14 Act are each amended by striking out “section 215(f)(5) or 15 (6)” and inserting in lieu thereof “section 215(f)(5), 215(f)(6), 16 or 215(f)(9)(B)”.

17 BENEFITS FOR SURVIVING DIVORCED SPOUSES AND
18 DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS WHO REMARRY

19 SEC. 203. (a)(1) Section 202(e)(3) of the Social Security
20 Act is repealed.

21 (2) Section 202(e)(4) of such Act is amended to read as
22 follows:

23 “(4) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

24 “(A) a widow or a surviving divorced wife marries
25 after attaining age 60, or

1 “(B) a disabled widow or disabled surviving di-
2 vorcee wife described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) marries
3 after attaining age 50,
4 such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred.”.

5 (b)(1) Section 202(f)(4) of such Act is repealed.

6 (2) Section 202(f)(5) of such Act is amended to read as
7 follows:

8 “(5) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

9 “(A) a widower marries after attaining age 60, or

10 “(B) a disabled widower described in paragraph

11 (1)(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50,

12 such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred.”.

13 (c)(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be
14 effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title
15 II of the Social Security Act for months after December
16 1983.

17 (2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a
18 monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December
19 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of 20 such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is 21 made.

1 DETERMINATION OF PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT FOR
 2 DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

3 SEC. 204. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act
 4 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
 5 paragraph:

6 “(8)(A) If a person is entitled to benefits under subsec-
 7 tion (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and
 8 self-employment income of a deceased individual whose pri-
 9 mary insurance amount would otherwise be determined under 10 paragraph (1), the primary insurance amount of such de-
 11 ceased individual shall be determined, for purposes of deter-
 12 mining the amount of the benefit under such subsection, as if 13 such deceased individual died in the year in which the person
 14 entitled to benefits under such subsection first became eligible
 15 for such benefits or, if earlier, the year in which such de-
 16 ceased individual would have attained age 60 if he had not
 17 died (except that the actual year of death of such deceased
 18 individual shall be used for purposes of section
 19 215(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II)).

20 “(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), if a person—

21 “(i) is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or
 22 (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-
 23 employment income of a deceased individual, and

24 “(ii) was entitled to benefits under this title on the 25 basis of the wages and self-employment income of such

1 deceased individual in the month before the month in 2 which such person became eligible for the benefits de-
3 scribed in clause (i);

4 the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual
5 shall be the primary insurance amount determined under the
6 rules which would apply (but for subparagraph (A)) or the
7 primary insurance amount determined under subparagraph
8 (A), whichever is larger.

9 “(C) For purposes of determining the maximum family
10 benefit amount with respect to a deceased individual for 11 whom a primary insurance amount is determined under this 12 paragraph, the primary insurance amount of such deceased
13 individual shall be the primary insurance amount determined
14 under the rules which would apply (but for this paragraph) or 15 the primary insurance amount determined under this para-
16 graph, whichever is larger.”

17 (b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply
18 to the benefits of individuals who become eligible for benefits
19 under section 202 (e) and (f) of the Social Security Act after
20 December 1982.

21 BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED SPOUSE REGARDLESS OF
22 WHETHER FORMER SPOUSE HAS RETIRED

23 SEC. 205. (a) Section 202(b) of the Social Security Act
24 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
25 paragraph:

1 subparagraph (B)(ii) and all that follows and inserting in lieu
2 thereof a period.

3 (2) Section 202(q)(6) of such Act is amended to read as
4 follows:

5 “(6) For purposes of this subsection, the ‘reduction
6 period’ for an old-age, wife’s, husband’s, widow’s, or widow-
7 er’s insurance benefit is the period beginning—

8 “(A) in the case of an old-age or husband’s insur-
9 ance benefit, with the first day of the first month for 10 which such individual is entitled to such benefit,

11 “(B) in the case of a wife’s insurance benefit, with 12 the first day of the first month for which a certificate
13 described in paragraph (5)(A)(i) is effective, or

14 “(C) in the case of a widow’s or widower’s insur-
15 ance benefit, with the first day of the first month for 16 which such individual is entitled to such benefit or the 17 first day of the month in which such individual attains
18 age 60, whichever is later,

19 and ending with the last day of the month before the month
20 in which such individual attains retirement age.”.

21 (3) Section 202(q)(7) of such Act is amended by striking
22 out the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting in 23 lieu thereof the following:

24 “(7) For purposes of this subsection, the ‘adjusted re-
25 duction period’ for an old-age, wife’s, husband’s, widow’s, or

1 widower's insurance benefit is the reduction period prescribed
2 in paragraph (6) for such benefit, excluding—”.

3 (4) Paragraphs (1)(B)(i), (2)(E)(ii), and (2)(F)(ii) of sec-
4 tion 202(q) of such Act are each amended by striking out
5 “(6)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “(6)”.

6 (5) Section 202(q)(2)(G) of such Act is amended by 7 striking out “paragraph (6)(A) (or, if such paragraph does not
8 apply, the period specified in paragraph (6)(B))” and inserting
9 in lieu thereof “paragraph (6)”.

10 (6) Section 202(q)(10) of such Act is amended—

11 (A) by striking out “or an additional adjusted re-
12 duction period”;

13 (B) in subparagraphs (B)(i), (C)(i), and (C)(ii), by 14 striking out “, plus the number of months in the ad-
15 justed additional reduction period multiplied by $43/240$
16 of 1 percent”; and

17 (C) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out “, plus
18 the number of months in the additional reduction
19 period multiplied by $43/240$ of 1 percent”.

20 (b)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be
21 effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the 22 Social Security Act for months after December 1982.

23 (2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a
24 monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December
25 1982, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of

1 such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is
2 made.

3 ~~ADJUSTMENT TO COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST~~
4 ~~FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT~~

5 ~~SEC. 207. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Secu-~~
6 ~~rity Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III), by~~ 7 ~~striking out "The increase shall be derived" and inserting in~~
8 ~~lieu thereof "Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (5),~~
9 ~~the increase shall be derived".~~

10 ~~(b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at the~~
11 ~~end thereof the following new paragraph:~~

12 ~~"(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph (2)~~
13 ~~to become effective for monthly benefits payable for Decem-~~
14 ~~ber 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secretary~~
15 ~~makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined trust~~
16 ~~funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the start of~~ 17 ~~business on January 1 of the calendar year in which such~~ 18 ~~December falls is less than 20 percent, be determined under~~ 19 ~~paragraph (2) by substituting—~~

20 ~~"(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-~~
21 ~~tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total~~
22 ~~wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined~~
23 ~~for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such~~ 24 ~~average for the second preceding calendar year (and if~~

1 no increase in such wages took place, the percentage
2 shall be deemed to be zero); for

3 "(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under
4 paragraph (2),

5 but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less
6 than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

7 "(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment
8 would not be made under this subsection on account of the 9 relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less
10 than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made
11 by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent
12 determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period
13 of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living
14 increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be
15 the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-
16 month period in such longer period which would have been
17 effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but
18 for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases
19 only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer
20 Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

21 "(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect
22 to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business
23 on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each
24 calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as
25 of that time.

1 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘com-
2 bined trust funds ratio’ means the ratio of—

3 “(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age
4 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
5 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the
6 amount of any outstanding loan (including interest
7 thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
8 Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any
9 calendar year, to

10 “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
11 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
12 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
13 Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar
14 year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but ex-
15 cluding any transfer payments between such trust
16 funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
17 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
18 transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad
19 Retirement Account.

20 “(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been deter-
21 mined on the basis of the substitute formula in subparagraph
22 (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding calendar
23 year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust funds
24 ratio is greater than 82 percent, the Secretary shall pay addi-

1 tional benefits with respect to the 12-month period beginning
2 with the following December in amounts not to exceed—

3 “(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, ac-
4 cording to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by
5 which the balance in such trust funds on the date of
6 such determination exceeds the amount necessary to
7 effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32 percent for
8 the following year; and

9 “(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits for 10 each month in such 12-month period, an amount equal
11 to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all benefits
12 paid to him during all previous years were less than 13 the amounts which would have been paid to him but 14 for the provisions of this paragraph.

15 Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage in-
16 crease in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months
17 during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient funds
18 available to pay additional benefits in the full amount to all
19 individuals (taking into account the limitation in clause (i));
20 amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be paid on a pro
21 rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to any such 22 amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title for the 23 months in which such additional amounts are being paid.

24 “(F) In any case in which additional payments are made
25 by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for purposes

1 of determining benefit amounts for months after the 12-
2 month period for which such additional benefits were made,
3 the percentage increase under this subsection applicable to 4 benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be deemed to 5 be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such addition-
6 al payments (as measured with respect to payments which 7 are not subject to reduction under any other provision of this
8 Act).”.

9 (e) Only with respect to the determination made for Jan-
10 uary 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year (for 11 purposes of determining the increase under section 215(i) of 12 the Social Security Act for benefits payable for December of 13 such year) shall be determined by using the actuarial esti-
14 mate of the Secretary of Health and Human services of the 15 ratio of—

16 (1) the combined balance which will be available
17 in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust
18 Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, 19 reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (includ-
20 ing interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insur-
21 ance Trust Fund, at the close of business on December
22 31 of such calendar year, to

23 (2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
24 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
25 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal

1 Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year
 2 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of 3 such Act, but excluding any transfer payments between 4 such trust funds, and reducing the amount of any 5 transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the 6 amount of any transfers into either such trust fund
 7 from the Railroad Retirement Account.

8 (d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is 9 amended by inserting “, or, if greater, the percentage by
 10 which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for 11 such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5),” after
 12 “are increased for such month”.

13 INCREASE IN OLD-AGE INSURANCE BENEFIT AMOUNTS ON
 14 ACCOUNT OF DELAYED RETIREMENT

15 SEC. 208. (a) Section 202(w)(1)(A) of the Social Secu-
 16 rity Act is amended to read as follows:

17 “(A) the applicable percentage (as determined
 18 under paragraph (6)) of such amount, multiplied by”.

19 (b) Section 202(w) of such Act is amended by adding at
 20 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

21 “(6) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the applicable
 22 percentage is—

23 “(A) $\frac{1}{12}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual
 24 who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance
 25 benefit before 1970; and

1 “(B) in the case of all other individuals—

2 “(i) $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 percent for increment months
3 earned prior to 1980,

4 “(ii) with respect to increment months
5 earned after 1980, a percentage equal to the per-
6 centage in effect under this subparagraph for 7 months in the preceding calendar year (as in-
8 creased pursuant to this clause), plus $\frac{1}{48}$ of 1
9 percent, and

10 “(iii) $\frac{2}{3}$ of 1 percent for increment months
11 earned after 2008.”

12 (e)(1) Paragraphs (2) (A) and (3) of section 202(w) of 13 such Act are each amended by striking out “age 72” and
14 inserting in lieu thereof “age 70”.

15 (2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply 16 with respect to increment months in calendar years after 17 1983.

18 TITLE III—REVENUE PROVISIONS

19 SEC. 301. AMENDMENT OF 1954 CODE.

20 Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in 21 this title an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an 22 amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the 23 reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other
24 provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

1 SEC. 302. TAXATION OF 50 PERCENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY
2 BENEFITS OF HIGHER INCOME PERSONS.

3 (a) GENERAL RULE.—Part II of subchapter B of chap-
4 ter 1 (relating to amounts specifically included in gross
5 income) is amended by redesignating section 86 as section 87
6 and by inserting after section 85 the following new section:
7 “SEC. 86. SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.

8 “(a) IN GENERAL.—If the adjusted gross income (deter-
9 mined without regard to this section, section 105(d), or sec-
10 tion 221) of the taxpayer for the taxable year exceeds the 11 base amount, there shall be included in the gross income of 12 the taxpayer for the taxable year an amount equal to one-half 13 of the social security benefits paid to the taxpayer during the 14 taxable year.

15 “(b) BASE AMOUNT.—For purposes of this section, the 16 term ‘base amount’ means—

17 “(1) except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3),
18 $20,000,

19 “(2) $25,000, in the case of a joint return, and

20 “(3) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—

21 “(A) is married at the close of the taxable
22 year (within the meaning of section 143) but does
23 not file a joint return for such year, and

24 “(B) does not live apart from his spouse at
25 all times during the taxable year.

1 “(1) the name and address of the person making
2 such return, and

3 “(2) the aggregate amount of payments to the in-
4 dividual as shown on such return.

5 The written statement required under the preceding sentence
6 shall be furnished to the individual on or before January 31
7 of the year following the calendar year for which the return
8 under subsection (a) was made.”.

9 (c) APPROPRIATIONS AND TRANSFERS TO TRUST
10 FUNDS.—Section 201 of the Social Security Act is amended
11 by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

12 “(m)(1) There are appropriated, out of any moneys in 13 the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for each fiscal 14 year—

15 “(A) to the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insur-
16 ance Trust Fund an amount which bears the same 17 ratio to the increase in tax liability under chapter 1 of 18 the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 which is attributa-
19 ble to section 86 of such Code and properly allocable
20 to such fiscal year as—

21 “(i) the amount which is appropriated to 22 such trust fund under subsection (a) for such fiscal 23 year, bears to

1 “(ii) the aggregate amounts appropriated
2 under subsections (a) and (b) for such fiscal year,
3 and

4 “(B) to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust
5 Fund an amount equal to the portion of the increase in 6 tax described in subparagraph (A) which is not appro-
7 priated under subparagraph (A).

8 “(2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall estimate for 9 fiscal year 1984 (and each year thereafter) the amount appro-
10 priated under paragraph (1).

11 “(B) On the basis of the estimate under subparagraph
12 (A), the Secretary of the Treasury shall not less than quarter-
13 ly make transfers to the appropriate trust funds.

14 “(3)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall make 15 proper adjustments in the amounts subsequently transferred 16 under paragraph (2) to the extent prior estimates differed
17 from the amounts required to be appropriated.

18 “(B) For purposes of this subsection, the final determi-
19 nation of the amount required to be transferred under this 20 subsection for any fiscal year shall be based on the final sta-
21 tistics of income which are—

22 “(i) published under section 6108(a) of the Inter-
23 nal Revenue Code of 1954, and

24 “(ii) properly allocable to such fiscal year.”

1 (d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this
 2 section shall apply to benefits received after December 31,
 3 1982, and attributable to periods after such date.

4 SEC. 302. ACCELERATION OF INCREASE IN FICA TAXES; 1984
 5 EMPLOYEE FICA TAX CREDIT.

6 (a) ACCELERATION OF INCREASE IN FICA TAXES.—

7 (1) TAX ON EMPLOYEES.—Subsection (a) of sec-
 8 tion 3101 (relating to rate of tax on employees for old-
 9 age, survivors, and disability insurance) is amended by 10 striking out paragraphs (5), (6), and (7) and inserting in 11 lieu thereof the following:

12 “(5) with respect to wages received during the 13 calendar years 1982 and 1983, the rate shall be 5.40
 14 percent;

15 “(6) with respect to wages received during the 16 calendar years 1984 through 1987, the rate shall be
 17 5.70 percent;

18 “(7) with respect to wages received during the
 19 calendar years 1988 and 1989, the rate shall be 6.06
 20 percent; and

21 “(8) with respect to wages received after Decem-
 22 ber 31, 1989, the rate shall be 6.20 percent.”.

23 (2) TAX ON EMPLOYERS.—Subsection (a) of sec-
 24 tion 3111 (relating to rate of tax on employers for old-25 age, survivors, and disability insurance) is amended by

1 striking out paragraphs (5) through (7) and inserting in
2 lieu thereof the following:

3 “(5) with respect to wages paid during the calen-
4 dar years 1982 and 1983, the rate shall be 5.40 per-
5 cent;

6 “(6) with respect to wages paid during the calen-
7 dar years 1984 through 1987, the rate shall be 5.70
8 percent;

9 “(7) with respect to wages paid during the calen-
10 dar years 1988 and 1989, the rate shall be 6.06 per-
11 cent; and

12 “(8) with respect to wages paid after December
13 31, 1989, the rate shall be 6.20 percent.”

14 (3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO RAILROAD RE-
15 TIREMENT TAX ACT.—Section 3231 (relating to defi-16 nitions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the 17 following new subsection:

18 “(i) TAXES IMPOSED BY SECTIONS 3101(a) AND 19 3111(a).—For purposes of this chapter, the rates of tax im-
20 posed by sections 3101(a) and 3111(a) shall be determined
21 without regard to the amendments made by the Social Secu-
22 rity Amendments of 1983.”

23 (b) CREDIT FOR EMPLOYEE FICA TAXES ATTRIBUT-
24 ABLE TO ACCELERATION OF THE INCREASE IN THE RATE
25 OF TAX.—

1 (1) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter B of chapter 65
2 (relating to rules of special application for abatements,
3 credits, and refunds) is amended by inserting at the end
4 thereof the following new section:

5 “SEC. 6430. CREDIT FOR CERTAIN 1984 EMPLOYEE FICA
6 TAXES.

7 “(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—There shall be allowed
8 as a credit against the tax imposed by subtitle A for any 9 taxable year which begins in (and ends with or after) calendar
10 year 1984 an amount equal to the product of—

11 “(1) .003, multiplied by

12 “(2) the amount of wages received by the taxpay-
13 er during calendar year 1984 with respect to which—

14 “(A) a tax was imposed by section 3101(a),

15 or

16 “(B) a payment was made under an agree-
17 ment under section 218 of the Social Security
18 Act.

19 “(b) CREDIT TO BE REFUNDABLE.—For purposes of 20 this title (other than subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of 21 chapter 1 and chapter 63), the credit allowed by subsection
22 (a) shall be treated as if it were allowed by section 31 and not 23 this section.

24 “(c) WAGES DEFINED.—For purposes of this section,
25 the term ‘wages’ has the meaning given to such term by

1 section 3121(a), except that such term also includes remuneration covered by an agreement under section 218 of the Social Security Act.

4 “(d) COORDINATION WITH ADVANCE PAYMENTS UNDER SECTION 3510.—

6 “(1) RECONCILIATION OF PAYMENTS ADVANCED AND CREDIT ALLOWED.—If any payment is made to the taxpayer by an employer under section 3510 during 1984, then the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year to which subsection (a) applies shall be increased by the aggregate amount of such payments.

13 “(2) EFFECT OF RECONCILIATION ON OTHER CREDITS.—Any increase in tax under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as tax imposed by this chapter for purposes of determining the amount of any credit (other than the credit allowed by subsection (a)) allowable under this subpart.”.

19 “(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for subchapter B of chapter 65 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

“Sec. 6430. Credit for certain 1984 employee FICA taxes.”.

22 “(e) ADVANCE PAYMENT OF SOCIAL SECURITY CREDIT.—

1 (1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 25 (relating to gener-
2 al provisions involving employment taxes) is amended
3 by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

4 “SEC. 2510. ADVANCE PAYMENT OF 1984 FICA TAX CREDIT.

5 “(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in 6 this section, every employer making payment of wages to an 7 employee shall, at the time of paying such wages, make an 8 additional payment to such employee equal to the product
9 of—

10 “(1) .003, multiplied by,

11 “(2) the amount of such wages with respect to 12 which—

13 “(A) a tax is imposed by section 3101(a) for 14 the payroll period, or

15 “(B) a payment was made under an agree-
16 ment under section 218 of the Social Security
17 Act.

18 “(b) PAYMENTS TO BE TREATED AS PAYMENTS OF 19 FICA TAXES.—

20 “(1) EMPLOYEE PAYMENTS.—For purposes of 21 this title, payments made by an employer under sub-
22 section (a) to his employees for any payroll period—

23 “(A) shall not be treated as the payment of 24 compensation, and

1 “(B) shall be treated as made out of amounts
2 required to be deducted for the payroll period
3 under section 3102 (relating to FICA employee
4 taxes), and as if the employer had paid to the 5 Secretary, on the day on which the wages are 6 paid to the employees, an amount equal to such 7 payments.

8 “(2) FAILURE TO MAKE ADVANCE PAYMENTS.—

9 For purposes of this title (including penalties), failure
10 to make any advance payment under subsection (a) at 11 the time provided therefor shall be treated as the fail-
12 ure at such time to deduct and withhold under sub-13 chapter A of chapter 24 an amount equal to the 14 amount of such advance payment.

15 “(e) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

16 “(1) WAGES.—The term ‘wages’ has the meaning
17 given such term by section 6430(e).

18 “(2) EMPLOYER.—The term ‘employer’ includes
19 any person treated as an employer under any agree-
20 ment made pursuant to section 218 of the Social Secu-
21 rity Act.”.

22 (2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

23 (A) Section 6302 (relating to mode or time
24 of collection) is amended by adding at the end
25 thereof the following new subsection:

1 “(c) CROSS REFERENCE.—

 “For treatment of payment of FICA tax credit advance amounts as payment of withholding and FICA taxes, see section 2510(b).”.

2 (B) The table of sections for chapter 25 is
3 amended by adding at the end thereof the follow-
4 ing new item:

 “Sec. 2510. Advance payment of 1984 FICA tax credit.”.

5 (d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this
6 section shall apply only with respect to remuneration re-
7 ceived or paid, and taxable years beginning, after December
8 31, 1983.

9 SEC. 304. SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAXES.

10 (a) INCREASE IN RATE OF TAX.—Subsection (a) of 11 section 1401 (relating to the old-age, survivors, and disability 12 insurance tax on self-employment income) is amended by 13 striking out paragraphs (5), (6), and (7) and inserting in lieu
14 thereof the following:

15 “(5) in the case of any taxable year beginning
16 after December 31, 1981, and before January 1, 1984,
17 the tax shall be equal to 8.05 percent of the amount of 18 the self-employment income for such taxable year;

19 “(6) in the case of any taxable year beginning
20 after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 1988,
21 the tax shall be equal to 11.40 percent of the amount
22 of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

1 “(7) in the case of any taxable year beginning
2 after December 31, 1987, and before January 1, 1990,
3 the tax shall be equal to 12.12 percent of the amount
4 of the self-employment income for such taxable year;
5 and

6 “(8) in the case of any taxable year beginning
7 after December 31, 1989, the tax shall be equal to 8 12.40 percent of the amount of the self-employment
9 income for such taxable year.”.

10 (b) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION FOR 50 PERCENT OF 11 ~~THE SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAX.—~~

12 (1) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION.—

13 • (A) IN GENERAL.—Part VII of subchapter B
14 of chapter 1 (relating to additional itemized de-15 ductions for individuals) is amended by redес-
16 ignating section 223 as section 224 and by insert-
17 ing after section 222 the following new section:

18 “~~SEC. 223. DEDUCTION FOR 50 PERCENT OF SELF-EMPLOY-~~
19 ~~MENT TAXES.~~

20 “There shall be allowed as a deduction for the taxable
21 year an amount equal to 50 percent of the tax imposed by 22 section 1401(a) which is paid or accrued by the taxpayer
23 during such taxable year.”.

24 (B) DEDUCTION ALLOWED IN COMPUTING
25 ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—Section 62 (defining

1 adjusted gross income) is amended by inserting
2 after paragraph (16) the following new paragraph:

3 “(17) ~~SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAXES.~~—The deduc-
4 tion allowed by section 223.”.

5 (2) ~~CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.~~—

6 (A) Paragraph (1) of section 275(a) (relating 7 to disallowance of deductions for certain taxes) is 8 amended—

9 (i) by striking out “and” at the end of 10 subparagraph (B);

11 (ii) by striking out the period at the end
12 of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu 13 thereof a semicolon and “and”; and

14 (iii) by adding at the end thereof the fol-
15 lowing new subparagraph:

16 “(D) the taxes imposed by section 1401 (re-
17 lating to self-employment taxes) to the extent a 18 deduction is not allowed with respect to such 19 taxes under section 223.”.

20 (B) Subsection (b) of section 1403 (relating 21 to cross references) is amended by adding at the 22 end thereof the following new paragraph:

23 “(4) For provisions relating to deductibility of 24 self-employment taxes, see sections 223 and 25 275(a)(1)(D).”.

1 ment under section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue
2 Code of 1954 or" after "unless such payment".

3 (b) ~~EFFECTIVE DATE.~~—The amendments made by sub-
4 section (a) shall apply with respect to payments made after
5 December 31, 1983.

10 SEC. 402. (a) Section 201(l)(1) of the Social Security
 11 Act is amended by striking out “January 1983” and insert-
 12 ing in lieu thereof “January 1988”.

13 (b) Section 1817 of such Act is amended by striking out
 14 subsection (j) thereof.

15 CREDITING AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO 16 TRUST FUNDS

17 SEC. 403. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall take
 18 such actions as may be necessary to ensure that amounts of 19 checks for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act
 20 which have not been presented for payment within a reason-
 21 able length of time (not to exceed twelve months) after issu-
 22 ance are credited to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors In-
 23 surance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance
 24 Trust Fund, whichever may be the fund from which the 25 check was issued. Amounts of any such check shall be re-

1 charged to the fund from which they were issued if payment
2 is subsequently made on such check.

3 (b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from
4 the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and
5 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and to the Federal Disabil-
6 ity Insurance Trust Fund, as appropriate, such sums as may
7 be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds in the total
8 amounts of all currently unnegotiated benefit checks. After
9 the amounts appropriated by this subsection have been trans-
10 ferred to the Trust Funds, the provisions of subsection (a)
11 shall be applicable. There are hereby appropriated into such
12 Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse
13 such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated
14 benefit checks. The first such transfer shall be made within 15 thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act with 16 respect to all such unnegotiated checks as of such date of 17 enactment.

18 (2) As used in paragraph (1), the term "currently unne-
19 gotiated benefit checks" means the checks issued under title
20 II of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the enact-
21 ment of this Act, which remain unnegotiated after the twelfth
22 month following the date on which they were issued.

1 TRANSFER TO TRUST FUNDS FOR BENEFITS
2 ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY SERVICE BEFORE 1957
3 SEC. 404. (a) Section 217(g) of the Social Security Act
4 is amended to read as follows:

5 “Appropriation to Trust Funds
6 “(g)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enact-
7 ment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secre-
8 tary shall determine the amounts which are the amounts esti-
9 mated to be necessary to be transferred into each of the Fed-
10 eral Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Fed-
11 eral Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospi-
12 tal Insurance Trust Fund on such date of enactment so that 13 each such Trust Fund will be in the same position at the 14 close of September thirty, 2015 as each such Trust Fund
15 would otherwise be in at the close of September thirty, 2015
16 if section 210 of this Act as in effect prior to the Social Secu-
17 rity Act Amendments of 1950, and this section, had not been 18 enacted (less any amounts previously transferred under the 19 provisions of this subsection as in effect prior to the date of 20 the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983).
21 The rate of interest to be used in initially determining such 22 amount shall be the rate determined under section 201(f) for 23 public debt obligations which were or could have been issued
24 for purchase by such Trust Funds on the date of the enact-
25 ment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, and the

1 assumptions with respect to future increases in wage and
2 price levels shall be consistent with such rate of interest. The 3 Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer the amounts deter-
4 mined under this paragraph into such Trust Funds from the 5 general fund in the Treasury within thirty days after the date
6 of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of
7 1983. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds
8 sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance
9 with this paragraph into such Trust Funds.

10 “(2) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined
11 under paragraph (1) within one year after the date of the 12 transfer made under paragraph (1), and every five years
13 thereafter, as warranted by data which may become available
14 to him after the date of the transfer under paragraph (1)
15 based upon actual benefits paid under this title and title
16 XVIII. Any amounts determined to be needed for transfer
17 shall be transferred annually by the Secretary of the Treas-
18 ury into the appropriate Trust Fund from the general fund in 19 the Treasury, or out of the appropriate Trust Fund into the 20 general fund in the Treasury, as may be appropriate. There
21 are authorized to be appropriated to such Trust Funds sums
22 equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with 23 this paragraph into such Trust Funds.”

1 PAYMENTS TO TRUST FUNDS OF AMOUNTS EQUIVALENT
2 TO TAXES ON SERVICE IN THE UNIFORMED SERVICES
3 PERFORMED AFTER 1956

4 SEC. 405. (a) Section 229(b) of the Social Security Act
5 is amended to read as follows:

6 “(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Fed-
7 eral Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Fed-
8 eral Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospi-
9 tal Insurance Trust Fund, for each fiscal year, amounts equal
10 to the additional amounts which would be appropriated into 11 each such Trust Fund for such fiscal year under sections 201
12 and 1817 of this Act if the amounts of the additional wages
13 deemed to have been paid by reason of subsection (a) consti-
14 tuted remuneration for employment (as defined in section
15 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes
16 of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Inter-
17 nal Revenue Code of 1954.”

18 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be ef-
19 fective with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for 20 calendar years after 1982.

21 (c)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enactment
22 of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services
23 shall determine the amounts equal to the additional amounts
24 which would have been appropriated into the Federal Old-
25 Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Dis-

1 ability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital In-
2 surance Trust Fund under sections 201 and 1817 of the 3 Social Security Act, if the additional wages deemed to have
4 been paid under section 220(a) of the Social Security Act
5 prior to 1983 had constituted remuneration for employment
6 (as defined in section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code
7 of 1954) for purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101
8 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and the 9 amount of interest which would have been earned on such 10 amounts if they had been so appropriated.

11 (2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, within thirty 12 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, transfer into 13 each such Trust Fund, from the general fund in the Treasury, 14 an amount equal to the amount determined with respect to 15 such Trust Fund under paragraph (1), less any amount ap-
16 propriated into such Trust Fund under the provisions of sec-
17 tion 220(b) of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the 18 determination made under paragraph (1) with respect to 19 wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years prior to 20 1983. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds
21 sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance 22 with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

23 (B) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined
24 under subparagraph (A) within one year after the date of the 25 transfer made under paragraph (1), as warranted by data

1 which may become available to him after the date of the
2 transfer under subparagraph (A) based upon actual benefits
3 paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts deter-
4 mined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred by the
5 Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund
6 from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropri-
7 ate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as may 8 be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated to 9 such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be trans-
10 ferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust
11 Funds.

12 TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURE

13 SEC. 406. (a) Section 201 of the Social Security Act is
14 amended by striking out subsections (d), (e), and (f) and in-
15 serting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

16 “(d) There are hereby created on the books of the 17 Treasury of the United States an account to be known as the 18 Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository Account and 19 an account to be known as the Disability Insurance Deposi-
20 tary Account.

21 “(e) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of
22 the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund
23 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
24 Fund in the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository

1 Account and that portion of the Federal Disability Insurance
2 Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from
3 such Trust Fund in the Disability Insurance Depository Ac-
4 count.

5 “(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply moneys
6 deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) in any way
7 in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in the 8 general fund of the Treasury.

9 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in an account pursuant to sub-
10 section (e) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
11 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
12 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an
13 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
14 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by 15 the average market yield (computed by the Managing 16 Trustee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of 17 each day of the previous month) on all marketable interest-
18 bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part 19 of the public debt which are not due or callable until after the 20 expiration of four years from the end of such previous month,
21 except that ‘flower bonds’ shall not be included in such com-
22 putation.

23 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘flower
24 bond’ means a United States Treasury bond which was
25 issued before March 4, 1971 and which may, at the option of

1 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a de-
2 ceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus ac-
3 crued interest to the date of payment, if—

4 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
5 the time of his death,

6 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
7 vidual; and

8 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
9 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
10 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal
11 estate taxes.

12 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
13 posited in an account pursuant to subsection (c) whenever he
14 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current 15 withdrawals from the Trust Fund which deposited such
16 moneys, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obliga-
17 tions of the United States in the market in an amount not to 18 exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that
19 such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund
20 of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount.”.

21 (b) Section 1817 of such Act is amended by striking out
22 subsections (e), (d), and (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the
23 following new subsections:

1 “(e) There is hereby created on the books of the Treas-
2 ury of the United States an account to be known as the Hos-
3 pital Insurance Depository Account.

4 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of
5 the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund not required to
6 meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Hos-
7 pital Insurance Depository Account.

8 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
9 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in 10 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in
11 the general fund of the Treasury.

12 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
13 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
14 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
15 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an
16 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
17 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
18 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trust-
19 ee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each day
20 of the previous month) on all marketable interest-bearing ob-
21 ligations of the United States then forming a part of the
22 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
23 ration of four years from the end of such previous month,
24 except that ‘flower bonds’ shall not be included in such com-
25 putation.

1 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘flower
2 bond’ means a United States Treasury bond which was
3 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
4 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a de-
5 ceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus ac-
6 crued interest to the date of payment, if—

7 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
8 the time of his death;

9 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
10 vidual; and

11 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
12 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
13 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal
14 estate taxes.

15 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
16 posited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he
17 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
18 withdrawals from the Trust Fund; and the Secretary of the
19 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
20 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
21 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an
22 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
23 not exceeding such amount.”

1 (e) Section 1841 of such Act is amended by striking out
2 subsections (e), (d), and (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the
3 following new subsections:

4 “(e) There is hereby established on the books of the
5 Treasury an account to be known as the Supplementary
6 Medical Insurance Depository Account.

7 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of
8 the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund
9 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
10 Fund in the Supplementary Medical Insurance Depository
11 Account.

12 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
13 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in
14 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in
15 the general fund of the Treasury.

16 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
17 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
18 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
19 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an
20 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
21 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
22 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trust-
23 ee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each day
24 of the previous month) on all marketable interest-bearing ob-
25 ligations of the United States then forming a part of the

1 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
2 ration of four years from the end of such previous month,
3 except that 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such com-
4 putation.

5 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower
6 bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was
7 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
8 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a de-
9 ceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus ac-
10 crued interest to the date of payment, if—

11 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
12 the time of his death,

13 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
14 vidual, and

15 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
16 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
17 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal
18 estate taxes.

19 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
20 posited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he
21 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
22 withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the
23 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
24 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
25 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an

1 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
2 not exceeding such amount.”.

3 (d)(1) Not later than thirty days after the date of enact-
4 ment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem
5 at par all outstanding obligations of the United States issued
6 under the Second Liberty Bond Act exclusively for purchase
7 by the Federal Old-Age Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal
8 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insur-
9 ance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical 10 Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter in this subsection referred 11 to as the “Trust Funds”).

12 (2)(A) The Managing Trustee may sell any marketable
13 obligation of the United States held by the Trust Funds at 14 market price at any time and shall sell (or redeem) all
15 “flower bonds” held by the Trust Funds at market price
16 within thirty days of the date of enactment of this Act.

17 (B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term “flower
18 bond” means a United States Treasury bond which was
19 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of 20 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a de-
21 ceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus ac-
22 crued interest to the date of payment, if—

23 (i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
24 the time of his death,

17 except that such exemption shall not apply for any cal-
18 endar year—

19 “(A) beginning (i) before the calendar year
20 in which such individual first met the require-
21 ments of the first sentence of paragraph (1), or
22 (ii) before the time as of which the Secretary of
23 Health and Human Services finds that the sect or
24 division thereof of which such individual is a

1 member met the requirements of clauses (i) and
2 (ii) of paragraph (1), or

3 “(B) ending (i) after the time such individu-
4 al ceases to meet the requirements of the first sen-
5 tence of paragraph (1), or (ii) after the time as of
6 which the Secretary of Health and Human Serv-
7 ices finds that the sect or division thereof of which
8 he is a member ceases to meet the requirements of 9 clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1).”.

10 (b) Section 210(a) of the Social Security Act is amend-
11 ed—

12 (1) by striking out “or” at the end of paragraph 13 (19);

14 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
15 graph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof “; or”; and

16 (3) by adding at the end thereof the following new
17 paragraph:

18 “(21) Service performed, in the employ of an em-
19 ployer who is exempt from the tax imposed under sec-
20 tion 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by
21 reason of an exemption granted under section 1402(g)
22 of such Code, by an individual with respect to whom
23 an exemption has been granted (and is applicable)
24 under section 3121(v) of such Code.”.

1 (c) Section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of
2 1954 is amended—

4 (19);

5 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
6 graph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof “; or”; and

7 (3) by adding at the end thereof the following new
8 paragraph:

9 “(21) service performed, in the employ of an em-
10 ployer who is exempt from the tax imposed under sec-
11 tion 1401 by reason of an exemption granted under 12 section 1402(g), by an individual with respect to whom
13 an exemption has been granted (and is applicable)
14 under subsection (v) of this section.”

15 (d) Section 202(v) of the Social Security Act is amend-
16 ed by inserting “or 3121(v)” after “1402(g)” each place it
17 appears.

18 (e) The amendments made by this section shall apply
19 with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

20 PART B—CHANGES IN BENEFITS

21 SHIFT OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS TO CALENDAR

22 YEAR BASIS

23 SEC. 111. (a)(1) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social
24 Security Act is amended by striking out “June” and insert-
25 ing in lieu thereof “December”.

1 (2) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(iii) of such Act is amended by
2 striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof "Novem-
3 ber".

4 (3) Section 215(i)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by
5 striking out "May" each place it appears and inserting in
6 lieu thereof in each instance "November".

7 (4) Section 203(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by
8 striking out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "Decem-
9 ber".

10 (5) Section 230(a) of such Act is amended by striking
11 out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

12 (6) Section 215(i)(2) of such Act as in effect in Decem-
13 ber 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provi-
14 sions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amend-
15 ed by striking out "June" in subparagraph (A)(ii) and in-
16 serting in lieu thereof "December", and by striking out
17 "May" each place it appears in subparagraph (B) and in-
18 serting in lieu thereof in each instance "November".

19 (7) Section 202(m) of such Act (as it applies in certain 20 cases by reason of section 2 of Public Law 97-123) is 21 amended by striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof
22 "November".

23 (8) The amendments made by this subsection shall
24 apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined

1 under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years
2 after 1982.

3 (b)(1) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act
4 is amended by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu
5 thereof "September 30", and by striking out "1974" and
6 inserting in lieu thereof "1982".

7 (2) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of such Act as in effect in De-
8 cember 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provi-
9 sions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amend-
10 ed by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu thereof
11 "September 30".

12 (3) The amendments made by this subsection shall
13 apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined
14 under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years
15 after 1983.

16 (c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by insert-
17 ing ", and as amended by section 201 (a)(6) and (b)(2) of the
19 December 1978".

20 (d) Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in
21 section 215(i) of the Social Security Act, the "base quarter"
22 (as defined in paragraph (1)(A)(i) of such section) in the 23 calendar year 1983 shall be a "cost-of-living computation
24 quarter" within the meaning of paragraph (1)(B) of such sec-
25 tion (and shall be deemed to have been determined by the

1 Secretary of Health and Human Services to be a "cost-of-
2 living computation quarter" under paragraph (2)(A) of such
3 section) for all of the purposes of such Act as amended by this
4 section and by other provisions of this Act, without regard to
5 the extent by which the Consumer Price Index has increased
6 since the last prior cost-of-living computation quarter which
7 was established under such paragraph (1)(B).

8 ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS

9 RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOY-
10 MENT

11 SEC. 112. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security
12 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
13 new paragraph:

14 "(7)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligi-
15 ble for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for Decem-
16 ber 1983 and whose primary insurance amount would be
17 computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who
18 first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic pay-
19 ment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D))
20 based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service
21 which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section
22 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and 23 in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service') of at 24 least one year's duration, the primary insurance amount of
25 that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability

1 insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under
2 subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which
3 the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be
4 periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secre-
5 tary determines there has been a significant change in the
6 amount of such periodic payment.

7 “(B)(ii) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply
8 to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this para-
9 graph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the
10 individual’s primary insurance amount under this subsection
11 (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such 12 computation the percentage of the individual’s average in-
13 dexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i)
14 of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii).
15 There shall then be computed (without regard to this para-
16 graph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individ-
17 ual’s primary insurance amount under this subsection (other 18 than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall 19 be reduced by an amount equal to the applicable fraction (as 20 determined under subparagraph (E)) of the portion of the 21 monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service
22 to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled)
23 for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance
24 benefits are payable. For purposes of the preceding sentence,
25 the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to

1 noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment
2 which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as
3 the number of months of service in noncovered service to
4 which such benefit is attributable (but only counting any
5 such months occurring after 1956) bears to the total number
6 of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The
7 individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of
8 the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before
9 the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be
10 computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the pur-
11 pose of applying other provisions of this title.

12 “(i) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in 13 this clause is—

14 “(I) 78.4 percent, with respect to individuals who
15 initially become eligible for old age or disability insur-
16 ance benefits, or who die (before becoming eligible for 17 such benefits) in 1984;

18 “(II) 66.8 percent with respect to individuals who
19 so become eligible or die in 1985;

20 “(III) 55.2 percent with respect to individuals
21 who so become eligible or die in 1986;

22 “(IV) 43.6 percent with respect to individuals
23 who so become eligible or die in 1987; and

24 “(V) 32.0 percent with respect to individuals who
25 so become eligible or die in 1988 or thereafter.

1 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
2 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
3 insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

4 “(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the
5 requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other
6 than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent
7 to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and
8 such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly
9 periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

10 “(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to 11 receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to
12 provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the pay-
13 ment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any com-
14 putation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

15 “(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) ap-
16 plies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a
17 month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes
18 eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the
19 amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B)
20 shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed,
21 to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this 22 subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

23 “(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘peri-
24 odic payment’ includes a payment payable in a lump sum if
25 it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

1 “(E) For purposes of subparagraph (B), the applicable
2 fraction is—

3 “(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes
4 eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment de-
5 scribed in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

6 “(ii) in the case of an individual who first be-
7 comes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic pay-
8 ment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

9 “(iii) in the case of an individual who first be-
10 comes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic pay-
11 ment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

12 “(iv) in the case of an individual who first be-
13 comes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic pay-
14 ment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths,
15 and

16 “(v) in the case of an individual who first be-
17 comes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly
18 periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-
19 third.

20 “(F) This paragraph shall not apply in the case of an 21 individual who has more than 30 years of coverage (as de-
22 fined in paragraph (1)(C)(ii). In the case of an individual
23 who has more than 24 years of coverage (as so defined), the 24 figure ‘32 percent’ in subparagraph (B) shall, if larger, be
25 deemed to be—

1 “(i) 90 percent, in the case of an individual who
2 has 30 or more of such years of coverage;

3 “(ii) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who
4 has 29 of such years;

5 “(iii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who
6 has 28 of such years;

7 “(iv) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who
8 has 27 of such years;

9 “(v) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who
10 has 26 of such years; and

11 “(vi) 40 percent, in the case of an individual who
12 has 25 of such years.”

13 (b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at
14 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

15 “(5)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligi-
16 ble for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for Decem-
17 ber 1983 and whose primary insurance amount is not com-
18 puted under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of 19 paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who first be-
20 comes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a
21 payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in 22 whole or in part) upon his earnings in noncovered service of
23 at least one year’s duration, his primary insurance amount
24 for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insur-
25 ance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount comput-

1 ed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to
2 this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i))
3 reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

4 “(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount
5 (computed without regard to this paragraph and before
6 the application of subsection (i)), or

7 “(ii) the applicable fraction (as determined under
8 subparagraph (B)) of the portion of the monthly peri-
9 odic payment (or payment determined under subsection
10 (a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which
11 that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for 12 the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or dis-
13 ability insurance benefits.

14 For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the 15 monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service
16 shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same
17 ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months
18 of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is at-
19 tributable bears to the total number of months of service to
20 which such benefit is attributable. The amount of such peri-
21 odic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically
22 recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there
23 has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic
24 payment.

1 “(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable
2 fraction is—

3 “(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes
4 eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment de-
5 scribed in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

6 “(ii) in the case of an individual who first be-
7 comes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic pay-
8 ment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

9 “(iii) in the case of an individual who first be-
10 comes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic pay-
11 ment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

12 “(iv) in the case of an individual who first be-
13 comes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic pay-
14 ment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths,
15 and

16 “(v) in the case of an individual who first be-
17 comes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly
18 periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-
19 third.”.

20 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
21 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
22 insurance amount as determined under subsection
23 (a)(1)(C)(i).”.

24 (c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at
25 the end the following new paragraph:

1 “(9)(A) In the case of an individual who first becomes
2 eligible for a periodic payment determined under subsection
3 (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first
4 month in which he becomes eligible for an old-age or disabil-
5 ity insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount
6 has been computed without regard to either such subsection or
7 subsection (d)(5), such individual’s primary insurance
8 amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such
9 subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effec-
10 tive with the first month of his concurrent eligibility for
11 either such benefit and such periodic payment.

12 “(B) If an individual’s primary insurance amount has
13 been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it be-
14 comes necessary to recompute that primary insurance
15 amount under this subsection—

16 “(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount
17 payable with respect to such primary insurance
18 amount (other than in the case of the individual’s
19 death), such increase shall be determined as though
20 such primary insurance amount had initially been
21 computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5),
22 or

23 “(ii) by reason of the individual’s death, such pri-
24 mary insurance amount shall be recomputed without

1 regard to (and as though it had never been computed
2 with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

3 “(C) In the case of any individual whose primary in-
4 surance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection
5 (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance
6 amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such
7 subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount
8 of the relevant periodic payment.”

9 (d) Sections 202(e)(2)(B)(i) and 202(f)(3)(B)(i) of such
10 Act are each amended by striking out “section 215(f)(5) or
11 (6)” and inserting in lieu thereof “section 215(f)(5),
12 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)”.

5 (3) Section 202(q)(7) of such Act is amended by strik-
 6 ing out the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting
 7 in lieu thereof the following:

8 “(7) For purposes of this subsection, the ‘adjusted re-
 9 duction period’ for an old-age, wife’s, husband’s, widow’s, or
 10 widower’s insurance benefit is the reduction period prescribed
 11 in paragraph (6) for such benefit, excluding—”

12 (4) Paragraphs (1)(B)(i), (3)(E)(ii), and (3)(F)(ii) of
 13 section 202(q) of such Act are each amended by striking out
 14 “(6)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “(6)”.

15 (5) Section 202(q)(3)(G) of such Act is amended by 16 striking out “paragraph (6)(A) (or, if such paragraph does 17 not apply, the period specified in paragraph (6)(B))” and
 18 inserting in lieu thereof “paragraph (6)”.

19 (6) Section 202(q)(10) of such Act is amended—

20 (A) by striking out “or an additional adjusted re-
 21 duction period”;

22 (B) in subparagraphs (B)(i), (C)(i), and (C)(ii),
 23 by striking out “, plus the number of months in the 24 adjusted additional reduction period multiplied by $\frac{43}{240}$
 25 of 1 percent”; and

1 (C) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out “,
2 plus the number of months in the additional reduction
3 period multiplied by $\frac{43}{240}$ of 1 percent”.

4 (b)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be
5 effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the 6 Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

7 (2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to
8 a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December
9 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of 10 such amendments unless proper application for such benefit
11 is made.

12 ADJUSTMENT TO COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST
13 FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

14 SEC. 117. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Se-
15 curity Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III),
16 by striking out “The increase shall be derived” and inserting
17 in lieu thereof “Except as otherwise provided in paragraph
18 (5), the increase shall be derived”.

19 (b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at
20 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

21 “(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph
22 (2) to become effective for monthly benefits payable for De-
23 cember 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secre-
24 tary makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined
25 trust funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the

1 start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which
2 such December falls is less than 20.0 percent, be determined
3 under paragraph (2) by substituting—

4 “(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-
5 tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total
6 wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined
7 for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such
8 average for the second preceding calendar year (and if
9 no increase in such wages took place, the percentage
10 shall be deemed to be zero), for

11 “(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under
12 paragraph (2),
13 but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less
14 than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

15 “(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment
16 would not be made under this subsection on account of the
17 relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less
18 than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made
19 by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent
20 determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period
21 of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living
22 increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be
23 the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-
24 month period in such longer period which would have been
25 effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but

1 for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases
2 only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer
3 Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

4 “(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect
5 to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business
6 on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each
7 calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as
8 of that time.

9 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘com-
10 bined trust funds ratio’ means the ratio of—

11 “(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age
12 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
13 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the
14 amount of any outstanding loan (including interest
15 thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
16 Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any
17 calendar year, to

18 “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
19 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
20 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
21 Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar
22 year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but ex-
23 cluding any transfer payments between such trust
24 funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
25 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any

1 transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad
2 Retirement Account.

3 “(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been de-
4 termined on the basis of the substitute formula in subpara-
5 graph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding cal-
6 endar year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust
7 funds ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, the Secretary shall
8 pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period
9 beginning with the following December in amounts not to
10 exceed—

11 “(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, ac-
12 cording to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by
13 which the balance in such trust funds on the date of 14 such determination exceeds the amount necessary to 15 effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32.0 percent for
16 the following year; and

17 “(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits
18 for each month in such 12-month period, an amount
19 equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all
20 benefits paid to him during all previous years were less
21 than the amounts which would have been paid to him
22 but for the provisions of this paragraph.

23 Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage in-
24 crease in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months
25 during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient

1 funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount
2 to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in
3 clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be
4 paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to
5 any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title
6 for the months in which such additional amounts are being
7 paid.

8 “(F) In any case in which additional payments are
9 made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for
10 purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 11 12-month period for which such additional benefits were
12 made, the percentage increase under this subsection applica-
13 ble to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be
14 deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such
15 additional payments (as measured with respect to payments
16 which are not subject to reduction under any other provision
17 of this Act).”.

18 (c) Only with respect to the determination made for
19 January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year
20 (for purposes of determining the increase under section
21 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for 22 December of such year) shall be determined by using the ac-
23 tuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human serv-
24 ices of the ratio of—

1 (1) the combined balance which will be available
2 in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance
3 Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance
4 Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding
5 loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hos-
6 pital Insurance Trust Fund, at the close of business on
7 December 31 of such calendar year, to

8 (2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
9 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
10 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
11 Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year
12 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of such
13 Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such
14 trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer
15 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of 16 any transfers into either such trust fund from the Rail-
17 road Retirement Account.

18 (d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is 19 amended by inserting “, or, if greater, the percentage by 20 which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for 21 such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5),” after
22 “are increased for such month”.

1 INCREASE IN OLD-AGE INSURANCE BENEFIT AMOUNTS ON
2 ACCOUNT OF DELAYED RETIREMENT

3 SEC. 118. (a) Section 202(w)(1)(A) of the Social Secu-
4 rity Act is amended to read as follows:

5 “(A) the applicable percentage (as determined
6 under paragraph (6)) of such amount, multiplied by”.

7 (b) Section 202(w) of such Act is amended by adding at
8 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

9 “(6) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the applicable
10 percentage is—

11 “(A) $\frac{1}{12}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual
12 who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance
13 benefit before 1979; and

14 “(B) $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual
15 who first becomes so eligible after 1978, and before
16 1990;

17 “(C) in the case of an individual who first be-
18 comes so eligible after 1989 and before 2009, a per-
19 centage equal to the percentage in effect under this sub-
20 paragraph for individuals who first became eligible in 21 the preceding calendar year (as increased pursuant to 22 this clause), plus $\frac{1}{48}$ of 1 percent, and

23 “(D) in the case of an individual who first be-
24 comes so eligible after 2008, $\frac{2}{3}$ of 1 percent.”

1 (c)(1) Paragraphs (2)(A) and (3) of section 202(w) of
2 such Act are each amended by striking out “age 72” and
3 inserting in lieu thereof “age 70”.

4 (2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply
5 with respect to increment months in calendar years after 6 1983.

7 INCREASE IN RETIREMENT AGE

8 SEC. 119. (a) Section 216 of the Social Security Act is
9 amended by inserting before subsection (b) the following new
10 subsection:

11 “Retirement Age

12 “(a) (1) The term ‘retirement age’ means—

13 “(A) with respect to an individual who attains the
14 early retirement age (as defined in paragraph (2))
15 before January 1, 2000, 65 years of age;

16 “(B) with respect to an individual who attains
17 early retirement age after December 31, 1999, and
18 before January 1, 2012, 65 years of age plus the
19 number of months in the age increase factor (as deter-
20 mined under paragraph (3)) for the year in which such 21 individual attains early retirement age; and

22 “(C) with respect to an individual who attains
23 early retirement age after December 31, 2014, 66
24 years of age.

1 “(2) The term ‘early retirement age’ means age 62 in
2 the case of an old-age, wife’s, or husband’s benefit, and age
3 60 in the case of a widow’s or widower’s benefit.

4 “(3) The age increase factor for individuals who attain
5 early retirement age in the period described in subparagraph
6 (B) shall be equal to one-twelfth of the number of months in
7 the period beginning with January 2000 and ending with
8 December of the year in which the individual attains early
9 retirement age.

10 (b)(1) Section 202(q)(9) of such Act is amended to read
11 as follows:

12 “(9) The amount of the reduction for early retirement
13 specified in paragraph (1) shall be periodically revised by the
14 Secretary such that—

15 “(A) for old-age insurance benefits, wife’s insur-
16 ance benefits, and husband’s insurance benefits, the re-
17 duction applicable to an individual entitled to such a
18 benefit at an age not more than 3 years lower than the
19 retirement age applicable to such individual, shall be
20 the same as under such paragraph (1), and such reduc-
21 tion shall be increased by five-twelfths of 1 percent for 22 each month below that age which is 3 years lower than 23 the applicable retirement age; and

24 “(B) for widow’s insurance benefits and widow-
25 er’s insurance benefits, the reduction for those entitled

1 to such benefits at the earliest possible early retirement
2 age shall be the same as specified in paragraph (1),
3 and those for later ages shall be established by linear
4 interpolation between the applicable reduction for such
5 earliest possible early retirement age and a factor of
6 unity at the applicable retirement age.”.

7 (2) Section 202(q)(1) of such Act is amended by strik-
8 ing out “If” and inserting in lieu thereof “Subject to para-
9 graph (9), if”.

10 (c) The Social Security Act is amended—

11 (1) by striking out “age 65” or “age of 65”, as
12 the case may be, each place it appears in the following
13 sections and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance
14 “retirement age (as defined in section 216(a))”:

15 (A) subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g),
16 (r), and (w) of section 202,

12 striking out "applicable exempt amount" and inserting in 13 lieu thereof "exempt amount".

14 (h) Section 203(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by 15 striking out "exempt amounts (separately stated for individ-
16 uals described in subparagraph (D) and for other individ-
17 uals) which are to be applicable" and inserting in lieu thereof
18 "exempt amount which is to be applicable".

19 (i) Section 203(f)(8)(B) of such Act is amended—

20 (1) by striking out "Except as otherwise provided
21 in subparagraph (D), the exempt amount which is ap-
22 plicable to individuals described in such subparagraph
23 and the exempt amount which is applicable to other in-
24 dividuals, for each month of a particular taxable year,
25 shall each be" and inserting in lieu thereof "The

1 exempt amount for each month of a particular taxable
2 year shall be”;

3 (2) in clause (i), by striking out “corresponding”;
4 and

5 (3) in the matter following clause (ii), by striking
6 out “an exempt amount” and inserting in lieu thereof
7 “the exempt amount”.

8 (j) Section 203(f)(8) of such Act is amended by striking
9 out subparagraph (D) thereof.

10 (k) Section 203(h)(1)(A) of such Act is amended—

11 (1) by striking out “applicable exempt amount”
12 and inserting in lieu thereof “exempt amount”; and

13 (2) by striking out “age 70” each place it appears 14 and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “retire-
15 ment age”.

16 (l) Section 203(j) of such Act is amended—

17 (1) by striking out “Age Seventy” in the heading
18 thereof and inserting in lieu thereof “Retirement Age”;
19 and

20 (2) by striking out “seventy years of age” and in-
21 serting in lieu thereof “retirement age”.

22 (m) Section 202(w)(2) of such Act (as amended by sec- 23 tion 118 of this Act) is further amended by inserting “for 24 months prior to 1984” before “and prior”.

1 which such individual is confined in a jail, prison, or other
2 penal institution or correctional facility, pursuant to his con-
3 viction of an offense which constituted a felony under appli-
4 cable law.

5 “(2) Benefits which would be payable to any individual
6 (other than a confined individual to whom benefits are not 7 payable by reason of paragraph (1)) under this title on the 8 basis of the wages and self-employment income of such a con-
9 fin ed individual but for the provisions of paragraph (1), shall 10 be payable as though such confined individual were receiving 11 such benefits.

12 “(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 552a of 13 title 5, United States Code, or any other provision of Federal 14 or State law, any agency of the United States Government
15 or of any State (or political subdivision thereof) shall make 16 available to the Secretary, upon written request, the name
17 and social security account number of any individual who is 18 confined in a jail, prison, or other penal institution or correc-
19 tional facility under the jurisdiction of such agency, pursu-
20 ant to his conviction of an offense which constituted a felony
21 under applicable law, which the Secretary may require to 22 carry out the provisions of this subsection.”.

24 subsection (f).

1 (c) The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b)
2 shall apply with respect to monthly benefits payable for 3 months beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this
4 Act.

5 LIMITATIONS ON PAYMENTS TO NONRESIDENT ALIENS

6 SEC. 124. (a) Section 202(t)(1) of the Social Security
7 Act is amended to read as follows:

8 “(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this
9 title (but subject to subparagraphs (B) through (D) of this
10 paragraph), no monthly benefit shall be paid under this sec-
11 tion or section 223 for any month to any individual who is
12 not a citizen or national of the United States if such individ-
13 ual is outside the United States.

14 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, an individual
15 shall be considered to be outside the United States in any
16 month only if such month occurs—

17 “(i) after the sixth consecutive calendar month
18 during all of which (as determined by the Secretary on
19 the basis of information furnished to him by the Attor-
20 ney General or information which otherwise comes to 21 his attention) such individual is outside the United
22 States, and

23 “(ii) prior to the first month thereafter during all
24 of which such individual has been in the United
25 States;

1 but in applying the preceding provisions of this subparagraph
2 an individual who has been outside the United States for any
3 period of 30 consecutive days shall be treated as remaining
4 outside the United States until he has been in the United
5 States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

6 “(C)(i) An individual who is otherwise prevented by
7 subparagraph (A) from receiving benefits under this title
8 shall nevertheless be paid such benefits, as though such sub-
9 paragraph were inapplicable, until the total amount of such
10 benefits (excluding amounts withheld from such benefits
11 under section 1441 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954)
12 equals the total amount of the taxes payable under sections
13 3101 and 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or the 14 corresponding provisions of prior law) with respect to the 15 wages and self-employment income on which such benefits
16 are based (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of 17 such wages and self-employment income) plus interest (as de-
18 termined under clause (ii)).

19 “(ii) In determining the total amount of benefits pay-
20 able to an individual under clause (i) with respect to the
21 wages and self-employment income of any individual, the
22 Secretary shall take into account all benefits paid before such
23 determination is made on the basis of such wages and self-
24 employment income (wherever paid).

1 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, interest on
2 taxes payable under sections 3101 and 1401 of the Internal
3 Revenue Code of 1954 (or corresponding provisions of prior
4 law) shall be compounded annually from July 1 of the year
5 in which such taxes were payable only until the last day of
6 the year preceding the year in which the individual on the
7 basis of whose wages and self-employment income benefits
8 are to be paid attains age 62, becomes disabled, or dies,
9 whichever occurs first, at a rate of 3.0 percent for the period
10 after 1936 and before 1951, and, for each year after 1950, at 11 a rate equal to the average of the twelve monthly interest rates
12 determined under section 201 for such year.

13 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘United
14 States’ (when used in either a geographical or political sense)
15 means the States, the District of Columbia, the Common-
16 wealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American
17 Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and any
18 other territory or possession of the United States.”

19 (b) Section 202(t)(2) of such Act is repealed.

20 (c) Section 202(t)(3) of such Act is amended to read as
21 follows:

22 “(3) Paragraph (1) shall not apply—

23 “(A) in any case where its application would be
24 contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States

1 in effect on the date of the enactment of the Social Se-
2 curity Amendments of 1983, or

3 “(B) to individuals who are citizens or residents
4 of a country with which the United States has con-
5 cluded an international social security agreement pur-
6 suant to section 233, unless otherwise provided by such
7 agreement.”.

8 (d) Section 202(t)(4) of such Act is amended—

9 (1) by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B);

10 (2) by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and
11 (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C); and

12 (3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of
13 subparagraph (C) (as so redesignated) and all that fol-
14 lows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

15 (e) The heading of section 202(t) of such Act is amended
16 by adding at the end thereof the following: “; Prohibition
17 Against Payment of Benefits to Aliens Not Permanent Resi-
18 dents”.

19 (f)(1) The amendments made by the preceding subsec-
20 tions shall apply with respect to any individual who initially
21 becomes eligible for benefits under section 202 or 223 of the
22 Social Security Act after December 31, 1984.

23 (2) Section 202(t) of the Social Security Act (as in 24 effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act)
25 shall apply with respect to individuals who are eligible for

1 benefits under section 202 or 223 of such Act before January
2 1, 1985.

4 FUNDS RATIO IS BELOW 20 PERCENT AND DECLINING

5 SEC. 125. (a) Section 215(i) of the Social Security Act
6 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
7 paragraph:

8 “(5)(A) On or before July 1 of each calendar year after
9 1983, the Secretary shall determine whether the estimated
10 OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year follow-
11 ing such calendar year will be—

12 “(i) less than 20.0 percent; and

13 “(ii) less than the estimated OASDI trust fund
14 ratio for the first calendar year following the year in
15 which such determination is made.

16 “(B) If the Secretary finds that the OASDI trust fund
17 ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar
18 year will be less than each of the ratios described in clauses
19 (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall—

20 “(i) notify the Congress on or before July 1 of
21 such calendar year that, absent a change of circum-
22 stances, it will be necessary to reduce the amount of
23 the percentage cost-of-living increase otherwise payable
24 under this subsection with respect to benefits for
25 months after November of such calendar year; and

1 “(ii) absent a change of circumstances before such
2 cost-of-living increase is determined that will allow the
3 full amount of benefits otherwise payable to be paid in
4 a timely fashion, reduce the amount of such percentage
5 increase (but not below zero) in accordance with sub-
6 paragraph (C) to the extent necessary to ensure that
7 the OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar
8 year following the calendar year in which the determi-
9 nation is made will not fall below the lower of—

10 “(I) 20.0 percent, or

11 “(II) the OASDI trust fund ratio for the 12 calendar year following the calendar year in
13 which the determination is made.

14 “(C) In reducing a cost-of-living percentage increase
15 under subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall first apply such 16 reduction to the percentage increase otherwise payable with 17 respect to monthly benefits payable under this section that are 18 based on a primary insurance amount of $250 or more for
19 the month preceding such cost-of-living increase; the percent-
20 age increase applied to the primary insurance amount used to 21 determine all other monthly benefits shall not be such as to
22 increase such primary insurance amounts above $250. If
23 further reduction in outgo is required, a reduction in the per-
24 centage increase applicable with respect to monthly benefits

1 based on a primary insurance amount of less than $250 for
2 such preceding month shall be made.

3 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘OASDI
4 trust fund ratio’ shall mean, with respect to any calendar
5 year, the ratio of—

6 “(i) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
7 equal to the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age
8 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
9 Disability Insurance Trust Fund as of the start of
10 business on January 1 of such calendar year, taking
11 into account any cost-of-living increase that otherwise
12 would be made with respect to benefits paid during 13 such year, and any actions possible to be taken under
14 sections 201(l) and 1817(j) (relating to interfund bor-
15 rowing) and 201 (a) and (m) (relating to normalized
16 crediting of social security taxes), to

17 “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
18 the total amount to be paid from such Trust Funds
19 during such calendar year (other than payments of in-
20 terest on, and repayments of loans from), such Trust
21 Funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
22 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
23 transfer to such account from any such Trust Fund.

24 “(E) With respect to any calendar year beginning
25 before January 1988 for which a determination is required to

1 be made under subparagraph (A), the estimated OASDI
 2 trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such
 3 calendar year shall be treated as exceeding the estimated
 4 OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following
 5 such calendar year if ratio of the estimated combined bal-
 6 ances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance
 7 Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
 8 and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund for such
 9 second following calendar year to the amounts estimated to be
 10 paid from all such Trust Funds during such second following
 11 calendar year exceeds the ratio of the estimated balances in
 12 all such Trust Funds to estimated payments from all such
 13 Trust Funds for such first following calendar year.”

14 PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

15 SEC. 131. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAIL-
 16 ROAD RETIREMENT BENEFITS.

17 (a) GENERAL RULE.—Part II of subchapter B of 18 chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to 19 amounts specifically included in gross income) is amended
 20 by redesignating section 86 as section 87 and by inserting
 21 after section 85 the following new section:

1 “SEC. 86. SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIRE-
 2 MENT BENEFITS.

3 “(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income for the taxable year
 4 of any taxpayer described in subsection (b) includes social
 5 security benefits in an amount equal to the lesser of—

6 “(1) one-half of the social security benefits re-
 7 ceived during the taxable year, or

8 “(2) one-half of the excess described in subsection
 9 (b).

10 “(b) TAXPAYERS TO WHOM SUBSECTION (a) AP-
 11 PLIES.—

12 “(1) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer is described in
 13 this subsection if—

14 “(A) the sum of—

15 “(i) the adjusted gross income of the
 16 taxpayer for the taxable year, plus

17 “(ii) one-half of the social security
 18 benefits received during the taxable year, ex-
 19 ceeds

20 “(B) the base amount.

21 “(2) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes
 22 of this subsection, the adjusted gross income of the tax-
 23 payer for the taxable year shall be—

24 “(A) determined without regard to this sec-
 25 tion and sections 221, 911, and 931, and

1 “(B) increased by the amount of interest of
2 the taxpayer which is exempt from tax for the
3 taxable year.

4 “(c) BASE AMOUNT.—For purposes of this section, the
5 term ‘base amount’ means—

6 “(1) except as otherwise provided in this subsec-
7 tion, $25,000,

8 “(2) $32,000, in the case of a joint return, and

9 “(3) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—

10 “(A) is married at the close of the taxable
11 year (within the meaning of section 143) but does
12 not file a joint return for such year, and

13 “(B) does not live apart from his spouse at
14 all times during the taxable year.

15 “(d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—

16 “(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section,
17 the term ‘social security benefit’ means any amount re-
18 ceived by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to—

19 “(A) a monthly benefit under title II of the 20 Social Security Act (determined without regard to 21 section 203(i) of the Social Security Act), or

22 “(B) a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit.

23 “(2) ADJUSTMENT FOR REPAYMENTS DURING
24 YEAR.—

1 “(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this
2 section, the amount of social security benefits re-
3 ceived during any taxable year shall be reduced
4 by any repayment made by the taxpayer during
5 the taxable year of a social security benefit previ-
6 ously received by the taxpayer (whether or not
7 such benefit was received during the taxable
8 year).

9 “(B) DENIAL OF DEDUCTION.—If (but for
10 this subparagraph) any portion of the repayments
11 referred to in subparagraph (A) would have been
12 allowable as a deduction for the taxable year
13 under section 165, such portion shall be allowable
14 as a deduction only to the extent it exceeds the
15 social security benefits received by the taxpayer
16 during the taxable year (and not repaid during 17 such taxable year).

18 “(3) TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENE-
19 FIT.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘tier 1
20 railroad retirement benefit’ means a monthly benefit
21 under section 3(a), 4(a), or 4(f) of the Railroad Retire-
22 ment Act of 1974.

23 “(e) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT INCLUDED WHERE
24 TAXPAYER RECEIVES LUMP-SUM PAYMENT.—

25 “(1) LIMITATION.—If—

1 “(A) any portion of a lump-sum payment of
2 social security benefits received during the taxable
3 year is attributable to prior taxable years, and

4 “(B) the taxpayer makes an election under
5 this subsection for the taxable year,

6 then the amount included in gross income under this section
7 for the taxable year by reason of the receipt of such portion
8 shall not exceed the sum of the increases in gross income
9 under this chapter for prior taxable years which would result
10 solely from taking into account such portion in the taxable
11 years to which it is attributable.

12 “(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

13 “(A) YEAR TO WHICH BENEFIT ATTRIBUT-
14 ABLE.—For purposes of this subsection, a social
15 security benefit is attributable to a taxable year if 16 the generally applicable payment date for such
17 benefit occurred during such taxable year.

18 “(B) ELECTION.—An election under this
19 subsection shall be made at such time and in such
20 manner as the Secretary shall by regulations pre-
21 scribe. Such election, once made, may be revoked
22 only with the consent of the Secretary.

23 “(f) TREATMENT AS PENSION OR ANNUITY FOR CER-
24 TAIN PURPOSES.—For purposes of—

25 “(1) section 43(c)(2) (defining earned income),

1 “(2) the name and address of such individual.

2 “(b) STATEMENTS TO BE FURNISHED TO INDIVID-
3 UALS WITH RESPECT TO WHOM INFORMATION IS FUR-
4 NISHED.—Every person making a return under subsection
5 (a) shall furnish to each individual whose name is set forth
6 in such return a written statement showing—

7 “(1) the name of the agency making the pay-
8 ments, and

9 “(2) the aggregate amount of payments, of repay-
10 ments, and of reductions, with respect to the individual
11 as shown on such return.

12 The written statement required under the preceding sentence
13 shall be furnished to the individual on or before January 31
14 of the year following the calendar year for which the return
15 under subsection (a) was made.

16 “(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

17 “(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL OFFICIAL.—The
18 term ‘appropriate Federal official’ means—

19 “(A) the Secretary of Health and Human
20 Services in the case of social security benefits de-
21 scribed in section 86(d)(1)(A), and

22 “(B) the Railroad Retirement Board in the 23 case of social security benefits described in section
24 86(d)(1)(B).

1 “(2) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—The term
2 ‘social security benefit’ has the meaning given to such
3 term by section 86(d)(1).’”

4 (c) TREATMENT OF NONRESIDENT ALIENS.—

5 (1) AMENDMENT OF SECTION 871(a).—Subsec-
6 tion (a) of section 871 of such Code (relating to tax on 7 income not connected with United States business) is 8 amended by adding at the end thereof the following
9 new paragraph:

10 “(3) TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY BENE-
11 FITS.—For purposes of this section and section
12 1441—

13 “(A) one-half of any social security benefit 14 (as defined in section 86(d)) shall be included in 15 gross income, and

16 “(B) section 86 shall not apply.”

17 (2) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO SOCIAL
18 SECURITY ADMINISTRATION OR RAILROAD RETIRE-
19 MENT BOARD.—

20 (A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (h) of section
21 6103 of such Code (relating to disclosure to cer-
22 tain Federal officers and employees for purposes
23 of tax administration, etc.) is amended by adding 24 at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

1 “(6) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—Upon writ-
2 ten request, the Secretary may disclose available
3 return information from the master files of the Internal
4 Revenue Service with respect to the address and status
5 of an individual as a nonresident alien or as a citizen
6 or resident of the United States to the Social Security
7 Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board for 8 purposes of carrying out its responsibilities under sec-
9 tion 1441 with respect to social security benefits (as 10 defined in section 86(d)).”

11 (B) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Para-
12 graph (4) of section 6103(p) of such Code (relat-13 ing to safeguards) is amended by inserting
14 “(h)(6),” after “(h)(2),” in the material preceding
15 subparagraph (A) and in subparagraph (F)(i)
16 thereof.

17 (d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS TREATED AS
18 UNITED STATES SOURCED.—Subsection (a) of section 861
19 of such Code (relating to income from sources within the 20 United States) is amended by adding at the end thereof the 21 following new paragraph:

22 “(8) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—Any social 23 security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)).”

24 (e) TRANSFERS TO TRUST FUNDS.—

1 (1) IN GENERAL.—There are hereby appropriated
2 to each payor fund amounts equivalent to the aggregate
3 increase in tax liabilities under chapter 1 of the Inter-
4 nal Revenue Code of 1954 which is attributable to the
5 application of sections 86 and 871(a)(3) of such Code
6 (as added by this section) to payments from such payor
7 fund.

8 (2) TRANSFERS.—The amounts appropriated by 9 paragraph (1) to any payor fund shall be transferred 10 from time to time (but not less frequently than quarter-
11 ly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis
12 of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury of 13 the amounts referred to in such paragraph. Any such 14 quarterly payment shall be made on the first day of 15 such quarter and shall take into account social security
16 benefits estimated to be received during such quarter.
17 Proper adjustments shall be made in the amounts sub-
18 sequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were 19 in excess of or less than the amounts required to be 20 transferred.

21 (3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsec-
22 tion—

23 (A) PAYOR FUND.—The term “payor fund”
24 means any trust fund or account from which pay-
25 ments of social security benefits are made.

1 (B) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—The
2 term “social security benefits” has the meaning
3 given such term by section 86(d)(1) of the Inter-
4 nal Revenue Code of 1954.

5 (4) REPORTS.—The Secretary of the Treasury
6 shall submit annual reports to the Congress and to the 7 Secretary of Health and Human Services and the 8 Railroad Retirement Board on—

9 (A) the transfers made under this subsection
10 during the year, and the methodology used in de-
11 termining the amount of such transfers and the 12 funds or account to which made, and

13 (B) the anticipated operation of this subsec-
14 tion during the next 5 years.

15 (f) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

16 (1) Subsection (a) of section 85 of such Code is 17 amended by striking out “this section,” and inserting
18 in lieu thereof “this section, section 86,”.

19 (2) Subparagraph (B) of section 128(c)(3) of such 20 Code (as in effect for taxable years beginning after De- 21 cember 31, 1984) is amended by striking out “85,” 22 and inserting in lieu thereof “85, 86,”.

23 (3) The table of sections for part II of subchapter
24 B of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking

1 out the item relating to section 86 and inserting in lieu
2 thereof the following:

“Sec. 86. Social security and tier 1 railroad retirement benefits.

“Sec. 87. Alcohol fuel credit.”.

3 (4) The table of sections for subpart B of part III
4 of subchapter A of chapter 61 of such Code is amended
5 by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

“Sec. 6050F. Returns relating to social security benefits.”.

6 (g) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

7 (1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in para-
8 graph (2), the amendments made by this section shall 9 apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in 10 taxable years ending after such date.

11 (2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LUMP-SUM PAY-
12 MENTS RECEIVED AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1983.—The 13 amendments made by this section shall not apply to 14 any portion of a lump-sum payment of social security 15 benefits (as defined in section 86(d) of the Internal 16 Revenue Code of 1954) received after December 31, 17 1983, if the generally applicable payment date for such 18 portion was before January 1, 1984.

3 INTERFUND BORROWING EXTENSION

4 SEC. 142. (a)(1) Section 201(l)(1) of the Social Secu-
5 rity Act is amended—

6 (A) by striking out “January 1983” and insert-
7 ing in lieu thereof “January 1988”; and

8 (B) by inserting after “or” the second place it ap-
9 pears “, subject to paragraph (5),”.

10 (2) (A) Section 201(l)(2) of such Act is amended—

11 (i) by striking out “from time to time” and insert-
12 ing in lieu thereof “on the last day of each month after 13 such loan is made”;

14 (ii) by striking out “interest” and inserting in 15 lieu thereof “the total interest accrued to such day”;
16 and

17 (iii) by striking out “the loan were an investment
18 under subsection (d)” and inserting in lieu thereof
19 “such amount had remained in the Depository Account
20 established with respect to such lending Trust Fund
21 under subsection (d) or section 1817(c)”.

22 (B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall
23 apply with respect to months beginning more than thirty days
24 after the date of enactment of this Act.

25 (3) Section 201(l)(3) of such Act is amended—

1 (A) by inserting “(A)” after the paragraph desig-
2 nation; and

3 (B) by adding at the end thereof the following
4 new subparagraphs:

5 “(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has
6 been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Hospital In-
7 surance Trust Fund to the Federal Old Age and Survivors
8 Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust
9 Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the OASDI
10 trust fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he shall transfer from the 11 borrowing Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance
12 Trust Fund an amount that—

13 “(I) together with any amounts transferred from
14 another borrowing Trust Fund under this paragraph
15 for such year, will reduce the OASDI trust fund ratio
16 to 15 percent; and

17 “(II) does not exceed the outstanding balance of 18 such loan.

19 “(ii) Amounts required to be transferred under clause
20 (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of 21 the year succeeding the year in which the determination de-
22 scribed in clause (i) is made.

23 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term
24 ‘OASDI trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any calen-
25 dar year, the ratio of—

1 “(I) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age
2 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
3 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the out-
4 standing amount of any loan (including interest there-
5 on) theretofore made to either such Fund from the Fed-
6 eral Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the last day
7 of such calendar year, to

8 “(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
9 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old Age
10 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
11 Disability Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar
12 year following such calendar year for all purposes au-
13 thorized by section 201 (other than payments of inter-
14 est on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal Hos-
15 pital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)), but
16 excluding any transfer payments between such trust
17 funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
18 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
19 transfers into either such trust fund from that Account.

20 “(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under para-
21 graph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983)
22 shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event
23 no later than December 31, 1989.

24 “(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987, and
25 before January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer

1 each month to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
2 from any Trust Fund with any amount outstanding on a
3 loan made from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
4 under paragraph (1) an amount equal to one twenty-fourth of
5 the amount owed to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
6 Fund by such Trust Fund at the beginning of such period
7 (plus the interest accrued on the outstanding balance of such
8 loan during such month).”.

9 (4) Section 201(l) of such Act is further amended by
10 adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

11 “(5)(A) No amounts may be borrowed from the Federal
12 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1) during
13 any month if the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio for
14 such month is less than 10 percent.

15 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘Hospital
16 Insurance trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any
17 month, the ratio of—

18 “(i) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insur-
19 ance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount
20 of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore
21 made to such Trust Fund under this subsection, as of 22 the last day of the second month preceding such month,
23 to

24 “(ii) the amount obtained by multiplying by
25 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the

1 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Hospital In-
2 surance Trust Fund during the month for which such
3 ratio is to be determined (other than payments of inter-
4 est on, or repayments of loans from another Trust
5 Fund under this subsection), and reducing the amount
6 of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by
7 the amount of any transfer into the Hospital Insurance
8 Trust Fund from that Account.”.

9 (b)(1) Section 1817(j)(1) of such Act is amended—

10 (A) by striking out “January 1983” and insert-
11 ing in lieu thereof “January 1988”; and

12 (B) by inserting “, subject to paragraph (5),”
13 after “may”.

14 (2)(A) Section 1817(j)(2) of such Act is amended—

15 (i) by striking out “from time to time” and insert-
16 ing in lieu thereof “on the last day of each month after 17 such loan is made”;

18 (ii) by striking out “interest” and inserting in 19 lieu thereof “the total interest accrued to such day”;
20 and

21 (iii) by striking out “the loan were an investment
22 under subsection (c)” and inserting in lieu thereof
23 “such amount had remained in the Depository Account
24 established with respect to such lending Trust Fund
25 under section 201(d)”.

1 (B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall
2 apply with respect to months beginning more than 30 days
3 after the date of enactment of this Act.

4 (3) Section 1817(j)(3) of such Act is amended—

5 (A) by inserting “(A)” after the paragraph desig-
6 nation; and

7 (B) by adding at the end thereof the following
8 new subparagraphs:

9 “(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has
10 been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Old Age and
11 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability
12 Insurance Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance
13 Trust Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the Hos-
14 pital Insurance Trust Fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he
15 shall transfer from such Trust Fund to the lending trust fund
16 an amount that—

17 “(I) together with any amounts transferred to an-
18 other lending trust fund under this paragraph for such
19 year, will reduce Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio
20 to 15 percent; and

22 such loan.

23 “(i) Amounts required to be transferred under clause
24 (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of

1 the year succeeding the year in which the determination de-
2 scribed in clause (i) is made.

3 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘Hos-
4 pital Insurance Trust Fund ratio’ means, with respect to any
5 calendar year, the ratio of—

6 “(I) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insur-
7 ance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any out-
8 standing loan (including interest thereon) from the
9 Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund
10 and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, as
11 of the last day of such calendar year; to

12 “(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
13 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Hospital
14 Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar year fol-
15 lowing such calendar year (other than payments of in-
16 terest on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal
17 Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the
18 Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund under para-
19 graph (1)), and reducing the amount of any transfer to
20 the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
21 transfers into such Trust Fund from the Railroad Re-
22 tirement Account.

23 “(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under para-
24 graph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983)

1 shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event
2 no later than December 31, 1989.”.

3 “(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987 and before
4 January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer each
5 month from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to
6 any Trust Fund that is owed any amount by the Federal
7 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund on a loan made under para-
8 graph (1), an amount equal to 1/24 of the amount owed to
9 such Trust Fund by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
10 Fund at the beginning of such period (plus the interest ac-
11 rued on the outstanding balance of such loan during such 12 month).”.

13 “(4) Section 1817(j) of such Act is further amended by
14 adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

15 “(5)(A) No amounts may be loaned by the Federal Old
16 Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal
17 Disability Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)
18 during any month if the OASDI trust fund ratio for such
19 month is less than 10 percent.

20 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘OASDI
21 trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any month, the ratio
22 of—

23 “(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age
24 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
25 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the out-

1 standing amount of any loan (including interest there-
 2 on) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund from
 3 the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under sec-
 4 tion 201(l), as of the last day of the second month pre-
 5 ceding such month, to

6 “(i) the amount obtained by multiplying by
 7 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the 8 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old Age and
 9 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Dis-
 10 ability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for
 11 which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes
 12 authorized by section 201 (other than payments of in-
 13 terest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal
 14 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(l)),
 15 but excluding any transfer payments between such
 16 trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers
 17 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of 18 any transfers into either such trust fund from that Ac-
 19 count.”.

20 CREDITING AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO
 21 TRUST FUNDS

22 SEC. 143. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall take
 23 such actions as may be necessary to ensure that amounts of
 24 checks for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act
 25 which have not been presented for payment within a reason-

1 able length of time (not to exceed twelve months) after issu-
2 ance are credited to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors In-
3 surance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance
4 Trust Fund, whichever may be the fund from which the check
5 was issued. Amounts of any such check shall be recharged to
6 the fund from which they were issued if payment is subse-
7 quently made on such check.

8 (b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from
9 the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and
10 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and to the Federal Disabil-
11 ity Insurance Trust Fund, as appropriate, such sums as may
12 be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds in the total
13 amounts of all currently unnegotiated benefit checks. After
14 the amounts appropriated by this subsection have been trans-
15 ferred to the Trust Funds, the provisions of subsection (a)
16 shall be applicable. There are hereby appropriated into such
17 Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse
18 such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated
19 benefit checks. The first such transfer shall be made within
20 thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act with 21 respect to all such unnegotiated checks as of such date of 22 enactment.

23 (2) As used in paragraph (1), the term "currently unne-
24 gotiated benefit checks" means the checks issued under title
25 II of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the enact-

1 ment of this Act, which remain unnegotiated after the twelfth
2 month following the date on which they were issued.

3 TRANSFER TO TRUST FUNDS FOR BENEFITS

4 ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY SERVICE BEFORE 1957

5 SEC. 144. (a) Section 217(g) of the Social Security Act
6 is amended to read as follows:

7 “APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS

8 “(g)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enact-
9 ment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secre-
10 tary shall determine the amount equal to the excess of—

11 “(A) the actuarial present value as of such date of 12 enactment of the past and future benefit payments from
13 the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust
14 Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
15 and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under 16 this title and title XVIII, together with associated ad-

7 Act is amended to read as follows:

8 “(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to each of
9 the Trust Funds, consisting of the Federal Old-Age and Sur-
10 vivors Insurance Trust, the Federal Disability Insurance
11 Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
12 Fund, for transfer on July 1 of each calendar year to such
13 Trust Fund from amounts in the general fund in the Treas-
14 ury not otherwise appropriated, an amount equal to the total
15 of the additional amounts which would be appropriated to
16 such Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending September 30 of 17 such calendar year under section 201 or 1817 of this Act if
18 the amounts of the additional wages deemed to have been paid
19 for such calendar year by reason of subsection (a) constituted

23 Revenue Code of 1954. Amounts authorized to be appropri-
24 ated under this subsection for transfer on July 1 of each cal-
25 endar year shall be determined on the basis of estimates of

1 the Secretary of the wages deemed to be paid for such calen-
2 dar year under subsection (a); and proper adjustments shall
3 be made in amounts authorized to be appropriated for subse-
4 quent transfer to the extent prior estimates were in excess of
5 or were less than such wages so deemed to be paid.”

6 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be ef-
7 fective with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for
8 calendar years after 1983.

9 (c)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enactment
10 of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services
11 shall determine the additional amounts which would have
12 been appropriated into the Federal Old-Age and Survivors
13 Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance
14 Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
15 Fund under sections 201 and 1817 of the Social Security
16 Act, if the additional wages deemed to have been paid under
17 section 229(a) of the Social Security Act prior to 1984 had
18 constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in sec-
19 tion 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for pur-
20 poses of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the 21 Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and the amount of interest
22 which would have been earned on such amounts if they had
23 been so appropriated.

24 (2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, within
25 thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act, trans-

1 fer into each such Trust Fund, from the general fund in the
2 Treasury, an amount equal to the amount determined with
3 respect to such Trust Fund under paragraph (1), less any
4 amount appropriated into such Trust Fund under the provi-
5 sions of section 229(b) of the Social Security Act prior to the
6 date of the determination made under paragraph (1) with re-
7 spect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years
8 prior to 1984. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust
9 Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accord-
10 ance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

11 (B) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined
12 under subparagraph (A) within one year after the date of the 13 transfer made under paragraph (1), as warranted by data
14 which may become available to him after the date of the
15 transfer under subparagraph (A) based upon actual benefits
16 paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts deter-
17 mined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred by the
18 Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund
19 from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropri-
20 ate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as
21 may be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated
22 to such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be trans-
23 ferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust
24 Funds.

2 SEC. 146. (a) Section 201 of the Social Security Act is
3 amended by striking out subsections (d), (e), and (f) and in-
4 serting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

5 “(d) There are hereby created on the books of the Treas-
6 ury of the United States an account to be known as the Old-
7 Age and Survivors Insurance Depository Account and an
8 account to be known as the Disability Insurance Depository
9 Account.

10 “(e) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of 11 the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund
12 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
13 Fund in the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository
14 Account and that portion of the Federal Disability Insurance
15 Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from
17 count.

18 “(f)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
19 moneys deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) in
20 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
21 in the general fund of the Treasury.

22 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in an account pursuant to
23 subsection (e) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
24 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
25 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an

1 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
2 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
3 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee
4 on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each busi-
5 ness day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing
6 obligations of the United States then forming a part of the
7 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
8 ration of four years from the end of such month, except that
9 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

10 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘flower
11 bond’ means a United States Treasury bond which was
12 issued before March 4, 1971 and which may, at the option of
13 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
14 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
15 terest to the date of payment, if—

16 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
17 the time of his death,

18 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
19 vidual, and

20 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
21 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
22 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
23 taxes.

24 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
25 posited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) whenever he

1 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
2 withdrawals from the Trust Fund which deposited such
3 moneys, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obliga-
4 tions of the United States in the market in an amount not to
5 exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that
6 such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund
7 of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount.”

8 (b) Section 1817 of such Act is amended by striking out
9 subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the
10 following new subsections:

11 “(c) There is hereby created on the books of the Treas-
12 ury of the United States an account to be known as the Hos-
13 pital Insurance Depository Account.

14 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of 15 the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund not required to
16 meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Hos-
17 pital Insurance Depository Account.

18 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
19 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in
20 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
21 in the general fund of the Treasury.

22 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
23 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
24 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
25 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an

1 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
2 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
3 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee
4 on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each busi-
5 ness day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing
6 obligations of the United States then forming a part of the
7 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
8 ration of four years from the end of such month, except that
9 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

10 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower
11 bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was
12 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
13 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
14 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
15 terest to the date of payment, if—

16 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
17 the time of his death,

18 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
19 vidual, and

20 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
21 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
22 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
23 taxes.

24 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
25 posited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he

1 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
2 withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the
3 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
4 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
5 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an
6 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
7 not exceeding such amount.”.

8 (c) Section 1841 of such Act is amended by striking out
9 subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the
10 following new subsections:

11 “(c) There is hereby established on the books of the
12 Treasury an account to be known as the Supplementary
13 Medical Insurance Depository Account.

14 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of
15 the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund
16 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
17 Fund in the Supplementary Medical Insurance Depository
18 Account.

19 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
20 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in
21 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
22 in the general fund of the Treasury.

23 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
24 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
25 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United

1 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an
2 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
3 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
4 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee
5 on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each busi-
6 ness day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing
7 obligations of the United States then forming a part of the
8 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
9 ration of four years from the end of such month, except that
10 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

11 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower
12 bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was
13 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
14 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
15 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
16 terest to the date of payment, if—

17 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
18 the time of his death,

19 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
20 vidual, and

21 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
22 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
23 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
24 taxes.

1 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
2 posited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he
3 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
4 withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the
5 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
6 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
7 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an
8 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
9 not exceeding such amount.”.

10 (d)(1) No later than the date on which this section takes
11 effect, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem at par all
12 outstanding obligations of the United States issued under the
13 Second Liberty Bond Act exclusively for purchase by the
14 Federal Old-Age Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Dis-
15 ability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insur-
16 ance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical
17 Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter in this subsection re-
18 ferred to as the “Trust Funds”).

19 (2)(A) The Managing Trustee may sell any marketable
20 obligation of the United States held by the Trust Funds at
21 market price at any time and shall sell (or redeem) all
22 “flower bonds” held by the Trust Funds on the date of enact-
23 ment of this section at market price no later than the date on 24 which this section takes effect.

1 (B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term “flower
2 bond” means a United States Treasury bond which was
3 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
4 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
5 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
6 terest to the date of payment, if—

7 (i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
8 the time of his death,

9 (ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
10 vidual, and

11 (iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
12 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
13 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
14 taxes.

15 (3) The proceeds from the redemption and sale of obliga-
16 tions of the United States pursuant to paragraphs (1) and
17 (2) shall be paid to the Trust Fund selling or redeeming such 18 obligations and that portion of such proceeds which is not
19 required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund
20 shall be deposited in the account established with respect to
21 such Trust Fund by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Act.

22 (e) The amendments made by this section shall take 23 effect on the first day of the first month beginning more than 24 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

1 ADDITION OF PUBLIC MEMBERS TO TRUST FUND BOARDS
2 OF TRUSTEES

3 SEC. 147. (a) Sections 201(c), 1817(b), and 1841(b) of 4 the Social Security Act are each amended—

5 (1) by striking out the period at the end of the
6 first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof a comma
7 and “and of two members of the public (both of whom
8 may not be from the same political party), who shall be
9 nominated by the President for a term of four years
10 and subject to confirmation by the Senate; and

11 (2) by adding at the end thereof the following new 12 sentence: “A member of the public serving on the
13 Board of Trustees shall not be considered to be a fidu-
14 ciary and shall not be personally liable for actions
15 taken in such capacity with respect to the Trust
16 Funds.”.

17 (b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall
18 become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

19 PAYMENT SCHEDULE BY STATE AND LOCAL
20 GOVERNMENTS

21 SEC. 148. (a) Section 218(e)(1)(A) of the Social Secu-
22 rity Act is amended by striking out “within the thirty-day
23 period immediately following the last day of each calendar
24 month” and inserting in lieu thereof “in accordance with the
25 same payment schedule as applies to payment by employers

1 of the taxes imposed under sections 3101 and 3111 of the
2 Internal Revenue Code of 1954”.

3 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be ef-
4 fective with respect to payments due on or after January 1,
5 1984.

6 NORMALIZED CREDITING OF SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES TO
7 TRUST FUNDS

8 SEC. 149. (a) Section 201(a) of the Social Security
9 Act is amended by striking out “The amounts appropriated”
10 in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “Except as 11 provided in subsection (m), the amounts appropriated”.

12 (b) Section 201 of such Act is further amended by
13 adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

14 “(m)(1) The procedures in effect on January 1, 1983,
15 with respect to the transfer of the amounts appropriated by 16 clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a) and the amounts appro-
17 priated by clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall apply to 18 a calendar month unless the Secretary makes a finding 19 under this paragraph that the OASDI trust fund ratio as of 20 the first day of such calendar month is less than 12 percent.

21 “(2) If the Secretary makes the finding described in
22 paragraph (1) with respect to a calendar month, the amounts
23 appropriated by clauses (3) and (4) shall be transferred on 24 the first day of such calendar month from the general fund of 25 the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insur-

1 ance Trust Fund, and the amounts appropriated by clauses
2 (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall be transferred on the first
3 day of such calendar month from the general fund of the
4 Treasury to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
5 such amounts to be determined on the basis of estimates by
6 the Secretary of the Treasury of the taxes, specified in
7 clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a), to be paid to or deposit-
8 ed into the Treasury during such calendar month.

9 “(3) Proper adjustments shall be made in amounts sub-
10 sequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in
11 excess of or were less than the taxes specified in clauses (3)
12 and (4) of subsection (a).

13 “(4) All amounts transferred to either Trust Fund
14 under paragraph (2) shall be treated by the Managing
15 Trustee in the same manner and to the same extent as the
16 other assets of such Trust Fund; and such Trust Fund shall
17 pay interest to the general fund on the amount so transferred 18 at a rate (calculated on a daily basis, and applied against the
19 difference between the amount so transferred on such first
20 day and the amount which would have been transferred to the
21 Trust Fund up to that day under the procedures in effect on 22 January 1, 1983) equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill 23 rate during such month (payable on the last day of such 24 month).

1 “(5) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘OASDI
2 trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any month, the ratio
3 of—

4 “(A) the combined balance in the Federal Old-
5 Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the
6 Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by
7 the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest
8 thereon) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund
9 from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
10 under subsection (l), and determined without regard to
11 amounts transferred theretofore under this subsection,
12 as of the last day of the second month preceding such 13 month, to

14 “(B) the amount obtained by multiplying by
15 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the 16 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old-Age and
17 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Dis-
18 ability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for
19 which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes
20 authorized by section 201 (other than payments of in-
21 terest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal
22 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under subsection (l)),
23 but excluding any transfer payments between such
24 trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers
25 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of

1 any transfers into either such trust fund from that Ac-
 2 count.”.

3 (c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to
 4 calendar months beginning after the date of enactment of this
 5 section and before January 1, 1988.

6 AMOUNTS RECEIVED UNDER CERTAIN DEFERRED COM-
 7 PENSATION AND SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGE-
 8 MENTS TREATED AS WAGES FOR FICA TAXES

9 SEC. 150. (a)(1) Section 3121 of the Internal Revenue
 10 Code of 1954 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding 11 at the end thereof the following new subsection:

12 “(v) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DEFERRED COMPEN-
 13 SATION AND SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENTS.—

14 “(1) CERTAIN EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTIONS
 15 TREATED AS WAGES.—Nothing in any paragraph of 16 subsection (a) (other than paragraph (1)) shall exclude
 17 from the term ‘wages’ any employer contribution—

18 “(A) under a qualified cash or deferred ar-
 19 rangement (as defined in section 401(k)) to the 20 extent not included in gross income by reason of 21 section 402(a)(8), or

22 “(B) under a cafeteria plan (as defined in 23 section 125(d)) which includes an arrangement
 24 described in subparagraph (A) to the extent the 25 employee had the right to choose cash, property, or

1 other benefits which would be wages for purposes
2 of this chapter.

3 “(2) GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—For purposes of 4 subsection (a)—

5 “(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in
6 subparagraph (B), the term ‘wages’ shall not in-
7 clude any payment to or from a Governmental
8 plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)).

9 “(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The term ‘wages’ shall
10 include any amount—

11 “(i) deferred under a plan described in 12 section 457(a) (at the time the services which 13 relate to such payment were performed),

14 “(ii) deferred under a plan described in 15 subsection (e)(1), (e)(2)(D), or (e)(2)(E) of 16 section 457, or

17 “(iii) which is treated as wages under 18 subsection (a)(5)(E) by reason of a salary
19 reduction agreement.”.

20 (2) Paragraph (5) of section 3121(a) of such Code (de- 21 fining wages) is amended—

22 (A) by striking out “or” at the end of subpara-
23 graph (C),

1 (B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of
2 subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof a
3 comma and “or”, and

4 (C) by adding at the end thereof the following
5 new subparagraph:

6 “(E) under an annuity contract described in sec-
7 tion 403(b), other than a payment for the purchase of 8 such contract which is made by reason of a salary re-
9 duction agreement;”.

10 (3) Subsection (a) of section 3121 of such Code (defin-
11 ing wages) is amended—

12 (A) in paragraph (2), by striking out subpara-
13 graph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C),
14 and (D) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respec-
15 tively,

16 (B) by striking out paragraphs (3) and (9),

17 (C) in paragraph (13)(A)—

18 (i) by inserting “or” after “death,”, and

19 (ii) by striking out “or (iii) retirement after 20 attaining an age specified in the plan referred to 21 in subparagraph (B) or in a pension plan of the 22 employer,”, and

23 (D) by striking out “subparagraph (B)” in the 24 last sentence thereof and inserting in lieu thereof “sub-
25 paragraph (A)”.

1 (b)(1) Section 3306 of the Internal Revenue Code of 2 1954 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the 11 proved December 29, 1981, shall apply in the administration

12 of section 3306(b)(2)(A) of such Code (as amended by sub-
13 paragraph (A)).

14 (c)(1) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amend- 15 ed by adding at the end thereof (as amended by this Act) the 16 following new paragraphs:

17 “Nothing in any of the foregoing provisions of this sec-
18 tion (other than subsection (a)) shall exclude from the term
19 ‘wages’ any employer contribution—

20 “(1) under a qualified cash or deferred arrange-
21 ment (as defined in section 401(k)) to the extent not
22 included in gross income by reason of section
23 402(a)(8), or

24 “(2) under a cafeteria plan (as defined in section 25 125(d)) which includes an arrangement described in

1 paragraph (1) to the extent the employee had the right
2 to choose cash, property, or other benefits which would
3 be wages for purposes of this chapter.

4 For purposes of this section—

5 “(1) the term ‘wages’ shall not include any pay-
6 ment to or from a governmental plan (within the 7 meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue
8 Code of 1954); except that

9 “(2) the term ‘wages’ shall include any amount—

10 “(A) deferred under a plan described in sec-
11 tion 457(a) of such Code (at the time the services 12 which relate to such payment were performed),

13 “(B) deferred under a plan described in sub-
14 section (e)(1), (e)(2)(D), or (e)(2)(E) of section
15 457 of such Code, or

16 “(C) which is treated as wages under subsec-
17 tion (e)(5) by reason of a salary reduction agree-
18 ment.”.

19 (2) Subsection (e) of section 209 of such Act is amended
20 by adding before the semicolon at the end thereof the follow-
21 ing: “, or (5) under an annuity contract described in section
22 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, other than a
23 payment for the purchase of such contract which is made by 24 reason of a salary reduction agreement;”.

25 (3) Section 209 of such Act is amended—

1 furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee
2 will be able to exclude such items from income under
3 section 119.”.

4 (2) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amended

12 clude such items from income under section 119 of the Inter-
13 nal Revenue Code of 1954.”.

14 (b)(1) Subsection (a) of section 3121 of such Code is 15 amended by inserting after paragraph (19) (as added by sub- 16 section (a) of this section) the following new sentence: “Noth-
17 ing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chapter 24
18 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an exclu-
19 sion from ‘wages’ as used in such chapter shall be construed
20 to require a similar exclusion from ‘wages’ in the regulations
21 prescribed for purposes of this chapter.”.

22 (2) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amended
23 by inserting immediately after subsection (r) (as added by 24 subsection (a) of this section) the following new sentence:

1 “Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chap-
2 ter 24 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to 3 income tax withholding) which provides an exclusion from 4 ‘wages’ as used in such chapter shall be construed to require
5 a similar exclusion from ‘wages’ in the regulations prescribed
6 for purposes of this title.”

7 (c) Subsection (b) of section 3306 of the Internal Reve-
8 nue Code of 1954 (defining wages) is amended—

9 (1) by striking out “or” at the end of paragraph
10 (12),

11 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
12 graph (13) and inserting in lieu thereof “, or”,

13 (3) by adding immediately after paragraph (13)
14 the following new paragraph:

15 “(14) the value of any meals or lodging furnished
16 by or on behalf of the employer if at the time of such
17 furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee
18 will be able to exclude such items from income under 19 section 119.”, and

20 (4) by adding at the end thereof the following new
21 flush sentence:

22 “Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chap-
23 ter 24 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an 24 exclusion from ‘wages’ as used in such chapter shall be con-

1 strued to require a similar exclusion from 'wages' in the reg-
 2 ulations prescribed for purposes of this chapter."

3 (d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
 4 ments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to remu-
 5 neration paid after December 31, 1983.

6 (2) The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply
 7 to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984.

 9 EMPLOYEE PENSIONS

10 SEC. 152. (a) Subparagraph (D) of section 3121(a)(5)
 11 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (defining wages) is 12 amended by striking out "section 219" and inserting in lieu 13 thereof "section 219(b)(2)".

14 (b) Subsection (e) of section 209 of the Social Security
 15 Act, as amended by this Act, is amended by striking out the 16 semicolon at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the 17 following: ", or (6) under a simplified employee pension (as 18 defined in section 408(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 19 1954) if, at the time of the payment, it is reasonable to be- 20 lieve that the employee will be entitled to a deduction under 21 section 219(b)(2) of such Code for such payment;"

22 (c) Subparagraph (D) of section 3306(b)(5) of the In-
 23 ternal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out
 24 "section 219" and inserting in lieu thereof "section
 25 219(b)(2)".

1 (d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
 2 ments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid
 3 after December 31, 1983.

4 (2) The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply
 5 to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984.

6 TITLE II—SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY

7 INCOME

8 INCREASE IN BENEFIT STANDARD

9 SEC. 201. (a) Section 1617 of the Social Security Act
 10 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
 11 subsection:

12 “(c) Effective July 1, 1983—

13 “(1) each of the dollar amounts in effect under
 14 subsections (a)(1)(A) and (b)(1) of section 1611, as
 15 previously increased under this section, shall be in-
 16 creased by $240 (and the dollar amount in effect under 17 subsection (a)(1)(A) of Public Law 93-66, as previous- 18 ly so increased, shall be increased by $120); and

19 “(2) each of the dollar amounts in effect under
 20 subsections (a)(2)(A) and (b)(2) of section 1611, as 21 previously increased under this section, shall be in-
 22 creased by $360.”.

23 (b) Section 1617(b) of such Act is amended by striking
 24 out “this section” and inserting in lieu thereof “subsection 25 (a) of this section”.

1 deemed instead to be equal to the amount of the cost-of-living
 2 adjustment which would have occurred in July 1983 (with-
 3 out regard to the 3-percent limitation contained in section
 4 215(i)(1)(B)) if section 111 of the Social Security Act
 5 Amendments of 1983 had not been enacted.”.

6 NOTIFICATION REGARDING SSI

7 SEC. 203. Prior to July 1, 1984, the Secretary of 8 Health and Human Services shall notify all elderly recipi-
 9 ents of benefits under title II of the Social Security Act, who
 10 may be eligible for supplemental security income benefits
 11 under title XVI of such Act, of the availability of the supple-
 12 mental security income program, and shall encourage such 13 recipients to contact the Social Security district office. Such 14 notification shall also be made to all recipients prior to at- 15 tainment of age 65, with the notification made with respect to 16 eligibility for supplemental medical insurance.

17 TITLE III—MEDICARE

18 MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL

19 SERVICES ON THE BASIS OF PROSPECTIVE RATES

20 SEC. 301. (a)(1) Section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Se-
 21 curity Act is amended by adding at the end the following new
 22 sentence: “Such term does not include costs of approved edu-
 23 cational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost
 24 reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital-
 25 related costs, as defined by the Secretary.”.

1 (2) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of such Act is
2 amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sub-
3 paragraph:

4 “(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting
5 periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.”.

6 (3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the
7 implementation of a system for including capital-related costs
8 under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient
9 hospital services, costs related to capital projects initiated on
10 or after the effective date of the implementation of such a
11 system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differ-
12 ently from costs of projects initiated before such date.

13 (b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

14 (1) by striking out “Notwithstanding sections
15 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections” in 16 paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof “Notwith-
17 standing section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions
18 of section”;

19 (2) by inserting “(other than a subsection (d) hos-
20 pital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))” in the
21 matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after
22 “of a hospital”;

23 (3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1)
24 following subparagraph (B), “(other than on the basis

1 of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under
2 subsection (d))” after “payable under this title”;

3 (4) by repealing paragraph (2);

4 (5) by inserting “and subsection (d) and except as
5 provided in subsection (e)” in paragraph (3)(B) after
6 “subparagraph (A)”;

7 (6) by inserting “or fiscal year” after “cost re-
8 porting period” each place it appears in paragraph
9 (3)(B);

10 (7) by inserting “before the beginning of the 11 period or year” in paragraph (3)(B) after “estimated
12 by the Secretary”;

13 (8) by striking out “exceeds” in paragraph (3)(B)
14 and inserting in lieu thereof “will exceed”; and

15 (9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with re-
16 spect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after
17 October 1, 1982, to read as follows:

18 “(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject
19 to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code
20 for 1954 for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was
21 not subject to such taxes for the 12-month cost-reporting
22 period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary
23 shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base year
24 amount referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i) for such hospi-
25 tal applicable to such cost reporting period by the amount of

1 such taxes paid or accrued by such hospital for such cost
2 reporting period.”.

3 (c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—

4 (A) by striking out “and” at the end of subpara-
5 graph (B),

6 (B) by striking out the period at the end of sub-
7 paragraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof “; and”,
8 and

9 (C) by adding at the end the following:

10 “(D) the Secretary determines that the system
11 will not preclude an eligible organization (as defined in 12 section 1876(b)) from negotiating directly with hospi-
13 tals with respect to the organization’s rate of payment
14 for inpatient hospital services.

15 The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under
16 this subsection on the ground that the State’s hospital reim-
17 bursement control system is based on a payment methodology
18 other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the
19 ground that the amount of payments made under this title
20 under such system must be less than the amount of payments
21 which would otherwise have been made under this title not
22 using such system. If the Secretary determines that the con-
23 ditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on main-
24 taining payment amounts at no more than a specified per-
25 centage increase above the payment amounts in a base period,

1 the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient
 2 hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment
 3 basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient
 4 discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the 5 conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on main-
 6 taining aggregate payment amounts below a national average
 7 percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpa-
 8 tient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the applica-
 9 tion of a State under this subsection on the ground that the
 10 State's rate of increase in such payments for such services
 11 must be less than such national average rate of increase.”;

12 (2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—

13 (A) by striking out “requirement of paragraph
 14 (1)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof “requirements of
 15 subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1) and, if 16 applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5),”, and

17 (B) by inserting “(or, if applicable, in paragraph
 18 (5))” in subparagraph (B) after “paragraph (1)”.

19 (3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by
 20 adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

21 “(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State
 22 under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement
 23 control system if—

1 “(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B),
2 (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with re-
3 spect to the system, and

4 “(B) with respect to that system a waiver of cer-
5 tain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security
6 Act has been approved on or before (and which is in
7 effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Se-
8 curity Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section
9 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or 10 section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 11 1972.

12 With respect to a State system described in this paragraph,
13 the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on
14 the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospi-
15 tal payments for individuals under this title, as compared to
16 the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments,
17 with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on 18 the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient
19 admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods
20 beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test
21 shall no longer apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in
22 the same manner as under other waivers.

23 “(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State
24 under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement
25 control system if—

1 “(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B),
2 (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with re-
3 spect to the system;

4 “(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

5 “(i) is operated directly by the State or by
6 an entity designated pursuant to State law,

7 “(ii) provides for payment of hospitals cov-
8 ered under the system under a methodology
9 (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as
10 well as any method for changes in the methodolo-
11 gy) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hos-
12 pital services during a specified period are estab-
13 lished under the system prior to the defined rate
14 period, and

15 “(iii) hospitals covered under the system will
16 make such reports (in lieu of cost and other re-
17 ports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise re-
18 quired under this title) as the Secretary may re-
19 quire in order to properly monitor assurances pro-
20 vided under this subsection;

21 “(C) the State has provided the Secretary with
22 satisfactory assurances that operation of the system
23 will not result in any change in hospital admission
24 practices which result in—

1 “(i) a significant reduction in the proportion
2 of patients (receiving hospital services covered
3 under the system) who have no third-party cover-
4 age and who are unable to pay for hospital serv-
5 ices,

6 “(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion
7 of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient
8 hospital services for which payment is (or is 9 likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for
10 or costs of such services,

11 “(iii) the refusal to admit patients who
12 would be expected to require unusually costly or 13 prolonged treatment for reasons other than those
14 related to the appropriateness of the care available
15 at the hospital, or

16 “(iv) the refusal to provide emergency serv-
17 ices to any person who is in need of emergency
18 services if the hospital provides such services;

19 “(D) any change by the State in the system
20 which has the effect of materially reducing payments to 21 hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to
22 the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to
23 which is likely to be materially affected by the change;
24 and

1 “(E) the State has provided the Secretary with
2 satisfactory assurances that in the development of the
3 system the State has consulted with local governmental
4 officials concerning the impact of the system on public
5 hospitals.

6 The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this
7 paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted
8 to the Secretary.

9 “(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances de-
10 scribed in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to
11 any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments
12 under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount
13 equal to the amount by which the payments under this title
14 under such system for such period exceeded the amount of 15 payments which would otherwise have been made under this
16 title not using such system.”

17 (d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section
18 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 19 1982, is amended—

20 (1) by striking out “section 1814(b)” in para-
21 graph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof “subsection
22 (b)”, and

23 (2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection
24 (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at

1 the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act
2 under the following heading:

3 “Elimination of Lesser-of-Cost-or-Charges Provision”.

4 (e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at
5 the end the following new subsections:

6 “(d)(1)(A) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject
7 to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment
8 with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital serv-
9 ices (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hos-
10 pital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital
11 discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

12 “(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and
13 before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

14 “(I) the target percentage (as defined in sub-
15 paragraph (C)) of the hospital’s target amount for 16 the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection
17 (b)(3)(A)) for the period, and

18 “(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in
19 subparagraph (C)) of the applicable combined ad-
20 justed DRG prospective payment rate determined
21 under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

22 “(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is
23 equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective pay-
24 ment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such
25 discharges.

1 “(B) As used in this section, the term ‘subsection (d)
2 hospital’ means a hospital located in one of the fifty States or
3 the District of Columbia other than—

4 “(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section
5 1861(f)),

6 “(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the
7 Secretary),

8 “(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predomi-
9 nantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

10 “(iv) a hospital which has an average inpatient
11 length of stay (as determined by the Secretary) of 12 greater than 25 days;

13 and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not
14 include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital
15 which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the 16 Secretary). The exclusion of any category of hospitals or 17 units under this subparagraph shall become inapplicable at
18 such time as the Secretary determines that adequate data of 19 clinical and statistical significance is available such that the
20 Secretary may include such category in the payment system
21 established under this subsection.

22 “(C) For purposes of this subsection, for cost reporting
23 periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

1 “(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before Octo-
2 ber 1, 1984, the ‘target percentage’ is 75 percent and
3 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 25 percent;

4 “(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before Oc-
5 tober 1, 1985, the ‘target percentage’ is 50 percent and
6 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 50 percent; and

7 “(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before Oc-
8 tober 1, 1986, the ‘target percentage’ is 25 percent and
9 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 75 percent.

10 “(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II), the ‘ap-
11 plicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate’
12 for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occur-
13 ring—

14 “(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before Octo-
15 ber 1, 1984, is a combined rate consisting of 25 per-
16 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
17 and 75 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
18 ment rate, determined under paragraph (2) for such
19 discharges;

20 “(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before Oc-
21 tober 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 50 per-
22 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
23 and 50 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
24 ment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such
25 discharges;

1 “(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before Oc-
2 tober 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 75 per-
3 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
4 and 25 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
5 ment rate, determined under paragraph (3); and

6 “(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, is a rate equal
7 to the national DRG prospective payment rate deter-
8 mined under paragraph (3).

9 “(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted
10 DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital
11 discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital
12 services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and 13 shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective pay-
14 ment rate for such discharges in each such region, for which 15 payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such 16 rate shall also be determined for hospitals located in urban or
17 rural areas within the United States and within each such
18 region. Such determinations shall be made as follows:

19 “(A) DETERMINING ALLOWABLE INDIVIDUAL
20 HOSPITAL COSTS FOR BASE PERIOD.—The Secretary
21 shall determine the allowable operating costs per dis-
22 charge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for
23 the most recent cost reporting period for which data are 24 available.

1 “(B) UPDATING FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984.—The
2 Secretary shall update each amount determined under
3 subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

4 “(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the es-
5 timated average rate of change of hospital costs
6 industry-wide between the cost reporting period
7 used under such subparagraph and fiscal year
8 1983, and

9 “(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the
10 applicable percentage increase (as defined in sub-
11 section (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

12 “(C) STANDARDIZING AMOUNTS.—The Secre-
13 tary shall standardize the amount updated under sub-
14 paragraph (B) for each hospital by—

15 “(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medi-
16 cal education costs,

17 “(ii) adjusting for variations among hospi-
18 tals by area and region in the average hospital
19 wage level, and

20 “(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix
21 among hospitals.

22 “(D) COMPUTING URBAN AND RURAL AVER-
23 AGES.—The Secretary shall compute an average of the 24 standardized amounts determined under subparagraph
25 (C) for the United States and for each region—

1 “(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in
2 an urban area, and

3 “(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located
4 in a rural area.

5 For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘region’
6 means one of the four census regions established by the
7 Bureau of the Census, established by the Secretary;
8 the term ‘urban area’ means an area within a Stand-
9 ard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the 10 Office of Management and Budget) or within such
11 similar area as the Secretary has recognized under
12 subsection (a) by regulation; and the term ‘rural area’
13 means any area outside such an area or similar area.

14 “(E) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAY-
15 MENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the aver-
16 age standardized amounts determined under subpara-
17 graph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (esti-
18 mated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments
19 under this subsection based on DRG prospective pay-
20 ment rates which are additional payments described in
21 paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

22 “(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The
23 Secretary shall adjust each of such average standard-
24 ized amounts as may be required under subsection
25 (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

1 “(G) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR
2 URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS IN THE UNITED
3 STATES AND IN EACH REGION.—For each discharge
4 classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secre-
5 tary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate
6 which is equal—

7 “(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in
8 the United States, and for hospitals located in an
9 urban area in each region, to the product of—

10 “(I) the average standardized amount
11 (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced
12 under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under
13 subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an
14 urban area in the United States or in that
15 region, and

16 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
17 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
18 related group; and

19 “(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in
20 the United States, and for hospitals located in a
21 rural area in each region, to the product of—

22 “(I) the average standardized amount
23 (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced
24 under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under
25 subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a

1 rural area in the United States or in that
2 region, and

3 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
4 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
5 related group.

6 “(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE
7 LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion
8 (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of
9 hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and
10 wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment
11 rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area dif-
12 ferences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established
13 by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage
14 level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to 15 the national or regional average hospital wage level as
16 appropriate.

17 “(3) The Secretary shall determine an adjusted DRG
18 prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital dis-
19 charge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpa-
20 tient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital for which
21 payment may be made under part A of this title, as follows:

22 “(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED
23 AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average
24 standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban
25 area within the United States and, for fiscal year

1 1985, for hospitals located in an urban area within
2 each region, and for hospitals located in a rural area
3 within the United States, and for fiscal year 1985, for
4 hospitals located in a rural area within each region,
5 and equal to the respective average standardized
6 amount computed for the previous fiscal year under
7 paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, in-
8 creased by the applicable percentage increase under
9 subsection (b)(3)(B) for that particular fiscal year.

10 “(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAY-
11 MENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the aver-
12 age standardized amounts determined under subpara-
13 graph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (esti-
14 mated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments
15 under this subsection based on DRG prospective pay-
16 ment amounts which are additional payments described
17 in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

18 “(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The
19 Secretary shall adjust each of such average standard-
20 ized amounts as may be required under subsection
21 (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

22 “(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR
23 URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge
24 classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secre-

1 tary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate
2 for the fiscal year which is equal—

3 “(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in
4 the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals
5 located in an urban area in each region, to the 6 product of—

7 “(I) the average standardized amount
8 (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced
9 under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under
10 subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hos-
11 pitals located in an urban area in the United
12 States or in that region, and

13 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
14 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
15 related group; and

16 “(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in
17 the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals
18 located in a rural area in each region (and, if ap- 19 plicable, in a census division), to the product of—

20 “(I) the average standardized amount
21 (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced
22 under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under
23 subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hos-
24 pitals located in a rural area in the United
25 States or in that region, and

1 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
2 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
3 related group.

4 “(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE
5 LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion,
6 (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of
7 hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and
8 wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment
9 rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differ-
10 ences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by 11 the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level
12 in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the 13 national or regional average hospital wage level as ap-
14 propriate.

15 “(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of 16 inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and
17 a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges
18 within these groups.

19 “(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secre-
20 tary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which re-
21 flects the relative hospital resources used with respect to dis-
22 charges classified within that group compared to discharges
23 classified within other groups.

24 “(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and
25 weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and

1 (B), at least every five years, to reflect changes in treatment
2 patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the
3 relative use of hospital resources.

4 “(D) The Commission (established under subsection
5 (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the
6 Secretary with respect to adjustments to be made under sub-
7 paragraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evi-
8 dence with respect to new practices, including the use of new
9 technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall
10 report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any
11 adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

12 “(5)(A)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional
13 payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a
14 diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds
15 the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a
16 fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by 17 some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the 18 lesser.

19 “(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a
20 hospital may request additional payments in any case where
21 changes, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the DRG
22 rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is
23 greater.

24 “(iii) The amount of such additional payment under
25 clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and

1 shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff
2 point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

3 “(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made
4 under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may
5 not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total
6 payments made based on DRG prospective payment rates for
7 discharges in that year, and the DRG rates shall be reduced
8 to compensate for any payments under this subparagraph in
9 excess of such 6 percent.

10 “(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional pay-
11 ment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs
12 of medical education, in an amount computed in the same
13 manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations
14 (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2),
15 except that in the computation under this subparagraph the
16 Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to
17 twice the factor provided under such regulations.

18 “(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions
19 and adjustments to the payment amounts established under
20 this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take
21 into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that
22 serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who
23 have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of 24 this title.

1 “(ii) With respect to a hospital which is a ‘sole commu-
2 nity hospital’, payment under paragraph (1)(A)(i) for any
3 cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after Oc-
4 tober 1, 1983, shall be determined using the target percentage
5 and DRG percentage applicable for the fiscal year beginning
6 on October 1, 1983, and in no case shall total payments to
7 such a hospital under this title for any cost reporting period
8 beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1,
9 1986, be less than such payments to such hospital for the 10 preceding cost reporting period. For purposes of this subpara-
11 graph, the term ‘sole community hospital’ means a hospital
12 that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather
13 conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as 14 determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient
15 hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geo-
16 graphical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

17 “(iii) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments
18 to the payment amounts as the Secretary deems appropriate
19 to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals
20 located in Alaska and Hawaii.

21 “(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of re-
22 imbursement made for services described in section
23 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under
24 part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph

1 (2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being
2 made.

3 “(i) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to
4 the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so
5 as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause
6 (i).

7 “(E) This paragraph shall apply only to subsection (d)
8 hospitals that receive payments in amounts computed under
9 this subsection.

10 “(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the 11 Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each
12 fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description
13 of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted
14 DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, in-
15 cluding any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

16 “(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review
17 under section 1878 or otherwise of—

18 “(A) the determination of the requirement, or the
19 proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursu-
20 ant to subsection (e)(1), and

21 “(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related
22 groups, of the methodology for the classification of dis-
23 charges within such groups, and of the appropriate
24 weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).

1 “(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals begin-
2 ning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary
3 shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applica-
4 ble percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods
5 under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure
6 that—

7 “(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise
8 provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(I) and (d)(5) for
9 that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital
10 services of hospitals,
11 are not greater or less than—

12 “(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsec-
13 tion (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would
14 have been payable for such services for those same hos-
15 pitals for that fiscal year under this section under the 16 law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the
17 Social Security Act Amendments of 1983;
18 except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph
19 shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not
20 apply for purposes of making computations under subsection
21 (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

22 “(B) For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1984 or
23 fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide under subsec-
24 tions (d)(2)(F) and (d)(3)(C) for such equal proportional ad-
25 justment in each of the average standardized amounts other-

1 wise computed for that fiscal year as may be necessary to
2 assure that—

3 “(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise
4 provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(II) and (d)(5)
5 for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hos-
6 pital services of hospitals,

7 are not greater or less than—

8 “(ii) the DRG percentage (as defined in subsec-
9 tion (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would
10 have been payable for such services for those same hos-
11 pitals for that fiscal year under this section under the
12 law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the
13 Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

14 “(2) The Secretary shall provide for appointment of a
15 Commission of independent experts, selected by the Office of 16 Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this subsection re-
17 ferred to as the ‘Commission’) to review the applicable per-
18 centage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and
19 make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate
20 percentage increase which should be effected for hospital in-
21 patient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal
22 years beginning with fiscal year 1985. In making its recom-
23 mendations, the Commission shall take into account changes
24 in the hospital market-basket described in subsection
25 (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific

1 advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (in-
2 cluding the quality and skill level of professional nursing
3 required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effec-
4 tiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

5 “(3) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before
6 the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year
7 1985), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on
8 an appropriate increase factor which should be used (instead
9 of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection
10 (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in
11 that fiscal year.

12 “(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of
13 the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal 14 year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage in-
15 crease which will apply for purposes of this section as the 16 applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsec-
17 tion (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which
18 will assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effec-
19 tive delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of 20 high quality.

21 “(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published in the
22 Federal Register, not later than—

23 “(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning
24 with fiscal year 1985), the Secretary’s proposed deter-
25 mination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and

1 “(B) the September 1 before such fiscal year, the
2 Secretary’s final determination under such paragraph
3 for that year.

4 The Secretary shall include in the publication referred to in
5 subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year the report of the Commis-
6 sion’s recommendations submitted under paragraph (3) for
7 that fiscal year.

8 “(6)(A) The Commission shall consist of fifteen individ-
9 uals selected and appointed by the Director of the Congres-
10 sional Office of Technology Assessment (hereafter in this
11 part referred to as the ‘Director’ and the ‘Office’, respective-
12 ly). Such appointments shall be without regard to the provi-
13 sions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments
14 in the competitive service. Members of the Commission shall 15 be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three 16 years, except that the Director may provide initially for such 17 shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the 18 terms of no more than seven members shall expire in any one
19 year. Members of the Commission shall be eligible for reap-
20 pointment for no more than two consecutive terms.

21 “(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide
22 expertise and experience in the provision and financing of
23 health care, including but not limited to physicians and reg-
24 istered professional nurses, employers, third party payors,
25 and individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of

1 biomedical, health services, and health economics research.
2 The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of
3 groups, including but not limited to—

4 “(i) national organizations representing physi-
5 cians, including medical specialty organizations and
6 registered professional nurses and other skilled health
7 professionals;

8 “(ii) national organizations representing hospitals,
9 including teaching hospitals; and

10 “(iii) national organizations representing the 11 business community, health benefit programs, labor,
12 and the elderly.

13 “(C) The Commission may employ such personnel (not
14 to exceed 50) as may be necessary to carry out its duties.
15 Subject to approval by the Director, the Commission shall
16 appoint one of the members of its staff as Executive Director.
17 The Commission is authorized to seek such assistance and
18 support as may be required in the performance of its duties
19 from appropriate Federal departments and agencies. Such
20 assistance may include the provision of detailees, office space,
21 and related services, with or without reimbursement, as
22 agreed upon by the Commission and the head of the appropri-
23 ate department or agency.

24 “(D) While serving on the business of the Commission
25 (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be

1 entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate
2 provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section
3 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving
4 away from home and his regular place of business, a member
5 may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of
6 subsistence, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commis-
7 sion.

8 “(E) The Executive Director shall be compensated at
9 the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule
10 under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

11 “(F) The Executive Director shall, in accordance with
12 such policies as the Commission may prescribe, appoint and
13 fix the rates of compensation of such personnel as may be
14 necessary to carry out the provisions of this part. Such rates
15 of compensation may not exceed the level specified in subpar-
16 agraph (E).

17 “(G) The Commission shall have the authority to—

18 “(i) enter into contracts or make other arrange-
19 ments, as may be necessary for the conduct of the work
20 of the Commission, with any competent personnel or
21 organization, with or without reimbursement, without
22 performance or other bonds, and without regard to sec-
23 tion 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5);

24 “(ii) make advance, progress, and other payments
25 which relate to the work of the Commission without

1 regard to the provisions of section 3324 of title 31,
2 United States Code;

3 “(iii) accept services of voluntary and uncompen-
4 sated personnel that are necessary for the conduct of
5 the work of the Commission and provide transportation
6 and subsistence as authorized by section 5703 of title
7 5, United States Code, for persons serving without
8 compensation;

9 “(iv) acquire by purchase, lease, loan, or gift, and
10 hold and dispose of by sale, lease, or loan, real and
11 personal property of all kinds that is necessary for, or
12 results from, the exercise of authority granted by this
13 part (without regard to the first section of the Act of 14 March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 370, chapter 106; 40 U.S.C.
15 34)); and

16 “(v) prescribe such rules and regulations as it
17 deems necessary with respect to the internal organiza-
18 tion and operation of the Commission.

19 “(H) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns
20 of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2)(A),
21 the Commission shall collect and assess information on medi-
22 cal and surgical procedures and services, including informa-
23 tion on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of 24 hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special
25 attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to

1 involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not
2 adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the
3 safety, efficiency, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing
4 medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in
5 coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect
6 and assess factual information, giving special attention to the
7 needs of updating existing DRG's, establishing new DRG's,
8 and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to
9 reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in de-
10 livering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting
11 and assessing information, the Commission shall—

12 “(i) utilize existing information, both published
13 and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed
14 either by its own staff or under other arrangements
15 made in accordance with this part; and

16 “(ii) carry out, or award grants or contracts for,
17 original research where existing information is inad-
18 equat for the development of useful and valid guide-
19 lines by the Commission.

20 “(I) The Commission shall have access to such relevant
21 information and data as may be available from appropriate
22 Federal agencies. The Commission shall maintain the confi-
23 dentiality of all confidential information it receives.

1 “(J) There shall be established a Federal Liaison Com-
2 mittee to the Commission (hereafter in this part referred to as
3 the ‘Committee’). The Committee shall—

4 “(1) arrange for the acquisition of information in
5 accordance with subparagraph (I) and assure that its
6 activities, especially the conduct of original research
7 and medical studies, are coordinated with the activities
8 of Federal agencies; and

9 “(2) advise the Commission with respect to the 10 activities of Federal agencies that relate to the duties of 11 the Commission or to particular medical procedures
12 and services under study, or being considered for
13 study, by the Commission.

14 The Federal Liaison Committee shall consist of delegates of 15 those Federal agencies which can, in the judgment of the 16 Commission, play a significant role in assisting the Commis-
17 sion. The Administrator of the Health Care Financing Ad-
18 ministration shall serve as the Chairman of the Committee.
19 Members of the Committee shall serve without additional 20 compensation. The Committee shall meet at the call of the 21 Chairman of the Committee, or at the call of the Chairman
22 of the Commission, but not less than six times a year.

23 “(K)(i) The Office shall report to the Congress, from
24 time to time, on the functioning and progress of the Commis-
25 sion and on the status of the assessment of medical proce-

1 dures and services by the Commission. Such reports shall be
2 annual for the first three years of the Commission's operation
3 and biannual thereafter, and shall be delivered to the Con-
4 gress by March 15 of each reporting year.

5 “(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all de-
6 liberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediate-
7 ly upon its request.”

8 “(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this part, the
9 Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary
10 funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Com-
11 mission. The Office shall be reimbursed for such funds by the 12 Commission from the appropriations made with respect to the 13 Commission. The Office shall carry out such duties subject
14 to approval of the Technology Assessment Board, as pre-
15 scribed by sections 3(d) (2) and (3) of the Technology Assess-
16 ment Act of 1972 (2 U.S.C. 472(d) (2) and (3)).”

17 “(L)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such 18 sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this
19 paragraph.”

20 “(ii) Eighty-five percent of such appropriation shall be
21 payable from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund,
22 and 15 percent of such appropriation shall be payable from
23 the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust
24 Fund.”

1 in lieu thereof "the amount that would be payable for such
2 services under subsection (b) and section 1886".

3 (c)(1) The matter in section 1861(v)(1)(G)(i) of such
4 Act following subclause (III) is amended by striking out "on
5 the basis of the reasonable cost of" and inserting in lieu
6 thereof "the amount otherwise payable under part A with re-
7 spect to".

8 (2) Section 1861(v)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by 9 striking out "an amount equal to the reasonable cost of" and
10 inserting in lieu thereof "the amount that would be taken into 11 account with respect to".

12 (3) Section 1861(v)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by
13 striking out "the equivalent of the reasonable cost of".

14 (4) Section 1861(v)(3) of such Act is amended by strik-
15 ing out "the reasonable cost of such bed and board furnished
16 in semiprivate accommodations (determined pursuant to 17 paragraph (1))" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount
18 otherwise payable under this title for such bed and board fur-
19 nished in semiprivate accommodations".

20 (d) Section 1862(a) of such Act is amended—

21 (1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph

22 (12),

23 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-

24 graph (13) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and

1 (3) by adding at the end the following new para-
2 graph:

3 “(14) which are other than physicians’ services
4 (as defined in regulations) and which are furnished to
5 an individual who is an inpatient of a hospital by an
6 entity other than the hospital, unless the services are
7 furnished under arrangements (as defined in section
8 1861(w)(1)) with the entity made by the hospital.”.

9 (e)(1) Section 1866(a)(1) of such Act is amended—

10 (A) by striking out “and” at the end of subpara-
11 graph (D),

12 (B) by striking out the period at the end of sub-
13 paragraph (E), and

14 (C) by adding at the end the following new sub-
15 paragraphs:

16 “(F) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
17 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
18 under subsection (c) or (d) of section 1886, to main-
19 tain an agreement with a utilization and quality con-
20 trol peer review organization (if there is such an orga-
21 nization which has a contract with the Secretary under
22 part B of title XI for the area in which the hospital is
23 located) under which the organization will perform
24 functions under that part with respect to the review of
25 the accuracy of diagnostic information on such hospi-

1 tal's bills, the completeness and adequacy of care pro-
2 vided, the appropriateness of admissions, and the ap-
3 propriateness of care provided for which additional
4 payments are sought under section 1886(d)(5), with re-
5 spect to inpatient hospital services for which payment
6 may be made under part A of this title (and for pur-
7 poses of payment under this title, the cost of such
8 agreement to the hospital shall be considered a cost in-
9 curring by such hospital in providing inpatient services
10 under part A, but shall be paid directly by the Secre-
11 tary to such organization on behalf of such hospital in 12 accordance with a budget approved by the Secretary),

13 “(G) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
14 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
15 under subsection (b) or (d) of section 1886, not to
16 charge any individual or any other person for inpatient
17 hospital services for which such individual would be
18 entitled to have payment made under part A but for a
19 denial or reduction of payments under section 1886(f),
20 and

21 “(H) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
22 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
23 under section 1886(d), to have all items and services
24 (other than physicians' services as defined in regula-
25 tions) (i) that are furnished to an individual who is an

1 inpatient of the hospital, and (ii) for which the individ-
2 ual is entitled to have payment made under this title,
3 furnished by the hospital or otherwise under arrange-
4 ments (as defined in section 1861(w)(1)) made by the
5 hospital.”.

6 (2) The matter in section 1866(a)(2)(B)(ii) of such Act
7 preceding subclause (I) is amended by inserting “and except
8 with respect to inpatient hospital costs with respect to which 9 amounts are payable under section 1886(d)” after “(except
10 with respect to emergency services)”.

11 (f) Section 1876(g) of such Act is amended by adding at 12 the end the following:

13 “(4) A risk-sharing contract under this subsection may,
14 at the option of an eligible organization, provide that the Sec-
15 retary—

16 “(A) will reimburse hospitals for payment
17 amounts determined in accordance with section 1886,
18 as applicable, of inpatient hospital services furnished to
19 individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to
20 subsection (d), and

21 “(B) will deduct the amount of such reimburse-
22 ment for payment which would otherwise be made to
23 such organization.”.

24 (g)(1) Section 1878(a) of such Act is amended—

1 (A) by inserting “and (except as provided in sub-
2 section (g)(2)) any hospital which receives payments in
3 amounts computed under section 1886(d) and which
4 has submitted such reports within such time as the
5 Secretary may require in order to make payment
6 under such section may obtain a hearing with respect
7 to such payment by the Board” after “subsection (h)”
8 in the matter before paragraph (1),

9 (B) by inserting “(i)” after “(A)” in paragraph
10 (1)(A),

11 (C) by inserting “or” at the end of paragraph
12 (1)(A) and by adding after such paragraph the follow-
13 ing new clause:

14 “(ii) is dissatisfied with a final determina-
15 tion of the Secretary as to the amount of the pay-
16 ment under section 1886(d),”, and

17 (D) by striking out “(1)(A)” in paragraph (3)
18 and inserting in lieu thereof “(1)(A)(i), or with respect
19 to appeals under paragraph (1)(A)(ii), 180 days after
20 notice of the Secretary’s final determination,”.

21 (2)(A) The last sentence of section 1878(f)(1) of the 22 Social Security Act is amended by inserting “(or, in an
23 action brought jointly by several providers, the judicial dis-
24 trict in which the greatest number of such providers are locat-

1 ed) after “the judicial district in which the provider is locat-
2 ed”.

3 (B) Section 1878(f)(1) of such Act is further amended
4 by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:
5 “Any appeal to the Board or action for judicial review by
6 providers which are under common ownership or control must
7 be brought by such providers as a group with respect to any
8 matter involving an issue common to such providers.”.

9 (3) Section 1878(g) of such Act is amended by inserting
10 “(1)” after “(g)” and by adding at the end the following new
11 paragraph:

12 “(2) The determinations and other decisions described
13 in section 1886(d)(7) shall not be reviewed by the Board or 14 by any court pursuant to an action brought under subsection
15 (f) or otherwise.”.

16 (4) The third sentence of section 1878(h) of such Act is
17 amended striking out “cost reimbursement” and inserting in
18 lieu thereof “payment of providers of services”.

19 (h) The first sentence of section 1881(b)(2)(A) of such
20 Act is amended by inserting “or section 1886 (if applicable)”
21 after “section 1861(v)”.

22 (i) Section 1887(a)(1)(B) of such Act is amended by
23 inserting “or on the bases described in section 1886” after
24 “on a reasonable cost basis”.

1 (j) The Secretary may, for any cost reporting period
2 beginning prior to October 1, 1986, waive the requirements
3 of sections 1862(a)(14) and 1866(a)(1)(H) of the Social Se-
4 curity Act in the case of a hospital which has followed a
5 practice of allowing direct billing under part B of title
6 XVIII of such Act for services (other than physician serv-
7 ices) so extensively, that immediate compliance with those
8 requirements would threaten the stability of patient care. Any
9 such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to
10 be made under part B but that the payments to such hospital
11 under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of
12 the billings for such services under part B. If such a waiver
13 is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may 14 provide for such methods of payments under part A as is 15 appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institu-
16 tion.

17 REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION

18 PROJECTS

19 SEC. 303. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human
20 Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secre-
21 tary") shall study and report to the Congress within 18
22 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the
23 method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net
24 equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be in-

1 cluded within the prospective payment amounts computed
2 under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

3 (2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to
4 the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984
5 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment meth-
6 odology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act
7 during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries,
8 and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other
9 providers.

10 (B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin
11 the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of phy-
12 sician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to
13 physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose
14 discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary
15 shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, legislative
16 recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of pro-
17 viding for determining the amount of the payments for physi-
18 cians' services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the
19 DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

20 (C) In the annual report to Congress under subpara-
21 graph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of 22 studies on—

23 (i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or
24 phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospec-

1 tive payment rates under paragraph (3) of section
2 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

3 (i) whether and the method under which hospi-
4 tals, not paid based on amounts determined under such
5 section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a
6 prospective basis as under such section;

7 (ii) the application of severity of illness, intensity
8 of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related
9 groups, and the advisability and feasibility of provid-
10 ing for such modifications; and

11 (iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the
12 payment methodology under such section to payment
13 by all payors for inpatient hospital services.

14 (3) Prior to April 1, 1985, the Secretary shall complete
15 a study and make legislative recommendations to the Con-
16 gress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole
17 community hospitals which takes into account their unique
18 vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addi-
19 tion, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an in-
20 formation transfer between parts A and B, particularly with
21 respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made
22 under part A, and no adjustment is made in the reimburse-
23 ment to the admitting physician, or physicians. The Secre-
24 tary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompen-
25 sated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate

1 for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas. The Secre-
2 tary shall also on the advisability of having hospitals make
3 available information on the cost of care to patients financed
4 by both public programs and private payors.

5 (4) The Secretary shall complete a study and make rec-
6 ommendations to the Congress, before April 1, 1984, with
7 respect to whether hospitals located outside of the fifty States
8 and the District of Columbia should be included under a
9 prospective payment system.

10 (b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
11 ments made by this title shall not affect the authority of the 12 Secretary to develop, carry out, or continue experiments and
13 demonstration projects.

14 (2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of 15 a State which has a demonstration project, for payment of
16 hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act ap-
17 proved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amend-
18 ments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security
19 Amendments of 1972, which (A) is in effect as of March 1, 20 1983, and (B) was entered into after August 1982, the terms
21 of the demonstration agreement shall be modified so that the 22 percentage by which such demonstration project is required to 23 maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in 24 that State below the national rate of increase in medicare
25 hospital costs shall be decreased by one-half of one percentage

1 point per contract year, beginning with the contract year be-
2 ginning in 1983.

3 (c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms
4 and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days
5 after the date of enactment of this Act—

6 (1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior
7 Health Services (according to terms and conditions as
8 specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for
9 waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security
10 Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social
11 Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements
12 of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period
13 of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care
14 demonstration project, and

15 (2) the application of the Department of Health
16 Services, State of California, dated November 1, 1982,
17 pursuant to section 1115 of the Social Security Act,
18 for the waiver of certain requirements of title XIX of 19 such Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry
20 out a demonstration project for capitated reimburse-
21 ment for comprehensive long-term care services involv-
22 ing On Lok Senior Health Services.

23 (d) The Secretary shall continue demonstrations with 24 hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing

1 facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative sys-
2 tems of care or methods of payment.

3 EFFECTIVE DATES

4 SEC. 304. (a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2),
5 the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this title
6 apply to items and services furnished by or under arrange-
7 ments with a hospital beginning with its first cost reporting
8 period that begins on or after October 1, 1983. A change in a
9 hospital's cost reporting period that has been made after No-
10 vember 1982 shall be recognized for purposes of this section
11 only if the Secretary finds good cause for that change.

12 (2) Section 1866(a)(1)(F) of the Social Security Act
13 (as added by section 302(f)(1)(C) of this title), section
14 1862(a)(14) (as added by section 302(e)(3) of this title) and 15 sections 1886(a)(1) (G) and (H) of such Act (as added by 16 section 302(f)(1)(C) of this title) take effect on October 1, 17 1983.

18 (b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction
19 in the payment amount under section 1886(d) of the Social 20 Security Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if 21 the admission has occurred before a hospital's first cost re-
22 porting period that begins after September 1983, to take into 23 account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as 24 in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items
25 and services furnished before that period.

1 "October 1, 1982" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1,
2 1983".

3 (b) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall,
4 prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to 5 the Congress, with respect to the effect which the implementa-
6 tion of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsi-
7 bility Act of 1982 would have on hospital-based skilled nurs-
8 ing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the patient
9 populations served by such facilities and by community-
10 based skilled nursing facilities.

11 SHIFT IN PART B PREMIUM TO COINCIDE WITH COST-OF- 12 LIVING INCREASE

13 SEC. 306. (a) Section 1839 of the Social Security Act
14 is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), and (c) and
15 inserting in lieu thereof the following:

16 "(a)(1) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and
17 of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate
18 for enrollees who have attained retirement age (as defined in 19 section 216(a)) which shall be applicable for the succeeding
20 calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the
21 Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate
22 amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees
23 who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the 24 total of the benefits and administrative costs which he esti-
25 mates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary

1 Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and
2 related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year
3 with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly ac-
4 tuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate
5 amount for a contingency margin.

6 “(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled
7 under this part for each month after December 1983 shall,
8 except as provided in subsections (b) and (e), be the amount
9 determined under paragraph (3).

10 “(3) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and
11 of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the month-
12 ly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this
13 part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium
14 shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal
15 to the smaller of—

16 “(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who
17 have attained retirement age, determined according to
18 paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar
19 year, or

20 “(B) the monthly premium rate most recently pro-
21 mulgated by the Secretary under this paragraph, in-
22 creased by a percentage determined as follows: The Sec-
23 retary shall ascertain the primary insurance amount
24 computed under section 215(a)(1), based upon average
25 indexed monthly earnings of $900, that applied to in-

1 dividuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-
2 age insurance benefits for December of the year preced-
3 ing the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly
4 premium rate by the same percentage by which that
5 primary insurance amount is increased when, by
6 reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation
7 is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals
8 for the following December.

9 Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount
10 which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any
11 period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced,
12 issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assump-
13 tions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of
14 an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained
15 retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the deriva-
16 tion of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

17 “(4) The Secretary shall also, during October of 1983
18 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial
19 rate for disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement
20 age which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar
21 year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary
22 estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for
23 such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees who
24 have not attained retirement age will equal one-half of the
25 total of the benefits and administrative costs which he esti-

1 mates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary
2 Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and
3 related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year
4 with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly ac-
5 tuarial rate under this paragraph, the Secretary shall include
6 an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.”.

7 (2) Subsections (d), (e), (f), and (g) of section 1839 of
8 such Act are redesignated as subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e),
9 respectively.

10 (3) (A) Section 1839(b) of such Act (as so redesignated)
11 is amended by striking out “subsection (b), (c), or (g)” and
12 inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a) or (e)”.

13 (B) Section 1839(d) of such Act (as so redesignated) is
14 amended by striking out “purposes of subsection (c)” and
15 inserting in lieu thereof “purposes of subsection (b)”.

16 (C) Section 1839(e) of such Act (as so redesignated) is 17 amended by striking out “subsection (c)” and “subsection
18 (c)(1)” and by inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a)” and
19 “subsection (a)(1)”, respectively.

20 (D) Section 1818(c) of such Act is amended by striking
21 out “subsection (c) of section 1839” and inserting in lieu
22 thereof “subsection (a) of section 1839”.

23 (E) Section 1843(d)(1) of such Act is amended by 24 striking out “without any increase under subsection (c) there-

1 of” and inserting in lieu thereof “without any increase under
2 subsection (b) thereof”.

3 (F) Section 1844(a)(1)(A)(i) of such Act is amended—

4 (i) by striking out “1839(c)(1)” and inserting in
5 lieu thereof “1839(a)(1)”; and

6 (ii) by striking out “1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)” and
7 inserting in lieu thereof “1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)”.

8 (G) Section 1844(a)(1)(B)(i) of such Act is amended—

9 (i) by striking out “1839(c)(4)” and inserting in
10 lieu thereof “1839(a)(4)”; and

11 (ii) by striking out “1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)” and
12 inserting in lieu thereof “1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)”.

13 (H) Section 1876(a)(5) of such Act is amended—

14 (i) in subparagraph (A)(ii), by striking out
15 “1839(c)(1)” and inserting in lieu thereof
16 “1839(a)(1)”; and

17 (ii) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out
18 “1839(c)(4)” and inserting in lieu thereof
19 “1839(a)(4)”.

20 (4) The amendments made by this subsection shall
21 apply with respect to premiums payable for January 1984
22 and each month thereafter.

23 (5) The monthly premium amount under section 1839
24 of the Social Security Act for the months of July through
25 December of 1983 shall be equal to the monthly premium

1 amount as determined under such section (as in effect prior
2 to the amendments made by this section) for June 1983.

3 SHIFT IN VOLUNTARY PART A PREMIUM TO COINCIDE
4 WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASES

5 SEC. 307. (a) Section 1818(d)(2) of the Social Secu-
6 rity Act is amended—

7 (1) by striking out “during the last calendar
8 quarter of each year, beginning in 1973,” in the first
9 sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “during the next
10 to last calendar quarter of each year”;

11 (2) by striking out “the 12-month period com-
12 mencing July 1 of the next year” in the first sentence
13 and inserting in lieu thereof “the following calendar
14 year”; and

15 (3) by striking out “for such next year” in the 16 second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “for that 17 following calendar year”.

18 (b) The amendments made by this section shall apply to
19 premiums for months beginning with January 1984, and for
20 months after June 1983 and before January 1984, the
21 monthly premium under part A of title XVIII of the Social
22 Security Act for individuals enrolled under each respective 23 part shall be the monthly premium under that part for the
24 month of June 1983.

1 TITLE IV—UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION
2 PROVISIONS

3 PART A—FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMPENSATION
4 EXTENSION OF PROGRAM

5 SEC. 401. (a) Paragraph (2) of section 602(f) of the 6 Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 is amend-
7 ed by striking out “March 31, 1983” and inserting in lieu
8 thereof “September 30, 1983”.

9 (b) Section 605(2) of such Act is amended by striking
10 out “April 1, 1983” and inserting in lieu thereof “October 1, 11 1983”.

12 NUMBER OF WEEKS FOR WHICH COMPENSATION PAYABLE

13 SEC. 402. (a) Subsection (e) of section 602 of the Fed-
14 eral Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 is amended by 15 redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by strik-
16 ing out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the follow-
17 ing new paragraphs:

18 “(2)(A) In the case of any account from which Federal
19 supplemental compensation was first payable to an individu-
20 al for a week beginning after March 31, 1983, the amount
21 established in such account shall be equal to the lesser of—

22 “(i) 65 per centum of the total amount of regular 23 compensation (including dependents’ allowances) pay-
24 able to the individual with respect to the benefit year
25 (as determined under the State law) on the basis of

1 which he most recently received regular compensation,
 2 or

3 “(ii) the applicable limit determined under the fol-
 4 lowing table times his average weekly benefit amount
 5 for his benefit year,

“In the case of weeks during a:

| | The applicable limit is: |
|------------------------------|---|
| 6-percent period..... | 14 |
| 5-percent period..... | 12 |
| 4-percent period..... | 10 |
| Low-unemployment period..... | 8 |

6 “(B) Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (ii) of
 7 subparagraph (A), the applicable limit under such clause
 8 shall not be lower than 4 less than the number of weeks appli-
 9 cable to such State under this paragraph as in effect for the 10 week beginning March 27, 1983, to the amendments made by
 11 the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

12 “(C) In the case of any account from which Federal
 13 supplemental compensation was payable to an individual for
 14 a week beginning before April 1, 1983, the amount estab-
 15 lished in such account shall be equal to the lesser of the sub-
 16 paragraph (A) entitlement or the sum of—

17 “(i) the subparagraph (A) entitlement reduced
 18 (but not below zero) by the aggregate amount of Feder-
 19 al supplemental compensation paid to such individual
 20 for weeks beginning before April 1, 1983, plus

21 “(ii) such individual’s additional entitlement.

1 “(D) For purposes of subparagraph (C) and this sub-
 2 paragraph—

3 “(i) The term ‘subparagraph (A) entitlement’
 4 means the amount which would have been established
 5 in the account if subparagraph (A) had applied to such
 6 account.

7 “(ii) The term ‘additional entitlement’ means the
 8 applicable limit determined under the following table
 9 times the individual’s average weekly benefit amount
 10 for his benefit year.

| “In the case of weeks during a: | The applicable limit is: |
|--|-------------------------------------|
| 6-percent period..... | 8 |
| 5-percent period..... | 6 |
| 4-percent period..... | 4 |
| Low-employment period | 4 |

11 “(D) Except as provided in subparagraph (C)(i), for 12 purposes of determining the amount of Federal supplemental
 13 compensation payable for weeks beginning after March 31,
 14 1983, from an account described in subparagraph (C), no
 15 reduction in such account shall be made by reason of any
 16 Federal supplemental compensation paid to the individual for
 17 weeks beginning before April 1, 1983.

18 “(3)(A) For purposes of this subsection, the terms ‘6-
 19 percent period’, ‘5-percent period’, ‘4-percent period’, and 20 ‘low-unemployment period’ mean, with respect to any State,
 21 the period which—

1 “(i) begins with the 3d week after the 1st week in
 2 which the rate of insured unemployment in the State
 3 for the period consisting of such week and the immedi-
 4 ately preceding 12 weeks falls in the applicable range,
 5 and

6 “(ii) ends with the 3d week after the 1st week in
 7 which the rate of insured unemployment for the period
 8 consisting of such week and the immediately preceding
 9 12 weeks does not fall within the applicable range.

10 “(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable
 11 range is as follows:

| In the case of a: | The applicable range is: |
|---------------------------------|--|
| 6-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 6 percent. |
| 5-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 5 percent but less than 6 percent. |
| 4-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 4 percent but less than 5 percent. |
| Low-employment period..... | A rate less than 4 percent. |

12 “(C) No 6-percent period, 5-percent period, or 4-percent
 13 period, as the case may be, shall last for a period of less than 14 4 weeks unless the State enters a period with a higher per-
 15 centage designation.

16 “(D) For purposes of this subsection—

17 “(i) The rate of insured unemployment for any
 18 period shall be determined in the same manner as de-
 19 termined for purposes of section 203 of the Federal-
 20 State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 21 1970.

1 “(ii) The amount of an individual’s average
2 weekly benefit amount shall be determined in the same
3 manner as determined for purposes of section
4 202(b)(1)(C) of such Act.”.

5 (b)(1) Section 602(f)(2) of such Act is amended by in-
6 serting before the period at the end thereof the following: “;
7 except that in the case of any individual who received such
8 compensation for the week preceding the last week beginning
9 after such date, such compensation shall be payable to such
10 individual for weeks beginning after such date, but the total
11 amount of such compensation payable for such weeks shall be
12 limited to 50 percent of the total amount which would other-
13 wise be payable for such weeks”.

14 (2) Section 605(2) of such Act is amended by inserting
15 before the semicolon the following: “(except as otherwise pro-
16 vided in section 602(f)(2))”.

17 (c)(1) Section 602(b)(1) of such Act is amended by
18 striking out “and” at the end of subparagraph (B), adding
19 “and” at the end of subparagraph (C), and inserting after
20 subparagraph (C) the following:

21 “(D) had at least 26 weeks of full-time insured
22 employment, during his base period or the equivalent
23 in insured wages during his base period (as determined
24 using a methodology equivalent to that used under sec-

1 not be limited or terminated by reason of any event, or fail-
2 ure to meet any requirement of law relating to eligibility for
3 unemployment compensation, occurring after the date of such
4 exhaustion of rights and before April 1, 1983 (and the period
5 after such exhaustion and before April 1, 1983, shall not be
6 counted for purposes of determining the expiration of the two
7 years following the end of his benefit year for purposes of
8 section 602(b) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation
9 Act of 1982).

10 (c) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest practi-
11 cable date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose
12 to each State with which he has in effect an agreement under
13 section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act
14 of 1982 a modification of such agreement designed to provide
15 for the payment of Federal supplemental compensation under
16 such Act in accordance with the amendments made by this
17 part. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any
18 State fails or refuses, within the 3-week period beginning on 19 the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification
20 to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agree-
21 ment, the Secretary of Labor shall terminate such agreement
22 effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before
23 such 3-week period.

1 PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND
2 CREDIT REDUCTIONS
3 DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

4 SEC. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security
5 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
6 new paragraph:

7 “(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section
8 for any year after December 31, 1982, and before January 1,
9 1986, a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four
10 annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the
11 year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State
12 meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). Interest shall accrue
13 on such deferred interest in the same manner as under para-
14 graph (3)(C).

15 “(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State
16 must—

17 “(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982,
18 which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or
19 the net solvency of its unemployment system (as deter-
20 mined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal 21 Revenue Code of 1954); and

22 “(ii) have taken an action (as certified by the 23 Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, which will
24 increase revenues and decrease benefits under the
25 State’s unemployment compensation system (herein-

1 after referred to as a 'solvency effort') by a combined
2 total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such
3 revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect
4 without such State action).

5 In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over
6 a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such
7 year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the
8 case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall
9 be 40 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applica-
10 ble percentage shall be 50 percent.

11 “(C)(i) The base year is the first year for which deferral
12 under this provision is granted. The Secretary of Labor shall
13 estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To deter-
14 mine whether a State meets the requirements of subpara-
15 graph (B)(ii), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the per-
16 centage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with
17 the application of the action referred to in subparagraph
18 (B)(ii) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such 19 benefits and taxes would have been without the application of 20 such action. In making this determination, the Secretary
21 shall deem the application of the action referred to in subpar-
22 agraph (B)(ii) to have been effective for the base year to the
23 same extent as such action is effective for the year following
24 the base year. Once a deferral is approved a State must con-
25 tinue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall

1 result in the State being required to make immediate pay-
2 ment of all deferred interest.

3 “(ii) Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to 4 $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5 5.4 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the 6 requirement of subparagraph (B).

7 “(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency
8 effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than 9 the 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent required under subpar-
10 agraph (B), the deferred interest shall be computed at an in-11 terest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise 12 applicable interest rate.”.

13 (b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by strik-
14 ing out “, and before January 1, 1988”.

15 CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

16 SEC. 412. (a)(1) Section 3302(f) of the Internal Reve-
17 nue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof
18 the following new paragraph:

19 “(8) PARTIAL LIMITATION.—

20 “(A) In the case of a State which would 21 meet the requirements of this subsection for a tax-
22 able year prior to 1987 but for its failure to meet
23 one of the requirements contained in subpara-
24 graph (C) or (D) of paragraph (2), the reduction
25 under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise appli-

1 cable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable
 2 year and each subsequent year (in a period of
 3 consecutive years for each of which a credit reduc-
 4 tion is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall
 5 be reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

6 “(B) In the case of a State described in sub-
 7 paragraph (A) which also meets the requirements
 8 of section 1202(b)(8)(B) with respect to such tax-
 9 able year, the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in 10 credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such 11 State for such taxable year and each subsequent 12 year (in a period of consecutive years for each of 13 which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers
 14 in such State) shall be further reduced by an ad-
 15 ditional 0.1 percentage point.”

16 (2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply
 17 with respect to taxable year 1983 and taxable years thereaf-
 18 ter.

19 (b) Section 3302(f)(1) of such Code is amended by 20 striking out “beginning before January 1, 1988,”.

21 AVERAGE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATE

22 SEC. 413. (a) Section 3302(d)(4)(B) of the Internal 23 Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out “the total
 24 of the remuneration subject to contributions under the State
 25 unemployment compensation law” and inserting in lieu

1 thereof "the total of the wages attributable to such State sub-
2 ject to taxation under this chapter".

3 (b) Sections 3302(c)(2)(B)(i) and 3302(c)(4) of such
4 Code are each amended by striking out "2.7" and inserting
5 in lieu thereof "2.7 multiplied by the ratio of the wage base
6 under this chapter divided by the estimated average annual 7 wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which 8 the determination is to be made".

9 (c) The amendments made by this section shall be effec-
10 tive for taxable year 1984 and taxable years thereafter.

11 DATE FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST

12 SEC. 414. Section 1202(b)(3)(A) of the Social Security
13 Act is amended by striking out "not later than" and insert-
14 ing in lieu thereof "prior to".

15 RECOUPMENT OF INTEREST

16 SEC. 415. Section 3302 of the Internal Revenue Code
17 of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
18 new subsection:

19 "(h) RECOUPMENT OF OVERDUE INTEREST.—

20 "(1) In addition to any other reduction required
21 under this section, if any accrued interest under sec-
22 tion 1202(b) of the Social Security Act has not been 23 paid by a State within one year after the date such 24 payment is otherwise required to be paid, then the total
25 credits (after applying any other provisions of this sec-

1 tion) otherwise allowable under this section for the fol-
2 lowing taxable year, in the case of a taxpayer subject
3 to the unemployment compensation law of such State,
4 shall be reduced by an amount equal to 0.1 percent of 5 the amount of the wages paid by such taxpayer during
6 such taxable year which are attributable to such State.

7 “(2) Any increase in the amount of tax paid by 8 reason of paragraph (1) shall be first applied as a pay-
9 ment of such overdue interest, and any remainder shall
10 be applied as a repayment of principal under section
11 1202(b) of the Social Security Act.”.

12 PART C—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

13 TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEES PROVIDING SERVICES TO 14 EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

15 SEC. 421. (a)(1) Section 3306(a)(6)(A) of the Internal 16 Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end
17 thereof the following new clause:

18 “(v) with respect to services to which section
19 3309(a)(1) applies, if such services are provided to or 20 on behalf of an educational institution, compensation
21 shall be denied in the same manner as if such services
22 were performed directly for an educational institution,
23 and”.

1 (2) Clauses (ii)(I), (iii), and (iv) of such section are
 2 each amended by striking out "may be denied" and inserting
 3 in lieu thereof "shall be denied".

4 (b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
 5 ments made by this section shall apply in the case of compen-
 6 sation paid for weeks beginning on or after April 1, 1984.

7 (2) In the case of a State with respect to which the
 8 Secretary of Labor has determined that State legislation is
 9 required in order to comply with the amendment made by this
 10 section, the amendment made by this section shall apply in 11 the case of compensation paid for weeks which begin on or 12 after April 1, 1984, and after the end of the first session of 13 the State legislature which begins after the date of the enact-
 14 ment of this Act, or which began prior to the date of the 15 enactment of this Act and remained in session for at least
 16 twenty-five calendar days after such date of enactment. For
 17 purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "session" means
 18 a regular, special, budget, or other session of a State legisla-
 19 ture.

20 EXTENDED BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE

21 HOSPITALIZED OR ON JURY DUTY

22 SEC. 422. (a) Clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(A) of section
 23 202(a) of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Com-
 24 pensation Act of 1970 is amended to read as follows:

1 “(ii) during which he fails to actively engage in
2 seeking work, unless such individual is not actively en-
3 gaged in seeking work because such individual is, as
4 determined in accordance with State law—

5 “(I) before any court of the United States or
6 any State pursuant to a lawfully issued summons
7 to appear for jury duty (as such term may be de-
8 fined by the Secretary of Labor), or

9 “(II) hospitalized for treatment of an emer-
10 gency or a life-threatening condition (as such term
11 may be defined by such Secretary),

12 if such exemptions in clauses (I) and (II) apply to recipients
13 of regular benefits, and the State chooses to apply such ex-
14 emptions for recipients of extended benefits; or”.

15 (b) The amendment made by this section shall become
16 effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Amend the title so as to read: "An Act to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, and for other purposes."

19 “(g) No agreement under this section may be terminat-
20 ed, in its entirety or with respect to any coverage group, on or 21 after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amend- 22 ments of 1983.”.

23 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply
24 to any agreement in effect under section 218 of the Social
25 Security Act on the date of the enactment of this Act, without

1 regard to whether a notice of termination was in effect on
2 such date, and to any agreement or modification thereof
3 which may become effective under such section 218 after that 4 date.

5 EXCLUSION OF SERVICES PERFORMED BY MEMBERS OF
6 CERTAIN RELIGIOUS SECTS

7 SEC. 104. (a) Section 3121 of the Internal Revenue
8 Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the 9 following new subsection:

10 “(v) MEMBERS OF CERTAIN RELIGIOUS FAITHS.—

11 “(1) EXEMPTION.—Any individual may file an 12 application (in such form and manner, and with such 13 official, as may be prescribed by regulations under this 14 chapter) for an exemption from the tax imposed by this 15 chapter with respect to wages paid to such individual
16 by an employer who is exempt from the tax imposed
17 under section 1401 by reason of an exemption granted
18 under section 1402(g), if such individual is a member
19 of a recognized religious sect or division thereof and is 20 an adherent of established tenets or teachings of such 21 sect or division by reason of which he is conscientious-
22 ly opposed to acceptance of the benefits of any private 23 or public insurance which makes payments in the 24 event of death, disability, old-age, or retirement or 25 makes payments toward the cost of, or provides services

1 for, medical care (including the benefits of any insur-
2 ance system established by the Social Security Act).
3 Such exemption may be granted only if the application
4 contains or is accompanied by—

5 “(A) such evidence of such individual’s
6 membership in, and adherence to the tenets or 7 teachings of the sect or division thereof as the 8 Secretary may require for purposes of determin-
9 ing such individual’s compliance with the preced-
10 ing sentence, and

11 “(B) his waiver of all benefits and other
12 payments under titles II and XVIII of the Social 13 Security Act on the basis of his wages and self-
14 employment income as well as all such benefits
15 and other payments to him on the basis of the 16 wages and self-employment income of any other
17 person,

18 and only if the Secretary of Health and Human Serv-
19 ices finds that—

20 “(i) such sect or division thereof has the es-
21 tablished tenets or teachings referred to in the pre-
22 ceding sentence,

23 “(ii) it is the practice, and has been for a
24 period of time which he deems to be substantial,
25 for members of such sect or division thereof to

1 make provision for their dependent members
2 which in his judgment is reasonable in view of 3 their general level of living, and

4 “(iii) such sect or division thereof has been
5 in existence at all times since December 31,
6 1950.

7 An exemption may not be granted to any individual if
8 any benefit or other payment referred to in subpara-
9 graph (B) became payable (or, but for section 203 or 10 222(b) of the Social Security Act, would have become 11 payable) at or before the time of the filing of such 12 waiver.

13 “(2) PERIOD FOR WHICH EXEMPTION EFFEC-
14 TIVE.—An exemption granted to any individual pur-
15 suant to this subsection shall apply with respect to all
16 taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983,
17 except that such exemption shall not apply for any cal-
18 endar year—

19 “(A) beginning (i) before the calendar year
20 in which such individual first met the require-
21 ments of the first sentence of paragraph (1), or
22 (ii) before the time as of which the Secretary of
23 Health and Human Services finds that the sect or
24 division thereof of which such individual is a

1 member met the requirements of clauses (i) and
2 (ii) of paragraph (1), or

3 “(B) ending (i) after the time such individu-
4 al ceases to meet the requirements of the first sen-
5 tence of paragraph (1), or (ii) after the time as of
6 which the Secretary of Health and Human Serv-
7 ices finds that the sect or division thereof of which
8 he is a member ceases to meet the requirements of
9 clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1).”

10 (b) Section 210(a) of the Social Security Act is amend-
11 ed—

12 (1) by striking out “or” at the end of paragraph 13 (19);

14 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
15 graph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof “; or”; and

16 (3) by adding at the end thereof the following new
17 paragraph:

18 “(21) Service performed, in the employ of an em-
19 ployer who is exempt from the tax imposed under sec-
20 tion 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by
21 reason of an exemption granted under section 1402(g)
22 of such Code, by an individual with respect to whom
23 an exemption has been granted (and is applicable)
24 under section 3121(v) of such Code.”

1 (c) Section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of
2 1954 is amended—

3 (1) by striking out “or” at the end of paragraph
4 (19);

5 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
6 graph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof “; or”; and

7 (3) by adding at the end thereof the following new
8 paragraph:

9 “(21) service performed, in the employ of an em-
10 ployer who is exempt from the tax imposed under sec-
11 tion 1401 by reason of an exemption granted under 12 section 1402(g), by an individual with respect to whom
13 an exemption has been granted (and is applicable)
14 under subsection (v) of this section.”.

15 (d) Section 202(v) of the Social Security Act is amend-
16 ed by inserting “or 3121(v)” after “1402(g)” each place it
17 appears.

18 (e) The amendments made by this section shall apply
19 with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

20 PART B—CHANGES IN BENEFITS

21 SHIFT OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS TO CALENDAR

22 YEAR BASIS

23 SEC. 111. (a)(1) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social
24 Security Act is amended by striking out “June” and insert-
25 ing in lieu thereof “December”.

1 (2) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(iii) of such Act is amended by
2 striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof "Novem-
3 ber".

4 (3) Section 215(i)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by
5 striking out "May" each place it appears and inserting in
6 lieu thereof in each instance "November".

7 (4) Section 203(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by
8 striking out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "Decem-
9 ber".

10 (5) Section 230(a) of such Act is amended by striking
11 out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

12 (6) Section 215(i)(2) of such Act as in effect in Decem-
13 ber 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provi-
14 sions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amend-
15 ed by striking out "June" in subparagraph (A)(ii) and in-
16 serting in lieu thereof "December", and by striking out
17 "May" each place it appears in subparagraph (B) and in-
18 serting in lieu thereof in each instance "November".

19 (7) Section 202(m) of such Act (as it applies in certain 20 cases by reason of section 2 of Public Law 97-123) is 21 amended by striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof
22 "November".

23 (8) The amendments made by this subsection shall
24 apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined

1 under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years
2 after 1982.

3 (b)(1) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act
4 is amended by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu
5 thereof "September 30", and by striking out "1974" and
6 inserting in lieu thereof "1982".

7 (2) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of such Act as in effect in De-
8 cember 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provi-
9 sions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amend-
10 ed by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu thereof
11 "September 30".

12 (3) The amendments made by this subsection shall
13 apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined
14 under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years
15 after 1983.

16 (c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by insert-
17 ing ", and as amended by section 201 (a)(6) and (b)(2) of the 18 Social Security Amendments of 1983," after "as in effect in
19 December 1978".

20 (d) Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in
21 section 215(i) of the Social Security Act, the "base quarter"
22 (as defined in paragraph (1)(A)(i) of such section) in the 23 calendar year 1983 shall be a "cost-of-living computation
24 quarter" within the meaning of paragraph (1)(B) of such sec-
25 tion (and shall be deemed to have been determined by the

1 Secretary of Health and Human Services to be a "cost-of-
2 living computation quarter" under paragraph (2)(A) of such
3 section) for all of the purposes of such Act as amended by this
4 section and by other provisions of this Act, without regard to
5 the extent by which the Consumer Price Index has increased
6 since the last prior cost-of-living computation quarter which
7 was established under such paragraph (1)(B).

8 ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS

9 RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOY-
10 MENT

11 SEC. 112. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security
12 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
13 new paragraph:

14 "(7)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligi-
15 ble for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for Decem-
16 ber 1983 and whose primary insurance amount would be
17 computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who
18 first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic pay-
19 ment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D))
20 based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service
21 which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section
22 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and 23 in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service') of at 24 least one year's duration, the primary insurance amount of
25 that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability

1 insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under
2 subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which
3 the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be
4 periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secre-
5 tary determines there has been a significant change in the
6 amount of such periodic payment.

7 “(B)(ii) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply
8 to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this para-
9 graph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the
10 individual’s primary insurance amount under this subsection
11 (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such 12 computation the percentage of the individual’s average in-
13 dexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i)
14 of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii).
15 There shall then be computed (without regard to this para-
16 graph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individ-
17 ual’s primary insurance amount under this subsection (other 18 than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall 19 be reduced by an amount equal to the applicable fraction (as 20 determined under subparagraph (E)) of the portion of the 21 monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service
22 to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled)
23 for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance
24 benefits are payable. For purposes of the preceding sentence,
25 the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to

1 noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment
2 which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as
3 the number of months of service in noncovered service to
4 which such benefit is attributable (but only counting any
5 such months occurring after 1956) bears to the total number
6 of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The
7 individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of
8 the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before
9 the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be
10 computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the pur-
11 pose of applying other provisions of this title.

12 “(i) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in
13 this clause is—

14 “(I) 78.4 percent, with respect to individuals who
15 initially become eligible for old age or disability insur-
16 ance benefits, or who die (before becoming eligible for 17 such benefits) in 1984;

18 “(II) 66.8 percent with respect to individuals who
19 so become eligible or die in 1985;

20 “(III) 55.2 percent with respect to individuals
21 who so become eligible or die in 1986;

22 “(IV) 43.6 percent with respect to individuals
23 who so become eligible or die in 1987; and

24 “(V) 32.0 percent with respect to individuals who
25 so become eligible or die in 1988 or thereafter.

1 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
2 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
3 insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

4 “(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the
5 requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other
6 than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent
7 to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and
8 such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly
9 periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

10 “(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to 11 receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to
12 provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the pay-
13 ment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any com-
14 putation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

15 “(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) ap-
16 plies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a
17 month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes
18 eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the
19 amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B)
20 shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed,
21 to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this 22 subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

23 “(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘peri-
24 odic payment’ includes a payment payable in a lump sum if
25 it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

1 “(E) For purposes of subparagraph (B), the applicable
2 fraction is—

3 “(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes
4 eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment de-
5 scribed in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

6 “(ii) in the case of an individual who first be-
7 comes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic pay-
8 ment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

9 “(iii) in the case of an individual who first be-
10 comes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic pay-
11 ment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

12 “(iv) in the case of an individual who first be-
13 comes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic pay-
14 ment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths,
15 and

16 “(v) in the case of an individual who first be-
17 comes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly
18 periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-
19 third.

20 “(F) This paragraph shall not apply in the case of an
21 individual who has more than 30 years of coverage (as de-
22 fined in paragraph (1)(C)(ii). In the case of an individual
23 who has more than 24 years of coverage (as so defined), the 24 figure ‘32 percent’ in subparagraph (B) shall, if larger, be
25 deemed to be—

1 “(i) 90 percent, in the case of an individual who
2 has 30 or more of such years of coverage;

3 “(ii) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who
4 has 29 of such years;

5 “(iii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who
6 has 28 of such years;

7 “(iv) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who
8 has 27 of such years;

9 “(v) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who
10 has 26 of such years; and

11 “(vi) 40 percent, in the case of an individual who
12 has 25 of such years.”.

13 (b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at
14 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

15 “(5)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligi-
16 ble for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for Decem-
17 ber 1983 and whose primary insurance amount is not com-
18 puted under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of
19 paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who first be-
20 comes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a
21 payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in
22 whole or in part) upon his earnings in noncovered service of
23 at least one year’s duration, his primary insurance amount
24 for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insur-
25 ance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount comput-

1 ed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to
2 this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i))
3 reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

4 “(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount
5 (computed without regard to this paragraph and before
6 the application of subsection (i)), or

7 “(ii) the applicable fraction (as determined under
8 subparagraph (B)) of the portion of the monthly peri-
9 odic payment (or payment determined under subsection
10 (a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which
11 that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for 12 the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or dis-
13 ability insurance benefits.

14 For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the 15 monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service
16 shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same
17 ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months
18 of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is at-
19 tributable bears to the total number of months of service to
20 which such benefit is attributable. The amount of such peri-
21 odic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically
22 recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there
23 has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic
24 payment.

1 “(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable
2 fraction is—

3 “(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes
4 eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment de-
5 scribed in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

6 “(ii) in the case of an individual who first be-
7 comes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic pay-
8 ment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

9 “(iii) in the case of an individual who first be-
10 comes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic pay-
11 ment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

12 “(iv) in the case of an individual who first be-
13 comes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic pay-
14 ment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths,
15 and

16 “(v) in the case of an individual who first be-
17 comes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly
18 periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-
19 third.”.

20 “(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by
21 reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary
22 insurance amount as determined under subsection
23 (a)(1)(C)(i).”.

24 (c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at
25 the end the following new paragraph:

1 “(9)(A) In the case of an individual who first becomes
2 eligible for a periodic payment determined under subsection
3 (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first
4 month in which he becomes eligible for an old-age or disabil-
5 ity insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount
6 has been computed without regard to either such subsection or
7 subsection (d)(5), such individual’s primary insurance
8 amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such
9 subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effec-
10 tive with the first month of his concurrent eligibility for
11 either such benefit and such periodic payment.

12 “(B) If an individual’s primary insurance amount has 13 been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it be-
14 comes necessary to recompute that primary insurance
15 amount under this subsection—

16 “(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount
17 payable with respect to such primary insurance
18 amount (other than in the case of the individual’s
19 death), such increase shall be determined as though
20 such primary insurance amount had initially been
21 computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5),
22 or

23 “(ii) by reason of the individual’s death, such pri-
24 mary insurance amount shall be recomputed without

1 regard to (and as though it had never been computed
2 with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

3 “(C) In the case of any individual whose primary in-
4 surance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection
5 (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance
6 amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such
7 subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount
8 of the relevant periodic payment.”.

9 (d) Sections 202(e)(2)(B)(i) and 202(f)(3)(B)(i) of such
10 Act are each amended by striking out “section 215(f)(5) or
11 (6)” and inserting in lieu thereof “section 215(f)(5),
12 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)”.

13 BENEFITS FOR SURVIVING DIVORCED SPOUSES AND
14 DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS WHO REMARRY

15 SEC. 113. (a)(1) Section 202(e)(3) of the Social Secu-
16 rity Act is repealed.

17 (2) Section 202(e)(4) of such Act is amended to read as
18 follows:

19 “(4) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

20 “(A) a widow or a surviving divorced wife mar-
21 ries after attaining age 60, or

22 “(B) a disabled widow or disabled surviving di-
23 vorced wife described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) marries
24 after attaining age 50,

25 such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred.”.

1 (b)(1) Section 202(f)(4) of such Act is repealed.

2 (2) Section 202(f)(5) of such Act is amended to read as
3 follows:

4 “(5) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

5 “(A) a widower marries after attaining age 60, or

6 “(B) a disabled widower described in paragraph

7 (1)(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50,

8 such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred.”.

9 (c)(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be
10 effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title
12 1983.

13 (2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to
14 a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December
15 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of 16 such amendments unless proper application for such benefit
17 is made.

18 DETERMINATION OF PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT FOR

19 DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

20 SEC. 114. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security
21 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
22 new paragraph:

23 “(8)(A) If a person is entitled to benefits under subsec-
24 tion (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and
25 self-employment income of a deceased individual whose pri-

1 mary insurance amount would otherwise be determined
2 under paragraph (1), the primary insurance amount of such
3 deceased individual shall be determined, for purposes of de-
4 termining the amount of the benefit under such subsection, as 5 if such deceased individual died in the year in which the 6 person entitled to benefits under such subsection first became 7 eligible for such benefits or, if earlier, the year in which such 8 deceased individual would have attained age 62 if he had not
9 died (except that the actual year of death of such deceased
10 individual shall be used for purposes of section
11 215(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II)).

12 “(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), if a person—

13 “(i) is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or
14 (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-
15 employment income of a deceased individual, and

16 “(i) was entitled to benefits under this title on 17 the basis of the wages and self-employment income of 18 such deceased individual in the month before the month
19 in which such person became eligible for the benefits
20 described in clause (i),

21 the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual
22 shall be the primary insurance amount determined under the
23 rules which would apply (but for subparagraph (A)) or the
24 primary insurance amount determined under subparagraph
25 (A), whichever is larger.”.

1 (b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply
2 to the benefits of individuals who become eligible for benefits
3 under section 202 (e) and (f) of the Social Security Act after
4 December 1984.

5 BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED SPOUSE REGARDLESS OF

7 SEC. 115. (a) Section 202(b) of the Social Security
8 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
9 new paragraph:

10 “(5) For purposes of determining the entitlement of a 11 divorced wife to a benefit under this subsection and the 12 amount of such benefit, in the case of a wife who has been 13 divorced from her former husband for a period of not less
14 than 24 months—

15 “(A) such former husband shall be deemed to be 16 entitled to an old-age insurance benefit if he would be 17 entitled to such a benefit if he applied therefor; and

18 “(B) the amount of such benefit for such divorced
19 wife shall be determined without regard to reductions
20 which are or would be made under section 203 on ac-
21 count of work performed by such former husband.”.

22 (b)(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be
23 effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title
25 1984.

1 first day of the month in which such individual attains
2 age 60, whichever is later,
3 and ending with the last day of the month before the month in 4 which such individual attains retirement age.”.

5 (3) Section 202(q)(7) of such Act is amended by strik-
6 ing out the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting
7 in lieu thereof the following:

8 “(7) For purposes of this subsection, the ‘adjusted re-
9 duction period’ for an old-age, wife’s, husband’s, widow’s, or
10 widower’s insurance benefit is the reduction period prescribed
11 in paragraph (6) for such benefit, excluding—”.

12 (4) Paragraphs (1)(B)(i), (3)(E)(ii), and (3)(F)(ii) of
13 section 202(q) of such Act are each amended by striking out
14 “(6)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “(6)”.

15 (5) Section 202(q)(3)(G) of such Act is amended by 16 striking out “paragraph (6)(A) (or, if such paragraph does 17 not apply, the period specified in paragraph (6)(B))” and
18 inserting in lieu thereof “paragraph (6)”.

19 (6) Section 202(q)(10) of such Act is amended—

20 (A) by striking out “or an additional adjusted re-
21 duction period”;

22 (B) in subparagraphs (B)(i), (C)(i), and (C)(ii),
23 by striking out “, plus the number of months in the 24 adjusted additional reduction period multiplied by $\frac{43}{240}$
25 of 1 percent”; and

1 (C) in subparagraph (B)(i), by striking out “,
2 plus the number of months in the additional reduction
3 period multiplied by $\frac{43}{240}$ of 1 percent”.

4 (b)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be
5 effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the 6 Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

7 (2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to
8 a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December
9 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of
10 such amendments unless proper application for such benefit
11 is made.

12 ADJUSTMENT TO COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST
13 FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

14 SEC. 117. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Se-
15 curity Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III),
16 by striking out “The increase shall be derived” and inserting
17 in lieu thereof “Except as otherwise provided in paragraph
18 (5), the increase shall be derived”.

19 (b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at
20 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

21 “(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph
22 (2) to become effective for monthly benefits payable for De-
23 cember 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secre-
24 tary makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined
25 trust funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the

1 start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which
2 such December falls is less than 20.0 percent, be determined
3 under paragraph (2) by substituting—

4 “(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-
5 tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total
6 wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined
7 for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such 8 average for the second preceding calendar year (and if
9 no increase in such wages took place, the percentage
10 shall be deemed to be zero), for

11 “(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under
12 paragraph (2),

13 but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less
14 than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

15 “(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment
16 would not be made under this subsection on account of the
17 relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less
18 than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made
19 by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent
20 determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period
21 of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living
22 increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be
23 the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-
24 month period in such longer period which would have been
25 effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but

1 for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases
2 only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer
3 Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

4 “(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect
5 to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business
6 on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each
7 calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as
8 of that time.

9 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘com-
10 bined trust funds ratio’ means the ratio of—

11 “(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age
12 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
13 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the
14 amount of any outstanding loan (including interest
15 thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
16 Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any
17 calendar year, to

18 “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
19 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
20 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
21 Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar
22 year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but ex-
23 cluding any transfer payments between such trust
24 funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
25 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any

1 transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad
2 Retirement Account.

3 “(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been de-
4 termined on the basis of the substitute formula in subpara-
5 graph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding cal-
6 endar year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust
7 funds ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, the Secretary shall
8 pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period
9 beginning with the following December in amounts not to
10 exceed—

11 “(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, ac-
12 cording to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by
13 which the balance in such trust funds on the date of 14 such determination exceeds the amount necessary to 15 effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32.0 percent for
16 the following year; and

17 “(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits
18 for each month in such 12-month period, an amount
19 equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all
20 benefits paid to him during all previous years were less
21 than the amounts which would have been paid to him
22 but for the provisions of this paragraph.

23 Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage in-
24 crease in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months
25 during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient

1 funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount
2 to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in
3 clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be
4 paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to
5 any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title
6 for the months in which such additional amounts are being
7 paid.

8 “(F) In any case in which additional payments are
9 made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for
10 purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 11 12-month period for which such additional benefits were
12 made, the percentage increase under this subsection applica-
13 ble to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be
14 deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such
15 additional payments (as measured with respect to payments
16 which are not subject to reduction under any other provision
17 of this Act).”

18 (c) Only with respect to the determination made for
19 January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year
20 (for purposes of determining the increase under section
21 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for
22 December of such year) shall be determined by using the ac-
23 tuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human serv-
24 ices of the ratio of—

1 (1) the combined balance which will be available
2 in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance
3 Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance
4 Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding
5 loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hos-
6 pital Insurance Trust Fund, at the close of business on
7 December 31 of such calendar year, to

8 (2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
9 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
10 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
11 Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year
12 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of such
13 Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such
14 trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer
15 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of 16 any transfers into either such trust fund from the Rail-
17 road Retirement Account.

18 (d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is 19 amended by inserting “, or, if greater, the percentage by 20 which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for 21 such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5),” after
22 “are increased for such month”.

1 INCREASE IN OLD-AGE INSURANCE BENEFIT AMOUNTS ON
2 ACCOUNT OF DELAYED RETIREMENT

3 SEC. 118. (a) Section 202(w)(1)(A) of the Social Secu-
4 rity Act is amended to read as follows:

5 “(A) the applicable percentage (as determined
6 under paragraph (6)) of such amount, multiplied by”.

7 (b) Section 202(w) of such Act is amended by adding at
8 the end thereof the following new paragraph:

9 “(6) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the applicable
10 percentage is—

11 “(A) $\frac{1}{12}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual
12 who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance
13 benefit before 1979; and

14 “(B) $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual
15 who first becomes so eligible after 1978, and before
16 1990;

17 “(C) in the case of an individual who first be-
18 comes so eligible after 1989 and before 2009, a per-
19 centage equal to the percentage in effect under this sub-
20 paragraph for individuals who first became eligible in 21 the preceding calendar year (as increased pursuant to 22 this clause), plus $\frac{1}{48}$ of 1 percent, and

23 “(D) in the case of an individual who first be-
24 comes so eligible after 2008, $\frac{2}{3}$ of 1 percent.”.

1 (c)(1) Paragraphs (2)(A) and (3) of section 202(w) of
2 such Act are each amended by striking out “age 72” and
3 inserting in lieu thereof “age 70”.

4 (2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply
5 with respect to increment months in calendar years after 6 1983.

7 INCREASE IN RETIREMENT AGE

8 SEC. 119. (a) Section 216 of the Social Security Act is
9 amended by inserting before subsection (b) the following new
10 subsection:

11 “Retirement Age

12 “(a) (1) The term ‘retirement age’ means—

13 “(A) with respect to an individual who attains the
14 early retirement age (as defined in paragraph (2))
15 before January 1, 2000, 65 years of age;

16 “(B) with respect to an individual who attains
17 early retirement age after December 31, 1999, and
18 before January 1, 2012, 65 years of age plus the
19 number of months in the age increase factor (as deter-
20 mined under paragraph (3)) for the year in which such 21 individual attains early retirement age; and

22 “(C) with respect to an individual who attains
23 early retirement age after December 31, 2014, 66
24 years of age.

1 “(2) The term ‘early retirement age’ means age 62 in
2 the case of an old-age, wife’s, or husband’s benefit, and age
3 60 in the case of a widow’s or widower’s benefit.

4 “(3) The age increase factor for individuals who attain
5 early retirement age in the period described in subparagraph
6 (B) shall be equal to one-twelfth of the number of months in
7 the period beginning with January 2000 and ending with
8 December of the year in which the individual attains early
9 retirement age.

10 (b)(1) Section 202(q)(9) of such Act is amended to read
11 as follows:

12 “(9) The amount of the reduction for early retirement
13 specified in paragraph (1) shall be periodically revised by the
14 Secretary such that—

15 “(A) for old-age insurance benefits, wife’s insur-
16 ance benefits, and husband’s insurance benefits, the re-
17 duction applicable to an individual entitled to such a
18 benefit at an age not more than 3 years lower than the
19 retirement age applicable to such individual, shall be
20 the same as under such paragraph (1), and such reduc-
21 tion shall be increased by five-twelfths of 1 percent for
22 each month below that age which is 3 years lower than 23 the applicable retirement age; and

24 “(B) for widow’s insurance benefits and widow-
25 er’s insurance benefits, the reduction for those entitled

1 to such benefits at the earliest possible early retirement
 2 age shall be the same as specified in paragraph (1),
 3 and those for later ages shall be established by linear
 4 interpolation between the applicable reduction for such
 5 earliest possible early retirement age and a factor of
 6 unity at the applicable retirement age.”.

7 (2) Section 202(q)(1) of such Act is amended by strik-
 8 ing out “If” and inserting in lieu thereof “Subject to para-
 9 graph (9), if”.

10 (c) The Social Security Act is amended—

11 (1) by striking out “age 65” or “age of 65”, as
 12 the case may be, each place it appears in the following
 13 sections and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance

5 LIMITATIONS ON PAYMENTS TO NONRESIDENT ALIENS

6 SEC. 124. (a) Section 202(t)(1) of the Social Security
7 Act is amended to read as follows:

8 “(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this
9 title (but subject to subparagraphs (B) through (D) of this
10 paragraph), no monthly benefit shall be paid under this sec-
11 tion or section 223 for any month to any individual who is
12 not a citizen or national of the United States if such individ-
13 ual is outside the United States.

14 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, an individual
15 shall be considered to be outside the United States in any
16 month only if such month occurs—

17 “(i) after the sixth consecutive calendar month
18 during all of which (as determined by the Secretary on
19 the basis of information furnished to him by the Attor-
20 ney General or information which otherwise comes to 21 his attention) such individual is outside the United
22 States, and

23 “(ii) prior to the first month thereafter during all
24 of which such individual has been in the United
25 States;

1 but in applying the preceding provisions of this subparagraph
2 an individual who has been outside the United States for any
3 period of 30 consecutive days shall be treated as remaining
4 outside the United States until he has been in the United
5 States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

6 “(C)(i) An individual who is otherwise prevented by
7 subparagraph (A) from receiving benefits under this title
8 shall nevertheless be paid such benefits, as though such sub-
9 paragraph were inapplicable, until the total amount of such
10 benefits (excluding amounts withheld from such benefits
11 under section 1441 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954)
12 equals the total amount of the taxes payable under sections
13 3101 and 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or the 14 corresponding provisions of prior law) with respect to the 15 wages and self-employment income on which such benefits
16 are based (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of
17 such wages and self-employment income) plus interest (as de-
18 termined under clause (iii)).

19 “(ii) In determining the total amount of benefits pay-
20 able to an individual under clause (i) with respect to the
21 wages and self-employment income of any individual, the
22 Secretary shall take into account all benefits paid before such
23 determination is made on the basis of such wages and self-
24 employment income (wherever paid).

1 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, interest on
2 taxes payable under sections 3101 and 1401 of the Internal
3 Revenue Code of 1954 (or corresponding provisions of prior
4 law) shall be compounded annually from July 1 of the year
5 in which such taxes were payable only until the last day of
6 the year preceding the year in which the individual on the
7 basis of whose wages and self-employment income benefits
8 are to be paid attains age 62, becomes disabled, or dies,
9 whichever occurs first, at a rate of 3.0 percent for the period
10 after 1936 and before 1951, and, for each year after 1950, at 11 a rate equal to the average of the twelve monthly interest rates
12 determined under section 201 for such year.

13 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘United
14 States’ (when used in either a geographical or political sense)
15 means the States, the District of Columbia, the Common-
16 wealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American
17 Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and any
18 other territory or possession of the United States.”.

19 (b) Section 202(t)(2) of such Act is repealed.

20 (c) Section 202(t)(3) of such Act is amended to read as
21 follows:

22 “(3) Paragraph (1) shall not apply—

23 “(A) in any case where its application would be
24 contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States

1 in effect on the date of the enactment of the Social Se-
2 curity Amendments of 1983, or

3 “(B) to individuals who are citizens or residents
4 of a country with which the United States has con-
5 cluded an international social security agreement pur-
6 suant to section 233, unless otherwise provided by such
7 agreement.”.

8 (d) Section 202(t)(4) of such Act is amended—

9 (1) by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B);

10 (2) by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and
11 (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C); and

12 (3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of
13 subparagraph (C) (as so redesignated) and all that fol-
14 lows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

15 (e) The heading of section 202(t) of such Act is amended
16 by adding at the end thereof the following: “; Prohibition
18 dents”.

19 (f)(1) The amendments made by the preceding subsec-
20 tions shall apply with respect to any individual who initially 21 becomes eligible for benefits under section 202 or 223 of the
22 Social Security Act after December 31, 1984.

23 (2) Section 202(t) of the Social Security Act (as in 24 effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act)
25 shall apply with respect to individuals who are eligible for

1 benefits under section 202 or 223 of such Act before January
2 1, 1985.

3 REDUCTION OF COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE IF TRUST
4 FUNDS RATIO IS BELOW 20 PERCENT AND DECLINING

5 SEC. 125. (a) Section 215(i) of the Social Security Act
6 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new
7 paragraph:

8 “(5)(A) On or before July 1 of each calendar year after
9 1983, the Secretary shall determine whether the estimated
10 OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year follow-
11 ing such calendar year will be—

12 “(i) less than 20.0 percent; and

13 “(ii) less than the estimated OASDI trust fund
14 ratio for the first calendar year following the year in
15 which such determination is made.

16 “(B) If the Secretary finds that the OASDI trust fund
17 ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar
18 year will be less than each of the ratios described in clauses
19 (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall—

20 “(i) notify the Congress on or before July 1 of
21 such calendar year that, absent a change of circum-
22 stances, it will be necessary to reduce the amount of
23 the percentage cost-of-living increase otherwise payable
24 under this subsection with respect to benefits for
25 months after November of such calendar year; and

1 “(ii) absent a change of circumstances before such
2 cost-of-living increase is determined that will allow the
3 full amount of benefits otherwise payable to be paid in
4 a timely fashion, reduce the amount of such percentage
5 increase (but not below zero) in accordance with sub-
6 paragraph (C) to the extent necessary to ensure that
7 the OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar
8 year following the calendar year in which the determi-
9 nation is made will not fall below the lower of—

10 “(I) 20.0 percent, or

11 “(II) the OASDI trust fund ratio for the
12 calendar year following the calendar year in
13 which the determination is made.

14 “(C) In reducing a cost-of-living percentage increase
15 under subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall first apply such 16 reduction to the percentage increase otherwise payable with
17 respect to monthly benefits payable under this section that are
18 based on a primary insurance amount of $250 or more for
19 the month preceding such cost-of-living increase; the percent-
20 age increase applied to the primary insurance amount used to
21 determine all other monthly benefits shall not be such as to
22 increase such primary insurance amounts above $250. If
23 further reduction in outgo is required, a reduction in the per-
24 centage increase applicable with respect to monthly benefits

1 based on a primary insurance amount of less than $250 for
2 such preceding month shall be made.

3 “(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘OASDI
4 trust fund ratio’ shall mean, with respect to any calendar
5 year, the ratio of—

6 “(i) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
7 equal to the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age
8 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
9 Disability Insurance Trust Fund as of the start of
10 business on January 1 of such calendar year, taking
11 into account any cost-of-living increase that otherwise
12 would be made with respect to benefits paid during
13 such year, and any actions possible to be taken under
14 sections 201(l) and 1817(j) (relating to interfund bor-
15 rowing) and 201 (a) and (m) (relating to normalized
16 crediting of social security taxes), to

17 “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
18 the total amount to be paid from such Trust Funds
19 during such calendar year (other than payments of in-
20 terest on, and repayments of loans from), such Trust
21 Funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
22 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
23 transfer to such account from any such Trust Fund.

24 “(E) With respect to any calendar year beginning
25 before January 1988 for which a determination is required to

1 be made under subparagraph (A), the estimated OASDI
 2 trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such
 3 calendar year shall be treated as exceeding the estimated
 4 OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following
 5 such calendar year if ratio of the estimated combined bal-
 6 ances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance
 7 Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
 8 and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund for such
 9 second following calendar year to the amounts estimated to be
 10 paid from all such Trust Funds during such second following
 11 calendar year exceeds the ratio of the estimated balances in
 12 all such Trust Funds to estimated payments from all such
 13 Trust Funds for such first following calendar year.”.

14 PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

15 SEC. 131. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAIL-
 16 ROAD RETIREMENT BENEFITS.

17 (a) GENERAL RULE.—Part II of subchapter B of
 18 chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to 19 amounts specifically included in gross income) is amended
 20 by redesignating section 86 as section 87 and by inserting
 21 after section 85 the following new section:

1 “SEC. 86. SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIRE-
 2 MENT BENEFITS.

3 “(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income for the taxable year*
 4 of any taxpayer described in subsection (b) includes social
 5 security benefits in an amount equal to the lesser of—

6 “(1) one-half of the social security benefits re-
 7 ceived during the taxable year, or

8 “(2) one-half of the excess described in subsection
 9 (b).

10 “(b) TAXPAYERS TO WHOM SUBSECTION (a) AP-
 11 PLIES.—

12 “(1) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer is described in*
 13 this subsection if—

14 “(A) the sum of—

15 “(i) the adjusted gross income of the 16 taxpayer for the taxable year, plus

17 “(ii) one-half of the social security
 18 benefits received during the taxable year, ex-
 19 ceeds

20 “(B) the base amount.

21 “(2) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes*
 22 of this subsection, the adjusted gross income of the tax-
 23 payer for the taxable year shall be—

24 “(A) determined without regard to this sec-
 25 tion and sections 221, 911, and 931, and

1 “(B) increased by the amount of interest of
2 the taxpayer which is exempt from tax for the
3 taxable year.

4 “(c) BASE AMOUNT.—For purposes of this section, the
5 term ‘base amount’ means—

6 “(1) except as otherwise provided in this subsec-
7 tion, $25,000,

8 “(2) $32,000, in the case of a joint return, and

9 “(3) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—

10 “(A) is married at the close of the taxable
11 year (within the meaning of section 143) but does
12 not file a joint return for such year, and

13 “(B) does not live apart from his spouse at
14 all times during the taxable year.

15 “(d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—

16 “(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section,
17 the term ‘social security benefit’ means any amount re-
18 ceived by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to—

19 “(A) a monthly benefit under title II of the 20 Social Security Act (determined without regard to 21 section 203(i) of the Social Security Act), or

22 “(B) a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit.

23 “(2) ADJUSTMENT FOR REPAYMENTS DURING
24 YEAR.—

1 “(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this
2 section, the amount of social security benefits re-
3 ceived during any taxable year shall be reduced
4 by any repayment made by the taxpayer during
5 the taxable year of a social security benefit previ-
6 ously received by the taxpayer (whether or not
7 such benefit was received during the taxable
8 year).

9 “(B) DENIAL OF DEDUCTION.—If (but for
10 this subparagraph) any portion of the repayments
11 referred to in subparagraph (A) would have been
12 allowable as a deduction for the taxable year
13 under section 165, such portion shall be allowable
14 as a deduction only to the extent it exceeds the
15 social security benefits received by the taxpayer
16 during the taxable year (and not repaid during 17 such taxable year).

18 “(3) TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENE-
19 FIT.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘tier 1
20 railroad retirement benefit’ means a monthly benefit
21 under section 3(a), 4(a), or 4(f) of the Railroad Retirement
22 Act of 1974.

23 “(e) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT INCLUDED WHERE
24 TAXPAYER RECEIVES LUMP-SUM PAYMENT.—

25 “(1) LIMITATION.—If—

1 “(A) any portion of a lump-sum payment of
2 social security benefits received during the taxable
3 year is attributable to prior taxable years, and

4 “(B) the taxpayer makes an election under
5 this subsection for the taxable year,

6 then the amount included in gross income under this section
7 for the taxable year by reason of the receipt of such portion
8 shall not exceed the sum of the increases in gross income
9 under this chapter for prior taxable years which would result
10 solely from taking into account such portion in the taxable
11 years to which it is attributable.

12 “(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

13 “(A) YEAR TO WHICH BENEFIT ATTRIBUT-
14 ABLE.—For purposes of this subsection, a social
15 security benefit is attributable to a taxable year if
16 the generally applicable payment date for such
17 benefit occurred during such taxable year.

18 “(B) ELECTION.—An election under this
19 subsection shall be made at such time and in such
20 manner as the Secretary shall by regulations pre-
21 scribe. Such election, once made, may be revoked
22 only with the consent of the Secretary.

23 “(f) TREATMENT AS PENSION OR ANNUITY FOR CER-
24 TAIN PURPOSES.—For purposes of—

25 “(1) section 43(c)(2) (defining earned income),

1 “(2) the name and address of such individual.

2 “(b) STATEMENTS TO BE FURNISHED TO INDIVID-
3 UALS WITH RESPECT TO WHOM INFORMATION IS FUR-
4 NISHED.—Every person making a return under subsection
5 (a) shall furnish to each individual whose name is set forth
6 in such return a written statement showing—

7 “(1) the name of the agency making the pay-
8 ments, and

9 “(2) the aggregate amount of payments, of repay-
10 ments, and of reductions, with respect to the individual
11 as shown on such return.

12 The written statement required under the preceding sentence
13 shall be furnished to the individual on or before January 31
14 of the year following the calendar year for which the return
15 under subsection (a) was made.

16 “(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

17 “(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL OFFICIAL.—The
18 term ‘appropriate Federal official’ means—

19 “(A) the Secretary of Health and Human
20 Services in the case of social security benefits de-
21 scribed in section 86(d)(1)(A), and

22 “(B) the Railroad Retirement Board in the

15 lieu thereof “the total interest accrued to such day”;
16 and

17 (iii) by striking out “the loan were an investment
18 under subsection (d)” and inserting in lieu thereof
19 “such amount had remained in the Depository Account
20 established with respect to such lending Trust Fund
21 under subsection (d) or section 1817(c)”.

22 (B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall
23 apply with respect to months beginning more than thirty days
24 after the date of enactment of this Act.

25 (3) Section 201(l)(3) of such Act is amended—

1 (A) by inserting “(A)” after the paragraph desig-
2 nation; and

3 (B) by adding at the end thereof the following
4 new subparagraphs:

5 “(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has
6 been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Hospital In-
7 surance Trust Fund to the Federal Old Age and Survivors
8 Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust
9 Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the OASDI
10 trust fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he shall transfer from the 11 borrowing Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance
12 Trust Fund an amount that—

13 “(I) together with any amounts transferred from
14 another borrowing Trust Fund under this paragraph
15 for such year, will reduce the OASDI trust fund ratio
16 to 15 percent; and

17 “(II) does not exceed the outstanding balance of 18 such loan.

19 “(ii) Amounts required to be transferred under clause
20 (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of
21 the year succeeding the year in which the determination de-
22 scribed in clause (i) is made.

23 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term
24 ‘OASDI trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any calen-
25 dar year, the ratio of—

1 “(I) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age
2 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
3 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the out-
4 standing amount of any loan (including interest there-
5 on) theretofore made to either such Fund from the Fed-
6 eral Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the last day
7 of such calendar year, to

8 “(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
9 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old Age
10 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
11 Disability Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar
12 year following such calendar year for all purposes au-
13 thorized by section 201 (other than payments of inter-
14 est on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal Hos-
15 pital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)), but
16 excluding any transfer payments between such trust
17 funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the
18 Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
19 transfers into either such trust fund from that Account.

20 “(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under para-
21 graph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983)
22 shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event
23 no later than December 31, 1989.

24 “(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987, and
25 before January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer

1 each month to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
2 from any Trust Fund with any amount outstanding on a
3 loan made from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
4 under paragraph (1) an amount equal to one twenty-fourth of
5 the amount owed to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
6 Fund by such Trust Fund at the beginning of such period
7 (plus the interest accrued on the outstanding balance of such
8 loan during such month).”.

9 (4) Section 201(l) of such Act is further amended by
10 adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

11 “(5)(A) No amounts may be borrowed from the Federal
12 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1) during
13 any month if the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio for
14 such month is less than 10 percent.

15 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘Hospital
16 Insurance trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any
17 month, the ratio of—

18 “(i) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insur-
19 ance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount
20 of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore
21 made to such Trust Fund under this subsection, as of 22 the last day of the second month preceding such month,
23 to

24 “(ii) the amount obtained by multiplying by
25 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the

1 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Hospital In-
2 surance Trust Fund during the month for which such
3 ratio is to be determined (other than payments of inter-
4 est on, or repayments of loans from another Trust
5 Fund under this subsection), and reducing the amount
6 of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by
7 the amount of any transfer into the Hospital Insurance
8 Trust Fund from that Account.”.

9 (b)(1) Section 1817(j)(1) of such Act is amended—

10 (A) by striking out “January 1983” and insert-
11 ing in lieu thereof “January 1988”; and

12 (B) by inserting “, subject to paragraph (5),”
13 after “may”.

14 (2)(A) Section 1817(j)(2) of such Act is amended—

15 (i) by striking out “from time to time” and insert-
16 ing in lieu thereof “on the last day of each month after 17 such loan is made”;

18 (ii) by striking out “interest” and inserting in 19 lieu thereof “the total interest accrued to such day”;
20 and

21 (iii) by striking out “the loan were an investment
22 under subsection (c)” and inserting in lieu thereof
23 “such amount had remained in the Depository Account
24 established with respect to such lending Trust Fund

S. RES. 91

Resolved, That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1, an Act to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and with respect to the consideration of H.R. 1900, dealing with the same subject matter. Such waiver is necessary because the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform require prompt action in order to ensure the stability of the social security system.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1900, the social security measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, the situation is this: It appears to me we are not going to be able to negotiate a compromise settlement of the jobs bill dilemma today. I regret that. I must say that all of the parties to this matter have given their best efforts and have done so conscientiously. I commend them all for it. Senator KASTEN and Senator DOLE have tried and tried repeatedly to reconcile the differences in their point of view on this matter without success. Finally, we have arrived at the place where we have to move on.

This in no way signals that we are not going to pass a jobs bill. We are going to pass a jobs bill if it is humanly possible for that to be done. But there is a cloture motion filed against further debate on the jobs bill that will not mature until Friday. In my judgment, there was simply no reason for us to sit here in quorum calls and what appeared to be endless efforts to negotiate a settlement on this matter until Friday. I think we can make good use of the time between now and Friday, 1 hour after we convene, by considering aspects of the social security bill and perhaps even passing it. I hope we can pass it.

On Friday, the cloture motion on the jobs bill will occur as the pending business. If cloture is invoked, we shall be back on the jobs bill, whether we finish social security or not. I hope we have finished social security and we can continue then with the jobs bill in an orderly way.

The Senate should be on notice, Mr. President, of the strong possibility of a Saturday session.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. On behalf of Mr. MOYNIHAN, I make the following unanimous-consent request: I ask unanimous consent that floor privileges be granted during the disposition of the pending social security measure to Dr. John Hambor, Director of the Division of Economic Research in Office of Research & Statistics, Social Security Administration. He is serving as a legislative fellow in the office of Senator MOYNIHAN at this time. It is a bit of an unusual request, but I hope the Senate will grant it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I express my appreciation to the minority leader for his courtesy in this matter and to the Senate. Dr. Hambor is a respected authority on the issues of fact that will come before the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BUDGET ACT WAIVER

Mr. BAKER. I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate S. Res. 91, a budget waiver with respect to consideration of S. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state it.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A Senate resolution (S. Res. 91) waiving section 303(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 with respect to the consideration of S. 1.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the budget resolution waiver.

The resolution (S. Res. 91) was agreed to as follows:

1 (B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall
 2 apply with respect to months beginning more than 30 days
 3 after the date of enactment of this Act.

4 (3) Section 1817(j)(3) of such Act is amended—

5 (A) by inserting “(A)” after the paragraph desig-
 6 nation; and

7 (B) by adding at the end thereof the following
 8 new subparagraphs:

9 “(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has
 10 been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Old Age and
 11 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability
 12 Insurance Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance
 13 Trust Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the Hos-
 14 pital Insurance Trust Fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he
 15 shall transfer from such Trust Fund to the lending trust fund
 16 an amount that—

17 “(I) together with any amounts transferred to an-
 18 other lending trust fund under this paragraph for such
 19 year, will reduce Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio
 20 to 15 percent; and

21 “(II) does not exceed the outstanding balance of 22 such loan.

23 “(i) Amounts required to be transferred under clause
 24 (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of

1 the year succeeding the year in which the determination de-
2 scribed in clause (i) is made.

3 “(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘Hos-
4 pital Insurance Trust Fund ratio’ means, with respect to any
5 calendar year, the ratio of—

6 “(I) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insur-
7 ance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any out-
8 standing loan (including interest thereon) from the
9 Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund
10 and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, as
11 of the last day of such calendar year; to

12 “(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be
13 the total amount to be paid from the Federal Hospital
14 Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar year fol-
15 lowing such calendar year (other than payments of in-
16 terest on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal
17 Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the
18 Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund under para-
19 graph (1)), and reducing the amount of any transfer to
20 the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any
21 transfers into such Trust Fund from the Railroad Re-
22 tirement Account.

23 “(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under para-
24 graph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983)

1 shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event
2 no later than December 31, 1989.”

3 “(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987 and before
4 January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer each
5 month from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to
6 any Trust Fund that is owed any amount by the Federal
7 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund on a loan made under para-
8 graph (1), an amount equal to $1/24$ of the amount owed to
9 such Trust Fund by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
10 Fund at the beginning of such period (plus the interest ac-
11 crued on the outstanding balance of such loan during such 12 month).”

13 (4) Section 1817(j) of such Act is further amended by 14 adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

15 “(5)(A) No amounts may be loaned by the Federal Old
16 Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal
17 Disability Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)
18 during any month if the OASDI trust fund ratio for such
19 month is less than 10 percent.

20 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘OASDI
21 trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any month, the ratio
22 of—

23 “(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age
24 and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal
25 Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the out-

1 standing amount of any loan (including interest there-
2 on) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund from
3 the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under sec-
4 tion 201(l), as of the last day of the second month pre-
5 ceding such month, to

6 “(ii) the amount obtained by multiplying by
7 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the
8 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old Age and
9 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Dis-
10 ability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for
11 which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes
12 authorized by section 201 (other than payments of in-
13 terest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal
14 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(l)),
15 but excluding any transfer payments between such
16 trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers
17 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of
18 any transfers into either such trust fund from that Ac-
19 count.”.

20 CREDITING AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO

21 TRUST FUNDS

22 SEC. 143. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall take
23 such actions as may be necessary to ensure that amounts of
24 checks for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act
25 which have not been presented for payment within a reason-

1 able length of time (not to exceed twelve months) after issu-
2 ance are credited to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors In-
3 surance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance
4 Trust Fund, whichever may be the fund from which the check
5 was issued. Amounts of any such check shall be recharged to
6 the fund from which they were issued if payment is subse-
7 quently made on such check.

8 (b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from
9 the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and
10 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and to the Federal Disabil-
11 ity Insurance Trust Fund, as appropriate, such sums as may
12 be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds in the total
13 amounts of all currently unnegotiated benefit checks. After
14 the amounts appropriated by this subsection have been trans-
15 ferred to the Trust Funds, the provisions of subsection (a)
16 shall be applicable. There are hereby appropriated into such
17 Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse
18 such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated
19 benefit checks. The first such transfer shall be made within 20 thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act with 21 respect to all such unnegotiated checks as of such date of 22 enactment.

23 (2) As used in paragraph (1), the term "currently unne-
24 gotiated benefit checks" means the checks issued under title
25 II of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the enact-

1 ment of this Act, which remain unnegotiated after the twelfth
2 month following the date on which they were issued.

3 TRANSFER TO TRUST FUNDS FOR BENEFITS

4 ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY SERVICE BEFORE 1957

5 SEC. 144. (a) Section 217(g) of the Social Security Act
6 is amended to read as follows:

7 “APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS

8 “(g)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enact-
9 ment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secre-
10 tary shall determine the amount equal to the excess of—

11 “(A) the actuarial present value as of such date of 12 enactment of the past and future benefit payments from
13 the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust
14 Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
15 and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under
16 this title and title XVIII, together with associated ad-
17 ministrative costs, resulting from the operation of this 18 section (other than this subsection) and section 210 of 19 this Act as in effect before the enactment of the Social
20 Security Act Amendments of 1950, over

21 “(B) any amounts previously transferred from the 22 general fund of the Treasury to such Trust Funds pur-
23 suant to the provisions of this subsection as in effect
24 immediately before the date of the enactment of the 25 Social Security Amendments of 1983.

1 Such actuarial present value shall be based on the relevant
2 actuarial assumptions set forth in the report of the Board of
3 Trustees of each such Trust Fund for 1983 under sections
4 201(c) and 1817(b). Within thirty days after the date of the 5 enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the 6 Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer the amount deter-
7 mined under this paragraph with respect to each such Trust
8 Fund to such Trust Fund from amounts in the general fund
9 of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

10 “(2) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined
11 under paragraph (1) with respect to each such Trust Fund in 12 1985 and each fifth year thereafter, as determined appropri-
13 ate by the Secretary from data which becomes available to 14 him after the date of the determination under paragraph (1)
15 on the basis of the amount of benefits and administrative 16 expenses actually paid from such Trust Fund under this title
17 or title XVIII and the relevant actuarial assumptions set
18 forth in the report of the Board of Trustees of such Trust
19 Fund for such year under section 201(c) or 1817(b). Within 20 30 days after any such revision, the Secretary of the Treas-
21 ury, to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts,
22 shall transfer to such Trust Fund, from amounts in the gen-
23 eral fund of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or from 24 such Trust Fund to the general fund of the Treasury, such

1 amounts as the Secretary of the Treasury determines neces-
2 sary to compensate for such revision.”.

3 PAYMENTS TO TRUST FUNDS OF AMOUNTS EQUIVALENT
4 TO TAXES ON SERVICE IN THE UNIFORMED SERV-
5 ICES PERFORMED AFTER 1956

6 SEC. 145. (a) Section 229(b) of the Social Security
7 Act is amended to read as follows:

8 “(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to each of
9 the Trust Funds, consisting of the Federal Old-Age and Sur-
10 vivors Insurance Trust, the Federal Disability Insurance
11 Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
12 Fund, for transfer on July 1 of each calendar year to such
13 Trust Fund from amounts in the general fund in the Treas-
14 ury not otherwise appropriated, an amount equal to the total
15 of the additional amounts which would be appropriated to
16 such Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending September 30 of
17 such calendar year under section 201 or 1817 of this Act if
18 the amounts of the additional wages deemed to have been paid
19 for such calendar year by reason of subsection (a) constituted
20 remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b)
21 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes of the 22 taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal
23 Revenue Code of 1954. Amounts authorized to be appropri-
24 ated under this subsection for transfer on July 1 of each cal-
25 endar year shall be determined on the basis of estimates of

1 the Secretary of the wages deemed to be paid for such calen-
2 dar year under subsection (a); and proper adjustments shall
3 be made in amounts authorized to be appropriated for subse-
4 quent transfer to the extent prior estimates were in excess of
5 or were less than such wages so deemed to be paid.”.

6 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be ef-
7 fective with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for
8 calendar years after 1983.

9 (c)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enactment
10 of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services
11 shall determine the additional amounts which would have
12 been appropriated into the Federal Old-Age and Survivors
13 Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance
14 Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust
15 Fund under sections 201 and 1817 of the Social Security
16 Act, if the additional wages deemed to have been paid under
17 section 229(a) of the Social Security Act prior to 1984 had
18 constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in sec-
19 tion 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for pur-
20 poses of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the
21 Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and the amount of interest
22 which would have been earned on such amounts if they had
23 been so appropriated.

24 (2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, within
25 thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act, trans-

1 fer into each such Trust Fund, from the general fund in the
2 Treasury, an amount equal to the amount determined with
3 respect to such Trust Fund under paragraph (1), less any
4 amount appropriated into such Trust Fund under the provi-
5 sions of section 229(b) of the Social Security Act prior to the
6 date of the determination made under paragraph (1) with re-
7 spect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years
8 prior to 1984. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust
9 Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accord-
10 ance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

11 (B) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined
12 under subparagraph (A) within one year after the date of the 13 transfer made under paragraph (1), as warranted by data
14 which may become available to him after the date of the
15 transfer under subparagraph (A) based upon actual benefits
16 paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts deter-
17 mined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred by the
18 Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund
19 from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropri-
20 ate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as
21 may be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated
22 to such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be trans-
23 ferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust
24 Funds.

1 TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURE

2 SEC. 146. (a) Section 201 of the Social Security Act is
3 amended by striking out subsections (d), (e), and (f) and in-
4 serting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

5 “(d) There are hereby created on the books of the Treas-
6 ury of the United States an account to be known as the Old-
7 Age and Survivors Insurance Depository Account and an
8 account to be known as the Disability Insurance Depository
9 Account.

10 “(e) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of 11 the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund
12 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
13 Fund in the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository
14 Account and that portion of the Federal Disability Insurance
15 Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from
16 such Trust Fund in the Disability Insurance Depository Ac-
17 count.

18 “(f)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
19 moneys deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) in
20 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
21 in the general fund of the Treasury.

22 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in an account pursuant to
23 subsection (e) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
24 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
25 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an

1 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
2 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
3 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee
4 on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each busi-
5 ness day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing
6 obligations of the United States then forming a part of the
7 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
8 ration of four years from the end of such month, except that
9 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

10 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘flower
11 bond’ means a United States Treasury bond which was
12 issued before March 4, 1971 and which may, at the option of
13 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
14 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
15 terest to the date of payment, if—

16 “(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
17 the time of his death,

18 “(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
19 vidual, and

20 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
21 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
22 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
23 taxes.

24 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
25 posited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) whenever he

1 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
2 withdrawals from the Trust Fund which deposited such
3 moneys, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obliga-
4 tions of the United States in the market in an amount not to
5 exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that
6 such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund
7 of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount.”.

8 (b) Section 1817 of such Act is amended by striking out
9 subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the
10 following new subsections:

11 “(c) There is hereby created on the books of the Treas-
12 ury of the United States an account to be known as the Hos-
13 pital Insurance Depository Account.

14 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of 15 the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund not required to
16 meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Hos-
17 pital Insurance Depository Account.

18 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
19 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in
20 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
21 in the general fund of the Treasury.

22 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
23 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United
24 States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United
25 States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an

1 amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the
2 average balance of moneys in the account for such month by
3 the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee
4 on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each busi-
5 ness day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing
6 obligations of the United States then forming a part of the
7 public debt which are not due or callable until after the expi-
8 ration of four years from the end of such month, except that
9 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

10 “(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘flower
11 bond’ means a United States Treasury bond which was
12 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
13 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
14 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
15 terest to the date of payment, if—

19 vidual, and

20 “(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
21 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
22 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
23 taxes.

24 “(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys de-
25 posited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he

1 determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current
2 withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the
3 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
4 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
5 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an
6 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
7 not exceeding such amount.”.

8 (c) Section 1841 of such Act is amended by striking out
9 subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the
10 following new subsections:

11 “(c) There is hereby established on the books of the
12 Treasury an account to be known as the Supplementary
13 Medical Insurance Depository Account.

14 “(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of
15 the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund
16 not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust
17 Fund in the Supplementary Medical Insurance Depository
18 Account.

19 “(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply
20 moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in
21 any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys
22 in the general fund of the Treasury.

23 “(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to
24 subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United

5 Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the
6 market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such with-
7 drawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an
8 increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount
9 not exceeding such amount.”.

10 (d)(1) No later than the date on which this section takes
11 effect, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem at par all
12 outstanding obligations of the United States issued under the
13 Second Liberty Bond Act exclusively for purchase by the
14 Federal Old-Age Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Dis-
15 ability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insur-
16 ance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical
17 Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter in this subsection re-
18 ferred to as the “Trust Funds”).

19 (2)(A) The Managing Trustee may sell any marketable
20 obligation of the United States held by the Trust Funds at
21 market price at any time and shall sell (or redeem) all
22 “flower bonds” held by the Trust Funds on the date of enact-
23 ment of this section at market price no later than the date on
24 which this section takes effect.

1 (B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term “flower
2 bond” means a United States Treasury bond which was
3 issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of
4 the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased
5 individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued in-
6 terest to the date of payment, if—

7 (i) it was owned by such deceased individual at
8 the time of his death,

9 (ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased indi-
10 vidual, and

11 (iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary
12 of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the re-
13 demption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate
14 taxes.

15 (3) The proceeds from the redemption and sale of obliga-
16 tions of the United States pursuant to paragraphs (1) and
17 (2) shall be paid to the Trust Fund selling or redeeming such
18 obligations and that portion of such proceeds which is not
19 required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund
20 shall be deposited in the account established with respect to
21 such Trust Fund by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Act.

22 (e) The amendments made by this section shall take
23 effect on the first day of the first month beginning more than 24 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

5 (1) by striking out the period at the end of the
6 first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof a comma
7 and “and of two members of the public (both of whom
8 may not be from the same political party), who shall be
9 nominated by the President for a term of four years
10 and subject to confirmation by the Senate; and

11 (2) by adding at the end thereof the following new 12 sentence: “A member of the public serving on the
13 Board of Trustees shall not be considered to be a fidu-
14 ciary and shall not be personally liable for actions
15 taken in such capacity with respect to the Trust
16 Funds.”.

17 (b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall
18 become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

19 PAYMENT SCHEDULE BY STATE AND LOCAL
20 GOVERNMENTS

21 SEC. 148. (a) Section 218(e)(1)(A) of the Social Secu-
22 rity Act is amended by striking out “within the thirty-day
23 period immediately following the last day of each calendar
24 month” and inserting in lieu thereof “in accordance with the
25 same payment schedule as applies to payment by employers

1 of the taxes imposed under sections 3101 and 3111 of the
2 Internal Revenue Code of 1954”.

3 (b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be ef-
4 fective with respect to payments due on or after January 1,
5 1984.

6 NORMALIZED CREDITING OF SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES TO

7 TRUST FUNDS

8 SEC. 149. (a) Section 201(a) of the Social Security
9 Act is amended by striking out “The amounts appropriated”
10 in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “Except as 11 provided in subsection (m), the amounts appropriated”.

12 (b) Section 201 of such Act is further amended by
13 adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

14 “(m)(1) The procedures in effect on January 1, 1983,
15 with respect to the transfer of the amounts appropriated by 16 clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a) and the amounts appro-
17 priated by clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall apply to 18 a calendar month unless the Secretary makes a finding
19 under this paragraph that the OASDI trust fund ratio as of 20 the first day of such calendar month is less than 12 percent.

21 “(2) If the Secretary makes the finding described in
22 paragraph (1) with respect to a calendar month, the amounts
23 appropriated by clauses (3) and (4) shall be transferred on 24 the first day of such calendar month from the general fund of 25 the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insur-

1 ance Trust Fund, and the amounts appropriated by clauses
2 (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall be transferred on the first
3 day of such calendar month from the general fund of the
4 Treasury to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund,
5 such amounts to be determined on the basis of estimates by
6 the Secretary of the Treasury of the taxes, specified in
7 clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a), to be paid to or deposit-
8 ed into the Treasury during such calendar month.

9 “(3) Proper adjustments shall be made in amounts sub-
10 sequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in
11 excess of or were less than the taxes specified in clauses (3)
12 and (4) of subsection (a).

13 “(4) All amounts transferred to either Trust Fund
14 under paragraph (2) shall be treated by the Managing
15 Trustee in the same manner and to the same extent as the
16 other assets of such Trust Fund; and such Trust Fund shall
17 pay interest to the general fund on the amount so transferred 18 at a rate (calculated on a daily basis, and applied against the
19 difference between the amount so transferred on such first
20 day and the amount which would have been transferred to the
21 Trust Fund up to that day under the procedures in effect on 22 January 1, 1983) equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill
23 rate during such month (payable on the last day of such 24 month).

1 “(5) For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘OASDI
2 trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any month, the ratio
3 of—

4 “(A) the combined balance in the Federal Old-
5 Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the
6 Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by
7 the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest
8 thereon) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund
9 from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund
10 under subsection (l), and determined without regard to
11 amounts transferred theretofore under this subsection,
12 as of the last day of the second month preceding such
13 month, to

14 “(B) the amount obtained by multiplying by
15 twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the 16 Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old-Age and
17 Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Dis-
18 ability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for
19 which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes
20 authorized by section 201 (other than payments of in-
21 terest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal
22 Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under subsection (l)),
23 but excluding any transfer payments between such
24 trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers
25 to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of

1 any transfers into either such trust fund from that Ac-
 2 count.”.

3 (c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to
 4 calendar months beginning after the date of enactment of this
 5 section and before January 1, 1988.

20 SEC. 301. (a)(1) Section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Se-
21 curity Act is amended by adding at the end the following new
22 sentence: “Such term does not include costs of approved edu-
23 cational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost
24 reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital-
25 related costs, as defined by the Secretary.”.

1 (2) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of such Act is
2 amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sub-
3 paragraph:

4 “(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting
5 periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.”

6 (3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the
7 implementation of a system for including capital-related costs
8 under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient
9 hospital services, costs related to capital projects initiated on
10 or after the effective date of the implementation of such a
11 system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differ-
12 ently from costs of projects initiated before such date.

13 (b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

14 (1) by striking out “Notwithstanding sections
15 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections” in 16 paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof “Notwith-
17 standing section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions

20 pital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))” in the
21 matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after
22 “of a hospital”;

23 (3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1)
24 following subparagraph (B), “(other than on the basis

1 of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under
2 subsection (d))” after “payable under this title”;

3 (4) by repealing paragraph (2);

4 (5) by inserting “and subsection (d) and except as
5 provided in subsection (e)” in paragraph (3)(B) after
6 “subparagraph (A)”;

7 (6) by inserting “or fiscal year” after “cost re-
8 porting period” each place it appears in paragraph
9 (3)(B);

10 (7) by inserting “before the beginning of the 11 period or year” in paragraph (3)(B) after “estimated
12 by the Secretary”;

13 (8) by striking out “exceeds” in paragraph (3)(B)
14 and inserting in lieu thereof “will exceed”; and

15 (9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with re-
16 spect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after
17 October 1, 1982, to read as follows:

18 “(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject
19 to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code
20 for 1954 for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was
21 not subject to such taxes for the 12-month cost-reporting
22 period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary
23 shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base year
24 amount referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i) for such hospi-
25 tal applicable to such cost reporting period by the amount of

1 such taxes paid or accrued by such hospital for such cost
2 reporting period.”.

3 (c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—

4 (A) by striking out “and” at the end of subpara-
5 graph (B),

6 (B) by striking out the period at the end of sub-
7 paragraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof “; and”,
8 and

9 (C) by adding at the end the following:

10 “(D) the Secretary determines that the system
11 will not preclude an eligible organization (as defined in 12 section 1876(b)) from negotiating directly with hospi-
13 tals with respect to the organization’s rate of payment
14 for inpatient hospital services.

15 The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under
16 this subsection on the ground that the State’s hospital reim-
17 bursement control system is based on a payment methodology
18 other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the
19 ground that the amount of payments made under this title
20 under such system must be less than the amount of payments
21 which would otherwise have been made under this title not
22 using such system. If the Secretary determines that the con-
23 ditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on main-
24 taining payment amounts at no more than a specified per-
25 centage increase above the payment amounts in a base period,

1 the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient
2 hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment
3 basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient
4 discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the 5 conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on main-
6 taining aggregate payment amounts below a national average
7 percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpa-
8 tient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the applica-
9 tion of a State under this subsection on the ground that the
10 State's rate of increase in such payments for such services
11 must be less than such national average rate of increase.";

12 (2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—

13 (A) by striking out “requirement of paragraph
14 (1)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof “requirements of
15 subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1) and, if 16 applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5),”, and

17 (B) by inserting “(or, if applicable, in paragraph
18 (5))” in subparagraph (B) after “paragraph (1)”.

19 (3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by
20 adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

21 “(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State
22 under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement
23 control system if—

1 “(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B),
2 (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with re-
3 spect to the system, and

4 “(B) with respect to that system a waiver of cer-
5 tain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security
6 Act has been approved on or before (and which is in
7 effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Se-
8 curity Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section
9 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or 10 section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 11 1972.

12 With respect to a State system described in this paragraph,
13 the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on
14 the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospi-
15 tal payments for individuals under this title, as compared to
16 the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments,
17 with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on 18 the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient
19 admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods
20 beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test
21 shall no longer apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in
22 the same manner as under other waivers.

23 “(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State
24 under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement
25 control system if—

1 “(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B),
2 (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with re-
3 spect to the system;

4 “(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

5 “(i) is operated directly by the State or by
6 an entity designated pursuant to State law,

7 “(ii) provides for payment of hospitals cov-
8 ered under the system under a methodology
9 (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as
10 well as any method for changes in the methodolo-
11 gy) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hos-
12 pital services during a specified period are estab-
13 lished under the system prior to the defined rate
14 period, and

15 “(iii) hospitals covered under the system will
16 make such reports (in lieu of cost and other re-
17 ports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise re-
18 quired under this title) as the Secretary may re-
19 quire in order to properly monitor assurances pro-
20 vided under this subsection;

21 “(C) the State has provided the Secretary with
22 satisfactory assurances that operation of the system
23 will not result in any change in hospital admission
24 practices which result in—

1 “(i) a significant reduction in the proportion
2 of patients (receiving hospital services covered
3 under the system) who have no third-party cover-
4 age and who are unable to pay for hospital serv-
5 ices,

6 “(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion
7 of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient
8 hospital services for which payment is (or is 9 likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for
10 or costs of such services,

11 “(iii) the refusal to admit patients who
12 would be expected to require unusually costly or
13 prolonged treatment for reasons other than those
14 related to the appropriateness of the care available
15 at the hospital, or

16 “(iv) the refusal to provide emergency serv-
17 ices to any person who is in need of emergency
18 services if the hospital provides such services;

19 “(D) any change by the State in the system
20 which has the effect of materially reducing payments to 21 hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to
22 the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to
23 which is likely to be materially affected by the change;
24 and

1 “(E) the State has provided the Secretary with
2 satisfactory assurances that in the development of the
3 system the State has consulted with local governmental
4 officials concerning the impact of the system on public
5 hospitals.

6 The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this
7 paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted
8 to the Secretary.

9 “(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances de-
10 scribed in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to
11 any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments
12 under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount
13 equal to the amount by which the payments under this title
14 under such system for such period exceeded the amount of
15 payments which would otherwise have been made under this
16 title not using such system.”.

17 (d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section
18 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 19 1982, is amended—

20 (1) by striking out “section 1814(b)” in para-
21 graph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof “subsection
22 (b)”, and

23 (2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection
24 (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at

1 the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act
2 under the following heading:

3 “Elimination of Lesser-of-Cost-or-Charges Provision”.

4 (e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at
5 the end the following new subsections:

6 “(d)(1)(A) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject
7 to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment
8 with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital serv-
9 ices (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hos-
10 pital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital
11 discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

12 “(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and
13 before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

14 “(I) the target percentage (as defined in sub-
15 paragraph (C)) of the hospital’s target amount for 16 the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection
17 (b)(3)(A)) for the period, and

18 “(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in
19 subparagraph (C)) of the applicable combined ad-
20 justed DRG prospective payment rate determined
21 under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

22 “(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is
23 equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective pay-
24 ment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such
25 discharges.

1 “(B) As used in this section, the term ‘subsection (d)
2 hospital’ means a hospital located in one of the fifty States or
3 the District of Columbia other than—

4 “(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section
5 1861(f)),

6 “(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the
7 Secretary),

8 “(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predomi-
9 nantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

10 “(iv) a hospital which has an average inpatient
11 length of stay (as determined by the Secretary) of 12 greater than 25 days;

13 and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not
14 include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital
15 which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the 16 Secretary). The exclusion of any category of hospitals or 17 units under this subparagraph shall become inapplicable at
18 such time as the Secretary determines that adequate data of 19 clinical and statistical significance is available such that the
20 Secretary may include such category in the payment system
21 established under this subsection.

22 “(C) For purposes of this subsection, for cost reporting
23 periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

1 “(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before Octo-
2 ber 1, 1984, the ‘target percentage’ is 75 percent and
3 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 25 percent;

4 “(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before Oc-
5 tober 1, 1985, the ‘target percentage’ is 50 percent and
6 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 50 percent; and

7 “(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before Oc-
8 tober 1, 1986, the ‘target percentage’ is 25 percent and
9 the ‘DRG percentage’ is 75 percent.

10 “(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II), the ‘ap-
11 plicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate’
12 for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occur-
13 ring—

14 “(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before Octo-
15 ber 1, 1984, is a combined rate consisting of 25 per-
16 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
17 and 75 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
18 ment rate, determined under paragraph (2) for such
19 discharges;

20 “(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before Oc-
21 tober 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 50 per-
22 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
23 and 50 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
24 ment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such
25 discharges;

1 “(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before Oc-
2 tober 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 75 per-
3 cent of the national DRG prospective payment rate,
4 and 25 percent of the regional DRG prospective pay-
5 ment rate, determined under paragraph (3); and

6 “(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, is a rate equal
7 to the national DRG prospective payment rate deter-
8 mined under paragraph (3).

9 “(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted
10 DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital
11 discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital
12 services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and
13 shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective pay-
14 ment rate for such discharges in each such region, for which 15 payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such 16 rate shall also be determined for hospitals located in urban or
17 rural areas within the United States and within each such
18 region. Such determinations shall be made as follows:

19 “(A) DETERMINING ALLOWABLE INDIVIDUAL
20 HOSPITAL COSTS FOR BASE PERIOD.—The Secretary
21 shall determine the allowable operating costs per dis-
22 charge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for
23 the most recent cost reporting period for which data are 24 available.

1 “(B) UPDATING FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984.—The
2 Secretary shall update each amount determined under
3 subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

4 “(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the es-
5 timated average rate of change of hospital costs
6 industry-wide between the cost reporting period
7 used under such subparagraph and fiscal year
8 1983, and

9 “(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the
10 applicable percentage increase (as defined in sub-
11 section (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

12 “(C) STANDARDIZING AMOUNTS.—The Secre-
13 tary shall standardize the amount updated under sub-
14 paragraph (B) for each hospital by—

15 “(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medi-
16 cal education costs,

17 “(ii) adjusting for variations among hospi-
18 tals by area and region in the average hospital
19 wage level, and

20 “(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix
21 among hospitals.

22 “(D) COMPUTING URBAN AND RURAL AVER-
23 AGES.—The Secretary shall compute an average of the
24 standardized amounts determined under subparagraph
25 (C) for the United States and for each region—

1 “(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in
2 an urban area, and

3 “(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located
4 in a rural area.

5 For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘region’
6 means one of the four census regions established by the
7 Bureau of the Census, established by the Secretary;
8 the term ‘urban area’ means an area within a Stand-
9 ard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the
10 Office of Management and Budget) or within such
11 similar area as the Secretary has recognized under
12 subsection (a) by regulation; and the term ‘rural area’
13 means any area outside such an area or similar area.

14 “(E) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAY-
15 MENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the aver-
16 age standardized amounts determined under subpara-
17 graph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (esti-
18 mated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments
19 under this subsection based on DRG prospective pay-
20 ment rates which are additional payments described in
21 paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

22 “(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The
23 Secretary shall adjust each of such average standard-
24 ized amounts as may be required under subsection
25 (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

1 “(G) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR
2 URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS IN THE UNITED
3 STATES AND IN EACH REGION.—For each discharge
4 classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secre-
5 tary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate
6 which is equal—

7 “(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in
8 the United States, and for hospitals located in an
9 urban area in each region, to the product of—

10 “(I) the average standardized amount
11 (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced
12 under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under
13 subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an
14 urban area in the United States or in that
15 region, and

16 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
17 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
18 related group; and

19 “(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in
20 the United States, and for hospitals located in a
21 rural area in each region, to the product of—

22 “(I) the average standardized amount
23 (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced
24 under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under
25 subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a

1 rural area in the United States or in that
2 region, and

3 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
4 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
5 related group.

6 “(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE
7 LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion
8 (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of
9 hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and
10 wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment
11 rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area dif-
12 ferences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established
13 by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage
14 level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to
16 appropriate.

17 “(3) The Secretary shall determine an adjusted DRG
18 prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital dis-
19 charge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpa-
20 tient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital for which
21 payment may be made under part A of this title, as follows:

22 “(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED
23 AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average
24 standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban
25 area within the United States and, for fiscal year

1 1985, for hospitals located in an urban area within
2 each region, and for hospitals located in a rural area
3 within the United States, and for fiscal year 1985, for
4 hospitals located in a rural area within each region,
5 and equal to the respective average standardized
6 amount computed for the previous fiscal year under
7 paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, in-
8 creased by the applicable percentage increase under
9 subsection (b)(3)(B) for that particular fiscal year.

10 “(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAY-
11 MENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the aver-*
12 age standardized amounts determined under subpara-
13 graph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (esti-
14 mated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments
15 under this subsection based on DRG prospective pay-
16 ment amounts which are additional payments described
17 in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

18 “(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The*
19 Secretary shall adjust each of such average standard-
20 ized amounts as may be required under subsection
21 (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

22 “(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR
23 URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge*
24 classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secre-

1 “(II) the weighting factor (determined
2 under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-
3 related group.

4 “(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE
5 LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion,
6 (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of
7 hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and
8 wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment
9 rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differ-
10 ences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by 11 the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level
12 in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the 13 national or regional average hospital wage level as ap-
14 propriate.

15 “(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of 16 inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and
17 a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges
18 within these groups.

19 “(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secre-
20 tary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which re-
21 flects the relative hospital resources used with respect to dis-
22 charges classified within that group compared to discharges
23 classified within other groups.

24 “(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and
25 weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and

1 (B), at least every five years, to reflect changes in treatment
2 patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the
3 relative use of hospital resources.

4 “(D) The Commission (established under subsection
5 (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the
6 Secretary with respect to adjustments to be made under sub-
7 paragraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evi-
8 dence with respect to new practices, including the use of new
9 technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall
10 report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any
11 adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

12 “(5)(A)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional
13 payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a
14 diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds
15 the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a
16 fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by
17 some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the 18 lesser.

19 “(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a
20 hospital may request additional payments in any case where
21 changes, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the DRG
22 rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is
23 greater.

24 “(iii) The amount of such additional payment under
25 clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and

1 shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff
2 point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

3 “(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made
4 under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may
5 not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total
6 payments made based on DRG prospective payment rates for
7 discharges in that year, and the DRG rates shall be reduced
8 to compensate for any payments under this subparagraph in
9 excess of such 6 percent.

10 “(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional pay-
11 ment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs
12 of medical education, in an amount computed in the same
13 manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations
14 (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2),
15 except that in the computation under this subparagraph the
16 Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to
17 twice the factor provided under such regulations.

18 “(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions
19 and adjustments to the payment amounts established under
20 this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take
21 into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that
22 serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who
23 have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of 24 this title.

1 “(ii) With respect to a hospital which is a ‘sole commu-
2 nity hospital’, payment under paragraph (1)(A)(i) for any
3 cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after Oc-
4 tober 1, 1983, shall be determined using the target percentage
5 and DRG percentage applicable for the fiscal year beginning
6 on October 1, 1983, and in no case shall total payments to
7 such a hospital under this title for any cost reporting period
8 beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1,
9 1986, be less than such payments to such hospital for the
10 preceding cost reporting period. For purposes of this subpara-
11 graph, the term ‘sole community hospital’ means a hospital
12 that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather
13 conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as 14 determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient
15 hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geo-
16 graphical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

17 “(iii) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments
18 to the payment amounts as the Secretary deems appropriate
19 to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals
20 located in Alaska and Hawaii.

21 “(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of re-
22 imbursement made for services described in section
23 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under
24 part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph

1 (2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being
2 made.

3 “(ii) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to
4 the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so
5 as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause
6 (i).

7 “(E) This paragraph shall apply only to subsection (d)
8 hospitals that receive payments in amounts computed under
9 this subsection.

10 “(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the
11 Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each
12 fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description
13 of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted
14 DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, in-
15 cluding any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

16 “(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review
17 under section 1878 or otherwise of—

18 “(A) the determination of the requirement, or the
19 proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursu-
20 ant to subsection (e)(1), and

21 “(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related
22 groups, of the methodology for the classification of dis-
23 charges within such groups, and of the appropriate
24 weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).

1 “(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals begin-
2 ning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary
3 shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applica-
4 ble percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods
5 under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure
6 that—

7 “(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise
8 provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(I) and (d)(5) for
9 that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital
10 services of hospitals,
11 are not greater or less than—

12 “(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsec-
13 tion (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would
14 have been payable for such services for those same hos-
15 pitals for that fiscal year under this section under the
16 law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the
17 Social Security Act Amendments of 1983;
18 except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph
19 shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not
20 apply for purposes of making computations under subsection
21 (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

22 “(B) For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1984 or
23 fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide under subsec-
24 tions (d)(2)(F) and (d)(3)(C) for such equal proportional ad-
25 justment in each of the average standardized amounts other-

1 wise computed for that fiscal year as may be necessary to
2 assure that—

3 “(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise
4 provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(II) and (d)(5)
5 for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hos-
6 pital services of hospitals,

7 are not greater or less than—

8 “(ii) the DRG percentage (as defined in subsec-
9 tion (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would
10 have been payable for such services for those same hos-
11 pitals for that fiscal year under this section under the
12 law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the
13 Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

14 “(2) The Secretary shall provide for appointment of a
15 Commission of independent experts, selected by the Office of
16 Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this subsection re-
17 ferred to as the ‘Commission’) to review the applicable per-
18 centage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and
19 make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate
20 percentage increase which should be effected for hospital in-
21 patient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal
22 years beginning with fiscal year 1985. In making its recom-
23 mendations, the Commission shall take into account changes
24 in the hospital market-basket described in subsection
25 (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific

1 advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (in-
2 cluding the quality and skill level of professional nursing
3 required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effec-
4 tiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

5 “(3) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before
6 the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year
7 1985), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on
8 an appropriate increase factor which should be used (instead
9 of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection
10 (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in
11 that fiscal year.

12 “(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of
13 the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal
14 year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage in-
15 crease which will apply for purposes of this section as the
16 applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsec-
17 tion (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which
18 will assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effec-
19 tive delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of 20 high quality.

21 “(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published in the
22 Federal Register, not later than—

23 “(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning
24 with fiscal year 1985), the Secretary’s proposed deter-
25 mination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and

1 “(B) the September 1 before such fiscal year, the
2 Secretary’s final determination under such paragraph
3 for that year.

4 The Secretary shall include in the publication referred to in
5 subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year the report of the Commis-
6 sion’s recommendations submitted under paragraph (3) for
7 that fiscal year.

8 “(6)(A) The Commission shall consist of fifteen individ-
9 uals selected and appointed by the Director of the Congres-
10 sional Office of Technology Assessment (hereafter in this
11 part referred to as the ‘Director’ and the ‘Office’, respective-
12 ly). Such appointments shall be without regard to the provi-
13 sions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments
14 in the competitive service. Members of the Commission shall
15 be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three
16 years, except that the Director may provide initially for such 17 shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the
18 terms of no more than seven members shall expire in any one
19 year. Members of the Commission shall be eligible for reap-
20 pointment for no more than two consecutive terms.

21 “(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide
22 expertise and experience in the provision and financing of
23 health care, including but not limited to physicians and reg-
24 istered professional nurses, employers, third party payors,
25 and individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of

1 biomedical, health services, and health economics research.
2 The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of
3 groups, including but not limited to—

4 “(i) national organizations representing physi-
5 cians, including medical specialty organizations and
6 registered professional nurses and other skilled health
7 professionals;

8 “(ii) national organizations representing hospitals,
9 including teaching hospitals; and

10 “(iii) national organizations representing the 11 business community, health benefit programs, labor,
12 and the elderly.

13 “(C) The Commission may employ such personnel (not
14 to exceed 50) as may be necessary to carry out its duties.
15 Subject to approval by the Director, the Commission shall
16 appoint one of the members of its staff as Executive Director.
17 The Commission is authorized to seek such assistance and
18 support as may be required in the performance of its duties
19 from appropriate Federal departments and agencies. Such
20 assistance may include the provision of detailees, office space,
21 and related services, with or without reimbursement, as
22 agreed upon by the Commission and the head of the appropri-
23 ate department or agency.

24 “(D) While serving on the business of the Commission
25 (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be

1 entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate
2 provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section
3 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving
4 away from home and his regular place of business, a member
5 may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of
6 subsistence, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commis-
7 sion.

8 “(E) The Executive Director shall be compensated at
9 the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule
10 under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

11 “(F) The Executive Director shall, in accordance with
12 such policies as the Commission may prescribe, appoint and
13 fix the rates of compensation of such personnel as may be
14 necessary to carry out the provisions of this part. Such rates
15 of compensation may not exceed the level specified in subpar-
16 agraph (E).

17 “(G) The Commission shall have the authority to—

18 “(i) enter into contracts or make other arrange-
19 ments, as may be necessary for the conduct of the work
20 of the Commission, with any competent personnel or
21 organization, with or without reimbursement, without
22 performance or other bonds, and without regard to sec-
23 tion 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5);

24 “(ii) make advance, progress, and other payments
25 which relate to the work of the Commission without

1 regard to the provisions of section 3324 of title 31,
2 United States Code;

3 “(iii) accept services of voluntary and uncompen-
4 sated personnel that are necessary for the conduct of
5 the work of the Commission and provide transportation
6 and subsistence as authorized by section 5703 of title
7 5, United States Code, for persons serving without
8 compensation;

9 “(iv) acquire by purchase, lease, loan, or gift, and
10 hold and dispose of by sale, lease, or loan, real and
11 personal property of all kinds that is necessary for, or
12 results from, the exercise of authority granted by this
13 part (without regard to the first section of the Act of 14 March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 370, chapter 106; 40 U.S.C.
15 34)); and

16 “(v) prescribe such rules and regulations as it
17 deems necessary with respect to the internal organiza-
18 tion and operation of the Commission.

19 “(H) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns
20 of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2)(A),
21 the Commission shall collect and assess information on medi-
22 cal and surgical procedures and services, including informa-
23 tion on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of
24 hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special
25 attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to

1 involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not
2 adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the
3 safety, efficiency, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing
4 medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in
5 coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect
6 and assess factual information, giving special attention to the
7 needs of updating existing DRG's, establishing new DRG's,
8 and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to
9 reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in de-
10 livering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting
11 and assessing information, the Commission shall—

12 “(i) utilize existing information, both published
13 and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed
14 either by its own staff or under other arrangements
15 made in accordance with this part; and

16 “(ii) carry out, or award grants or contracts for,
17 original research where existing information is inad-
18 equiate for the development of useful and valid guide-
19 lines by the Commission.

20 “(I) The Commission shall have access to such relevant
21 information and data as may be available from appropriate
22 Federal agencies. The Commission shall maintain the confi-
23 dentiality of all confidential information it receives.

1 “(J) There shall be established a Federal Liaison Com-
2 mittee to the Commission (hereafter in this part referred to as
3 the ‘Committee’). The Committee shall—

4 “(1) arrange for the acquisition of information in
5 accordance with subparagraph (I) and assure that its
6 activities, especially the conduct of original research
7 and medical studies, are coordinated with the activities
8 of Federal agencies; and

9 “(2) advise the Commission with respect to the 10 activities of Federal agencies that relate to the duties of 11 the Commission or to particular medical procedures
12 and services under study, or being considered for
13 study, by the Commission.

14 The Federal Liaison Committee shall consist of delegates of 15 those Federal agencies which can, in the judgment of the
16 Commission, play a significant role in assisting the Commis-
17 sion. The Administrator of the Health Care Financing Ad-
18 ministration shall serve as the Chairman of the Committee.
19 Members of the Committee shall serve without additional
20 compensation. The Committee shall meet at the call of the 21 Chairman of the Committee, or at the call of the Chairman
22 of the Commission, but not less than six times a year.

23 “(K)(i) The Office shall report to the Congress, from
24 time to time, on the functioning and progress of the Commis-
25 sion and on the status of the assessment of medical proce-

1 dures and services by the Commission. Such reports shall be
2 annual for the first three years of the Commission's operation
3 and biannual thereafter, and shall be delivered to the Con-
4 gress by March 15 of each reporting year.

5 “(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all de-
6 liberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediate-
7 ly upon its request.

8 “(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this part, the
9 Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary
10 funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Com-
11 mission. The Office shall be reimbursed for such funds by the
12 Commission from the appropriations made with respect to the 13 Commission. The Office shall carry out such duties subject
14 to approval of the Technology Assessment Board, as pre-
15 scribed by sections 3(d) (2) and (3) of the Technology Assess-
16 ment Act of 1972 (2 U.S.C. 472(d) (2) and (3)).

17 “(L)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such 18 sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this
19 paragraph.

20 “(ii) Eighty-five percent of such appropriation shall be
21 payable from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund,
22 and 15 percent of such appropriation shall be payable from
24 Fund.”.

1 in lieu thereof "the amount that would be payable for such
2 services under subsection (b) and section 1886".

3 (c)(1) The matter in section 1861(v)(1)(G)(i) of such
4 Act following subclause (III) is amended by striking out "on
5 the basis of the reasonable cost of" and inserting in lieu
6 thereof "the amount otherwise payable under part A with re-
7 spect to".

8 (2) Section 1861(v)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by 9 striking out "an amount equal to the reasonable cost of" and
10 inserting in lieu thereof "the amount that would be taken into 11 account with respect to".

12 (3) Section 1861(v)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by
13 striking out "the equivalent of the reasonable cost of".

14 (4) Section 1861(v)(3) of such Act is amended by strik-
15 ing out "the reasonable cost of such bed and board furnished
16 in semiprivate accommodations (determined pursuant to 17 paragraph (1))" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount
18 otherwise payable under this title for such bed and board fur-
19 nished in semiprivate accommodations".

20 (d) Section 1862(a) of such Act is amended—

21 (1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph

22 (12),

23 (2) by striking out the period at the end of para-
24 graph (13) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and

1 (3) by adding at the end the following new para-
2 graph:

3 “(14) which are other than physicians’ services
4 (as defined in regulations) and which are furnished to
5 an individual who is an inpatient of a hospital by an
6 entity other than the hospital, unless the services are
7 furnished under arrangements (as defined in section
8 1861(w)(1)) with the entity made by the hospital.”.

9 (e)(1) Section 1866(a)(1) of such Act is amended—

10 (A) by striking out “and” at the end of subpara-
11 graph (D),

12 (B) by striking out the period at the end of sub-
13 paragraph (E), and

14 (C) by adding at the end the following new sub-
15 paragraphs:

16 “(F) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
17 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
18 under subsection (c) or (d) of section 1886, to main-
19 tain an agreement with a utilization and quality con-
20 trol peer review organization (if there is such an orga-
21 nization which has a contract with the Secretary under
22 part B of title XI for the area in which the hospital is
23 located) under which the organization will perform
24 functions under that part with respect to the review of
25 the accuracy of diagnostic information on such hospi-

1 tal's bills, the completeness and adequacy of care pro-
2 vided, the appropriateness of admissions, and the ap-
3 propriateness of care provided for which additional
4 payments are sought under section 1886(d)(5), with re-
5 spect to inpatient hospital services for which payment
6 may be made under part A of this title (and for pur-
7 poses of payment under this title, the cost of such
8 agreement to the hospital shall be considered a cost in-
9 curring by such hospital in providing inpatient services
10 under part A, but shall be paid directly by the Secre-
11 tary to such organization on behalf of such hospital in
12 accordance with a budget approved by the Secretary),

13 “(G) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
14 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
15 under subsection (b) or (d) of section 1886, not to
16 charge any individual or any other person for inpatient
17 hospital services for which such individual would be
18 entitled to have payment made under part A but for a
19 denial or reduction of payments under section 1886(f),
20 and

21 “(H) in the case of hospitals which provide inpa-
22 tient hospital services for which payment may be made
23 under section 1886(d), to have all items and services
24 (other than physicians' services as defined in regula-
25 tions) (i) that are furnished to an individual who is an

1 inpatient of the hospital, and (ii) for which the individ-
2 ual is entitled to have payment made under this title,
3 furnished by the hospital or otherwise under arrange-
4 ments (as defined in section 1861(w)(1)) made by the
5 hospital.”.

6 (2) The matter in section 1866(a)(2)(B)(ii) of such Act
7 preceding subclause (I) is amended by inserting “and except
8 with respect to inpatient hospital costs with respect to which
9 amounts are payable under section 1886(d)” after “(except
10 with respect to emergency services)”.

11 (f) Section 1876(g) of such Act is amended by adding at
12 the end the following:

13 “(4) A risk-sharing contract under this subsection may,
14 at the option of an eligible organization, provide that the Sec-
15 retary—

16 “(A) will reimburse hospitals for payment
17 amounts determined in accordance with section 1886,
18 as applicable, of inpatient hospital services furnished to
19 individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to
20 subsection (d), and

21 “(B) will deduct the amount of such reimburse-
22 ment for payment which would otherwise be made to
23 such organization.”.

24 (g)(1) Section 1878(a) of such Act is amended—

1 (A) by inserting “and (except as provided in sub-
2 section (g)(2)) any hospital which receives payments in
3 amounts computed under section 1886(d) and which
4 has submitted such reports within such time as the
5 Secretary may require in order to make payment
6 under such section may obtain a hearing with respect
7 to such payment by the Board” after “subsection (h)”
8 in the matter before paragraph (1),

9 (B) by inserting “(i)” after “(A)” in paragraph
10 (1)(A),

11 (C) by inserting “or” at the end of paragraph
12 (1)(A) and by adding after such paragraph the follow-
13 ing new clause:

14 “(ii) is dissatisfied with a final determina-
15 tion of the Secretary as to the amount of the pay-
16 ment under section 1886(d),”, and

17 (D) by striking out “(1)(A)” in paragraph (3)
18 and inserting in lieu thereof “(1)(A)(i), or with respect
19 to appeals under paragraph (1)(A)(ii), 180 days after
20 notice of the Secretary’s final determination,”.

21 (2)(A) The last sentence of section 1878(f)(1) of the
22 Social Security Act is amended by inserting “(or, in an
23 action brought jointly by several providers, the judicial dis-
24 trict in which the greatest number of such providers are locat-

1 ed) after “the judicial district in which the provider is locat-
2 ed”.

3 (B) Section 1878(f)(1) of such Act is further amended
4 by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence:
5 “Any appeal to the Board or action for judicial review by
6 providers which are under common ownership or control must
7 be brought by such providers as a group with respect to any
8 matter involving an issue common to such providers.”.

9 (3) Section 1878(g) of such Act is amended by inserting
10 “(1)” after “(g)” and by adding at the end the following new
11 paragraph:

12 “(2) The determinations and other decisions described
13 in section 1886(d)(7) shall not be reviewed by the Board or 14 by any court pursuant to an action brought under subsection
15 (f) or otherwise.”.

16 (4) The third sentence of section 1878(h) of such Act is
17 amended striking out “cost reimbursement” and inserting in
18 lieu thereof “payment of providers of services”.

19 (h) The first sentence of section 1881(b)(2)(A) of such
20 Act is amended by inserting “or section 1886 (if applicable)”
21 after “section 1861(v)”.

22 (i) Section 1887(a)(1)(B) of such Act is amended by
23 inserting “or on the bases described in section 1886” after
24 “on a reasonable cost basis”.

1 (j) The Secretary may, for any cost reporting period
2 beginning prior to October 1, 1986, waive the requirements
3 of sections 1862(a)(14) and 1866(a)(1)(H) of the Social Se-
4 curity Act in the case of a hospital which has followed a
5 practice of allowing direct billing under part B of title
6 XVIII of such Act for services (other than physician serv-
7 ices) so extensively, that immediate compliance with those
8 requirements would threaten the stability of patient care. Any
9 such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to
10 be made under part B but that the payments to such hospital
11 under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of
12 the billings for such services under part B. If such a waiver
13 is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may
14 provide for such methods of payments under part A as is 15 appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institu-
16 tion.

17 REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION

18 PROJECTS

19 SEC. 303. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human
20 Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secre-
21 tary") shall study and report to the Congress within 18
22 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the
23 method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net
24 equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be in-

1 cluded within the prospective payment amounts computed
2 under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

3 (2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to
4 the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984
5 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment meth-
6 odology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act
7 during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries,
8 and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other
9 providers.

10 (B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin
11 the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of phy-
12 sician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to
13 physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose
14 discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary
15 shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, legislative
16 recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of pro-
17 viding for determining the amount of the payments for physi-
18 cians' services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the
19 DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

20 (C) In the annual report to Congress under subpara-
21 graph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of 22 studies on—

23 (i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or
24 phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospec-

1 tive payment rates under paragraph (3) of section
2 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

3 (ii) whether and the method under which hospi-
4 tals, not paid based on amounts determined under such
5 section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a
6 prospective basis as under such section;

7 (iii) the application of severity of illness, intensity
8 of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related
9 groups, and the advisability and feasibility of provid-
10 ing for such modifications; and

11 (iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the
12 payment methodology under such section to payment
13 by all payors for inpatient hospital services.

14 (3) Prior to April 1, 1985, the Secretary shall complete
15 a study and make legislative recommendations to the Con-
16 gress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole
17 community hospitals which takes into account their unique
18 vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addi-
19 tion, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an in-
20 formation transfer between parts A and B, particularly with
21 respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made
22 under part A, and no adjustment is made in the reimburse-
23 ment to the admitting physician, or physicians. The Secre-
24 tary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompen-
25 sated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate

1 for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas. The Secre-
2 tary shall also on the advisability of having hospitals make
3 available information on the cost of care to patients financed
4 by both public programs and private payors.

5 (4) The Secretary shall complete a study and make rec-
6 ommendations to the Congress, before April 1, 1984, with
7 respect to whether hospitals located outside of the fifty States
8 and the District of Columbia should be included under a
9 prospective payment system.

10 (b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
11 ments made by this title shall not affect the authority of the 12 Secretary to develop, carry out, or continue experiments and
13 demonstration projects.

14 (2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of
15 a State which has a demonstration project, for payment of
16 hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act ap-
17 proved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amend-

3 (c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms
4 and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days
5 after the date of enactment of this Act—

6 (1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior
7 Health Services (according to terms and conditions as
8 specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for
9 waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security
10 Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social
11 Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements
12 of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period
13 of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care

23 account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as 24 in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items
25 and services furnished before that period.

1 (c)(1) The Secretary shall cause to be published in the
 2 Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG prospec-
 3 tive payment rates established under subsection (d) of section
 4 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no
 5 later than September 1, 1983, and allow for a period of 6 public comment thereon. The DRG prospective payment
 7 rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the 8 necessity for consideration of comments received, but the Sec-
 9 retary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register,
 10 affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after 11 considering those comments.

12 (2) A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a
 13 DRG prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges
 14 occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modifi-
 15 cation is published in the Federal Register.

16 (3) Rules to implement subsection (d) of section 1886 of

13 SEC. 306. (a) Section 1839 of the Social Security Act
14 is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), and (c) and
15 inserting in lieu thereof the following:

16 "(a)(1) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and
17 of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate
18 for enrollees who have attained retirement age (as defined in 19 section 216(a)) which shall be applicable for the succeeding
20 calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the
21 Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate
22 amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees
23 who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the
24 total of the benefits and administrative costs which he esti-
25 mates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary

1 Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and
2 related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year
3 with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly ac-
4 tuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate
5 amount for a contingency margin.

6 “(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled
7 under this part for each month after December 1983 shall,
8 except as provided in subsections (b) and (e), be the amount
9 determined under paragraph (3).

10 “(3) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and
11 of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the month-
12 ly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this
13 part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium
14 shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal
15 to the smaller of—

16 “(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who
17 have attained retirement age, determined according to
18 paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar
19 year, or

20 “(B) the monthly premium rate most recently pro-
21 mulgated by the Secretary under this paragraph, in-
22 creased by a percentage determined as follows: The Sec-
23 retary shall ascertain the primary insurance amount
24 computed under section 215(a)(1), based upon average
25 indexed monthly earnings of $900, that applied to in-

1 dividuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-
2 age insurance benefits for December of the year preced-
3 ing the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly
4 premium rate by the same percentage by which that
5 primary insurance amount is increased when, by
6 reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation
7 is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals
8 for the following December.

9 Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount
10 which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any
11 period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced,
12 issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assump-
13 tions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of
14 an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained
15 retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the deriva-
16 tion of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

17 “(4) The Secretary shall also, during October of 1983
18 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial
19 rate for disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement
20 age which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar
21 year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary
22 estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for
23 such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees who
24 have not attained retirement age will equal one-half of the
25 total of the benefits and administrative costs which he esti-

7 (2) Subsections (d), (e), (f), and (g) of section 1839 of
8 such Act are redesignated as subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e),
9 respectively.

10 (3) (A) Section 1839(b) of such Act (as so redesignated)
11 is amended by striking out “subsection (b), (c), or (g)” and
12 inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a) or (e)”.

13 (B) Section 1839(d) of such Act (as so redesignated) is
14 amended by striking out “purposes of subsection (c)” and
15 inserting in lieu thereof “purposes of subsection (b)”.

16 (C) Section 1839(e) of such Act (as so redesignated) is
17 amended by striking out “subsection (c)” and “subsection
18 (c)(1)” and by inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a)” and
19 “subsection (a)(1)”, respectively.

20 (D) Section 1818(c) of such Act is amended by striking
21 out “subsection (c) of section 1839” and inserting in lieu
22 thereof “subsection (a) of section 1839”.

23 (E) Section 1843(d)(1) of such Act is amended by 24 striking out “without any increase under subsection (c) there-

1 of” and inserting in lieu thereof “without any increase under
2 subsection (b) thereof”.

3 (F) Section 1844(a)(1)(A)(i) of such Act is amended—

4 (i) by striking out “1839(c)(1)” and inserting in
5 lieu thereof “1839(a)(1)”; and

6 (ii) by striking out “1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)” and
7 inserting in lieu thereof “1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)”.

8 (G) Section 1844(a)(1)(B)(i) of such Act is amended—

9 (i) by striking out “1839(c)(4)” and inserting in
10 lieu thereof “1839(a)(4)”; and

11 (ii) by striking out “1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)” and
12 inserting in lieu thereof “1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)”.

13 (H) Section 1876(a)(5) of such Act is amended—

14 (i) in subparagraph (A)(ii), by striking out
15 “1839(c)(1)” and inserting in lieu thereof
16 “1839(a)(1)”; and

17 (ii) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out
18 “1839(c)(4)” and inserting in lieu thereof
19 “1839(a)(4)”.

20 (4) The amendments made by this subsection shall
21 apply with respect to premiums payable for January 1984
22 and each month thereafter.

23 (5) The monthly premium amount under section 1839
24 of the Social Security Act for the months of July through
25 December of 1983 shall be equal to the monthly premium

1 amount as determined under such section (as in effect prior
2 to the amendments made by this section) for June 1983.

3 SHIFT IN VOLUNTARY PART A PREMIUM TO COINCIDE
4 WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASES

5 SEC. 307. (a) Section 1818(d)(2) of the Social Secu-
6 rity Act is amended—

7 (1) by striking out “during the last calendar
8 quarter of each year, beginning in 1973,” in the first
9 sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “during the next
10 to last calendar quarter of each year”;

11 (2) by striking out “the 12-month period com-
12 mencing July 1 of the next year” in the first sentence
13 and inserting in lieu thereof “the following calendar
14 year”; and

15 (3) by striking out “for such next year” in the 16 second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “for that 17 following calendar year”.

18 (b) The amendments made by this section shall apply to
19 premiums for months beginning with January 1984, and for
20 months after June 1983 and before January 1984, the 21 monthly premium under part A of title XVIII of the Social
22 Security Act for individuals enrolled under each respective 23 part shall be the monthly premium under that part for the
24 month of June 1983.

13 SEC. 402. (a) Subsection (e) of section 602 of the Fed-
14 eral Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 is amended by 15 redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by strik-
16 ing out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the follow-
17 ing new paragraphs:

18 "(2)(A) In the case of any account from which Federal
19 supplemental compensation was first payable to an individu-
20 al for a week beginning after March 31, 1983, the amount
21 established in such account shall be equal to the lesser of—

| 5-percent period..... | 12 |
| 4-percent period..... | 10 |
| Low-unemployment period..... | 8 |

6 “(B) Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (ii) of
 7 subparagraph (A), the applicable limit under such clause
 8 shall not be lower than 4 less than the number of weeks appli-
 9 cable to such State under this paragraph as in effect for the
 10 week beginning March 27, 1983, to the amendments made by
 11 the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

12 “(C) In the case of any account from which Federal
 13 supplemental compensation was payable to an individual for
 14 a week beginning before April 1, 1983, the amount estab-
 15 lished in such account shall be equal to the lesser of the sub-
 16 paragraph (A) entitlement or the sum of—

17 “(i) the subparagraph (A) entitlement reduced
 18 (but not below zero) by the aggregate amount of Feder-
 19 al supplemental compensation paid to such individual
 20 for weeks beginning before April 1, 1983, plus

21 “(ii) such individual’s additional entitlement.

1 “(D) For purposes of subparagraph (C) and this sub-
2 paragraph—

3 “(i) The term ‘subparagraph (A) entitlement’
4 means the amount which would have been established
5 in the account if subparagraph (A) had applied to such
6 account.

7 “(ii) The term ‘additional entitlement’ means the
8 applicable limit determined under the following table
9 times the individual’s average weekly benefit amount
10 for his benefit year.

|----------------------------|-----------------------|
| “In the case of | The applicable |
| weeks during a: | limit is: |
| 6-percent period..... | 8 |
| 5-percent period..... | 6 |
| 4-percent period..... | 4 |
| Low-employment period..... | 4 |

11 “(D) Except as provided in subparagraph (C)(i), for
12 purposes of determining the amount of Federal supplemental
13 compensation payable for weeks beginning after March 31,
14 1983, from an account described in subparagraph (C), no
15 reduction in such account shall be made by reason of any
16 Federal supplemental compensation paid to the individual for
17 weeks beginning before April 1, 1983.

18 “(3)(A) For purposes of this subsection, the terms ‘6-
19 percent period’, ‘5-percent period’, ‘4-percent period’, and
20 ‘low-unemployment period’ mean, with respect to any State,
21 the period which—

1 “(i) begins with the 3d week after the 1st week in
 2 which the rate of insured unemployment in the State
 3 for the period consisting of such week and the immedi-
 4 ately preceding 12 weeks falls in the applicable range,
 5 and

6 “(ii) ends with the 3d week after the 1st week in
 7 which the rate of insured unemployment for the period
 8 consisting of such week and the immediately preceding
 9 12 weeks does not fall within the applicable range.

10 “(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable
 11 range is as follows:

| “In the case of a: | The applicable range is: |
|-----------------------------|--|
| 6-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 6 percent. |
| 5-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 5 percent but less than 6 percent. |
| 4-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 4 percent but less than 5 percent. |
| Low-employment period | A rate less than 4 percent. |

12 “(C) No 6-percent period, 5-percent period, or 4-percent
 13 period, as the case may be, shall last for a period of less than 14 4 weeks unless the State enters a period with a higher per-
 15 centage designation.

16 “(D) For purposes of this subsection—

17 “(i) The rate of insured unemployment for any
 18 period shall be determined in the same manner as de-
 19 termined for purposes of section 203 of the Federal-
 20 State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 21 1970.

1 “(ii) The amount of an individual’s average
2 weekly benefit amount shall be determined in the same
3 manner as determined for purposes of section
4 202(b)(1)(C) of such Act.”.

5 (b)(1) Section 602(f)(2) of such Act is amended by in-
6 serting before the period at the end thereof the following: “;
7 except that in the case of any individual who received such
8 compensation for the week preceding the last week beginning
9 after such date, such compensation shall be payable to such
10 individual for weeks beginning after such date, but the total
11 amount of such compensation payable for such weeks shall be
12 limited to 50 percent of the total amount which would other-
13 wise be payable for such weeks”.

14 (2) Section 605(2) of such Act is amended by inserting
16 vided in section 602(f)(2))”.

17 (c)(1) Section 602(b)(1) of such Act is amended by
18 striking out “and” at the end of subparagraph (B), adding
19 “and” at the end of subparagraph (C), and inserting after
20 subparagraph (C) the following:

21 “(D) had at least 26 weeks of full-time insured
22 employment, during his base period or the equivalent
23 in insured wages during his base period (as determined
24 using a methodology equivalent to that used under sec-

4 exhaustion of rights and before April 1, 1983 (and the period
5 after such exhaustion and before April 1, 1983, shall not be
6 counted for purposes of determining the expiration of the two
7 years following the end of his benefit year for purposes of
8 section 602(b) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation
9 Act of 1982).

10 (c) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest practi-
11 cable date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose
12 to each State with which he has in effect an agreement under
13 section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act
14 of 1982 a modification of such agreement designed to provide
15 for the payment of Federal supplemental compensation under
16 such Act in accordance with the amendments made by this
17 part. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any
18 State fails or refuses, within the 3-week period beginning on
19 the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification
20 to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agree-
21 ment, the Secretary of Labor shall terminate such agreement
22 effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before
23 such 3-week period.

1 PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND
2 CREDIT REDUCTIONS
3 DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

4 SEC. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security
5 Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following
6 new paragraph:

7 “(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section
8 for any year after December 31, 1982, and before January 1,
9 1986, a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four
10 annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the
11 year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State
12 meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). Interest shall accrue
13 on such deferred interest in the same manner as under para-
14 graph (3)(C).

15 “(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State
16 must—

17 “(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982,
18 which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or
19 the net solvency of its unemployment system (as deter-
20 mined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal 21 Revenue Code of 1954); and

22 “(ii) have taken an action (as certified by the 23 Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, which will
24 increase revenues and decrease benefits under the
25 State’s unemployment compensation system (herein-

1 after referred to as a 'solvency effort') by a combined
2 total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such
3 revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect
4 without such State action).

5 In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over
6 a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such
7 year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the
8 case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall
9 be 40 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applica-
10 ble percentage shall be 50 percent.

11 “(C)(i) The base year is the first year for which deferral
12 under this provision is granted. The Secretary of Labor shall
13 estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To deter-
14 mine whether a State meets the requirements of subpara-
15 graph (B)(ii), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the per-
16 centage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with
17 the application of the action referred to in subparagraph
18 (B)(ii) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such
19 benefits and taxes would have been without the application of 20 such action. In making this determination, the Secretary
21 shall deem the application of the action referred to in subpar-
22 agraph (B)(ii) to have been effective for the base year to the
23 same extent as such action is effective for the year following
24 the base year. Once a deferral is approved a State must con-
25 tinue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall

1 cable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable
2 year and each subsequent year (in a period of
3 consecutive years for each of which a credit reduc-
4 tion is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall
5 be reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

6 “(B) In the case of a State described in sub-
7 paragraph (A) which also meets the requirements

3 in lieu thereof "shall be denied".

4 (b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amend-
5 ments made by this section shall apply in the case of compen-
6 sation paid for weeks beginning on or after April 1, 1984.

7 (2) In the case of a State with respect to which the
8 Secretary of Labor has determined that State legislation is
9 required in order to comply with the amendment made by this
10 section, the amendment made by this section shall apply in 11 the case of compensation paid for weeks which begin on or 12 after April 1, 1984, and after the end of the first session of 13 the State legislature which begins after the date of the enact-
14 ment of this Act, or which began prior to the date of the 15 enactment of this Act and remained in session for at least
16 twenty-five calendar days after such date of enactment. For
17 purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "session" means
18 a regular, special, budget, or other session of a State legisla-
19 ture.

24 pensation Act of 1970 is amended to read as follows:

1 “(ii) during which he fails to actively engage in
2 seeking work, unless such individual is not actively en-
3 gaged in seeking work because such individual is, as
4 determined in accordance with State law—

5 “(I) before any court of the United States or
6 any State pursuant to a lawfully issued summons
7 to appear for jury duty (as such term may be de-
8 fined by the Secretary of Labor), or

9 “(II) hospitalized for treatment of an emer-
10 gency or a life-threatening condition (as such term
11 may be defined by such Secretary),

12 if such exemptions in clauses (I) and (II) apply to recipients
13 of regular benefits, and the State chooses to apply such ex-
14 emptions for recipients of extended benefits; or”.

15 (b) The amendment made by this section shall become
16 effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Amendment No. 516

H. R. 1900

S. RES. 91

Resolved, That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1, an Act to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and with respect to the consideration of H.R. 1900, dealing with the same subject matter. Such waiver is necessary because the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform require prompt action in order to ensure the stability of the social security system.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1900, the social security measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, the situation is this: It appears to me we are not going to be able to negotiate a compromise settlement of the jobs bill dilemma today. I regret that. I must say that all of the parties to this matter have given their best efforts and have done so conscientiously. I commend them all for it. Senator KASTEN and Senator DOLE have tried and tried repeatedly to reconcile the differences in their point of view on this matter without success. Finally, we have arrived at the place where we have to move on.

This in no way signals that we are not going to pass a jobs bill. We are going to pass a jobs bill if it is humanly possible for that to be done. But there is a cloture motion filed against further debate on the jobs bill that will not mature until Friday. In my judgment, there was simply no reason for us to sit here in quorum calls and what appeared to be endless efforts to negotiate a settlement on this matter until Friday. I think we can make good use of the time between now and Friday, 1 hour after we convene, by considering aspects of the social security bill and perhaps even passing it. I hope we can pass it.

On Friday, the cloture motion on the jobs bill will occur as the pending business. If cloture is invoked, we shall be back on the jobs bill, whether we finish social security or not. I hope we have finished social security and we can continue then with the jobs bill in an orderly way.

The Senate should be on notice, Mr. President, of the strong possibility of a Saturday session.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. On behalf of Mr. MOYNIHAN, I make the following unanimous-consent request: I ask unanimous consent that floor privileges be granted during the disposition of the pending social security measure to Dr. John Hambor, Director of the Division of Economic Research in Office of Research & Statistics, Social Security Administration. He is serving as a legislative fellow in the office of Senator MOYNIHAN at this time. It is a bit of an unusual request, but I hope the Senate will grant it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I express my appreciation to the minority leader for his courtesy in this matter and to the Senate. Dr. Hambor is a respected authority on the issues of fact that will come before the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BUDGET ACT WAIVER

Mr. BAKER. I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate S. Res. 91, a budget waiver with respect to consideration of S. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state it.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A Senate resolution (S. Res. 91) waiving section 303(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 with respect to the consideration of S. 1.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the budget resolution waiver.

The resolution (S. Res. 91) was agreed to as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The Senate continued with the consideration of H.R. 1900.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 67

(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 516.)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send to the desk a Finance Committee amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 67.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert in lieu thereof:

TITLE I—SOCIAL SECURITY

PART A—CHANGES IN COVERAGE

COVERAGE OF NEWLY HIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 101. (a)(1) Section 210(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(5) Service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States, if such service—

"(A) would not be included in the term 'employment' for purposes of this subsection by reason of the provisions of paragraph (5) or (6) of this subsection as in effect on January 1, 1983, and

"(B) is performed by an individual who has been continuously in the employ of the United States or an instrumentality thereof (including, solely for purposes of this paragraph, the receipt of benefits under the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or any other benefits (based upon service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government or members of the Uniformed Services as being 'in the employ' of the United States) since December 31, 1983 (and for this purpose an individual who returns to the performance of such service after a separation from such service shall nevertheless be considered upon such return as having been continuously in the employ of the United States or an instrumentality thereof, regardless of whether the period of such separation began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, if the period of such separation does not exceed 365 days); except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to—

"(i) service performed as the President or Vice President of the United States,

"(ii) service performed as a Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner of or to the Congress,

"(iii) service performed as the Commissioner of Social Security, or

"(iv) any other service in the legislative branch of the Federal Government if such service is performed by an individual who, on December 31, 1983, is not subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code.

"(6) Service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States if such service is performed—

"(A) in a penal institution of the United States by an inmate thereof;

"(B) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the Federal Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or a medical or dental resident in training; or

"(C) by any individual as an employee serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, earthquake, flood, or other similar emergency."

(2) Section 210(p) of such Act is amended by striking out "provisions of—" and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof "provisions of subsection (a)(5)."

(b)(1) Section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(5) service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States, if such service—

"(A) would not be included in the term 'employment' for purposes of this subsection by reason of the provisions of paragraph (5) or (6) of this subsection as in effect on January 1, 1983, and

"(B) is performed by an individual who has been continuously in the employ of the United States or an instrumentality thereof (including, solely for purposes of this paragraph, the receipt of benefits under the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, or any other benefits (based upon service as an employee) under another retirement system established by a law of the United States for employees of the Federal Government or members of the Uniformed Services as being 'in the employ' of the United States) since December 31, 1983 (and for this purpose an individual who returns to the performance of such service after a separation from such service shall nevertheless be considered upon such return as having been continuously in the employ of the United States or an instrumentality thereof, regardless of whether the period of such separation began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, if the period of such separation does not exceed 365 days); except that this paragraph shall not apply with respect to—

"(i) service performed as the President or Vice President of the United States,

"(ii) service performed as a Member, Delegate, or Resident Commissioner of or to the Congress,

"(iii) service performed as the Commissioner of Social Security, or

"(iv) any other service in the legislative branch of the Federal Government if such service is performed by an individual who, on December 31, 1983, is not subject to subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code;

"(6) service performed in the employ of the United States or any instrumentality of the United States if such service is performed—

"(A) in a penal institution of the United States by an inmate thereof;

"(B) by any individual as an employee included under section 5351(2) of title 5, United States Code (relating to certain interns, student nurses, and other student employees of hospitals of the Federal Government), other than as a medical or dental intern or a medical or dental resident in training; or

"(C) by any individual as an employee serving on a temporary basis in case of fire, storm, earthquake, flood, or other similar emergency;"

(2) Section 3121(u)(1) of such Code is amended to read as follows:

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101(b) and 3111(b), subsection (b) shall be applied without regard to paragraph (5) thereof."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

(d) Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal Retirement System of current and retired Federal employees and their families.

COVERAGE OF EMPLOYEES OF NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

SEC. 102. (a) Section 210(a)(8) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out subparagraph (B) thereof and by striking out "(A)" after "(8)".

(b)(1) Section 3121(b)(8) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out subparagraph (B) thereof and by striking out "(A)" after "(8)".

(2) Subsection (k) of section 3121 of such Code is repealed.

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

(d) Notwithstanding any provision of section 3121(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or any other provision of law) the period for which a certificate is in effect under such section may not be terminated on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

DURATION OF AGREEMENT FOR COVERAGE OF STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES

SEC. 103. (a) Subsection (g) of section 218 of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"Duration of Agreement

"(g) No agreement under this section may be terminated, in its entirety or with respect to any coverage group, on or after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any agreement in effect under section 218 of the Social Security Act on the date of the enactment of this Act, without regard to whether a notice of termination was in effect on such date, and to any agreement or modification thereof which may become effective under such section 218 after that date.

EXCLUSION OF SERVICES PERFORMED BY MEMBERS OF CERTAIN RELIGIOUS SECTS

SEC. 104. (a) Section 3121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(v) MEMBERS OF CERTAIN RELIGIOUS FAITHS.—

"(1) EXEMPTION.—Any individual may file an application (in such form and manner, and with such official, as may be prescribed by regulations under this chapter) for an exemption from the tax imposed by this chapter with respect to wages paid to such individual by an employer who is exempt from the tax imposed under section 1401 by reason of an exemption granted under section 1402(g), if such individual is a member of a recognized religious sect or division thereof and is an adherent of established tenets or teachings of such sect or division by reason of which he is conscientiously opposed to acceptance of the benefits of any private or public insurance which makes payments in the event of death, disability, old-age, or retirement or makes payments toward the cost of, or provides services for, medical care (including the benefits of any insurance system established by the Social Security Act). Such exemption may be granted only if the application contains or is accompanied by—

"(A) such evidence of such individual's membership in, and adherence to the tenets or teachings of the sect or division thereof as the Secretary may require for purposes of determining such individual's compliance with the preceding sentence, and

"(B) his waiver of all benefits and other payments under titles II and XVIII of the Social Security Act on the basis of his wages and self-employment income as well as all such benefits and other payments to him on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of any other person, and only if the Secretary of Health and Human Services finds that—

"(i) such sect or division thereof has the established tenets or teachings referred to in the preceding sentence,

"(ii) it is the practice, and has been for a period of time which he deems to be substantial, for members of such sect or division thereof to make provision for their dependent members which in his judgment is reasonable in view of their general level of living, and

"(iii) such sect or division thereof has been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

An exemption may not be granted to any individual if any benefit or other payment referred to in subparagraph (B) became payable for, but for section 203 or 222(b) of the Social Security Act, would have become payable) at or before the time of the filing of such waiver.

"(2) PERIOD FOR WHICH EXEMPTION EFFECTIVE.—An exemption granted to any individual pursuant to this subsection shall apply with respect to all taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983, except that such exemption shall not apply for any calendar year—

"(A) beginning (i) before the calendar year in which such individual first met the requirements of the first sentence of paragraph (1), or (ii) before the time as of which the Secretary of Health and Human Services finds that the sect or division thereof of which such individual is a member met the requirements of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1), or

"(B) ending (i) after the time such individual ceases to meet the requirements of the first sentence of paragraph (1), or (ii) after the time as of which the Secretary of Health and Human Services finds that the sect or division thereof of which he is a member ceases to meet the requirements of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1)."

(b) Section 210(a) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (19);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(21) Service performed, in the employ of an employer who is exempt from the tax imposed under section 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 by reason of an exemption granted under section 1402(g) of such Code, by an individual with respect to whom an exemption has been granted (and is applicable) under section 3121(v) of such Code."

(c) Section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (19);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (20) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(21) service performed, in the employ of an employer who is exempt from the tax imposed under section 1401 by reason of an exemption granted under section 1402(g), by an individual with respect to whom an exemption has been granted (and is applicable) under subsection (v) of this section."

(d) Section 202(v) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "or 3121(v)" after "1402(g)" each place it appears.

(e) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Part B—Changes in Benefits

SHIFT OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS TO CALENDAR YEAR BASIS

SEC. 111. (a)(1) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

(2) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(iii) of such Act is amended by striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof "November".

(3) Section 215(i)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by striking out "May" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "November".

(4) Section 203(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

(5) Section 230(a) of such Act is amended by striking out "June" and inserting in lieu thereof "December".

(6) Section 215(i)(2) of such Act as in effect in December 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provisions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amended by striking out "June" in subparagraph (A)(ii) and inserting in lieu thereof "December", and by striking out "May" each place it appears in subparagraph (B) and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "November".

(7) Section 202(m) of such Act (as it applies in certain cases by reason of section 2 of Public Law 97-123) is amended by striking out "May" and inserting in lieu thereof "November".

(8) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years after 1982.

(b)(1) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30", and by striking out "1974" and inserting in lieu thereof "1982".

(2) Section 215(i)(1)(A) of such Act as in effect in December 1978, and as applied in certain cases under the provisions of such Act as in effect after December 1978, is amended by striking out "March 31" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to cost-of-living increases determined under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for years after 1983.

(c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting " , and as amended by section 201 (a)(6) and (b)(2) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983," after "as in effect in December 1978".

(d) Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in section 215(i) of the Social Security Act, the "base quarter" (as defined in paragraph (1)(A)(i) of such section) in the calendar year 1983 shall be a "cost-of-living computation quarter" within the meaning of paragraph (1)(B) of such section (and shall be deemed to have been determined by the Secretary of Health and Human Services to be a "cost-of-living computation quarter" under paragraph (2)(A) of such section) for all of the purposes of such Act as amended by this section and by other provisions of this Act, without regard to the extent by which the Consumer Price Index has increased since the last prior cost-of-living computation quarter which was established under such paragraph (1)(B).

ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

SEC. 112. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service') of at least one year's duration, the primary insurance amount of that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.

"(B)(ii) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such computation the percentage of the individual's average indexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii). There shall then be computed (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall be reduced by an amount equal to the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (E)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance benefits are payable. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable (but only counting any such months occurring after 1956) bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the purpose of applying other provisions of this title.

"(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in this clause is—

"(I) 78.4 percent, with respect to individuals who initially become eligible for old age or disability insurance benefits, or who die (before becoming eligible for such benefits) in 1984;

"(II) 66.8 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1985;

"(III) 55.2 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1986;

"(IV) 43.6 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1987; and

"(V) 32.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1988 or thereafter.

"(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

"(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

"(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the payment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any computation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

"(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed, to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

"(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'periodic payment' includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

"(E) For purposes of subparagraph (B), the applicable fraction is—

"(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

"(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

"(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

"(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

"(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.

"(F) This paragraph shall not apply in the case of an individual who has more than 30 years of coverage (as defined in paragraph (1)(C)(ii)). In the case of an individual who has more than 24 years of coverage (as so defined), the figure '32 percent' in subparagraph (B) shall, if larger, be deemed to be—

"(i) 90 percent, in the case of an individual who has 30 or more of such years of coverage;

"(ii) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who has 29 of such years;

"(iii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who has 28 of such years;

"(iv) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who has 27 of such years;

"(v) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who has 26 of such years; and

"(vi) 40 percent, in the case of an individual who has 25 of such years."

(b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings in noncovered service of at least one year's duration, his primary insurance amount for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

"(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount (computed without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)), or

"(ii) the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (B)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment (or payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The amount of such periodic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable fraction is—

"(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

"(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

"(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

"(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

"(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.

"(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under subsection (a)(1)(C)(i)."

(c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9)(A) In the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for a periodic payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first month in which he becomes eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount has been computed without regard to either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), such individual's primary insurance amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effective with the first month of his concurrent eligibility for either such benefit and such periodic payment.

"(B) If an individual's primary insurance amount has been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it becomes necessary to recompute that primary insurance amount under this subsection—

"(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount payable with respect to such primary insurance amount (other than in the case of the individual's death), such increase shall be determined as though such primary insurance amount had initially been computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

"(ii) by reason of the individual's death, such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed without regard to (and as though it had never been computed with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

"(C) In the case of any individual whose primary insurance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount of the relevant periodic payment."

(d) Sections 202(e)(2)(B)(i) and 202(f)(3)(B)(i) of such Act are each amended by striking out "section 215(f)(5) or (6)" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 215(f)(5), 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)".

BENEFITS FOR SURVIVING DIVORCED SPOUSES AND DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS WHO REMARRY

SEC. 113. (a)(1) Section 202(e)(3) of the Social Security Act is repealed.

(2) Section 202(e)(4) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(4) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

"(A) a widow or a surviving divorced wife marries after attaining age 60, or

"(B) a disabled widow or disabled surviving divorced wife described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50,

such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred."

(b)(1) Section 202(f)(4) of such Act is repealed.

(2) Section 202(f)(5) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

"(A) a widower marries after attaining age 60, or

"(B) a disabled widower described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50,

such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred."

(c)(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is made.

DETERMINATION OF PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT FOR DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

SEC. 114. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) If a person is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of a deceased individual whose primary insurance amount would otherwise be determined under paragraph (1), the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual shall be determined, for purposes of determining the amount of the benefit under such subsection, as if such deceased individual died in the year in which the person entitled to benefits under such subsection first became eligible for such benefits or, if earlier, the year in which such deceased individual would have attained age 62 if he had not died (except that the actual year of death of such deceased individual shall be used for purposes of section 215(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II)).

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), if a person—

"(i) is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of a deceased individual, and

"(ii) was entitled to benefits under this title on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of such deceased individual in the month before the month in which such person became eligible for the benefits described in clause (i),

the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual shall be the primary insurance amount determined under the rules which would apply (but for subparagraph (A)) or the primary insurance amount determined under subparagraph (A), whichever is larger."

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to the benefits of individuals who become eligible for benefits under section 202 (e) and (f) of the Social Security Act after December 1984.

BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED SPOUSE REGARDLESS OF WHETHER FORMER SPOUSE HAS RETIRED

SEC. 115. (a) Section 202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) For purposes of determining the entitlement of a divorced wife to a benefit under this subsection and the amount of such benefit, in the case of a wife who has been divorced from her former husband for a period of not less than 24 months—

"(A) such former husband shall be deemed to be entitled to an old-age insurance benefit if he would be entitled to such a benefit if he applied therefor; and

"(B) the amount of such benefit for such divorced wife shall be determined without regard to reductions which are or would be made under section 203 on account of work performed by such former husband."

(b)(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1984.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1984, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendment unless proper application for such benefit is made.

INCREASE IN BENEFIT AMOUNT FOR DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS

SEC. 116. (a)(1) Section 202(q)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (B)(ii) and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(2) Section 202(q)(6) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(6) For purposes of this subsection, the 'reduction period' for an old-age, wife's, husband's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit is the period beginning—

"(A) in the case of an old-age or husband's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which such individual is entitled to such benefit,

"(B) in the case of a wife's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which a certificate described in paragraph (5)(A)(i) is effective, or

"(C) in the case of a widow's or widower's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which such individual is entitled to such benefit or the first day of the month in which such individual attains age 60, whichever is later, and ending with the last day of the month before the month in which such individual attains retirement age."

(3) Section 202(q)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(7) For purposes of this subsection, the 'adjusted reduction period' for an old-age, wife's, husband's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit is the reduction period prescribed in paragraph (6) for such benefit, excluding—"

(4) Paragraphs (1)(B)(i), (3)(E)(ii), and (3)(F)(ii) of section 202(q) of such Act are each amended by striking out "(6)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "(6)".

(5) Section 202(q)(3)(G) of such Act is amended by striking out "paragraph (6)(A) (or, if such paragraph does not apply, the period specified in paragraph (6)(B))" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6)".

(6) Section 202(q)(10) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "or an additional adjusted reduction period";

(B) in subparagraphs (B)(i), (C)(i), and (C)(ii), by striking out ", plus the number of months in the adjusted additional reduction period multiplied by $\frac{1}{240}$ of 1 percent"; and

(C) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out ", plus the number of months in the additional reduction period multiplied by $\frac{1}{240}$ of 1 percent".

(b)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is made.

ADJUSTMENT TO COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

SEC. 117. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III), by striking out "The increase shall be derived" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (5), the increase shall be derived".

(b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph (2) to become effective for monthly benefits payable for December 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secretary makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined trust funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which such December falls is less than 20.0 percent, be determined under paragraph (2) by substituting—

"(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such average for the second preceding calendar year (and if no increase in such wages took place, the percentage shall be deemed to be zero), for

"(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under paragraph (2), but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

"(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment would not be made under this subsection on account of the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-month period in such longer period which would have been effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

"(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as of that time.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'combined trust funds ratio' means the ratio of—

"(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any calendar year, to

"(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

"(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been determined on the basis of the substitute formula in subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding calendar year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust funds ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, the Secretary shall pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period beginning with the following December in amounts not to exceed—

"(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, according to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by which the balance in such trust funds on the date of such determination exceeds the amount necessary to effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32.0 percent for the following year; and

"(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits for each month in such 12-month period, an amount equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all benefits paid to him during all previous years were less than the amounts which would have been paid to him but for the provisions of this paragraph.

Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage increase in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title for the months in which such additional amounts are being paid.

"(F) In any case in which additional payments are made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 12-month period for which such additional benefits were made, the percentage increase under this subsection applicable to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such additional payments (as measured with respect to payments which are not subject to reduction under any other provision of this Act)."

(c) Only with respect to the determination made for January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year (for purposes of determining the increase under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for December of such year) shall be determined by using the actuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human services of the ratio of—

(1) the combined balance which will be available in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, at the close of business on December 31 of such calendar year, to

(2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of such Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

(d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "or, if greater, the percentage by which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5)," after "are increased for such month".

INCREASE IN OLD-AGE INSURANCE BENEFIT AMOUNTS ON ACCOUNT OF DELAYED RETIREMENT
SEC. 118. (a) Section 202(w)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(A) the applicable percentage (as determined under paragraph (6)) of such amount, multiplied by"

(b) Section 202(w) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the applicable percentage is—

"(A) $\frac{1}{2}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance benefit before 1979; and

"(B) $\frac{1}{4}$ of 1 percent in the case of an individual who first becomes so eligible after 1978, and before 1998;

"(C) in the case of an individual who first becomes so eligible after 1989 and before 2009, a percentage equal to the percentage in effect under this subparagraph for individuals who first became eligible in the preceding calendar year (as increased pursuant to this clause), plus $\frac{1}{100}$ of 1 percent, and

"(D) in the case of an individual who first becomes so eligible after 2008, $\frac{1}{3}$ of 1 percent."

(c)(1) Paragraphs (2)(A) and (3) of section 202(w) of such Act are each amended by striking out "age 72" and inserting in lieu thereof "age 70".

(2) The amendments made by paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to increment months in calendar years after 1983.

INCREASE IN RETIREMENT AGE

SEC. 119. (a) Section 216 of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting before subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"Retirement Age

"(a) (1) The term 'retirement age' means—
 "(A) with respect to an individual who attains the early retirement age (as defined in paragraph (2)) before January 1, 2000, 65 years of age;

"(B) with respect to an individual who attains early retirement age after December 31, 1999, and before January 1, 2012, 65 years of age plus the number of months in the age increase factor (as determined under paragraph (3)) for the year in which such individual attains early retirement age; and

"(C) with respect to an individual who attains early retirement age after December 31, 2014, 66 years of age.

"(2) The term 'early retirement age' means age 62 in the case of an old-age, wife's, or husband's benefit, and age 60 in the case of a widow's or widower's benefit.

"(3) The age increase factor for individuals who attain early retirement age in the period described in subparagraph (B) shall be equal to one-twelfth of the number of months in the period beginning with January 2000 and ending with December of the year in which the individual attains early retirement age.

(b)(1) Section 202(q)(9) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(9) The amount of the reduction for early retirement specified in paragraph (1) shall be periodically revised by the Secretary such that—

"(A) for old-age insurance benefits, wife's insurance benefits, and husband's insurance benefits, the reduction applicable to an individual entitled to such a benefit at an age not more than 3 years lower than the retirement age applicable to such individual, shall be the same as under such paragraph (1), and such reduction shall be increased by five-twelfths of 1 percent for each month below that age which is 3 years lower than the applicable retirement age; and

"(B) for widow's insurance benefits and widower's insurance benefits, the reduction for those entitled to such benefits at the earliest possible early retirement age shall be the same as specified in paragraph (1), and those for later ages shall be established by linear interpolation between the applicable reduction for such earliest possible early retirement age and a factor of unity at the applicable retirement age."

(2) Section 202(q)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "if" and inserting in lieu thereof "Subject to paragraph (9), if"

(c) The Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "age 65" or "age of 65", as the case may be, each place it appears in the following sections and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "retirement age (as defined in section 216(a))":

- (A) subsections (a), (b), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (r), and (w) of section 202,
- (B) subsections (c) and (f) of section 203,
- (C) section 211(b)(3),
- (D) subsection (f) of section 215,
- (E) subsections (h) and (i) of section 216,
- (F) section 223(a),
- (G) subsections (a), (b), (c), and (e) of section 226,
- (H) section 1811,
- (I) section 1818(a)(1),
- (J) section 1836(2),
- (K) section 1837,
- (L) subsections (c) and (f) of section 1839,
- (M) section 1838,
- (N) section 1844(a), and
- (O) section 1876(a)(5);

(2) by striking out "age sixty-five" in section 203(c) and inserting in lieu thereof "retirement age (as defined in section 216(a))"; and

(3) by striking out "age of sixty-five" in section 223(a) and inserting in lieu thereof "retirement age (as defined in section 216(a))".

ADJUSTMENTS IN OASDI BENEFIT FORMULA

SEC. 120. (a) Section 215(a)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "90 percent" in clause (i), "32 percent" in clause (ii), and "15 percent" in clause (iii) and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "the applicable percentage (determined under paragraph (8))".

(b) The first sentence of section 215(a)(7)(B) of such Act (as added by section 113(a) of this Act) is amended by striking out "61 percent" and inserting in lieu thereof "the applicable percentage as determined under paragraph (8)".

(c) Section 215(a) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof (after the new paragraph added by section 113 of this Act) the following new paragraph:

"(8) The 'applicable percentages' for purposes of clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of paragraph (1)(A), and the 'applicable percentage' for purposes of the first sentence of paragraph (7)(B), shall be determined as follows:

(b) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to individuals who first become eligible for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

LIMITATION ON PAYMENTS TO PRISONERS

SEC. 123. (a) Section 202 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"Suspension of Benefits for Inmates of Penal Institutions

"(x)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, no monthly benefits shall be paid under this section or under section

223 to any individual for any month during which such individual is confined in a jail, prison, or other penal institution or correctional facility, pursuant to his conviction of an offense which constituted a felony under applicable law.

"(2) Benefits which would be payable to any individual (other than a confined individual to whom benefits are not payable by reason of paragraph (1)) under this title on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of such a confined individual but for the provisions of paragraph (1), shall be payable as though such confined individual were receiving such benefits.

"(3) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 552a of title 5, United States Code, or any other provision of Federal or State law, any agency of the United States Government or of any State (or political subdivision thereof) shall make available to the Secretary, upon written request, the name and social security account number of any individual who is confined in a jail, prison, or other penal institution or correctional facility under the jurisdiction of such agency, pursuant to his conviction of an offense which constituted a felony under applicable law, which the Secretary may require to carry out the provisions of this subsection."

(c) The amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply with respect to monthly benefits payable for months beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 124. (a) Section 202(t)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title (but subject to subparagraphs (B) through (D) of this paragraph), no monthly benefit shall be paid under this section or section 223 for any month to any individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States if such individual is outside the United States.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, an individual shall be considered to be outside the United States in any month only if such month occurs—

"(i) after the sixth consecutive calendar month during all of which (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of information furnished to him by the Attorney General or information which otherwise comes to his attention) such individual is outside the United States, and

"(ii) prior to the first month thereafter during all of which such individual has been in the United States; but in applying the preceding provisions of this subparagraph an individual who has been outside the United States for any period of 30 consecutive days shall be treated as remaining outside the United States until he has been in the United States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

"(C)(i) An individual who is otherwise prevented by subparagraph (A) from receiving benefits under this title shall nevertheless be paid such benefits, as though such subparagraph were inapplicable, until the total amount of such benefits (excluding amounts withheld from such benefits under section 1441 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) equals the total amount of the taxes payable under sections 3101 and 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or the corresponding provisions of prior law) with respect to the wages and self-employment income on which such benefits are based (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of such wages and self-employment income) plus interest (as determined under clause (iii)).

"(ii) In determining the total amount of benefits payable to an individual under clause (i) with respect to the wages and self-employment income of any individual, the Secretary shall take into account all benefits paid before such determination is made on the basis of such wages and self-employment income (wherever paid).

"(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, interest on taxes payable under sections 3101 and 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or corresponding provisions of prior law) shall be compounded annually from July 1 of the year in which such taxes were payable only until the last day of the year preceding the year in which the individual on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income benefits are to be paid attains age 62, becomes disabled, or dies, whichever occurs first, at a rate of 3.0 percent for the period after 1936 and before 1951, and, for each year after 1950, at a rate equal to the average of the twelve monthly interest rates determined under section 201 for such year.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'United States' (when used in either a geographical or political sense) means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and any other territory or possession of the United States."

(b) Section 202(t)(2) of such Act is repealed.

(c) Section 202(t)(3) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(3) Paragraph (1) shall not apply—

"(A) in any case where its application would be contrary to any treaty obligation of the United States in effect on the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, or

"(B) to individuals who are citizens or residents of a country with which the United States has concluded an international social security agreement pursuant to section 233, unless otherwise provided by such agreement."

(d) Section 202(t)(4) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B);

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C); and

(3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (C) (as so redesignated) and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(e) The heading of section 202(t) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Prohibition Against Payment of Benefits to Aliens Not Permanent Residents".

(f)(1) The amendments made by the preceding subsections shall apply with respect to any individual who initially becomes eligible for benefits under section 202 or 223 of the Social Security Act after December 31, 1984.

(2) Section 202(t) of the Social Security Act (as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of this Act) shall apply with respect to individuals who are eligible for benefits under section 202 or 223 of such Act before January 1, 1985.

REDUCTION OF COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE IF TRUST FUNDS RATIO IS BELOW 20 PERCENT AND DECLINING

SEC. 125. (a) Section 215(i) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) On or before July 1 of each calendar year after 1983, the Secretary shall determine whether the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar year will be—

“(i) less than 20.0 percent; and
 “(ii) less than the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following the year in which such determination is made.

“(B) If the Secretary finds that the OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar year will be less than each of the ratios described in clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall—

“(i) notify the Congress on or before July 1 of such calendar year that, absent a change of circumstances, it will be necessary to reduce the amount of the percentage cost-of-living increase otherwise payable under this subsection with respect to benefits for months after November of such calendar year; and

“(ii) absent a change of circumstances before such cost-of-living increase is determined that will allow the full amount of benefits otherwise payable to be paid in a timely fashion, reduce the amount of such percentage increase (but not below zero) in accordance with subparagraph (C) to the extent necessary to ensure that the OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following the calendar year in which the determination is made will not fall below the lower of—

“(I) 20.0 percent, or

“(II) the OASDI trust fund ratio for the calendar year following the calendar year in which the determination is made.

“(C) In reducing a cost-of-living percentage increase under subparagraph (B), the Secretary shall first apply such reduction to the percentage increase otherwise payable with respect to monthly benefits payable under this section that are based on a primary insurance amount of $250 or more for the month preceding such cost-of-living increase; the percentage increase applied to the primary insurance amount used to determine all other monthly benefits shall not be such as to increase such primary insurance amounts above $250. If further reduction in outgo is required, a reduction in the percentage increase applicable with respect to monthly benefits based on a primary insurance amount of less than $250 for such preceding month shall be made.

“(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘OASDI trust fund ratio’ shall mean, with respect to any calendar year, the ratio of—

“(i) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be equal to the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund as of the start of business on January 1 of such calendar year, taking into account any cost-of-living increase that otherwise would be made with respect to benefits paid during such year, and any actions possible to be taken under sections 201(l) and 1317(j) (relating to inter-fund borrowing) and 201 (a) and (m) (relating to normalized crediting of social security taxes), to “(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from such Trust Funds during such calendar year (other than payments of interest on, and repayments of loans from, such Trust Funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfer to such account from any such Trust Fund.

“(E) With respect to any calendar year beginning before January 1988 for which a determination is required to be made under subparagraph (A), the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar year shall be treated as exceeding the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following such calendar year if ratio of the estimated combined balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund for such second following calendar year to the amounts estimated to be paid from all such Trust Funds during such second following calendar year exceeds the ratio of the estimated balances in all such Trust Funds to estimated payments from all such Trust Funds for such first following calendar year.”

PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

SEC. 131. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENEFITS.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Part II of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to amounts specifically included in gross income) is amended by redesignating section 86 as section 87 and by inserting after section 85 the following new section:

“SEC. 86. SOCIAL SECURITY AND TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENEFITS.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income for the taxable year of any taxpayer described in subsection (b) includes social security benefits in an amount equal to the lesser of—

“(1) one-half of the social security benefits received during the taxable year, or
 “(2) one-half of the excess described in subsection (b).

“(b) TAXPAYERS TO WHOM SUBSECTION (a) APPLIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—A taxpayer is described in this subsection if—

“(A) the sum of—
 “(i) the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year, plus “(ii) one-half of the social security benefits received during the taxable year, exceeds
 “(B) the base amount.

“(2) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of this subsection, the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year shall be—

“(A) determined without regard to this section and sections 221, 911, and 931, and “(B) increased by the amount of interest of the taxpayer which is exempt from tax for the taxable year.

“(c) BASE AMOUNT.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘base amount’ means—

“(1) except as otherwise provided in this subsection, $25,000,
 “(2) $32,000, in the case of a joint return, and

“(3) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—
 “(A) is married at the close of the taxable year (within the meaning of section 143) but does not file a joint return for such year, and

“(B) does not live apart from his spouse at all times during the taxable year.

“(d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘social security benefit’ means any amount received by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to—

“(A) a monthly benefit under title II of the Social Security Act (determined without regard to section 203(i) of the Social Security Act), or

“(B) a tier 1 railroad retirement benefit.

“(2) ADJUSTMENT FOR REPAYMENTS DURING YEAR.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the amount of social security benefits received during any taxable year shall be reduced by any repayment made by the taxpayer during the taxable year of a social security benefit previously received by the taxpayer (whether or not such benefit was received during the taxable year).

“(B) DENIAL OF DEDUCTION.—(1) (but for this subparagraph) any portion of the repayments referred to in subparagraph (A) would have been allowable as a deduction for the taxable year under section 165, such portion shall be allowable as a deduction only to the extent it exceeds the social security benefits received by the taxpayer during the taxable year (and not repaid during such taxable year).

“(3) TIER 1 RAILROAD RETIREMENT BENEFIT.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term ‘tier 1 railroad retirement benefit’ means a monthly benefit under section 31(a), 4(a), or 4(f) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974.

“(e) LIMITATION ON AMOUNT INCLUDED WHERE TAXPAYER RECEIVES LUMP-SUM PAYMENT.—

“(1) LIMITATION.—If—

“(A) any portion of a lump-sum payment of social security benefits received during the taxable year is attributable to prior taxable years, and

“(B) the taxpayer makes an election under this subsection for the taxable year, then the amount included in gross income under this section for the taxable year by reason of the receipt of such portion shall not exceed the sum of the increases in gross income under this chapter for prior taxable years which would result solely from taking into account such portion in the taxable years to which it is attributable.

“(2) SPECIAL RULES.—

“(A) YEAR TO WHICH BENEFIT ATTRIBUTABLE.—For purposes of this subsection, a social security benefit is attributable to a taxable year if the generally applicable payment date for such benefit occurred during such taxable year.

“(B) ELECTION.—An election under this subsection shall be made at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe. Such election, once made, may be revoked only with the consent of the Secretary.

“(f) TREATMENT AS PENSION OR ANNUITY FOR CERTAIN PURPOSES.—For purposes of—

“(1) section 43(c)(2) (defining earned income),

“(2) section 219(f)(1) (defining compensation),

“(3) section 221(b)(2) (defining earned income), and

“(4) section 911(b)(1) (defining foreign earned income),

any social security benefit shall be treated as an amount received as a pension or annuity.”

(b) INFORMATION REPORTING.—Subpart B of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 of such Code (relating to information concerning transactions with other persons) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“SEC. 6050F. RETURNS RELATING TO SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.

“(a) REQUIREMENT OF REPORTING.—The appropriate Federal official shall make a return, according to the forms and regulations prescribed by the Secretary, setting forth—

“(1) the—

“(A) aggregate amount of social security benefits paid with respect to any individual during any calendar year, and

“(B) aggregate amount of social security benefits repaid by such individual during such calendar year, and

“(2) the name and address of such individual.

“(b) STATEMENTS TO BE FURNISHED TO INDIVIDUALS WITH RESPECT TO WHOM INFORMATION IS FURNISHED.—Every person making a return under subsection (a) shall furnish to each individual whose name is set forth in such return a written statement showing—

"(1) the name of the agency making the payments, and

"(2) the aggregate amount of payments, of repayments, and of reductions, with respect to the individual as shown on such return.

The written statement required under the preceding sentence shall be furnished to the individual on or before January 31 of the year following the calendar year for which the return under subsection (a) was made.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) APPROPRIATE FEDERAL OFFICIAL.—The term 'appropriate Federal official' means—

"(A) the Secretary of Health and Human Services in the case of social security benefits described in section 86(d)(1)(A), and

"(B) the Railroad Retirement Board in the case of social security benefits described in section 86(d)(1)(B).

"(2) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—The term 'social security benefit' has the meaning given to such term by section 86(d)(1)."

(c) TREATMENT OF NONRESIDENT ALIENS.—

(1) AMENDMENT OF SECTION 871(a).—Subsection (a) of section 871 of such Code (relating to tax on income not connected with United States business) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—For purposes of this section and section 1441—

"(A) one-half of any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d)) shall be included in gross income, and

"(B) section 86 shall not apply."

(2) DISCLOSURE OF INFORMATION TO SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION OR RAILROAD RETIREMENT BOARD.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (h) of section 6103 of such Code (relating to disclosure to certain Federal officers and employees for purposes of tax administration, etc.) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—Upon written request, the Secretary may disclose available return information from the master files of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the address and status of an individual as a nonresident alien or as a citizen or resident of the United States to the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board for purposes of carrying out its responsibilities under section 1441 with respect to social security benefits (as defined in section 86(d))."

(B) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (4) of section 6103(p) of such Code (relating to safeguards) is amended by inserting "(h)(6)," after "(h)(2)," in the material preceding subparagraph (A) and in subparagraph (F)(ii) thereof.

(d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS TREATED AS UNITED STATES SOURCED.—Subsection (a) of section 861 of such Code (relating to income from sources within the United States) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—Any social security benefit (as defined in section 86(d))."

(e) TRANSFERS TO TRUST FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There are hereby appropriated to each payor fund amounts equivalent to the aggregate increase in tax liabilities under chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 which is attributable to the application of sections 86 and 871(a)(3) of such Code (as added by this section) to payments from such payor fund.

(2) TRANSFERS.—The amounts appropriated by paragraph (1) to any payor fund shall be transferred from time to time (but not less frequently than quarterly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury of the amounts referred to in such paragraph. Any such quarterly payment shall be made on the first day of such quarter and shall take into account social security benefits estimated to be received during such quarter. Proper adjustments shall be made in the amounts subsequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in excess of or less than the amounts required to be transferred.

(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) PAYOR FUND.—The term "payor fund" means any trust fund or account from which payments of social security benefits are made.

(B) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS.—The term "social security benefits" has the meaning given such term by section 86(d)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(4) REPORTS.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall submit annual reports to the Congress and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Railroad Retirement Board on—

(A) the transfers made under this subsection during the year, and the methodology used in determining the amount of such transfers and the funds or account to which made, and

(B) the anticipated operation of this subsection during the next 5 years.

(f) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subsection (a) of section 85 of such Code is amended by striking out "this section," and inserting in lieu thereof "this section, section 86."

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 128(c)(3) of such Code (as in effect for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1984) is amended by striking out "85," and inserting in lieu thereof "85, 86."

(3) The table of sections for part II of subchapter B of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking out the item relating to section 86 and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 86. Social security and tier 1 railroad retirement benefits.

"Sec. 87. Alcohol fuel credit."

(4) The table of sections for subpart B of part III of subchapter A of chapter 61 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 6050F. Returns relating to social security benefits."

(g) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending after such date.

(2) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN LUMP-SUM PAYMENTS RECEIVED AFTER DECEMBER 31, 1983.—The amendments made by this section shall not apply to any portion of a lump-sum payment of social security benefits (as defined in section 86(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) received after December 31, 1983, if the generally applicable payment date for such portion was before January 1, 1984.

SEC. 132. ACCELERATION OF INCREASES IN FICA TAXES; 1984 EMPLOYEE TAX CREDIT.

(a) ACCELERATION OF INCREASES IN FICA TAXES.—

(1) TAX ON EMPLOYEES.—Subsection (a) of section 3101 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to rate of tax on employees for old-age, survivors, and disability insurance) is amended by striking out paragraphs (1) through (7) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"In cases of The rate shall be: wages received during:

1984, 1985, 1986, or 1987..... 5.7 percent

(b) 1984 EMPLOYEE TAX CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 25 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 3510. CREDIT FOR INCREASED SOCIAL SECURITY EMPLOYEE TAXES AND RAILROAD RETIREMENT TIER 1 EMPLOYEE TAXES IMPOSED DURING 1984.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—There shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by section 3101(a) on wages received during 1984 an amount equal to 1/10 of 1 percent of the wages so received.

"(b) TIME CREDIT ALLOWED.—The credit under subsection (a) shall be taken into account in determining the amount of the tax deducted under section 3102(a).

"(c) WAGES.—For purposes of this section, the term 'wages' has the meaning given to such term by section 3121(a).

"(d) APPLICATION TO AGREEMENTS UNDER SECTION 218 OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT.—For purposes of determining amounts equivalent to the tax imposed by section 3101(a) with respect to remuneration which—

"(1) is covered by an agreement under section 218 of the Social Security Act, and

"(2) is paid during 1984,

the credit allowed by subsection (a) shall be taken into account. A similar rule shall also apply in the case of an agreement under section 3121(f).

"(e) CREDIT AGAINST RAILROAD RETIREMENT EMPLOYEE AND EMPLOYEE REPRESENTATIVE TAXES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be allowed as a credit against the taxes imposed by sections 3201(a) and 3211(a) on compensation paid during 1984 and subject to such taxes an amount equal to 1/10 of 1 percent of such compensation.

"(2) TIME CREDIT ALLOWED.—The credit under paragraph (1) shall be taken into account in determining the amount of the tax deducted under section 3202(a) (or the amount of the tax under section 3211(a)).

"(3) COMPENSATION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'compensation' has the meaning given to such term by section 3231(e).

"(f) COORDINATION WITH SECTION 6413(c).—For purposes of subsection (c) of section 6413, in determining the amount of the tax imposed by section 3101 or 3201, any credit allowed by this section shall be taken into account."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 25 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new item:

"Sec. 3510. Credit for increased social security employee taxes and railroad retirement tier 1 employee taxes imposed during 1984."

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to remuneration paid during 1984.

(4) DEPOSITS IN SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS.—For purposes of subsection (h) of section 218 of the Social Security Act (relating to deposits in social security trust funds of amounts received under section 218 agreements), amounts allowed as a credit pursuant to subsection (d) of section 3510 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to credit for remuneration paid during 1984 which is covered under an agreement under section 218 of the Social Security Act) shall be treated as amounts received under such an agreement.

(5) DEPOSITS IN RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACCOUNT.—For purposes of subsection (a) of section 15 of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974, amounts allowed as a credit under subsection (e) of section 3510 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall be treated as amounts covered into the Treasury under subsection (a) of section 3201 of such Code.

(6) STATEMENTS FURNISHED TO EMPLOYEES.—Any written statement which is required to be furnished to an employee under section 6051(a) with respect to remuneration paid during 1984 shall include—

(A) the total amount which would have been deducted and withheld as a tax under section 3101 if the credit allowable under section 3510 had not been taken into account, and

(B) the amount of the credit allowable under section 3510.

SEC. 133. TAXES ON SELF-EMPLOYMENT INCOME; CREDIT AGAINST SUCH TAXES.

(a) INCREASE IN RATES.—Subsections (a) and (b) of section 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to rates of tax on self-employment income) are amended to read as follows:

“(a) OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE.—In addition to other taxes, there shall be imposed for each taxable year, on the self-employment income of every individual, a tax equal to the following percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year:

“In the case of a taxable year—

| Beginning after: | And before: | Percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|

| December 31, 1989..... | | 12.40 |

“(b) HOSPITAL INSURANCE.—In addition to the tax imposed by the preceding subsection, there shall be imposed for each taxable year, on the self-employment income of every individual, a tax equal to the following percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year:

“In the case of a taxable year—

| Beginning after: | And before: | Percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1983..... | January 1, 1985..... | 2.60 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1986..... | 2.70 |
| December 31, 1985..... | | 2.90.” |

(b) CREDIT AGAINST SELF-EMPLOYMENT TAXES.—Section 1401 of such Code is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

“(c) CREDIT AGAINST TAXES IMPOSED BY THIS SECTION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—There shall be allowed as a credit against the taxes imposed by this section for any taxable year an amount equal to the applicable percentage of the self-employment income of the individual for such taxable year.

“(2) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the applicable percentage shall be determined in accordance with the following table:

| taxable years beginning in: | The applicable percentage is: |
|-----------------------------|-------------------------------|
| 1984..... | 2.9 |
| 1985..... | 2.5 |
| 1986..... | 2.2 |
| 1987, 1988, or 1989..... | 2.1 |
| 1990 or thereafter..... | 2.3.” |

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

PART D—MISCELLANEOUS FINANCING PROVISIONS

(a) Section 201(b)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out clauses (K) through (M) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: “(K) 1.65 per centum of the wages (as so defined) paid after December 31, 1981, and before January 1, 1984, and so reported, (L) 1 per centum of the wages (as so defined) paid after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 1988, and so reported, (M) 1.06 per centum of the wages (as so defined) paid after December 31, 1987, and before January 1, 1990, and so reported, (N) 1.20 per centum of the wages (as so defined) paid after December 31, 1989, and before January 1, 2000, and (O) 1.30 per centum of the wages (as so defined) paid after December 31, 1999, and so reported.”

(b) Section 201(b)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out clauses (K) through (M) and inserting in lieu thereof the following: “(K) 1.2375 per centum of the amount of self-employment income (as so defined) so reported for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1981, and before January 1, 1984, (L) 1 per centum of the amount of self-employment income (as so defined) so reported for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 1988, (M) 1.06 per centum of the amount of self-employment income (as so defined) so reported for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1987, and before January 1, 1990, (N) 1.20 per centum of the self-employment income (as so defined) so reported for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1989, and before January 1, 2000, and (O) 1.30 per centum of the amount of self-employment income (as so defined) so reported for any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1999.”

INTERFUND BORROWING EXTENSION

SEC. 142. (a)(1) Section 201(l)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(A) by striking out “January 1983” and inserting in lieu thereof “January 1988”; and

(B) by inserting after “or” the second place it appears “, subject to paragraph (5).”

(2) (A) Section 201(l)(2) of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out “from time to time” and inserting in lieu thereof “on the last day of each month after such loan is made”;

(ii) by striking out “interest” and inserting in lieu thereof “the total interest accrued to such day”; and

(iii) by striking out “the loan were an investment under subsection (d)” and inserting in lieu thereof “such amount had remained in the Depository Account established with respect to such lending Trust Fund under subsection (d) or section 1817(c).”

(B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall apply with respect to months beginning more than thirty days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(3) Section 201(l)(3) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting “(A)” after the paragraph designation; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

“(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to the Federal Old Age and Survivors Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the OASDI trust fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he shall transfer from the borrowing Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund an amount that—

“(I) together with any amounts transferred from another borrowing Trust Fund under this paragraph for such year, will reduce the OASDI trust fund ratio to 15 percent; and

“(II) does not exceed the outstanding balance of such loan.

“(ii) Amounts required to be transferred under clause (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of the year succeeding the year in which the determination described in clause (i) is made.

“(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘OASDI trust fund ratio’ means, with respect to any calendar year, the ratio of—

“(I) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to either such Fund from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the last day of such calendar year, to

“(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar year following such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201 (other than payments of interest on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)), but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from that Account.

“(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under paragraph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983) shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event no later than December 31, 1989.

“(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987, and before January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer each month to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund from any Trust Fund with any amount outstanding on a loan made from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1) an amount equal to one twenty-fourth of the amount owed to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund by such Trust Fund at the beginning of such period (plus the interest accrued on the outstanding balance of such loan during such month).”

(4) Section 201(l) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(5)(A) No amounts may be borrowed from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1) during any month if the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio for such month is less than 10 percent.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'Hospital Insurance trust fund ratio' means, with respect to any month, the ratio of—

"(i) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to such Trust Fund under this subsection, as of the last day of the second month preceding such month, to

"(ii) the amount obtained by multiplying by twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund during the month for which such ratio is to be determined (other than payments of interest on, or repayments of loans from another Trust Fund under this subsection), and reducing the amount of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfer into the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund from that Account."

(b)(1) Section 1817(j)(1) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "January 1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "January 1988"; and (B) by inserting ", subject to paragraph (5), after "may".

(2)(A) Section 1817(j)(2) of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out "from time to time" and inserting in lieu thereof "on the last day of each month after such loan is made";

(ii) by striking out "interest" and inserting in lieu thereof "the total interest accrued to such day"; and

(iii) by striking out "the loan were an investment under subsection (c)" and inserting in lieu thereof "such amount had remained in the Depository Account established with respect to such lending Trust Fund under section 201(d)".

(B) The amendment made by this paragraph shall apply with respect to months beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(3) Section 1817(j)(3) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "(A)" after the paragraph designation; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraphs:

"(B)(i) If on the last day of any year after a loan has been made under paragraph (1) by the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund to the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, the Managing Trustee determines that the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio exceeds 15 percent, he shall transfer from such Trust Fund to the lending trust fund an amount that—

"(I) together with any amounts transferred to another lending trust fund under this paragraph for such year, will reduce Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio to 15 percent; and

"(II) does not exceed the outstanding balance of such loan.

"(ii) Amounts required to be transferred under clause (i) shall be transferred on the last day of the first month of the year succeeding the year in which the determination described in clause (i) is made.

"(iii) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'Hospital Insurance Trust Fund ratio' means, with respect to any calendar year, the ratio of—

"(I) the balance in the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, as of the last day of such calendar year; to

"(II) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund during the calendar year following such calendar year (other than payments of interest on, and repayments of, loans from the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1)), and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into such Trust Fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

"(C)(i) The full amount of all loans made under paragraph (1) (whether made before or after January 1, 1983) shall be repaid at the earliest feasible date and in any event no later than December 31, 1989."

"(ii) For the period after December 31, 1987 and before January 1, 1990, the Managing Trustee shall transfer each month from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to any Trust Fund that is owed any amount by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund on a loan made under paragraph (1), an amount equal to 1/24 of the amount owed to such Trust Fund by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund at the beginning of such period (plus the interest accrued on the outstanding balance of such loan during such month)."

(4) Section 1817(j) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) No amounts may be loaned by the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund under paragraph (1) during any month if the OASDI trust fund ratio for such month is less than 10 percent.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'OASDI trust fund ratio' means, with respect to any month, the ratio of—

"(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(f), as of the last day of the second month preceding such month, to

"(ii) the amount obtained by multiplying by twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes authorized by section 201 (other than payments of interest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(f)), but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from that Account."

CREDITING AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO TRUST FUNDS

SEC. 143. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall take such actions as may be necessary to ensure that amounts of checks for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act which have not been presented for payment within a reasonable length of time (not to exceed twelve months) after issuance are credited to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, whichever may be the fund from which the check was issued. Amounts of any such check shall be recharged to the fund from which they were issued if payment is subsequently made on such check.

(b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Inurance Trust Fund and to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, as appropriate, such sums as may be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds in the total amounts of all currently unnegotiated benefit checks. After the amounts appropriated by this subsection have been transferred to the Trust Funds, the provisions of subsection (a) shall be applicable. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated benefit checks. The first such transfer shall be made within thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act with respect to all such unnegotiated checks as of such date of enactment.

(2) As used in paragraph (1), the term "currently unnegotiated benefit checks" means the checks issued under title II of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the enactment of this Act, which remain unnegotiated after the twelfth month following the date on which they were issued.

TRANSFER TO TRUST FUNDS FOR BENEFITS ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY SERVICE BEFORE 1957

SEC. 144. (a) Section 217(g) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS

"(g)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secretary shall determine the amount equal to the excess of—

"(A) the actuarial present value as of such date of enactment of the past and future benefit payments from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under this title and title XVIII, together with associated administrative costs, resulting from the operation of this section (other than this subsection) and section 210 of this Act as in effect before the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1950, over

"(B) any amounts previously transferred from the general fund of the Treasury to such Trust Funds pursuant to the provisions of this subsection as in effect immediately before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983. Such actuarial present value shall be based on the relevant actuarial assumptions set forth in the report of the Board of Trustees of each such Trust Fund for 1983 under sections 201(c) and 1817(b). Within thirty days after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer the amount determined under this paragraph with respect to each such Trust Fund to such Trust Fund from amounts in the general fund of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

"(2) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined under paragraph (1) with respect to each such Trust Fund in 1985 and each fifth year thereafter, as determined appropriate by the Secretary from data which becomes available to him after the date of the determination under paragraph (1) on the basis of the amount of benefits and administrative expenses actually paid from such Trust Fund under this title or title XVIII and the relevant actuarial assumptions set forth in the report of the Board of Trustees of such Trust Fund for such year under section 201(c) or 1817(b). Within 30 days after any such revision, the Secretary of the Treasury, to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts, shall transfer to such Trust Fund, from amounts in the general fund of the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or from such Trust Fund to the general fund of the Treasury, such amounts as the Secretary of the Treasury determines necessary to compensate for such revision."

PAYMENTS TO TRUST FUNDS OF AMOUNTS EQUIVALENT TO TAXES ON SERVICE IN THE UNIFORMED SERVICES PERFORMED AFTER 1956

SEC. 145. (a) Section 229(b) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to each of the Trust Funds, consisting of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, for transfer on July 1 of each calendar year to such Trust Fund from amounts in the general fund in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, an amount equal to the total of the additional amounts which would be appropriated to such Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending September 30 of such calendar year under section 201 or 1817 of this Act if the amounts of the additional wages deemed to have been paid for such calendar year by reason of subsection (a) constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. Amounts authorized to be appropriated under this subsection for transfer on July 1 of each calendar year shall be determined on the basis of estimates of the Secretary of the wages deemed to be paid for such calendar year under subsection (a); and proper adjustments shall be made in amounts authorized to be appropriated for subsequent transfer to the extent prior estimates were in excess of or were less than such wages so deemed to be paid."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years after 1983.

(c)(1) Within thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall determine the additional amounts which would have been appropriated into the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under sections 201 and 1817 of the Social Security Act, if the additional wages deemed to have been paid under section 229(a) of the Social Security Act prior to 1984 had constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and the amount of interest which would have been earned on such amounts if they had been so appropriated.

(2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, within thirty days after the date of the enactment of this Act, transfer into each such Trust Fund, from the general fund in the Treasury, an amount equal to the amount determined with respect to such Trust Fund under paragraph (1), less any amount appropriated into such Trust Fund under the provisions of section 229(b) of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the determination made under paragraph (1) with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years prior to 1984. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

(B) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined under subparagraph (A) within one year after the date of the transfer made under paragraph (1), as warranted by data which may become available to him after the date of the transfer under subparagraph (A) based upon actual benefits paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts determined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred by the Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropriate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as may be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated to such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURE

SEC. 146. (a) Section 201 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out subsections (d), (e), and (f) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

"(d) There are hereby created on the books of the Treasury of the United States an account to be known as the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository Account and an account to be known as the Disability Insurance Depository Account.

"(e) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Depository Account and that portion of the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Disability Insurance Depository Account.

"(f)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply moneys deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) in any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in the general fund of the Treasury.

"(2)(A) Moneys deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the average balance of moneys in the account for such month by the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each business day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt which are not due or callable until after the expiration of four years from the end of such month, except that 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was issued before March 4, 1971 and which may, at the option of the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued interest to the date of payment, if—

"(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at the time of his death,

"(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased individual, and

"(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the redemption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate taxes.

"(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys deposited in an account pursuant to subsection (e) whenever he determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current withdrawals from the Trust Fund which deposited such moneys, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount."

(b) Section 1817 of such Act is amended by striking out subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) There is hereby created on the books of the Treasury of the United States an account to be known as the Hospital Insurance Depository Account.

"(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Hospital Insurance Depository Account.

"(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in the general fund of the Treasury.

"(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the average balance of moneys in the account for such month by the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each business day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt which are not due or callable until after the expiration of four years from the end of such month, except that 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued interest to the date of payment, if—

"(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at the time of his death,

"(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased individual, and

"(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the redemption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate taxes.

"(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount."

(c) Section 1841 of such Act is amended by striking out subsections (c), (d), and (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new subsections:

"(c) There is hereby established on the books of the Treasury an account to be known as the Supplementary Medical Insurance Depository Account.

"(d) The Managing Trustee shall deposit that portion of the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund in the Supplementary Medical Insurance Depository Account.

"(e)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury may apply moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) in any way in which he is authorized by law to apply moneys in the general fund of the Treasury.

"(2)(A) Moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) shall be treated as indebtedness of the United States for purposes of section 1305(2) of title 31, United States Code, and shall earn interest, payable monthly, in an amount equal to the product obtained by multiplying the average balance of moneys in the account for such month by the average market yield (computed by the Managing Trustee on the basis of market quotations as of the end of each business day of such month) on all marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States then forming a part of the public debt which are not due or callable until after the expiration of four years from the end of such month, except that 'flower bonds' shall not be included in such computation.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'flower bond' means a United States Treasury bond which was issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued interest to the date of payment, if—

"(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at the time of his death,

"(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased individual, and

"(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the redemption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate taxes.

"(3) The Managing Trustee may withdraw moneys deposited in the account pursuant to subsection (d) whenever he determines that such moneys are necessary to meet current withdrawals from the Trust Fund, and the Secretary of the Treasury may sell obligations of the United States in the market in an amount not to exceed the amount of such withdrawal if he determines that such withdrawal necessitates an increase in the general fund of the Treasury by an amount not exceeding such amount."

(d)(1) No later than the date on which this section takes effect, the Secretary of the Treasury shall redeem at par all outstanding obligations of the United States issued under the Second Liberty Bond Act exclusively for purchase by the Federal Old-Age Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the "Trust Funds").

(2)(A) The Managing Trustee may sell any marketable obligation of the United States held by the Trust Funds at market price at any time and shall sell (or redeem) all "flower bonds" held by the Trust Funds on the date of enactment of this section at market price no later than the date on which this section takes effect.

(B) For purposes of this paragraph, the term "flower bond" means a United States Treasury bond which was issued before March 4, 1971, and which may, at the option of the duly constituted representatives of the estate of a deceased individual, be redeemed at par (face) value, plus accrued interest to the date of payment, if—

(i) it was owned by such deceased individual at the time of his death,

(ii) it is part of the estate of such deceased individual, and

(iii) such representatives authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to apply the entire proceeds of the redemption of such bond to the payment of Federal estate taxes.

(3) The proceeds from the redemption and sale of obligations of the United States pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be paid to the Trust Fund selling or redeeming such obligations and that portion of such proceeds which is not required to meet current withdrawals from such Trust Fund shall be deposited in the account established with respect to such Trust Fund by subsection (a), (b), or (c) of this Act.

(e) The amendments made by this section shall take effect on the first day of the first month beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

ADDITION OF PUBLIC MEMBERS TO TRUST FUND BOARDS OF TRUSTEES

SEC. 147. (a) Sections 201(c), 1817(b), and 1841(b) of the Social Security Act are each amended—

(1) by striking out the period at the end of the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and of two members of the public (both of whom may not be from the same political party), who shall be nominated by the President for a term of four years and subject to confirmation by the Senate; and

(2) by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "A member of the public serving on the Board of Trustees shall not be considered to be a fiduciary and shall not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity with respect to the Trust Funds."

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.

PAYMENT SCHEDULE BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

SEC. 148. (a) Section 218(e)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "within the thirty-day period immediately following the last day of each calendar month" and inserting in lieu thereof "in accordance with the same payment schedule as applies to payment by employers of the taxes imposed under sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954".

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to payments due on or after January 1, 1984.

NORMALIZED CREDITING OF SOCIAL SECURITY TAXES TO TRUST FUNDS

SEC. 149. (a) Section 201(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "The amounts appropriated" in the last sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in subsection (m), the amounts appropriated".

(b) Section 201 of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(m)(1) The procedures in effect on January 1, 1983, with respect to the transfer of the amounts appropriated by clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a) and the amounts appropriated by clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall apply to a calendar month unless the Secretary makes a finding under this paragraph that the OASDI trust fund ratio as of the first day of such calendar month is less than 12 percent.

"(2) If the Secretary makes the finding described in paragraph (1) with respect to a calendar month, the amounts appropriated by clauses (3) and (4) shall be transferred on the first day of such calendar month from the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, and the amounts appropriated by clauses (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall be transferred on the first day of such calendar month from the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, such amounts to be determined on the basis of estimates by the Secretary of the Treasury of the taxes, specified in clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a), to be paid to or deposited into the Treasury during such calendar month.

"(3) Proper adjustments shall be made in amounts subsequently transferred to the extent prior estimates were in excess of or were less than the taxes specified in clauses (3) and (4) of subsection (a).

"(4) All amounts transferred to either Trust Fund under paragraph (2) shall be treated by the Managing Trustee in the same manner and to the same extent as the other assets of such Trust Fund; and such Trust Fund shall pay interest to the general fund on the amount so transferred at a rate (calculated on a daily basis, and applied against the difference between the amount so transferred on such first day and the amount which would have been transferred to the Trust Fund up to that day under the procedures in effect on January 1, 1983) equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during such month (payable on the last day of such month).

"(5) For purposes of this subsection, the term 'OASDI trust fund ratio' means, with respect to any month, the ratio of—

"(A) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to either such Trust Fund from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under subsection (l), and determined without regard to amounts transferred theretofore under this subsection, as of the last day of the second month preceding such month, to

"(B) the amount obtained by multiplying by twelve the total amount which (as estimated by the Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during the month for which such ratio is to be determined for all purposes authorized by section 201 (other than payments of interest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under subsection (l)), but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from that Account."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to calendar months beginning after the date of enactment of this section and before January 1, 1988.

AMOUNTS RECEIVED UNDER CERTAIN DEFERRED COMPENSATION AND SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENTS TREATED AS WAGES FOR FICA TAXES

SEC. 150. (a)(1) Section 3121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(v) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DEFERRED COMPENSATION AND SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENTS.—

"(1) CERTAIN EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTIONS TREATED AS WAGES.—Nothing in any paragraph of subsection (a) (other than paragraph (1)) shall exclude from the term 'wages' any employer contribution—

"(A) under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k)) to the extent not included in gross income by reason of section 402(a)(8), or

"(B) under a cafeteria plan (as defined in section 125(d)) which includes an arrangement described in subparagraph (A) to the extent the employee had the right to choose cash, property, or other benefits which would be wages for purposes of this chapter.

"(2) GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—For purposes of subsection (a)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'wages' shall not include any payment to or from a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)).

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The term 'wages' shall include any amount—

"(i) deferred under a plan described in section 457(a) (at the time the services which relate to such payment were performed),

"(iii) which is treated as wages under subsection (a)(5)(E) by reason of a salary reduction agreement."

(2) Paragraph (5) of section 3121(a) of such Code (defining wages) is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (C),

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "or", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) under an annuity contract described in section 403(b), other than a payment for the purchase of such contract which is made by reason of a salary reduction agreement;"

(3) Subsection (a) of section 3121 of such Code (defining wages) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking out subparagraph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively,

(B) by striking out paragraphs (3) and (9),

(C) in paragraph (13)(A)—

(i) by inserting "or" after "death," and

(ii) by striking out "or (iii) retirement after attaining an age specified in the plan referred to in subparagraph (B) or in a pension plan of the employer," and

(D) by striking out "subparagraph (B)" in the last sentence thereof and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (A)".

(b)(1) Section 3306 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to definitions) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(r) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN DEFERRED COMPENSATION AND SALARY REDUCTION ARRANGEMENTS.—

"(1) CERTAIN EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTIONS TREATED AS WAGES.—Nothing in any paragraph of subsection (b) (other than paragraph (1)) shall exclude from the term 'wages' any employer contribution—

"(A) under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k)) to the extent not included in gross income by reason of section 402(a)(8), or

"(B) under a cafeteria plan (as defined in section 125(d)) which includes an arrangement described in subparagraph (A) to the extent the employee had the right to choose cash, property, or other benefits which would be wages for purposes of this chapter.

"(2) GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—For purposes of subsection (b)—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the term 'wages' shall not include any payment to or from a Governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)).

"(B) EXCEPTIONS.—The term 'wages' shall include any amount—

"(i) deferred under a plan described in section 457(a) (at the time the services which relate to such payment were performed),

"(ii) deferred under a plan described in subsection (e)(1), (e)(2)(D), or (e)(2)(E) of section 457, or

"(iii) which is treated as wages under subsection (b)(5)(E) by reason of a salary reduction agreement."

(2) Paragraph (5) of section 3306(b) of such Code (defining wages) is amended—

(A) by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (C),

(B) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "or", and

(C) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(E) under an annuity contract described in section 403(b), other than a payment for the purchase of such contract which is made by reason of a salary reduction agreement;"

(3) Subsection (b) of section 3306 of such Code (defining wages) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (2), by striking out subparagraph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B), (C), and (D) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively,

(B) by striking out paragraphs (3) and (8), and

(C) in paragraph (10)(A)—

(i) by inserting "or" after "death," and

(ii) by striking out "or (iii) retirement after attaining an age specified in the plan referred to in subparagraph (B) or in a pension plan of the employer,"

(4)(A) Subparagraph (A) of section 3306(b)(2) of such Code, as redesignated by paragraph (3)(A), is amended to read as follows:

"(A) sickness or accident disability (but, in the case of payments made to an employee or any of his dependents, this subparagraph shall exclude from the term 'wages' only payments which are received under a workman's compensation law), or"

(B) Subsection (b) of section 3306 of such Code (defining wages) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new flush sentence:

"Except as otherwise provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, any third party which makes a payment included in wages solely by reason of the parenthetical matter contained in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2) shall be treated for purposes of this chapter and chapter 22 as the employer with respect to such wages."

(C) Rules similar to the rules of subsections (d) and (e) of section 3 of the Act entitled "An Act to amend the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1981 to restore minimum benefits under the Social Security Act" (Public Law 97-123), approved December 29, 1981, shall apply in the administration of section 3306(b)(2)(A) of such Code (as amended by subparagraph (A)).

(c)(1) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof (as amended by this Act) the following new paragraphs:

"Nothing in any of the foregoing provisions of this section (other than subsection (a)) shall exclude from the term 'wages' any employer contribution—

"(1) under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (as defined in section 401(k)) to the extent not included in gross income by reason of section 402(a)(8), or

"(2) under a cafeteria plan (as defined in section 125(d)) which includes an arrangement described in paragraph (1) to the extent the employee had the right to choose cash, property, or other benefits which would be wages for purposes of this chapter.

"For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'wages' shall not include any payment to or from a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954); except that

"(2) the term 'wages' shall include any amount—

"(A) deferred under a plan described in section 457(a) of such Code (at the time the services which relate to such payment were performed),

"(B) deferred under a plan described in subsection (e)(1), (e)(2)(D), or (e)(2)(E) of section 457 of such Code, or

"(C) which is treated as wages under subsection (e)(5) by reason of a salary reduction agreement."

(2) Subsection (e) of section 209 of such Act is amended by adding before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: ", or (5) under an annuity contract described in section 403(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, other than a payment for the purchase of such contract which is made by reason of a salary reduction agreement;"

(3) Section 209 of such Act is amended—

(A) in subsection (b), by striking out paragraph (1) and redesignating paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) as paragraphs (1), (2), and (3), respectively,

(B) by striking out subsections (c) and (i), and

(C) in subsection (m)(1)—

(i) by inserting "or" after "death," and

(ii) by striking out "or (C) retirement after attaining an age specified in the plan referred to in paragraph (2) or in a pension plan of the employer,"

(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984.

CODIFICATION OF ROWAN DECISION WITH RESPECT TO MEALS AND LODGING

SEC. 151. (a)(1) Subsection (a) of section 3121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (defining wages) is amended by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (17), by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (18) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and by inserting after paragraph (18) the following new paragraph:

"(19) the value of any meals or lodging furnished by or on behalf of the employer if at the time of such furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such items from income under section 119."

(2) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "or" at the end of subsection (p), by striking out the period at the end of subsection (q) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and by inserting after subsection (q) the following new subsection:

"(r) The value of any meals or lodging furnished by or on behalf of the employer if at the time of such furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such items from income under section 119 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954."

(b)(1) Subsection (a) of section 3121 of such Code is amended by inserting after paragraph (19) (as added by subsection (a) of this section) the following new sentence: "Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chapter 24 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an exclusion from 'wages' as used in such chapter shall be construed to require a similar exclusion from 'wages' in the regulations prescribed for purposes of this chapter."

(2) Section 209 of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting immediately after subsection (r) (as added by subsection (a) of this section) the following new sentence:

"Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chapter 24 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an exclusion from 'wages' as used in such chapter shall be construed to require a similar exclusion from 'wages' in the regulations prescribed for purposes of this title."

(c) Subsection (b) of section 3306 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (defining wages) is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (12),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (13) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or",

(3) by adding immediately after paragraph (13) the following new paragraph:

"(14) the value of any meals or lodging furnished by or on behalf of the employer if at the time of such furnishing it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be able to exclude such items from income under section 119.", and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new flush sentence:

"Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chapter 24 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an exclusion from 'wages' as used in such chapter shall be construed to require a similar exclusion from 'wages' in the regulations prescribed for purposes of this chapter."

(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984.

TREATMENT OF CONTRIBUTIONS UNDER SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSIONS

SEC. 152. (a) Subparagraph (D) of section 3121(a)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (defining wages) is amended by striking out "section 219" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 219(b)(2)".

(b) Subsection (e) of section 209 of the Social Security Act, as amended by this Act, is amended by striking out the semicolon at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "; or (6) under a simplified employee pension (as defined in section 408(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) if, at the time of the payment, it is reasonable to believe that the employee will be entitled to a deduction under section 219(b)(2) of such Code for such payment";

(c) Subparagraph (D) of section 3306(b)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out "section 219" and inserting in lieu thereof "section 219(b)(2)".

(d)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

(2) The amendments made by subsection (c) shall apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1984.

TITLE II—SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME

INCREASE IN BENEFIT STANDARD

SEC. 201. (a) Section 1617 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) Effective July 1, 1983—

"(1) each of the dollar amounts in effect under subsections (a)(1)(A) and (b)(1) of section 1611, as previously increased under this section, shall be increased by $240 (and the dollar amount in effect under subsection (a)(1)(A) of Public Law 93-66, as previously so increased, shall be increased by $120); and

"(2) each of the dollar amounts in effect under subsections (a)(2)(A) and (b)(2) of section 1611, as previously increased under this section, shall be increased by $360."

(b) Section 1617(b) of such Act is amended by striking out "this section" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a) of (his section)".

ADJUSTMENT IN FEDERAL SSI PASS-THROUGH PROVISIONS

SEC. 202. Section 1618 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

(d)(1) For any particular month after March 1983, a State shall be deemed to have met the requirements of paragraph (4) of subsection (a) if—

"(A) the combined level of its supplementary payments (to recipients of the type involved) and the amounts payable under section 1611(b) (to such recipients), for that particular month, is not less than—

"(B) the combined level of its supplementary payments (to recipients of the type included) and the amounts payable under section 1611(b) (to such recipients), for March 1983, increased by the amount of all cost-of-living adjustments under section 1617 (and any other benefits increases under this title) which have occurred after March 1983 and before that particular month.

"(2) In determining the amount of any increase in the combined level involved under paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection, any portion of such amount which would otherwise be attributable to the increase under section 1617(c) shall be deemed instead to be equal to the amount of the cost-of-living adjustment which would have occurred in July 1983 (without regard to the 3-percent limitation contained in section 215(i)(1)(B)) if section 111 of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983 had not been enacted."

NOTIFICATION REGARDING SSI

SEC. 203. Prior to July 1, 1984, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall notify all elderly recipients of benefits under title II of the Social Security Act, who may be eligible for supplemental security income benefits under title XVI of such Act, of the availability of the supplemental security income program, and shall encourage such recipients to contact the Social Security district office. Such notification shall also be made to all recipients prior to attainment of age 65, with the notification made with respect to eligibility for supplemental medical insurance.

TITLE III—MEDICARE

MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES ON THE BASIS OF PROSPECTIVE RATES

SEC. 301. (a)(1) Section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Such term does not include costs of approved educational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital-related costs, as defined by the Secretary."

(2) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985."

(3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the implementation of a system for including capital-related costs under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient hospital services, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after the effective date of the implementation of such a system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differently from costs of projects initiated before such date.

(b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding sections 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section";

(2) by inserting "(other than a subsection (d) hospital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))" in the matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after "of a hospital";

(3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1) following subparagraph (B), "(other than on the basis of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under subsection (d))" after "payable under this title";

(4) by repealing paragraph (2);

(5) by inserting "and subsection (d) and except as provided in subsection (e)" in paragraph (3)(B) after "subparagraph (A)";

(6) by inserting "or fiscal year" after "cost reporting period" each place it appears in paragraph (3)(B);

(7) by inserting "before the beginning of the period or year" in paragraph (3)(B) after "estimated by the Secretary";

(8) by striking out "exceeds" in paragraph (3)(B) and inserting in lieu thereof "will exceed"; and

(9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982, to read as follows:

"(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code for 1954 for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was not subject to such taxes for the 12-month cost-reporting period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base year amount referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i) for such hospital applicable to such cost reporting period by the amount of such taxes paid or accrued by such hospital for such cost reporting period."

(c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and", and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(D) The Secretary determines that the system will not preclude an eligible organization (as defined in section 1876(b)) from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to the organization's rate of payment for inpatient hospital services.

The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's hospital reimbursement control system is based on a payment methodology other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the ground that the amount of payments made under this title under such system must be less than the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining payment amounts at no more than a specified percentage increase above the payment amounts in a base period, the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining aggregate payment amounts below a national average percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpatient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's rate of increase in such payments for such services must be less than such national average rate of increase."

(2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "requirement of paragraph (1)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1) and, if applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5)", and

(B) by inserting "(or, if applicable, in paragraph (5))" in subparagraph (B) after "paragraph (1)".

(3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—

"(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system, and

"(B) with respect to that system a waiver of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act has been approved on or before (and which is in effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

With respect to a State system described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospital payments for individuals under this title, as compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments, with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test shall no longer apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in the same manner as under other waivers.

"(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—

"(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system;

"(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

"(i) is operated directly by the State or by an entity designated pursuant to State law,

"(ii) provides for payment of hospitals covered under the system under a methodology (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as well as any method for changes in the methodology) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hospital services during a specified period are established under the system prior to the defined rate period, and

"(iii) hospitals covered under the system will make such reports (in lieu of cost and other reports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise required under this title) as the Secretary may require in order to properly monitor assurances provided under this subsection;

"(C) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that operation of the system will not result in any change in hospital admission practices which result in—

"(i) a significant reduction in the proportion of patients (receiving hospital services covered under the system) who have no third-party coverage and who are unable to pay for hospital services,

"(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient hospital services for which payment is (or is likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for or costs of such services,

"(iii) the refusal to admit patients who would be expected to require unusually costly or prolonged treatment for reasons other than those related to the appropriateness of the care available at the hospital, or

"(iv) the refusal to provide emergency services to any person who is in need of emergency services if the hospital provides such services;

"(D) any change by the State in the system which has the effect of materially reducing payments to hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to which is likely to be materially affected by the change; and

"(E) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals.

The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

"(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount equal to the amount by which the payments under this title under such system for such period exceeded the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system."

(d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, is amended—

(1) by striking out "section 1814(b)" in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b)", and

(2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act under the following heading:

"Elimination of Lesser-of-Cost-or-Charges Provision".

(e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1)(A) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital services (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

"(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

"(I) the target percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the hospital's target amount for the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(A)) for the period, and

"(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

"(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges.

"(B) As used in this section, the term 'subsection (d) hospital' means a hospital located in one of the fifty States or the District of Columbia other than—

"(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section 1861(f)),

"(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the Secretary),

"(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predominantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

"(iv) a hospital which has an average inpatient length of stay (as determined by the Secretary) of greater than 25 days;

and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the Secretary). The exclusion of any category of hospitals or units under this subparagraph shall become inapplicable at such time as the Secretary determines that adequate data of clinical and statistical significance is available such that the Secretary may include such category in the payment system established under this subsection.

"(C) For purposes of this subsection, for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

"(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, the 'target percentage' is 75 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 25 percent;

"(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, the 'target percentage' is 50 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 50 percent; and

"(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, the 'target percentage' is 25 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 75 percent.

"(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II), the 'applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate' for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

"(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, is a combined rate consisting of 25 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 75 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (2) for such discharges;

"(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 50 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 50 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges;

"(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 75 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 25 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3); and

"(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, is a rate equal to the national DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3).

"(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges in each such region, for which payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such rate shall also be determined for hospitals located in urban or rural areas within the United States and within each such region. Such determinations shall be made as follows:

"(A) DETERMINING ALLOWABLE INDIVIDUAL HOSPITAL COSTS FOR BASE PERIOD.—The Secretary shall determine the allowable operating costs per discharge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available.

"(B) UPDATING FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984.—The Secretary shall update each amount determined under subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

"(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated average rate of change of hospital costs industry-wide between the cost reporting period used under such subparagraph and fiscal year 1983, and

"(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the applicable percentage increase (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

"(C) STANDARDIZING AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall standardize the amount updated under subparagraph (B) for each hospital by—

"(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs.

"(ii) adjusting for variations among hospitals by area and region in the average hospital wage level, and

"(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix among hospitals.

"(D) COMPUTING URBAN AND RURAL AVERAGES.—The Secretary shall compute an average of the standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (C) for the United States and for each region—

"(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in an urban area, and

"(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in a rural area.

For purposes of this subsection, the term 'region' means one of the four census regions established by the Bureau of the Census, established by the Secretary; the term 'urban area' means an area within a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) or within such similar area as the Secretary has recognized under subsection (a) by regulation; and the term 'rural area' means any area outside such an area or similar area.

"(E) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment rates which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(G) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS IN THE UNITED STATES AND IN EACH REGION.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate which is equal—

"(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States, and for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

"(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States, and for hospitals located in a rural area in each region, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals' costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

"(3) The Secretary shall determine an adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital for which payment may be made under part A of this title, as follows:

"(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban area within the United States and, for fiscal year 1985, for hospitals located in an urban area within each region, and for hospitals located in a rural area within the United States, and for fiscal year 1985, for hospitals located in a rural area within each region, and equal to the respective average standardized amount computed for the previous fiscal year under paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, increased by the applicable percentage increase under subsection (b)(3)(B) for that particular fiscal year.

"(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment amounts which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate for the fiscal year which is equal—

"(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

"(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in a rural area in each region (and, if applicable, in a census division), to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals' costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges within these groups.

"(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secretary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which reflects the relative hospital resources used with respect to discharges classified within that group compared to discharges classified within other groups.

"(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and (B), at least every five years, to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources.

"(D) The Commission (established under subsection (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the Secretary with respect to adjustments to be made under subparagraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evidence with respect to new practices, including the use of new technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

"(5)(A)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the lesser.

"(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a hospital may request additional payments in any case where changes, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the DRG rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is greater.

"(iii) The amount of such additional payment under clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

"(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total payments made based on DRG prospective payment rates for discharges in that year, and the DRG rates shall be reduced to compensate for any payments under this subparagraph in excess of such 6 percent.

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs of medical education, in an amount computed in the same manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2), except that in the computation under this subparagraph the Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to twice the factor provided under such regulations.

"(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions and adjustments to the payment amounts established under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of this title.

"(ii) With respect to a hospital which is a 'sole community hospital', payment under paragraph (1)(A)(i) for any cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after October 1, 1983, shall be determined using the target percentage and DRG percentage applicable for the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1983, and in no case shall total payments to such a hospital under this title for any cost reporting period beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be less than such payments to such hospital for the preceding cost reporting period. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'sole community hospital' means a hospital that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geographical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

"(iii) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments to the payment amounts as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii.

"(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of reimbursement made for services described in section 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph (2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being made.

"(ii) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause (i).

"(E) This paragraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals that receive payments in amounts computed under this subsection.

"(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, including any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

"(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review under section 1878 or otherwise of—

"(A) the determination of the requirement, or the proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursuant to subsection (e)(1), and

"(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).

"(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals beginning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applicable percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure that—

"(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(I) and (d)(5) for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital services of hospitals, are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983;

except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not apply for purposes of making computations under subsection (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

"(B) For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide under subsections (d)(2)(F) and (d)(3)(C) for such equal proportional adjustment in each of the average standardized amounts otherwise computed for that fiscal year as may be necessary to assure that—

"(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(II) and (d)(5) for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital services of hospitals, are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the DRG percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

"(2) The Secretary shall provide for appointment of a Commission of independent experts, selected by the Office of Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Commission') to review the applicable percentage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate percentage increase which should be effected for hospital inpatient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1985. In making its recommendations, the Commission shall take into account changes in the hospital market-basket described in subsection (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (including the quality and skill level of professional nursing required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effectiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

"(3) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on an appropriate increase factor which should be used (instead of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in that fiscal year.

"(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage increase which will apply for purposes of this section as the applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which will assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

"(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published in the Federal Register, not later than—

"(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), the Secretary's proposed determination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and

"(B) the September 1 before such fiscal year, the Secretary's final determination under such paragraph for that year.

The Secretary shall include in the publication referred to in subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year the report of the Commission's recommendations submitted under paragraph (3) for that fiscal year.

"(6)(A) The Commission shall consist of fifteen individuals selected and appointed by the Director of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Director' and the 'Office', respectively). Such appointments shall be without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three years, except that the Director may provide initially for such shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the terms of no more than seven members shall expire in any one year. Members of the Commission shall be eligible for reappointment for no more than two consecutive terms.

"(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide expertise and experience in the provision and financing of health care, including but not limited to physicians and registered professional nurses, employers, and third party payors, and individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of biomedical, health services, and health economics research. The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of groups, including but not limited to—

"(i) national organizations representing physicians, including medical specialty organizations and registered professional nurses and other skilled health professionals;

"(ii) national organizations representing hospitals, including teaching hospitals; and

"(iii) national organizations representing the business community, health benefit programs, labor, and the elderly.

"(C) The Commission may employ such personnel (not to exceed 50) as may be necessary to carry out its duties. Subject to approval by the Director, the Commission shall appoint one of the members of its staff as Executive Director. The Commission is authorized to seek such assistance and support as may be required in the performance of its duties from appropriate Federal departments and agencies. Such assistance may include the provision of detailees, office space, and related services, with or without reimbursement, as agreed upon by the Commission and the head of the appropriate department or agency.

"(D) While serving on the business of the Commission (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving away from home and his regular place of business, a member may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commission.

"(E) The Executive Director shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

"(F) The Executive Director shall, in accordance with such policies as the Commission may prescribe, appoint and fix the rates of compensation of such personnel as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this part. Such rates of compensation may not exceed the level specified in subparagraph (E).

"(G) The Commission shall have the authority to—

"(i) enter into contracts or make other arrangements, as may be necessary for the conduct of the work of the Commission, with any competent personnel or organization, with or without reimbursement, without performance or other bonds, and without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5);

"(ii) make advance, progress, and other payments which relate to the work of the Commission without regard to the provisions of section 3324 of title 31, United States Code;

"(iii) accept services of voluntary and uncompensated personnel that are necessary for the conduct of the work of the Commission and provide transportation and subsistence as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons serving without compensation;

"(iv) acquire by purchase, lease, loan, or gift, and hold and dispose of by sale, lease, or loan, real and personal property of all kinds that is necessary for, or results from, the exercise of authority granted by this part (without regard to the first section of the Act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 370, chapter 106; 40 U.S.C. 34)); and

"(v) prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems necessary with respect to the internal organization and operation of the Commission.

"(H) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2)(A), the Commission shall collect and assess information on medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the safety, efficiency, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect and assess factual information, giving special attention to the needs of updating existing DRG's, establishing new DRG's, and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in delivering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting and assessing information, the Commission shall—

"(i) utilize existing information, both published and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed either by its own staff or under other arrangements made in accordance with this part; and

"(ii) carry out, or award grants or contracts for, original research where existing information is inadequate for the development of useful and valid guidelines by the Commission.

"(I) The Commission shall have access to such relevant information and data as may be available from appropriate Federal agencies. The Commission shall maintain the confidentiality of all confidential information it receives.

"(J) There shall be established a Federal Liaison Committee to the Commission (hereafter in this part referred to as the 'Committee'). The Committee shall—

"(1) arrange for the acquisition of information in accordance with subparagraph (I) and assure that its activities, especially the conduct of original research and medical studies, are coordinated with the activities of Federal agencies; and

"(2) advise the Commission with respect to the activities of Federal agencies that relate to the duties of the Commission or to particular medical procedures and services under study, or being considered for study, by the Commission.

The Federal Liaison Committee shall consist of delegates of these Federal agencies which can, in the judgment of the Commission, play a significant role in assisting the Commission. The Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration shall serve as the Chairman of the Committee. Members of the Committee shall serve without additional compensation. The Committee shall meet at the call of the Chairman of the Committee, or at the call of the Chairman of the Commission, but not less than six times a year.

"(K)(i) The Office shall report to the Congress, from time to time, on the functioning and progress of the Commission and on the status of the assessment of medical procedures and services by the Commission. Such reports shall be annual for the first three years of the Commission's operation and biannual thereafter, and shall be delivered to the Congress by March 15 of each reporting year.

"(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all deliberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediately upon its request.

"(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this part, the Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Commission. The Office shall be reimbursed for such funds by the Commission from the appropriations made with respect to the Commission. The Office shall carry out such duties subject to approval of the Technology Assessment Board, as prescribed by sections 3(d) (2) and (3) of the Technology Assessment Act of 1972 (2 U.S.C. 472(d) (2) and (3)).

"(L)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

"(ii) Eighty-five percent of such appropriation shall be payable from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and 15 percent of such appropriation shall be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund."

(f) Section 1862(a)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "(B) or (C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(B), (C), or (D)";

(2) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and"; and

(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) in the case of clinical care items and services provided with the concurrence of the Secretary and with respect to research and experimentation conducted by, or under contract with, the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission or the Secretary, which are not reasonable and necessary to carry out the purposes of section 1886(d)(6);".

CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

SEC. 302. (a) Sections 1814(g) and 1835(e) of the Social Security Act are each amended by inserting "(or would be if section 1886 did not apply)" after "section 1861(v)(1)(D)".

(b) Section 1814(h)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out "the reasonable costs for such services" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount that would be payable for such services under subsection (b) and section 1886".

(c)(1) The matter in section 1861(v)(1)(G)(i) of such Act following subclause (III) is amended by striking out "on the basis of the reasonable cost of" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount otherwise payable under part A with respect to".

(2) Section 1861(v)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out "an amount equal to the reasonable cost of" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount that would be taken into account with respect to".

(3) Section 1861(v)(2)(B) of such Act is amended by striking out "the equivalent of the reasonable cost of".

(4) Section 1861(v)(3) of such Act is amended by striking out "the reasonable cost of such bed and board furnished in semiprivate accommodations (determined pursuant to paragraph (1))" and inserting in lieu thereof "the amount otherwise payable under this title for such bed and board furnished in semiprivate accommodations".

(d) Section 1862(a) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (12),

(2) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (13) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or", and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(14) which are other than physicians' services (as defined in regulations) and which are furnished to an individual who is an inpatient of a hospital by an entity other than the hospital, unless the services are furnished under arrangements (as defined in section 1861(w)(1)) with the entity made by the hospital."

(e)(1) Section 1866(a)(1) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (D),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (E), and

(C) by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(F) in the case of hospitals which provide inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under subsection (c) or (d) of section 1886, to maintain an agreement with a utilization and quality control peer review organization (if there is such an organization which has a contract with the Secretary under part B of title XI for the area in which the hospital is located) under which the organization will perform functions under that part with respect to the review of the accuracy of diagnostic information on such hospital's bills, the completeness and adequacy of care provided, the appropriateness of admissions, and the appropriateness of care provided for which additional payments are sought under section 1886(d)(5), with respect to inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under part A of this title (and for purposes of payment under this title, the cost of such agreement to the hospital shall be considered a cost incurred by such hospital in providing inpatient services under part A, but shall be paid directly by the Secretary to such organization on behalf of such hospital in accordance with a budget approved by the Secretary),

"(G) in the case of hospitals which provide inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under subsection (b) or (d) of section 1886, not to charge any individual or any other person for inpatient hospital services for which such individual would be entitled to have payment made under part A but for a denial or reduction of payments under section 1886(f), and

"(H) in the case of hospitals which provide inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under section 1886(d), to have all items and services (other than physicians' services as defined in regulations) (i) that are furnished to an individual who is an inpatient of the hospital, and (ii) for which the individual is entitled to have payment made under this title, furnished by the hospital or otherwise under arrangements (as defined in section 1861(w)(1)) made by the hospital."

(2) The matter in section 1866(a)(2)(B)(ii) of such Act preceding subclause (I) is amended by inserting "and except with respect to inpatient hospital costs with respect to which amounts are payable under section 1886(d)" after "(except with respect to emergency services)".

(f) Section 1876(g) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(4) A risk-sharing contract under this subsection may, at the option of an eligible organization, provide that the Secretary—

"(A) will reimburse hospitals for payment amounts determined in accordance with section 1886, as applicable, of inpatient hospital services furnished to individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (d), and

"(B) will deduct the amount of such reimbursement for payment which would otherwise be made to such organization."

(g)(1) Section 1878(a) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "and (except as provided in subsection (g)(2)) any hospital which receives payments in amounts computed under section 1886(d) and which has submitted such reports within such time as the Secretary may require in order to make payment under such section may obtain a hearing with respect to such payment by the Board" after "subsection (h)" in the matter before paragraph (1),

(B) by inserting "(i)" after "(A)" in paragraph (1)(A),

(C) by inserting "or" at the end of paragraph (1)(A) and by adding after such paragraph the following new clause:

"(ii) is dissatisfied with a final determination of the Secretary as to the amount of the payment under section 1886(d)," and

(D) by striking out "(1)(A)" in paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "(1)(A)(i), or with respect to appeals under paragraph (1)(A)(ii), 180 days after notice of the Secretary's final determination,"

(2)(A) The last sentence of section 1878(f)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "(or, in an action brought jointly by several providers, the judicial district in which the greatest number of such providers are located) after "the judicial district in which the provider is located".

(B) Section 1878(f)(1) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentence: "Any appeal to the Board or action for judicial review by providers which are under common ownership or control must be brought by such providers as a group with respect to any matter involving an issue common to such providers."

(3) Section 1878(g) of such Act is amended by inserting "(1)" after "(g)" and by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) The determinations and other decisions described in section 1886(d)(7) shall not be reviewed by the Board or by any court pursuant to an action brought under subsection (f) or otherwise."

(4) The third sentence of section 1878(h) of such Act is amended striking out "cost reimbursement" and inserting in lieu thereof "payment of providers of services".

(h) The first sentence of section 1881(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by inserting "or section 1886 (if applicable)" after "section 1861(v)".

(i) Section 1887(a)(1)(B) of such Act is amended by inserting "or on the bases described in section 1886" after "on a reasonable cost basis".

(j) The Secretary may, for any cost reporting period beginning prior to October 1, 1986, waive the requirements of sections 1862(a)(14) and 1866(a)(1)(H) of the Social Security Act in the case of a hospital which has followed a practice of allowing direct billing under part B of title XVIII of such Act for services (other than physician services) so extensively, that immediate compliance with those requirements would threaten the stability of patient care. Any such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to be made under part B but that the payments to such hospital under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of the billings for such services under part B. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may provide for such methods of payments under part A as is appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institution.

REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

SEC. 303. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secretary") shall study and report to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be included within the prospective payment amounts computed under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment methodology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of physician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, legislative recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for determining the amount of the payments for physicians' services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

(C) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of studies on—

(i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospective payment rates under paragraph (3) of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

(ii) whether and the method under which hospitals, not paid based on amounts determined under such section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a prospective basis as under such section;

(iii) the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related groups, and the advisability and feasibility of providing for such modifications; and

(iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the payment methodology under such section to payment by all payors for inpatient hospital services.

(3) Prior to April 1, 1985, the Secretary shall complete a study and make legislative recommendations to the Congress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole community hospitals which takes into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addition, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an information transfer between parts A and B, particularly with respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made under part A, and no adjustment is made in the reimbursement to the admitting physician, or physicians. The Secretary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas. The Secretary shall also on the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the cost of care to patients financed by both public programs and private payors.

(4) The Secretary shall complete a study and make recommendations to the Congress, before April 1, 1984, with respect to whether hospitals located outside of the fifty States and the District of Columbia should be included under a prospective payment system.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this title shall not affect the authority of the Secretary to develop, carry out, or continue experiments and demonstration projects.

(2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of a State which has a demonstration project, for payment of hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act approved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, which (A) is in effect as of March 1, 1983, and (B) was entered into after August 1982, the terms of the demonstration agreement shall be modified so that the percentage by which such demonstration project is required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in medicare hospital costs shall be decreased by one-half of one percentage point per contract year, beginning with the contract year beginning in 1983.

(c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act—

(1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior Health Services (according to terms and conditions as specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care demonstration project, and

(2) the application of the Department of Health Services, State of California, dated November 1, 1982, pursuant to section 1115 of the Social Security Act, for the waiver of certain requirements of title XIX of such Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a demonstration project for capitated reimbursement for comprehensive long-term care services involving On Lok Senior Health Services.

(d) The Secretary shall continue demonstrations with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or methods of payment.

EFFECTIVE DATES

SEC. 304. (a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this title apply to items and services furnished by or under arrangements with a hospital beginning with its first cost reporting period that begins on or after October 1, 1983. A change in a hospital's cost reporting period that has been made after November 1982 shall be recognized for purposes of this section only if the Secretary finds good cause for that change.

(2) Section 1866(a)(1)(F) of the Social Security Act (as added by section 302(f)(1)(C) of this title), section 1862(a)(14) (as added by section 302(e)(3) of this title) and sections 1886(a)(1) (G) and (H) of such Act (as added by section 302(f)(1)(C) of this title) take effect on October 1, 1983.

(b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction in the payment amount under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if the admission has occurred before a hospital's first cost reporting period that begins after September 1983, to take into account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items and services furnished before that period.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall cause to be published in the Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG prospective payment rates established under subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no later than September 1, 1983, and allow for a period of public comment thereon. The DRG prospective payment rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the necessity for consideration of comments received, but the Secretary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after considering those comments.

(2) A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a DRG prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modification is published in the Federal Register.

(3) Rules to implement subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as so amended) shall, and exceptions, adjustments, or additional payment amounts under paragraph (5) of such subsection may, be established in accordance with the procedure described in this subsection.

DELAY IN PROVISION RELATING TO HOSPITAL-BASED SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES

SEC. 305. (a) Section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out "October 1, 1982" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1983".

(b) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to the Congress, with respect to the effect which the implementation of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 would have on hospital-based skilled nursing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the patient populations served by such facilities and by community-based skilled nursing facilities.

SHIFT IN PART B PREMIUM TO COINCIDE WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE

SEC. 306. (a) Section 1839 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), and (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a)(1) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age (as defined in section 216(a)) which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

"(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled under this part for each month after December 1983 shall, except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), be the amount determined under paragraph (3).

"(3) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the monthly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal to the smaller of—

"(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age, determined according to paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar year, or

"(B) the monthly premium rate most recently promulgated by the Secretary under this paragraph, increased by a percentage determined as follows: The Secretary shall ascertain the primary insurance amount computed under section 215(a)(1), based upon average indexed monthly earnings of $900, that applied to individuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-age insurance benefits for December of the year preceding the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly premium rate by the same percentage by which that primary insurance amount is increased when, by reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals for the following December.

Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced, issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assumptions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the derivation of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

"(4) The Secretary shall also, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate under this paragraph, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin."

(2) Subsections (d), (e), (f), and (g) of section 1839 of such Act are redesignated as subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e), respectively.

(3) (A) Section 1839(b) of such Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "subsection (b), (c), or (g)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a) or (e)".

(B) Section 1839(d) of such Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "purposes of subsection (c)" and inserting in lieu thereof "purposes of subsection (b)".

(C) Section 1839(e) of such Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out "subsection (c)" and "subsection (c)(1)" and by inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a)" and "subsection (a)(1)", respectively.

(D) Section 1818(c) of such Act is amended by striking out "subsection (c) of section 1839" and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (a) of section 1839".

(E) Section 1843(d)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "without any increase under subsection (c) thereof" and inserting in lieu thereof "without any increase under subsection (b) thereof".

(F) Section 1844(a)(1)(A)(i) of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out "1839(c)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(1)"; and

(ii) by striking out "1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)".

(G) Section 1844(a)(1)(B)(i) of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out "1839(c)(4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(4)"; and

(ii) by striking out "1839(c)(3) or 1839(g)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(3) or 1839(e)".

(H) Section 1876(a)(5) of such Act is amended—

(i) in subparagraph (A)(ii), by striking out "1839(c)(1)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(1)"; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out "1839(c)(4)" and inserting in lieu thereof "1839(a)(4)".

(4) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to premiums payable for January 1984 and each month thereafter.

(5) The monthly premium amount under section 1839 of the Social Security Act for the months of July through December of 1983 shall be equal to the monthly premium amount as determined under such section (as in effect prior to the amendments made by this section) for June 1983.

SHIFT IN VOLUNTARY PART A PREMIUM TO COINCIDE WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASES

SEC. 307. (a) Section 1818(d)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "during the last calendar quarter of each year, beginning in 1973," in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "during the next to last calendar quarter of each year";

(2) by striking out "the 12-month period commencing July 1 of the next year" in the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "the following calendar year"; and

(3) by striking out "for such next year" in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof "for that following calendar year".

(b) The amendments made by this section shall apply to premiums for months beginning with January 1984, and for months after June 1983 and before January 1984, the monthly premium under part A of title XVIII of the Social Security Act for individuals enrolled under each respective part shall be the monthly premium under that part for the month of June 1983.

TITLE IV—UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

PART A—FEDERAL SUPPLEMENTAL COMPENSATION

EXTENSION OF PROGRAM

SEC. 401. (a) Paragraph (2) of section 602(f) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 is amended by striking out "March 31, 1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "September 30, 1983".

(b) Section 605(2) of such Act is amended by striking out "April 1, 1983" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1983".

NUMBER OF WEEKS FOR WHICH COMPENSATION PAYABLE

SEC. 402. (a) Subsection (e) of section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 is amended by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4) and by striking out paragraph (2) and inserting in lieu thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(2)(A) In the case of any account from which Federal supplemental compensation was first payable to an individual for a week beginning after March 31, 1983, the amount established in such account shall be equal to the lesser of—

"(i) 65 per centum of the total amount of regular compensation (including dependents' allowances) payable to the individual with respect to the benefit year (as determined under the State law) on the basis of which he most recently received regular compensation, or

"(ii) the applicable limit determined under the following table times his average weekly benefit amount for his benefit year,

| In the case of weeks during a: | The applicable limit is: |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 6-percent period..... | 14 |
| 5-percent period..... | 12 |
| 4-percent period..... | 10 |
| Low-unemployment period..... | 8 |

"(B) Notwithstanding the provisions of clause (ii) of subparagraph (A), the applicable limit under such clause shall not be lower than 4 less than the number of weeks applicable to such State under this paragraph as in effect for the week beginning March 27, 1983, to the amendments made by the Social Security Amendments of 1983.

"(C) In the case of any account from which Federal supplemental compensation was payable to an individual for a week beginning before April 1, 1983, the amount established in such account shall be equal to the lesser of the subparagraph (A) entitlement or the sum of—

"(i) the subparagraph (A) entitlement reduced (but not below zero) by the aggregate amount of Federal supplemental compensation paid to such individual for weeks beginning before April 1, 1983, plus

"(ii) such individual's additional entitlement.

"(D) For purposes of subparagraph (C) and this subparagraph—

"(i) The term 'subparagraph (A) entitlement' means the amount which would have been established in the account if subparagraph (A) had applied to such account.

"(ii) The term 'additional entitlement' means the applicable limit determined under the following table times the individual's average weekly benefit amount for his benefit year.

| In the case of weeks during a: | The applicable limit is: |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------|
| 6-percent period..... | 8 |
| 5-percent period..... | 6 |
| 4-percent period..... | 4 |
| Low-employment period..... | 4 |

"(D) Except as provided in subparagraph (C)(i), for purposes of determining the amount of Federal supplemental compensation payable for weeks beginning after March 31, 1983, from an account described in subparagraph (C), no reduction in such account shall be made by reason of any Federal supplemental compensation paid to the individual for weeks beginning before April 1, 1983.

"(3)(A) For purposes of this subsection, the terms '6-percent period', '5-percent period', '4-percent period', and 'low-unemployment period' mean, with respect to any State, the period which—

"(i) begins with the 3d week after the 1st week in which the rate of insured unemployment in the State for the period consisting of such week and the immediately preceding 12 weeks falls in the applicable range, and

"(ii) ends with the 3d week after the 1st week in which the rate of insured unemployment for the period consisting of such week and the immediately preceding 12 weeks does not fall within the applicable range.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable range is as follows:

| In the case of a: | The applicable range is: |
|------------------------|---|
| 6-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 6 percent. |
| 5-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 5 percent but less than 6 percent. |
| 4-percent period..... | A rate equal to or exceeding 4 percent but less than 5 percent. |
| Low-employment period. | A rate less than 4 percent. |

"(C) No 6-percent period, 5-percent period, or 4-percent period, as the case may be, shall last for a period of less than 4 weeks unless the State enters a period with a higher percentage designation.

"(D) For purposes of this subsection—

"(i) The rate of insured unemployment for any period shall be determined in the same manner as determined for purposes of section 203 of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970.

"(ii) The amount of an individual's average weekly benefit amount shall be determined in the same manner as determined for purposes of section 202(b)(1)(C) of such Act."

(b)(1) Section 602(f)(2) of such Act is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "; except that in the case of any individual who received such compensation for the week preceding the last week beginning after such date, such compensation shall be payable to such individual for weeks beginning after such date, but the total amount of such compensation payable for such weeks shall be limited to 50 percent of the total amount which would otherwise be payable for such weeks".

(2) Section 605(2) of such Act is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: "(except as otherwise provided in section 602(f)(2))".

(c)(1) Section 602(b)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B), adding "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), and inserting after subparagraph (C) the following:

"(D) had at least 26 weeks of full-time insured employment, during his base period or the equivalent in insured wages during his base period (as determined using a methodology equivalent to that used under section 202(a)(5) of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970);"

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply only to individuals who first became eligible for Federal supplemental compensation for weeks beginning on or after April 1, 1983.

(d) Paragraph (3) of section 602(d) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 (as amended by section 544(d) of the Highway Revenue Act of 1982) is amended by striking out "subsection (e)(2)(A)(ii)" and inserting in lieu thereof "subparagraph (A)(ii) or (C)(ii)(II) of subsection (e)(2)".

EFFECTIVE DATE

Sec. 403. (a) The amendments made by this part shall apply to weeks beginning after March 31, 1983.

(b) In the case of any eligible individual—

(1) to whom any Federal supplemental compensation was payable for any week beginning before April 1, 1983, and

(2) who exhausted his rights to such compensation (by reason of the payment of all the amount in his Federal supplemental compensation account) before the first week beginning after March 31, 1983, such individual's eligibility for additional weeks of compensation by reason of the amendments made by this part shall not be limited or terminated by reason of any event, or failure to meet any requirement of law relating to eligibility for unemployment compensation, occurring after the date of such exhaustion of rights and before April 1, 1983 (and the period after such exhaustion and before April 1, 1983, shall not be counted for purposes of determining the expiration of the two years following the end of his benefit year for purposes of section 602(b) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982).

(c) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest practicable date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose to each State with which he has in effect an agreement under section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 a modification of such agreement designed to provide for the payment of Federal supplemental compensation under such Act in accordance with the amendments made by this part. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any State fails or refuses, within the 3-week period beginning on the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agreement, the Secretary of Labor shall terminate such agreement effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before such 3-week period.

PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND CREDIT REDUCTIONS
DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

Sec. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section for any year after December 31, 1982, and before January 1, 1986, a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). Interest shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C).

"(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State must—

"(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982, which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or the net solvency of its unemployment system (as determined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954); and

"(ii) have taken an action (as certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, which will increase revenues and decrease benefits under the State's unemployment compensation system (hereinafter referred to as a 'solvency effort') by a combined total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect without such State action).

In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall be 40 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applicable percentage shall be 50 percent.

"(C)(i) The base year is the first year for which deferral under this provision is granted. The Secretary of Labor shall estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To determine whether a State meets the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the percentage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such benefits and taxes would have been without the application of such action. In making this determination, the Secretary shall deem the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii) to have been effective for the base year to the same extent as such action is effective for the year following the base year. Once a deferral is approved a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall result in the State being required to make immediate payment of all deferred interest.

"(ii) Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the requirement of subparagraph (B).

"(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than the 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent required under subparagraph (B), the deferred interest shall be computed at an interest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise applicable interest rate."

(b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out ", and before January 1, 1988".

CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

SEC. 412. (a)(1) Section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8) PARTIAL LIMITATION.—

"(A) In the case of a State which would meet the requirements of this subsection for a taxable year prior to 1987 but for its failure to meet one of the requirements contained in subparagraph (C) or (D) of paragraph (2), the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

"(B) In the case of a State described in subparagraph (A) which also meets the requirements of section 1202(b)(8)(B) with respect to such taxable year, the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be further reduced by an additional 0.1 percentage point."

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to taxable year 1983 and taxable years thereafter.

(b) Section 3302(f)(1) of such Code is amended by striking out "beginning before January 1, 1988,".

AVERAGE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATE

SEC. 413. (a) Section 3302(d)(4)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out "the total of the remuneration subject to contributions under the State unemployment compensation law" and inserting in lieu thereof "the total of the wages attributable to such State subject to taxation under this chapter".

(b) Sections 3302(c)(2)(B)(i) and 3302(c)(4) of such Code are each amended by striking out "2.7" and inserting in lieu thereof "2.7 multiplied by the ratio of the wage base under this chapter divided by the estimated average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which the determination is to be made".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective for taxable year 1984 and taxable years thereafter.

DATE FOR PAYMENT OF INTEREST

SEC. 414. Section 1202(b)(3)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "not later than" and inserting in lieu thereof "prior to".

RECOUPMENT OF INTEREST

SEC. 415. Section 3302 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(h) RECOUPMENT OF OVERDUE INTEREST.—
 "(1) In addition to any other reduction required under this section, if any accrued interest under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act has not been paid by a State within one year after the date such payment is otherwise required to be paid, then the total credits (after applying any other provisions of this section) otherwise allowable under this section for the following taxable year, in the case of a taxpayer subject to the unemployment compensation law of such State, shall be reduced by an amount equal to 0.1 percent of the amount of the wages paid by such taxpayer during such taxable year which are attributable to such State.

"(2) Any increase in the amount of tax paid by reason of paragraph (1) shall be first applied as a payment of such overdue interest, and any remainder shall be applied as a repayment of principal under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act."

PART C—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEES PROVIDING SERVICES TO EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

SEC. 421. (a)(1) Section 3306(a)(6)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(v) with respect to services to which section 3309(a)(1) applies, if such services are provided to or on behalf of an educational institution, compensation shall be denied in the same manner as if such services were performed directly for an educational institution, and"

(2) Clauses (ii)(I), (iii), and (iv) of such section are each amended by striking out "may be denied" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be denied".

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply in the case of compensation paid for weeks beginning on or after April 1, 1984.

(2) In the case of a State with respect to which the Secretary of Labor has determined that State legislation is required in order to comply with the amendment made by this section, the amendment made by this section shall apply in the case of compensation paid for weeks which begin on or after April 1, 1984, and after the end of the first session of the State legislature which begins after the date of the enactment of this Act, or which began prior to the date of the enactment of this Act and remained in session for at least twenty-five calendar days after such date of enactment. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "session" means a regular, special, budget, or other session of a State legislature.

EXTENDED BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE HOSPITALIZED OR ON JURY DUTY

SEC. 422. (a) Clause (ii) of paragraph (3)(A) of section 202(a) of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970 is amended to read as follows:

"(ii) during which he fails to actively engage in seeking work, unless such individual is not actively engaged in seeking work because such individual is, as determined in accordance with State law—

"(I) before any court of the United States or any State pursuant to a lawfully issued summons to appear for jury duty (as such term may be defined by the Secretary of Labor), or

"(II) hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or a life-threatening condition (as such term may be defined by such Secretary), if such exemptions in clauses (I) and (II) apply to recipients of regular benefits, and the State chooses to apply such exemptions for recipients of extended benefits; or"

(b) The amendment made by this section shall become effective on the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, today, we begin consideration of H.R. 1900, "The Social Security Act Amendments of 1983," as proposed to be amended by the Finance Committee. S. 1 was favorably reported by the Finance Committee on Thursday evening, March 10, by a vote of 19 to 1. The committee bill implements the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, and also includes provisions dealing with prospective payments under the medicare program, supplemental unemployment benefits, and unemployment compensation loan reform. Representing the culmination of many months of negotiation, this may be the single most important piece of legislation we consider in the 98th Congress. I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Titles I and II of the committee amendment would implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. Each of the recommendations of the National Commission were approved by the committee and, I might add, only those areas that required refinement—such as the taxing of benefits—were modified in any significant way. Also, the committee had to deal with two areas in which the Commission was unable to reach consensus: the long-range, financing deficit and a "fail-safe" mechanism. In total, the social security financing package reduces the short-range deficit in the Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance programs (OASDI) by $165 billion. For the long-range, the committee bill eliminates the entire long-range deficit in OASDI, and actually generates a small surplus.

MAJOR PROVISIONS

The recommendations of the National Commission, as embodied in the committee amendment, will require concessions from all of the parties who have a stake in social security—current and future beneficiaries, taxpayers, and Government employees who do not now contribute to the system. While no one Member is happy with every specific recommendation, the important fact is that consensus was reached on how to save the system.

COVERAGE

First, the bill would expand coverage. Newly hired Federal employees, the President, Vice President, Members of Congress, the Social Security Commissioner, and employees of non-profit organizations would, beginning in 1984, be covered by social security on a mandatory basis. State and local governments would no longer be granted the privilege of opting out of the system. To deal with the problem that will exist as long as coverage is not universal, windfalls will be eliminated for people who earn disproportionately large benefits because of long periods in noncovered employment. To moderate the impact of this provision, the committee bill would phase in the windfall provision and provide additional guarantees for people with long periods of covered employment.

I might note that that is the one minor change in the House-passed bill—to phase in that particular provision.

COLA

Second, on the benefit side, the annual cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits and SSI payments would be delayed by 6 months, from July to January. To protect the needy elderly during the transition to the new payment schedule, the maximum payment under the SSI program would be increased by $20 per month ($30 for couples). This would allow the income of all SSI recipients to rise by $20 a month beginning in July even though his or her COLA is delayed.

REVENUE PROVISIONS

Also, for beneficiaries with high incomes, half of social security benefits would be included in taxable income. The "notch" resulting under the Commission recommendation was eliminated by specifying that half of social security benefits be added to the individual's adjusted gross income and his income from tax-exempt obligations to determine whether any of his benefits will be subject to taxation. Counting adjusted gross income, tax-exempt interest, and half of social security benefits in this manner, the thresholds in the committee bill are then $25,000 for an individual and $32,000 for a couple. The lesser of one-half of social security benefits or one-half of income above the thresholds would be subject to income taxes. In no case would an individual's benefits be taxed if his income was below $20,000 (or if a couple's adjusted gross income was below $25,000).

In addition, part of the payroll tax increases now scheduled by law would be accelerated, as recommended by the National Commission. The 1985 increase in the OASDI rate would take place in 1984, and part of the 1990 increase would take place in 1988. A direct credit against FICA tax would exactly offset the increase in the employee's tax in 1984 so that the acceleration in the rate increase originally set for 1985 will increase trust fund receipts without increasing an employee's tax liability.

For the self-employed, the OASDI tax rates on self-employed income would be increased so as to equalize his or her contribution to the social security trust funds with the combined contribution paid by workers and their employers. The tax on the self-employed—now about 1.5 times the employee's OASDI tax and the same as the employee's HI tax—would be made equal to the combined employee-employer rates. To offset partially the increased tax burden this provision imposes on the self-employed, the committee bill would provide a credit against self-employment taxes equal to 2.9 percent of self-employment income subject to self-employment tax in 1984, 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, 2.1 percent in 1987 through 1989, and 2.3 percent in 1990 and thereafter.

STABILIZER

To help stabilize the financial condition of social security, this bill includes the recommendation of the National Commission to trigger a new method of indexing benefits if reserves are critically low. Beginning in 1988, if reserves fall below 20 percent of annual outgo, the annual COLA would be based on the lower of the increase in wages or prices. As reserves begin to accumulate again, a "catch-up" provision would repay beneficiaries for any prior reduction in their benefit increases. This would help prevent insolvency when prices grow more rapidly than wages, as they have in the last 5 years.

EQUITY PROVISIONS

Also included in the bill are provisions which would increase outlays somewhat, but they improve the equity of the system considerably for women and for the elderly who continue to work. As recommended by the National Commission, benefit adequacy is improved for widows and widowers and for disabled widows and widowers. Eligibility requirements are eased for divorced widows and widowers, and for divorced disabled widows and widowers. For the elderly who continue to work and who do not now receive an actuarially fair increase in benefits when they delay retirement, the delayed retirement credit would be increased from 3 percent to 8 percent a year.

Along these same lines, two additional provisions were added by the Finance Committee. First, people who leave the work force to care for a child under 3 will be allowed to drop up to 2 extra years of earnings in the computation of their earnings history. This change would help acknowledge the economic contribution of spouses in the home by eliminating part of the financial penalty they now suffer when they are out of the work force. Second, the bill would gradually phase out the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. This is a broadly supported change that would remove a strong disincentive for the elderly who wish to continue working beyond 65.

ACCOUNTING CHANGES

Two accounting changes recommended by the Commission are included in the bill that would improve the treatment of the social security trust funds. First, the trust funds would be reimbursed for all forgone taxes and interest on account of gratuitous wage credits provided to people with military service. Presently, the trust funds are not reimbursed until the additional benefits are paid. Second, the trust funds would be credited with the value of all checks which have remained unnegotiated for 1 year or longer. Presently, such checks remain a drain on the trust funds even if they are never cashed.

ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS RECOMMENDED BY THE NATIONAL COMMISSION

In addition to these provisions, which constitute the bipartisan consensus, this bill contains three other recommendations made by the National Commission. These were approved unanimously in November. First, trust fund investment procedures would be revised so as to improve the level of public understanding.

I might say I see the distinguished Senator from Mississippi in the Chamber. It was through his efforts and the efforts of the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin that this provision was added and agreed to by the National Commission. We will be discussing that more in length later and will notify the distinguished Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. We appreciate the Senator calling that to our attention last year.

In the future, any excess reserves would be invested on a month-to-month basis at a rate equal to the average interest rate paid on long-term Government bonds. Second, two public members would be added to the Social Security Board of Trustees. Presently, the Board is composed of the Secretaries of Treasury, Labor, and Health and Human Services.

I guess that was a recommendation that the Commission felt should have been adopted, and we have adopted it.

Third, salary reductions made under salary-reduction plans qualifying under section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code would, as recommended by the National Commission, be included in taxable wages for purposes of OASDHI, as would certain other forms of noncash compensation at the time the employee elects to forego current cash for a noncash benefit.

In particular, under the committee bill, amounts deferred under a qualified "cash or deferred" plan or a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement would be includible in the FICA wage base. Similarly, amounts used to fund fringe benefits under a cafeteria plan would be included in the wage base if the employee had an option under the plan to defer income pursuant to a cash or deferred plan. Amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan would be included in the FICA wage base in the year the related services were performed. Other nonqualified deferred compensation would be included in the FICA wage base when it becomes available to the employee. These changes should prevent future decreases in OASDHI tax income and benefit credits that might otherwise occur from increased use of deferred compensation arrangements.

I must say we think that is a rather significant provision for the future.

FAIL-SAFE PROVISIONS

The National Commission unanimously recommended that the social security financing package include a "fail-safe" provision—some mechanism for insuring that benefits continue to be paid even under adverse economic conditions. No specific formula was recommended, however. The options were: Some form of triggered COLA reductions, tax increases, general revenue borrowing, or some combination of these.

The committee bill incorporates the first option, that of triggered COLA reductions.

And the record should indicate this was a provision offered in the Committee by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG).

Under this provision, offered in committee by Senator LONG, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required—for any year after 1984 that reserves are projected to be less than 20 percent of outgo and falling—to announce by the preceding July 1 the amount of the COLA that could be provided without further depleting trust fund reserves. Should Congress then fail to respond by providing the additional financing necessary to keep reserves from falling, the lower COLA would then go into effect in January.

That is a real fail-safe provision, but it does give Congress 6 months within which to act so we would have time if we wanted to find some other way to do it without any COLA reduction. That could be done.

People with benefits above $250 monthly would be affected first. In order for this fail-safe to go into effect, trusts funds would have to be both critically low—20 percent of annual outgo or less—and reserves would have to be falling. In other words, it would have to be falling from the 20 percent downward.

To further bolster the trust funds in the event of adverse economic circumstances, the bill includes interfund borrowing between the three social security trust funds. So as not to allow deficits in any one of the trust funds to bankrupt another, the committee included strict requirements for interest payments and repayment of principal and interest—beginning no later than 1988.

This was a particular concern of the committee and particular concern of Senators DURENBERGER and BAUCUS as I recall as well as others who were concerned about the OSI funds.

Also, when trust funds are unable to pay at least 1½ months of benefits, the Secretary of Treasury would be required to transfer to the OASDI trust funds on the first day of the month the full amount of payroll tax revenues expected to be collected during the month. This is a little provision called normalization.

Normalizing tax transfers would provide income to the trust funds at the start of the month—when benefit expenditures are heavily concentrated. Once again, interest would be charged on the excess sums so transferred.

Together, these three provisions—the COLA fail-safe, interfund borrowing, and normalized tax transfers—should provide the safety valve necessary to insure the continued solvency of social security (OASDI) during the 1980's.

I really believe that with those additions and with the change made in the Finance Committee, the changes in those three areas—I guess if we did not change the normalization, we changed the other two areas somewhat—that we have provided a real fail-safe and it should protect all those who participate in short term.

We move from the short term to the long term.

LONG RANGE

To close the long-range deficit in OASDI, the committee bill would lower the long-term cost of the program through a combination approach. First, the bill would raise the age at which full retirement benefits are payable from 65 to 66, by 1 month a year, between 2000-2012. Early retirement benefits would continue to be payable at 62. This provision would reduce the OASDI deficit by 0.4 percent of taxable payroll. Second, the bill would gradually reduce the level of present law benefits payable to people who retire after the turn of the century by about 5 percent. In other words, people would come on to the rolls at a benefit level about 5 percent lower than now projected. This, of course, would still be at a level much higher than today. This change would reduce the deficit by another 0.43 percent of taxable payroll. In conjunction with the rest of the bill, these two changes would completely eliminate the OASDI deficit projected by the Social Security Board of Trustees.

PROMPT ACTION ESSENTIAL

In my view, this is a good bill in the sense that it represents a fair compromise between all of the parties that have a stake in social security. While some of us may have wished to go further, particularly with regard to short-range financing, we did the best we could recognizing that bipartisan consensus was essential. Opening social security up again to the partisan political bickering of 1981 would have served no one's interests.

Before us we have a bill that incorporates a set of recommendations offered by the National Commission that is supported by a broad group including Representative CLAUDE PEPPER; Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO; and Save Our Security, on the one hand; and Robert Beck, president of Prudential; and the Business Roundtable, on the other hand; as well as by President Reagan and House Speaker O'NEILL. A bill very similar to the one passed by the committee was approved last week in the House of Representatives by a vote of 282 to 148.

The American people—the 36 million people receiving benefits as well as the 116 million working people who support the system—deserve the speedy consideration of this bipartisan package of recommendations. Confidence in the long-term viability of social security can be restored only by enacting measures that help put the system on a sound financial footing and do so without imposing an unrealistic tax burden on present and future workers.

MEDICARE

Title III of the committee amendment provides for a major change in the way Medicare pays for hospital services, a change which the Senator from Kansas wishes to point out, was initiated by this body last year.

As you will recall, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 contained a provision directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop, in consultation with the Finance Committee and the Committee on Ways and Means, proposals for the reimbursement of hospitals under Medicare on a prospective basis. The Department's report was submitted in late 1982. Hearings were held by the Finance Committee's health subcommittee on February 2 and 17, 1983. Witnesses present at the hearings represented the hospital industry, provider groups, the insurance industry, consumers, and representatives of the business community.

Mr. President, a great many issues were raised during these hearings, many of which we tried to address in the drafting of this legislation. Clearly, there are those problems we were unable to solve, but I am hopeful that over time, once the system is in place, we will continue to make changes as necessary.

The provisions contained in this bill are by no means perfect. Any time you attempt to devise a new system, problems occur which you were either unaware of, or unable to resolve at the outset. This system is no different. However, this Senator believes ample flexibility has been provided, giving the Secretary the opportunity to adjust the system, and in some cases directing the Secretary to make certain changes when possible. For example, on the issue of severity of illness, we know that certain institutions, many of which are teaching hospitals, care for patients that are far sicker than the average patient and consume a greater number of resources. A DRG payment may not be sufficient in these cases. To help adjust for this concern, the provision agreed to by the Finance Committee contains two adjustments for teaching institutions. The first recognizes the direct costs of teaching—salaries, blackboards—and passes these costs through. The second adjustment recognizes the indirect costs of teaching and doubles the current adjustment for these costs. This will certainly help to recognize some of the unusual costs faced by these institutions.

In addition to these two adjustments, we have also provided an institution the opportunity to apply to the Secretary for additional payments where the length of stay for a particular case is unusually long, or the cost unusually high as compared to the DRG rate. The House bill only provides for special treatment for long lengths of stay.

Our bill also contains a provision requiring that the Secretary make adjustments or exceptions as he deems appropriate to take into account the special circumstances of hospitals caring for a large number of low-income patients. Sole community providers are given special treatment, as are psychiatric hospitals, childrens hospitals, and rehabilitation hospitals.

I understand the distinguished Senator from Texas will offer an amendment to assist those institutions that serve as regional or national referral centers, an amendment we are certainly willing to accept.

By summarizing these exceptions and adjustments the Senator from Kansas wants to make it clear that every attempt has been made to identify and resolve those legitimate concerns raised by institutions across the country.

As I said at the outset, this is a new program, and we are not sure of all the answers. These provisions give us a chance to test out some answers to some specific problems, while getting the system into place.

INDUSTRY SUPPORT

The hospital industry has made it clear that they want to move ahead with this system. They do not like the current system of controls any more than we do. They want a system that finally puts some incentives for efficiency into place. They are, of course, concerned that we treat hospitals equitably, but also believe that our recommendations go a long way toward resolving some of these concerns.

MAJOR PROVISIONS OF THE PROSPECTIVE PROPOSAL

DIAGNOSTIC-RELATED GROUPS AND RATES

Under the committee amendment, the Secretary is required to determine prospectively a payment amount for each Medicare hospital discharge. DRG rates would be established for urban and rural areas both nationally and in each of four census regions.

These rates would be increased for fiscal year 1984 and fiscal year 1985 by the marketbasket plus 1 percentage point. Adjustments for future years would be decided upon by the Secretary, based in part upon recommendations made by an independent commission.

Changes in the relative weights of the DRG's would be made at least every 5 years to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources. The independent commission mentioned earlier will also assist the Secretary in making these changes.

OUTLIERS

Another major provision is the one that deals with outliers, the unusually costly cases or those with particularly long lengths of stay. As noted earlier, our proposal is more generous in dealing with these costs.

EXCLUSION OF CAPITAL-RELATED EXPENSES AND MEDICAL EDUCATION EXPENSES

In the case of capital costs and direct education costs, we will continue to reimburse hospitals as we do under current law until October 1, 1986, after which time capital costs will no longer be "passed through."

In the case of indirect medical expenses the proposal doubles the current teaching adjustment.

EFFECTIVE DATE/TRANSITION

The proposal would be in effect for individual hospital accounting years beginning on or after October 1, 1983. The bill also provides for a 3-year transition from the current system to a full national DRG system. During the transition the hospitals would be paid a mixed rate based on their historical costs, a national DRG rate and a regional DRG rate. This transition provides ample opportunity to the hospitals to adjust to the new system.

EXEMPTIONS, EXCEPTIONS, AND ADJUSTMENTS

As noted earlier in my comments, certain hospitals are excluded from the prospective system and adjustments and exceptions are provided for others to accommodate certain concerns, such as unusual patient case-loads or geographic location.

PEER REVIEW

The proposal includes a requirement that hospitals contract with a professional review organization selected by the Secretary under title XI of the Social Security Act. It will be particularly important that a monitoring system be in place in conjunction with a payment program that pays an established rate per diagnosis. We will want to continue to insure that appropriate and necessary services are provided.

STATE COST CONTROL PROGRAMS

The States will continue to be able to design and implement State payment systems. In fact, the language contained in the proposal strengthens the case of States applying for Medicare waivers as long as they meet the requirements established by the statute.

We continue to be interested in examining the State systems, believing that there are a great many ways one might go about addressing the problem of rising hospital costs, and that the Federal Government might still have a great deal to learn.

ADMINISTRATIVE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW

The committee amendment continues to provide the opportunity for institutions to seek administrative and judicial review in all cases except those that relate to the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors.

STUDIES AND REPORTS

Mr. President, the last major provision of title III deals with studies and reports. The committee has asked that the Secretary complete a number of studies on issues of concern to us in establishing this new prospective system.

Of particular note are the studies and reports dealing with the severity of illness, intensity of care, or other such modifications to the diagnosis related groups. These issues are critical to our efforts to insure that institutions receive a DRG payment that is reasonably sensitive to the care being provided to patients.

COMMISSION

There is one other aspect of title III that bears noting. This is the creation of a Commission of experts to assist the Secretary in making adjustments to the DRG's and in examining those changes in the health care industry that have a bearing on health care delivery and the cost of care.

The Commission will help us look at such important issues as variations in treatment practices, resource usage, and medically appropriate patterns of care. Because this Commission would be made up of a mix of experts, for example, nurses, physicians, employers, and hospital administrators, they will be able to explore a number of diverse issues, such as the role of nutrition in the treatment of a patient and its impact on the overall use of services.

Changes in technology will be particularly important for us to track. We certainly do not want to discourage the kind of innovation we have come to expect from the health care industry. The introduction of a new treatment modality or a new piece of equipment can have enormous implications for a particular DRG and its so-called weight. We want to make sure that changes in the DRG's really follow changes in the industry.

NEED FOR ACTION

Like the other aspects of S. 1, this title should be given every consideration by my colleagues. It is clearly time to move away from the old inefficient cost based reimbursement system, to one that puts some incentives in place. These provisions do exactly that.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

The Finance Committee included four provisions in S. 1 dealing with the unemployment insurance system. The first provision would provide a 6-month extension of the Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program currently scheduled to expire on March 31, 1983. Two provisions deal with coverage and eligibility issues, and the final provision provides some relief from the interest and loan requirements of current law. The House-passed bill, H.R. 1900, includes only the extension of FSC.

The Finance Committee provision extends the Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program for 6 months, from April 1, 1983, through September 30, 1983. The basic tier of benefits has been redesigned to reflect more accurately current unemployment conditions. The proposal has three new and important features:

First, extra weeks of FSC benefits are provided to claimants who have exhausted the initial FSC entitlement prior to April 1, 1983. These benefits are again geared to the level of distress in each State.

Second, claimants who have not used their full initial entitlement are permitted to continue to receive FSC benefits after April 1, 1983.

Third, those individuals who may have FSC entitlement remaining on September 30, 1983, when this program will expire, will not have their benefits immediately cease. Instead, the proposal allows a "phase out" of benefits whereby the claimant would receive half of the remaining weeks of his entitlement. To me, this is attractive because it allows the individual who becomes eligible for FSC late in the program's life to receive some benefit from it.

In order to afford this "phase out" feature, it is necessary to scale back somewhat the level of benefits available. The current FSC program provides 16 weeks of benefits in States with the highest insured unemployment rates (IUR). This proposal would allow 14, the same level provided in the House-passed bill. In my opinion, this is justified not only on cost grounds, but also because there does appear to be a downward trend in unemployment which is projected to continue, although slowly, through the spring and summer. Should this not be the case, I certainly expect that the Congress will be in session this summer and alterations can be made, if necessary.

Additionally, we have included an increase in the number of weeks of work required to qualify for FSC benefits—from 20 to 26 weeks. This requirement would be applied on a prospective basis only, that is, for people who first begin receiving FSC after April 1. It seems reasonable to me that a work force attachment beyond 20 weeks should be required for the receipt of benefits of as many as 53 weeks in some States.

CBO estimates the fiscal year 1983 cost of this proposal at $2.1 billion. There would also be a cost in fiscal year 1984 of $120 million. This is in addition to the $2.5 billion fiscal year 1982 and fiscal year 1983 cost of the current FSC program. It is a substantial expenditure of Federal dollars and demonstrates a real commitment to aiding our Nation's unemployed. We may not be able to go further.

The second provision approved by the Finance Committee would correct a serious situation which was brought to the attention of the committee by one of our Members, Senator BRADLEY, and by a number of our House colleagues. This provision would permit a State to treat FSC claimants serving on jury duty and those who are hospitalized in the same manner as such claimants are treated under the regular State programs. A number of cases were documented in which FSC claimants were terminated from benefits for failing to meet the "able to work" and "available for work" requirements under Federal law. These claimants were serving on jury duty or, in some cases, had been suddenly hospitalized. The committee recognized that such occurrences are generally beyond the control of the individual. Therefore, the Bradley amendment was adopted to allow States the flexibility to deal with such cases as they do in their own State programs.

The third provision would require States to deny unemployment benefits to school employees and certain employees who perform services for educational institutions. This denial of benefits would apply during periods between academic years or terms. The denial would take place only if there was reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. This amendment equalizes the treatment of these employees with the treatment now accorded to professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities.

Finally, the Finance Committee adopted a measure which provides limited relief for States which are borrowing from the Federal Treasury to meet benefits payments. This is a responsible provision which is deserving of the support of the full Senate. The committee developed a plan which will allow a State to spread the interest it owes over a 5-year period. The State can also qualify for a reduction of 1 percentage point in the interest rate charged on borrowing. Additionally, a State which does not qualify for the full cap on the loss of the Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) credit may, under the committee provision, qualify for a partial cap.

Some action on the State's part for this relief is, of course, necessary. The Finance Committee proposal requires States to make progress toward solvency of 30 percent the first year, 40 percent the second year, and 50 percent the third year. If the State makes an effort to reach solvency which increases those percentages to 50, 80, and 90, the interest rate will be reduced by 1 percent.

Even this limited relief will have a Federal budget impact. The loss of interest paid to the Federal Government could total $319 million in fiscal year 1983 from the deferral alone. The reduced interest rate would only increase the revenue impact. The availability of the partial cap on the offset credit loss would also have a negative impact on the Federal deficit of some $250 million. However, the Finance Committee recognized the fact that the current recession has been deeper and more prolonged than we expected in the summer of 1981 when the interest and cap provisions were enacted as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act. Therefore, the committee was willing to make some temporary changes in the current law in order to allow States extra time to enact the necessary State law changes to bring their programs closer to solvency.

I urge my colleagues to support these modifications in the interest and loan provisions. I believe that the Finance Committee proposal treats in a fair manner those States which must continue to borrow. I believe that the Finance Committee provision also protects the interests of those States who have operated solvent programs over the years, borrowing when necessary but repaying on time and making the required State law changes to insure solvency. The interests of those States and their taxpayers deserve our attention.

CONCLUDING REMARKS

The social security financing package, as well as the medicare and unemployment compensation provisions, represents the end-result of intensive negotiations between a bipartisan group of interested parties.

I urge my colleagues to support this important and comprehensive bill.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a detailed description of each of the social security provisions along with cost estimates provided by the Office of the Actuary, SSA, and the Congressional Budget Office, and also a detailed description of the Finance Committee amendments dealing with the unemployed insurance program.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ACTUARIAL COST ANALYSIS OF S. 1, AS AMENDED BY THE FINANCE COMMITTEE, PREPARED BY THE OFFICE OF THE ACTUARY OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION, AND ACTUARIAL COST ANALYSIS OF THE BILL PREPARED BY THE CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES, SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION,

March 11, 1983.

Preliminary estimate of the impact of S. 1 as reported by the Senate Finance Committee on the long-range financial status of the OASDI system

Mr. HARRY C. BALLANTYNE,
Chief Actuary

The attached table includes preliminary long-range estimates for S. 1 as reported by the Senate Finance Committee based on the 1983 trustees Report Alternative II-B assumptions. Enactment of this bill will result in a long-range actuarial surplus of 0.08 percent of taxable payroll for OASDI combined. Estimates for individual provisions are shown in the table generally only for those provisions with significant long-range impact on OASDI. However, the impact on OASDI of all provisions of S. 1 as reported is included in the totals.

The estimates assume that the allocation to the DI trust fund will be similar to the allocation in H.R. 1900 as reported by the Ways and Means Committee, except that after 1999 the rate would increase from 0.60 to 0.65 each.

FRANCISCO R. BAYO,
Deputy Chief Actuary.

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,
Washington, D.C., March 11, 1983.

Hon. ROBERT J. DOLE,
Chairman, Committee on Finance, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to Section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Congressional Budget Office has prepared the attached cost estimate for S. 1, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983.

Should the Committee so desire, we would be pleased to provide further details on this estimate.

Sincerely,

JAMES BLUM
(For Alice M. Rivlin, Director).

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

One. Bill No.: S. 1.

Two. Bill title: Social Security Act Amendments of 1983

Three. Bill status: As ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983.

Four. Bill purpose: To amend the Social Security Act to assure the solvency of the Social Security trust funds; to accelerate presently scheduled payroll tax increases; to tax 50 percent of certain individuals' benefits; to increase the self-employment tax; to delay the payment of cost-of-living adjustments; to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals; to extend the federal supplemental compensation program; and for other purposes.

Five. Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The following table shows the estimated costs of this bill to the Federal Government.

Because no draft language has been received, CBO cannot estimate certain provisions in this bill at this time. These provisions relate to the Unemployment Insurance and SSI programs. The cost estimate for the remaining provisions present the best estimates based on current information.

The spending effects of this bill fall within budget functions 550, 600 and 700. The budget authority is the net result of higher interest income on higher trust fund balances for the Old Age Survivors Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI) and Hospital Insurance (HI) programs, transfers to the trust funds from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury, and required additional budget authority for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI), Food

Stamps, Veteran's Pensions and Medicaid programs.

Basis of estimate

This bill generally incorporates the January, 1983 recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It also incorporates provisions affecting the Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and Unemployment Insurance Programs. Table 2, shows the costs, savings and revenue impacts of this bill to the federal government.

One major purpose of this bill is to ensure the continued payment of all Social Security benefits. The impact of some of the provisions in the bill on the financial status of the Social Security trust funds differs from their impact on the federal budget. Many provisions transfer funds within the government, which has no impact on budget outlays or receipts. In addition, the savings to and income into the trust funds generate additional interest income or budget authority. This income also does not affect the unified budget deficit. The impact of the bill on the trust funds therefore is shown separately in Table 3.

³ The budgetary impact cannot be estimated because the bill would allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services, as advised by a panel of experts, nearly unlimited discretion in setting payment rates for inpatient hospital services. Those rates could be set such that medicare outlays in the aggregate would increase or decrease.

⁴ The cost of this provision cannot be estimated because it depends on the actions of State hospital rate-setting commissions in Massachusetts and New York.

⁵ SSI costs do not include costs of the provision requiring notices to be sent to social security beneficiaries informing them about SSI. See the text for details.

Source: CBO estimates based on February 1983 economic assumptions.

A section by section description for the basis of the estimates for the provisions in this bill having major cost impact is given below. These estimates were prepared from a draft of the bill before Committee amendments were added and from mark-up documents. No bill as amended has been received.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING THE FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

Cover new Federal employees

This provision extends Social Security coverage to all new permanent federal civilian employees as of January 1, 1984. The proposal is expected to cover about 150,000 new permanent federal entrants per year through 1988. The proposal raises $61 million in unified budget revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $1.7 billion in revenues from fiscal year 1984 through 1988.

This provision assumes no change in the current Civil Service Retirement system for those federal workers newly covered by Social Security. No impact of any Civil Service change is given in this estimate.

The estimate is based on CBO's current economic and federal employment assumptions.

Cover workers in nonprofit organizations

The provision requires mandatory coverage of all employees of nonprofit institutions and organizations. Approximately 20 percent of employees of nonprofit organizations and institutions are not currently covered by Social Security. Covering the last 20 percent of nonprofit employees raises $1 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $8.7 billion in fiscal years 1984 through 1988.

The extension of mandatory coverage to all non-profit employees result in an income tax offset against the increase in OASDHI revenues. The offset equals 25 percent of the employer contribution and reduces income tax revenues. Income tax revenues are estimated to fall because it is assumed that non-profit employers pass the entire payroll tax increase onto their employees in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The estimate was based on CBO's economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Termination of State and local coverage

Currently, state and local governments can terminate Social Security coverage upon giving two years notice of their intention to withdraw, and then doing so. This provision would prohibit any such withdrawals, effective with the bill's enactment.

CBO's current law revenue estimates do not assume reductions in trust fund income that could result from withdrawals of certain state and local governments. Thus, there would be no revenue gain to the CBO baseline estimates from prohibiting such withdrawals.

Delay payment of annual cost-of-living adjustment from July to January of each year

This section delays the payment of future cost-of-living adjustments (COLA's) for Social Security for six months, from July to January of each year. In addition, the provision changes the base period from which the COLA is calculated.

The COLA is measured by the growth in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) from the first calendar quarter of the previous year to the first quarter of the current year. Whenever the increase is greater than three percent, an adjustment to the benefits paid each July is made. The July, 1983 COLA will be paid in January, 1984 under this provision, and will be based on the current law indexing period. Subsequent adjustments will be based on the CPI growth from the third quarter of one year to the next. The table below shows the CBO COLA assumptions under current law and under this provision.

ASSUMED PERCENTAGE INCREASE IN SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS UNDER CURRENT LAWS AND UNDER S. 1

| | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |
|------------------|------|------|------|------|------|------|
| Current law—July | 4.1 | 4.6 | 4.5 | 4.2 | 4.0 | 3.8 |
| Proposed—January | 0.0 | 4.1 | 4.6 | 4.4 | 4.1 | 3.8 |

This bill also guarantees that a January, 1984 COLA will be given, even if the rate of inflation is so low that the adjustment is less than three percent. Since CBO's current economic assumptions have this COLA adjustment at 4.1 percent in 1984, this clause has no cost effect.

The change in the COLA base of payment is expected to save $24 billion in Social Security benefits over the period, and an additional $1.3 billion in SSI and other benefits directly linked to this COLA. These COLA changes would increase food costs by $240 million over the period as incomes of food stamp recipients decline.

Taxation of 50 percent of social security and railroad retirement benefits for individuals with incomes above $25,000 and married couples above $32,000

This provision includes in taxpayers' adjusted gross income (AGI) half of Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance (OASDI) benefits when those benefits plus AGI exceeds a threshold amount. For the purpose of taxing half of OASDI benefits, the interest from tax free bonds is added to AGI. The threshold is $25,000 for single returns, $32,000 for joint returns, and zero for married couples filing separately. This limit would be calculated including an individual's or couple's tax exempt income, although this income would not count towards determining one's marginal tax rates. The amount of benefits included in AGI would be the lesser of either 50 percent of benefits or the one-half of the balance of the taxpayers' summed income over the threshold.

The provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 and $15.3 billion from fiscal year 1984 through 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates based on the Social Security Trustees' II-B assumptions, with benefit amounts lowered to take account of the CBO's lower inflation (and therefore cost-of-living adjustment) projections.

Increase social security payroll tax (FICA) and 1984 tax credit

The provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax (FICA) increases for employees and employers. The payroll tax increase to 5.7 percent from 5.4 percent on January 1, 1984 instead of January 1, 1985. Another tax rate speedup increases the rate to 6.06 percent from 5.7 percent on January 1, 1988 and January 1, 1989. This increase was scheduled to take effect in 1990. The proposal also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

The FICA tax acceleration results in an income tax offset equal to 25 percent of the employer payroll tax contribution. The offset lowers income tax receipts because employers are assumed to pass back onto employees the full payroll tax increase in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The provision is estimated to raise OASDI unified budget revenues $6.4 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $19.0 billion from fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The income tax offset equals $2.2 billion from fiscal years 1984 through 1988. The revenue loss due to the payroll tax credit results in a $4.2 billion loss by fiscal year 1985.

The estimates are based upon CBO's latest economic assumption using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Increase self-employed tax rate

The provision raises the self-employed payroll tax rate (SECA) to a level equal to the combined employer-employee contribution rate (including the FICA tax acceleration). In 1984 the SECA OASDI rate increases 3.35 percent and the HI rate increases 1.3 percent for a SECA rate of 14 percent. Further, the provision includes a payroll tax credit equal to 2.9 percent of total SECA contributions in 1984 and 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, and 2.1 percent in 1987 and 1988.

The proposal raises, $1,408 million in SECA revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $20 billion from fiscal year 1984 through 1988. The income tax loss due to the self-employed payroll tax credit equals $893 million in fiscal year 1984 and $10.9 billion from fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988.

Reallocation of OASI and DI tax rates

This provision has no net cost to the federal government. It realigns the payroll tax portions allocated to the OASI and DI trust funds so as to keep the two funds' balances at approximately the same percentage of outlays at the start of each year.

Benefits to certain widows, divorced and disabled women

These provisions would (1) allow the continuation of benefits to surviving, divorced or disabled spouses who remarry; (2) change the indexing procedure for benefits for those receiving deferred survivor benefits; (3) allow divorced spouses to draw benefits regardless of whether the former spouse is receiving benefits; and (4) increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers.

Together, these provisions would cost less than $200 million per year once fully effective in fiscal year 1985. The largest cost in this group of provisions would allow disabled widows or widowers ages 50 to 59 to receive benefits at an amount equal to which non-disabled widows or widowers over age 59 currently receive. This provision is estimated to cost $90 million in fiscal year 1984, $125 million in 1985 and an estimated $600 million over the five year period. Based on Social Security Administration data, approximately 200,000 recipients would receive $50 or 20 percent in added benefits per month under this provision.

In addition, a provision in this bill to allow women with children additional years of zero earnings in the calculation of their benefits.

Reimbursement to OASDI trust funds for military wage credits and unearned OASDI checks

These provisions will credit the three Social Security trust funds with $23.8 billion as part of a transfer in 1983 from the general fund of the Treasury. A total of $22.4 billion of this transfer represents the present value of estimated benefits arising from Social Security credits granted to military personnel for service prior to 1957, and the amount of taxes on these credits between 1956 and 1983. The remaining transfer is for the estimated amounts of uncashed Social Security checks for past years. Checks uncashed for longer than six months will also be credited back to the trust funds in future years.

These estimates were provided by the Social Security Administration. Although they add large amounts to the trust funds, the provisions do not have any cost impact to the federal government as a whole. There are offsetting interfund transfers within the federal unified budget.

State payment speedup

This provision will require state and local governments to transfer their payroll tax collections to the Treasury under the same rules as private sector employers. Currently, state payments are made on the 30th day of each month. The provision requires that states transmit payroll tax collections to the federal government soon after their employees are paid. Therefore, the Treasury would receive state FICA collections more frequently. Thus, the transfer to the Treasury would be hastened, adding to trust fund revenues by $1.6 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $2.2 billion over the period.

This estimate was prepared by the Social Security Administration.

LONG-TERM FINANCING

This section of the bill reduces initial benefit levels beginning in the year 2000. There are no effects resulting from these provisions in the 1983 to 1988 period. In addition, the retirement age will be gradually raised from 65 to 66 beginning in the year 2000.

These provisions are aimed mostly at work incentives for the elderly, and at insuring the financial soundness of the trust funds. The provisions would eliminate the retirement test for workers over the age of 65 beginning in 1990. This test reduces retirement benefits by $1 for each $2 in earnings over a given amount ($6,600 in 1983). A delayed retirement credit of 8 percent would also be phased in. This credit would increase from 3 percent the added benefit amount paid to a retiree for each year a worker decides to retire after age 65.

Another section of the bill would require Congress to act if the balances in the trust funds fall below 20 percent of a year's outlays. If Congress does not, and interfund borrowing (also provided for in the bill) does not achieve this result in each fund, then the cost-of-living adjustments would be altered until the funds recover. The cost-of-living adjustment would be reduced first for those with higher benefits, but those with lower benefits would also ultimately be reduced, if necessary. This cost estimate does not assume any further cost-of-living adjustment reduction beyond the six month delay discussed above.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME PROVISIONS

This title of the bill raises SSI benefits and makes other minor changes in SSI and AFDC. Together these changes are estimated to add $728 million to federal outlays in fiscal year 1985.

Beginning July 1, 1983, SSI benefits would be increased by $20 a month for individuals living in their own household and by $30 a month for couples. These increased benefits would more than offset the effect on SSI recipients of the COLA delay. The largest part of the added cost comes from the benefit increase for current SSI beneficiaries. In addition, CBO estimates that about 125,000 persons would become new beneficiaries of SSI. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits. For these persons, CBO has assumed a participation rate of 25 percent (that is, of all the newly eligible, 25 percent would actually participate in SSI). Some of the other new beneficiaries would be persons previously eligible who would now choose to participate as a result of the increased benefit levels. There are also an estimated 65,000 persons who were receiving SSI state supplements only who would now become eligible for a small federal SSI payment.

Partially offsetting the costs in SSI from these benefit increases is a savings in the food stamp program as incomes of SSI beneficiaries rise. There are also added costs in Medicaid for those new SSI beneficiaries who also become newly eligible for Medicaid.

This title would also enable temporary residents of emergency public shelters to receive SSI for three months in any twelve-month period. This provision is estimated to cost $1 million in fiscal year 1983 and $3 million a year thereafter. In addition, Title IV would disregard in the determination of benefits any in-kind assistance based on need received by SSI and AFDC beneficiaries. This provision, which is effective only through September 30, 1984, is estimated to cost less than $500,000 a year in SSI and $1 million in 1983 and $2 million in 1984 in AFDC.

The bill also apparently includes a provision that would require the Social Security Administration to send notices to Social Security beneficiaries informing them of their potential eligibility for SSI and urging them to contact a local office if they think they would be eligible. No language is available for this provision and the extent of the notices could vary considerably. Hence, there is no cost estimate for the provision. However, costs under even a fairly limited provision could be significant, perhaps around $50 million. Not only would there be added administrative costs but it would be reasonable to assume that around 5 percent of those receiving a notice who are eligible for SSI would apply for SSI benefits.

Federal supplemental compensation

This section of the bill would extend for six months the federal supplemental compensation program (FSC) now scheduled to terminate March 31, 1983. It would provide up to 14 weeks of additional unemployment compensation benefits for individuals exhausting regular or extended unemployment compensation benefits for individuals exhausting regular or extended unemployment benefits after March 31, the maximum number of weeks provided varying with a state's insured unemployment rate (IUR). In addition, it would provide those persons who have exhausted their FSC entitlement before March 31 with up to 8 additional weeks of benefits, the maximum number of weeks again varying with a state's IUR. Also, it would allow those persons who have benefit entitlements remaining on September 30, 1983 to receive up to one-half the balance of those entitlements.

The estimate of the fiscal impact of this section of the bill is based upon estimates of the states' IURs and weeks compensated, and the determination of whether a state will be paying extended benefits which underlies the CBO baseline. It is assumed that the national seasonally adjusted IUR will be 4.4 percent for both quarters of the extension. Furthermore, it is assumed that 45 percent of those claimants in the current law FSC program would exhaust and collect added weeks of benefits during the extension. This point estimate is based upon the experience of exhaustees of the federal supplemental benefits program of 1975 to 1978.

CBO estimates that any FSC extension results in a reduction in AFDC and Food Stamp outlays as individuals who exhaust unemployment benefits and would otherwise draw benefits from these means-tested programs continue to draw jobless payments. It is estimated that the extension through September 1983 will cause AFDC and food stamp expenditures to drop by $142 million. In addition, CBO estimated that the six-month FSC extension will cause income tax revenues to increase in fiscal year 1984 by $142 million.

Loan reform

This bill contains a provision relating to limiting the federal tax credit reduction and to paying interest on federal unemployment compensation loans to states. CBO has provided no estimates of the fiscal impact of these provisions.

Conforming changes in medicare premiums

The bill would postpone from July 1 to January 1 of the following year increases in Medicare premiums. Current premium amounts would apply during the interim. Future premiums (and the general revenue contribution to SMI) would be calculated on the basis of estimated incurred costs for the calendar year during which the premium would apply. Consonant with the changes made by TEFRA a year ago, SMI premiums would be set at 25 percent of cost per aged enrollee in calendar years 1984 and 1985, but would be limited in subsequent years by the cost-of-living increase in social security benefits in the previous January.

The estimated costs of this provision are the difference between projections of income from premiums under current law and under the amendment. Premium income under the amendment is the product of monthly enrollment projections and monthly premium amounts computed on the basis of projected incurred costs by calendar year.

General. The bill would provide for reimbursing most hospitals for inpatient services provided to Medicare enrollees on the basis of payment amounts, varying by diagnosis, fixed in advance of the period in which they would apply. The provision would be effective with hospital cost-reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983. With the exceptions discussed below, for the first two cost-reporting periods affected, the payment rates would be set to assure that total Medicare payments for inpatient hospital services in affected hospitals would be neither greater nor less than under current law. If implemented faithfully, the provision would have no budgetary impact in fiscal years 1984 and 1985. In subsequent fiscal years, however, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, advised by a panel of experts, would have nearly unlimited discretion in setting payment rates. Given that discretion, CBO is unable to determine whether the prospective payment provision would result in federal costs or savings after fiscal year 1985.

The proposed mandatory Social Security coverage of employees of non-profit organizations could raise labor costs for some hospitals. Under the bill, Medicare's share of any such costs would be additional costs to the Medicare program. CBO is unable to estimate those costs at this time.

Change in State Waiver Requirement. The bill would phase out the requirement that the rate of increase in Medicare hospital costs in states currently reimbursing hospitals under demonstration agreements entered into after August 1982 be less than the national rate of increase in those costs. The provision would affect only Massachusetts and New York, both of which operate hospital rate-setting programs that have for several years held their hospital cost increases well below the national average. If those states were to continue to be as successful as they have been, the provision would have no budgetary impact. On the other hand, the provision would allow larger cost increases than current law. If Medicare hospital costs were to rise one percentage point faster under the provision, federal spending would increase by about $50 million in 1984.

ESTIMATED COST TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

A number of the provisions of this bill would affect budgets of state and local governments. Their estimated net impact on categories of state and local expenditures is shown in the table below.

TABLE 4.—ESTIMATED COST TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

| | 1983 | 1984 | 1985 | 1986 | 1987 | 1988 |
|-------------------------------|------|-------|------|------|------|------|
| Payroll costs..... | | 291 | 159 | | | 446 |
| Speedup of FICA deposits..... | | 800 | 105 | 73 | 57 | 105 |
| SSI State supplements..... | 35 | 120 | 130 | 125 | 125 | 130 |
| Medicaid..... | -8 | 26 | 49 | 60 | 60 | 60 |
| AFDC..... | -29 | | 1 | | | |
| General assistance..... | -13 | | | | | |
| Total..... | -15 | 1,236 | 443 | 258 | 242 | 741 |

Note.—Basis of estimate: The acceleration of FICA rate increases would add to State and local government payroll costs. Currently, about 70 percent of total State and local government employment is covered by social security. State and local governments would have added payroll tax contributions of $291 million in fiscal year 1984 and $696 million over the entire 1984-88 period. The CBO estimate does not include a future cost to States who would no longer be able to withdraw from the social security system under this legislation.

The provision speeding up FICA deposits would require state and local governments to forward their FICA deposits about one month earlier. In the first fiscal year following enactment, states would show higher budgetary outlays for their (the employers') share of the FICA deposits which is one-half of the total savings shown for the federal government. In addition, state and local governments would lose small amounts of interest they would otherwise have earned on the balances over a one month period.

The changes in SSI would increase state and local government costs. Virtually all states supplement federal SSI benefits. The $20 benefit increase would raise state costs unless states were to lower their state supplement benefit levels. Typically, lowering of benefit levels requires action by state legislatures. The CBO cost estimate assumes that current state supplement levels remain in effect. Consequently, it represents a maximum cost to state and local governments.

The CBO cost estimate for the $20 benefit increase incorporates added costs to states and localities for current state supplement only beneficiaries, for new state supplement beneficiaries as a result of the new federal beneficiaries (about one-third of federal SSI beneficiaries receive state supplements), and for new state supplement only beneficiaries who are newly eligible. Costs of this provision are estimated to total $124 million in fiscal year 1985.

In addition to the effect of the $20 benefit increase, SSI state supplement costs would be increased by the COLA delays in SSI and OASDI. When COLAs are made, state supplement costs decline slightly because for state supplement only beneficiaries OASDI increases are larger than SSI increases. The costs of the COLA delays are estimated to total about $6 million a year.

The CBO cost estimate does not include any cost effect of the altered "pass-through" requirements of section 402. Current law requires states to pass through to SSI beneficiaries federal benefit increases unless state payment levels are above their December 1976 levels or unless aggregate state SSI supplement expenditures in the 12 months following a federal payment level increase exceed aggregate state expenditures in the 12 months prior to the federal change. This provision would require states to pass through the dollar amount of the COLA that would have occurred in July 1983 under current law and also all future federal benefit increases, even if state payment levels are above the December 1976 levels. Hence, in future years the provision would limit the flexibility of states to reduce supplement levels when federal SSI benefits increase, raising costs for some states. However, for other states—those with payment levels equal to their December 1976 levels—this provision would result in potential savings because they could pass through the July 1983 cost-of-living adjustment amount (roughly $11) rather than the full $20 benefit increase.

Expenditures of state and local governments would also rise because of higher Medicaid costs occasioned by the SSI benefit increase and the Medicare premium delay discussed earlier. The state and local government financing share of Medicaid averages about 46 percent.

The increased federal supplemental compensation benefits for the unemployed would lower state and local government expenditures in two ways. First, AFDC outlays would decline in fiscal year 1983. The state share of such outlays averages 46 percent. Second, outlays for state and local general assistance (GA) programs would also decline. GA programs are fully funded by state and local governments and are means-tested, typically serving those ineligible for AFDC and SSI. There are no reliable statistics on which to base an estimate of savings in GA. However, a rough estimate of the estimated effect in Michigan provided by Michigan analysts was used to estimate national effects. Michigan accounts for about 15 percent of GA expenditures nationwide.

TITLE I OF THE BILL

A. PROVISIONS RELATED TO OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS AND DISABILITY INSURANCE

Coverage of newly hired federal employees (Section 101 of the Bill)

Present law

Approximately 91 percent of the Nation's workers are covered by social security. Federal civilian employees are the only major group excluded from coverage under the social security (OASDI) system. Those excluded (93 percent, or about 2.6 million out of 2.8 million employees) are generally covered by a Federal staff retirement system, engaged in temporary employment, or are members of Congress. (Beginning in 1983, nearly all Federal employees are covered under Medicare.)

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would, effective January 1, 1984, extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been one year or less), and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current Congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system.

This amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to extend coverage to all Federal employees hired after 1983.

The Committee amendment also states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Effective date.—January 1, 1984.

REVENUE GAIN

Coverage of nonprofit employees (Section 102 of the Bill)

Present law

Work performed for a nonprofit tax-exempt organization (specified in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) is excluded for social security coverage unless the organization files a certificate with the Internal Revenue Service waiving its exemption from social security taxes. Nonprofit organizations may terminate coverage upon giving 2 years advance notice, providing coverage has been in effect for 8 years or more. Once coverage has been terminated, the organization cannot again cover its employees. About 4.3 million employees of nonprofit organizations (about 80 percent) are covered.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—January 1, 1984.

Prohibit withdrawal of State and local employees (Section 103 of the Bill)

Present law

Employees of State and local governments may be covered under social security at the option of the State and in agreement with the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Coverage may be terminated if the State gives 2 years written notice of such intent, provided that the State or local group has been covered for at least 5 years. Once coverage is terminated, the group can never again be covered under social security.

Committee Amendment

The Committee amendment would prohibit State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees. Pending terminations would be invalid, effective on enactment. In addition, the amendment would provide an opportunity for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

This amendment is similar to the recommendations of National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Exclusion from social coverage for services performed by members of certain religious sects (sec. 104 of the bill and sec. 3121 of the Code)

Present law

In general, social security (FICA) tax is imposed on every individual who receives wages with respect to employment. In addition, social security tax is imposed on employers who pay wages with respect to employment. There is no exemption, under present law, for employers or employees who are members of religious sects that oppose the social security system. However, present law does provide an exemption from self-employment tax (SECA) for members of religious sects that are conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provision for the care of their dependent members.

Reason for change

The committee believes that employers and employees who are members of the Amish sect, or other religious sects that oppose participation in the social security system, should be treated the same as self-employed members of those sects. That is neither Amish employers nor Amish employees should be required to pay social security taxes. This provision is necessary because, due to economic conditions, many Amish members cannot afford their own farms, but, rather, must work for other Amish farmers.

Explanation of provision

The provision will exempt from social security tax wages paid by individuals who are exempt from self-employment taxes because of their religious beliefs to individuals who are members of religious sects that conscientiously oppose the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provisions for the care of their dependent members. This exemption applies both to the employer and employee portion of social security tax.

The exemption applies only in the case of religious sects that have been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

Effective date

The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Delay cost-of-living adjustment to a calendar year basis (Section 111 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) of social security benefits is applicable to June benefits (payable early in July). The amount of the increase is equal to percentage by which the Consumer Price Index (for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, CPI-W) for the first quarter of the calendar year has increased over the CPI for the first quarter of the previous calendar year. No COLA is paid unless the increase in the CPI is at least 3 percent. By law, cost-of-living adjustments in the SSI program are made at the same time, and in the same amount as the social security cost-of-living adjustment.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would shift the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits to a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. For 1983, the COLA would be calculated as under current law (i.e., the change in the CPI for the first quarter of 1983 over the CPI for the first quarter of 1982). Beginning with the COLA for 1984, the adjustment would be computed by comparing the increase in the CPI for the third quarter of a year over the CPI for the third quarter of the previous year. This would ensure that the lag between the end of the period over which the COLA is measured and the time the COLA is actually applied to benefits remains 3 months. This is the same proposal recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

In addition, the Committee amendment would, for 1983 only, provide the COLA even if it is less than 3 percent. The SMI

(Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium increase would also be shifted to a calendar year basis.

Under the Committee amendment, the SSI COLA would also be shifted to a calendar year basis and would be measured in the same way as for OASDI purposes.

Effective date. For cost-of-living adjustment otherwise payable in July 1983 checks.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits

(Section 112 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security benefits for workers with low average earnings are a relatively high proportion (up to 90 percent) of their average earnings under social security. No distinction is currently made between persons who have a lifetime of low earnings and those who have low average earnings only because they worked few years in covered employment (possibly at high wages) and many years in employment not covered by social security. Both groups receive the heavily weighted social security benefit intended for the first group. The heavily weighted benefit paid to the second group is often referred to as a "windfall".

The present law benefit formula for persons who reach age 62 or who become disabled before age 62 in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of average indexed monthly earnings in covered employment (AIME), plus 32 percent of AIME over $254 and up to $1,528, plus 15 percent of AIME in excess of $1,528.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers who do not have a long record of substantial work under social security, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period as follows:

| Year of first eligibility under OASDI: | Benefit factor | Percent |
|--|----------------|---------|
| 1984..... | 78.4 | |
| 1985..... | 66.8 | |
| 1986..... | 55.2 | |
| 1987..... | 43.6 | |
| 1988 and after..... | 32.0 | |

To moderate the impact of this provision on people with small pensions from non-covered employment, social security benefits could in no case be reduced by more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was non-covered employment. The offset would not apply to persons with pensions based on one year or less of non-covered employment.

In addition, the Committee amendment exempts from any reduction under this provision those individuals who have a long history of substantial work under the social security program. People who have thirty or more years of covered employment in which they paid social security taxes on at least 25 percent of the maximum taxable earnings would have their benefits computed under the regular provisions without any reduction under the windfall provision. People with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment would have the windfall reduction applied on a phased in basis under which the first factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below thirty years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision however. (A year of substantial employment is a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended modifying the social security benefit formula so as to eliminate windfall benefits received by workers who in the future receive social security as well as pensions from non-covered employment. (No specific formula was recommended.)

Effective date.—January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a non-covered pension after 1983.

Benefits for divorced or disabled widowers or widows who remarry
(Section 113 of the Bill)

Present law

Current law permits the continuation of benefits for widows and widowers who remarry after 60, the age of first eligibility for benefits. If the widower marries after age 60, he or she receives the benefits to which he or she is entitled as a wage earner, widower or spouse, whichever is larger. However, benefits for disabled widower(s) and disabled surviving divorced spouses (payable from age 50 to 60) and for surviving divorced spouses (payable at age 60) are terminated if the individual remarries.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that benefits continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarry after age 50, and surviving divorced spouses who remarry after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn. This is comparable to the present law treatment of widows and widowers.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—For benefits payable for months after December 1983.

Changes in indexing for deferred survivor benefits

(Section 114 of the Bill)

Present law

Survivor benefits (for widows, widowers, and surviving children) are based on the deceased worker's earnings in covered employment. Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes.

Should the worker die long before the spouse is eligible for benefits, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible (in old-age or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus, women who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband's unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide wage increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's benefits, whichever is earlier. In no case would benefits be lower than under present law.

Effective date.—For persons becoming eligible for survivors benefits after December 31, 1984.

Independent eligibility for divorced spouses
(Section 115 of the Bill)

Present law

A divorced spouse, eligible for benefits at age 62, may not begin to draw social security benefits until the worker begins to draw benefits. For some divorced women, this means that they may have to wait several years beyond their own retirement age (either because their ex-spouse delays retirement or otherwise fails to apply for benefits) before they can begin to draw benefits.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse has claimed these benefits or has had them suspended because of substantial employment. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that the proposal would only apply to spouses who have been divorced for at least two years.

Increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers

(Section 116 of the Bill)

Present law

Social Security benefits for widows and widowers are first payable at age 60. Benefits are payable in full (i.e., 100 percent of the worker's primary insurance amount) at age 65, and at reduced rates at ages 60-64 (i.e., phasing up from 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 60). Benefits also payable at reduced rates to disabled widows and widowers aged 50-59 (i.e., phasing up from 50 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 50).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would increase benefits for disabled widow(er)s age 50-59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60. The proposal would be applicable to new beneficiaries and to those on the rolls on the effective date of the provision. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Adjustment of cost-of-living increase when trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent

(Section 117 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) in social security benefits is applicable to the June benefit, which is payable at the beginning of July, and is based on the increase in the Consumer Price Index. When increases in prices outrun increases in wages, income to the trust funds falls behind outgo, and cash flow problems may result. There is no mechanism under current law to adjust trust fund outlays and revenues to take account of such adverse economic fluctuations.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would modify the cost-of-living adjustment formula during periods when trust fund reserves are low in order to help stabilize reserves. Specifically, if the OASDI trust fund ratio (reserves as a percentage of outgo) as of the beginning of a year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" benefit payments would be made during the following year, but only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32 percent. Catch-up payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for any COLA losses that result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices. This would not apply to the COLA for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—This provision would first be applicable in 1988.

Cost/savings.—This proposal is estimated to have no impact on the trust funds under 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions.

Increase delayed retirement credit

(Section 118 of the Bill)

Present law

A worker who delays retirement beyond age 65 (i.e., does not actually receive social security benefits) is eligible for a delayed retirement credit (DRC). The worker's benefit is increased for each month after age 65 and prior to age 72 for which benefits are not paid, either because of earnings or because the worker does not claim benefits, for workers eligible for benefits after 1978, the DRC is equal to 3 percent per year (one-quarter of 1 percent per month).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually increase, between 1990 and 2010, the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent per year, as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. (The amount of credit would relate to year of attainment of age 65.) Beginning in 1990 the DRC would be increased by 1/4 percent each subsequent year until reaching 8 percent in 2010.

OASDI cost.—0.10 percent of taxable payroll.

Increase in retirement age

(Section 119 of the Bill)

Present law

Unreduced retirement benefits are available to workers, spouses, and widows and widowers at age 65. Actuarially reduced benefits are available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually raise the age at which full social security benefits are payable from 65 to 66, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Under this provision, the normal retirement age would be increased one month per year, reaching 66 for those attaining 62 in the year 2012 or later. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available beginning at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the actuarial reduction factors would be larger. The minimum age for eligibility for medicare benefits would continue to be tied to the age at which unreduced retirement benefits are first available.

The majority of the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform made this recommendation. In addition, they recommended indexing the retirement age 40 changes in longevity, beginning in 2012.

Effective date.—For people attaining 62 in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.40 percent of taxable payroll.

Long-range benefit change

(Section 120 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing social security benefits, a worker's earnings under social security are averaged and a benefit formula is applied to those average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents' and survivors' benefits are based on the worker's PIA.

The formula for a worker who becomes eligible for benefits in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of AIME, plus 32 percent of the AIME from $254 through $1,528, plus 15 percent of the AIME over $1,528.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for the new group of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

This system was adopted by the 1977 Social Security Amendments. The annual adjustment of the dollar amounts in the benefit formula, the bend points, by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker's prior earnings that are replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

Committee amendment

For people first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, the Committee amendment would reduce initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years. This would have the effect of reducing the ultimate replacement rate by 5 percent.

Effective date.—For people first becoming eligible for retirement or disability in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.43 percent of taxable payroll.

Elimination of retirement earnings test

(Section 121 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Effective date.—The provision would be phased in between 1990 and 1994.

OASDI cost.—This amendment is estimated to cost 0.05 percent of taxable payroll in the long-range.

Child-care drop out years

(Section 122 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing a worker's covered earnings history under social security (upon which his and his family's benefits are based), up to five years in which earnings are lowest are dropped.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow up to two additional years to be dropped for persons who leave the workforce to care for a child under 3 in the home. To qualify for a child-care drop year, the worker can have no earnings at all during the year.

Effective date.—For persons first eligible for benefits after 1983.

Prisoners benefits
(Section 123 of the Bill)

Present law

Persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony may not receive student benefits (which are being phased out anyway), and are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependents benefits are not affected.) Also, impairments resulting from the commission of a crime cannot be the basis for disability benefits and impairments occurring during imprisonment cannot be the basis for disability benefits during the period of imprisonment.

Presently, benefits may continue to be paid to incarcerated felons who are either retired workers, widow or widower beneficiaries, spouses of retired or disabled workers, and to those DI beneficiaries in a court-approved rehabilitation program.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would expand present law to eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Effective date.—Applicable to benefits paid for the month after enactment.

OASDI Cost: Negligible.

Eliminate benefits to aliens
(Section 124 of the Bill)

Present law

There are no citizenship or residence requirements for receiving social security cash benefits (OASDI). Any alien in the U.S.—whether legally or illegally, or as a permanent or temporary resident—is eligible for benefits provided he has engaged in covered employment and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements. Dependents and survivors are also eligible for benefits regardless of their immigration status or that of the insured worker.

About $1 billion is being paid annually to the 314,000 beneficiaries who reside abroad. About 70% of these beneficiaries are aliens.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, in the future, benefits would be eliminated to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. No benefits would be paid to alien dependents of alien workers who were acquired (through marriage, birth or adoption) while outside the United States. However, benefits would be paid under the following conditions:

(1) the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement which provides for reciprocity of social security coverage; and

(2) benefits would continue until total benefits paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner.

Effective dates.—This amendment would apply to new eligibles on or after January 1, 1985.

Fail-safe provision
(Section 125 of the Bill)

Present law

Presently, there are no "fail-safe" provisions in the social security system that ensure benefit payments can be met on an ongoing basis in the face of adverse economic conditions. (The Board of Trustees is required to report immediately to the Congress if any of the trust funds is "unduly small".)

Committee amendment

Under the Committee amendment, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required to make an annual evaluation of the projected balances in the cash benefits trust funds, taking into account future cost-of-living increases. If the cash benefits (OASDI) fund reserves are projected to decline from the start of the next year to the start of the following year and to then be less than 20 percent of a year's benefits, the Secretary would be required to notify the Congress and if no action is taken, to scale back the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline which would leave the reserves below that level.

Insofar as possible, the limitation on the COLA would be applied to people whose benefits are based on a primary benefit level of more than $250 per month. The determination as to whether a limitation on the cost-of-living increase was necessary would be made only after taking into account all other statutory provisions for assuring adequate funds. The Secretary would have to notify Congress by July 1 of each year in which he finds that action to limit the next cost-of-living increase would be required under this provision. Since cost-of-living increases will be reflected in the January checks, this would give Congress several months in which to provide additional funding or to address the problem in any other manner the Congress might find to be appropriate.

The Committee views this provision as a last resort which would come into play only after all other authorities for maintaining trust fund solvency had been exercised. Thus, for example, other provisions in this legislation for such procedures as interfund borrowing and normalization of tax transfers would be invoked before this provision would be operative to the extent that such procedures are authorized by law. Under current projections such measures should be sufficient to keep fund balances from declining to dangerous levels. If however, unexpected adverse situations should develop, this provision would assure that sufficient reserves were maintained so that regular, timely payment of monthly benefit checks would not be placed in jeopardy.

This provision would implement the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform that this social security financing legislation include provision for a "fail-safe" mechanism.

Effective date.—Determinations beginning July 1, 1984.

OASDI Cost Impact: This provision is not expected to be utilized under the 1983 Trustees intermediate (II-B) assumptions.

PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

A. Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits (sec. 181 of the bill, new Code secs. 86 and 6050, and Code secs. 861, 871, 1441, and 6103)

Present law

Under present law, social security benefits are excluded from the gross income of the recipient. Their exclusion is based upon a series of administrative rulings issued by the Internal Revenue Service in 1938 and 1941 (see I.T. 3194, 1938-1 C.B. 114, 3229, 1938-2 C.B. 136, and I.T. 3447, 1941-1 C.B. 191). Railroad retirement benefits are excluded from gross income under the Railroad Retirement Act.

In general, the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodic income (which is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business) received by a nonresident alien from U.S. sources is subject to a 30-percent tax (Code sec. 871); this tax is collected by withholding (sec. 1441). A pension for services performed in the United States would be U.S.-source income and the gross amount of a U.S.-source pension is subject to the 30-percent withholding or a lower rate if so provided by treaty. The U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty, as well as a number of actual tax treaties to which the United States is a party, provides reciprocally that pensions received by a resident of one country from sources in the other country are taxable only by the country of residence. However, the United States has reserved the right to tax social security benefits in the U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty and a number of actual tax treaties.

Reasons for change

The Committee believes that the present policy of excluding all social security benefits from a recipient's gross income is inappropriate. The committee believes, further, that social security benefits are in the nature of benefits received under other retirement systems, which are subject to taxation to the extent they exceed a worker's after-tax contributions and that taxing a portion of social security benefits will improve tax equity by treating more nearly equally all forms of retirement and other income that are designed to replace lost wages (for example, unemployment compensation and sick pay). Furthermore, by taxing social security benefits and appropriating these revenues to the appropriate trust funds, the financial solvency of the social security trust funds will be strengthened.

Because Tier 1 benefits provided under the Railroad Retirement Act are largely equivalent to social security benefits, the committee believes that corresponding changes also should be made in the tax treatment of these benefits. That is, a portion of railroad retirement benefits also should be subject to income taxation.

By taxing only a portion of social security and railroad retirement benefits (that is, up to one-half of benefits in excess of a certain base amount), the Committee's bill assures that lower-income individuals, many of whom rely upon their benefits to afford basic necessities, will not be taxed on their benefits. The maximum proportion of benefits taxed is one-half in recognition of the fact that social security benefits are partially financed by after-tax employee contributions. The bill's method for taxing benefits assures that only those taxpayers who have substantial taxable income from other sources will be taxed on a portion of the benefits they receive.

Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits

Under the committee's bill, a portion of social security benefits will be included in the gross income of recipients whose adjusted gross income exceeds certain levels. (This provision is not intended to change the tax treatment of social security benefits paid by foreign governments; these benefits have been held by Treasury to be fully includable in gross income (Rev. Rul. 62-1979, 1962-2, C.B. 20)). The bill defines a "social security benefit" as any amount received by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to either (1) a monthly benefit under title II of the Social Security Act (Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Benefits (OASDI)), or (2) Tier 1 benefit under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974. A Tier 1 benefit generally is a monthly benefit equal to what an individual would receive if the formula for computing social security benefits were applied to the individual's history of covered wages under both the social security and railroad retirement systems.

Social Security benefits, to the extent they are taxable, will be included in the taxable income of the person who has the legal right to receive the benefits. For example, benefits paid to a child (or on behalf of a child under section 203(i) of the Social Security Act) will be considered to be the child's and will be added to the child's other income to determine whether they are taxable. The amount of benefits received refers to benefit payments after reductions under such provisions as actuarial reductions, family maximum, and the earnings test, but includes certain amounts that may be withheld from benefits, such as payments of supplementary medical insurance premiums, where the amounts withheld are for the purpose of meeting a financial obligation incurred by the individual entitled to receive such benefit payments. In addition, the amount of any social security benefits received will include the total amount of the benefits without any reduction for attorney's fees, if any, paid in order to enable an individual to receive those benefits. The committee expects the Secretary of the Treasury to provide guidance on the extent to which expenses (such as attorneys' fees) incurred in perfecting claims to social security benefits may be deducted, now that some of the social security benefits may be taxed.

Social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of a taxpayer for a taxable year will be limited to the lesser of (1) one-half of the social security benefits received, or (2) one-half of the excess of the sum of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income, interest on obligations exempt from tax, and one-half of the social security benefits received, over the appropriate base amount. Thus, the maximum proportion of social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of any taxpayer will be one-half of benefits. This provision does not affect the exclusion for interest on tax-exempt obligations. Rather, it merely includes that interest in the base for the purpose of determining the amount of an individual's social security benefits that will be taxed.

The base amount is $32,000 in the case of a married individual filing a joint return; zero in the case of a married individual filing a separate return, unless he or she lived apart from his or her spouse for the entire taxable year; and $25,000 in the case of all other individuals.

The base amount is zero for married individuals filing separate returns because the committee believes that the family should be treated as an integral unit in determining the amount of social security benefit that is includable in gross income under this provision. If the base amount for these individuals were higher, couples who are otherwise subject to tax on their benefits and whose incomes are relatively equally divided would be able to reduce substantially the amount of benefits subject to tax by filing separate returns.

For the purpose of determining how much of a taxpayer's social security benefit will be included in gross income, a taxpayer will be permitted to reduce benefits received during the taxable year by the amount of benefits, previously received during the current or any preceding taxable year, that he repays during the taxable year. This provision is necessary to prevent a taxpayer from being subject to taxation on his benefits in those situations in which a taxpayer must repay a portion of those benefits because he has been overpaid previously. A taxpayer will be permitted an itemized deduction, to the extent allowed under section 165, for repayments of social security benefits which had been included in gross income in a previous year, to the extent that the repayments exceed social security benefits received by the taxpayer, and not repaid, during the taxable year. Alternatively, if such amount repaid exceeds $3,000, the taxpayer has the option under section 1341 to compute tax for the taxable year without the deduction and to subtract from that amount the reduction on tax that would have resulted from excluding the amount repaid from income for the year of the overpayment.

The committee's bill provides an elective, special rule for taxpayers who receive lump-sum payments. This rule was determined to be necessary because in some situations involving lump-sum payments of benefits attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief.

If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the sum of the increases in gross income that result solely from taking into account the appropriate portions of the lump-sum payment in the taxable year to which they are attributable. The committee intends that when lump-sum payments are made, the Social Security Administration or Railroad Retirement Board will notify the recipients thereof of the taxable years to which the payments are attributable.

Social security benefits are to be treated as a pension or annuity and, therefore, not treated as earned income, for purposes of the earned income credit, the deduction for contributions to individual retirement arrangements, the deduction for two-earner couples, and the foreign earned income exclusion.

Returns relating to social security benefits

Information reporting will be required with respect to benefit payments. Specifically, the appropriate Federal official (i.e., the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in the case of social security benefits, and the Railroad Retirement Board, in the case of railroad retirement benefits) will be required to report to the Treasury (1) the aggregate amount of benefits paid with respect to any individual during any calendar year; (2) the aggregate amount of benefits repaid by the individual during the calendar year; and (3) the name and address of the individual with respect to whom benefits are paid. In addition, each individual receiving social security or railroad retirement benefits will be furnished with a written statement showing (1) the name of the agency making the payments, and (2) the aggregate amount of payments and repayments. This statement will be due by January 31 of the year following the year in which social security benefits are paid.

Treatment of nonresident aliens

The committee's bill provides that social security benefits paid by the United States are U.S.-source income for purposes of the Code, including the foreign tax credit. In addition, one-half of social security benefits paid to nonresident aliens will be subject to the general 30-percent tax which will be collected by withholding. The committee's bill is not intended to override the treatment of social security benefits provided in existing income tax treaties to which the United States is a party.

The committee's bill permits the Secretary of the Treasury to disclose to the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board available return information from the master files of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the address and status of an individual as a nonresident alien or as a resident or citizen of the United States. This information, which may be disclosed upon written request, may be disclosed to the Social Security Administration and the Railroad Retirement Board only for purposes of carrying out their responsibilities for withholding taxes from social security benefits of nonresident aliens. Any return information disclosed under this provision will be subject to the present law requirements regarding record-keeping and safeguarding of return information.

Transfers to trust funds

The committee's bill appropriates to each payor fund the increase in Federal income tax liabilities attributable to taxing social security benefits. This amount is the difference between total income tax liabilities for the year and what income tax liabilities would have been without the application of the Code sections which provide for the taxation of benefits. A "payor fund" is any trust fund or account from which payments of social security benefits are made.

The appropriated amounts are to be transferred from time to time (but no less frequently than quarterly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury. Transfers to the payor funds may be based on the proportion of each type of benefit as a share of the total benefits potentially includable in gross income under these provisions. For example, suppose that after adding OASI benefits, DI benefits and Tier I railroad retirement benefits the shares of these in the total are 80 percent, 16 percent, and 4 percent, respectively. These percentages of the increase in tax liabilities described above may then be transferred to the respective funds.

Any quarterly payment to a payor trust fund must be made on the first day of the quarter and must take into account social security benefits estimated to be received during the quarter. Proper adjustments are to be made in the amounts subsequently transferred to the extent that prior estimates were in excess of, or less than, the amounts required to be transferred. A final determination of the amount required to be transferred for a year may be based on an estimate derived from the appropriately weighted sample of individual income tax returns for that year which is used as the basis for the Internal Revenue Service's publication of statistics of income for that year under Code section 6108. In making these estimates, the Secretary of the Treasury need not take account of certain provisions of the tax law that might affect an individual's tax liability (e.g., income averaging, loss carrybacks, etc.) if these provisions are judged to have an inconsequential effect on the estimates.

The Secretary of the Treasury will be required to submit annual reports to the Congress and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Railroad Retirement Board concerning (1) the transfers made during the year, and the methodology used in determining the amount of the transfers and the funds or account to which made, and (2) the anticipated operation of the transfer mechanism during the next five years.

Taxation of Tier One railroad retirement benefits

The Committee's bill provides that railroad retirement "Tier 1" benefits are subject to taxation to the same extent and in the same manner as monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act. As a result of this change, certain amounts will be transferred regularly to the Railroad Retirement Account.

Under the financial interchange between railroad retirement and social security, however, the social security trust funds are placed in the same position they would have been in if railroad employment were covered under social security. Therefore, the committee understands that existing law requires that the proceeds of income taxes on those railroad retirement benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits are to be credited to the social security trust funds through adjustments in the financial interchange. This will produce exactly the same result as if the social security system had paid that portion of the tier I benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits and had received the proceeds of the income tax on these benefits.

Effective date

In general, the provisions will apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending that date. However, the provisions will not apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, if the generally applicable payment date of these benefits was before January 1, 1984.

B. Acceleration of increases in FICA taxes; 1984 employee tax credit (sec. 132 of the bill; secs. 3101, 3111, and new sec. 3510 of the code).

Present law

Under present law, several increases in social security payroll tax (FICA) rates are already scheduled to take effect between 1985 and 1990, as shown in the following table:

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RATE (EACH)

| Year | OASDI | HI | OASDI-HI |
|-----------|-------|------|----------|
| 1984..... | 5.4 | 1.30 | 6.70 |
| 1985..... | 5.7 | 1.35 | 7.05 |
| 1986..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1987..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1988..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1989..... | 5.7 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1990..... | 6.2 | 1.45 | 7.65 |

Reasons for change

In conjunction with other changes in the law which are designed to help insure the solvency of the OASDI Trust Funds, the committee has found it necessary to advance the OASDI increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1990 to 1988. In order to cushion the impact on workers of the first change, a one-time tax credit is provided to employees equal to the 1984 increase in the employees FICA tax.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides a new schedule of OASDI rates leaves HI rates unchanged. The new OASDI rates and combined OASDI rates are as follows:

EMPLOYER-EMPLOYEE RATE (EACH)

| Year | OASDI | HI | OASDI-HI |
|-----------|-------|------|----------|
| 1984..... | 5.70 | 1.30 | 7.00 |
| 1985..... | 5.70 | 1.35 | 7.05 |
| 1986..... | 5.70 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1987..... | 5.70 | 1.45 | 7.15 |
| 1988..... | 6.06 | 1.45 | 7.51 |
| 1989..... | 6.06 | 1.45 | 7.51 |
| 1990..... | 6.20 | 1.45 | 7.65 |

Because railroad retirement (RR) payroll taxes are linked to the rates for social security, the committee's bill also provides similar increases in the corresponding railroad retirement taxes.

The bill provides employees a credit equal to 0.3 percent of compensation subject to the FICA and RR taxes and to payments of amounts equivalent to FICA taxes under section 218 of the Social Security Act. Because the credit is to be taken into account at the time the tax is collected (by deduction from the employees' wages or otherwise), the net OASDI employee tax rate for 1984 will be 5.40 percent. However, employees' annual wage statements are to show the gross FICA tax (7.00 percent of wages) and the credit amount (0.3 percent of wages) separately. As under present law, the appropriation of funds into, for example, the OASDI trust funds will be based on the gross OASDI employee tax rate, which will be 5.70 percent and, thus, will not be affected by the credit.

Effective date.—These provisions will apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

C. Self-employment income tax and credit (secs. 133 of the bill and secs. 43, 164, 275, 401, 1401, and 1402 of the Code).

Present Law

The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax rate that is equal to approximately 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax rate that is equal to 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

The presently scheduled OASDI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1981..... | January 1, 1985..... | 8.05 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1990..... | 8.55 |
| December 31, 1989..... | | 9.30 |

The HI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent: |
|------------------------|----------------------|----------|
| December 31, 1980..... | January 1, 1985..... | 1.30 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1986..... | 1.35 |
| December 31, 1985..... | | 1.45 |

Under present law, the expenses of compensation or purchased services, including wages, the employer FICA tax, and payments to self-employed individuals are deductible, for income tax purposes, as business expenses. However, neither the employee FICA tax nor the SECA tax is deductible.

Reasons for change

The committee is concerned that, under the current system, self-employed individuals pay into the social security system less than employers and employees, taken together, contribute for equal benefits. Thus, even though an employer may take an income tax deduction for his share of the payroll tax paid on behalf of an employee and Federal revenues would be reduced thereby, the social security trust funds received less than is necessary to provide benefits to self-employed individuals. This disparity in receipts contributes to the financial difficulties of the social security system.

Explanation of provisions

Under the bill, the OASDI rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDI rate, and the HI tax rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee HI rate. In order to cushion the impact of the increase, the bill provides a permanent credit against SECA taxes.

The OASDI tax rate on self-employment income will be:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent |
|------------------------|----------------------|---------|
| December 31, 1983..... | January 1, 1988..... | 11.40 |
| December 31, 1987..... | January 1, 1990..... | 12.12 |
| December 31, 1989..... | | 12.40 |

The HI rate for self-employed persons will be:

IN THE CASE OF A TAXABLE YEAR

| Beginning after: | and before: | percent |
|------------------------|----------------------|---------|
| December 31, 1983..... | January 1, 1985..... | 2.60 |
| December 31, 1984..... | January 1, 1986..... | 2.70 |
| December 31, 1985..... | | 2.90 |

Beginning in 1984, self-employed persons will be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984, the credit will be 2.9 percent of self-employment income. For 1985, the credit will be 2.5 percent. For 1986, the credit will be 2.2 percent. For 1987-89, the credit will be 2.1 percent. For 1990 and subsequent years, the rate of the credit will be 2.3 percent. The SECA tax credits may be taken directly into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

The SECA tax credits will not reduce the revenues of the social security trust funds, since under the Social Security Act, appropriations into the trust funds will be based on the SECA tax rates specified above without regard to the credits allowed against such taxes.

Effective date.—The provisions will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

Reallocation of OASDI tax rate

(Section 141 of the bill)

Present law

The tax rate allocation between OASDI and HI is fixed in the law. The following table displays the allocation for employers, employees and the self-employed:

OASDI TAX RATES

[In percent]

| | Employers and employees, each | | | Self-employed | | |
|----------------|-------------------------------|-------|-------|---------------|--------|-------|
| | OASI | DI | OASDI | OASI | DI | OASDI |
| 1982 to 1984 | 4.575 | 0.825 | 5.4 | 6.8125 | 1.2375 | 8.05 |
| 1985 to 1989 | 4.750 | .950 | 5.7 | 7.1250 | 1.4250 | 8.55 |
| 1990 and later | 5.100 | 1.100 | 6.2 | 7.6500 | 1.6500 | 9.30 |

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reallocate the OASDI tax so that both trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of a year as a percentage of outgo during the year). This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

The following table displays the new allocation for the OASDI tax rate:

[In percent]

| | Employers and employees, each | | | Self-employed | | |
|----------------|-------------------------------|-------|-------|---------------|--------|-------|
| | OASI | DI | OASDI | OASI | DI | OASDI |
| 1983 | 5.075 | 0.625 | 5.7 | 10.4625 | 0.9375 | 11.40 |
| 1984 to 1987 | 5.20 | .50 | 5.7 | 10.4 | 1.0 | 11.40 |
| 1988 to 1989 | 5.53 | .53 | 6.06 | 11.06 | 1.06 | 12.12 |
| 1990 to 1999 | 5.60 | .60 | 6.20 | 11.2 | 1.20 | 12.40 |
| 2000 and later | 5.55 | .65 | 6.20 | 11.1 | 1.30 | 12.40 |

Effective.—The first reallocation would apply for 1983.

Interfund borrowing extension

(Section 142 of the Bill)

Present law

Public Law 97-123 authorized, through December 31, 1982, borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds whenever it was determined by the Managing Trustee (the Secretary of the Treasury) that additional funds were needed to pay benefits. The Conference Report specified that amounts borrowed could not exceed what was required to ensure benefit payments through June 1983. Under this authority, and to fulfill this purpose, $17.5 billion was transferred to the OASI trust fund from the DI and HI trust funds in 1982 (of which $12.4 billion was from HI).

Under the law, the borrowing fund is required to make periodic interest payments on outstanding balances. Also the loan must be repaid when the Managing Trustee determines that the assets of the borrowing fund are sufficient to begin repayment.

Committee amendment

Through 1987, the committee amendment would authorize interfund borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds. The following protections would be provided for the HI trust fund: (1) interest would be paid monthly to HI on any outstanding loans to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent (with no more to be borrowed than would reduce such ratio to 10 percent); (3) in 1983-87, OASDI would repay loans from HI whenever the OASDI fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 15 percent; and (4) in 1988-89, OASDI would repay HI, in 24 equal monthly payments, the loan balance outstanding at the end of 1987 (plus interest on any outstanding loan balance).

Similar protections would be provided for the OASI and DI trust funds in the event that HI were to borrow from OASDI.

The amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI and DI trust funds and to the OASI and DI trust funds from the HI trust fund.

Under the Committee amendment, using intermediate cost estimates the amounts available from the HI trust fund for loans (in excess of the 10 percent requirement) to the OASDI trust funds would be about $7 billion in 1984, $5 billion in 1985, $4 billion in 1986, and $3 billion in 1987; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87. Under the pessimistic cost estimate, such amounts available from the HI trust fund would be about $6 billion in 1984, $4 billion in 1985, and zero in 1986-87; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87 (although slightly worse experience during that period would make loans necessary).

Effective.—On enactment.

Credit amounts of unnegotiated checks to the trust funds

(Section 143 of the Bill)

Present law

The social security trust funds are not credited for OASDI benefit checks which remain uncashed. Instead, the value of benefit checks which are not cashed remains in the General Fund of the Treasury.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, it would require the implementation of a procedure under which: (1) the Treasury Department would make it possible to distinguish OASDI checks from other government checks; and (2) the trust funds would be credited on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months. This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform which required only the initial lump sum transfer, assuming that future transfers were already provided for.

Effective date.—The lump sum transfer would be made in the month following the month of enactment of this provision.

Military wage credits

(Sections 144 and 145 of the Bill)

Present law

Since 1946, the OASDI system has provided gratuitous wage credits to persons who serve in the military forces. Such military personnel have been credited with earnings (upon which benefits are based) for which no payroll taxes have been paid. Two types of credits have been given: (1) for World War II veterans, noncontributory wage credits of up to $1,920 per year for active military service from 1940 to 1957; and (2) noncontributory wage credits of $1,200 per year for military service performed after 1956 to recognize the value of non-cash compensation, such as food, shelter and medical services. (In 1957, members of the military were compulsorily covered under social security.)

To finance the costs incurred in paying the benefits based on periods of military service for which no contributions were made, the social security trust funds receive reimbursements from the General Fund of the Treasury. The annual reimbursement to the trust funds has been about $700 million in recent years.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would credit the OASDI trust funds, in a lump sum, with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for the employer-employee taxes on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform except that the Committee has extended the provision to include HI.

Effective date.—Lump sum is payable in the month following the month of enactment. Lump sums would be payable within 30 days after the enactment of this provision.

Trust fund investment procedure

(Section 146 of the Bill)

Present law

Payroll tax revenues which are in excess of the amount necessary to pay current benefits must be invested, generally in "special issue" obligations available for purchase only by the trust funds. Such obligations have maturities fixed with "due regard" for the needs of the trust funds and bear an interest rate equal to the average market yield on all marketable, interest bearing obligations of the U.S. government which are not due or callable for at least 4 years.

The maturity dates on new special issues and the redemption schedule for trust fund investments are not set by law, but by Treasury procedure. The Treasury attempts to set the maturity dates for special issues from 1 to 15 years—so that about 1/3 of the total portfolio comes due in each of the next 15 years. When securities must be sold to meet benefit obligations, special issues with the shortest duration until maturity are sold first. In the event that there are several securities with the same duration until maturity, those with the lowest interest rate are sold first.

The Committee amendment provides for reinvesting all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest based on the average market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.

The amendment would require the Managing Trustee to: (1) redeem all present special issues at their face amount; (2) redeem all flower bonds (marketable government bonds which, for inheritance tax purposes, are redeemable at par) at their current market values; and (3) invest, on a monthly basis, the redeemed investments and all future funds only in separate depository accounts for each of the trust funds.

This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, except that the Commission recommended investing in special issues.

Effective.—The first day of the first month beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment.

Revenue Gain.—No significant gain or loss anticipated.

Public members on board of trustees
(Section 147 of the Bill)

Present law

The Board of Trustees of the four social security trust funds (Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Supplemental Medical Insurance) consists of, ex officio, the Secretaries of the Treasury, Health and Human Services, and Labor, with the Secretary of the Treasury serving as the managing trustee. Among other responsibilities, the Board of Trustees is required to report to Congress each year on the operation and status of the trust funds, review the general policies followed in managing the trust funds, and recommend changes in such policies.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members would not be considered fiduciaries and would not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform also proposed that the Board of Trustees of the OASDI trust funds be expanded to include two public members.

Effective.—On enactment.

Cost.—None.

Accelerate State and local deposits
(Section 148 of the Bill)

Present law

Requires the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees within thirty days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

By contrast, the frequency with which deposits of social security taxes and income taxes are made by private employers is determined under regulations issued by Treasury and vary in accordance with the tax liability of the employer. Deposits are required as frequently as every week for employers with large liabilities and as infrequently as every three months for employers with smaller liabilities.

Although State and local governments are now governed by the same rules as private employers with regard to depositing withheld income taxes, deposits of social security taxes continue to be treated differently.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that now apply to private employers.

Effective date.—Effective for deposits required to be made after December 1983.

Triggered normalization of tax transfers
(Section 149 of the Bill)

Present law

Under current procedures, social security taxes are transferred to the trust funds on a daily basis on Treasury estimates of amounts collected. OASDI benefit payments, however, are concentrated at the start of the month creating the need for high balances in the OASDI trust funds during the first week of the month.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, when at the start of any month, the Secretary of Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1½ months of benefits (reserves less than 12% of outgo), the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month. Interest would be paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred at a rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.

Effective.—On enactment through 1987 (when the authority for interfund borrowing expires).

Cost.—Negligible.

Treatment of certain deferred compensation and salary reduction arrangements (sec. 150 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law

Cash or deferred arrangements.—Under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)) forming a part of a tax-qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf or to receive such amount directly from the employer in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the employee's election are treated as employer contributions to the plan and are excluded from the employee's taxable income and social security wage base.

Amounts distributed with respect to an employee under a qualified plan generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Tax-sheltered annuities

Under present law, tax-sheltered annuities (sec. 403(b)) may be purchased on an individual basis for employees of public schools or tax-exempt religious, charitable, and other organizations described in section 501(c)(3). Subject to certain limitations, amounts paid by the employer to purchase the annuity are excluded from the employee's income. A tax-sheltered annuity may be purchased for an employee pursuant to a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee.

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that amounts paid for a tax-sheltered annuity pursuant to a salary reduction agreement are includible in the employee's social security wage base, even though such amounts may not be subject to income tax withholding. The validity of the ruling position is in doubt in light of the Supreme Court decision in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States (see following section of this report).

Amounts distributed under a tax-sheltered annuity generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Cafeteria plans

Under an employer's cafeteria plan (sec. 125), a covered employee may choose among various benefits, which may include cash, taxable benefits, or nontaxable benefits. If certain requirements are met, amounts applied under a cafeteria plan toward nontaxable benefits (e.g., accident and health benefits or plan contributions under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement) are excluded from the employee's income and generally from the social security wage base. Taxable benefits chosen by the employee (e.g., cash) are includible in income and generally includible in the wage base.

Eligible State deferred compensation plans

Under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)), an employee of a State or local government or a rural electric cooperative may elect to defer compensation, subject to certain limits. Amounts deferred under an eligible plan are excluded from income until paid to the employee under the plan. Eligible State deferred compensation plans generally are not retirement plans for purposes of the rules defining "wages" includible in the social security wage base. (For example, the income tax rules for eligible plans permit distributions to an employee after age 59½ without regard to whether the employee is retired.) Thus, amounts deferred are includible in the social security wage base at the time of the deferral if the plan is not a retirement plan.

Non-qualified deferred compensation plans

Under present law (sec. 312(a)), standby pay or payments made to an employee on account of retirement, either on an individual basis or under a plan or system of the employer providing for employees generally, may be excluded from the social security wage base without regard to whether the payments are under a tax-qualified retirement plan (sec. 401(a) or 403(a)) or other tax-favored retirement savings program (e.g., a tax-sheltered annuity (sec. 403(b))).

Reasons for change

Generally, if an employee receives cash and then chooses to use these funds for personal savings or benefits, the amount of cash received is subject to FICA. This is true, for example, for contributions to an individual retirement account (IRA) even if the employer transmits the funds directly to the IRA account.

Under cash or deferred arrangements, certain tax-sheltered annuities, certain cafeteria plans, and eligible State deferred compensation plans, the employer contributes funds which are set aside by individual employees for individual savings arrangements, and thus, the committee believes that such employer contributions should be included in the FICA base, as is the case for IRA contributions. Otherwise, individuals could, in effect, control which portion of their compensation was to be included in the social security wage base. This would make the system partially elective and would undermine the FICA tax base.

The committee also believes that it is appropriate to exclude payments from the social security wage base where the payments are made from a tax-qualified or other tax-favored retirement plan. However, the committee does not believe that such tax-favored treatment under the FICA tax rules generally should be extended to deferred compensation plans which do not qualify for tax-favored treatment under the income tax rules.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, an employer's plan contributions on behalf of an employee under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base for tax and coverage purposes to the extent that the employee could have elected to receive cash in lieu of the contribution. The provision is intended to apply to elective amounts under the cash or deferred arrangement and not to nonelective amounts contributed by employers to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan of which the arrangement may be a part.

The bill also provides that any amounts paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee would be includible in the employee's social security wage base. The committee intended that the provision would merely codify the holding of Revenue Ruling 65-208, 1965-2 Cum. Bul. 383, without any implication with respect to the issue of whether a particular amount paid by an employer to a tax shelter annuity is, in fact made by reason of a "salary reduction agreement".

In addition, amounts subject to an employee's designation under a cafeteria plan that includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee that is not otherwise excluded from the definition of wages under section 3121 of the Code.

The bill would also include in the social security wage base amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)). The payment to such a plan would be treated as wages received in the year in which the services relating to the payment were performed. However, no change is made to the present-law self-employment tax (SECA) rules regarding amounts paid under an eligible State deferred compensation plan on behalf of an independent contractor.

Under the bill, nonqualified deferred compensation generally is includible in the social security wage base when it becomes available to the employee. For this purpose, nonqualified deferred compensation generally includes payments under a deferred compensation arrangement which is not (1) a tax-qualified plan, (2) an individual retirement arrangement (IRA), (3) a simplified employee pension (SEP), (4) a tax-sheltered annuity, or (5) a governmental plan. A governmental plan is one established and maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing. However, elective deferrals under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)) are includible in the wage base as described in the preceding paragraph, and amounts payable under a deferred compensation plan of a State or local government which is not an eligible plan (sec. 457(e)(1) and (e)(2) (D) and (E)) are includible in the wage base when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture by the employee.

The bill also includes conforming changes to the provisions (sec. 3306) defining "wages" for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA). Deferred compensation includible in the social security wage base under the bill would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes. In addition, the bill provides that certain sick pay which is includible in the social security wage base under provisions enacted in 1978 would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes.

Effective date.—These changes apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983. Codification of Rowan decision with respect to meals and lodging (sec. 151 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law

Under present law, amounts which constitute wages for income tax withholding purposes (Code sec. 3401) and amounts which constitute wages for social security tax purposes (Code sec. 3121) are separately defined. However, in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States, 452 U.S. 247 (1981), the Supreme Court held that the definition of wages for social security tax purposes and the definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes must be interpreted in regulations in the same manner in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary.

At issue in Rowan was whether the value of meals and lodging provided employees at the convenience of the employer were wages for social security tax purposes (i.e., were includable in the social security wage base). The value of such employer-provided meals and lodging may be excluded from the income of an employee (sec. 119). Treasury regulations required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base, but excluded such value from the definition of wages subject to income tax withholding. The Supreme Court decision invalidated those Treasury regulations which required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base.

Reasons for change

The social security program aims to replace the income of beneficiaries when that income is reduced on account of retirement and disability. Thus, the amount of "wages" is the measure used both to define income which should be replaced and to compute FICA tax liability. Since the security system has objectives which are significantly different from the objective underlying the income tax withholding rules, the committee believes that amounts exempt from income tax withholding should not be exempt from FICA unless Congress provides an explicit FICA tax exclusion.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that, with the exception of the value of meals and lodging provided for the convenience of the employer, the determination whether or not amounts are includible in the social security wage base is to be made without regard to whether such amounts are treated as wages for income tax withholding purposes. Accordingly, an employee's "wages" for social security tax purposes may be different from the employee's "wages" for income tax withholding purposes. In addition, the bill provides that the definition of wages for social security tax and benefit purposes is revised to exclude the value of employer-provided meals and lodging to the extent such value is also excluded from the employee's gross income.

Effective date.—The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Treatment of contributions under simplified employee pensions (SEPs) (sec. 152 of the bill and sec. 3121(a)(5) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the Internal Revenue Code excludes from the social security wage base employer payments to or on behalf of an employee under a simplified employee pension (SEP). However, such employer contributions are treated as covered wages for social security benefit purposes.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that it is inappropriate to treat employer payments to a SEP as covered wages for benefit purposes where such amounts are excluded from the social security wage base for tax purposes.

Explanation of provision

The bill amends the Social Security Act to exclude from the definition of covered wages for social security coverage purposes employer contributions to a SEP that are deductible as such by the employer. The bill makes clear that the exclusion applies, for both tax and coverage purposes, only with respect to the employer's contribution to a SEP, not with respect to the amount equivalent to the employee's contribution to an individual retirement arrangement (IRA).

Effective date.—This provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

TITLE II OF THE BILL

INCREASE THE SSI PAYMENT STANDARD AND MODIFY PASS-THROUGH REQUIREMENTS
 (Sections 201 and 202 of the Bill)

Present law

The first $20 of income received by an individual in a month is disregarded in determining SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The income may be earned or unearned (except for some income based on need, such as veterans' pensions, which is fully counted). The disregard was provided in the original statute in 1972 to ensure that persons who had contributed toward an entitlement, such as OASDI, were better off than those who had not. The amount of the disregard has not been increased since 1972.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendments would:

A. Increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983; and

B. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the "pass through" requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase. Presently, State which provide payments to supplement the Federal SSI payment are required to pass through to recipients any Federal SSI cost-of-living increases. States have two basic options: 1) they may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976, or 2) they may make State supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended that, effective July 1983, the SSI disregard be increased by $30 per month for OASDI income (not other income) in determining an individual's SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The effect would have been to increase by $30 the monthly income of those individuals who are entitled to both OASDI and SSI.

Presently, the maximum Federal SSI payment is $284 monthly for an individual and $426 monthly for a couple. After certain disregards, the amount of SSI actually received by an individual is reduced on account of other income.

SSI ALERT
 (Section 203 of the Bill)
 Present law

Currently, there is no statutory requirement that OASDI beneficiaries be contacted and informed of potential eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. However, since the beginning of the SSI program, the Social Security Administration has undertaken a number of outreach efforts to identify those potentially eligible. SSA routinely provides information about SSI eligibility and takes applications for SSI payments at the time of application for OASDI benefits if the applicant is potentially eligible for SSI payments. In addition, many State agencies and other private relief groups routinely refer clients to SSA. Presently, about 6.9 percent of elderly social security recipients also receive SSI.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries who are potentially eligible of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact their district offices. In addition, the provision would require that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance.

Despite the current and past activities of the Social Security Administration to make persons potentially eligible for SSI aware of the existence of the program, the Committee believes that there may be currently needy OASDI beneficiaries who have been on the social security rolls for a period of time who may have applied for social security prior to the availability of SSI or who may not have been eligible at the time they applied but whose circumstances have since changed.

The Committee provision would alert those OASDI beneficiaries to the availability of the SSI program and would, in the future, also provide notification to those approaching the age of eligibility (age 65) through information contained with a notice of future eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance which is mailed approximately three months before a beneficiary attains age 65.

Effective date.—Notification to those on the rolls must be made before July 1, 1984.

Cost.—Unable to estimate.

TITLE IV OF THE BILL
 UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS
 Extension of Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program
 (Section 401 of the Bill)

Present law

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) established the FSC program. This program provides additional weeks of unemployment compensation at the same weekly benefit amount to individuals who have exhausted their State benefits and any extended benefits to which they were entitled. The FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, expires March 31, 1983.

As originally enacted, the FSC program provided 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. The Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-424) increased the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits to 16, 14, 12, or 8, depending on the State where the individual filed for or received the additional benefits.

Beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program began providing the following maximum weeks of benefits:

- (1) 16 weeks in States with an insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent (measured as the average over a moving 13 week period);
- (2) 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
- (3) 12 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 4.5 percent;
- (4) 10 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 3.5 through 4.4 percent; and
- (5) 8 weeks in all other States.

In order to qualify for FSC, a worker must have worked at least 20 weeks or earned its equivalent in wages in his base year, usually defined as the first four of the last five completed calendar quarters before he filed his claim for regular State benefits. He must also have exhausted the regular and extended benefits to which he is entitled. In addition, his benefit year must have ended on or after June 1, 1982 or he must have been eligible for extended benefits for any week beginning on or after June 1, 1982.

If an individual is eligible for FSC benefits, the number of weeks of FSC he may receive is determined in relation to the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled. An eligible individual may receive FSC for the lesser of (a) 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled or (b) the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits provided in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in his former State.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would extend FSC for 6 months from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983. To qualify for FSC, an individual would need at least 26 weeks of work or its equivalent in wages in his base year. This restriction would apply only to claimants who initially become eligible for FSC on or April 1, 1983.

The number of weeks available in each State would be:

- (1) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:
 - (1) 14 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above;
 - (2) 12 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent;

(3) 10 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent;

(4) 8 weeks in all other States.

No State would, however, lose more than 4 weeks when compared to present law.

(2) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhausted FSC before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:

(1) 8 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above;

(2) 6 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent;

(3) 4 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent;

(4) 4 weeks in all other States.

(3) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement, received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b) cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(4) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted FSC entitlement on September 30, 1983 when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. No new claimants would be added to the FSC program on or after September 30, 1983.

Effective date.—For weeks beginning after April 1, 1983.

Optional exclusion from disqualification for not actively seeking work under extended benefits and Federal supplemental compensation for claimants who are hospitalized or serving on jury duty

(Section 422 of the Bill)

Present law

Present law disqualifies claimants from receiving extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation if they are not actively seeking work. Moreover, the disqualified claimant must go back to work for at least 4 weeks and earn at least 4 times his weekly benefit amount before he can qualify again for Extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would permit States to determine on a weekly basis the eligibility availability of claimants of Extended Benefits and Federal Supplemental Compensation who are serving on jury duty or are hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition. A State must treat these individuals in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Denial of benefits to nonprofessional employees of educational institutions between academic years or terms

Present law

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) covers employees of educational institutions. FUTA requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to certain professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities if they have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. FUTA gives the States the option of the same denial of benefits, however, for nonprofessional employees of educational institutions.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the denial of benefits between academic years or terms to nonprofessional employees mandatory if the employees have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. In addition, States would be required to deny benefits between terms to individuals performing services on behalf of an educational institution or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or agency.

Effective date

The provision would be effective on or after October 1, 1984. States in which there is no legislative session before that date would, however, be given additional time to comply with this provision.

Modification of credit reduction cap provisions

Present law

Employers in all States currently pay the tax levied under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) at a rate of 3.6 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally received a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. Prior to reforms enacted in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, State UC programs could borrow on an interest-free basis from the Federal Unemployment Account. However, once a State defaulted on its loans from the Federal account, employees in the State began to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of at least .3 percent a year.

Specifically, if an advance is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State's employers is reduced by .3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional .3 percent (i.e., .6, .9, 1.2 percent, etc.). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970's, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975-1980 for States satisfying specific requirements. Sixteen states are experiencing a credit reduction for 1983.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan repayment conditions: interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after April 1, 1982 (except those made for "cash flow" purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and States are allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

For a State qualifying for the cap, the annual tax credit reduction is limited to 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year, whichever is higher. These loan reform provisions are in effect from January 1, 1981 to December 31, 1987.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State's total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the FUTA penalty tax a State must demonstrate that:

(1) the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981-1987);

(2) there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable year 1981-1987);

(3) its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983-1987; and

(4) the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983-1987). The comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the credit reduction cap: provisions in present law permanent. A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law. The committee amendment would, however, provide two possible lower credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the credit reduction would be 0.2 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral authorized as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the credit reduction would be 0.1 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points. The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reductions. The credit reduction applicable in each subsequent year after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Modification of interest provisions

Present law

Present law imposes interest of up to 10 percent per year on loans obtained by the States after April 1, 1982, except for "cash flow" loans that States repay by the end of the fiscal year in which the loans were obtained. A State can defer payment of its interest due for the fiscal year by paying 25 percent in each of four years beginning with the year in which the interest is due. Interest accrues, however, on the deferred interest.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the provisions imposing interest on the States permanent. It would also provide for another deferral and a discounted interest rate for which States could apply if they meet certain conditions as certified by the Secretary of Labor.

The new deferral would be 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet two conditions to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and

(2) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 30 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested. Deferral in the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 40 and 50 percent are made.

The discounted interest rate would be one percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

For purposes of determining whether a State meets the conditions in (2) above, the Secretary of Labor will provide an estimate of the unemployment rate for the base year, the calendar year in which the deferral is requested. The level of benefits and revenue liabilities will be determined using the State law in effect before passage of the legislation. The estimate of changes as a result of new legislation will be made from the base year in each year for which a deferral is requested. Once a deferral is approved, a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so would result in immediate payment of all deferred interest.

Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 after calendar year 1982 and increases in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent after calendar year 1984 will not be counted for purposes of meeting condition (2).

States will not be penalized or rewarded if economic events change from those used in the base year for computing eligibility under condition (2).

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Change in second year additional credit reduction

Present law

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable wage base of $7,000, the tax rate base on the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if their taxable wage bases were $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would change the computation of the average tax rate to reflect the ratio of the federal unemployment tax base to the national average wage in covered employment.

Effective date.—Taxable year 1983.

Change in the date interest is due

Present law

Present law requires that interest is due no later than the first day of the next fiscal year. If the first day of the next fiscal year falls on a weekend, interest is due in the prior fiscal year. Otherwise, it is due on the first day of the next fiscal year.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires that interest be paid before the first day of the next fiscal year.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Collection interest

Present law

Present law provides no mechanism through which the Federal Government can collect interest from the States if the States do not pay interest when it is due.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require the collection of delinquent interest charges

one year after they are due by a reduction in the FUTA credit of 0.1 percentage point. Any amount collected during the imposition of this provision [exceeding the overdue interest] would be applied to the outstanding loan as an involuntary repayment. This provision would provide a specific collection mechanism to assure the payment of interest pending completion of any conformity proceeding which is implicitly but clearly required for nonpayment of interest by a State.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, there is a lot of other material, but I would just say this, the Senator from Kansas believes this is an outstanding piece of legislation, not because it is perfect in every sense of the word, not because the Commission did not have its shortcomings, not because there probably are others who might have better ideas, but let the Senator suggest, because the distinguished Senator from New York is in the Chamber, had the Senator from New York not visited with the Senator from Kansas on January 3, this year we might not be here this afternoon.

As I recall, that was about 12:20 p.m., that day when everyone was being sworn in, and the Senator from New York came back to the desk of the Senator from Kansas and said:

Well, are we going to let social security go down the drain.

Or something to that effect.

We talked about it for a while, and we said not if we can help it. So we decided to discuss it ourselves, along with Robert Ball, a former Commissioner, probably the most knowledgeable if not one of the most knowledgeable men about social security in this country.

The next day we brought in Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Commission. The next day or the following day we brought in a representative of the White House.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. CONABLE.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. CONABLE. That is correct.

That started what we thought was a very successful process because we came up with a compromise, and for that we owe a debt of gratitude to the distinguished Senator from New York and the others who were willing for about a 2-week period to try to hammer out some of these differences.

So what I believe we have is a fair and a reasonable proposal, not a perfect proposal, not the proposal that probably any one of us in this Chamber or anyone within the hearing of my voice would put together themselves. Let us face it. There is some resistance to bringing in new hires, new Federal employees. There is some resistance to COLA delay. There is some resistance to the fail-safe mechanism. There is some resistance to taxing benefits. That is only about 7 percent of the beneficiaries. There is some resistance to accelerating payroll taxes.

I would guess the strength of this package may be the weakness of its parts because it is a very fragile package we have.

If during the course of debate one of these should fall by the wayside, it is the opinion of this Senator that we probably end up without a compromise and without a social security package this year.

Along with all the others who deserve great credit and certainly that would be every Member, with the exception of the Member speaking, on the Social Security Commission and perhaps more importantly the willingness of the President and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to endorse the package and in a bipartisan way, to remove politics, partisan politics from consideration of social security in my view has been the highlight of anything that has happened around here for the last several years.

It is a very, very politically sensitive program. There are between 36 million and 37 million beneficiaries. There are between 115 million and 116 million people who pay into the system, and it seems to many of us on the Commission that we could have gone to the Commission meetings and argued about politics, whether it is the Democrats, fault, the Republicans, fault and we could have spent months doing that. But we determined at a very early stage to try to work out a compromise, and let the politics be played out in some other fashion.

So I certainly believe that we owe a debt of thanks to the President of the United States, to the Speaker of the House, to all the members of the National Commission, to members of the staff who worked with the Commission and members of our own personal staff in an effort to sort of put all this together. And then finally, we cannot fail to recognize the very good work done on the House side, the way it was handled by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the very speedy action by Chairman ROSTENKOWSKI and Congressman CONABLE, the ranking Republican member on Ways and Means, and all the members on that committee, and the quick and responsible action on the House floor and, I must say, I hope the equally responsible and quick action in the Senate Finance Committee and on the Senate floor.

This is one piece of legislation that should pass the Congress and be signed by the President before the so-called Easter break, and I have every reason to believe that it will be passed, I hope, by a substantial vote.

I again suggest that no one on the Commission that I know of has ever indicated this would be their package. If they could write out their own package they would probably have different provisions. But I suggest the members of that Commission, knowing the limitations, knowing the severity of the crisis, in my view acted very responsibly, and I am very proud to have been a member of that group.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, before I say a single word with respect to the specifics of the measure before us, let me say that the Senator from Kansas has spoken of the role of the President, which was indispensable, of the Speaker which was equally so, of the White House staff, of the Commission members, and of the members of the Finance Committee in bringing this measure to the floor which, as he said, is almost surely the most important single piece of legislation we will deal with in this Congress. But it would not be here in what we firmly believe to be the final stage of enactment save for the Senator from Kansas. It is his willingness to give up personal concerns, to set aside other matters pressing on him in the Congress, to set aside the legitimate interest of party and legitimate political interests in all these matters that have brought us here today, and I stand in tribute to him and I suppose this tribute can best be expressed by my stating that every member of our side, the Democratic side, of the Finance Committee, voted to report this bill, and a larger statement of confidence we could not have, and none would be more deserved.

Mr. President, it is a very exceptional piece of legislation. I have a statement which deals with a number of aspects of the bill.

Mr. President, today the Senate begins its deliberations on one of the most significant issues to face the 98th Congress. I refer, of course, to S. 1, the Social Security Amendments of 1983. The House has already concluded its consideration of the social security issue, and its approval of H.R. 1900 is a clear and unequivocal endorsement of the package of recommendations proposed by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. I am proud to have been a member of that Commission, and I am pleased the House was able with such speed and fairness to pass intact the basic elements of the Commission package, along with a few technical improvements. It is my sincere hope that we in the Senate will be able to act in a similarly expeditious and fair manner. The Senate and House versions contain only relatively small differences, and the Washington Post generously describes each as "a basically fair and responsible approach to dealing with an issue that can, without qualification, be rated as the most politically sensitive one on the American Scene."

I think we would do well to review the history of the so called social security crisis, for it underscores the pressing nature of the problem, as well as the successes that are within our reach.

On May 12, 1981, the administration proposed a package consisting primarily of benefit cuts designed to raise $110 billion in 5 years. The Senate, however, passed unanimously, on May 20, 1981, a resolution stating "that Congress shall not precipitously and unfairly reduce early retirees' benefits." The prospect of governmental gridlock loomed.

But the shrinkage of the trust funds that resulted from further deterioration in the national economy, coupled with mounting public concern that the system was becoming insolvent, made clear the need for action. On December 16, 1981, by Executive order of the President, the National Commission was created and charged with providing appropriate recommendations to the administration and the Congress "on long-term reforms to put social security back on a sound financial footing."

The Commission met nine times during 1982 and reviewed material produced by various public bodies including Congress, the 1979 Advisory Council, and the 1981 National Commission on Social Security Reform. It sought the advice of experts and examined a wide variety of alternative approaches. These deliberations led to a consensus about the size and nature of the problem. The Commission agreed that there is a short-term problem—a $150 to $200 billion shortfall between now and 1989; that from 1990 through the early 2000's the system will be in surplus; and that due to the retirement of the "baby boom" generation, there is a long-term problem beginning after 2010. Equally important, the Commission agreed that "Congress  should not alter the fundamental structure of the social security program or undermine its fundamental principles."

There was, however, no agreement on solutions to the social security crisis. Commission members were deeply divided on recommendations to cover both the short-term and long-term revenue shortfalls. This impasse persisted until the middle of January, at which point the combined efforts of Commission members, the congressional leadership and the White House produced the difficult compromise necessary to achieve an acceptable package of proposals.

Twelve of the fifteen Commission members, the President, the Speaker, and other congressional leaders agreed that the National Commission's recommendations strike an acceptable balance between tax increases and reductions of benefit increases. Since the report was issued, it has also been endorsed by a broad range of organizations, including the Save our Security Coalition, the National Association of Manufacturers, the United Auto Workers, the American Council of Life Insurance, and the Business Round Table.

No Commission member is satisfied with every recommendation. No Member of the House or Senate will be satisfied with every recommendation. But as a January 18 Washington Post editorial argued, the package comes "as close to absolute fairness as any social security revision can ever be." The balance, nonetheless, is fragile. The House has succeeded in avoiding significant alterations in the package. It is our responsibility in the Senate to do the same.

I have been of the opinion that throughout these long and difficult negotiations, more than just social security has been at stake. An alarming number of people, social security contributors and beneficiaries alike—became convinced of the inability of the Congress to govern fairly and effectively. When S. 1 passes, we will have demonstrated not merely that the social security system fundamentally sound, we will have demonstrated that there is a center in American politics, and it can govern. While the effort and patience needed have been great, it is without question a point worth making.

I conclude by saying that if we are on the verge of a historically important achievement, it could not have come without the chairman of the Finance Committee's initiative, commitment, and patience. Our hearings were open to the widest range of opinion on this issue and the Committees deliberations were thoughtful and exhaustive. The chairman's willingness to cooperate made S. 1 possible, and I want to express my personal thanks to him. It is my hope that within a short time the Nation too will recognize the valuable role he has played in the development of a truly praiseworthy piece of legislation.

I would call the attention of Senators to an editorial which, by a happy bit of serendipity, appeared in the Washington Post this morning entitled "Social Security Speeds Along." It begins with the paragraph which I will take the liberty of reading. It says:

If you get discouraged from time to time about government's inability to deal with the hard problems, reflect upon the surprising agility with which the Social Security rescue legislation is moving through Congress. Not only has the progress been swift, but, marvelous to tell, each step along the way has actually brought additional improvements to the package.

I ask unanimous consent that the editorial and its full text be placed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY SPEEDS ALONG

If you get discouraged from time to time about government's inability to deal with the hard problems, reflect upon the surprising agility with which the Social Security rescue legislation is moving through Congress. Not only has the progress been swift, but, marvelous to tell, each step along the way has actually brought additional improvements to the package.

The measure approved by the House last week made better the version proposed by the National Commission on Social Security Reform: It solved, in addition to the short-term Social Security deficit, the long-term shortfall. The House would achieve this by a further increase in the payroll tax in the next century and by gradually postponing the age at which full retirement benefits can be received from 65 to 67.

The Senate Finance Committee bill, which will come to the Senate floor this week, provides additional protection for the fund in the event of severe recessions and a better long-term plan for shoring up the program. The retirement age would be postponed by only one year and the needed savings would come from a slight reduction in benefits for all new retirees. This is a much fairer approach than that taken by the House, which would put a heavy burden on those people who are forced into early retirement by disability or job loss.

The Senate version also allows people who go on working after age 65 to draw full Social Security benefits starting in the next decade. This is a sweetener for high-income beneficiaries who would now have to pay taxes on their benefits, but it would also help people with relatively modest earnings.

If, as seems likely, the Senate approves the measure this week, the conferees will be in a happy position. They will need only to reconcile relatively small differences between two measures, each of which is a basically fair and responsible approach to dealing with an issue that can, without qualification, be rated as the most politically sensitive one on the American scene.

Note also that this has been accomplished without round-the-clock floor battles and encampments of the elderly staked out in the halls of Congress—and with admirable disregard for the million-dollar campaign of misleading argument launched by federal and postal workers' lobbies. It's enough to make you feel optimistic about the future of the republic.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. It comments upon the success of the Finance Committee, in the view of the Post, in fact improving upon a measure which the House passed which, in turn, improved on the proposals of the Commission.

With respect to a repeated theme of my friend's colleague's remarks that none of us would necessarily approve any of the details and many would disapprove of all, and yet together the weakness of each provision is the strength of the whole, a wonderful phrase, may I point out that in the House of Representatives Senator PEPPER, as he is referred to in that body, moved in the final House floor consideration an arrangement which would deal with the long-term problem without increasing the age of retirement. This had been a matter of the deepest concern and conviction on the part of Senator PEPPER for a very long while, and yet his measure lost and a measure did pass which would raise that age to 67, a measure never contemplated by the Commission, and which he and I and others opposed in the Commission, and yet even so CLAUDE PEPPER voted for this measure on final passage. That is what is at stake.

What is at stake is the stability and confidence in the singlemost important social program of the United States today, and the stability of the system as well, and in that context confidence in our ability to make hard choices, to say no even to our best friends when we judge the public interest to be otherwise because the public interest is everyone's interest, even when narrowly perceived, particular interests differ.

I would like to make one statement then about the bill before us. In the Committee on Finance I moved a proposal to deal with the long-term problem, as it has been designated, by a proposal to raise the tax rates in the year 2010. This proposal did not receive the approval of the committee. It received the approval of a bipartisan minority of two, and with that in mind I thereupon proposed to both members who had voted for that to vote for the final proposal, and I do not mean to propose the matter on the floor.

I think the judgment of the Senate, as reflected in the Finance Committee, should be settled. Similarly in the House Committee on Ways and Means there was a proposal to deal with the long-term problem of shortfall by a combination of a reduction in benefits and an increase in taxes, and again while that was overwhelmingly approved in the Ways and Means Committee, it was not voted on on the floor, and I think it is well to proceed from where we are and not to raise that alternative either, and I will not do that. I will vote for the proposal as it emerged from the Finance Committee and hope it will not in any significant way be changed.

I would like to make several points that may not be as widely recognized or in some cases simply only recently have been established that are important in this matter.

First of all, with respect to the constituents, the beneficiaries from social security. It is commonly stated that there are some 36 million to 37 million beneficiaries of social security and there are some 110 million or 115 million persons paying into the system for the support of the beneficiaries.

Not so, Mr. President. Every person in the system, whether still actively employed and paying into it or retired and receiving from it, is a beneficiary of it, because social security provides the protections of insurance, life insurance, disability insurance, care of the widowed and the orphaned, for everybody involved. No person would deny that an insurance of that quality is a real benefit. In consequence of which I think it would be more widely understood that we are all beneficiaries of the system, those of us who are fortunate enough to be members of it, a condition which we hope that by the end of this legislation will be made universal.

The original 1935 legislation left out a number of groups. One by one they have been included. Now, with inclusion of Federal employees and, indeed, employees of the Social Security Administration, coverage will be as near to a reasonable possibility, universal.

A second point I would like to make is about the stabilizer, as we have come to call it, and the Senator from Kansas described it. I would like to note that during the course of the informal negotiations in January, we were able to replicate the experience of the period 1977 to 1982, given the hypothetical existence of the COLA adjustment part of this stabilizer.

It is remarkable and important to note that had we had such a stabilizer in effect in 1977 we would not be on the floor today. There would be no shortage in the fund. On the other hand, we might not be on the floor today making changes that are in themselves wholly desirable—desirable because there are improvements in the system in this legislation. The Senator from Kansas mentioned but two—the 2 years of credit that are the dropout credit so called for women who are in the work force but leave to care for children and the gradual elimination of the earnings test for persons over 65 who continue to work.

Mr. President, I depart just a moment from any rigorous statement to an anecdotal one, but it is important. One of the great public men of the middle years of this century was Paul Appleby, confidant of President Roosevelt, Deputy Director of the Budget under President Roosevelt and President Truman, a great writer and teacher in public administration, a great American in every sense of that word. After a long life of public service and later dean of the Maxwell School at Syracuse, he retired. As most such men who had given their life to public service, he had no savings. He had only social security and the fact that he was still in demand for consulting and other duties, lecturing that he could carry out.

I remember, in my early years in Washington in the 1960's, how that great man had to make every decision about what he could do, where he could speak, in terms of would he lose his social security benefits if somehow he went over that $6,000 limit. It was lower than that then. That will be behind us and ought to be.

I would note that there are a number of provisions that we are specifically correcting, such as inequities in the present system with regard to older women, and they too are additions to the system.

Finally, Mr. President, in order that we may have some sense of the magnitude of the measures we put in force today or tomorrow or the next day—and we must put them in force in this period in the Congress, else we cannot make the technical adjustments at the Social Security Administration to send out the June checks as they will be required—I would like to offer for the RECORD, Mr. President, estimates of the cumulative OASDI surpluses which this measure will bring about. We asked the Office of Actuary at the Social Security Administration to estimate the period during which the funds will increase from year to year until the first moment, the first year, at which it could be estimated they will decline. And the Office of Actuary reports to us that from the year 1982 to the year 2021, these funds, the OASDI funds, increase each year.

Now, we are cautioned that things can surprise us. But this is the Office of Actuary. They make the best judgment they can. And, Mr. President, at the end of that period, in the year 2021, the cumulative surpluses are $12.1 trillion. That suggests a considerable achievement and the importance of this measure which we bring to the floor at this point.

I see that my distinguished friend, the minority whip, the Senator from California, is on the floor. We would be happy to hear his views on these matters.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank my friend from New York. I appreciate his eloquent statement with regard to the importance of social security.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 68

(Purpose: To require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to prepare an implementation report on earnings sharing for social security purposes)

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. PRESSLER). The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 68.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 172, between lines 5 and 6, insert the following new part:

PART E—EARNINGS SHARING IMPLEMENTATION REPORT

SEC. 161. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this Part referred to as the "Secretary") shall develop, in consultation with the Senate Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, proposals for earnings sharing legislation as described in subsection.

(b) The Secretary shall report such proposals to such committees not later than January 1, 1984. The report and proposals provided to such committees shall—

(1) take into account, discuss, and analyze the impact of earnings sharing on various categories of social security beneficiaries and include recommendations for the implementation of earnings sharing which may be necessary to provide adequate protection for particular classes of beneficiaries;

(2) include specific recommendations with respect to an appropriate and feasible time period or time periods for implementation of such proposals along with recommendations for any transition provisions which may be necessary or appropriate; and

(3) provide cost-impact analyses on each proposal presented.

(b) For the purposes of subsection (a), the term "earnings sharing" refers to proposals that the combined earnings of a husband and wife during the period of their marriage shall be divided equally and shared between them for social security benefit purposes.

(c) In preparing the report and proposals required in subsection (a), the Secretary shall include consideration and analysis of the earnings sharing proposals contained in (1) S. 3, 98th Congress, 1st Session, (2) H.R. 1513, 97th Congress, 1st Session, and (3) the earnings sharing option described in the report entitled "Social Security and the Changing Roles of Men and Women", submitted to the Congress pursuant to Public Law 95-216, the Social Security Amendments of 1977.

(d) In carrying out subsections (a), (b), and (c), the Secretary shall consult with the Director of the Congressional Budget Office. Not later than 30 days after the Secretary submits the report required in subsection (a), the Director of the Congressional Budget Office shall submit a report to the committees identified in such subsection, on the methodologies, recommendations, and analyses used in the Secretary's report.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, this amendment would direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Committee on Finance, the Committee on Ways and Means of the House, and the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, to develop proposals for implementation of earnings-sharing legislation for the purposes of social security benefits and report those proposals to the appropriate committees of Congress no later than January 1, 1984.

I have discussed this with the distinguished chairman of the committee. I modified the amendment to meet one concern of his and I am delighted he now looks upon it with favor, and I trust that is also true with the distinguished Senator from New York.

BACKGROUND

Mr. President, last year I introduced legislation, S. 3034, and again this year as S. 3, which would provide for the establishment of a system of earnings sharing within the social security system.

Earnings sharing basically means that the combined earnings of a husband and wife during the period of their marriage would be divided equally and shared between them for social security purposes. Marriage, for the purposes of social security, would be regarded as an economic partnership and each spouse would receive equal social security credits for earnings accrued during the course of the marriage. The earnings-sharing concept is very similar to the community property model, which is increasingly the basis for division of all property or property rights—including private pension rights—acquired during marriage.

Mr. President, I was very pleased that 6 of the 15 members of the Social Security Reform Commission in January specifically referred in their supplemental statements to the earnings-sharing concept as the most promising and direct approach to dealing with the fundamental inequities faced by women under the social security system. They urged that steps be taken now to work out the details for implementation of earnings sharing. The amendment I am offering would set in motion the process toward developing a concrete and viable plan of action to achieve this goal.

IMPLEMENTATION REPORT: NOT A STUDY

Mr. President, I want to stress that this amendment does not call for another study. We did that in 1977. The 1977 social security amendments in section 341 called for HHS to study the problems facing women under the social security system. The report developed as a result of the 1977 amendments presented the earnings-sharing model as one of two possible options for dealing in a comprehensive fashion with the problems facing women under social security. Other commissions and task forces—both public and private—which have looked at the problem have also identified earnings sharing as the most promising alternative for providing equity for women under the social security system. What needs to be done now is to work out and test the details on how a specific earnings-sharing model can be implemented, and determine what type of transition provisions are needed and what modifications in the basic earnings-sharing concept are necessary in order to provide adequate protection for various categories of beneficiaries.

Mr. President, at the time I introduced an earnings-sharing proposal in the Senate, I noted that there were a number of complex technical issues that would need to be resolved during the course of consideration of earnings-sharing legislation. However, as one of the Social Security Reform Commission members noted in urging action on earnings sharing:

The fact that transition to such a program will be complex to design and implement should not prevent this much-needed change. Work on the program should begin now so that the details can be worked out and communicated well in advance.

The amendment which I am offering today is designed to do that. It is patterned after the amendment adopted in the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act which directed HHS to develop specific proposals for implementation of prospective reimbursement for medicare. The expertise of HHS along with CBO would be focused upon providing Congress with concrete proposals and a data base upon which legislative action can be taken in the very near future. I am convinced that this type of implementing analysis should precede enactment of earnings sharing and that we need to take action now so that the technical and programmatic issues can be resolved in a responsible, yet timely fashion.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND THE NEEDS OF WOMEN

The principal problem with the current social security system as it relates to the needs of women is that the program has not adapted to the profound changes in the role of women in our society since the social security system was founded.

In the 1930's when the social security program was created, the typical

American family consisted of a man who was a full-time worker and his wife who was a full-time lifelong homemaker. The labor force participation was less than 17 percent and fewer than 1 in 12 marriages ended in divorce. The social security benefit structure was thus established on the concept of a lifelong couple with one wage earner and a dependent spouse.

The situation has dramatically changed over the past 50 years and the typical family of the thirties and forties is not the typical family of today. Women have become a major part of America's work force, enriching the world of work with their contributions and productivity, despite continuing wage discrimination and employment barriers. The percentage of married women in the work force exceeds 50 percent and it has been estimated that 90 percent of all women spend some portion of their lives in the work force, many of them moving in and out of the roles of wage earners and homemakers as the needs of their families change. It is no longer true that women are likely to be either lifelong homemakers or lifelong wage earners; these roles are combined and interchanged throughout a lifetime.

Similarly, we must recognize, like it or not, that the status of marriage has changed dramatically over the past 50 years. Today, one in three marriages ends in divorce.

Mr. President, despite these massive changes in our society, the social security system has continued to operate on the basis of a philosophy designed for an era when most women did not work and when most women were part of a lifelong marriage. Consequently, the current system works well only for those women whose family and work patterns have not changed from the thirties and forties. For the vast majority of women and families that no longer fit into that pattern, the system fails to provide either adequately or equitably for their needs.

Both homemakers and women in the labor force are inadequately protected under the current system.

Women who work outside of the home often find that their social security benefits are no higher than they would be if they had never paid into the system. Members of two-earner families often find that they receive lower social security benefits than one-earner families with precisely the same lifetime earnings records.

The inequities of the current system can be even more acute for those women who have been full-time homemakers and are displaced from that role, either by divorce or the death of a spouse. After years of work as a homemaker, a divorced woman may find herself without any work record of her own and eligible for social security benefits only as a dependent spouse—at 50 percent of what her former spouse receives. A homemaker also receives no protection against disability under the current system.

A woman who drops out of the labor force for child rearing is also penalized since the current system rewards continuous work patterns. Each year she remains out of the work force to care for her children can reduce her ultimate social security benefits.

Mr. President, under the earnings-sharing concept, the combined earnings of a couple would be divided equally. Each spouse would have a separate social security account and would accrue credits equally during the period of their marriage. Homemakers would receive disability and retirement benefit protection in their own right. The current bias against two-earner families would be eliminated. Women who enter and leave the work force to fill necessary child-rearing roles would no longer be penalized by gaps in their social security coverage.

Mr. President, the earnings-sharing concept represents a fair and equitable approach to revising the social security system to reflect the changing role and needs of women and their families.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from California. The only question the Senator from Kansas had was the date. That has been changed to January 1, 1984.

Mr. CRANSTON. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. As the Senator knows, the consensus package of the National Commission included some of the recommendations to improve the equity of the social security system for women. In addition, it includes a provision offered by Senator ARMSTRONG that has already been referred to, which will allow people who are out of the work force caring for children under 3 to drop up to 2 years of earnings in the computation of their earnings history.

I think this is a good amendment which I support. It does take it beyond the study stage. It indicates we shall develop in consultation with the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means proposals for earnings sharing legislation described in section (b). That has been made part of the record.

I am prepared to accept the amendment. I thank the distinguished Senator from California not just for the amendment, but for his past interest in this problem. This is an area of discrimination or inequity, whatever we may call it. The Senator from California has been in the forefront in trying to correct it.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the Senator from Kansas very much.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I simply associate myself with the views of the chairman of the Finance Committee. This is a matter that the Commission did very much concern itself with. The amendment of the Senator from California will put that concern into statutory language and set about a process by which we will be able to do this in the context of time and when we will more than likely have the funds. That is a necessary combination.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank my friend from New York.

Mr. President, I move adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 68) was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 69

(Purpose: To conform certain Veterans' Administration pension law to accommodate the proposed six-month delay in cost-of-living adjustments)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send a technical amendment to the desk on behalf of the distinguished Senator from Wyoming (Mr. SIMPSON) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), for himself and Mr. SIMPSON, proposes unprinted amendment numbered 69.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 75, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following: (e) Section 403(b) of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-253) is amended to read as follows:

"(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (a)(1) shall apply with respect to amounts payable for periods beginning after May 31, 1983.

"(2) In the cases of individuals to whom pension is payable under sections 521, 541, and 542 of title 38, United States Code, the amendment made by subsection (a)(1) shall take effect on the first day after May 31, 1983, that an increase is made in maximum annual rates of pension pursuant to section 3112 of title 38, United States Code."

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment will not in any way alter the substance of the package of social security reform we are considering today. It will simply conform VA pension law to those reforms. It will affect only the payment of certain veterans' benefits, not the payment of any social security benefits. Its sole purpose is to protect VA pensioners from any reduction in their monthly benefits.

I think the Senator from California should be added as a cosponsor to the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

● Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, this amendment concerns the effect of the 6-month cost-of-living adjustment (or COLA) delay for social security on the Veterans' Administration improved pension program.

Pursuant to the reconciliation requirements imposed by last year's first concurrent budget resolution, Senate Concurrent Resolution 92, the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee reported out legislative language which provided that, in computing amounts of monthly non-service-connected VA pension payments, amounts of 99 cents or less shall be rounded down to the next lower dollar. This provision, which was enacted as section 403 of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1982, Public Law 97-253, was made effective "with respect to amounts payable for periods beginning after May 31, 1983," so as to coincide with the effective date, under section 3112 of title 38, United States Code, of this year's COLA for the improved pension program enacted in the Veterans' and Survivors' Pension Improvement Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-588). Under that section, monthly amounts of such pension are increased at the same time and by the same percentage as title II social security benefits are increased pursuant to section 215(1) of the Social Security Act, which currently provides that benefits shall be increased effective on June 1 of each year.

The congressional intent underlying last year's rounding-down enactment was stated as follows in the joint explanatory statement accompanying the conference report on the Reconciliation Act—House Report No. 97-759, at 83:

The conferees stress that this provision will become effective at the same time as the cost-of-living adjustment in the rates for the "improved" pension program (enacted in Public Law 95-588), pursuant to section 3112 of title 38, scheduled for June 1, 1983, with the result that no such pensioner's monthly rate will be, by virtue of this provision, reduced below the amount paid for the previous month.

We feel that, in order to preserve and give full force and effect to this congressional intent, it is necessary that any social security COLA delay that is enacted in S. 1 be accompanied by a corresponding and simultaneous delay in the effective date of the rounding-down provision contained in section 403 of the 1982 Reconciliation Act. Toward this end, the present amendment would delay the effective date of the rounding provision only with respect to improved pension while retaining that provision's current effective date—June 1, 1983—for old, nonindexed pension payable under section 305(a) of Public Law 95-588.

In short, Mr. President, this amendment is entirely consistent with the bipartisan program of reforms contained in S. 1, and is not intended to alter, amend, or undercut any of those reforms. I would strongly urge its adoption. ●

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know of no objection. This has been cleared on both sides.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it is emphatically approved by this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 69) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I rise in support of H.R. 1900, the bill reported by the Senate Finance Committee, to implement the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Mr. President, at the outset, I would like to pay tribute to the chairman of the committee, Senator DOLE, whom Senator MOYNIHAN and I had the privilege of serving with as members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

I believe the Senator from New York referred to the first paragraph in today's Washington Post editorial which comments that at each step along the way the work of the Commission has been improved upon and that in the Senate and in the Senate Finance Committee it has been improved still further.

Certainly, we all are very privileged to have had the leadership of the chairman of the Finance Committee. He has been tireless in his efforts to find ways to do a better job within the understanding arrived at among the members of the Commission and with Senator BAKER, Speaker O'NEILL, and the President. I believe with his guidance and help we have indeed been able to do that.

I secondly want to pay my tributes to the senior Senator from New York, Senator MOYNIHAN, who, it is literally safe to say, rescued the Commission in its moment of deepest and darkest despair, namely on the very day that we were all coming back to the Senate floor on January 3 to business as usual. But since the Senator from New York does not go about business as usual and never has in his distinguished public career, he was able to restore the process that had somehow begun to drift away from us over the Christmas recess, and it is thanks to his initiative, and I mean this sincerely, that we are here at all. Any of the accomplishments of the President, the Speaker, or any of the rest of us would not have been possible without that initiative. I think we all owe him a deep debt of gratitude.

Indeed, Mr. President, I think that even the critics of this package—Senator ARMSTRONG, as a member of the Finance Committee and as a member of the commission—have had a very positive, salutary impact upon it.

Several of the amendments in this legislation come about because of the interest of Senator ARMSTRONG in trying to make sure that this package really did the job. I do believe that this package does do the job and, in that respect, rises above even the most optimistic expectations that any of us might have had for this effort.

When I say it does the job, I do not mean that it just addresses the short-term deficit; I do not mean that it just addresses, for the first time that I am familiar with, the long-term deficit. It does so with a variety of safeguards and policy choices that are both responsible and necessary. Uneasy choices admittedly, but responsible and necessary assuredly.

I shall have more to say about that in just a moment, but the reason I stress that point is that, at this very moment, roughly three out of four Americans under age 45 say to people like Lou Harris or George Gallup that they do not believe there is going to be a social security system when they retire. This bill, which does the job in meeting the solvency tests not just of the next 6 years but the next 75, should help restore public confidence in substantial measure. If there is anything we politicians are capable of doing, we should meet the test of reassuring those millions of Americans upon whom the very continuation of the social security system truly depends.

I have often said that this legislation is important not just to 38 million people—the retirees, their survivors, those who are disabled—by securing them against some kind of catastrophe, but I think it secures the interests of the 100-million-plus payees into social security. When we pass this bill, we cannot be accused any more of giving only some kind of idle chatter or meaningless talk when we give a commitment to a strong social security system.

This bill insures the future financial integrity of the old age, survivors, and disability insurance trust funds. It provides a rescue plan which should hearten all beneficiaries and workers who have feared for the future of the social security system.

Contained in this bill are measures which can restore the solvency of social security for the foreseeable future with no reductions in current social security benefit levels and no increases in payroll tax rates above those already scheduled in the law. The bill reaffirms the soundness of the basic structure of social security by making balanced and minimal adjustments to provide immediate relief from the short-term financing problems and to restore the long-term solvency of the program.

MEETING SHORT-TERM FINANCING NEEDS

The financing package reported from the committee improves the fi-ancing of OASDI by $165.5 billion over the next 7 years under intermediate assumptions. With only a modest improvement in the economy, this amount will be sufficient to pay benefit checks on time throughout the rest of the decade without resorting to any of the various fail-safe provisions in the bill.

However, in the past the Congress has been overly optimistic in its financing assumptions. The 1977 amendments were based upon intermediate assumptions which projected surpluses in OASDI beginning in 1980, with reserves accumulating to 7 months of outgo by 1987. Instead, because of several years of unanticipated double-digit inflation, declining real wages, and high unemployment, deficits continued in OASDI, drawing reserves down to 1 month's payout by the end of 1982.

The significant departure from previous social security financing efforts in this financing package is that it is, in fact, going to do more than merely enable social security to squeak through the decade under some kind of middling or, if you will, intermediate assumptions. The bill contains, through the direct financing measures that have been well recorded, a number of fail-safe provisions designed to go into effect whenever reserve levels become dangerously low. The first failsafe is the automatic crediting of the trust funds with a full month's revenue whenever reserves fall below 12 percent of annual outgo.

This tax transfer enables the trust funds to continue making timely benefit payments as long as monthly revenues will cover the checks. The second fail-safe is authorization to continue borrowing among the three trust funds until 1987. If these two provisions are insufficient to finance benefit payments, the third fail-safe, a graduated COLA reduction, would be triggered into effect, with appropriate notice.

The short-run financing safeguards in this package are important because they should enable social security to continue making timely benefit payments even if economic conditions, contrary to expectation, deteriorate through the rest of the decade. Even under the social security's trustees most pessimistic economic assumptions, only the use of normalized tax transfers would be necessary to enable social security to continue making benefit payments without interruption throughout the decade.

So, Mr. President, in sum, what we have achieved is a new effort to plan for the worst, and it is significant because, in the past, we have always planned while hoping for the best.

Mr. President, that has not, as we know, been good enough. This effort today before us reverses a good deal of wishful thinking, that I wish we had not done.

The bill before us provides adequate short-term financing for social secuity without placing an undue burden on any single group of beneficiaries or taxpayers. Ultimately, there is no painless solution to social security's financing problems, but this package spreads the pain that there is as evenly as possible. About a third of the $165.5 billion in new financing would affect employers and workers, a third would affect other accounts in the budget, and a third would affect beneficiaries. Because the financial burdens are broadly shared, they are minimal for any particular group of individuals.

In addition, the timing and sequence for implementing the various proposals in the package is designed to cushion their impact. The substantial immediate financing need in social security would be met primarily through transfers from other accounts in the budget—$19.2 billion would be transferred from the general fund in the first year alone. Significant payroll tax increases would be postponed until the last 2 years of the decade to avoid any adverse consequences for economic recovery. The sequencing of this financing package makes it possible to provide sufficient revenues in the early years without drastic or immediate changes in the structure of the system.

I would like to say a few words about long-term financing.

More impressive than the success of this legislation in resolving the short-term financing problem in social security is the fact that it would totally eliminate the long-term deficit currently forecast under intermediate assumptions, for the first time in a decade. The Congress has faced a projected 75-year deficit in OASDI continuously since 1972. Enacting the Senate bill would actually leave the trust funds with an unheard of long-run surplus of 0.08 percent of taxable payroll. Enactment of this bill would thus do more to restore public confidence in social security than any other single action the Congress could take.

Two-thirds of the financing improvements in the long run come from proposals which are included primarily to meet the immediate financing needs of the program. The other third comes from a combination of proposals designed specifically to resolve the long-term financing problem. This long-term solvency package incorporates four changes which in combination improve the financing of the program by an estimated 0.74 percent of taxable payroll over the next 75 years. These changes are: One, to gradually raise the age of normal retirement from 65 to 66 between 2003 and 2015, leaving the early retirement age at 62; two, to gradually reduce relative benefit levels in OASDI by 5.3 percent between 2000 and 2008 so that by 2008 workers on average would receive 40 percent of their preretirement earnings from social security, instead of the 42 percent anticipated under current law; three, to gradually phase out the earnings limit for persons 65 and older beginning in 1990, by raising the limit by $3,000 a year over the indexed amount until the earnings limit is completely eliminated in 1995; and four, to allow persons who leave the labor force to care for a child under 3 to include 2 additional dropout years in computing their social security benefits.

Splitting the long-run solution between raising the retirement age and reducing replacement rates spreads the added costs of financing the projected growth in the beneficiary population equitably among those who will be beneficiaries in the 21st century, and provides adequate advance notice to all who will be affected in those years. There are sound arguments in favor of each of these adjustments. By combining them, it is possible to make only minor adjustments to assure that adequate social security benefits are available for all those who will rely upon them 30 or 40 years from now.

One element of the long-run solution is to raise the normal retirement age by only 1 year. This increase in retirement age is only a partial response to increases in life expectancy which have occurred over the past 40 years and are expected to continue over the next 60. For men aged 65, life expectancy has increased by 2 years since 1940 and is expected, under intermediate assumptions, to increase by another 3 years before 2040. For women aged 65, life expectancy has increased by 5 years since 1940 and is expected to increase by another 4 years before 2040. An increase of 1 year in the normal retirement age is a modest response to this change.

I was very pleased with the third paragraph in today's Washington Post editorial, which I am going to quote. It says:

The Senate Finance Committee bill, which will come to the Senate floor this week, provides additional protection for the fund in the event of severe recessions and a better long-term plan for shoring up the program. The retirement age would be postponed by only one year and the needed savings would come from a slight reduction in benefits for all new retirees. This is a much fairer approach than that taken by the House, which would put a heavy burden on those people who are forced into early retirement by disability or job loss.

Mr. President, that is exactly right. We have a far better bill than the House, which mandates that the retirement age eventually change from age 65, not to age 66 but to age 67. What we have done to pick up the additional money is, in effect, lower the so-called replacement rate by about 5 percent. What that means in English is that, in comparison to the roughly 42 percent of earnings replacement—preretirement earnings replacement that people now get from social security—that percentage, instead of being 42 percent, will be about 40 percent replacement, a very small change, indeed. That change would be gradually phased in from the year 2000 to 2008. It is a change of such a small magnitude that we can say with virtual assurance that the standard of living of people retiring just on social security will be, notwithstanding that change, substantially better than it is today.

The reason we can say that, Mr. President, with some assurance as we look 25 years into the future, is that it has been historically true over long periods of time that wages grow substantially faster—history says 1.5 percent faster—than prices. If you take the conservative estimate and say wages are going to grow 1 percent faster than prices, what that means is that preretirement earnings 25 years from now should be reflecting, even with those conservative assumptions, a 25 percent improvement in the real standard of living for all Americans, including those just about to retire.

What that means, Mr. President, is that, even with this change in the replacement rate, there will be a very substantial improvement in the standard of living, not just for Americans before they retire but for those after they retire. And we have met our commitment to insure that all Americans, retired or not, do participate in the real growth of this country. I am very pleased to have been able not only to make that commitment, but to keep it.

Mr. President, one of the things that is unfair about raising the retirement age to age 67 is that it affects different people very unequally. It is not that it is illogical policy. It is not illogical policy because we are living longer. We are expected to live longer with the additional advances in medical science. Indeed, life expectancy, as I have said, has increased for men of age 65 by 2 years since 1940. It is expected under intermediate assumptions to increase by another 3 years before the year 2040. For women aged 65, life expectancy has increased by 5 years since 1940, and it is expected to increase by another 4 years before the year 2040.

In addition, an increase in the retirement age 20 years from now should coincide with changes in preferences for work after the turn of the century. Today, quite naturally, workers who have spent 40 years on the production line or in manual labor look forward to retirement at age 62 as a right they have earned. In addition, employers facing labor surpluses have been willing to offer older workers added pension benefits to take early retirement. With few other job opportunities, older workers encouraged to terminate with one employer stand little chance of finding employment with another. Early retirement benefits under social security have provided the unemployed and the unhealthy older worker a chance to retire early with some dignity.

However, there is an increasing probability that preferences and opportunities for work will be quite different after the turn of the century.

Demographers project the development of labor supply shortages toward the end of this century, leading to an increasing demand for older workers. In addition, today's younger generation, which entered the labor force later, has developed a higher level of education and skills, and has worked in less physically demanding occupations than their elders, may prefer to work longer than the current generation of retirees.

While the average worker may choose to delay retirement, there will still be categories of workers—primarily those in stressful or hazardous jobs—who will need to maintain the option to retire early. There will continue to be workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be unable to work or will be unable to find employment when they are older.

For those who can work longer, raising the retirement age will conform to their choices and their opportunities. Combined with the incentives in this package to delay retirement—the increase in the delayed retirement credit and phase out of the earnings limit—raising the retirement age should help to dilute the strong association which has existed in the past between age 65 and retirement.

So, while people may be living longer, there is very inconclusive evidence that those living longer are going to be able to work proportionately longer.

In technical terms, our improvements in morbidity do not necessarily keep up with our improvements in mortality.

For those who can not continue working past age 62, improvements should be made in disability insurance (DI), supplemental security income (SSI), and unemployment compensation to assure that those unable to work longer are not unfairly or unnecessarily punished for events which are fully beyond their control. Raising the retirement age only 1 year assures that benefit changes from this proposal will be modest.

It is for that reason that I am going to offer an amendment that is going to urge that there should not be action taken in the future to make improvements in our disability insurance program, to make improvements in our supplemental security income program and in unemployment compensation, to assure that those people who are unable to work longer are not unfairly or unnecessarily punished for events which are beyond their control. When I say they would be punished, imagine, if you will, the difference in circumstances between someone who might have to retire at age 64 under current law versus age 64 under the House proposal. The difference in today's terms would be that if the House bill were enacted, the individual would be forced to take roughly a 14-percent cut in retirement benefits—while others who could work longer would take no cut in benefits at all. That is what I mean by an unequal burden.

In addition to raising the retirement age 1 year, the long-term solution embodied in this bill would reduce relative benefit levels for future retirees by 5.3 percent from those anticipated under current law. This adjustment would be accomplished by gradually reducing the percentage factors in the benefit computation formula beginning in 2000 until a 5.3-percent reduction is achieved for those becoming entitled to benefits after 2007.

Interest in slowing the growth in real benefit levels in the long run has resulted from concern about the effects of the tremendous ad hoc across-the-board benefit increases granted to social security beneficiaries in the late 1960's and early 1970's. Across-the-board increases of 43 percent between 1968 and 1971 and 20 percent in 1972 raised nominal benefit levels by more than twice the rate of inflation. These substantial real increases in benefits helped in the early 1970's to cut the rate of poverty among the elderly in half. However, coupled with unintentional increases in real benefit levels resulting from the "double-indexing" of initial benefits in the mid-1970's, these increases also contributed to the decline in essential trust fund reserves. The 1977 amendments reduced the projected long-run replacement rate for future beneficiaries from 55 percent to 42 percent in an effort to stabilize the financing of the program. Some believe this still left long-run replacement rates nearly 10 percent higher than intended in the legislation of the early 1970's.

An across-the-board 5-percent reduction in benefits would still provide for real increases in benefits in the future. However, social security benefits would be slightly lower in relation to preretirement earnings than they would be under current law. Because this adjustment in benefit levels is accomplished through the benefit formula, it will affect all social security beneficiaries—retired, survivor, and disabled—equally, unlike the adjustment in retirement age which would affect only retired beneficiaries. For this reason, it spreads a relatively small adjustment across a much larger group than the group affected by the retirement age. And the adjustment is fairer, because it makes the same proportionate reduction for everyone, rather than have its effects on benefits vary depending on the responses of individuals.

The combination of these two proposals in the long run, accompanied by benefit increases to encourage delayed retirement and special programs to aid those who cannot delay retirement, should result in relatively minor benefit adjustments for any particular group of individuals. As with the changes made in the short term to meet the emergency financing needs of the program, the long-term changes represent a blend of proposals to achieve a fair and balanced package of reforms to insure the continued viability of the social security program.

In conclusion, the most serious problem in social security has not been the financing shortfall, but the crisis in public confidence. In the last few years, the proportion of the population between 18 and 49 with little or no confidence in the future of social security has grown from just under half to over three-quarters. This massive loss in public confidence should be genuine cause for alarm because the whole social insurance system rests upon a compact across generations. Younger workers pay taxes to finance benefits to today's retired and disabled beneficiaries with the expectation that younger generations of the future will do the same for them when it is their turn to retire. Growing doubts about the future of social security threaten to undermine the willingness of workers to support the payroll tax upon which the entire system rests.

The bill before us represents a dramatic step toward restoring public confidence in social security. For the first time in more than a decade, with the enactment of this legislation, there will be no long-run or short-run financing shortfall in social security. In addition, despite the years of public debate and political stalemate leading up to this legislation, the Congress has demonstrated this year that it can work quickly and in a bipartisan fashion when necessary to maintain this important social institution. The commitment to preserving the social security system which we demonstrate by our actions this week will be an important indicator to today's younger workers that social security is as permanent as the Government which operates it.

I think, Mr. President, that our bill achieves a good balance. I hope we do not retreat from the position in this bill in conference, and that we fight very hard to retain the ability of people who, having retired, will not see their earnings taken away and offset their social security.

We, as you know, do eliminate in this legislation, starting in 1990, the so-called earnings test, to which I say good riddance, because it has achieved a good deal of confusion, discomfort, and even heartbreak for many rather fearful senior citizens who have worried that if they earned, somehow, $1 dollar more than the $5,500 or $6,000 the law permits without an offset, they somehow were doing something wrong. I also think that the provision added by the Senator from Colorado in the additional dropout years for women is a very important step forward.

So, Mr. President, in sum, I hope my colleagues will support this measure. It represents an enormous amount of work. It is something that all members of the Finance Committee made major contributions to. I do not think any of us would labor under the illusion that it is totally perfect. We do not know how to write perfect legislation yet and probably never will, but this is as good a product as has been my privilege to work on behalf of, and I do urge my friends and colleagues to support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, before the senior Senator from Pennsylvania may have to leave the floor, I should like to have him hear from me in person just this one statement. He called attention to the editorial comment in this morning's Washington Post which, very accurately in my view, states that the provisions that the Senate Finance Committee made to resolve the long-term gap in the deficit, that period which appears in the outer third of the 75-year period, are superior to those that emerged from the House.

What the Senator from Pennsylvania did not say is that it is he who fashioned that provision, and it was his efforts, his ability, to see the parts of compromise, bring a coalition together, that not only passed the measure in the Finance Committee but earlier I observed, that although alternative arrangements had been contemplated by the Democratic members of the Commission, we would not offer them. We would support the measure as was reported. And whilst I thank him for his extraordinarily generous remarks about the Senator from New York, I would like to put the record clear about who did this job. It was the Senator from Pennsylvania.

I should like to add one other note. We have been doing some quick calculations on the subject of what Keynes called "the miracle of compound interest," and I would report to the Senator and to the Chamber that if real wages rise 1.5 percent in the next 30 years, which is a very modest rise, certainly historically attained, real wages will be 56 percent higher than they are now. If as a result of the changes in this program, the wage replacement rate of benefits is 40 percent rather than 42, we will still be working from about a 50 percent higher base, so that real benefits will be very considerably higher. I again thank him for his generosity.

Mr. HEINZ. If the Senator will yield, the Senator is absolutely correct: I had meant to say this, but I do thank the Senator for his kind words. He is quite right about the miracle of compound interest. I had left that out of my explanation not because I am totally unaware of compound interest.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Oh, no, the Senator stated it. We just did the calculation.

Mr. HEINZ. It is very true that what we have before us is a very happy prospect for future generations of Americans, one that they did not necessarily face a year ago when we faced as a Congress the issue of social security in some disarray and confusion.

I thank my friend from New York for all his very kind words.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. HEINZ. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. DOLE. I also extend my thanks to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, and I think the record should reflect that when we were trying to figure out what to do in Alexandria, Va., last November after a 3-day session in the Ramada Inn there, as I recall, it was the Senator from Pennsylvania who first broached the idea of sort of splitting it down the middle, at least getting us to think about how we are going to bring all the factions together. And that became sort of the starting point of the negotiations that started again in January.

For that effort we will be eternally grateful to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, and we appreciate this constructive action not only at every Commission meeting but particularly that particular day when we seemed to be bogged down and not really going anywhere. Even though we did not adopt that specific recommendation, it became the basis for the compromise which was ultimately adopted by the Commission. I thank the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I want to join others who have spoken in complimenting the members of the Senate Finance Committee, especially its distinguished chairman, for producing this legislation, a feat which many thought would be impossible, even quite recently.

I must say that the scholarship and resourcefulness of the chairman of the committee, Mr. DOLE, is well-known to this body; but in this particular instance he has performed a near miracle by the leadership he has given to the Senate, not only in his stewardship of the Finance Committee but also in the way he helped shepherd this matter through the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

I also join the Senator from New York in congratulating the Senator from Pennsylvania. I agree with what he has said and Senator DOLE has said about the pivotal role JOHN HEINZ has played not only during the past few weeks but also from the start, and especially through the crucial—and at one point quite dark—days of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, when many were wringing their hands and, privately at least, confiding that this would not work out.

The Senator from Pennsylvania did not lose faith. He made many proposals which formed the basis for further action and really set the stage for bringing this matter to fruition, for which we are all indebted to him.

I compliment particularly my colleague from New York, Mr. MOYNIHAN. He and I have discussed this matter on many occasions, in many forums—on the floor of the Senate, in the Finance Committee, the National Commission, on television. On practically every street corner in America, PAT MOYNIHAN and I have discussed these issues. We have agreed sometimes, and a lot of times we have not.

I must say that his mastery of the subject and his obvious understanding of the broad historical perspective in which social security must be viewed, his feeling for the technical ins and outs of the legislation, his scholarship and, like the others of whom I have already spoken, his faith that ultimately we would pull a rabbit out of the hat, have been an inspiration to me.

I compliment and congratulate him, and I announce that I have enjoyed working with him in this matter and others, but especially this most difficult of issues.

Mr. President, I wish also to say a word of congratulation to Alan Greenspan, who was the Chairman of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. We all know that Alan Greenspan is a brilliant man, but he is also a man of extraordinary patience. In fact, often, as the Commission deliberations droned on, I saw Alan, seated at the head of the table, patiently listening to all the points of view and then synthesizing the increments on which we could agree and, in a gentle and courteous way, proposing that we lay aside those matters about which we could not agree, and taking one tiny victory after another and building on it and finally leading us, by painful steps, to a compromise which was agreed to by a large majority of the Commission.

I say that as one who was not a part of the 12-member majority. I was part of the minority who did not think that, in the form recommended by the Commission, this was a satisfactory answer; but it does not lessen my admiration for the skill and dedication with which the Chairman of the Commission, Alan Greenspan, approached this task.

I will not mention them one by one, but I also want to say, for the benefit of my colleagues who did not have the privilege of serving on the Commission, that the public members who served did so with great distinction and did so with an understanding and expertise that I think is unusual in a citizen commission.

It is very difficult even for a Senator or for a Member of the House of Representatives, who has staff resources, who has experience dealing with legislation, to really come to grips with it. But for someone who is a businessman or a lawyer or who is not engaged in framing legislation every day, I think it is remarkable that they were able to participate in such a productive way.

I must say that it enriched my life to know these people on the Commission and to work closely with them.

I doubt if there has been a single issue during my years in the Senate which has been as politically charged as the question of social security reform. I suppose that is only natural because social security is inherently such an important issue. It is the financial lifeline for 36 million Americans, and for some of them it is literally that—a lifeline. The arrival, in a timely manner, of the expected social security check is an issue which is not of passing importance or peripheral interest to some of these recipients. It is literally what they depend upon to have something to put on the table for the next meal and to pay their utility bills, rent, and so forth.

Over the years, social security has gradually become an extraordinarily important feature, not only in the economic life but also in the personal life of many Americans. We all know that, and I suppose it is for that reason that it has become an issue of such great political sensitivity.

I recall vividly that when I first convened a hearing about 2 years ago in the Senate Finance Committee Subcommittee on Social Security and Income Maintenance to explore the condition of the trust fund and to raise the question of whether or not the trust fund was on solid ground, it provoked a lot of comment. Some of it, I must admit, surprised me, because I thought it was obvious at that moment that social security was in deep trouble. Reserves had been drawing down for a decade. In those days, the fund was losing money at the rate of $12,000 or $13,000 a minute. It was clear that Congress had committed itself to benefits in excess of resources on hand.

Over the long term, the actuaries were saying at that time that there was a deficit in the trust fund, in 1981 dollars—because we were then talking about 1981—in excess of $1.6 trillion.

I had no doubt that there was a problem, but it was interesting to me that many people, including some in Congress and a lot throughout the country, did not share my feeling that something needed to be done. I think perhaps the most important single achievement, among several achievements, of the National Commission on Social Security Reform was to help crystalize opinion in the country and in Congress that something must be done.

As one newspaper editorialized at the time, the first step to solving any problem is to admit it exists. In a way that was not confrontational, in a way that was not embarrassing to anybody, it permitted all of us to get under the same tent and agree that a large problem exists in the short term and the long term and that something should be done about it.

When the Commission issued this report, it said that we could expect a trust fund deficit during the remainder of this decade of between $150 billion and $200 billion and a potential deficit in excess of 1.8 percent of payroll—I guess 1.1 percent of payroll in the longer term. Since that time, the actuaries have adjusted the target a little and now say that the potential long-term deficit is a bit over 2 percent of payroll, a change which comes at a somewhat awkward moment, but something I think not to be too concerned about because, after all, we are talking about future projections. We are talking about things that, in the end, are unknowable until they occur. But I am pleased to note that the Commission's report, in the process of being considered by Congress, has been amended to include the full long-term deficit.

With that as a background, let me put the bill before us in the perspective of the Commission's report.

I objected, along with two other members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform—Mr. Waggoner of Louisiana, a former Member of the House of Representatives, and BILL ARCHER, a present Member of the House of Representatives and a member—perhaps others would agree, a very knowledgeable member—of the House Ways and Means Committee and a recognized authority on social security. The three of us—Mr. ARCHER, Mr. Waggoner, and Mr. ARMSTRONG—disagreed with the Commission's recommendations for several reasons, and our concerns basically were these:

First, we were determined that any final resolution of the social security issue ought to be on the basis of assuredly solving the problem.

Recognizing that there are no guarantees in this world, and recognizing that there is no 100-percent certainty of anything in the future, we wanted to fashion a package which would close the gap as surely as we could do so. We felt that the long-term solution as it came out of the Commission fell short of that, in that it left a sort of either-or process.

The Commission's recommendations provided nearly 1.22 percent of payroll rather than the full amount of long-term deficit and settled the short-term problem, which the Commission identified as between $150 billion and $200 billion at the low end of that range.

Moreover, I was fearful that the actuarial assumptions used in at least certain portions of the report might prove to be optimistic. My first concern that we close the gap and do so without any question.

I am pleased to come before the Senate today and say that, in my opinion, the bill which is recommended by the Senate Finance Committee, because of the amendments which have been adopted or recommended by the Finance Committee for adoption by the Senate, will in fact close the gap.

Now that does not say that there still could not be an unforeseen event intervene, but within the reasonable range of economic projections I think we can be confident that the benefit restraint which has been enacted, together with the increase in the age and the fail-safe mechanism which has been described earlier, can assure with a very high degree of certainty that social security will not be running short of money any time in the near future, perhaps for the remainder of our lives.

In my opinion, that is critical for reasons that have already been stated.

The Senator from Pennsylvania pointed out that many people, particularly younger workers, have expressed great criticism about whether or not social security was on a sound basis, whether it would be there when they retire. It is really crucial, in my opinion, that we secure public faith and confidence in the social security system because younger workers are not going to willingly pay taxes month after month, particularly rising taxes, into a system if they do not have the confidence at least when they get to the retirement age there will be something there for them to retire to.

Second, it is crucial for us to shore up public confidence because of the experience we had in 1977. At that time it was believed, and I am sure in good faith, that the action taken by Congress would put social security on a sound basis for a half century or more, and we were assured that that was the case. Five years later we were right back in the same dilemma that we had been in in 1977. I just do not think we can afford to have a repetition of that and come back in 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988 or 1989 or any time I hope within the service of the Senator from Colorado in this body, ever come back to this issue again.

The second concern that I felt about the long-term outlook for social security was the need to do something to raise the normal retirement age.

The idea of gradually increasing in some way or another the normal age of retirement had been previously recommended prior to the consideration of the National Commission on Social Security Reform by the Advisory Council on Social Security, the President's Commission on Pension Policy, the Council of Economic Development, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the American Association of Pension Actuaries, the National Association of Homebuilders, the National Association of Wholesalers and Distributors, the American Council of Life Insurance, the National Association of Life Underwriters, and for that matter by committees of Congress.

And each of these committees and groups had recommended that in one way or another we should increase the normal retirement age. The need to do so is obvious, it seems to me, and in fact I am convinced that the centerpiece of any kind of permanent sound social security reform must be gradually increasing the retirement age. The need to do so is emphasized by the fact that the life expectancies of persons in this country have been rising and rising very rapidly so much so, Mr. President, that a person who is 71 years old today has the same life expectancy that someone who was 65 had at the time social security was enacted.

If we do nothing about increasing the age in some way, not drastically, not abruptly, but surely over time, if we do nothing, it will be impossible, in my opinion, for us to have a sound retirement system because the combination of taxes and/or benefit restraints that are implied if we keep funding longer and longer years of retirement when people are working fewer and fewer years is simply untenable, and we are right at the outer limits of that at the present time.

There are several proposals for increasing the age which have been suggested. Frankly, just about any of them are acceptable to me, provided that they are not abrupt, that they do not disrupt the retirement planning of people who are at or close to retirement and, second, that they get the job done over a gradual phase-in period of time.

I see in the Chamber the Senator from Idaho who I think may even offer an amendment on this subject, and I will support him. His amendment he can explain to the Senate, but it has to do with gradually increasing the retirement age over a 36-year period, I believe, doing it at the rate of 1 year each month.

Mr. SYMMS. One month each year.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I beg the Senator's pardon. The Senator is correct, raising the retirement age by 1 month in each of the next 36 years so that 36 years from now people would retire at age 68 normally rather than age 65.

The House of Representatives adopted a slightly different approach which raises normal retirement age to 67, phased in after the turn of the century.

My our favorite proposal, as many Senators have heard me discuss before, was item F-12, option F-12 in the Commission book which simply said that after the turn of the century we would increase the normal retirement age from 65 to 66 and thereafter index future changes in the retirement age changes in longevity.

The actual proposal which is recommended to us by the Finance Committee is a combination of raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 gradually after the turn of the century and making the kind of changes in the replacement ratio which have been described earlier by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

In fact, it was he who engineered the compromise which worked out the various conflicting points of view which has led the Finance Committee to recommend this formula.

It is not my favorite approach. In my opinion option F-12 remains the best of these several ideas. But I think that the compromise which the Senator from Pennsylvania put together in the committee and is now the Finance Committee amendment on this subject is a good one and I intend to support it.

I say to my friend from Idaho that if he offers his amendment I intend to support that also, but it underscores the point that the issue is in some way gradually raising the retirement age and I am fairly flexible about exactly how to do it.

The third area of broad concern to me is the need for benefit restraint. We have not done as much in that area as I would like, although I have pointed out one aspect of the compromise put together by the Senator from Pennsylvania is a very modest degree of benefit restraint after the turn of the century to lower the replacement ratios.

In addition, the Commission has recommended a brief delay in the cost-of-living adjustment during this decade. That is not a very great degree of benefit restraint. It is a little something. In fact, it is priced out to be $39 billion over the decade. That is the amount of savings from a 6-month cost-of-living adjustment delay.

This has to be measured, I think, against the fact that we are projecting cost-of-living adjustment benefit payments between now and the end of the decade of $259 billion. In other words, we are going to pay out about $2 trillion in benefits between now and 1990 and a part of that will be $259 billion arising from COLA adjustments.

To save only $39 billion on COLA adjustments in this decade does not seem to me to be very burdensome. In fact, it does not seem to me to be, frankly, enough either from an economic standpoint or from the standpoint of justice. And here is why I think it would really be just to save a bit more than $39 billion.

During the last decade the cost-of-living adjustments in social security have risen about twice as fast as have the wages and salaries on which these benefits are based and significantly have gone up about 50 percent faster than the consumer price index which is the presently accepted measure of the cost of living for retirees.

So I think both economic issues and fairness issues could have called for a greater degree of restraint in the cost-of-living adjustment. However, I do note with satisfaction the proposal which was adopted and recommended by the Finance Committee for a graduated cost-of-living adjustment benefit restraint when the trust fund is in a less than 20 percent reserve ratio condition and when reserves are dropping.

That proposal which has been described earlier I think by the Senator from Kansas simply says that when the trust fund gets into trouble, when it is below 20 percent, when the reserve ratio is dropping, then we will implement a degree of restraint but holding harmless those benefits of recipients at the lowest end of the spectrum, and that addresses itself I think very neatly to one of the problems in the COLA system at the present time and it is just this: When you try to save money out of the COLA's, you quickly run into the question of how can you say that a 3-percent adjustment or a 4-percent adjustment for someone who is only getting $300 a month is too much. How can you say $9 a month is too much of an increase? It just does not seem fair on the face of it to suggest that such an increase is excessive.

But under the present system, without the graduated COLA amendment contained in the Finance Committee bill, under the present system, in order to get $9 to a $300-a-month recipient, you have to give $50 to someone who is at a higher level of benefits, and so the solution to this that I support and which I think really is an admirable approach is that in the event that automatic COLA restraint is required by the condition of the trust fund, we are going to hold harmless those who are at the lowest end of the spectrum and make the savings among those who are at the higher benefit levels and are, therefore, presumably better able to care for themselves without as much help from social security.

Mr. President, these are the changes that have been made which I heartily endorse. I think the bill is in many ways a good bill. It is vastly better, in my opinion, than the initial recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It is a better bill in its present form than that which was passed by the House of Representatives, although I must say I was pleasantly surprised, I was pleased, I was gratified by the action of the House of Representatives and the statesmanship that was shown by the House of Representatives, but this is even a better bill.

(Mr. SPECTER assumed the chair.)

Mr. ARMSTRONG. There remains, however, one glaring area of problem in this bill. A number of Senators have referred today to an article in the Washington Post, an editorial comment, and I noted it was quoted repeatedly. So I also want to quote an editorial, not from the Washington Post but from the Wall Street Journal, which more accurately expresses my point of view. It comes to us under the headline of "An Imperfect Compromise" and I shall only read you a single sentence of this brilliant editorial which, by the way, I will send to the desk and ask unanimous consent it be printed in its entirety at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. ARMSTRONG. But here is what the Wall Street Journal says about this compromise:

Congress idea of a compromise as usual relies heavily on tax increases.

Mr. President and my colleagues, that is the one real shortcoming that remains in this bill, which is it is too heavily dependent upon massive increases in taxes upon those who have already been heavily taxed.

In 1977 when we last faced this problem and when we designed a system of shoring up social security, which we believed would last for half a century, Congress was persuaded to concoct the largest tax increase that the world has ever seen, and now like déjà vu we are being asked once again to enact a massive tax increase.

As one reflects upon the proposed increases in taxes contained in this bill, it is good to remember that during the decade of the 1970's the social security tax maximum quadrupled and these taxes will triple again in the 1980's before we even start looking at the recommended tax increases in this bill.

Yes, I did say there will be a twelve-fold increase in social security tax maximums during the 1970's and 1980's before we consider the enactment of the tax increases contained in this legislation.

Today, Mr. President, the average working man and woman pays more in social security taxes than they pay in Federal income taxes. It is a burden of importance and keenly felt significance in the lives of working men and women in this country.

Nor is this burden inconsequential to the companies involved. Recently I was up in Detroit, Mich., where unemployment is a problem of truly poignant concern and not just an economic problem, it is a human tragedy of great proportions, and I learned to my surprise that the Big Three automakers paid twice as much in payroll taxes in the last 5 years as their combined net profits. Now that is a big bite into the resources of these great companies, and it is not just automobile companies. It is every manufacturing and service industry in this country. As a matter of fact, the CBO warned in 1977, when we last increased these taxes on a large scale, that the result would be rising unemployment. They estimated it would cost 500,000 jobs, and I personally do not think it is any coincidence that the unemployment, which has plagued America in the late 1970's and early 1980's, comes at the same time that we have seen large increases in payroll taxes and other taxes in this country.

I just do not think it makes sense at the very time when workers are already heavily burdened, the very moment when the economy is trying to lift itself up, when we are beginning to see the signs of recovery, when housing starts are up, when automobile sales are rising, when interest rates at long last are getting down to viable levels, when the stock market is performing well, when there is a growing sense of optimism about the economy, I do not think it makes sense to further burden this Nation's economy with tax increases above those which are already scheduled to go into effect, and remember payroll taxes are going up whether or not we enact any of the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Maybe this is a simple-minded approach, I do not think so, but whoever said if you tax something you get less of it I believe summed up an important economic reality. If you want to get less of something, whatever it is, put a tax on it. It does not matter whether it is oil or walnuts or whatever it is, if you tax something you are going to get a little less of it, and the higher the tax is and more of it, the greater the effect will be observed. That means if we go through with the proposed tax increases in this bill we are going to get a little less employment in this Nation's economy. I do not think that makes sense at this time. Therefore, Mr. President, at the right moment it is my intention to offer an amendment which will roll back the payroll tax which is suggested by this legislation.

I am not going to go after the other pieces of tax increases in this bill, not because I think they are justified, I do not, but simply because I recognize a compromise is a compromise and you cannot do everything. It does seem to me the most egregious single portion of the tax increase in this bill is the payroll tax, the part that bears the most heavily and most regressively on working men and women at a time when they can simply ill-afford it.

I do want to mention, in passing, I tried to get the Finance Committee to try to do away with the taxation of benefits. I think we are making a mistake in this bill to tax benefits. It is something we have not previously done. It falls unjustly, I think, on people who in some cases are 75, 80 years old or even older and who are in no position to rearrange their lifestyle, who cannot in many instances at least go out and get new employment to offset the effect of this new tax. Also I think in a sense it goes on pledges we have made to them for 50 years. It has been an article of faith that we would not tax the benefits under social security.

I stress, Mr. President, that I think a good case can be made intellectually for taxing social security benefits, and if the proposal before us were to do so in a phased-in manner, starting a few years from now and phasing it in so it would not be a drastic or abrupt change, then I would be a lot more sympathetic to it. I would particularly be more sympathetic to a phased-in approach if Congress had not over the years repeatedly gone on record as saying "Not only are we not taxing benefits now, we have no intention of doing so." You will remember we considered this matter on a number of occasions here in the Senate and have resoundingly affirmed our desire not to tax benefits, so I think in doing so we are making a mistake, and really it is unfortunate that the Finance Committee has so recommended.

Mr. President, I also want to clarify one aspect of the benefit tax issue because I am not going to offer an amendment on that specific subject, but I want to make it absolutely clear if somebody has the notion this is only going to be a tax on the rich. It is only 7 percent of the beneficiaries who are going to be taxed as a result of the amendment which is proposed by the Senate Finance Committee, and that is perfectly true the first year. But I want to point out to you that the threshold of taxation is not indexed, and if we have the same kind of inflation in the next few years that we have had in the last few years, it will not be very long until everybody's benefits, or at least the largest majority of benefits, will be subject to taxation. Maybe that is a good thing. Some people think so. It is in fact the agenda of some people to get all of those benefits taxed, and if that is their desire, then I do not quarrel with it, but I do not like the notion that is abroad that somehow this is only going to be a tax on a handful of upper income, wealthy, affluent social security recipients, because in a very few years, unless our economic performance with respect to inflation is better than I think it is going to be, everybody's benefits are going to be subject to taxation.

Mr. President, I also regret the tax increase in this legislation as it falls on the self-employed many of whom frankly are in no position to take any tax increase, least of all the huge jolt that is contemplated by this legislation. I wish we could phase that in differently. I wish we could put it off altogether, particularly for farmers and others whose income is either very low or in some cases nonexistent. In many cases I think we are talking about people who will really have a great problem in coming up with additional tax revenues and we are talking about several hundreds of dollars a year in some cases.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Will you yield for a question?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Yes.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. In the event a tax credit is given to a farmer who, let us say, has no income and as a result has no tax paid, can that tax credit be carried forward or backward?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I would say to the Senator from Minnesota that it is my impression that it was not a carry-forward, carry-back kind of credit. But, frankly, we discussed that issue so many different times and in so many different formats that I would want to be positive before I give him that assurance. Can staff clarify that for me?

Mr. HEINZ. If the Senator will yield, my recollection is that the tax credit is not against income taxes. It is against social security taxes.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HEINZ. And, therefore, if you are paying any social security taxes, you get the credits right then and there. Therefore, it is not necessary in this instance to carry it forward and back.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Senator's point is well taken. I thank him for refreshing our recollections.

Mr. President, I wish to conclude my remarks very quickly. I appreciate the attention of my colleagues and the opportunity to share with them my general concerns about the legislation.

Let me mention quickly three amendments which I will propound at a later time and invite the attention of Members to those.

First is an amendment to delete the payroll-tax increase contained in this bill as recommended by the Senate Finance Committee. I anticipate that that may be subject to some controversy, but I have heard expressions of interest in this amendment by Senators from both sides of the aisle. It is my hope that we can see fit to do that, to grant at least that modest alleviation of the heavy tax burden suggested by this legislation.

The second amendment which I expect to offer I believe will not be controversial and I hope will be acceptable to all Senators. It will simply give some deposit date relief to small businesses. As the Senate knows, at present how often you are required to make deposits into the trust funds to the Government depends on the amount of withholdings and there are several thresholds. If you have $3,000 a month in withholding taxes, you deposit on one schedule.

If you have $5,000, you have another schedule.

Very large business concerns can be required to deposit as often as eight times per month. Now, for a small business, for a little company, that is almost an impossibility just administratively. So Congress wisely put a threshold in there that if you fall below a certain point you do not get into the multiple times per month reporting requirement. You can deposit the 15th of the month following the calendar month in which the earnings are withheld.

So the purpose of my amendment is to simply continue that system but to raise slightly the threshold at which you fall into the once-a-month reporting rather than the four, five, six, seven, eight times a month reporting. I trust that it will not be controversial.

The final amendment which I will submit has to do with nonprofit corporations. This legislation brings every nonprofit corporation under social security for the first time. As you know, at the present time, it is optional. Some 90 percent of the nonprofit corporations have agreed that they want to be covered by social security, but among the 10 percent who have not are some who will be seriously injured if we do not modify, at least in some degree, the provision as it now appears in the Senate Finance Committee recommendation. That just says on January 1, 1984, you are in, without any chance to adjust, without any phase-in, without any consideration of what kind of problems it is going to cause for the programs involved, and without any consideration of how hard it is going to be to unscramble any existing pension plans they may have. We just, without notice, without warning, change the ground rules.

That is going to be a serious problem for some of these organizations. Many of them, by the way, are quite small—a number of them are not—but some of them are literally organizations that have four or five employees doing meals-on-wheels or various kinds of missionary work, youth activities, community services, and that kind of thing. So if we suddenly impose a 15-percent payroll burden—and that is what we are talking about here—it is going to mean, if they have five employees, some of these community organizations are going to have to lay somebody off and their program will be reduced accordingly.

Well, I do not object at all to the notion that they ought to be covered, but I do think that that is moving too abruptly. So the proposal in my amendment will be to treat nonprofit in the same way we are treating the Government. You know that we are covering the Federal workers for the first time in this proposal but we are not saying on January 1 that they are all covered. We are saying they will be phased in, that as new employees come onto the Federal employment rolls then they have to be covered by social security and that is exactly what I am suggesting for the new hires of nonprofits, that they be given exactly the same treatment as Federal employees.

So those are the three amendments that I will offer. I must admit that I could offer many other amendments, but we have come a long way and I am restrained in the proposals I am going to bring to the floor partly by the fact that my colleagues on the Finance Committee have been kind enough to accommodate me in adopting a number of other amendments I have offered. For that, I am grateful.

I just close as I began by saluting the chairman and the other members of the committee and those who have worked so hard on this bill. I think we are making good progress and I, for one, hope this really does prove to be a once-in-a-lifetime proposition. I hope that within 2 weeks we will have a bill on the President's desk and that he will sign it and that there will be no extraneous amendments attached to it and that we never have to revisit this issue again anytime.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I share the prayerful wish and expectation of my friend and colleague in this matter—never again.

May I thank him for his great courtesy and his characteristic generosity. He observes, just by indirection, that the committee adopted a number of his proposals. As he knows, the one that I think will most impact upon the lives of present and future retirees is the abolition of the earnings test, which is a tax on benefits. It is not as horrendous as it once was. In the long history of this program there was a period near 1940 where, if you earned $1, you lost every penny of your social security benefits.

Finally, Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Colorado that in the change in the actuarial estimates between 1982 and 1983 of plus 0.29 percent of payroll over that 75 years, it is interesting to note that 0.16, more than half, is a change in the demographic assumptions. I do not think we can know what families 50 years from now, new families, will be like.

The other was the opting-out assumptions of which I think we have effectively taken care.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Yes.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I think the Senator's point is well taken. I share his feelings that these demographic projections are, in a sense, unknowable. But I believe it is significant that the bill we bring to the floor fulfills everything that could be asked of prudent trustees.

Now, I suppose we could imagine creating a system that was double-funded or triple-funded, but that would not be prudent. The prudent thing is to get our best estimates of what the need is, then fulfill that; not 90 percent of it or 80 percent of it or half of it, but the whole need, recognizing that future generations will have to keep an eye on this thing. I am reasonably confident, if enacted in the form that we have before us or close to that, that we have done our job and we will not have to come back again. I think that is the landmark that is set here.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. That is what is necessary. I thank the Senator.

AN IMPERFECT COMPROMISE

Social Security's rescue legislation comes before the Senate today, well on its way toward passage. The Senate bill and one passed by the House last week both contain important concessions to economic reality, something Congress has resisted for two years. But the historic compromise both sides are so pleased with still tilts against workers and savers. And there remains some danger that the tilt will become a waterlogged log by the time it reaches the president's desk.

Congress' idea of a compromise, as usual, relies heavily on tax increases. The Social Security payroll tax boost scheduled for 1985 will come a year early and there'll be another early bump in 1988, not to mention a brand new tax on middle-income benefits. Where the two bills disagree is on how benefit costs will be controlled, if they are to be controlled at all. Both houses finally accepted the principle of raising the retirement age and lowering benefits for early retirees after the year 2000. But while that's a step toward actuarial sanity, the immediate future interests us more.

A small cut in Social Security's burgeoning cost will come from postponing this year's cost-of-living increase six months. Where the two houses don't agree is on what happens the next time Social Security starts running low on money. The House proposes to meet that contingency by indexing cost-of-living adjustments to either prices or wages, whichever is lower (something that should have been done long ago as a matter of course). Senate Finance, in its wisdom, would meet this contingency by having Social Security administrators notify Congress six months in advance that the bill is running dangerously low. If Congress didn't act in that six months, let's say by taking another bite out of the workers' paychecks, then the shortage would be made up by stretching out cost-of-living adjustments in benefits. Our trust in future Congresses is such that we would prefer the House version, and now, not in 1988 as the bill proposes.

How likely is the fund to run short again? Very likely, we're afraid. The tax boost scheduled for next year will raise labor costs, killing jobs and cutting revenues. And we are not convinced that attempts to limit Medicare reimbursements will succeed in containing burgeoning Medicare costs to the extent its backers advertise. So don't be too surprised if Social Security has to activate, sooner, rather than later, the "fall-safe" provision, assuming there is one in the final bill.

Yet another innovation in the legislation of both the houses is a provision to tax Social Security benefits. In other words, a system that currently transfers income from workers to nonworkers will become, additionally, a system that transfers income from retirees who saved for their old age to retirees who did not. As Paul Craig Roberts wrote on this page last Friday, a retired couple with an income of $36,000 will find themselves paying the same marginal tax rate as a working couple with an income of $175,000. Young workers are getting hit with rising payroll taxes. Middle-class retirees are getting hit with a tax on their savings.

We wonder if the politicians who have been playing Social Security for cheap votes these many years understand where they are heading. At this rate, Social Security soon will become little more than a welfare program. When that happens, it will suddenly be politically vulnerable. There will be no trouble at all summoning up the votes to cut benefits then because neither middle-class workers nor middleclass retirees will have any stake in preserving the system. That could happen even before some of the senior members of both houses decide to lay down the burdens of office.

We respectfully suggest that the full Senate give the bill careful thought today. The public, we suspect, is getting very boring with being told every six years that Social Security is finally on sound footing, only to be informed a few years later that it's going to cost more money. Today's marvelous compromise will only be marvelous if the bill that finally lands on the president's desk has controls on benefit growth that match its bite out of payrolls and savings. We'll see.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, first let me begin by thanking the distinguished chairman of the committee (Mr. DOLE), the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG), and the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. HEINZ) for the long hours and laborious, dedicated effort they have put into serving on the Commission and making it possible to bring this bill before the Senate.

This bill represents a combination of the views of all those on the Commission. Some parts of it I very much agree with it, and some parts of it I do not agree with.

Mr. President, I voted in committee to order the social security financing bill favorably reported. I did so with reservations.

I voted to order the bill favorably reported because the Senate and the Congress need to act now to assure the continued financing of the social security system. The bill reported by the committee generally follows the recommendations of the Social Security Commission. But the committee bill does two important things the Commission recommended be done even though they failed to reach a consensus on how these two things should be done.

First, the Finance Committee bill includes provisions to eliminate the long-range deficit in the social security cash benefit programs. It does this through a combination of gradually raising the retirement age to 66 and gradually modifying the social security benefit formula, both beginning with the year 2000.

Second, the Finance Committee bill includes a contingency plan to deal with situations which might arise when cash benefit trust fund reserves are less than 20 percent of annual outgo and are projected to decline. This provision is designed to avoid the kind of crisis situation we now face where a decline in the trust fund reserves jeopardizes the continued prompt payment of benefit checks.

Now let me express my reservations about the Finance Committee bill.

GENERAL FUND FINANCING

I am concerned that the Finance Committee bill relies so heavily on the use of general fund financing for the rest of this decade. Depending on what one categorizes as general fund financing, perhaps almost one-third of the short-range financing package represents an infusion of general revenues to shore up social security financing.

For the future, this action provides a dangerous precedent. There would be a strong temptation to simply increase this general fund portion when the need arises. For example, in the Finance Committee it was decided that the increased payroll tax burden on the self-employed was too severe. The committee solution was to scale back the payroll tax increase on the self-employed and make up the difference with general funds.

This, in effect, is a matter of saying that whenever the cost goes up, just add it to the Federal deficit and be done with it. Of course, Mr. President, if we continue to do that type of thing, it will eventually lead to where the Federal Government itself cannot assure the value of its currency and where eventually our money would have no value. After all, if we cannot find the revenues or cannot find the courage to vote for a tax to pay the benefits under this program that is the essential income of some 36 million people, then I doubt that the Congress can find the revenues to finance anything in the Federal Government.

EXTENDING COVERAGE

In extending mandatory social security coverage to new Federal employees and employees of all nonprofit organizations, the committee bill simply assumes that by the end of the year, the Congress and the nonprofit organizations will be able to modify their existing survivorship, retirement and disability benefits to take into account social security coverage.

Federal employee organizations do not share that confidence. For all they know, much of the income security they count on through their existing plans may disappear. Nothing in the Finance Committee bill provides them any assurance that the impact on existing protections will not be severe.

In another area relating to coverage, the Congress has always taken a position that under the Constitution, Federal law cannot mandate social security coverage of State and local government employees. For this reason, those State and local governments that wish to voluntarily join the social security system pay contributions rather than taxes, and they can withdraw from social security coverage after giving 2 years' notice.

The committee bill would prohibit those State and local governments which have opted for social security coverage from terminating coverage for their employees. Aside from the constitutional question, which will ultimately be resolved in the courts, I believe it is unfair for the Federal Government to unilaterally change the agreements which State and local governments entered into on a voluntary basis, especially when they reached that agreement with the Federal Government itself.

I believe this is particularly unfair to those units of government which have already given notice of their intent to terminate. Many of these entities, relying on the word of the Federal Government, have already expanded great effort and expense in setting up alternative retirement programs.

TAXING SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Under the committee bill, half the social security benefits would be taxed if an individual's income exceeds $25,000 or a couple's income exceeds $32,000. However, the committee bill, unlike the House bill, would include tax-exempt income for purposes of measuring whether total income exceeds the threshold above which social security benefits would be taxed. The effect of this is that for the first time tax-exempt income would be taxed. While the impact of this provision might be small in terms of the number of people affected, the principle is a big one. It suggests that Congress, which has not been willing to tax State and local bond interests directly, is willing to do so if the tax is disguised as a tax on something else. This point will not be lost on those in the Treasury Department who have long sought ways to tax State and local bond interest.

PROSPECTIVE REIMBURSEMENT UNDER MEDICARE

Up to this point, I have discussed my reservations that related to social security provisions of the bill. But I am equally concerned about two provisions whose descriptions were not even available to committee members until the day of our markup session.

The first provision would completely change our method of reimbursing hospitals under the medicare program. Many hospitals would do better under the new system, but many would do worse, perhaps even to the point of having to close. When the committee acted, it did not have the information it would need to determine which hospitals were winners and which were losers, and whether winning or losing had any relationship to the hospital's efficiency. An administration spokesman at the committee hearing could not even answer my question what the level of reimbursement would be for the diagnosis-related groups which serve as the new basis for reimbursement.

This new provision will not achieve budget savings in the next 2 years. It will not solve the hospital insurance trust fund financing problem. In my view, we should not be considering this fundamental change in medicare until we are in a better position to know the impact it will have on hospitals in our States. I fear that if we enact this provision now, we will soon find that it results in situations that we do not intend and that we will need to change.

Mr. President, I have been told that this provision would cause the hospitals in the State of Louisiana to gain as much as 15 percent in medicare reimbursement. That, of course, would be partly at the expense of hospitals in other States. On the surface you would think the Senator from Louisiana would be in here advocating that kind of change. But I also note that while gaining 15 percent, and while a majority of the Louisiana hospitals would get an increase, about one-third of them would get a cut, and that cut would be about 20 percent.

The information provided to me, Mr. President, is not adequate to tell me on what basis those hospitals would face a cut, or to give those people a chance to make their case and defend themselves against the consequences.

Other States are going to find that their hospitals are not receiving an increase in net income like Louisiana would receive, and that more than one-third of their hospitals take a cut, and they will not know what the impact will be until the bill goes into effect and their hospital people come to Washington to complain about matters that could have been more carefully considered and matters which could have been corrected before they were enacted into law.

It has been my experience as a Senator for more than 30 years in this body that it is a lot better to find out about the problems and to try to take care of them in advance, than it is to pass a major bill without knowing what you are doing or how it is going to impact upon great numbers of people, and then try to take care of the many problems that will arise after the measure has become law and all the growing pains become obvious.

I think we would have done much better to have had a great deal more information before acting. This could have been available if we had taken even a few more months to develop this proposal and see how it would work throughout the 50 States in the Union.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION STATE LOANS

Mr. President, a second area concerns loans to States under the unemployment compensation program. The committee approved major provisions affecting loans to States under the unemployment compensation program. Like hospital reimbursement, this provision bears no relationship to social security. Unlike prospective reimbursement, there is no equivalent provision in the House bill.

When we enacted legislation imposing interest on State loans, we intended that this interest would serve as an incentive for a State legislature to undertake reform to insure its unemployment program's fiscal soundness. I am particularly concerned that under the committee bill, if a State fails to repay the interest it owes the Federal Government, the Federal employer tax in that State would be raised by one-tenth of 1 percent. I fear that States will see this automatic increase in employer taxes as a signal that Congress intends the tax increase as an alternative to program reform.

I believe that if the committee had spent the time it should have spent considering this provision, it would have wanted to make clear that payment of interest is a compliance issue. This means that a State would need to take legislative action to assure the financial solvency of its unemployment compensation funds and not simply fail to act so that a Federal employment tax increase would go into effect.

IMPROVING THE BILL

When the National Commission on Social Security Reform issued its report, I commended them on their efforts and said:

I would expect that some changes will occur as the proposal finds its way through the legislative process. As with any legislative proposal, I am sure there will be ways of improving it.

The Finance Committee has already made a series of modifications in the commission's recommendations. As I have suggested, more improvements can and should be made and I hope will be made as the bill finds its way through the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as cosponsors on Senate Amendment No. 512, social security reform, dealing with Federal employees: Senators BAUCUS, BINGAMAN, DIXON, MATSUNAGA, SASSER, TRIBLE, and TSONGAS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, several months ago the Social Security Administration was forced to do something it never had done before. The social security OASDI trust fund had to start borrowing money so they could send out the monthly checks. When we reached that point, I think finally, the financial crisis of the social security program was realized. Up until that time, the warnings had been ignored.

I want to join with those who have passed out the bouquets to the chairman of the committee Senator DOLE and Senators MOYNIHAN, HEINZ, ARMSTRONG, and the others who worked on the Commission for the work they did in finding a compromise solution addressing the problems facing the social security system.

There are some amendments that the Senate Finance Committee added to the Commission's package which made substantial improvements. Senator LONG offered a fail-safe amendment which will insure the continued viability of the OASDI program.

I cannot say enough for the leadership the committee constantly has from our very able chairman and for the efforts that he made to try to bring this emergency situation to the floor to guarantee the rescue of the social security system.

I think, after having said that, Mr. President, that I must point out that I was the one lone dissenting vote in the Senate Committee on Finance; the one who did not vote for the bill in its present form. I would like to address that, but before I can do that, we should first recognize why it is that social security is in so much trouble. I think we have examined why there is a problem, what the solution to that problem is.

Mr. President, if you have a big gap between the income and the outflow of any program—and we have heard figures cast around here from $13,000 to $18,000 a minute that the Social Security Administration has been spending faster than they are taking in revenues—how are we going to solve the problem? We are going to solve it one of three ways: raise taxes; change the costs by reducing future increases in benefits; or borrow more money. I think we have to recognize that the biggest part of this solution, or a big part of it, is to raise payroll taxes on the working people. Although I would say there have been some improvements in the rescheduling of benefits in the Senate version of the bill—and some in the House, I must say—I think there is more work that needs to be done.

However, in finding these solutions, Americans and the Congress must recognize and address common fallacies with regard to the social security system.

The first misunderstanding that needs to be addressed is the fallacy that recipients are only getting back in benefits what they and their employer paid into the program.

If an individual started paying into the system back in 1937 and paid in a maximum amount, paid your social security taxes all the way through, and retired in 1981 at age 65, that person would have paid in $14,206. The first year of retirement that individual would have received in benefits $14,767. So, in other words, in 1 year, they will almost take out the amount of money they put in over a 37-year period.

In the second year, of course, they take out what their employers put in. I think, for far too long, the American people believed that, somehow, this system was vested and they were getting back what they had invested in it, instead of the fact that it was operating more or less on the lines of a chain letter, with some people paying in while others were taking out. It started at $30 a year and you had 16 or 17 paying in for every 1 taking out.

It worked pretty well, but as time went on, it continued to go down, so there are fewer and fewer people paying in and more and more taking out. By the year 2010 or 2020, I think it will be down to 2.2 workers paying in to 1 worker taking out.

If you just go back a short time ago to 1950, there were 15 taxpayers supporting each retired beneficiary. In 1980, the ratio was 3.2 to 1 and it will be down to 2 to 1 in the next 50 years.

So that is how we got into this problem, and I have to compliment my colleagues for finally addressing the problem. I think that we should consider amendments to this bill to solve the problem for the long and the short term and also to offer people the opportunity to trade in future social security benefits in order to have their own personalized private retirement pension program. I think that can be done. I am only disappointed that the commission did not recommend some things in the early part of the 1980's that were a little bolder and a little more aggressive. As it is, I hope we will be back. I do not share the view of my good friend from Colorado who says he hopes we do not address this again.

I would just like to say, very briefly, that there are three major problems in my opinion with this program. No. 1 is the short-term problem, that is, the problem between now and out to about 1990. The commission agreed that the problem lies somewhere between $150 billion to $200 billion. It depends on the assumptions you look at. But I would like to see us solve that problem without raising the payroll taxes, because the working Americans are already burdened by payroll tax increases. Senator ARMSTRONG pointed out here earlier that many, many Americans are spending more of their taxable income on social security taxes than they are Federal income taxes. So how are you going to solve that problem if you do not raise the payroll taxes? We have already said we cannot afford to borrow any more money. We are borrowing it at such a rapid rate now that it is causing a lack of confidence with respect to the long-term capital markets in the country, so then I think you have to look at the benefit side of the equation. And without taking any benefits away from present recipients, Mr. President, I think what we could do is simply delay the cost-of-living adjustment until December 1985. It would save somewhere in the neighborhood of $125 billion.

But I know what people are saying: "If you do that, what about Aunt Sarah who is living on $300 a month?"

I will offer an amendment later on in the deliberation of this measure to hold harmless those people who are getting the SSI benefits and the low-income people but to delay the COLA's for the rest of the social security recipients until December 1985 and then at that point I think we should have a COLA adjustment and go on the basis of the wage index instead of the price index or whichever happens to turn out to be the lowest.

The reason I say that, Mr. President, is because from 1970 to 1981, the wages of America's workers rose 122 percent. The cost of living increased 136 percent, but the social security benefits increased 205 percent. Now, I am certainly one that is in favor of giving a full cost-of-living adjustment to that single person who is living on a fixed income in the low end of the social security spectrum, and I am talking about the person who is getting $350 a month or in that range. They need the cost-of-living adjustment. But there are many, many millions of Americans out there who are receiving more benefits than many people will recognize. I say to all my colleagues, go back to your State and find out how many young people in your States work, pay taxes, try to raise a family and have a family income of $15,000, $14,000, $12,000, in that range. I think you would be surprised to find that there are quite a few people out there struggling to do that and paying taxes on it. Yet, with respect to social security, I have seen figures that say that there are up to 275,000 to 300,000 millionaires who are drawing the maximum social security benefits and yet have been continually realizing the benefits of the cost-of-living adjustments that have outpaced the scale of the wage index of the people who are paying in on the other end of the chain letter.

So I think the committee, the Commission, all deserve some credit that they did look to that problem. The solution that they came up with was to tax the benefits. I would have preferred to limit the future increases in those benefits rather than taxing them, but at least I would have to say that we should compliment the committee for recognizing that problem.

Now, with respect to the long-term solution where the large unfunded liability in the program lies, those figures, when we heard testimony before the committee, ranged anywhere from $1 trillion to $2 trillion. It depends on whose econometric models you want to look at. But we all recognize that there is a huge unfunded liability out there in the year 2020, 2010, past the turn of the century, that has to be reckoned with. Most people agree, because of the statistics and the evidence that people are living longer, that we should do something in a gradual way to raise the retirement age.

I have to say that I am pleased that the committee recognized this and did do something to that effect. I think that we should be a little more aggressive. We should recognize the problem is here now. People are living longer. All evidence statistically supports that. Therefore, at the proper time I intend to offer an amendment which will raise the retirement age starting in 1984 1 month every year for 36 years. That will put the retirement age for maximum benefits at age 68 and for early retirement at age 65. I think that would take care of the long-term problem.

But then, Mr. President, I believe there is still one area where we are sadly lacking, and that is the opportunity to encourage Americans to save. I think we could do something with respect to this that would be very simple and we should be doing it now.

One of the biggest problems that the social security system has brought upon the American economy is it has been a failure for the American people to save money with which to rebuild the tools and equipment that are necessary to drive a growing, strengthening, noninflationary economy. The way the system works is that those workers' savings get taxed in a regressive tax off the front of their income. It is paid out to the beneficiaries. The money never ends up in savings accounts, never ends up in the banks where it can be lent to increase the tools and equipment that provide the jobs and backbone of America's great productive might.

So what I suggest we do, and I will offer an amendment to this effect, is provide a social security option account (SSOA) for those people who can afford to do it. Individuals would be able to contribute up to 20 percent of their social security wage base into their own personalized SSOA over and above what the IRA laws now allow. For every $1,000 contributed, individuals would forfeit one-half percent of their social security benefits in the future.

Now, you ask the question, "Would they still have to pay social security taxes?" Yes, they would, because the way the chain letter works we cannot allow people out. But how does that worker afford to do that? That decision would rest with each individual's ability to save, but I think we would find that many Americans would choose a tax deduction on the front end even if it would actually reduce their social security benefits in the future. Future Congresses, 40 or 50 years from now, will not be faced with the same political dilemma that this Congress is faced with, Mr. President.

The problem we have here, let us face it, is that there are 36 million Americans out there receiving benefits. Congress has to be conscious of that, and we are in fact sensitive to the fact that those 36 million people are our constituents; and we have to be sensitive to their wishes because, after all, those of us in this body do work for the people. I am not faulting that, but I think it would be an imaginative and ingenious way for us to actually develop savings in the private sector today.

In addition to savings in the private sector today, we could end up developing a constituency of people who own their own retirement accounts. They would be exchanging the privilege of owning their own accounts for future social security benefits. So that 40 or 50 years from now, we could remove some of this political pressure we have felt these many years.

That is why this problem has not been faced. We have to allow it to go to crisis proportions before we face it.

There are other things I would like to see in this system, but we want to address the short-term problem in order to get away from raising payroll taxes.

There is no doubt in my mind and in the minds of many economists in this country that this speeding up of the payroll taxes and the drain this is going to have on the private sector is going to exacerbate the unemployment problems in the United States; because when you look at where those payroll taxes are going in the near future, it is a tremendous burden on small business and on the working people just to pay the social security taxes. The result of this will be less jobs offered in the private sector because of the excessive, regressive tax that comes with this solution.

As to the long-term problem, I urge this body to carefully look at my amendment which will be offered to raise the retirement age in 1984 1 month every year for 36 years. That will cause no dislocation to an individual. It will allow people to plan their futures. It will be a very gradual change.

People are living longer. All the statistical evidence and other evidence point to the fact that people are healthier, are living longer. That is a compliment to our society. It is a good thing. But we need to start now and not put it off to the year 2000, and we should address the retirement age.

Third, Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment which will address the problem of the lack of opportunities that most working Americans have in order to have their private retirement account. We could offer this as an alternative. It would take years and years, and I do not expect it to change in my lifetime, but at some point in the future we could remove the political pressure of those Americans totally dependent on the social security system, the ever-increasing pressure to raise benefits, raise benefits—and the benefits, frankly, have been raised much faster than the ability of the people to pay those benefits.

I say to my colleagues, "Look around in your States. How many people do you see receiving social security whose grandchildren are not as well off as the recipients of the social security?" Yet, the entire pressure in Congress and the entire pressure that has been focused on is that, somehow, all we have to do is to raise the payroll tax and we will not have to touch any future benefits.

I am saying that we do not have to take benefits away from anybody. We have to get the wage index and the benefit levels back into balance, and they are presently out of balance. The only way I can see to do that is to delay the COLA until December of 1985 and then put it on the sound footing of the wage index and the price index. Then we will have a system with solvency for the future, and then we will in fact see a restoration of the long-term capital markets in this country. Once the long-term capital markets are restored in this country, we will see activity in the steel mills in Pennsylvania, activity in the chemical plants in New Jersey, we will see building taking place, and the farms, the fields, and the forests will be rejuvenated. We will restore the true noninflationary growth in the United States.

However, I do not believe that will happen if we always walk into this Chamber and have our compromise solution of raising taxes to solve the problem because we do not have the political will to really bite the bullet on the problem, and that is that the benefits have outstripped our ability to pay those benefits.

ORDER FOR RECESS UNTIL 9 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until 9 a.m. tomorrow. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ROUTINE MORNING BUSINESS TOMORROW AND FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1960

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that after the recognition of the two leaders tomorrow under the standing order, there be a period for the transaction of routine morning business, to extend from the expiration of yielding back of that time until not later than 9:30 a.m., in which Senators may speak for not more than 2 minutes each.

Also, I ask unanimous consent that at 9:30 a.m., the Senate resume consideration of the pending matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

UP AMENDMENT NO. 70

(Purpose: To require notice on social security checks that it is a violation of law to cash a check issued to a deceased individual.)

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 70:

At the end of title I add the following new section:

NOTICE ON SOCIAL SECURITY CHECKS

Sec. 153. The Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall take such steps as may be necessary to provide that all checks issued for payment of benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act, and the envelopes in which such checks are mailed, contain the following printed notice:

"The cashing or attempted cashing of a check which was erroneously issued for payment of benefits to a deceased person, and upon which the bearer has no legal claim, constitutes a felony punishable under the provisions of section 208 of the Social Security Act by a maximum penalty of $5000 fine and 5 (five) years imprisonment."

This provision shall be effective with respect to checks issued for months after December, 1983.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, there are many controversies swirling about the social security issue, but I think there is one point on which all parties agree, and that is that the continued fraudulent cashing of social security checks issued to deceased persons cannot be permitted to continue.

The amendment I have offered will address the need to bring this practice to an end. It will not completely eliminate it; I will admit that. But I think it is a substantial contribution to the solution of the problem.

Mr. President, very simply, this amendment requires that the envelopes in which the social security checks are mailed bear a legend making it clear to any potential casher of that check that the fraudulent cashing of a check issued to a deceased beneficiary is a felony under section 208 of the Social Security Act, carrying a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and 5 years in prison. I think that will cause a great many people, those who have been involved in fraudulently cashing checks, to stop and consider the gravity of the act they are about to commit.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I am happy to yield to my colleague from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I compliment the Senator for his amendment. The majority has reviewed the amendment. The Treasury believes that this amendment would be helpful for a more fair and equitable application of the act. I compliment the Senator for offering it. On this side of the aisle, we are prepared to accept the amendment.

It is my understanding that the minority also has accepted the amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY. That is also the understanding of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. President, if we may have a word from the manager of the minority side, I think we can dispose of this amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, we have no objection on this side to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire. No one has expressed opposition.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Then, I believe, Mr. President, if I may have the floor for that purpose, we are ready to dispose of the issue and I have nothing further to say on the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WARNER). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

(Putting the question.)

The amendment (UP No. 70) was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 71

(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 520.)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 71.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 100, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

DISABILITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

Sec. (a) Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

DISABILITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

"Sec. 234. (a) Every individual who—

"(1) meets the criteria for entitlement to old-age insurance benefits which are specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 202(a) (but only if he first meets the criterion specified in paragraph (2) of such section in or after the calendar year 2000),

"(2) is under an occupational disability (as defined in subsection (c) of this section); and

"(3) has filed application for disability retirement benefits,

shall be entitled to a disability retirement benefit for each month beginning with the first month for which he would be so entitled under clause (A) or (B) of section 202(a) if such benefit were an old-age insurance benefit, and ending with the month preceding whichever of the following months is the earlier: the month in which he dies, or the month in which he attains retirement age (as defined in section 216(1)).

"(b) Except as provided in section 202(q)(12), an individual's disability retirement benefit for any month shall be equal to his primary insurance amount (as defined in section 215(a)) for such month.

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'occupational disability' (with respect to any individual) means the inability of such individual, by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment (as defined in section 223(d)(3)), to engage in substantial gainful activity of the type primarily performed by such individual during the 10-year period immediately preceding the onset of such inability (or, if such individual has not engaged in any one type of such activity for 2 years or more during such 10-year period, the inability to engage in substantial gainful activity requiring skills or abilities comparable to those of any gainful activity in which he has previously engaged with some regularity and over a substantial period of time).

"(d) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining whether or not an individual is under an occupational disability; and an individual shall not be considered to be under an occupational disability unless he furnishes such medical and other evidence of the existence thereof as the Secretary may require.

"(e) Except as otherwise specified in this section or in other sections of this Act, the provisions of this title shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits in the same way they apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits."

(b)(1) Section 201(h) of such Act is amended by inserting "including payments of disability retirement benefits," after "226".

(2) Section 202(a)(3) of such Act (as amended by section 201(c)(1)(A) of this Act) is further amended by inserting "or disability retirement benefits" after "disability insurance benefits".

(3) Section 202(q) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits payable under section 234 in the same way it applies with respect to old-age insurance benefits; except that paragraph (9) shall not apply and, with respect to an individual applying for or receiving disability retirement benefits, the reduction period and adjusted reduction period for any such benefit shall be determined under paragraph (7) as though retirement age (as otherwise defined in section 216(1)) were age 65."

(4) Section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "or 234" after "benefits under section 202" in subsection (a)(2)(A); and

(B) by adding after "or" at the end of subsection (b)(2)(A) the following new clause: "(iv) disability retirement benefits under section 234, or".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to benefits for months after December 1999.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a factsheet explaining the amendment be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today, which was developed by Congressman RON WYDEN and myself, establishes a new social security program to aid older workers with major health problems. Under our proposal, beginning in the year 2000, a limited number of workers between the ages of 62 and 66 would receive a new "disability-retirement" benefit if they are unable to work in their current occupation because of poor health.

It is imperative that we take this step in conjunction with any increase in the social security retirement age. If the retirement age is increased, as now seems likely, it will mean a hardship for many older workers who cannot stay in their jobs because of poor health and also cannot qualify for regular disability insurance benefits. These workers should not be shortchanged in any way, but that will happen in a lot of cases unless steps are taken to protect these workers.

My amendment would allow workers to qualify for these benefits if they can demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held during the 10-year period before the onset of their disability. If workers had not worked at any one occupation for at least 2 years, then their work history would be examined to determine if their medical condition prevents them from using skills or abilities comparable to those required by work they had previously performed.

Mr. President, it should be pointed out that the definition of "work" or "occupation" does not necessarily mean the same job or the same employer, but rather the same general occupation or type of work requiring the same skills. It must also be pointed out that the program will not take effect until the year 2000; Congress has the next 17 years to formulate a more exact definition of eligibility.

This program would be considered a separate OASI program, with benefits payable from the OASI trust fund. Benefits for this program would be paid according to the OASI current law schedule for reduced benefits at ages under 65 and with full benefits paid at age 65. In effect, these workers would be "held harmless" to the proposed increase in the retirement age and reduction in early retirement benefits.

Mr. President, a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, including Senators DOLE and HEINZ, recommended that the retirement age be raised. In addition, these same members recommended a liberalization of the disability program for those aged 62 and above.

I quote from the Commission report:

Disability benefits are now available under somewhat less stringent definitions for those aged 60-64. However because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and be able to work longer, we assume that the disability benefits program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

Mr. President, the Finance Committee raised the retirement age but did not make improvements to the disability program. My amendment merely follows through on the recommendations made by a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission. The Social Security Commission's actuaries rough estimate is that only about 10 percent of future retirees would fit into this category. Therefore, the long-term cost of this change is minimal—0.04 percent of payroll—and this additional cost can clearly be accommodated in the bill before us now because the savings in the Finance Committee bill exceed by 0.08 percent the level necessary to achieve long-term solvency.

Mr. President, I believe that this proposal is a fair one. If we must raise the social security retirement age, we need to develop a safety net for older workers who, for health reasons, simply cannot keep working. I urge my colleagues to adopt the amendment.

BRADLEY DISABILITY-RETIREMENT AMENDMENT

WHAT IS THE PROGRAM?

The Amendment would establish a new program that will allow a limited group of workers aged 62 up to the "normal retirement" age (i.e. the age at which full OASI benefits are allowed) to qualify for "disability retirement benefits". This new program would not start to take effect until the year 2000—the year that the Social Security retirement age is scheduled to increase.

WHY DO WE NEED THIS PROGRAM?

There are many older workers whose health is too "good" to qualify for the regular disability insurance program, but too poor to allow them to keep working in the occupation for which they are trained. Raising the retirement age and reducing early retirement benefits for these older workers amounts to a significant cut in benefits because their poor health simply won't let them keep working.

WHO WOULD BE ELIGIBLE FOR THE PROGRAM?

Workers qualify for these benefits if they can demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held during the 10 year period before the onset of their disability. If workers had not worked at any one occupation for at least 2 years, then their work history would be examined to determine if their medical condition prevents them from using skills or abilities comparable to those required by work they had previously performed with some regularity and over a substantial period of time.

"Work" or "occupation" does not necessarily mean the same job for the same employer, but rather the same general occupation or type of work requiring the same skills.

It must also be pointed out that the program will not take effect until the year 2000; Congress has the next 17 years to formulate a more exact definition of eligibility.

WHAT ARE THE LEVEL OF BENEFITS TO BE PAID?

This program would be considered a separate OASI program, with benefits payable from the OASI trust fund. Benefits for this program would be paid according to the OASI current law schedule for reduced benefits at ages under 65 and with full benefits paid at age 65.

| Age | OASI current law, percent of benefit | OASI Finance Committee bill, percent of benefit |
|-----|--------------------------------------|---|
| 62 | 80 | 75 |
| 63 | 86.7 | 80 |
| 64 | 93.3 | 87 |
| 65 | 100 | 93 |
| 66 | 100 | 100 |

WHAT ARE THE LONG TERM COSTS OF THE PROPOSAL?

The rough estimate by the Social Security Administration's actuaries is 0.04 percent of payroll. Adoption of the amendment will not lead to insolvency, since the savings in the Senate Finance Committee bill exceed the level necessary to achieve long term solvency by 0.08 percent.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New Jersey.

I have indicated to the Senate that we have only had an opportunity to see the amendment for about 30 to 45 minutes. I know of no objection. It may depend on what other amendments might be adopted. Plus we wish the time to analyze it carefully on our side.

I am wondering if the Senator from New Jersey might be willing to let us set this amendment aside, give our staff and social security people a chance to review it carefully, and then we could either call it back up or in some way dispose of it. If we can agree on it, or with some modification, it could be accepted.

I have not checked either with the distinguished ranking minority member, Senator LONG. But we would certainly be willing to look at it carefully the next 24 hours.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I would have no objection to temporarily laying the amendment aside until the next order of business is disposed of, and then this amendment would be pending again, and it would be my hope that by that time maybe by tomorrow we could resolve this. I know that the chairman as he stated in the Commission report expresses considerable interest to meet this problem, and I have every expectation we will be able to solve it.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be temporarily laid aside until the next order of business is disposed of and then this amendment again be pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the cooperation of the Senator from New Jersey.

It may be that other Members have amendments which we can agree upon. If so, we could dispose of those amendments. It is my understanding we may want to adjourn between 6 and 7, nearer 6.

But I would say to Members who may be in their offices or members of the staff if there are noncontroversial amendments, we would like very much to dispose of this yet this afternoon, and we hope to come in—there has not been an order yet—but early tomorrow morning and go until some time late tomorrow afternoon and hopefully during the remainder of the day and all day tomorrow we can, first of all, dispose of noncontroversial amendments. We believe there are a number that can be agreed upon. There are some we cannot agree upon. There may be rollcall votes sometime after 1 p.m. tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, as an original cosponsor of S. 1, I want to join my colleagues in commending Senator DOLE, the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator MOYNIHAN, and others who have helped fashion a reasonable, effective, and broadly accepted proposal to address the difficult problem of financing our social security system.

This compromise, Mr. President, is of obvious and urgent importance to 152 million American workers who have put their trust in the commitments undertaken by this Government. For millions of our people social security spells the difference between dignity and despair for the future, and I am convinced that the compromise being considered by the Senate comes down squarely on the side of dignity.

There is another, equally important dimension to this legislation. It provides the most striking evidence I have seen in sometime that the American political system, despite the strains of partisanship accentuated by an economic environment of prolonged recession, is still capable of acting—rapidly, effectively, and with unity—to serve the vital interests of our people.

The social security package is a classic in the art of bringing the diverse elements of America together in the search for honest answers to the difficult problems facing our Nation. No party, I am sure, is perfectly satisfied with this formulation. Everyone has been asked to sacrifice, to take up a part of the burden, to pay more, to defer increases, to suffer a little so that millions of older Americans will have to suffer much less.

I sincerely hope, Mr. President, that the obvious element of bipartisanship and good will so evident in our deliberations on the social security package can serve as the groundwork for broader sustained effort to respond to America's pressing economic problems and help us establish an agenda for the future.

With this compromise the Congress will be taking a giant step toward removing social security as a contentious, partisan, emotional issue in future elections. I sincerely believe this formulation reflects great credit on those who had the courage and foresight to bring it to the floor.

I commend my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for a job well done. I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of this legislation and I urge its prompt approval by the Senate.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not see anyone rushing in with an amendment.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for a quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, so far today we have heard a few hours' debate on this very important issue and I want to take this opportunity to give you my views on the entire package, and to relay what I consider to be its strengths and weaknesses.

As this body begins consideration of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, I would like to share my hopes and goals, which have guided me throughout my involvement in this issue. The first goal, one which we all share, is to adopt a comprehensive package that will insure a sound social security system for as long into the future as we can predict.

Second, we must adopt a well-balanced plan that is fair, one which calls on all who are touched by this system to share in the sacrifices required to restore it to solvency.

When I first heard the National Commission's recommendations I was less than pleased. In my view the plan relied far too heavily on tax increases and it was far too short on reform. My misgivings were based on my past experience as a Member of the House of Representatives during deliberation of those very important 1977 social security amendments. At that time we heard promises from the House Democratic leadership and from the Democratic President that adoption of the 1977 bill would guarantee adequate financing for social security until the year 2030.

Here we are, only a little over 5 years later, still wrestling with the issue of social security. If Congress has learned anything about this issue over the years it should be evident that continual reliance on tax increases does little to address the real problems with our social security system. Tax increases do not correct the generosity of past Congresses which greatly expanded benefits, nor do tax increases address the demographic changes which have radically affected the program.

Furthermore, greater and more taxes merely exacerbate our economic situation of prices increasing more rapidly than wages and of continued high unemployment.

We are rapidly approaching the limit which taxpayers can afford to pay for social security. I would argue that in many instances that threshold has already been crossed. Demographic changes are such that in 1950 we had 16½ workers supporting each retiree but by the year 2000 each retiree will be supported by less than 3 workers. Obviously the answer to this situation is not further tax increases.

I fully recognize the difficulty in trying to predict into the future what economic conditions will exist, but we surely must do a better job this go-around than we did in 1977 when we passed those incredibly high taxes.

If we must err in our economic forecast it is far better to err on the side of conservatism.

The bill reported out of the Senate Finance Committee not only closes the long-term deficit but also has a slight surplus over the course of the 75-year estimates. This cushion, this surplus, is a prudent measure.

My only hope is that present or future Members of this body do not see those extra dollars and decide it is time to vote for a few more sweeteners in the social security benefits structure.

In order to close that long-term gap, my colleagues and I on the Finance Committee adopted what I believe to be a balanced and fair plan. First, the retirement age would be gradually increased to age 66 but would not be indexed. I know many individuals who felt the retirement age should be increased but were troubled by the thought of continual increases through the indexing process.

Second, the outside earnings limitation would be phased out in our Senate Finance Committee plan. I have long been an advocate of repeal of this current law which penalizes the effort of elderly individuals to continue to be productive members of society in their later years.

Finally, our committee adopted a measure which would slightly reduce the initial benefit workers would receive upon retirement.

These measures are a fair approach to reconciling the long-term deficit. It recognizes the trend toward increased longevity, yet balances the needs of those individuals who must retire due to illness or disability.

The long-range benefit change is structured to minimize any impact on future retirees, and it should be stressed these provisions do not impact in any way on those individuals currently retired nor those for whom retirement is imminent. The adoption of these changes by the Senate Finance Committee greatly improves the overall balance and fairness of the original Commission report.

Additional changes approved by the Finance Committee also serve to make the plan more palatable to those of us who feel workers are burdened with enough taxes.

Senator LONG offered an excellent fail-safe plan which is exceedingly fair, and will indeed function as a true fail-safe mechanism should trust fund reserves be below 20 percent of annual outgo, and be projected to decline. The Secretary of Health and Human Services would be authorized to reduce the annual cost-of-living adjustment to the extent necessary to prevent a further decline in reserves. However, the Secretary must first inform Congress of the impending action, so Congress would have ample time to enact an alternative solution.

One other change the committee has recommended is to provide some relief to the self-employed of this Nation who will be hard hit with additional taxes in 1984. These individuals who serve as the backbone of our economy, and are pivotal in a recovery, would have been dramatically affected by the Commission's original proposal. While we did not eliminate the provision to equalize the self-employed tax rates with the combined employer-employee amount, we approved the use of SECA tax credits to help ameliorate the impact, particularly in the first year.

These changes, approved by the Finance Committee, greatly enhanced the overall package, so that a lot of people who might not otherwise vote for this bill on the floor of the Senate may now be able to do that. To give the Commission its due, their original report laid a strong foundation for Members of both Houses of Congress from which to make their final recommendations. Without the Commission's leadership and diligence, I fear the discussion on social security would be far more acrimonious.

I must register some concerns with portions of the package I find most troublesome. The authorization of continued interfund borrowing, no matter how carefully structured, spells nothing but trouble. It is our duty to develop a package that will actually solve the funding crisis. In my mind, this fall-back provision merely means we were not able to make some hard decisions and legislate all the needed changes to solve the problem of the social security system. It also has grave implications for the solvency of the medicare fund, and conversely, for the O.A.S.D.I. fund should medicare be forced to borrow from its larger sister prior to 1988.

The combination of the interfund borrowing authority and the use of certain accounting "gimmicks" are more than just a little disturbing. The so-called normalization of tax transfers is a thin disguise for general revenue borrowing, albeit for a month at a time. I would, however, like to state that the Senate's version of this scheme is far better than what the House adopted in their version of the Commission recommendations. At least the normalization mechanism is triggered in our bill with a time certain payment, including interest.

The integration of the civil service system with social security poses another problem. While we have heard from the distinguished Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS) that the formulation of a supplemental plan for new Federal employees is not an insurmountable problem, such assurances do little to placate this Nation's civil servants. Congress must work in earnest, and as expeditiously as prudence allows, to develop an adequate and fair retirement program for Federal workers who are hired after the first of next year. We also have the solemn obligation to those currently in Federal employ that we are solidly and completely committed to their right to accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement system.

One final point I would like to make on the completeness of this package is the adequacy of financing over the next decade because I have some doubts about how adequate that is. We have heard comments from a wide variety of sources that the package provides for a razor thin margin within the next few years. I am deeply troubled by reports that this package may not be sufficient to cover the short-term funding problem. I refer to my earlier remark that it would be far better to be overly conservative in our estimates to guarantee a solvent system. While I find such a possibility abhorrent, the plan reported out of the Finance Committee, does provide for a fail-safe plan which would be implemented should the system face a crisis in the next few years. Should we receive further indications that the bill not be adequate to remedy the problem, prompt and honest action must be initiated to guarantee we do not fall into the same trap we did in 1977.

While many of the provisions contained in S. 1 are distasteful, I am well aware that no social security plan could have been embraced by so many different groups and elected officials had it not been broad based, and contained a mix of the sweet and the sour. The heavy reliance on tax increases, and back door general revenue financing are difficult for me to accept. Balanced against these provisions are the 6-month COLA delay, reduction of windfall benefits and the long-term changes which I feel are necessary if we are to ever get a handle on the phenomenal growth in this program.

I am particularly pleased the package includes several women's equity provisions. All of which are paid for, I might add. Finally, several provisions which the Finance Committee saw fit to include are the elimination of prisoners' benefits, and the limitation of benefits to nonresident aliens. These provisions accomplish the much needed goal of returning a sense of equity and fairness to the social security system.

The bill we are debating today is far more than a measure to provide adequate funding for social security. It is an opportunity for this Congress to restore some faith and confidence in the entire social security program, and perhaps restore some credibility in this Congress and its ability to take action.

Although far from perfect, this bill is the culmination of tremendous efforts of all those individuals who participated in one way or another to fashion a concensus plan. My colleagues on the Senate Finance Committee who served on the National Commission deserve the highest praise and appreciation from Members of this body as do their able staff members. The private sector individuals who so freely gave of their time to work for a reform measure also deserve our thanks. The President, and other elected officials demonstrated their ability to compromise and bend a little, to insure the economic security of today's and tomorrow's retirees. Finally, special thanks need to go to Robert Myers for his tireless efforts and seemingly endless patience.

After careful and thorough evaluation, I am supporting this compromise plan as presented here today. I realize many individuals and special interest groups find particular provisions included in the package to be sufficiently onerous that the plan cannot have their support. I can only say that we must evaluate the package in its entirety and with the ultimate goal of a safe and secure social security system. With those thoughts in mind, I lend my support to this plan.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the statement of the Senator from Iowa. I wish to thank the Senator from Iowa, a member of the committee, for his assistance in what he has described as maybe not a perfect solution but certainly one that I believe was improved in the Senate Finance Committee with the assistance of the Senator from Iowa.

We believe that we have a good compromise. We believe that it will pass the Senate hopefully without any significant change and that we can go to conference with the House early next week and have this on the President's desk sometime late next week.

But I do wish to thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa for his invaluable assistance.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank the Senator from Kansas very much. I appreciate his leadership. I know it has not been easy. He has had to listen to my complaints and the complaints of everybody else. Let me say this and I say it sincerely:

This bill has come out of the Finance Committee a much better bill, a much stronger bill. If the chairman will remember the comments I made in the committee as I asked question after question of the various people who were testifying in support and against this bill, it is very difficult for me to buy two-thirds of a loaf even though two-thirds of a loaf may be better than no loaf at all.

But what came out of the Finance Committee, quite unexpectedly what came out of the House of Representatives, is a complete package.

One of the things that I needed to be assured of the most if I was to vote for this plan was to be assured that I could go home and tell retirees that as best we can presently determine we have solved the social security problem well into the future.

We were assured of that in 1977 based on fantastic tax increases, and yet here we are almost 6 years later with the same situation we had then.

But because the chairman has made some reform in the system, we can tell the young workers who will pay into the system for the next 40 years, as well as the person who is retired or close to retirement, that we have given the people a complete and sound package.

The contribution of the chairman of the Finance Committee to something which has become an integral part of our society and of the social fabric of America, the social security system, should be received with all the compliments we can offer. I hope he gets such compliments for a long time because he does deserve them.

Mr. DOLE. I thank my friend.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I would like to join with my friend from Iowa in complimenting the Senator from Kansas. I share those comments.

Mr. President, I have not supported the package yet because I feel there are still a few amendments that need to be added to improve this package.

Having said that, I did vote against an amendment which I spoke about earlier this afternoon, but I do believe the chairman has made a lot of headway and made improvements over what I thought the committee would be able to do.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 72

(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 521.)

(Purpose: To increase the retirement age at which full benefits paid to age 68)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 72.

On page 97, beginning with line 11, strike out all through line 9 on page 98, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"RETIREMENT AGE

"(a)(1) The term 'retirement age' means—

"(A) with respect to an individual who attains the early retirement age (as defined in paragraph (2)) before January 1, 1984, 65 years of age;

"(B) with respect to an individual who attains early retirement age after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 2020, 65 years of age plus the number of months in the age increase factor (as determined under paragraph (3)) for the year in which such individual attains early retirement age; and

"(C) with respect to an individual who attains early retirement age after December 31, 2019, 68 years of age.

"(2) The term 'early retirement age' means age 62 in the case of an old-age, wife's, or husband's benefit, and age 60 in the case of a widow's or widower's benefit.

"(3) The age increase factor for individuals who attain early retirement age in the period described in subparagraph (B) shall be equal to one-twelfth of the number of months in the period beginning with January 1984 and ending with December of the year in which the individual attains early retirement age.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, this amendment would raise the retirement age 1-month per year beginning in calendar year 1984 for 36 years—which would bring the regular retirement age up to 68 and the early retirement age up to 65.

This amendment is needed as one of the measures to assure the long-term solvency of the social security trust fund. Increasing the retirement age gradually over a period of 36 years gives today's workers adequate time to adjust and plan for their own retirement.

Increasing the retirement age is well justified because of the increased longevity of Americans. When social security was initiated, the average life expectancy at the time of birth was about 50 years. Those setting up the social security trust fund set the social security retirement age at 65. Today, the average life expectancy at the time of birth is about 72 years, and yet the social security retirement age still remains at 65. It is time we brought this matter up to date to help insure the long-term solvency of the trust fund.

I know that there are many who are opposed to increasing the retirement age because of a variety of reasons, including bad health. But I would also like to mention that I have read considerable information indicating the benefits of working longer, remaining involved, and so forth, which keeps a person physically and mentally healthy.

I will not belabor this matter anymore because I believe this has been discussed in the hearing process and today.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. I know the chairman of the committee wants to set the vote over until tomorrow, but I would like to ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we do want to put the vote on that amendment over until tomorrow.

Mr. SYMMS. That will be fine.

Mr. STEVENS. Can we discuss the time later?

Mr. SYMMS. That will be fine with me.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, unless there are other noncontroversial amendments, we now have an amendment laid down. This is not a noncontroversial amendment, I might add. It might not be a controversial amendment to the Senator from Idaho, but it might be to others. With that amendment pending, this might be a good time to retire for the day.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I believe would be acceptable inasmuch as it is in the House version. We might take care of it tonight.

Mr. DOLE. Perhaps we can have a brief quorum call while we look at it. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time for the vote on the Symms amendment be determined during the time allocated to the leadership on tomorrow when the Senate reconvenes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I will not object. I agree to that. I would just like to say to the acting majority leader that I hope we might have, if necessary, 5 minutes for all Senators to restate what his or her amendment does and then vote. I think if we can work that out, there will be no problem.

Mr. STEVENS. To make sure there is no misunderstanding, I ask that that be the case, that there be 5 minutes on each side on the Symms amendment prior to the time of the vote being agreed upon tomorrow between the two leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS TO THE DECEASED

● Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, as the Senate turns attention to the long-awaited social security reform package, I plan to offer two amendments to address the problem of erroneous benefit payments to deceased individuals. Many of our constituents were justifiably angered by the disclosure late in 1981 that over $60 million in benefits had been routinely mailed, for as long as 15 years, to over 8,000 individuals listed as dead on medicare records. In one documented incident, a gulf coast widow forged her deceased husband's signature, cashed his benefit checks, and told investigators that he was at sea on a shrimp boat. In another, a wealthy middle-aged businessman cashed his father's social security checks for many months after his death, explaining to investigators that he needed to maintain cash flow for his business. I believe we need to take action to stem this hemorrhage of the trust funds.

The first amendment I plan to offer focuses attention on those individuals who criminally negotiate the erroneously issued checks. The Secretaries of Treasury and Health and Human Services would be required to provide that all title II benefit checks, and the envelopes in which they are mailed, bear a printed legend warning that the cashing or attempted cashing of a check which was erroneously issued for payment of benefits to a deceased individual constitutes a felony punishable under the provisions of section 208 of the Social Security Act by a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and 5 years imprisonment. I believe it would be wise to plainly warn potential felons of the nature and consequences of such an act, in order to give them pause to reconsider an act of disrespect both for the dead and for the taxpayers who fill the trust fund coffers.

The second amendment I plan to offer would add a provision directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish a program under which the States voluntarily contract with the Secretary to periodically furnish information concerning individuals with respect to whom death certificates—or equivalent documents—have been filed. The Secretary would be required to compare this information with SSA files, and to make necessary corrections.

Mr. President, my amendment is essentially the same as an existing provision of the House-passed reform bill—which reflects the efforts of Representative WILLIS GRADISON—and differs only in that it incorporates certain modifications recommended by GAO and SSA. The amendment stipulates that administrative funds are to be used for payments to the States, and that the Secretary may enter into information sharing agreements with Federal and State administrators of other benefit programs, provided that such agencies provide reimbursement for reasonable costs. Finally, the amendment provides that information provided under this section to the Secretary may not be used for any other purpose, and that the Secretary shall report to Congress next year on the status of the program.

Mr. President, I am hopeful that these proposals will receive the support of my colleagues. At a time when the trust funds are facing severe financial hardship, this unacceptable state of affairs cannot be tolerated any longer. ●

AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the time of 9:30 a.m. having arrived, the Senator will now resume consideration of H.R. 1900, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, which the clerk will state by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I think we can do a lot of good here on the social security package in the next few hours. We have contacted a number of Members who have amendments that we believe can be accepted, the first of which is one to be offered by the distinguished Senator from Texas, Senator BENTSEN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the Symms amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 73

(Purpose: To require exceptions and adjustments in the prospective reimbursement system for large regional and national referral centers)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an unprinted amendment I would like to send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN), for himself and Mr. Dole proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 73.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 195, line 21, strike out "of public" and insert "of regional and national referral centers, and of public".

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, we are considering today historic legislation that will have far-reaching effects on the delivery of medical services in our Nation. This legislation, establishing a new prospective system for reimbursing hospitals under the medicare program, has sprung from the Congress concern over rising costs of health care and the need to take positive action to hold down future cost increases. What, in effect, you are going to see is a rationing of health care by its very economics. However, we must be equally concerned, as we move into the use of prospective reimbursement, that this system does not impair our ability as a nation to continue on the leading edge of technological innovation and advance in clinical medicine, some of the things that lead to the United States being out on the technological frontier for the delivery of health care services, nor impair our ability to provide the most critically ill patients suffering multiple complications a commensurate level of care.

In order to preserve and foster these great assets of our health care system, I am offering an amendment to authorize the Secretary to take account, as appropriate, of the special circumstances of facilities furnishing extraordinary medical and surgical care to the sickest and most resource intensive patient populations.

We have a number of hospitals that are national and regional referral centers where we can send patients who require an intensity of resources beyond the capabilities of general community hospitals. One example of such an institution in my State of Texas is the Methodist Hospital. This hospital is nationally recognized as one of the leading hospitals in sophisticated technological advances—pioneering in the treatment of cardiovascular diseases. As a result, Methodist Hospital became the primary teaching institution for many physicians who were later to become well-known and widely respected cardiovascular surgeons.

The Methodist Hospital is one example of such highly specialized facilities. There are others within the Texas Medical Center in Houston, St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, Hermann Hospital, and the University of Texas Health Science Center. Such advanced institutions have made the Texas Medical Center a mecca of health care, annually attracting patients from all 50 States and from more than 80 foreign countries. Other States also possess institutions with similar characteristics—characteristics which make them regional and national assets.

These large, technologically sophisticated hospitals which serve as regional and national referral centers are characterized by high case mix indices, diverse geographical patient origin, and numerous multidisciplinary medical education programs. Leaders as well in basic and clinical research, these institutions have furnished and must continue to furnish technological leadership in medicine. These hospitals incur costs above those of ordinary hospitals. These additional costs are attributable not merely to the costs of education, but as well to the technological innovation, specialized training, and specialty treatment capacities of these institutions.

These regional and national referral centers are leaders in providing quality health care and are an invaluable national resource. They are in the vanguard of developments in clinical practice, medical technology, and basic and applied research. They have a unique capacity to offer diverse, highly specialized training in all areas of medical and allied health care.

They serve the sickest people in their community, together with a broad international, national, and regional group of referred patients for whom these centers are the place of last resort. To the extent these centers are no longer able to serve the same number of referred patients, other local and regional hospitals will be forced to bear the burden of caring for this critically ill portion of the patient population.

I am delighted and pleased that the distinguished chairman of the committee has chosen to cosponsor this, and I want to say how appreciative I am of the cooperation and help that he has given and for the help of the staff in working to insure the achievement of the objective we seek.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know there is no objection to the amendment. I wonder if we might—my staff has not yet arrived—have a brief quorum call. I think Miss Burke is on the way.

I have a statement to put in the RECORD. I do not wish to detain the Senator from Texas. The amendment will be accepted, but I wonder if we might wait a minute or two?

Mr. BENTSEN. I have also discussed this with the ranking Democratic member, Senator LONG, who has been most helpful and who shares the same concerns. I urge the Senate to adopt the committee amendment regarding national and regional referral centers to insure that the Secretary will consider any deleterious effects on these centers of the new prospective reimbursement system and to insure that appropriate adjustments in payment rates to such hospitals will be made.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas addresses one of the problems I mentioned in my opening statement which quite naturally occurs when a new system of reimbursement is devised—problems which need attention if the system is to be as equitable as possible.

Regional and national referral centers may be quite different from other hospitals. Certainly we know that such centers are magnets— attracting difficult cases that, for one reason or another, cannot be handled elsewhere. We do not have the data, nor can we perform at this time the analysis needed, to verify that such centers require $10, $100, or $1,000 more per case than other hospitals. We do know, however, that some analysis is necessary and if the results so indicate, adjustments must be made for the special needs of these hospitals.

Our intention is to continue to support the enormously important work done by institutions like the Methodist Hospital in Texas. These institutions have a unique capacity to offer diverse, highly specialized care and education in all areas of health care.

The amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Texas, (Mr. BENTSEN) directs the Secretary to examine the experience of these hospitals carefully and to make the necessary adjustments to their reimbursement to account for their special circumstances.

As I have indicated before, the Senator from Kansas supports this amendment. I know the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) is a cosponsor, and he raised the question in the committee during the committee deliberations.

There is no problem with the amendment except I think Senator COCHRAN wanted to offer a slight amendment to the Senator's amendment, to which I do not think you have any objection, which relates to Mississippi, and he is on his way to the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold, I suggest that Senator LONG, from Louisiana, be listed as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the role.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 74

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the Bentsen amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi (Mr. COCHRAN) for himself, Mr. STENNIS and Mr. SPECTER, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 74 to the Bentsen amendment numbered 73.

After "referral centers" insert "(including those hospitals of 500 or more beds located in rural areas)".

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment on behalf of myself, Senator STENNIS, and Senator SPECTER. The purpose of the amendment is to attempt to address a special problem with the provisions of the bill for payment to hospitals for direct costs under medicare.

The bill provides a basic distinction between urban and rural hospitals, with the assumption that the cost incurred by urban hospitals is about 30 percent higher than cost of a rural hospital reflecting the more sophisticated equipment, procedures, and personnel that are necessary to deal with the more complex medical problems that are encountered in the larger urban areas.

This is true in some cases—maybe in many cases—but there are some special exceptions to that generalization. There is, for example, in my State of Mississippi a 650-bed hospital located in Tupelo, Miss. It is the North Mississippi Medical Center. For all purposes, other than the fact that it is located in an area that is not defined as an SMSA, it is a big hospital, the largest in our State. But because of this arbitrary distinction—maybe it is not arbitrary in all cases—but because of this distinction that is in the bill, it would be eligible for reimbursement at a rate of some 30 percent less than the hospitals in Jackson, Miss., for instance, which are located in the standard metropolitan statistical area.

We had hoped to be able to get the committee to go along with a simple amendment that would treat these large rural area hospitals, with 500 beds or more in their facility, as if they were urban hospitals. I still think that is the simplest way to do it—but because of objections from the Department and the committee, we are offering an alternative.

This will provide for the Secretary to permit payment to these large rural hospitals at the same rate as the urban hospitals if it is found that the cost they incur in delivery of health care justified that level of payment. I am hoping that that will be the decision of the Secretary.

The amendment specifically directs the Secretary of HHS to analyze the circumstances for those rural hospitals with over 500 beds—and there are only four hospitals like this that I know about in the United States—and to make adjustments so that those hospitals can be paid at the rate which reflects their actual cost, even though they would otherwise be in the rural category.

In addition to providing the Secretary with the authority to order payment as if these large rural hospitals were in an urban area, it also permits the Secretary to determine those medical functions where there are higher costs incurred by these large rural hospitals different from the costs for similar medical functions incurred by smaller hospitals in the same areas, and directs her to make reimbursements accordingly, to calculate reimbursement levels that would be fair to the large hospitals based on their higher costs.

I am hoping that this amendment is going to meet the problem, it will, if the Secretary acts promptly and develops a set of rules that will reflect fair treatment for these very large hospitals in rural areas.

In talking with the chairman of the committee and others, I understand that it is the intention of the managers of the bill to accept this suggested change in the language of the legislation, and I appreciate that very much. The distinguished chairman of the committee and Senator BENTSEN have been very courteous and helpful in developing this language to meet this problem which exists in my State and three others. I understand there is a situation in Texas, as well, where they are dealing with a large rural center.

I appreciate the opportunity to offer this amendment at this point on behalf of myself and the other Senators mentioned.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Mississippi. His amendment provides an opportunity for adjustments in the case of another small, but important, group of hospitals which could have been all too easily overlooked during the implementation of this new system. We intended to devise this new hospital reimbursement system so as to be responsive to as many concerns as possible.

In the case of the five institutions Senator COCHRAN is concerned with, each is quite large and located in a rural area. They are concerned that their services and their costs more closely approximate those of a large urban hospital.

Certainly the rural-urban split in the prospective rates may not be appropriate in the case of very large acute care hospitals located in rural areas. But rather than pose a simplistic answer to the problem at this time, this Senator feels strongly that we ought to direct the Secretary to make an adjustment that makes sense given the particular circumstances.

This kind of situation is a matter best addressed from an analytical standpoint. It is in our own best interest to see that the Secretary, as in the case of the referral centers, takes a close look at the details and is then required to make appropriate adjustments.

I thank the Senator for his amendment and for his concern.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I commend the committee for its amendment regarding hospitals that serve as national and regional referral centers. While the driving force behind the prospective payment system has been the need to restrain cost increases in health care, the committee has shown that it is also mindful of the need to sustain research and development in clinical medicine at the Nation's great medical centers. Such institutions have special capabilities, not ordinarily found in community hospitals, that require technological sophistication and innovation; multidisciplinary and highly specialized training programs; and the capacity, experience, and support systems necessary to care for the sickest, most resource-intensive, patient populations. The cost of care in such hospitals may far exceed the rates at which the hospital would otherwise be reimbursed under the prospective payment system. The committee amendment will insure that, as the Secretary implements this new reimbursement system, he makes appropriate adjustments to payment rates to insure that the ability of our regional and national referral centers to provide the highest quality of care for the sickest of our people is not impaired, and that our commitment as a nation to remain in the forefront of advance in clinical medicine is not diminished.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, earlier this morning I was away from the floor when the Senate considered the Cochran amendment to the Bentsen amendment concerning medicare reimbursement. I was delighted to join my colleague from Mississippi in cosponsoring the amendment.

The North Mississippi Medical Center in Tupelo, Miss., is the largest hospital in my State, with 650 beds. It is a major referral hospital serving a number of surrounding counties in northeast Mississippi. It provides highly sophisticated services which are not available anywhere else within the region and are typically available only at urban hospitals. To provide these services, the hospital must employ specially skilled, technical personnel whose alternative employment opportunities are in urban areas. In short, Mr. President, its costs are greater than those of a normal urban hospital.

The committee bill, in basing reimbursement rates upon whether a hospital is rural or urban, fails to recognize the particular situation of these large, acute care facilities that are located in rural areas but which offer services and incur costs similar to urban hospitals.

The amendments offered by the Senator from Mississippi and the Senator from Texas would authorize the Secretary to make adjustments in the reimbursement rates for those large referral hospitals located in rural States in order to put them on an equitable basis with similar urban hospitals. These amendments are necessary to recognize the unique problems of a very limited number of hospitals. I am pleased that the Senate has accepted these important amendments, and I will continue to work for them until we get them enacted into law.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I think the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi is a good amendment, a meritorious one. After looking at it and discussing it with the Senator, the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Kansas and I are pleased to support it, and as the ranking minority member present from the Finance Committee. I urge its immediate consideration and adoption.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Texas very much. I appreciate his cooperation and assistance in this matter.

Mr. BENTSEN. I know of no objection to the amendment, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 74) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move adoption of the Bentsen amendment, as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the Bentsen amendment, as amended.

The amendment (UP No. 73, as amended) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the Symms amendment.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, my intention is to make a brief set of comments about the social security package. Would that be appropriate at this time?

Mr. BENTSEN. I know of no one else seeking time, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I want to share with my colleagues my thoughts on this legislation we are considering today designed to secure the financial integrity of the social security system. Clearly, the bill we have before us on the floor is the product of the work and thoughts of many individuals. These individuals have struggled through many difficult choices in their attempt to arrive at a workable solution to the financial shortfall facing the social security system.

While I and others have reservations about certain aspects of the package, I think the Commission deserves praise for their hard work and their perseverance. In particular today I want to commend Senator DOLE, who, as a member of the National Commission and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has demonstrated important leadership and sensitivity on this vital matter.

The recommendations of the National Commission and the compromises worked out in the Senate Finance Committee are a remarkable achievement, given the complexity of the problem.

In addition to Senator DOLE, I want to praise the efforts of the senior Senator from New York, Senator MOYNIHAN, for his invaluable contribution in the development of this package. The work of these two colleagues particularly has been, in my view, an important national service.

The problems which the social security system faces in the next few years are overwhelmingly a product of the state of our economy. Several years of high, unprecedented inflation has resulted in a higher level of benefits than anyone had anticipated. At the same time, because of excessive levels of unemployment, a lower number of workers have been contributing into the system which resulted in lower than expected levels of revenue. So getting our national economy back on track and moving forward with real economic growth, with people back at work, is the most fundamental way to solve the problems of social security.

With regard to the package before us today, I am especially pleased that several provisions contained in the legislation are ones which I first introduced in September 1981 and again introduced in February of this year. These proposals are an integral part of the legislation that the Senate is now considering.

The critical elements are common to both my proposals and the plan we are now considering, and address the issues of complete interfund borrowing, recrediting the trust funds with unnegotiated checks, and establishing public participation on the board of trustees.

The fourth remaining component of my legislation which was included in the National Commission's recommendations but which is absent from the bill reported from the Senate Finance Committee, would remove social security from the Unified Federal budget. This would have the effect of removing social security from the political forces which are part of the congressional budget process.

As debate on the social security amendments unfolds, Senator HEINZ and I will address this situation by offering an amendment following the House-passed bill, which would remove social security from the unified Federal budget starting in fiscal 1988.

While I and many of my colleagues have strong reservations about some of the provisions of the pending bill, I am hopeful that we can join together to hammer out an acceptable compromise through the amendment process. I did, however, at the outset, want to take this opportunity to congratulate the participants who have been so instrumental in the development of this package and bringing it to the floor at this time.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUMPHREY). The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SYMMS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from New Hampshire is now recognized.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 75

(Purpose: To prohibit payment of benefits to inmates of facilities for the criminally insane)

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, in 1981, the Congress, with excellent justification, cut off social security benefits—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator suspend?

May we have order in the Chamber so the Senator can be heard and the Chair can hear the Senator? Those Senators conferring in the Chamber will please retire to the back of the Chamber so the Senator from New Hampshire can be heard.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, in 1981, the Congress, with excellent justification, suspended social security benefits to persons convicted of crimes; that is, to criminals. In the current social security reform package pending, the Congress proposes to tighten up further on that procedure to deny all benefits, not just disability benefits, but all benefits which are now being extended to convicted criminals.

Some months ago, during one of my frequent visits to the State which I have the honor of representing, one of my constituents came to me and complained that he knew of a number of instances where persons committed to the State hospital for having committed crimes but adjudged not guilty by reason of insanity were receiving social security benefits and using them to improve their standard of living, shall we say, to buy TV sets for their rooms and other unessential material possessions or were simply accumulating a savings account.

Mr. President, were it not for the finding that these people were adjudged insane, they would not be in hospitals but in penal institutions. So the category of not guilty by reason of insanity does not imply in any way that these people are innocent. Except for their mental condition they would have been found guilty and prosecuted under the law. But because of their mental deficiency, or whatever, they are categorized as not guilty by reason of insanity and placed in medical facilities instead of penal institutions.

The point I am trying to make is that this category of person is no more entitled to social security benefits accruing to his person than is someone adjudged a criminal and placed in a penal institution.

Therefore, Mr. President, I am offering this amendment which I now send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to setting aside the pending amendment? Hearing none, the pending amendment is set aside.

The clerk will report the Humphrey amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 75.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 106, line 4, before the period insert the following: "or would be so confined but for his confinement in a psychiatric or other medical facility, or for any month during which such individual is confined in a facility for the criminally insane, or any other psychiatric facility, by reason of his having been found not guilty of a crime (which would have constituted a felony under applicable law) by reason of insanity."

On page 106, line 21, after "applicable law," insert the following: "or would be so confined but for his confinement in a psychiatric or other medical facility or who is confined to a facility for the criminally insane or other psychiatric facility under the jurisdiction of such agency by reason of his having been found not guilty of a crime (which would have constituted a felony under applicable law) by reason of insanity."

Mr. HUMPHREY. The effect of the amendment is to cut off social security benefits to those adjudged not guilty by reason of insanity. This in no way affects benefits for which such persons' families might be eligible. This stricture applies to the person himself found not guilty by reason of insanity, just as the stricture enacted by Congress in 1981 applying to criminals applies only to that person found guilty and not to any benefits to which his family might be entitled.

The manager on the majority side has agreed to this amendment, I understand. I believe it has been cleared by the minority. I yield at this time. Perhaps the manager cares to comment on the amendment.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I do not think this amendment requires much discussion because I believe that the case which has been set forth for its adoption by the Senator from New Hampshire is completely clear and entirely persuasive.

I just want to congratulate him for closing the loop here and for perceiving an area which had not been adequately treated by the bill as it came from the Finance Committee. It is, of course, typical of the scholarship and participation which he brings to this matter that he would propound such an amendment. We appreciate his doing so, and I hope all Senators will vote for this amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I thank my colleague from Colorado.

If we could have the attention of the distinguished ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, I believe we are prepared to dispose of this amendment, but I want to give an opportunity to the minority to comment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY).

The amendment (UP No. 75) was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MOTION TABLED TO RECONSIDER UP AMENDMENT NO. 70

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I also move to reconsider the vote by which the Humphrey amendment was agreed to yesterday. This is the one dealing with requiring the Treasury to print on social security checks a legend indicating that fraudulent cashing of a check is a Federal felony.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The question is on the bill.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I believe we have another noncontroversial amendment that has been cleared by both sides.

I spoke too soon, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 76

Purpose: To require establishment of a program for obtaining death certificates to prevent erroneous benefit payments to deceased individuals

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, yesterday the Senate accepted an amendment which I offered and to which I alluded a moment ago, namely, that which requires the Treasury to print a legend on each social security check and the envelope in which it was mailed indicating it is a Federal felony to fraudulently cash or attempt to cash a check issued to a deceased person and indicating that that is a crime punishable by a maximum penalty of 5 years in prison or a $5,000 fine.

The amendment agreed to yesterday addresses the problem of the millions of dollars being lost every year in benefits being paid to deceased persons and whose demise has not been brought to the attention of the Social Security Administration.

As I said yesterday, this approach, the printing of the legend on the check is not a perfect and full remedy for the situation.

Therefore, I propose another amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator asking unanimous consent to set aside the pending business?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the Humphrey amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 76.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of Title I add the following new section:

USE OF DEATH CERTIFICATES TO PREVENT ERRONEOUS BENEFIT PAYMENTS TO DECEASED INDIVIDUALS

SEC. 153. Section 205 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection: "Use of Death Certificates to Correct Program Information

"(1) The Secretary shall undertake to establish a program under which—

"(A) States (or political subdivisions thereof) voluntarily contract with the Secretary to furnish the Secretary periodically with information (in a form established by the Secretary in consultation with the States) concerning individuals with respect to whom death certificates (or equivalent documents maintained by the States or subdivisions) have been officially filed with them;

"(B) There will be (1) a comparison of such information on such individuals with information on such individuals in the records being used in the administration of this Act, (2) validation of the results of such comparisons, and (3) correction in such records to accurately reflect the status of such individuals."

"(2) Each State (or political subdivision thereof) which furnishes the Secretary with information on records of deaths in the State or subdivision under this subsection may be paid by the Secretary from amounts available for administration of this Act the reasonable costs (established by the Secretary in consultations with the States) for transcribing and transmitting such information to the Secretary.

"(3) In the case of individuals with respect to whom federally funded benefits are provided by (or through) a Federal or State agency other than under this Act, the Secretary shall to the extent feasible provide such information through a cooperative arrangement with such agency, for ensuring proper payment of those benefits with respect to such individuals if—

"(A) under such arrangement the agency provides reimbursement to the Secretary for the reasonable cost of carrying out such arrangement, and

"(B) such arrangement does not conflict with the duties of the Secretary under paragraph (1).

"(4) The Secretary may enter into similar agreements with States to provide information for their use in programs wholly funded by the States if the requirements of (r)(3)(A) and (r)(3)(B) are met."

"(5) The Secretary may use or provide for the use of such records as may be corrected under this section, subject to such safeguards as the Secretary determines are necessary or appropriate to protect the information from unauthorized use or disclosure, for statistical and research activities conducted by Federal and State agencies.

"(6) Information furnished to the Secretary under this subsection may not be used for any purpose other than the purpose described in this subsection and is exempt from disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code, and from the requirements of section 552a of such title."

"(7) The Secretary shall include information on the status of the program established under this section and impediments to the effective implementation of the program in the 1984 report required under Section 704 of the act.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, under Public Law 97-123, the Social Security Administration was required to conduct a pilot program under which it arranged with the States to obtain from them vital statistics; namely, death notices. The point, of course, was to devise a means of eliminating the waste and the fraud that occurs when checks are made out to deceased persons and are negotiated in one way or another; that is, cashed.

The pilot program required under 97-123 was highly successful, but because it was only a pilot program it has now concluded and there is no mechanism currently in place to insure its continuation.

Mr. President, in the House version of the bill before us, there is a provision authored by Representative GRADISON which would extend or begin a new program requiring the Social Security Administration to contract with the various States on a voluntary basis for obtaining vital statistics such that it can learn of the demise of beneficiaries in situations where it now does not learn of that event.

The amendment before us which I have just offered is very nearly identical to that which is already contained in the House version. However, there are a number of minor changes—in my view improvements—and likewise in the view of Congressman GRADISON, which have been made in this amendment, all of which are consistent with recommendations made by the General Accounting Office and the Social Security Administration on this score; namely, the obtaining of vital statistics from the States.

Mr. President, both the majority and minority sides have examined this amendment and are willing to incorporate it into the bill.

I yield the floor at this time in case the managers on either side desire to comment at this point.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, having conferred with the distinguished minority manager of the bill, the Senator from Louisiana, we are prepared to accept this amendment. We think it is a constructive change and, in fact, addresses itself to a problem which, in the long run, could cost substantial amounts of money for the social security fund. We think this is a very useful approach and we are grateful to the Senator from New Hampshire for raising the issue. We urge an aye vote on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 76) was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the Symms amendment.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Symms amendment be set aside and that I may be permitted to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 77

(Purpose to permit employers with less than $5,000 in monthly withholding to deposit taxes 15 days after the calendar month in which taxes are collected)

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG), for himself and Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 77.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following:

"SEC. () SIMPLIFIED PAYROLL PROCEDURES

(a) GENERAL RULES.—Effective for months beginning after December 31, 1983, in applying section 31.6302(c)-1(a)(1)(i)(b) of the Internal Revenue Regulations—

(1) "$5,000" shall be substituted for "$3,000 in such section with respect to the first deposit required to be made during any calendar month."

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, the amendment addresses itself to a relatively simple matter but one which is of great interest to a number of small business concerns throughout the country. As Senators know, employer tax withholding deposit requirements are determined by the Internal Revenue Service in accordance with a series of thresholds that allow employers with $500 or less in monthly withholding of social security and income taxes the opportunity to deposit once a month or once a quarter. For those employers who have withholdings in the amount of $500 but not to exceed $3,000, they deposit 15 days after the calendar month in which taxes are collected. Those employers who have more than $3,000 a month in withholding deposit within 3 days after the liability incurs. Now, that could be up to eight times a month.

The purpose of the amendment which I have offered on behalf of myself and the Senator from Montana (Mr. BAUCUS) is simply to raise that threshold from 3,000 to 5,000. In other words, it would permit employers with less than 5,000 in monthly withholding to deposit taxes 15 days after the calendar month in which the taxes are collected. This amendment simply provides a degree of relief to small business in a matter that is of serious administrative concern to them. Now, we are talking about really very small companies. We are not talking about even medium size and certainly not in any even large companies, but we are talking about, first, the cash management problem which small businesses have and, second, the administrative problem, because while it may be possible, at least barely possible, for a large company that has substantial data processing resources to cope with the demands of depositing several times a month, it is very, very difficult for a small company, for a gas station or a small retailer or a dry cleaner or a service business to do that. And so this provision—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator suspend? May we have order?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. This merely provides a degree of relief from that problem.

So with that word of explanation and while awaiting the arrival on the floor of our colleague from Montana, who I believe may wish to say a word on this, I will ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, while awaiting the arrival of other Senators who may wish to speak on this matter, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I join the Senator from Colorado in offering his amendment, and I thank the Senator for the work he has undertaken in crafting this amendment.

The Senator, as we all know, has spent many hours, many weeks, many months—so far as we know, even years—on the general question of social security, and working on the Commission. He has labored very diligently and industriously, and I think he has as much knowledge as anyone else of the intricacies and the problems facing our social security system. He certainly knows the problems that face small business.

This is a simple amendment. It is very brief; it is equitable. It is designed to help small business, very simply, by providing that any businessman who holds less than $5,000 in FICA payments need only deposit those payments on a monthly basis, 15 days after the end of each month.

The problem at this time is that businesses that hold $3,000 or more have to deposit up to eight times a month. That is the same provision that applies to businesses of all sizes. This amendment would enable small businesses, those with about 15 to 20 employees, to deposit withheld payroll taxes once a month, 15 days after the end of each month.

This amendment would not cost very much. It is less than $1 billion for the decade. That might sound like a lot of money, but we all know that in dealing with the social security system, it is minimal.

This amendment is endorsed by many organizations—the National Federation of Independent Business, the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Wholesalers and Distributors, and others. Obviously, it is one that is needed for our economy as we work ourselves out of the recession, on the road to recovery. Working capital will be increased for capital-starved small businesses, and the administrative savings from paying monthly will also be significant.

I have one final point which is often made but is one that I think we should keep in mind: Most innovation in America comes from small business. We might think that any innovation, new ideas, or increases in productivity come from big business. That is not the case. Studies show that, by far, most innovation, most new ideas, most increases in productivity come from small businesses. In the main, that is because smaller businesses enable the entrepreneur to develop new ideas; whereas, in larger business, often the size of the business and the bureaucracy tend to stifle new ideas, and increases in productivity.

Mr. President, I do not want to labor the point. This is a simple and fair amendment. It gives a bit of relief to America's small businesses.

Mr. President, a final point: I think that, by and large, the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security are on the right track. Each of us might have minor adjustments we would make; but I think, by and large, it is pretty much on the right track, because there is no better alternative.

The problem, though, is that when you look at the whole realm of the burden business has to bear in contributing to the package of the National Commission, it is clear that big business can withstand some of the burdens a little easier than can small business. Big business tends to be in a little better position to pass on those cost increases in terms of higher prices. That is somewhat less true in the case of small business. Small business tends to be locked in a little more.

It is for that reason that the Senator from Colorado and I think small business deserves a little break to even out the burden, to even out the equities. This is truly more fair, so the package will be truly more balanced.

For those reasons, I hope our colleagues will support the amendment, and I urge its quick adoption.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I congratulate him on his statement. He has presented the amendment with great clarity, but also he has made a point that we need to emphasize every day of the year, and that is that the economic future of this country depends on small business. That is not to denigrate the enormous contribution large concerns make to our economy in the employment they provide. But, in reality, it is not the big companies that are the creative, energizing force of new ideas and new employment opportunities. It is the small companies, the companies which do not have elaborate administrative superstructures, which do not have the ability to cope with making deposits of withholding tax several times a month.

The Senator from Montana and I are talking about very small firms. We are not talking about even medium-sized companies when we say that their withholding might be $4,000 or $5,000 a month. This is perhaps a firm that has a dozen or 15 or, at most, 20 employees. So we are not talking about large companies.

I appreciate the Senator from Montana particularly making that point, because I would not want there to be any confusion. This is simply a practical problem that we are addressing, and I thank him for his participation and leadership on this issue.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, one more point: Often, the first question Senators ask themselves about an amendment is, "Does this break up the package? Does this bust the package?" Some amendments do and some amendments do not bust the package. Certainly, amendments that cost large amounts will bust the package. Amendments that do not cost large amounts will not. This is in the latter category. This is a small amount amendment. Therefore, I submit that it will not bust the package. It is an amendment that is fair and equitable.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I agree with what both Senators have said. I appreciate the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Colorado bringing this amendment to the floor.

It will not break the package, but it may save a lot of small businesses that are right on the margin now, because it will be one less headache. So, in the long run, the $1 billion projected cost, as the Senator from Montana accurately points out, in terms of the social security program, is not going to make or break the system. In fact, it may not cost anything in the long run, just because it removes the necessity for some unnecessary redtape. Also, it will help some of those businesses facilitate their normal operations and pay their bills. It is an amendment that affects every State.

I think the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Colorado are correct. Small businessmen and businesswomen of America literally are the backbone of the enterprise system in this country.

This is one thing that we could and should do to improve this package. I hope that we can get an overwhelming majority vote for this amendment. It is just plain commonsense. I know from personal experience that it is very helpful to the small businessman who has cash flow and accounting difficulties.

I thank both Senators for offering the amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not know that the Senator from Kansas has any problem with the amendment, but again I think we should state for the RECORD that it is not cost free as far as the trust fund is concerned. We are concerned about the status of the social security trust funds.

We are advised that the budget effect of this amendment is $500 million in 1984 and $1 billion over the decade. It will decrease the trust fund receipts by $200 million in 1984 and $400 million over the decade. It will also reduce general revenues in the amount of $300 million in 1984 and $600 million over the decade.

As pointed out, the Senator from Kansas had to be absent from the Chamber, but this amendment was discussed in the Finance Committee by the distinguished Senator from Colorado, the Senator from Montana, and I believe the Senator from Idaho.

It is an expensive provision to both the social security trust fund and the Federal budget generally. We were trying to figure out some way to satisfy the concerns of small business without having such a significant impact on the trust funds and on the Federal budget generally. Apparently we did not get that worked out.

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I cosponsor and support the Armstrong-Baucus amendment which will reduce the paperwork burden on many small businesses by allowing them to deposit social security payroll taxes on a monthly basis rather than more frequently.

The burdens that we have placed on small business are heavy. The struggle that they face in this recession is deep. We should be ever sensitive to the paperwork and redtape burdens which we impose upon them.

This amendment is one way of reducing those burdens and displaying that sensitivity and we should grasp the opportunity to do so. I am happy to be a cosponsor. ●

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have now discussed this amendment with the principal sponsors, the Senator from Colorado, the Senator from Montana, and with the distinguished ranking minority member, Senator LONG. I am prepared to accept the amendment if there is no objection of the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk preceded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Would the pending matter be the vote on the Armstrong amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have been ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG). The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) would vote "yea."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) and the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. PRYOR) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SYMMS). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 96, nays 0, as follows:

NOT VOTING—4

|----------|----------|
| D'Amato | Moynihan |
| Hollings | Pryor |

So Mr. Armstrong's amendment (UP No. 77) was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator LEVIN, Senator SASSER, Senator MITCHELL, Senator BRADLEY, Senator LAUTENBERG, and Senator JEPSEN be added as cosponsors of the amendment that was just agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Add at the end of the bill the following new title:

TITLE — VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION REORGANIZATION
 Sec. . The requirements of section 210(b)(2)(A) of title 38, United States Code, shall not apply to the planned administrative reorganization at the Veterans' Administration Los Angeles Data Processing Center involving the transfer of 25 full-time equivalent employees from the Office of Data management and technology to the Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I indicated, this is an amendment that I have offered on behalf of the distinguished Senator from California, Senator CRANSTON, and the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, Senator SIMPSON. It is a noncontroversial amendment relating to the transfer of a small number of VA employee positions from one VA department to another in Los Angeles. It is one that there has been an agreement upon. It is technical in nature. I know of no objection to the amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, as far as I understand on this side of the aisle, there is no objection.

This amendment does not relate to social security. It relates to an internal reorganization problem in the Veterans' Administration, and the Administration needs the amendment in order to transfer 25 full-time equivalent employees from one agency to another within the Veterans' Administration.

I am not aware of any opposition to the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my good friend, the chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee (Mr. SIMPSON), in submitting for printing a noncontroversial amendment to S. 1 that we intend to offer during Senate consideration of S. 1 later this week. The substance of the amendment—relating to a staffing reorganization in the Veterans' Administration—is not related to the subject matter of S. 1. Rather, we are proposing to add it to S. 1 because of the need to insure early enactment of the provisions of our amendment.

Mr. President, I will ask that a February 1, 1983, letter from Administrator of Veterans' Affairs Harry N. Walters to me be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks. In that letter, Mr. Walters explains in some detail the situation that prompts our amendment. Stated very briefly, the VA is seeking to accomplish an intra-agency transfer of 25 full-time equivalent employees from an office in one VA department to an office in another in connection with the agency's efforts to develop a decentralized automated data processing—ADP—system in the VA health-care system. As Administrator Walters noted in his letter, the transfer is considered necessary by the VA in order to comply with the thrust of provisions in Public Law 97-377, the current fiscal year 1983 continuing resolution signed into law on December 21, 1982, that are aimed at eliminating certain centralized ADP activities at VA medical facilities. The 25 employees proposed to be transferred have been operating a centralized ADP system that the VA considers outdated and wished to eliminate in light of the congressional mandate in that public law. However, under a provision applicable only to the VA—section 210(b)(2) of title 38, United States Code—generally prohibiting the VA from reducing the staff at any of its offices by more than 10 percent in any fiscal year without advance notice to the Congress approximately 8 months prior to the beginning of that fiscal year, this transfer cannot take place until October 1, 1983, the start of the fiscal year 1984.

Mr. President, I know of no opposition to the proposed transfer; it is important for the transfer to take place much sooner than October 1, and enactment of the amendment we are proposing will allow the transfer to take place in a more appropriate time frame. I note also, Mr. President, that the transfer will not involve any actual moving of staff; rather, those transferred will remain at the same location but under a different VA organizational unit.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter mentioned earlier from the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, dated February 1, 1983, be printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

FEBRUARY 1, 1983.

HON. ALAN CRANSTON,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR CRANSTON: The continuing resolution signed into law on December 21, 1982. Pub. L. No. 97-377, states that no appropriated funds shall be used to further develop or maintain this Agency's Computerized Medical Information Support System (COMISS). It also mandates the transfer of a full-time equivalent employment (FTEE) ceiling of 69 positions (on an annualized basis), previously assigned to COMISS development, from the Office of Data Management and Telecommunications (ODM&T) to the Department of Medicine and Surgery (DM&S) for the support of the Decentralized Hospital Computer Program (DHCP). However, the law states that funds can also be used to operate the Automated Pharmacy, Prescription Labeling, Editing and Storage (APPLES) system at locations where that system is currently operating.

We are taking the actions that are necessary to transfer the specified 69 FTEE ceiling, plus an additional 11 positions previously assigned to COMISS development, from ODM&T to DM&S. This transfer includes the total FTEE ceiling for COMISS in Central Office and at the Hines Data Processing Center and therefore complies with both the letter and intent of Pub. L. No. 97-377.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
 AMENDMENTS OF 1983

UP AMENDMENT NO. 78

(Purpose: To permit an administrative reorganization of certain Veterans' Administration offices)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of the distinguished Senator from California, Senator CRANSTON, and the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, Senator SIMPSON.

I might say, before sending it to the desk, that it is a technical amendment that they have asked we try to dispose of when we had an opportunity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), on behalf of the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON) and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. SIMPSON), proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 78.

In order to further comply with the thrust of that law, I have decided that the transfer should also include an FTEE ceiling of 25 positions that currently support the operation and maintenance of the APPLES system at the Los Angeles VA Data Processing Center. The APPLES system is a centrally maintained and operated hospital outpatient pharmacy system that currently supports VA hospitals in Southern California. The intent of the Congressional directive to terminate COMISS development is to ensure that hospital-based automation is accomplished by DM&S through DHCP. The APPLES system is an outdated centralized system which will eventually be replaced by a DHCP system. Logically, therefore, the FTEE ceiling for APPLES should also reside within DM&S and not ODM&T.

However, since including this FTEE ceiling of 25 positions exceeds 10% of that office's total FTEE ceiling of 80 positions, I am reporting to you, in accordance with 38 USC 210(b)(2), my intention to transfer that FTEE ceiling to the West Los Angeles VA Medical Center on October 1, 1983. Later, during fiscal year 1984, it may become necessary to further realign that FTEE within DM&S to ensure support for the orderly development of DHCP. The purpose of the reorganization is to help accomplish the gradual transition from centralized to decentralized hospital computer support. The Congress has spoken clearly in Pub. L. No. 97-377 and on pages 8 through 10 of House Report No. 97-359 to point the VA in this direction.

We wish to maintain ADP support during this transition period while minimizing potential adverse impact on affected VA employees. We believe that we can best accomplish these goals by moving the FTEE for APPLES at the Los Angeles DPC as soon as possible.

I will be pleased to provide any additional information which you may desire concerning this planned reorganization.

Sincerely,

HARRY N. WALTERS,
Administrator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 78) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand that my colleague from Kansas, Senator KASSEBAUM, and the Senator from Connecticut, Senator DODD, may have noncontroversial amendments. I also know that the Senator from New Jersey has one, but it is going to be controversial. We have been asked by the majority leader not to get into any "controversial" areas. This would not mean that those amendments may not be adopted, but if there is some dispute we would defer debate, so that we can move to the jobs bill if and when the unanimous-consent request is made and agreed to.

I might suggest, if someone could notify Senator DODD and Senator KASSEBAUM, we might dispose of those two amendments.

I might say to the Members who may be listening that there are not all that many amendments on this bill. The Senator from Montana and the Senator from Oklahoma have one on illegal aliens. We are in the process of reviewing that amendment. We are reviewing the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, Senator BRADLEY. There will be, of course, Senator LONG's amendment. That will take some time and may lead to other amendments.

In any event, at this point there are probably not more than a dozen amendments. We would hope that if some of those are not controversial, we could dispose of them before we go back on the jobs bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

COSPONSORS—AMENDMENT NO. 512

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as original cosponsors on Senate amendment No. 512, social security reform: PELL, GLENN, RIEGLE, PRESSLER, BIDEN, and WARNER.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 521

(Formerly UP Amendment No. 72.)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the distinguished majority leader will soon propound a unanimous-consent request. But while contacts are being made, perhaps we can dispose of the amendment of the Presiding Officer, the Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS). I understand that is the pending business. Is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending business.

Mr. DOLE. The yeas and nays have been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, a clarification. Will the Chair state the question again?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to unprinted amendment No. 72, by the Senator from Idaho. The yeas and nays were ordered yesterday.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, that amendment would change the retirement age to 68. Is that correct?

Mr. DOLE. Yes; that is the understanding of the Senator from Kansas.

(Mr. MATTINGLY assumed the chair.)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if the distinguished majority leader will yield, I was in the chair, and I could not respond.

Very simply, the amendment raises the retirement age 1 month every year for 36 years, so it is a very gradual change, and it will not disrupt anybody's plans. It will save billions of dollars for the long-term problem and several billion dollars in the next 10 years when there is a squeeze on the trust fund.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator. I just thought Senators should know what the question is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) would vote nay.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 12, nays 84, as follows:

NOT VOTING—4

Bumpers Hollings
D'Amato Kennedy

So Mr. SYMMES' amendment (No. 521) was rejected.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was defeated.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be order in the Senate.

The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, earlier this afternoon, I described the terms of a proposed unanimous-consent agreement that I hope the Senate will agree to.

Mr. President, I have no changes, except minor language changes, to make in the request as I described it earlier. I will put that request in just a moment. I would like to make sure that all the principals and the minority leader are on the floor. I thought that was the case, but it apparently is not at the moment.

I do not want to put this request until I am sure everybody is here who expressed an interest in it or who wants to be on the floor, so let me wait just a minute.

I now suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—KASTEN AMENDMENT NO. 504

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I said earlier, I want now to propound a unanimous-consent request that is identical, I believe, with the one I described on the floor a little while ago, with certain minor changes that I believe do not affect in any way the substance of the agreement but do, in fact, contribute to its clarification. I hope the agreement will be granted by the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending measure be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the reciprocity bill, S. 144.

I further ask unanimous consent, when that measure is before the Senate this afternoon, that it will be before the Senate only for one purpose, and that is to permit the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. KASTEN) to offer one amendment dealing with dividend and interest withholding.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendment to the Kasten amendment be in order this afternoon; that no debate be in order this afternoon; that no point of order be in order to be made at this time; that immediately after the reporting of the Kasten amendment, the Senate, without further action, then resume consideration of the jobs bill; that no further amendment dealing with withholding of dividends and interest be in order to that bill; and that on April 15, 1 hour after the Senate convenes, the Senate resume consideration of the reciprocity bill, at which time the Kasten amendment will be the pending question for debate and with no waiver of any Senator's rights.

I further ask unanimous consent that the Kasten amendment to the Abdnor amendment be withdrawn and that the Kasten amendment to the committee amendment be withdrawn.

I further ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the order for the Senate to convene on Saturday be vitiated. I ask unanimous consent that the order for a vote on cloture which would mature tomorrow be vitiated.

Mr. President, that is the request.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to object, Mr. President, I just want to make it clear that, as far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned, if Mr. KASTEN is willing to agree to that unanimous-consent request with regard to his amendment, I will respect his decision.

Mr. BAKER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, that is entirely appropriate and I think we should ask the Senator from Wisconsin if he is agreeable with the request.

Mr. KASTEN. I am agreeable to this request. I would like to say to the Senator from Louisiana that this is similar to what he and I and others have been working for now for 2 or 3 days. It means this will be the pending amendment. It means we will be able, within a short period of time, by working the will of the Senate, to have a vote up or down on the withholding question.

Mr. LONG. Let me say further, it is the judgment of the Senator from Louisiana that the jobs bill was not the most appropriate bill on which to offer the amendment.

If the Senator from Louisiana had been planning to offer that amendment, he would have offered it on the social security bill. I do not know that I am going to offer it on the social security bill, but I want to make clear that a Senator has that right, if he wants to do so.

When one studies the amendment, I am not sure that the Kasten amendment will get from here to the House of Representatives even if the Senator has a majority of votes here in the Senate.

I have read Mr. DOLE's remarks which appear earlier in today's RECORD. They make it clear that the Senator from Kansas and those who agree with him would have a right to debate the Kasten amendment on the trade bill as long as they want to, and they would have a right to conduct a postcloture filibuster on it, if that be their desire.

It is clear that that is the right of Senators.

This Senator is willing to go along with the unanimous consent agreement.

This Senator salutes the Senator from Wisconsin for the noble fight he has made on this matter. At least he did succeed in getting a showing of strength. He gave the Senate an opportunity to go on record in favor of repealing withholding, and he did have a majority of the votes, 59 votes, as I recall. So he has made a noble contribution to the cause.

I am frank to say that many Senators—in fact, by the time they think it over, maybe a majority of those who favor what Mr. KASTEN is trying to do—may feel that they are compelled to offer a similar amendment on the social security bill or some other bill. As I understand it, that is their privilege if the unanimous-consent agreement is agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Yes. As the Senator knows, Mr. President, I had earlier hoped we could include in this agreement a prohibition against the interest withholding amendment on either the jobs bill or social security. As the Senator from Louisiana points out, that would be unlikely to be agreed to by the Senate. There are a number of Senators on both sides of the aisle who have indicated they wish to preserve that right. I continue to hope they do not do that because we do need to pass social security. But I did not include that request at this time for that very reason. Of course, any Senator is free to offer any amendment that they wish and that qualifies to the social security bill without any effect on this agreement.

Mr. LONG. I just want the Senator to understand that if a request had been made that no such amendment be offered to the social security bill, I would have been compelled to object today. I might have wanted to reconsider my position over the weekend, but today I would be compelled to object to the request. I will not object to the pending request, and I hope other Senators will not object.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. BAKER. Let me yield to the Senator from Wisconsin once more.

Mr. KASTEN. I want to thank the majority leader for yielding. I wanted to direct my comments to the Senator from Louisiana.

He is correct. The possible flaw in this agreement is that this particular bill will not have the power or legislative strength, if you will, to go all the way through the process. I recognize that. It is my feeling that at this time we wanted to get a vote by which we could pass it out of the Senate Chamber without slowing down the jobs bill.

If it turns out that the Senator's remarks are correct, that this will be tucked away in some back corner desk in the Way and Means Committee, we have not in any way cut off our chances for amending the debt ceiling bill, for amending other appropriations matters, for amending a tax bill when it comes.

This issue is going to be before the Senate and this issue is going to be before the American people until it is repealed. We are going to repeal it. The question is how are we going to get from where we are to there. We are in no way precluded from any other mechanisms or benefits.

Mr. LONG. I just want to make clear Mr. President, that that is the situation, that the Senator from Wisconsin, certainly he or any other Senator, is not barred if he feels he wants to offer this amendment on the social security bill or any other bill. In my judgment, such an amendment should have been offered on what is clearly a revenue bill.

Over in the House of Representatives they have a way of doing business where they regard an appropriations bill as being a bill to raise revenue. Just read the Constitution. It says bills to raise revenue must originate in the House of Representatives. My imagination defies me to see how an appropriations bill to spend money can be determined to be a bill to raise revenue.

If we try to send them an appropriation bill that originates in the Senate, they will say it is a revenue bill and send it back to us. If we take another bill that has nothing to do with revenue, and if we put on an amendment to reduce revenue, not raise it, they will send it back. We do not get a chance to appeal their action because we have no right to make an appeal over there in the House or to make a motion there. We have to act over here when it gets sent back to us. We are powerless to do anything about it when those people in the House put a construction on a bill that is obviously wrong. But, who are we going to appeal to?

We have no recourse. We just have to go along with them on the theory that you can offer an amendment on a revenue bill, and while at it you might as well offer it on a real revenue bill.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, you have heard from a man who never served in the House, and I am one of those who never served in the House. [Laughter.]

I confess freely I do not understand the ways of the House. But I do understand that the Senator from Louisiana is absolutely right. They will do that to us. The Founding Fathers gave us nothing to do in return, I am afraid, so there is not much we can do about that, at least right now.

I want to subscribe absolutely and totally to the description of that situation by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Now I will yield to the Senator from Nebraska and then to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. EXON. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I would like to take the time to ask two questions, if they will answer, first a question to the Senator from Wisconsin and then to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I yield for that purpose.

Mr. EXON. I will first ask a question of the Senator from Wisconsin, reminding him and the body that I am a cosponsor of the amendment he has fought so hard for, to eliminate the withholding on interest and dividends come July 1.

My question has to do with a news report that I read earlier today that was attributed to the Senator from Wisconsin indicating that he was suggesting that we move up the cloture petition vote to this afternoon, that he intended at that time to vote for cloture and then move to overrule the likely ruling of the Chair that his amendment would not be germane.

Is it in order and could he answer the question as to whether that effort has failed, or does the Senator think that the recommendations that have just been outlined by the majority leader better serve the cause that the Senator and I are dedicated to?

Mr. KASTEN. In response to the Senator from Nebraska, I want to say that I thank him for his strong support and coauthorship of the amendment and his strong support in the effort to repeal this regulation concerning withholding on interest and dividends.

This morning when I spoke, I said to the Senate it would be my hope that we not delay this whole process, that either we follow the outline just described by the Senator or that we work with the leadership to try to accommodate our needs. We have been trying to work with them since last Thursday. Significant changes were made today which made it possible for a bill to be brought up, for an amendment to be attached to it, and for that to be, if you will, boxed into a date certain. These were not agreements possible before today.

I think the fact that we talked about pushing the cloture vote and, frankly, pushing the Senate into a postcloture situation where that ruling would have been difficult and that vote on postcloture germaneness would have started to push against the rules of the Senate, although there have been precedents in 1980, thinking of the Kassebaum amendment, I chose, and I believe our cause is best served, to not push on that at this time, by not forcing ourselves into a postcloture filibuster situation, and by not slowing down the jobs bill any further.

We have what we wanted from last Thursday. We now have the opportunity for the up or down vote on a particular date certain and without intervening business that can be used to fence us out.

We have what we wanted. Last Thursday, we got to it in part by talking about going through the cloture situation this afternoon.

Mr. EXON. I thank my friend from Wisconsin for his explanation. Now I would like to pose a question to my learned friend and master of the parliamentary procedure, the Senator from Louisiana.

The measure upon which the compromise is based is the reciprocity bill; is that correct?

The Senator from Nebraska happens also to be a cosponsor of that reciprocity bill. I do not know whether or not this idea has been cleared with the sponsors of that bill, but I am inquiring of the Senator from Louisiana as to what he thinks the chances are of the amendment ever getting to the House of Representatives and being passed if we follow the route that has been suggested by the majority leader. Or might it be that attaching this measure that I am a cosponsor of with the Senator from Wisconsin to the reciprocity bill that I am a cosponsor of might not, indeed, mean that neither one of them will ever see the light of day?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have no doubt that they will see the light of day on the Senate floor, because that is called for in the unanimous consent request. They will see the light of day on the Senate floor.

Mr. EXON. I mean off the Senate floor.

Mr. LONG. I assume that if the opponents of this measure are as firm in their opposition as they are now—and the statement of Mr. DOLE, the chairman of the Committee on Finance, indicated that he is still as firm in his views as he has been up to this point—I would say that the chances of anything happening other than the bill coming back from the House with a blue slip on it are little or none. All it takes is a single objection over there and it comes back to us with a blue slip on it, and that is the end of it. We can pass the bill and it will come back from the House with a blue slip.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, a few minutes ago I indicated that I do not know anything about the House rules. I do not know much, but I know a little, because I have been enlightened on this subject by the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and others. I understand that a majority of the House would have to support a challenge of that bill with a blue slip. If the majority of the House wants to accept that bill, a single objection would not stop it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, that may be, and I would be glad to check it out the best I know how.

My understanding is that the reciprocity bill is an S-numbered bill, a bill originating in the Senate. We on the committee know that that bill itself violates the Constitution. If we send the House a bill that is unconstitutional on the face of it then under the Constitution, they have no business considering it.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we are talking as professed Members of the Senate who know the least about House procedures.

Mr. LONG. But I know something about the Constitution.

Mr. BAKER. I recommend that we defer to our friends in the House about it.

Mr. LONG. If he wants to plead ignorance about the Constitution, the Senator from Tennessee is free to do that. I do not plead ignorance.

Mr. BAKER. I do not plead ignorance, Mr. President, but I do not know.

Mr. LONG. Well, I do. If the Senator wants to come to me and ask questions on the point of constitutional law, I will be glad to talk to him. I have studied it many times.

Mr. EXON. If the Senator will yield, Mr. President, the majority leader has always been courteous and candid with me. I do not wish to go against his wishes, but I feel I must play ball with the people I have cosponsored the amendment with.

Mr. SYMMS. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BAKER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if I had not given my word to the distinguished majority leader that I would not object to this amendment, I am not sure just what my attitude would be. I wanted to propound a question.

To which bill was the Senator from Louisiana speaking that is going to get the blue slip on it? Was he talking about the jobs bill, or the reciprocity bill?

Mr. LONG. I said that the reciprocity bill is a revenue bill; it is plainly a bill to raise revenue, because it has to do with tariffs.

Mr. SYMMS. This reciprocity bill, did it not pass the Senate previously and never come out of the Ways and Means Committee?

Mr. LONG. No, Mr. President, it has not passed the Senate. But there is no doubt about it, if the reciprocity bill on the calendar goes from here to the House, it is not going to be acted on in the House. The House is going to tell us that is a revenue bill, and with an S. number on it, that is just like a red flag to make them send it back over here. If I had a blue slip, I would show it; the blue slip says the House reminds the Senate that a revenue bill must originate in the House of Representatives, period, and here is your bill back. It is a very polite thing to do.

They could just burn the bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. SYMMS. As is so often the case, Mr. President, I think, from my experience in the other body, the Senator from Louisiana is right. But it may be that the Senator from Louisiana also is right that the proper bill for the proponents of the repealing the withholding on interest and dividend income is the social security bill. Maybe that is the bill to which it should be attached. Maybe the Senators from Nebraska and Wisconsin and the other Senators who are authors of this amendment could offer it there instead of having it on the jobs bill if it pleases the leadership to have it there.

Mr. LONG. It was the thought of the Senator from Louisiana that if somebody wanted to ask me what bill to put his amendment on, I would have suggested the social security bill. I salute the Senator from Wisconsin for the try he made. It takes the hide of a rhinoceros to tackle one of those big bills against the leadership on his side of the aisle, or this side of the aisle, for that matter, when he is told that a bill is urgent, we cannot take time to think about matters, this bill has to pass right now, people are hungry, they have needs across the width and breadth of America and there is some unemployment insurance money here, and something has to happen. I think the Senator from Wisconsin has stood up nobly against the kind of pressure he has faced. But as a practical matter, if one wants to amend this bill or that one, he had better to prepared to face that type of calumny.

At the same time, it seems to the Senator from Louisiana that if you want to offer your amendment, you would do well to try to amend what is clearly a House revenue bill to begin with, because when it gets to the House side, they are going to challenge it if it is not a House revenue bill.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the Senator. If I may reserve the right to object a little further, I shall not object. I would like to join in those compliments of the Senator from Wisconsin for his noble efforts. I am sorry to be at odds with my distinguished chairman, whom I have so much respect for on the Finance Committee. I do think when we passed the 1982 TEFRA Act, we made a mistake to include that in the bill. I was one of those who voted for it, and I am willing to admit I made a mistake.

I wish we could stop fighting this issue and allow the American people—whom we have told for years and years they ought to take an active part in politics. I have told my own people, "You ought to take the time to try to influence the people you do business with, whether it is on the payroll slips or anything else." That is all they have done in this case. The people have responded.

I think as rapidly as possible, we ought to give them a vote on the House floor and the Senate floor and let the President make the decision that he wants to. I wish we could bring up a clean bill, pass it, and send it over to the House. But that is not the choice of the leadership.

I do not object.

Mr. BAKER. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, let me see if I have the scenario straight. First of all, we are going to lay aside the social security bill temporarily and proceed to S. 144, which is sponsored by Senator DANFORTH, Senator LONG has correctly said that that is a cadaver on its face. It is a legislative corpse. So what we are looking at are two legislative corpses if this unanimous-consent request is agreed to. I say to my friend from Wisconsin, as I have said to him in private, that for all practical purposes, the fight is over on the proposal to repeal 10-percent withholding of dividend and interest income.

What we are talking about, I say to the majority leader, is simply giving Senator KASTEN a rollcall vote on this amendment this afternoon on the reciprocity bill. Is that it?

Mr. BAKER. No, Mr. President, it is not that. What we are talking about is calling up the reciprocity bill this afternoon for the purpose of permitting the Senator from Wisconsin to offer his amendment dealing with dividend and interest withholding.

But after the Kasten amendment is reported, then we would go off that bill and back to the jobs bill. There would be no vote on that today.

Mr. HELMS. So we will not even get a show of strength out of this unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. BAKER. I think he has shown about all the strength we can handle.

Mr. HELMS. I beg the Senator's pardon? I am sorry, I did not understand.

Mr. BAKER. I say that I think our friend from Wisconsin has shown about all the strength we can handle.

Mr. HELMS. He at one time this morning had 62 votes.

Mr. BAKER. Fifty-nine is strength.

Mr. HELMS. It had been watered down to 59 in the well. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. The Senator and I were in the well together, as I recall.

Mr. HELMS. Yes. He just outwatered me.

There is nothing implicit, let alone explicit, no misunderstanding, no hard feelings if this proposal comes back on social security?

Mr. BAKER. No, Mr. President, the Senator is absolutely right. I made it clear, and I will reiterate here, nothing in this agreement affects in any way the right of any Senator to offer a dividend and interest withholding amendment to any other bill including social security. I hope that does not happen, but the answer to the question of the Senator is that he is correct.

Mr. HELMS. I understand. Mr. President, my dear friend, the majority leader, knows my affection for him, and he also knows that we have been to this well before time and time again and always came out all right. I will say to him that if it were my judgment call to make, if it were my amendment—and I have said this to the Senator from Wisconsin—I would object to the unanimous-consent.

But it is not my judgment call to make. It is, uniquely, the judgment of the Senator from Wisconsin and I respect that, whatever the reason.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MATTINGLY. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. MATTINGLY. Would it be out of order to bring up the reciprocity bill today and just vote on the first amendment thereto and then come back April 15?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia is my friend, he is my colleague, he adjoins me to the South. We have a common unfortified boundary between Tennessee and Georgia, but I earnestly ask him not to disturb one comma, not one letter in this agreement. I do not believe he knows how much trouble we have gone through over a period of days to see this done. I hope the Senator will not object to this agreement. I must say to him, in all candor, that it is not possible in my opinion to change this agreement at all.

Mr. MATTINGLY. I can tell by the pained expression.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator from Georgia yield

Mr. MATTINGLY. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. It might not be out of order, but the Senator from Kansas would not be going to Savannah with the Senator from Georgia for some Hibernian event this evening. [Laughter.]

Mr. MATTINGLY. We might be able to get somebody else. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I hope the Chair—

Mr. DOLE. It is not too late for that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAKER. I hope the Chair will put the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the agreement?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT
AGREEMENT

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now temporarily lay aside the jobs bill and resume consideration of the social security bill but that at 3:10 p.m. today the Senate then once again lay aside the social security bill and resume consideration of the jobs bill and that without intervening action by the Senate or debate the vote occur on final passage as previously ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bill.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the social security measure.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, is a further amendment in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from New Jersey is a first-degree amendment. A second-degree amendment would be in order.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 80

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 80.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment insert the following new matter:

TITLE I—INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNTS

ESTABLISHMENT OF INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNTS

SEC. 101. Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"ESTABLISHMENT OF INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNTS

"SEC. 234. (a) After December 31, 1993, the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of the Treasury shall establish for each individual—

"(1) upon whom section 1401(a) or 3101 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 imposes a tax, and

"(2) who does not have an individual retirement security account with a qualified fiduciary pursuant to section 130(d)(1)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, an individual retirement security account, to be maintained in the Treasury as a separate book account.

"(b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall pay into the individual retirement security account established under subsection (a) or under section 130(c)(1)(A)(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with respect to such individual an amount equal to the amount of taxes paid with respect to the wages and self-employment income of such individual under sections 1401(d), 3101(e), and 3111(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(2) The Secretary shall pay such amounts into such account within 30 days of the date on which such taxes are paid.

"(c) An individual may contribute to such account amounts other than the amounts contributed to such account on his behalf by the Secretary of the Treasury under subsection (b).

"(d) The Secretary of the Treasury shall invest amounts deposited in individual retirement security accounts in obligations of the United States, and amounts so invested shall earn interest in accordance with the terms of such obligations.

"(e) Amounts deposited in an individual retirement security account established with respect to an individual under subsection (a) may be withdrawn before such individual attains age 62 only if—

"(1) the amount withdrawn from such account is used for a purpose described in section 130(a)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or

"(2) the amount withdrawn from such account is deposited immediately in an individual retirement security account established by such individual with a qualified fiduciary (as defined in section 130(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954).

"(f) The interest of an individual in the balance of an individual retirement security account established with respect to such individual pursuant to subsection (a) shall not be forfeitable."

TAX CREDIT FOR AMOUNTS CONTRIBUTED TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT

SEC. 102. (a) Subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to credits allowable against tax) is amended by inserting after section 44G the following new section:

"SEC. 44H. CONTRIBUTIONS TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year an amount equal to 20 percent of the amounts contributed by the taxpayer to an individual retirement security account of the taxpayer during the taxable year (other than amounts paid into such account on behalf of such individual under section 234(b) of the Social Security Act).

"(b) LIMITATION.—The amount of any contributions taken into account under subsection (a) shall not exceed the amount of taxes paid by the taxpayer to the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund under section 3101 for the taxable year.

"(c) INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.—For purposes of this section, "the term 'individual retirement security account' shall have the meaning given to such term by section 130(c)(1)."

(b)(1) Subsection (b) of section 6401 of such Code (relating to excessive credit is treated as overpayments) is amended—

(A) by striking out "and 43 (relating to earned income credit)," and inserting in lieu thereof "43 (relating to earned income credit), and 44H (relating to contributions to individual retirement security account)," and

(B) by striking out "39 and 43" and inserting in lieu thereof "39, 43, and 44H".

(2) Paragraph (2) of section 55(f) of such Code (defining regular tax) is amended by striking out "39 and 43" and inserting in lieu thereof "39, 43, and 44H".

(c) In prescribing the forms by which any individual liable for any tax imposed by subchapter A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 shall make a return for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983, the Secretary of the Treasury shall ensure that any such individual who is eligible for a credit under section 44H of such Code may claim the credit allowable under such section on any such form.

(d) The table of sections for subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by inserting before the item relating to section 45 the following new item:

"Sec. 44H. Contributions to individual retirement security account."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 2004.

EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME OF INCOME EARNED ON AMOUNTS CONTRIBUTED TO INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT

Sec. 103. (a) Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 130 as section 131 and by inserting after section 129 the following new section:

"SEC. 130. INCOME FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income does not include income which—

"(1) accrues on amounts contributed to an individual retirement security account, and

"(2)(A) remains in such account until the taxpayer attains age 62, or

"(B) is withdrawn from such account before the taxpayer attains age 62 for the purchase of life insurance, health insurance, or disability insurance for the taxpayer.

"(b) ACCOUNT EXEMPT FROM TAX.—Any individual retirement security account is exempt from taxation under this subtitle.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.—The term 'individual retirement security account' means an account—

"(A) which is established by—

"(i) the taxpayer with a qualified fiduciary, or

"(ii) the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of the Treasury on behalf of the taxpayer pursuant to section 234 of the Social Security Act;

"(B) which by written agreement or applicable law provides that—

"(i) amounts may be withdrawn therefrom before the taxpayer attains age 62 only for the purposes specified in subsection (a)(2)(B), and

"(ii) the interest of the taxpayer in the balance of his account is not forfeitable; and

"(C) to which—

"(i) the taxpayer makes contributions,

"(ii) contributions are made on behalf of the taxpayer pursuant to section 3101 (e), 3111 (d), or 1401 (d), or

"(iii) contributions are made in the manner described in both clause (i) and clause (ii); in order to ensure the taxpayer an adequate retirement income upon attaining age 62.

"(2) QUALIFIED FIDUCIARY.—The term 'qualified fiduciary' means a bank or other person who demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the manner in which he will administer the account will be consistent with the requirements of this section. An account shall not be disqualified under this paragraph merely because a person other than the fiduciary so administering the account may be granted, in the instrument creating the account, the power to control the investment of the account funds either by directing investments (including reinvestments, disposals, and exchanges) or by disapproving proposed investments (including reinvestments, disposals, and exchanges)."

(b) The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

REDUCTION OF OASI TAX AND ESTABLISHMENT OF MANDATORY IRSA CONTRIBUTIONS

Sec. 104. (a) (1) Section 3101 (a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to rate of tax on employees), as amended by section 204 of this Act, is amended—

(A) by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) With respect to wages received during the calendar year 1994, the rate shall be 4.975 percent;

"(7) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1995, the rate shall be 4.2 percent;

"(8) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1996, the rate shall be 4.145 percent;

"(9) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1997, the rate shall be 3.73 percent;

"(10) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1998, the rate shall be 3.315 percent;

"(11) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1999, the rate shall be 2.9 percent;

"(12) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2000, the rate shall be 2.485 percent;

"(13) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2001, the rate shall be 2.07 percent;

"(14) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2002, the rate shall be 1.655 percent;

"(15) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2003, the rate shall be 1.24 percent;

"(16) with respect to wages received during the calendar year after 2003, the rate shall be .825 percent."

(2) Section 3111(a) of such Code (relating to rate of tax on employers is amended—

(A) by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1994, the rate shall be 4.975 percent;

"(7) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1995, the rate shall be 4.2 percent;

"(8) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1996, the rate shall be 4.145 percent;

"(9) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1997, the rate shall be 3.73 percent;

"(10) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1998, the rate shall be 3.315 percent;

"(11) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1999, the rate shall be 2.9 percent;

"(12) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 2000, the rate shall be 2.485 percent;

"(13) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 2001, the rate shall be 2.07 percent;

"(14) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 2002, the rate shall be 1.655 percent;

"(15) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 2003, the rate shall be 1.24 percent;

"(16) with respect to wages paid during calendar years after 2003, the rate shall be .825 percent."

(3) Section 1401 (a) of such Code (relating to rate of tax on self-employment income) is amended—

(A) by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon; and

(B) by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(6) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1993 and before

January 1, 1995, the tax shall be equal to 7.4625 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

"(7) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1994 and before January 1, 1996, the tax shall be equal to 6.3 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

"(8) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1995 and before January 1, 1997, the tax shall be equal to 6.2175 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

"(9) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1996 and before January 1, 1998, the tax shall be equal to 5.595 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

"(10) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 1997 and before January 1, 1999, the tax shall be equal to 4.9725 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year;

"(16) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 2003, the tax shall be equal to 1.2375 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year."

(b)(1) Section 201(b)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out all beginning with "and before January 1, 1985" through "December 31, 1989."

(2) Section 201(b)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out all beginning with "(L) 1.4250 per centum" through "December 31, 1989."

(c)(1) Section 3101 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to rate of tax on employees) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(e) INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.—In addition to other taxes, a mandatory contribution shall be made from the income of every individual to the IRSA account of such individual in an amount equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 3121 (a)) received by him with respect to employment (as defined in section 3121 (b))—

"(1) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1994, the rate shall be .425 percent;

"(2) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1995, the rate shall be 1.2 percent;

"(3) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1996, the rate shall be 1.615 percent;

"(4) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1997, the rate shall be 2.030 percent;

"(5) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1998, the rate shall be 2.445 percent;

"(6) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 1999, the rate shall be 2.860 percent;

"(7) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2000, the rate shall be 3.275 percent;

"(8) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2001, the rate shall be 3.690 percent;

"(9) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2002, the rate shall be 4.105 percent;

"(10) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2003, the rate shall be 4.520 percent;

"(11) with respect to wages received during the calendar year 2003, the rate shall be 4.575 percent."

(2) Section 3111 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(d) INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.—In addition to other taxes, there is hereby imposed on every employer an excise tax, with respect to having individuals in his employ, equal to the following percentages of the wages (as defined in section 3121 (a) and (f)) paid by him with respect to employment (as defined in section 3121 (b))—

"(1) with respect to wages paid during the calendar year 1994, the rate shall be .425 percent;

"(11) in the case of any taxable year beginning after December 31, 2003, the contribution shall be equal to 6.8625 percent of the amount of the self-employment income for such taxable year."

CHANGE IN PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT TO REFLECT REDUCTION IN OASI TAX

SEC. 105. Section 215 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(j)(1) For purposes of determining old-age and survivors insurance benefits based upon the wages and self-employment income of an individual with respect to whom contributions are made to an individual security retirement account, such primary insurance amount shall be reduced by an amount that bears the same ratio to such primary insurance amount (as determined without regard to this subsection) as the IRSA offset amount determined with respect to such individual bears to the present value of the OASI annuity amount determined with respect to such individual.

"(2) For purposes of this subsection—

"(A) The term 'individual retirement security account' shall have the meaning given to such term in section 130(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(B) The term 'IRSA offset amount' means, with respect to an individual described in paragraph (1), an amount equal to the sum of—

"(i) amounts—

"(I) contributed by such individual to the individual retirement security account established with respect to such individual, and

"(II) taken into account for purposes of determining a credit allowed to such individual under section 44H of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(compounded, for the period beginning with the date on which the return in which such credit was claimed was required to be filed and ending with the date on which such individual retires, by the social security yield rate determined with respect to such individual); and

"(ii) amounts paid to the individual retirement security account of such individual under sections 1401(d), 1301(e), and 1311(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (compounded, for the periods beginning with the date on which such amount was paid into such account and ending with the date on which such individual retires, by the social security yield rate determined with respect to such individual);

"(C)(i) The term 'present value of OASI benefit annuity amount' means an amount that would, if invested at a rate of interest equal to the rate of interest payable on United States Treasury bills at the beginning of the period of entitlement determined with respect to the wages and self-employment income of an individual, produce by the end of such period of entitlement, an amount equal to the amount of benefits which would be payable under section 202 on the basis of such wages and self-employment income (but for the application of paragraph (1)) for such period of entitlement.

"(ii) In determining the amount of benefits which would be payable for the period of entitlement determined with respect to the wages and self-employment income of an individual, the rate of the cost-of-living increase under subsection (i) for the cost-of-living computation quarter immediately preceding the beginning of such period of entitlement shall be assumed to apply to each base quarter in such period of entitlement.

"(D) The term 'period of entitlement' means, with respect to the wages and self-employment income of an individual described in paragraph (1), the period beginning with the date on which such individual retires and ending with the date on which such individual would attain the expectation of life (determined in accordance with the official life table and in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Act as in effect on the first day of such period).

"(E) The term 'social security yield rate' means, with respect to an individual described in paragraph (1), the rate of yield that, if earned on the OASI tax amount determined with respect to such individual, for the period beginning with the date on which such taxes were paid and ending with the date on which such individual retires, would produce an amount equal to the present value of the OASI benefit annuity amount determined with respect to such individual.

"(F) The term 'OASI tax amount' means with respect to an individual described in paragraph (1), the amount of taxes paid to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund with respect to such individual under sections 3101(a), 3111(a), and 1401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 during the 80 highest quarters of coverage for such individual.

"(G) The term 'cost-of-living computation quarter' shall have the meaning given to such term in subsection (i)(1)(B).

"(H) The term 'base quarter' shall have the meaning given to such term in subsection (i)(1)(A).

"(I) The term 'quarter of coverage' shall have the meaning given to such term in section 213(a)(2).

"(J) The term 'official life table' means the life table for total persons in the United States that is prepared decennially by the National Center for Health Statistics for the 3-year period centering around the year of the decennial population census.”

TITLE II—OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE PROGRAM

CERTIFICATE OF GUARANTEED TAX-EXEMPT BENEFITS

SEC. 201. (a) Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

“CERTIFICATE OF GUARANTEED TAX-EXEMPT BENEFITS

“Sec. 235. (a) The Secretary shall issue to each individual who is entitled to an old-age insurance benefit, or who has attained age 62 and is entitled to any other benefit under this title, a certificate of guaranteed tax-exempt benefits. Such certificate shall be issued at the time such individual first becomes entitled to a benefit under this title, or attains age 62, whichever is later.

“(b) The certificate issued pursuant to this section shall pledge the full faith and credit of the United States to guarantee that benefits shall be paid to such individual (and to other individuals on the basis of such individual’s wages and self-employment income) under the provisions of this title as in effect on the date of issuance of such certificate (or as such benefits may be increased thereafter by Congress or under any automatic cost-of-living adjustment), and that such benefits shall not be subject to the tax on income under subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

“(c) The certificate issued under this section shall also contain—

“(1) a statement of the total amount of the taxes paid by such individual and his employers under sections 3101(a), 3111(a), and 1401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with respect to such individual’s wages and self-employment income; and

“(2) a statement that the certificate is nonnegotiable and nontransferable.”

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to all individuals entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of the Social Security Act on or after the date of the enactment of this Act. The Secretary shall issue such certificates to those individuals who have attained age 62 and are entitled to such benefits on the date of the enactment of this Act within six months after such date of enactment, in the same manner as if they had first become entitled to an old-age insurance benefit on such date of enactment.

ANNUAL CONTRIBUTION AND BENEFIT STATEMENT

SEC. 202. (a) Section 205(c) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(9)(A) The Secretary shall issue an annual statement to each individual having a social security account number which shall indicate the amount of the taxes paid by such individual under sections 3101(a) and 1401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with respect to his wages and self-employment income for such year. The statement shall be issued prior to March 31 with respect to the wages and self-employment income for the preceding calendar year.”

“(B) The annual statement issued under subparagraph (A) shall also include a chart developed by the Secretary which shall list the approximate amount of the primary insurance amount of an individual who will attain age 65 during the succeeding 40 year period (broken down into such incremental time periods as the Secretary determines to be appropriate), based on current annual earnings levels (broken down into increments of $5,000) from covered employment, and based upon the projections of future wage and price levels then being used by the Secretary to predict long range actuarial status of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund. Such chart shall also show the amount of the taxes which are payable at each stated earnings level under section 3101(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The chart shall also indicate that the benefit level of a worker aged 65 is equal to the primary insurance amount, and shall indicate the proportion of such primary insurance amount which is payable as an old-age or survivors benefit to other persons. In addition to such worker.

“(C) For the year in which an individual attains age 62, the Secretary shall also issue to each such individual a statement showing the amount of the monthly benefit for which such individual is eligible for the first month after attaining such age.”

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to calendar year 1983 and each calendar year thereafter.

TAX CREDIT FOR BENEFIT AMOUNTS RETURNED TO OASDI TRUST FUNDS

SEC. 203. (a) Subpart A of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to credits allowable against tax) is amended by inserting after section 44H (as added by section 102 of this Act) the following new section:

“SEC. 44I. BENEFIT AMOUNTS RETURNED TO OASDI TRUST FUNDS.

“(a) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an individual, there shall be allowed as a credit against the tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year an amount equal to the amount of social security benefits which are—

(c) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting ", and as amended by section 201 (a)(6) and (b)(2) of the Social Security Amendments of 1983," after "as in effect in December 1978".

PRORATION OF COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT

Sec. 207. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act is amended, in the second sentence, by inserting before the semicolon the following: ", and by adjusting such amount as required by paragraph (5) in the case of the initial cost-of-living increase".

(b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The primary insurance amount, maximum benefit amount under section 203(a), and benefit amount under section 227 or 228 of any individual for the initial cost-of-living increase (as defined in subparagraph (B)(i)) shall be determined under paragraph (2)(A)(ii) by substituting for the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index otherwise applicable under such paragraph, a percentage equal to—

"(i) such otherwise applicable percentage, multiplied by the number of months in the initial cost-of-living computation period (as defined in subparagraph (B)(ii)) which follow the month in which such individual becomes eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit, dies, or (in the case of benefits under section 227 or 228) becomes eligible for such benefit, divided by

"(ii) the number of months in such initial cost-of-living computation period.

"(B) For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) the term 'initial cost-of-living increase' means the first increase under this subsection applicable to the primary insurance amount, maximum benefit amount under section 203 (a), or benefit amount under section 227 or 228 of such individual; except that if a new primary insurance amount is determined with respect to an individual previously entitled to a disability insurance benefit (as described in subsection (a)(2)(C)), the first increase under this subsection applicable to such new primary insurance amount and maximum benefit amount shall also be an 'initial cost-of-living increase'; and

"(ii) the term 'initial cost-of-living computation period' means the period ending with the last day of the cost-of-living computation quarter (as determined under paragraph (1)(B)) used for purposes of the initial cost-of-living increase, and beginning with the first day of the quarter following (I) the most recent calendar quarter prior to such cost-of-living computation quarter which was a base quarter under paragraph (1)(A)(ii), or (II) if later, the most recent prior cost-of-living computation quarter."

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to any "initial cost-of-living increase" (as defined in section 215(i)(5) of the Social Security Act) occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.

GENERAL REVENUE FUNDING FOR ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS

Sec. 208. (a) Section 201 (g) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out paragraph (1);

(2) in paragraph 93, by striking out "(or 2)"; and

(3) by redesignating paragraphs (2) and (3) as paragraphs (1) and (2).

(b) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to costs incurred after the date of the enactment of this Act.

CREDITING AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO TRUST FUNDS

Sec. 209. (a) The Secretary of the Treasury shall take such actions as may be necessary to ensure that amounts of checks for benefits under title II of the Social Security Act which have not been presented for payment within a reasonable length of time (not to exceed twelve months) after issuance are credited to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund or the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, whichever may be the fund from which the check was issued. Amounts of any such check shall be recharged to the fund from which they were issued if payment is subsequently made on such check.

(b)(1) The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer from the general fund of the Treasury to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and to the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, as appropriate, such sums as may be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds in the total amounts of all currently unnegotiated benefit checks. After the amounts appropriated by this subsection have been transferred to the Trust Funds, the provisions of subsection (a) shall be applicable. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated benefit checks. The first such transfer shall be made within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act with respect to all such unnegotiated checks as of such date of enactment.

(2) As used in paragraph (1), the term "currently unnegotiated benefit checks" means the checks issued under title II of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the enactment of this Act, which remain unnegotiated after the twelfth month following the date on which they were issued.

TRANSFER TO TRUST FUNDS FOR BENEFITS ATTRIBUTABLE TO MILITARY SERVICE BEFORE 1957

Sec. 210. (a) Section 217(g) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"APPROPRIATION TO TRUST FUNDS

"(g)(1) Within 30 days after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, the Secretary shall determine the amounts which are the amounts estimated to be necessary to be transferred into each of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund on such date of enactment so that each such Trust Fund will be in the same position at the close of September 30, 2015 as each such Trust Fund would otherwise be in at the close of September 30, 2015 if section 210 of this Act as in effect prior to the Social Security Act Amendments of 1950, and this section, had not been enacted (less any amounts previously transferred under the provisions of this subsection as in effect prior to the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983). The rate of interest to be used in initially determining such amount shall be the rate determined under section 201(d) for public debt obligations which were or could have been issued for purchase by such Trust Funds on the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, and the assumptions with respect to future increases in wage and price levels shall be consistent with such rate of interest. The Secretary of the Treasury shall transfer the amounts determined under this paragraph into such Trust Funds from the general fund in the Treasury within 30 days after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this paragraph into such Trust Funds.

"(2) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined under paragraph (1) within one year after the date of the transfer made under paragraph (1), and every five years thereafter, as warranted by data which may become available to him after the date of the transfer under paragraph (1) based upon actual benefits paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts determined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred annually by the Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropriate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as may be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated to such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this paragraph into such Trust Funds."

PAYMENTS TO TRUST FUNDS OF AMOUNTS EQUIVALENT TO TAXES ON SERVICE IN THE UNIFORMED SERVICES PERFORMED AFTER 1956

Sec. 211. (a) Section 229(b) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, for each fiscal year, amounts equal to the additional amounts which would be appropriated into each such Trust Fund for such fiscal year under sections 201 and 1817 of this Act if the amounts of the additional wages deemed to have been paid by reason of subsection (a) constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954."

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years after 1982.

(c) (1) Within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall determine the amounts equal to the additional amounts which would have been appropriated into the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under sections 201 and 1817 of the Social Security Act, if the additional wages deemed to have been paid under section 229(a) of the Social Security Act prior to 1983 had constituted remuneration for employment (as defined in section 3121(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) for purposes of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and the amount of interest which would have been earned on such amounts if they had been so appropriated.

(2)(A) The Secretary of the Treasury shall, within 30 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, transfer into each such Trust Fund, from the general fund in the Treasury, an amount equal to the amount determined with respect to such Trust Fund under paragraph (1), less any amount appropriated into such Trust Fund under the provisions of section 229(b) of the Social Security Act prior to the date of the determination made under paragraph (1) with respect to wages deemed to have been paid for calendar years prior to 1983. There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

(B) The Secretary shall revise the amount determined under subparagraph (A) within one year after the date of the transfer made under paragraph (1), as warranted by data which may become available to him after the date of the transfer under subparagraph (A) based upon actual benefits paid under this title and title XVIII. Any amounts determined to be needed for transfer shall be transferred by the Secretary of the Treasury into the appropriate Trust Fund from the general fund in the Treasury, or out of the appropriate Trust Fund into the general fund in the Treasury, as may be appropriate. There are authorized to be appropriated to such Trust Funds sums equal to the amounts to be transferred in accordance with this subparagraph into such Trust Funds.

INCREASE IN DROPOUT YEARS FOR TIME SPENT IN CHILD CARE

Sec. 212. (a) Section 215 (b)(2)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended, in the third sentence thereof—

(1) by striking out "clause (ii)" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "clause (i) or (ii)";

(2) by striking out "the age of 3" each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "the age of 6";

(3) by striking out "a combined total not exceeding 3" and inserting "a combined total not exceeding 11"; and

(4) by striking out "had no earnings as described in section 203(f)(5) in such year" and inserting in lieu thereof "had earnings in such year (as described in section 203(f)(5) of not more than an amount equal to 50 percent of the average of the total wages (as determined by the Secretary for purposes of paragraph (3)(A)(ii)(I) for the second calendar year preceding such year".

(b) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to monthly benefits payable for months beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act.

BENEFITS FOR SURVIVING DIVORCED SPOUSES AND DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS WHO REMARRY

Sec. 213. (a)(1) Section 202(e)(3) of the Social Security Act is repealed.

(2) Section 202(e)(4) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(4) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

"(A) a widow or a surviving divorced wife marries after attaining age 60, or

"(B) a disabled widow or disabled surviving divorced wife described in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50,

such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred."

(b)(1) Section 202(f)(4) of such Act is repealed.

(2) Section 202(f)(5) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(5) For purposes of paragraph (1), if—

"(A) a widower marries after attaining age 60, or

"(B) a disabled widower described in paragraph (1)

"(B)(ii) marries after attaining age 50, such marriage shall be deemed not to have occurred."

(c)(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is made.

DETERMINATION OF PRIMARY INSURANCE AMOUNT FOR DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

Sec. 214. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) If a person is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of a deceased individual whose primary insurance amount would otherwise be determined under paragraph (1), the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual shall be determined, for purposes of determining the amount of the benefit under such subsection, as if such deceased individual died in the year in which the person entitled to benefits under such subsection first became eligible for such benefits or, if earlier, the year in which such deceased individual would have attained age 60 if he had not died (except that the actual year of death of such deceased individual shall be used for purposes of section 215(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II)).

"(i) is entitled to benefits under subsection (e) or (f) of section 202 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of a deceased individual, and

"(ii) was entitled to benefits under this title on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of such deceased individual in the month before the month in which such person became eligible for the benefits described in clause (i).

the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual shall be the primary insurance amount determined under the rules which would apply (but for subparagraph (A)) or the primary insurance amount determined under subparagraph (A), whichever is larger.

"(C) For purposes of determining the maximum family benefit amount with respect to a deceased individual for whom a primary insurance amount is determined under this paragraph, the primary insurance amount of such deceased individual shall be the primary insurance amount determined under the rules which would apply (but for this paragraph) of the primary insurance amount determined under this paragraph, whichever is larger."

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply to the benefits of individuals who become eligible for benefits under sections 202 (e) and (f) of the Social Security Act after December 1983.

BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED SPOUSE REGARDLESS OF WHETHER FORMER SPOUSE HAS RETIRED

Sec. 215. (a) Section 202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) For purposes of determining the entitlement of a divorced wife to a benefit under this subsection and the amount of such benefit, in the case of a wife who has been divorced from her former husband for a period of not less than 24 months—

"(A) such former husband shall be deemed to be entitled to an old-age insurance benefit if he would be entitled to such a benefit if he applied therefor; and

"(B) the amount of such benefit for such divorced wife shall be determined without regard to reductions which are or would be made under section 203 on account of work performed by such former husband."

(b)(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendment unless proper application for such benefit is made.

INCREASE IN BENEFIT AMOUNT FOR DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS

Sec. 216. (a)(1) Section 202(q)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (B)(ii) and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(2) Section 202(q)(6) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(6) For purposes of this subsection, the 'reduction period' for an old-age, wife's husband's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit is the period beginning—

"(A) in the case of an old-age or husband's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which such individual is entitled to such benefit,

"(B) in the case of a wife's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which a certificate described in paragraph (5)(A)(i) is effective, or

"(C) in the case of a widow's or widower's insurance benefit, with the first day of the first month for which such individual is entitled to such benefit or the first day of the month in which such individual attains age 60, whichever is later.

and ending with the last day of the month before the month in which such individual attains retirement age."

(3) Section 202(q)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out the matter preceding subparagraph (A) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(7) For purposes of this subsection, the 'adjusted reduction period' for an old-age, wife's, husband's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit is the reduction period prescribed in paragraph (6) for such benefit, excluding—"

(4) Paragraphs (1)(B)(i), (3)(E)(ii), and (3)(F)(ii) of section 202(q) of such Act are each amended by striking out "(6)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "(6)".

(5) Section 202(q)(3)(G) of such Act is amended by striking out "paragraph (6)(A) (or, if such paragraph does not apply, the period specified in paragraph (6)(B))" and inserting in lieu thereof "paragraph (6)".

(6) Section 202(q)(10) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking out "or an additional adjusted reduction period";

(B) in subparagraphs (B)(i), (C)(i), and (C)(ii) by striking out ", plus the number of months in the adjusted additional reduction period multiplied by 43/240 of 1 percent"; and

(C) in subparagraph (B)(ii), by striking out ", plus the number of months in the additional reduction period multiplied by 43/240 of 1 percent".

(b)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of such amendments unless proper application for such benefit is made.

SHARING OF EARNINGS BY MARRIED COUPLES

SEC. 217. (a) Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SHARING OF EARNINGS BY MARRIED COUPLES

"SEC. 236. (a)(1) The combined earnings of an individual and his or her spouse, to the extent that such earnings are attributable to the period of their marriage (as determined under paragraph (2)), shall be divided equally between them and shared in accordance with this section for purposes of determining their eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits and the amount of the old-age or disability insurance benefits to which each of them is or may become separately entitled, if they are divorced, and either of them elects, in such manner and form as the Secretary shall prescribe but in any event within 12 months after the divorce becomes final, to have such combined earnings so divided and shared.

"(2) For purposes of this section with respect to any two individuals who are married to each other and are then divorced, the 'period of their marriage' is the period—

"(A) beginning with the first day of the calendar year in which their marriage occurred, and

"(B) ending with the last day of the calendar year in which their divorce becomes final.

"(b)(1) Except to the extent otherwise provided in subsections (c) and (d), whenever two individuals are to have their combined earnings divided and shared in accordance with subsection (a) they shall each be credited for all of the purposes of this title with wages and self-employment income, for each calendar year for which either of them is credited with any wages and self-employment income without regard to this section during the period of their marriage, in an amount equal to 50 percent of the combined total of the wages and self-employment income otherwise credited to both of them for that year.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall have an effect upon the crediting of wages and self-employment income to any individual for any calendar year not included in the period of such individual's marriage; but to the extent that wages and self-employment income are credited pursuant to this section the other provisions of this title specifying the manner in which wages and self-employment income are to be credited shall (to the extent inconsistent with this section) not be applicable.

"(c) This section shall not apply with respect to any surviving divorced spouse for any month, and any widow's, widower's, or mother's insurance benefit payable to which such spouse is entitled under this title for any month shall be determined as though this section has not been enacted, if the application of this section would result in either divorced spouse becoming ineligible for any benefit under this title by reason of an insufficient number of quarters of coverage.

"(d) Notwithstanding any of the preceding provisions of this section—

"(1) benefits payable under subsection (d) or (h) of section 202 on the basis of the wages any self-employment income of any individual, and benefits payable under subsection (b), (c), (e), (f), or (g) of such section 202 (on the basis of such wages and self-employment income) to any person other than a divorced spouse or surviving divorced spouse who has shared in or been credited with a part of such individual's earnings under subsections (a) and (b) of this section, shall be determined as though this section had not been enacted if (A) the application of this section has changed such individual's primary insurance amount from what it would otherwise have been, and (B) the crediting of wages and self-employment income to such individual and his or her former spouse without regard to this section would increase the amount of such benefits; and

"(2) in the application of section 203(a) (relating to maximum family benefits) with respect to benefits payable on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of any individual, where all or any part of the wages and self-employment income of such individual and his or her former spouse was credited to them in accordance with this section, the primary insurance amount of such individual (and the crediting of his or her wages and self-employment income) shall be determined in accordance with this section but the benefits payable to any other person on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of such individual shall be determined as though this section had not been enacted and as though such person had made application for any benefit or benefits to which he or she would (upon such application) be entitled."

(b) Section 205(c)(5) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "or" at the end of subparagraph (I);

(2) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (J) and inserting in lieu thereof "; or"; and

(3) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(K) to reflect any changes in the crediting of wages and self-employment income which may be necessitated by section 236."

(c) Section 215(b) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) The determination of the wages and self-employment income to be credited to an individual under this subsection shall in all cases be made after the application of section 236."

(d) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to divorces occurring or becoming final after the date of the enactment of this Act, and with respect to the payment of benefits for months after such date of enactment.

RESTRICTIONS ON PAYMENT OF BENEFITS TO NONRESIDENT ALIENS

SEC. 18. (a) Section 202(t)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended to read as follows:

"(1) (A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, any monthly benefits otherwise payable under this section or section 223 for any month to any individual who is not a citizen or national of the United States, if such individual—

"(i) has not been lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence, or

"(ii) has been outside the United States for a period of more than six consecutive calendar months while entitled to benefits under this title; and any monthly benefits otherwise payable to any person for any month under this section or section 223 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of an individual who is himself subject to the preceding provisions of this subparagraph for that month, shall be subject to the limitations set forth in subparagraph (B).

"(B) The total amount of any monthly benefits described in subparagraph (A) payable to an individual described in such subparagraph shall be limited to—

"(i) in the case of an individual entitled to such benefits who is the only individual so entitled to benefits on the basis of the wages and self-employment income upon which such benefits are payable, an amount equal to the sum of—

"(I) the total amount of taxes paid under sections 3101 and 1401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (or the corresponding provisions of prior law) with respect to such wages and self-employment income; and

"(II) the interest payable on the taxes so paid (computed at the prevailing rate of interest payable on United States Treasury bills for the period after such taxes were paid and before such individual became entitled to such benefits); or

(ii) in the case of an individual entitled to such benefits who is one of several individuals so entitled to benefits on the basis of the wages and self-employment income upon which such benefits are payable, an amount equal to that portion of such taxes and such interest which is attributable to such individual's entitlement, as determined in regulations by the Secretary.

After monthly benefits totalling such amount have been paid, such individual shall have no further entitlement to benefits based upon the same wages and self-employment income.

“(C) For purposes of subparagraph (B) benefits paid under section 202 or 223 before the date of enactment of this paragraph to an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies shall be taken into account in determining the total amount of monthly benefits paid to such individual.

“(D) Subparagraph (A)(i) shall not apply with respect to any individual within the United States if the benefit involved is payable to such individual as the wife, husband, child, or survivor of a citizen or national of the United States or of an alien lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence.

“(E) Subparagraph (A)(ii) shall not apply with respect to any individual if—

“(i) the benefit involved is payable to such individual as the dependent or survivor of a citizen or national of the United States who resides outside the United States and has attained age 50 (or who died outside the United States after attaining that age), and

“(ii) the spousal, filial, parental, or other relationship upon which the entitlement of such individual to such benefit is based existed at the time such citizen or national attained age 50.

“(F) The application of subparagraph (A) to an individual by reason of clause (ii) thereof shall not preclude such individual from being paid benefits under this title under an entitlement to such benefits established on the basis of wages and self-employment income other than the wages and self-employment income on the basis of which he was entitled to benefits at the time he was outside the United States for more than six consecutive months.

“(G) An individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies by reason of clause (ii) shall not, upon returning to the United States, become entitled to the benefits which would be payable to such individual (but for such subparagraph) on the basis of the wages and self-employment income with respect to which he was entitled to benefits at the time he was outside the United States for more than six consecutive months.

“(H) For purposes of this paragraph, an individual shall be considered to have been outside the United States for any calendar month if the Secretary, on the basis of information furnished to him by the Attorney General or information which otherwise comes to his attention, determines that such individual was outside the United States during all of such calendar month. In applying the preceding sentence, an individual who has been outside the United States for any period of 30 consecutive days shall be treated as remaining outside the United States until he has been in the United States for a period of 30 consecutive days.

“(I) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘United States’ (when used in either a geographical or political sense) means the States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, and any other territory or possession of the United States.”

(b) Paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 202(t) are repealed.

(c) Section 202(t)(4) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out subparagraphs (A) and (B);

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C); and

(3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (C) (as so redesignated) and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof a period.

(d) The heading of section 202(t) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: “; Restrictions on Payment of Benefits to Nonresident Aliens”.

(e) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to months after the month in which this Act is enacted.

BUS PROCESS REQUIREMENTS FOR TERMINATION OF DISABILITY BENEFITS

SEC. 219. (a) Section 221(d) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting “(1)” before “(d)” and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(2)(A) In any case where—

“(i) an individual is a recipient of disability insurance benefits, or of child’s, widow’s, or widower’s insurance benefits based on disability, and

“(ii) a preliminary finding is made that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefits are payable has ceased, did not exist, or is no longer disabling (as determined in accordance with subparagraph (B)), such benefits may not be terminated until such preliminary finding has been upheld after a hearing by the Secretary as provided in section 205(b). The Secretary shall provide opportunity for such hearing at a time and place reasonably accessible to the individual. Failure without good cause to appear at such hearing shall constitute a waiver of the right to such a hearing prior to termination.

“(B)(i) Except as provided in clause (ii), no benefits described in subparagraph (A) may be terminated on the grounds that the physical or mental impairment on the basis of which such benefit was payable has ceased, did not exist, or is no longer disabling, unless the Secretary makes a finding that there has been a medical improvement in the case of such individual’s impairment such that the individual is no longer under a disability under the standards for disability in effect at the time of such prior decision, or that the prior decision that such individual was under a disability was clearly erroneous under the standards for disability in effect at the time of such prior decision.

“(ii) Clause (i) shall not apply in the case of a termination of benefits based upon a finding made in accordance with section 223(d)(4) that services performed or earnings derived from services demonstrate an individual’s ability to engage in substantial gainful activity, or to a termination based on a finding of fraud.”

(b) Section 223 of such Act is amended by striking out subsection (g).

(c) Section 205(b) of such Act is amended by striking out “(1)” after “(b)” and by striking out paragraph (2).

(d) Section 5 of Public Law 97-455 is repealed.

(e) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to determinations (that individuals are not entitled to benefits) made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

REPEAL OF EARNINGS LIMITATION FOR BENEFICIARIES AGE 65 OR OLDER

SEC. 220. (a) Section 203(c)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out “seventy” and inserting in lieu thereof “65”.

(b) The last sentence of section 203(c) of such Act is amended by striking out “nor shall any deduction” and all that follows and inserting in lieu thereof “nor shall any deduction be made under this subsection from any widow’s or widower’s insurance benefits if the widow, surviving divorced wife, widower, or surviving divorced husband involved became entitled to such benefit prior to attaining age 50.”

(c) Section 203(d)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out “seventy” and inserting in lieu thereof “65”.

(d) Section 203(f)(1) of such Act is amended—

(1) in clause (B), by striking out “seventy” and inserting in lieu thereof “65”;

(2) by amending clause (D) to read as follows: “(D) for which such individual is entitled to widow’s or widower’s insurance benefits if such individual became so entitled prior to attaining age 60;” and

(3) by striking out “the applicable exempt amount” each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “the exempt amount”.

(e) Section 203(f)(3) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “applicable exempt amount” and inserting in lieu thereof “exempt amount”; and

(2) by striking out “70” and inserting in lieu thereof “65”.

(f) Section 203(f)(4)(B) of such Act is amended by striking out “applicable exempt amount” and inserting in lieu thereof “exempt amount”.

(g) Section 203(f)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out “exempt amounts (separately stated for individuals described in subparagraph (D) and for other individuals) which are to be applicable” and inserting in lieu thereof “exempt amount which is to be applicable”.

(h) Section 203(f)(8)(B) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (D), the exempt amount which is applicable to individuals described in such subparagraph and the exempt amount which is applicable to other individuals, for each month of a particular taxable year, shall each be” and inserting in lieu thereof “The exempt amount for each month of a particular taxable year shall be”;

(2) in clause (i), by striking out “corresponding”; and

(3) in the matter following clause (ii), by striking out “an exempt amount” and inserting in lieu thereof “the exempt amount”.

(i) Section 203(f)(8) of such Act is amended by striking out subparagraph (D) thereof.

(j) Section 203(h)(1)(A) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “applicable exempt amount” and inserting in lieu thereof “exempt amount”; and

(2) by striking out “70” each place it appears and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance “65”.

(k) Section 203(j) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “Seventy” in the heading thereof and inserting in lieu thereof “Sixty-five”; and

(2) by striking out “seventy” and inserting in lieu thereof “65”.

(l) Section 202(w)(2) of such Act is amended by inserting “prior to January 1, 1984” after “the total number of months”.

(m) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 1984.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, what is the pending matter before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is the amendment of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DOLE. We are back on the social security bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is absolutely correct.

The Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today substitutes for the pending amendment the provisions of S. 541, the Social Security Guarantee and Individual Retirement Security Act of 1983.

Mr. President, S. 541 is the bill I introduced this past month to strengthen the social security system and to guarantee once and for all the retirement security of elderly Americans.

Before I discuss the provisions of the pending amendment I want to commend my very good friend, the distinguished Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) for his remarkable leadership in this effort to salvage social security.

As all Senators know who followed the deliberations of the so-called Social Security Reform Commission, there were many and divergent viewpoints about which way to proceed. So what emerged was a compromise which was not really acceptable to any member of the Commission. I do not think, once the American people learn of the provisions, that they will find it acceptable either. But in any case we should all be grateful to BOB DOLE's tireless search for the solution to the immediate funding problems of the system.

Also, I would pay my genuine respects to the distinguished Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) for his diligent study of this matter and the enormous amount of work that he did—truly an incredible job under the circumstances. And I am grateful to Senator DOLE and Senator ARMSTRONG and others.

I would say, furthermore, that every member of the Finance Committee deserves our gratitude for offering the American people a better reform package than the one recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. That is not to say that the Senator from North Carolina is pleased with H.R. 1900 or will even vote for it, but in no way do I want my personal convictions or those of so many citizens of North Carolina who have contacted me to detract from the diligence of the Senator from Kansas. I reiterate he has done a remarkable job.

Second, I am pleased that the Finance Committee dealt favorably with a number of the sections of the reform bill that I introduced. Of course I refer to S. 541. In fact, upon examination, I find that the Finance Committee bill that we are now considering includes 11 of the 20 sections of my bill. And that is a pretty good average, Mr. President.

The bill before us does cure, for example, a number of inequities that women suffer under social security as it now exists. It gradually phases out the retirement earnings test for people 85 and over and it cuts off benefit payments to aliens and their dependents and survivors who reside outside the United States and its territories. Several other sections of S. 541 are included in the bill now before us, but I will not use the Senate's time to discuss these in any great detail.

Let me simply say that the bill under consideration is certainly an improvement over its predecessor legislation.

Having said that, Mr. President, despite the improvements made thus far, the social security reform bill, in my judgment, still lacking. I am convinced that Americans, young and old, want and I think deserve more than the bill before us now provides. The more than 36 million elderly Americans who receive social security checks each month need a retirement system they can depend on. Equally important, the 119 million workers whose payroll taxes make those checks possible deserve a fully funded system that will be able to pay benefits when they retire.

Mr. President, one of the problems with social security in the United States is that so few know anything about it. Some weeks back I met with members of the news media and it occurred to me that it might be interesting to see how much those who daily report on social security developments know about social security itself. So we prepared 20 multiple choice questions. I gave part of the test to media representatives and, I must say, they did very poorly. And I will say also that before I began looking into the social security system, I would have done perhaps even more poorly.

For example, let me read two or three of the questions and the multiple choice answers for each and see how the Chair would do if he can follow these in his mind as we go along. The first question:

If you went to work when social security began in 1937 and earned enough to pay the maximum tax from 1937 to 1982, today you would have paid into the system: A. $127,650; B. $98,450; C. $16,950; D. $47,650.

The answer is C, $16,950, Mr. President.

The second question:

If you retired today and paid the maximum tax possible since 1937, your annual social security benefits for you and your spouse would be: A. $19,000; B. $12,200; C. $14,000; D. $8,000.

The correct answer is B.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this test given to the news media be printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the test was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Social Security is the Nation's largest domestic program, and affects the lives of almost every American. How much do you know about this important program? Here are 20 multiple choice questions to test your knowledge.

1. If you went to work when Social Security began in 1937, and earned enough to pay the maximum tax during 1937 to 1982, today you would have paid into the system: A. $127,650; B. $98,450; C. $16,950; D. $47,650.

2. If you retired today, and had paid the maximum tax possible since 1937, your annual Social Security benefits for you and your spouse would be: A. $19,000; B. $12,200; C. $14,000; D. $8,000.

3. The social security deficit projected over the next 75 years is: A. $3.3 billion; B. $2.7 billion; C. $1.6 trillion; D. $9 billion.

4. The average number of years that a woman lives after reaching age 65 in 1982 is: A. 11; B. 15; C. 19; D. 9.

5. The average number of years that a man lives after reaching age 65 in 1982 is: A. 11; B. 15; C. 19; D. 9.

6. Social Security pays full retirement benefits for those age 65. Social Security also pays benefits, though at a reduced amount, for those who opt for early retirement after age 62. Today, what percent of Americans opt for early retirement? A. 28 percent; B. 65 percent; C. 90 percent; D. 50 percent.

7. For all current Social Security retirees, their lifetime Social Security benefits they and their families will receive exceed by what ratio their lifetime Social Security taxes paid? A. 11:1; B. 10:1; C. 2:1; D. 5:1.

8. To be fully eligible for Social Security retirement benefits, what is the minimum number of years you have to have worked in a Social Security covered job, and therefore had paid Social Security taxes? A. 7½; B. 21½; C. 30; D. 50.

9. President Roosevelt, when he proposed the Social Security Act in 1935, said its basic goal was:

A. To fully meet all of the economic needs of the elderly, the nation's most cherished national resource.

B. To provide supplemental retirement income to replace earnings lost by industrial and commercial workers because of retirement.

C. To guarantee that taxes paid to Social Security by workers would be fully repaid, with interest, when the worker attained retirement.

10. Since 1970, Social Security benefit increases have:

A. Increased faster than average increases in wages and prices.

B. Stayed the same as increases in average wages and prices.

C. Have not kept pace with average wage or price increases.

11. What percent of all American families pay more in Social Security taxes than federal income taxes? A. 27 percent; B. 51 percent; C. 62 percent; D. 11 percent.

12. Since 1935, how much in Social Security benefits have been paid out? A. $655 billion; B. $235 billion; C. $1 trillion; D. $300 billion.

13. In the next four years, how much Social Security benefits will be paid out? A. $655 billion; B. $235 billion; C. $1 trillion; D. $300 billion.

14. In 1959, what percent of the elderly had incomes below the official poverty level? A. 35 percent; B. 14 percent; C. 52 percent; D. 17 percent.

15. In 1978, what percent of the elderly had incomes below the official poverty level? A. 35 percent; B. 14 percent; C. 52 percent; D. 17 percent.

16. U.S. citizenship is currently not a requirement to receive Social Security benefits. How many dollars are paid annually in benefits to non-U.S. citizens living outside the United States? A. $35 million; B. $700 million; C. $235 million; D. $94.6 million.

17. The OASDI Trust Fund pays benefits out of current reserves. The funds have enough reserves to pay benefits at present levels for how long? A. 2 years; B. 4 months; C. 10 years; D. 7 week.

18. Social Security is a "pay as you go" system . . . meaning benefits paid today are financed through taxes paid by today's workers. In 1940, there were 16 workers for every beneficiary. How many workers are there today for each beneficiary? A. 3; B. 25; C. 12; D. 17.

19. Since 1935, the maximum Social Security taxes have increased what percent A. 2,000 percent; B. 200 percent; C. 6,900 percent; D. 4,000 percent.

20. What percent of Social Security current beneficiaries are over age 65, the full retirement age? A. 92 percent; B. 65 percent; C. 78 percent; D. 51 percent.

Mr. HELMS. I will run down the answers. 1, C; 2, B; 3, C; 4, C; 5, B; 6, C; 7, D; 8, A; 9, B; 10, A; 11, B; 12, C; 13, C; 14, A; 15, B; 16, B; 17, D; 18, A; 19, C; 20, D.

Mr. President, my bill, S. 541, the Social Security Guarantee and Individual Retirement Security Act of 1983, would guarantee to every American the social security benefits to which he or she is now entitled without raising taxes. As a matter of fact, it would repeal all future scheduled payroll tax increases. It has both a long-term and a short-term goal for addressing the funding problems facing social security.

In the long run, Mr. President, it would phase in a new kind of private savings account, called an individual retirement security account (IRSA), in which each working American could invest for his or her own retirement. These federally insured accounts would guarantee for all time absolute retirement security for every American. They would also help the Nation's economy by providing a capital pool for investment to create jobs and put people back to work, lower interest rates, boost GNP, and help this Nation toward a much needed economic recovery.

In the short run, it would keep our present social security system solvent while the long-term plan has a chance to take effect.

THE PRESENT PROBLEM

We will be deceiving ourselves if we do not face up to the seriousness of the social security crisis. In my view, it is both a national tragedy and a national disgrace. What is more, too few Americans understand the nature and extent of these problems. Certain politicians and members of the media have made a political football out of social security.

Let us examine for a moment how so many Americans have been misled, even deceived, by political and bureaucratic words and phrases that have created false impressions in their minds. To put it bluntly, the people have been hoaxed by expressions that have crept into the American vocabulary.

First, how many times have we heard references to the "Social Security Trust Fund"? There is no trust fund. It does not exist. It has never existed. Just ask someone to point out the vault where the money is kept. From the first days of social security, the American people have been led to believe that every worker has an accumulated savings account in Washington with his or her name and social security number on it. That is what employer and employee payroll taxes were supposed to be paying for. But such accumulated savings accounts do not exist, they have never existed.

Second, how many times have American workers been told that they "contribute" a specified sum of money to social security, and their employer "contributes" a like amount? But that is not correct either. All of the money—what workers contribute and what employers contribute—all of it is a part of the total payroll expenses that an employer has allotted for a particular job, including salary and other costs involved in his having hired someone in the first place. So every penny is really the worker's money, the money an employer has to pay in a dozen different ways to employ someone.

So, Mr. President, that contribution is not a contribution. It is a tax, and nothing more. Social security, as it now exists, is not really a retirement insurance and savings program. It is a program of taxation that is in fact bankrupt; and the retirement benefits of every American are, and have been, at the mercy of politicians who decide how much money from the Federal Treasury retired Americans will receive.

THE COMMISSION PLAN

Along with other Americans, I waited—perhaps too patiently—for the 15-member, blue-ribbon, bipartisan Social Security Reform Commission to come up with proposals that, we had all hoped, would realistically and honestly address the problems facing the social security system. But after more than a year's work, the Commission submitted proposals to the President that reflect a total absence of creativity and imagination—and, worse still, a total lack of understanding of where they would lead the American economy. The Commission asks Congress to raise taxes and reduce social security benefits. Taxes on working people and their employers would be increased. Taxes on self-employed persons such as farmers, doctors, and lawyers would be increased. For the first time ever, the benefits of social security recipients would be taxed. Nonprofit organization employees would be brought into the system, and employees of State and local governments would be prohibited from withdrawing from the system.

But these painful changes and others recommended by the Commission may still not, by the Commission's own admission, be enough to cover either the short-term funding needs and surely will not cover the long-term social security deficit.

According to the Commission's report, the short-term deficit—that is, the deficit that would accumulate between now and 1989—would come to between $150 and $200 billion. Their short-term remedy would take care of $168 billion of that projected shortfall.

Estimates of the long-term deficit—that is, for the next 75 years—vary depending on your source of information. Or perhaps I should say it gets worse each time it is calculated.

The Commission report estimates a long-term deficit of 1.82 percent of payroll—estimated to be roughly $1.6 trillion. The Commission's proposal would reduce this deficit by only two-thirds. The members came to no agreement on whether to recover the remaining one-third by gradually raising the retirement age or by increasing the payroll tax on employers and employees.

Shortly after the report was published social security actuaries revised their estimate of the deficit. They now project it will amount to 2.1 percent of payroll, which is equal to several hundred billion dollars more than previously estimated. The Commission plan, then, falls woefully short of resolving the long-term deficit, even if the retirement age were to be raised or payroll taxes increased.

Clearly, then, Mr. President, however well intended the report of the Social Security Reform Commission is, it not only fails to address all the problems facing our social security system, but it does not adequately solve even those it does address.

DISTRUST OF SOCIAL SECURITY

Is it any wonder, then, that the American people have lost faith in social security? Some weeks back, I saw the results of two polls that had been taken among younger Americans now in the work force. A 1982 Washington Post-ABC News poll stated 66 percent of those under 45—and 70 percent of those under 30—believe that social security will not be in existence when they retire. A 1981 New York Times-CBS News poll found that 75 percent between ages 25 and 34 doubt they would receive any of the social security benefits they have been promised. The same poll found that 73 percent of all Americans have lost confidence in social security.

The same doubts and fears have been expressed to me in letters and telephone calls from countless Americans—young, middle aged, and elderly, including some who are already retired. These people are concerned, and rightly so, about their futures, and about the futures of their children and grandchildren.

HELMS PLAN WILL NOT

In a moment I will describe in greater detail what my proposal would do, but first let me emphasize what it will not do.

It will not—I repeat not—reduce any promised benefits to anyone—not to retired Americans, not to those about to retire, and not to anyone else who has a right to any retirement benefits.

It will not—and again I repeat not—raise social security taxes in the future. In fact, it would repeal the social security tax increases already scheduled to take effect in 1985 and 1990.

It will not raise taxes on self-employed individuals.

It will not bring any employees of nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations into the social security system.

It will not require employees of State and local governments to participate in social security.

It will not tax benefits of social security recipients.

It will not make our senior citizens wait 6 months for the annual cost-of-living adjustment they depend on so much.

It will not raise the retirement age.

THE IRSA ACCOUNT

My plan would authorize every American worker to establish an "Individual Retirement Security Account" in whatever authorized institution he or she chooses, be it a local bank, credit union, savings and loan association, or whatever. These fiduciaries would be qualified under standards similar to those under Treasury Regulations section 1.401-12(n).

This new kind of account would be similar to the IRA accounts most people know about already, but with a big difference. The difference would be that a tax credit, instead of a tax deduction, would be given for deposits in these individual retirement security accounts. A tax credit means a dollar-for-dollar tax writeoff, the kind that means something to the small- and medium-income taxpayer.

Individuals could contribute to these IRSA's any amounts they choose. For every dollar contributed to an IRSA, the individual would be entitled to claim a 20-cents-on-the-dollar credit against the income tax liability, up to a maximum credit of 20 percent of the amount paid that year by the individual to the social security trust fund. To the extent the individual elects to take advantage of the income tax credit, his future pension claims against the common social security trust fund would be reduced according to an actuarial formula. Maximum utilization of the income tax credit each year for 20 years would reduce the individual's OASI claims to zero. Lesser utilization would reduce the trust fund's liabilities proportionately.

GUARANTEED BENEFITS

My proposal would guarantee all current pension obligations with the full faith and credit of the United States. Many Americans are surprised when they learn that social security benefits are not guaranteed under current law. In fact, in 1960, the U.S. Supreme Court rules in Flemming v. Nestor (363 U.S. 603) that the Federal Government can renege on social security benefits at any time. That case is still the law today. If Congress wants to reduce social security benefits, it is free to do so. I want to change that.

Under my plan, every participant, upon retirement, would receive a certificate made out in his or her name. It would be an obligation backed by the "full faith and credit of the United States." This bond would guarantee continued social security benefits. Never again will a retired American feel that his or her social security benefits would be cut by an act of Congress, the courts, or any other agency of Government. No one could ever be denied the credits he or she has earned or will earn in the future under the Government system.

Everyone's retirement credits must be guaranteed.

MOBILIZE PRIVATE SECTOR VIA IRSA'S

But in the long run, we also need to offer workers something more—a supplement, an alternative to the Government-managed system.

No system of taxes can improve real benefits to Americans because taxes are not productive. They destroy the incentive to create jobs and the incentive to save. What we need is a system of savings and investment. A lot of people originally thought that was what the social security system was supposed to be. But in fact we have a system where the taxes collected this month are paid out in benefits next month, and this system is bankrupt. I want to expand the system to create individual worker's investments in the private sector. I want to encourage savings and investment, create jobs, help lower interest rates, and thereby restore the strength and vitality of America.

Interest, dividends, and capital gains accumulated in the IRSA account would be tax exempt, and annuities and withdrawals from it upon retirement anytime after age 62 would be tax free. Funds held in an IRSA account could be used tax free by a worker before age 62 to acquire life insurance, health insurance, or disability insurance. The individual could participate with his fiduciary in managing the IRSA account as a fully funded individual retirement program.

For the first 10 years after enactment, an individual could set up an individual retirement security account and receive tax credits. Then, starting in 1994, there would begin a phased transfer in which employers and employees would be required to pay part of their social security taxes to the respective worker's individual retirement security account instead of to the Federal Government. As more of the individual's and employer's taxes go to the worker's IRSA, less would be paid to the common OASI trust fund to pay benefits for a declining number of social security beneficiaries.

By the year 2004 the phased transfer would be complete, and all payroll tax payments would be made to employees' IRSA's. Tax credits would be available between 1994 and 2004 for amounts invested in an IRSA above the amount deposited by employees and employers via the FICA deduction. The credit would phase to zero as the OASI component of the FICA deduction phased to zero by the year 2004.

I asked experts to estimate the amount of money that would be saved and invested in the private sector as gradually increasing percentages of the population began to participate in IRSA's. For example, if only 38 percent of our Nation's workers elect to establish IRSA's during the next 10 years, a whopping $271,401,000,000 will have been invested. Think what this new supply of savings could do for our economy.

The following table provides a breakdown of the experts' estimates:

ESTIMATED IRSA PARTICIPATION AND INVESTMENT
(Dollars in billions)

| Year | Participation rate to IRSA's | Amount Invested |
|-------|------------------------------|-----------------|
| 1984 | 0.01 | $9 894 |
| 1985 | .03 | 3,672 |
| 1986 | .07 | 7,802 |
| 1987 | .10 | 12,050 |
| 1988 | .13 | 16,926 |
| 1989 | .16 | 22,432 |
| 1990 | .19 | 31,037 |
| 1991 | .24 | 42,268 |
| 1992 | .30 | 57,000 |
| 1993 | .38 | 77,900 |
| Total | | 271,401 |

OASI liabilities would shrink as participation in IRSA's increased. By the year 2045, according to my projections, residual OASI liabilities would be reduced to zero.

The following table shows projected OASI and IRSA participation and fiscal impact through the year 2050:

PROJECTED OASI AND IRSA PARTICIPATION AND FISCAL IMPACT¹

¹ Alternative II-B assumptions; source of data for covered workers, OASI annuitants, 1982 trustees report. IRSA participation rate, 1984-93 assumed 20 percent of covered workers with 50 percent retiring by 1995; increase in IRSA coverage and decrease in OASI coverage computed by applying smoothed exponential decline rate/growth rate curve to population data with parameters as given in Helms proposal (universal IRSA coverage in 1934 with maximum coverage in 2004; no new OASI retirees after 2024).

² OASI cost is percent of taxable payroll (Alt. II-B) adjusted for computed decline rate on OASI benefit claims, 1994-2040.

Taxable payroll was not adjusted for economic growth and increase in real wages that would be expected from increased savings rate and capital formation as retirement income source shifts from transfer payment via OASI tax on payrolls to annuity withdrawals by individuals from IRSA accounts. By 1995 this impact on real GNP and real wages would be significant, further reducing the percentage of taxable payroll represented above as OASI cost.

SOLVING TODAY'S DEFICIT

My proposal also addresses the short-term financing crises facing the social security system. Undeniably, a short-term infusion of funds is needed to keep the system afloat, at least until my long-range plan has a chance to take effect. The Commission estimates a deficit of from $150 to $200 billion between now and 1989. They propose to raise $168 billion through a combination of tax increases and benefit cuts. Using the Commission's own numbers and assumptions, I have come up with a package of proposals and reforms that will yield $167 billion in additional revenues between now and 1989. Quite frankly, my proposals should actually yield more than this because of the favorable effect on employment of my proposed tax cut. With lower taxes and greater savings, the economy will grow faster than the Commission assumes, thus boosting the tax base and lowering benefit outflows.

INCLUDE ALL FEDERAL WORKERS

The first thing I propose is to include all Federal workers under social security—not just new ones, as the Commission has proposed—but all of them, beginning with all Members of Congress and their staffs. The social security problem is a national problem, and all of us ought to participate in solving the crisis.

My proposal would not affect the civil service retirement system in any way. Federal employees could continue to participate in civil service retirement much the same way employees in the private sector participate in their employer-sponsored retirement plans.

COLA DELAY

Second, I propose to delay for 3 months—from July to October—the social security cost-of-living adjustment. I do not agree that there should be a 6-month delay, as was proposed by the Commission. That is an unfair burden on our senior citizens. A 3-month delay would be much fairer, and it would help a great deal to solve the short-term deficit.

PRORATION OF COLAS

Third, cost-of-living increases should be prorated to reflect the month of retirement. The present system is unfair to the senior citizen who retires in, say, January—because the person who retires the following December now receives the same cost-of-living adjustment as the senior citizen who retired early in the year.

ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS

Fourth, I propose that the expenses of administering the social security system be counted against general revenues rather than the social security accounts. Payroll tax revenues should only be used to pay benefits, and should not go to pay administrative expenses.

UNCASHED CHECKS

Fifth, I propose we adopt the Commission's recommendations regarding crediting the social security system for all uncashed social security checks. Until I began my detailed study of the social security system, I was not aware that millions of dollars in social security checks are never cashed each year. I was astonished to learn that the money represented by these uncashed checks does not have to go back to the social security system—but instead may be used for other Government spending. My proposal would require that the money be credited to the social security system.

MILITARY BENEFITS

Sixth, I propose the social security fund also be credited for all military benefits the social security system pays out with no Government contribution.

REVENUE CALCULATIONS

The following table reflects the short-term revenue increase under my proposal:

Short-term revenue increase under Helms plan (1983-90)

| | Billions |
|--|-----------------|
| 1. Bring all Federal employees into the social security system..... | $61.4 |
| 2. Delay payment of COLA from July to October..... | 35.0 |
| 3. Prorate COLA to reflect month of retirement..... | 40.0 |
| 4. Charge administrative costs to general fund..... | 18.0 |
| 5. Credit uncashed social security checks to social security system..... | .5 |
| 6. Credit social security system for military benefits paid without a government contribution..... | 17.5 |
| Total..... | 172.4 |

PAYROLL TAX CUT

The revenue figure shown here, $172.4 billion, does not reflect the projected revenue loss as a result of repealing the 1985 payroll tax increase. Under present law, the combined employer-employee payroll tax rate, which is now 13.4 percent, is scheduled to increase to 14.3 percent by 1986 and 15.3 percent by 1990. The maximum payroll tax would become $6,263.40 in 1986 and $8,690.40 in 1990.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates the 1977 payroll tax increases cost 500,000 Americans their jobs. Higher payroll taxes would only exacerbate the unemployment crisis and contribute to further economic stagnation.

My proposed payroll tax cut is projected to reduce the social security system's revenue by only $5.4 billion by 1990. With this projection, my package of short-term proposals would result in a net increase in social security revenues of $167 billion, almost the same amount as the Commission proposes to bring in by raising taxes and cutting benefits.

I emphasize these projections are based on the same assumptions used by the Commission and their figures. Quite frankly, I believe my proposed tax cut will have a more favorable result than projected, and that between now and 1990 the social security system will be much better off under my short-term plan than under the Commission's proposals.

EQUITY REFORMS

Mr. President, along with proposals for solving the long-term and short-term funding problems facing the social security system, my bill also contains proposals for reforming social security in certain areas. I include these reform proposals because of the pressing need for Congress to address issues relating to women, the disabled, nonresident aliens, and older Americans with productive abilities, who wish to continue working past age 65.

EQUITY FOR WOMEN

Mr. President, clearly our present social security system treats women unfairly. The problems have become more acute as more women have entered the workforce. When the social security system was created, only 20 percent of women were in the workforce. Today that figure is roughly 60 percent.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform addressed a number of issues relating to women. They made several proposals that have merit that I have included in my bill. These proposals are as follows:

First, present law permits the continuation of benefits for surviving spouses who remarry after age 60. This would be extended to disabled surviving spouses aged 50 to 59, disabled divorced surviving spouses aged 50 to 59, and divorced surviving spouses aged 60 or over.

Second, spouse benefits for divorced spouses would be payable at age 62 or over, subject to the requirement that the divorce has lasted for a significant period, if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not they have been claimed, or if they have been suspended because of substantial employment.

Third, deferred surviving-spouse benefits would continue to be indexed as under present law, except that the indexing would be based on the increases in wages after the death of the worker instead of by the increases in the CPI, as under present law.

Fourth, the benefits rate for disabled widows and widowers aged 50 to 59 at disablement would be the same as that for nondisabled widower and widowers first claiming benefits at age 60—that is, 71½ percent of the primary insurance amount—instead of the lower rates under present law—gradually rising from 50 percent at age 50 to 71½ percent for disablement at age 60. Such change would not only be applicable to new cases, but would also be applicable to beneficiaries of this category who are on the rolls on the effective date of the provision.

Unfortunately, the Commission's proposals do not go far enough in insuring equal treatment for women. My bill contains additional protections.

Under present law, the method of calculating social security benefits creates a disincentive for a parent to remain at home with children. Such years are calculated as zero earning years in the determination of the person's social security benefits. Often a parent, usually the mother, needs to spend time at home during a child's early years of development. The Government should not discourage mothers from spending time at home with their children during the children's formative years.

My bill would allow a person to exclude from the calculation of his or her social security benefits each year spent at home with their child as long as the child is younger than 6 years old. Up to 6 years could be excluded, and this exclusion could be taken in addition to every individual's already guaranteed 5 low year exemption. During the years excluded, the parent could earn up to one-half the average wage of all social security covered workers each year.

I also propose extending additional equity to divorced spouses. Both members of a household should be considered to have made equal contributions to their family and thus retain equal property rights for the income in their family structure. This is not the case under social security today. My legislation would correct this situation by crediting each divorced spouse half the earned family income during the marriage for the purpose of determining social security retirement and disability benefits.

EQUITY FOR DISABLED

Mr. President, another part of my bill addresses serious problems involving the arbitrary cutoff of benefits to disabled citizens. Often disability payments, which provide life-sustaining funds for so many individuals, are terminated by an overzealous Social Security Administration before the beneficiary is actually interviewed. Administrative law judges have reversed roughly 70 percent of disability cutoff cases reviewed. This indicates the seriousness of the problem.

I would be the first to acknowledge that there has been much abuse of social security disability. But the movement to correct this situation must have guidelines and it must be fair. Therefore, I propose that Congress insure due process to every individual receiving disability benefits before any benefits can be cut off. My bill provides this. Each disability beneficiary would be entitled to a hearing before an administrative law judge before benefits could be cut. The Social Security Administration could not bring a case before a judge for determination unless they could show a change of circumstances or conditions affecting the individual, fraud, or mistake in the initial determination of disability.

My bill would leave the disability trust account untouched. It will remain in good shape, capable of paying benefits well into the future, if the remaining social security accounts would stop borrowing from it.

LIMIT ALIEN RECEIPTS

Another reform I propose would limit payment of social security benefits to nonresident aliens. The social security system pays out $80 million each month to individuals outside this country. Most of the people, 67 percent to be exact, who receive such funds are aliens. Many of them entered the United States as resident aliens during the 1950's when the social security payment premiums and quarter requirements were low qualified for social security, and then returned to their respective countries to live off social security benefits. In many cases these benefits provide them with a higher standard of living than they could have in the United States. These individuals often go home and adopt children, parents and grandparents or marry a much younger person to increase their benefit entitlement and insure the continuation of the U.S. support to their survivors. The payments these aliens receive from the United States almost always exceed their original contributions to the system. Consider this—more than 50 percent of the benefits paid overseas are survivor benefits. In the United States, only 30 percent of the benefits are paid to survivors.

We cannot continue to increase taxes on the American people in order to send social security benefits overseas. My bill strengthens the existing social security provision requiring aliens who leave the United States for a period of 6 months to forfeit social security benefits. The legislation provides that aliens can draw benefits only to the extent they have paid into the system, irrespective of their employers' contribution, plus the Treasury bond rate of interest on that amount. Nonresident aliens who are drawing social security benefits beyond their contribution to the system must be cut off.

EQUITY FOR OLDER WORKERS

And finally, Mr. President, I propose a reform of utmost importance. I propose elimination of the earnings limit on retired persons.

A person's age does not necessarily determine his or her physical or mental condition. Our social security system often forces people into retirement at age 65 no matter what their abilities. A person who chooses to work past age 65 is penalized by loss of retirement benefits—retirement benefits they worked for all their lives. The loss amounts to 50 cents on the dollar, which creates a tremendous disincentive for people 65 and older to continue to work. It means an effective increase in the marginal tax rate for that worker of greater than 50 percent.

No one should be discouraged from continuing to fulfill their life through work. Therefore, I propose we remove this penalty by repealing the earning limit for social security recipients 65 and older. Older Americans ought to be able to work if they want to without financial penalty.

Mr. President, the retirement security of American workers is as important to the future of this country as any issue Congress will deal with this year. Sooner or later, a plan such as I have proposed will have to be adopted. It may not happen this year, or even next. Eventually, the politicians will no longer be able to paper over the enormous deficit. As fewer and fewer workers support more and more retirees, Members of Congress will be unable to duck the long-term funding problems. All else having failed, they will be obliged to turn to common-sense.

I urge my colleagues to study my proposal closely, and to support it.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BAKER, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be an additional 5 minutes debate on the social security bill before the provisions of the unanimous-consent agreement to return to the jobs bill, under the same terms and conditions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished majority leader for his action. I want to respond briefly to the Senator from North Carolina and then take the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut.

I first want to say that we appreciated very much the Senator from North Carolina taking the time to come before the Finance Committee to testify.

Senator HELMS took the courageous position of offering his own comprehensive reform bill which aimed at reducing the tax burden and planning for private retirement.

As he pointed out in his statement on the floor, the Senator from Kansas thinks the bill which the Senate Finance Committee reported, is an improvement on the Commission's recommendations. There were incorporated in that bill about 11 of the provisions the Senator from North Carolina had in his comprehensive package. Senator HELMS addresses head-on the major retirement income policy questions which have been ignored for a long time. Obviously, he has used the current funding crisis as much more than an opportunity for patching up the financing problem. We hope we made some changes in the right direction in our committee to avoid that characterization. Certainly the distinguished Senator from North Carolina was willing to face the challenge to take a fresh approach to social security reform.

As I have indicated, a number of the Senator's provisions mirror suggestions made by the National Commission, with the addition of changes in the earnings test, and in the women's equity area. I believe, as the Senator indicated, that the committee bill goes part way in addressing some of the Senator's major concerns.

Again, I appreciate the Senator's input into the process.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his comments. I want to reiterate what I said at the outset. I have great admiration for his truly remarkable job in bringing forth the legislation before us. As he indicated, he very graciously welcomed me to appear before his committee. Eleven out of 20 of our proposals, I believe, are incorporated in this legislation.

I was telling a group earlier this afternoon, a group of North Carolinians, that I believe in incremental success; you go a step at a time, do the best you can. I believe the Senator from Kansas believes in the same philosophy. He certainly has demonstrated that in the way he has handled various pieces of legislation.

I will not ask for a vote on this amendment, but I did want to present it for the consideration of the Senate and for the people of this country for their future assessment. Maybe as we move down the road step by step we can bring about, in the end, a system that will be meaningful and certainly beneficial to the people.

I again thank the Senator for his comments.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the distinguished Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will be temporarily set aside and the Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 81

Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Dodd) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 81.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place add the following:

() Sections 201(e), 1817(d), and 1841(d) of the Social Security Act are repealed.

(X) The next to last sentence of section 201(c) of such Act is amended by striking out "Such report shall also include" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Such report shall include an actuarial opinion by the Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration certifying that the techniques and methodologies used are generally accepted within the actuarial profession, a statement of key economic and demographic assumptions underlying projected trust fund revenues and outlays, and shall also include".

() Section 1817(b) of such Act is amended by inserting immediately before the last sentence the following new sentence: "Such report shall also include an actuarial opinion by the Chief Actuarial Officer of the Health Care Financing Administration certifying that the techniques and methodologies used are generally accepted with the actuarial profession, and a statement of key economic and demographic assumptions underlying projected trust fund revenues and outlays."

() Section 1841(b) of such Act is amended by inserting before the last sentence the following new sentence: "Such report shall also include an actuarial opinion by the Chief Actuarial Officer of the Health Care Financing Administration certifying that the techniques and methodologies used are generally accepted within the actuarial profession, and a statement of key economic and demographic assumptions underlying projected trust fund revenues and outlays."

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, very briefly, this amendment would codify an already existing practice by requiring the inclusion of an actuarial opinion in the OASDI and HI trustees' annual reports. This amendment would also require the inclusion in those reports of the economic and demographic assumptions underlying the conclusions in those reports.

The art of economic and actuarial forecasting is by no means perfect and I do not pretend that passage of this legislation would enable us to predict the future with any more certainty than we can now. However, by strengthening the process under which such forecasting and analysis is generated, we can create a sounder basis for future social security planning and administration.

For these reasons, I urge that this amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Connecticut will yield, time has expired.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator may speak for an additional 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. In 1977, for example, Congress relied on economic and actuarial forecasts which led to conclusions on social security which were far more optimistic than the reality that followed. Back then, we were told that the 1977 social security amendments would leave the system sound well into the 21st century.

This amendment will not guarantee that that will not happen again. But it will write into law a step which is essential to minimizing the likelihood of such an occurrence.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I will say that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana finds this amendment acceptable to him and, as ranking minority member on the floor, I believe it is a good amendment that we would be delighted to accept.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we have reviewed this amendment carefully and we have had an opportunity to discuss the amendment, with the Senator and his staff. We have made some slight modification which was satisfactory. We have no objection to the amendment in its present form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 81) was agreed to.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The Senate continued with the consideration of H.R. 1900.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 1900.

The pending question is the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of Senators, we are back on the social security bill. It is my hope that we can dispose of at least one more substantial amendment to that bill today.

I am advised by the manager of the bill, the chairman of the Finance Committee, that there may be one more rollcall vote today. I expect that the Senate will be on this measure for perhaps an hour, and longer, if possible.

Mr. President, it is my hope—and I hope that other Senators will cooperate in this—that we can finish this bill tomorrow, at least through third reading. That may be an ambitious undertaking, but I think it is important that we try to do that.

I also understand that, for a variety of reasons, it might be desirable to have the vote on final passage on Monday instead of Friday. If we get all these amendments out of the way tomorrow, at least the staff of the Finance Committee, majority and minority, can prepare for the conference; because then they will know the shape of the bill, they will know that no more amendments will be offered, and they can get most of the detail work out of the way.

I have not fixed in my mind a time to ask for final passage on Monday. I will be flexible on that point, because I know Senators will have travel arrangements to complete, to return to the city after the weekend.

Mr. President, I hope we can have a good, active day tomorrow, complete all the amendments, if possible; and if that is not possible, as many as possible. In any event, it is almost certain that we will have rollcall votes tomorrow on these amendments, and Senators should expect that there will be a number of rollcall votes tomorrow.

Once again, I express the hope that we can get to third reading and then have final passage of the social security bill on Monday.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, so far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned, it is all right to complete our action and pass the bill tomorrow.

I must alert the distinguished majority leader—who has done a great job under adverse circumstances in moving the Senate along—to the fact that there is always a possibility that we could run into a snag. This might occur, for example, if we have a significant amendment and the sponsors lose by a single vote and they look at the absentees and see that if all the absentees had been present they would have won. The Senator can understand how men dedicated to what they are doing will not give up that easily. All they have to do is stall until Monday and do whatever they deem is necessary in order to prevail in the matter.

The distinguished majority leader has done a great job, and we want to continue to have the benefit of his efforts to bring people together, and maybe we can pass the bill on Friday.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, no one in this Chamber has a higher regard for the Senator from Louisiana than I do. I welcome his remarks, and I am grateful for them. I offer whatever services I am capable of and have remaining, to try to get this matter to third reading.

Of course, the Senator is correct. It may not be possible to get to third reading on Friday, and I recognize that. If we can get to third reading on this bill on Friday, and final passage on Monday, and get to conference, we will have only two things remaining before we go out. Those are the conference report on the jobs bill and the conference report on social security. We have all next week to do that.

What it really boils down to is that if we can get to the conference on Monday, we might be out of here on Wednesday, and that would be a result much to be wished for, in my judgment.

Mr. President, does the minority leader seek the floor?

Mr. BYRD. I seek to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. BAKER. I yield to the minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there are some reports circulating that I want the rollcall vote on final passage put over until Monday. We had some discussion about it which possibly led to that conclusion.

My idea was that if we could finish the bill tomorrow and get it to third reading, there would be some absentees, undoubtedly, on both sides of the aisle, and all Senators should be put on notice as to when exactly the final vote will occur, so that they could plan to be here.

That was my only reason for suggesting that the final vote be on Monday. I am not wedded to that idea. If all Senators are ready to have the final vote tomorrow, if we reach the final vote in the normal course of things, it would be satisfactory to me to have the final vote tomorrow.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it would suit me to have final passage tomorrow.

I suppose the best way to go, then, is just to play it by ear.

I withdraw any suggestion that we would wait until Monday to have final passage, and I suggest, instead, that we do the best we can tomorrow, Friday, that we get to final passage if we can, or that we get to third reading if we can, or get as far as we can.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Let me first yield to the Senator from Louisiana and then I will yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the thought occurs to the Senator from Louisiana that we might be able to achieve the majority leader's objective if between the majority leader and the minority leader and others here we can arrange some live pairs for some absent Senators. I personally am willing to pair with anyone who is absent, provided those on the other side of an issue are doing likewise.

It may be in order to get this job done that we could accommodate one another by pairing some of our absentees who incidentally have been coming to me and urging that we postpone the matter so they can be here.

Every Senator has a different schedule, and I have avoided trying to promise Senators that I was going to hold this matter up for them because when you try to accommodate one Senator who cannot be here Friday afternoon, the next Senator cannot be here Monday, and another Senator cannot be here Tuesday, and so it goes. So, I have not been promising anyone.

If it can be done, I would like to accommodate Senators who very much want to vote and who may be necessarily absent on that occasion.

Maybe the majority leader can help me work it out so I can try to find some pairs over here and give one myself, and maybe he could find someone on the other side to help pair.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I also will give a pair, I say to my friend from Louisiana.

I think his suggestion is an excellent one. I shall work with him and the minority leader to see if that will expedite the passage of the measure.

Mr. President, I yield now to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the majority leader be good enough to clarify what was a little confusing to the Senator from Ohio? I understood the other day that he had indicated that if we were able to bring the social security matter and the jobs bill to a conclusion by the end of this week the majority leader would look very favorably upon sending all of us out to meet with our constituents and bringing us back only for the purpose of acting on the conference report when it was ready to be acted upon.

Mr. BAKER. I think we are saying about the same thing.

Mr. President, if we finish these bills, and I think we are going to, or I hope we are going to, the only thing remaining are the conference reports. It may be that Senators do not need to be here while those conference reports are in progress except the conferees. That is a matter we should examine when we get closer to the event.

I guess what I should say to the Senator is somewhat what I have already said to the minority leader and that is that other than the conference reports I have no other must legislation to deal with between now and the time we go out for the Easter recess.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I appreciate the comments of the majority leader.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, will be Senator yield?

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. May I yield first to the Senator from South Dakota and then to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I suggest that we work late tonight and get final passage tomorrow and come back Wednesday or Thursday for 1 day and do the conference reports and then those of us who go home could stay at home until Wednesday and make just one trip back to the city.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator. It is not a bad idea. I sort of like it. But I think it also points up one other fact and that was the observation made by the Senator from Louisiana, that everyone has his own schedule. I admire and respect that, and I assure the Senator from South Dakota that I will explore that possibility, trying to arrive at the most convenient arrangement for the Senate in that respect.

I must say it is sort of like my wife finding things on the church calendar. We have not earned this money yet. We have not passed this bill yet. We have to do that before we have the high-class problem of deciding how we arrange the business while we wait for the conference report.

I now yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, recognizing the demands on everyone, everyone wishes to leave sometime late tomorrow. Could we not begin at 9 instead of 10? It seems to me if we start early we will finish early and accommodate Senators who have planes to catch.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President will the majority leader yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the reason is no one will show up at 9. We were here this morning at 9:30 and could not find anyone to do business with.

What we might do is lay down an amendment that we could take up. We could have something pending and have everyone on notice for a vote.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senate were to schedule a vote after 9 I guarantee there will be Senators here.

Mr. DOLE. I would be happy to start at 9. I think that is about the time I will get back from Savannah.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator for his suggestion. Let me explore that as well if I may.

Mr. President, there is time for one more vote. I hope we can get on with it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest that we do not have that many amendments and there are a number of them that we hope we can accommodate Senators on. There is one long amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana that may be somewhat troublesome, and we have the Presiding Officer who has an amendment which we can agree upon.

I understand now that the Senator from Idaho has an amendment which we will have a rollcall vote on and hopefully dispose of it.

Is that correct?

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, the Senator is correct.

However, the amendment I shall propose, and I tell the chairman it is not on withholding on savings, so he can sigh relief there, is not the amendment that the distinguished chairman is speaking of. It is the amendment that affects the COLA stabilizer, and it is an amendment that I think does have considerable merit. I wish to offer that amendment at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must announce that an amendment of the Senator from New Jersey is pending.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Idaho.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 82

(Purpose: To provide that the cost-of-living-adjustment stabilizer shall apply to adjustments made in 1983 and thereafter.)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes unprinted amendment numbered 82.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 90, line 23, strike out "1988" and insert in lieu thereof "1983".

On page 94, line 19, strike out "1988" and insert in lieu thereof "1983".

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, the amendment I offer is to change the effective date of the so-called stabilizer from January 1, 1988 to January 1, 1983.

In the bill that is currently being considered by the Senate today, there is a provision which will automatically adjust the cost-of-living increases when the trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent, effective in 1983. This provision was also one of the recommendations made by the President's Commission on Social Security Reform.

Specifically, beginning in 1983, if the OASDI trust fund ratio—reserves as a percentage of outgo—as of the beginning of the year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, catchup payments would be made during the following year, but only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32 percent. Catchup payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for any COLA losses that result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices.

My amendment would not apply to the COLA for the supplemental security income (SSI) program because those senior citizens who are receiving SSI benefits are truly the senior citizens who are most in need. I believe that we should make every effort to protect those seniors who are at that income level. So, they would be held harmless.

There are several reasons why I believe we should adopt this amendment. First, and foremost, if the Commission thought that the COLA stabilizer was a good idea for 1988, why not implement the COLA stabilizer in 1983 and help bring the outflow and the income to the social security trust funds back in balance.

Second, and perhaps more importantly, I believe we should make every effort to insure the wage earners in our economy that the retirees will not receive a larger cost-of-living adjustment in their retirement benefits than the wage earners are getting in their paychecks, if the OASDI trust fund is insolvent.

Mr. President, keeping the COLA increase indexed to the CPI until 1988, in my opinion, strikes at the very issue of fairness. Flaws in the CPI create an issue of fairness when it comes to evaluating the automatic Federal COLA. Erosion in the value of entitlement benefits from inflation is rightly decried by our Government—even though the Government is the primary reason we have inflation. However, it is not fair to overcompensate recipients for inflation under the inflation protection rationale for which COLA's were designed.

Virtually all experts are in agreement that the CPI has not been an accurate gage of inflation in recent years. It has overstated increases in the cost of living for people who already own their homes, who act rationally to conserve energy when energy prices rise, and who pay attention to price swings in the supermarket in choosing what to buy week-to-week.

My amendment would simply bring the wage earners—those paying for social security retirement benefits at the current time—and the retiree—those receiving social security benefits—in line with one another as long as the OASDI trust fund is in imbalance.

Continuing to compensate recipients of Federal entitlements more generously for inflation than the average American is a striking inequity in the present indexing practices in the Federal Government. The full CPI entitlement COLA is not only responsible for recent budget uncontrollability and destabilization of the OASDI trust fund.

More basically, it is unfair to the taxpayers, whose incomes are not fully insulated against increases in the CPI.

I might just mention at this point, Mr. President, that recently when I was visiting my home State of Idaho, I sat down and met with the manager of a small wholesale fuel jobbing company where they employ 80 people in the Boise Valley.

The employees of that company voted voluntarily to take a 10-percent cut in pay, from the president of the company, the general manager, on down to the cleanup crew in order to avoid having any layoffs at the firm.

I believe that to ask those people to continue to have to pay for COLA's based on the CPI instead of the wage index strikes at the question of equity. I think the Commission recognized that, the committee recognized that, and I praise the committee for recognizing it. But we should implement the provision now instead of 1988.

I think we will find that our constituents will support us if we do what is right for the American economy and what is right for the social security fund. I hope we will accept this amendment.

The investigation of why benefit growth has exceeded wage growth since 1977 has focused on poor productivity performance and the recession. Yet, there were 5 million more Americans employed at the end of 1982 than at the end of 1977, and productivity growth has been falling for more than a decade.

The most important reason for the current short-term solvency problem in social security is the different indexing practices followed by the Government and the private sector in the face of rapid inflation from 1978-81.

When automatic indexing was implemented for social security, the belief was that it would hold down benefit growth. Ad hoc benefit increases for social security from 1968 through 1972 were substantially greater than increases in the CPI. Unfortunately, when that legislation for a full automatic COLA passed in 1972, nobody was predicting double-digit increases in the CPI.

The primary reason the 1977 reform for social security failed under conditions of rapid inflation was because social security COLA's are fixed at the full increase in the CPI, whereas indexation of wages in the private sector is considerably less than 100 percent of the CPI. As represented by data on automatic COLA's in major collective bargaining agreements, the degree of private sector indexation varies over time between 50 percent and 70 percent of increases in the CPI. On average, automatic COLA's in the private sector recover 60 percent of increases in the CPI.

It is this difference in indexing, along with low productivity growth and recession, that explains the recent phenomenon of benefit growth outpacing wage growth noted by social security actuaries.

The full CPI COLA is also the primary reason why growth in other entitlement benefits created a situation of budget uncontrollability— from 1978 through 1982.

Compensating recipients of Federal entitlements more generously for inflation than the average American is a striking inequity in the present indexing practices of the Federal Government. The full CPI entitlement COLA is not only responsible for recent budget uncontrollability and destabilization of the OASDI trust fund. More basically, it is unfair to the taxpayers whose incomes are not fully insulated against increases in the CPI.

I want to make clear that the amendment I am now offering does not compensate the wage earners for the taxes they are paying and have paid for overcompensating the retirees in the last few years. My amendment simply guards against overcompensating the retirees in the future, beginning in 1983, should the OASDI trust fund balance not be at a sufficiently solvent level.

In other words, if it is sufficiently solvent it would not be triggered, but if it is not sufficiently solvent it would be triggered.

In addition, my amendment also has a provision to protect the retirees in the event that the trust fund reserves reach a 32-percent level, the retirees will get compensated for their previously reduced benefits as long as the trust fund reserves remain at 32 percent.

The general effect of my amendment will be to reduce the COLA's in the near term to about the increases that wage earners will be having their paychecks increased while the trust fund balance is building up. Then, over the longer term senior citizens will be getting the full COLA as long as the trust fund reserves are at 32 percent—even though I personally believe we should review this as a matter of equity in the future.

Now, many of you might think that this amendment is somehow unfair to the senior citizens—although I fail to see why. Nevertheless, I do want to address this popular misconception, which I believe is based on the common perception that the economic status of the elderly is based on conditions that prevailed in 1959, not those in 1982.

They do have time to organize into effective political blocks and to finance organizations which protect and enhance what has become their major source of retirement income—Federal transfer payments. One-third of the Federal budget is now devoted to benefit payments for the elderly.

In 1959, 35 percent of America's elderly were below the poverty threshold. The image of elderly widows subsisting on canned dog food was a national disgrace. Amendments to the social security system which increased benefits across the board had been sporadic. No benefit increases were forthcoming in the first 10 years of the system. In 1950, benefits were increased 77 percent, but this barely compensated for CPI inflation between 1940 and 1950. Further benefit hikes of 12½, 13, and 7 percent INF 1952, 1954, and 1959, respectively did outpace inflation during the 1950's. Yet the incidence of poverty among the population aged 65 and over was still 13 percent greater than among the general population at the start of the 1960's, and the next general benefit increase was not enacted until 1965. Even that amendment did not match the rise in inflation during the intervening 6-year period.

During the next decade, the economic status of the elderly changed dramatically. In 1965, medicare was established, and between 1968 and 1974, five double-digit increases in social security benefits were legislated by Congress. These five benefit increases in total were 22 percent greater than inflation during that period. Along with the development of several in-kind benefits programs for the elderly legislated in the 1970's, automatic indexing to the CPI established annual benefit increases for OASDI payments starting in 1975. In the past 5 years, those COLA's have further increased social security benefits by almost 50 percent.

The trend of entitlement growth for the elderly and increases in payroll taxes to finance part of this benefit liberalization have led to a progressive redistribution of income from young to old on a per capita basis. One effect of this redistribution policy has been a reversal in the incidence of poverty between the young and old.

Clearly, there are a variety of forces at work in the changing incidence of poverty. The most dramatic change is not the reversal of incidence between generations, but the absolute decline in poverty among all age groups since 1959. Still, a growing lack of intergenerational equity in programs to relieve poverty appears to characterize the dynamics of current entitlement laws.

An element of fairness in a permanent program like social security should be some degree of equity in benefits across generations. Overtaxing the son to pay the father violates equity in the social compact between generations that is really at the heart and soul of social security.

It appears to me that it is foolish for Congress to allow a system to continue where the wage earner is not keeping up with the recipient of benefits because the formula is out of balance. That system allows for a division to grow among the generations in America. There is absolutely no reason for Congress to stand idly by and not do something about the fact that the younger generation will start resenting the percentage of the payroll tax they must pay to support the older generation.

It is unfair to both generations and it is not good for the future of the country.

The tax rates and tax payments for social security have grown tremendously over the years. And, most of the tax increases have come from increasing the maximum amount of income taxed, not increasing the tax rate. On an after tax basis, the often-noted inequity between recent benefit growth and wage increases is even greater than before taxes.

It is clear that today's retiree can expect a much better deal from social security than a person 37 years old now paying for that person's benefits. Indeed, today's 65-year-old will be getting a 200 percent better deal than today's 37-year-old, and a 225 percent better deal than a 1982 college graduate just entering the work force.

My amendment makes a slight attempt in trying to adjust the inequities in the current system and I urge my colleagues to join me in the amendment.

I hope that the committee and the Members of the Senate will give this careful consideration before rejecting it out of hand. I think the chairman understands this as well as anybody in the U.S. Senate. The problem is that we have been on a track where if you chart the growth of the payments to the recipient we see that they have had increases of up to 227 percent in the last 10 years while the wage index has only gone up 121 percent and it has the entire system out of balance.

I might say again there would be no reduction in any benefits that anybody is now receiving, only a difference in the formula, if the total of the trust fund balance is below 20 percent.

I thank the chairman for his consideration.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the discussion of the Senator from Idaho. I do not want to shut off debate, but the Senator from Kansas is going to have to leave here very quickly.

I would just say we had a similar amendment offered in the committee which was defeated by a vote of 5 to 11. I do not quarrel with anything the Senator from Idaho has said. However, by making the COLA stabilizer in the committee bill effective in 1984 rather than 1988, which was recommended by the National Commission, it might be viewed as a change that would violate the intent of the compromise.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, may we have order so we may hear the chairman?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point is well taken. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. DOLE. The National Commission consensus package included a provision which is in the committee bill that would allow indexing by the lower of the increase in wages or prices if trust fund reserves fall below 20 percent. Catch-up payments would be provided when reserves rise above 32 percent. The provision is effective in 1988.

What the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Idaho would do would be to modify the effective date of the provision. In so doing, the amendment would alter an essential feature of the consensus package.

On that basis—it is not that the Senator from Kansas does not believe the amendment does not have merit—it would seem to me to be contrary to the provisions in the Commission report. For that reason, I would have to oppose the amendment.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Will the Senator from Kansas yield?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would only raise one point in support of the amendment. I am going to vote for it. I think what is good in 1988 ought to be even better now.

But will the Senator from Kansas admit that one of the really uncertain things about the package—and perhaps the only uncertain thing about the package—is whether or not we will get by the next 2 or 3 years?

Mr. DOLE. That is correct.

Mr. GRASSLEY. This seems to me as though it would add a little more soundness to the system. If we have a revitalization in the economy, as we hope we will, then there is no doubt about getting by the next 2 or 3 years. But there is still some doubt whether or not we will have the improvement in the economy that we all hope for. To the extent which there is that doubt, then the amendment by the Senator from Idaho will make more certain that social security will remain solvent over the next 2 or 3 years. If we can get by those years which are probably the most questionable, we can answer with certainty that solvency is no longer doubtful for the short term.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me say that we have, in addition to this proposal, the so-called stabilizer, we did adopt in the committee the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, Senator LONG. That provision provides for a COLA "fail-safe" mechanism. In addition, we have the "normalization" amendment. Given each of these provisions, we believe—again, based on the advice of actuarial experts—that we are going to survive those years. As I understand it, it is going to be close, although some would say we are going to have a big surplus.

Mr. President, I would like to come to a vote on this.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if the chairman would yield, I would say one more thing. I thank the Senator from Iowa for bringing that point up. The effect of this amendment would be that we would probably be on the wage index immediately which is nothing more than you are asking of wage earners. I will bet the farm on the fact that if we would adopt an amendment like this we will restore the long-term capital markets in this country and help get people back to work in our respective States. It will not in any way affect those people on SSI benefits. They are held harmless in the amendment. So the neediest and the poorest of the senior citizen recipients are protected, as I and everyone in this Chamber think they should be.

What it would do is give the confidence to the country that the Congress really is doing the right thing. It will not take any present benefits away from any recipient. They would still get an increase, but it would not be quite as much of an increase as they would have otherwise received.

I do not want to have any Member misunderstand that. I think the amendment would reduce the pressure for another tax increase on the social security system and will reduce the necessity of continually increasing the payroll taxes at the present time. I think it is an amendment the Senate would do well to adopt and accept. If the conference somehow came back and said, "OK, we will go to 1986," that would be some help instead of 1988. I would urge the committee to take this amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me say in conclusion that I think I started off in our Commission deliberations about where the Senator from Idaho is now. I argued for 1985 rather than 1988. But we could not reach any consensus. Finally, along with about 15 or 20 other items, we had to make a judgment; 1988 may not be early enough—for those of us who believe it should be earlier—but that is the earliest date we could have. I do not quarrel with anything the Senator said, but I would hope that the amendment would not be adopted.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. NICKLES) be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MATHIAS. Vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS). The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMBERS), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART), and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 25, nays 72, as follows:

So the Symms amendment (UP No. 82) was rejected.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I indicated earlier, I hoped that we could get one more amendment out of the way, one rollcall vote. We have done that, and there will be no more rollcall votes today. The Senate will come in at 10 tomorrow. We anticipate early votes tomorrow. Senators should anticipate that by 10:30, perhaps, we will have an opportunity to vote on another amendment. I reiterate, I would like to see us get as far as we can tomorrow, perhaps even to third reading, maybe final passage but, anyway, to do the best we can.

Tomorrow will be an active day. There will be a number of votes, I predict, and I would urge Senators to be here and to participate, as I am sure they will.

Now, Mr. President, could I inquire of the distinguished manager of the bill if there is anything further that can be done this evening because, otherwise, I intend to make a provision for a brief period for the transaction of routine morning business and then we have a number of special orders that had been anticipated for this morning that I am going to provide time for now if there is no objection. Could I inquire of the manager if he is prepared to go off the bill?

Mr. HEINZ. If the leader will yield, I am advised that there are two amendments. I am further advised that they are not controversial and that no rollcall votes would be required on them.

Mr. BAKER. Very well. Does the manager want to go forward with them at this time?

Mr. HEINZ. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? He used the term special orders. Does that mean special orders as a part of the bill?

Mr. BAKER. No, no, Mr. President. May I say that some Senators had requested time this morning to speak on an unrelated subject, and I had asked them to forebear until the end of the day to do that instead of the beginning.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes; I yield to the distinguished ranking minority member of the Finance Committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as cosponsors to my amendment No. 512: Messrs. DODD and FORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question recurs on the Bradley amendment.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, is there another amendment that the Senator wishes to take up?

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. Leader, we have a Kassebaum amendment and a Nickles amendment.

Mr. BAKER. Both of which will be accepted, do I understand, or disposed of by voice vote?

Mr. HEINZ. Let me say to the majority leader that I know of at least one and possibly two amendments that we can take up now. I am certain we can take up and pass the Kassebaum amendment without a record vote. If, on the basis of further discussion, it appears we cannot take up the Nickles amendment and pass it without a recorded vote, I would not proceed to do so.

Mr. BAKER. Very well. But the Senator is prepared now to proceed to the Kassebaum amendment?

Mr. HEINZ. Yes, Mr. Leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Bradley amendment be laid aside temporarily and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Kassebaum amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 83

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania. Mr. President, I send to the desk my amendment to H.R. 1900 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mrs. KASSEBAUM), for herself and Mr. HATFIELD, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 83.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 96, line 18, delete "2009" and insert in lieu thereof "1995".

On page 96, line 22, delete "1/48" and insert in lieu thereof "5/72".

On page 96, line 24, delete "2008" and insert in lieu thereof "1994".

On page 97, delete lines 1 through 3 and insert the following:

(c)(1) Paragraph (2)(A) of section 202(w) of such ACT is amended by striking out "and prior to the month in which such individual attained age 72".

(c)(2) Paragraph (3) of section 202(w) is amended by striking out the material that follows the semicolon.

On page 97, line 4, delete "(2)" and insert in lieu thereof "(3)".

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering has been agreed to by the chairman of the Finance Committee, and I appreciate being able to bring it up at this time and getting it taken care of. It is designed to enhance the work incentives incorporated into S. 1 by coordinating an increase in the delayed retirement credit with the phaseout of the outside earnings limitation.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, the senior Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), has been a strong advocate of addressing the outside earnings limitation issue, and I salute him for these efforts.

S. 1 would gradually increase the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent per year over the period between 1990 and 2010. My amendment would accelerate this increase so that the 8 percent annual credit would take effect in 1995, the year in which the limit on outside earnings would be totally lifted. In addition, this amendment would permit an individual to receive the delayed retirement credit for every month after age 65 in which receipt of benefits is deferred. At this time, the delayed retirement credit is not made available for benefits deferred after age 72. The Office of the Social Security Actuary has estimated that adoption of this amendment would result in negligible additional cost to the package.

Currently, a worker who does not receive social security benefits until after age 65 is eligible for a delayed retirement credit. The benefit amount is increased for each month after age 65 and prior to age 72 during which benefits are not received. This increase occurs at a rate of 3 percent each year. Although current law rewards delayed retirement, the 3-percent credit is inadequate from an actuarial standpoint. The actuarially fair level is 8 percent, which would be attained by the year 2010 under the measure reported by the Finance Committee.

The current Social Security Act also provides for a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 earned over certain exempt amounts by beneficiaries under the age 70. This year, the annual exempt amount of earned income is $6,600 for individuals age 65 and older. The outside earnings limitation, which has long been criticized as a disincentive for longer work lives, would be phased out between 1990 and 1994 under S. 1. For individuals age 65 and older, the exempt amount would be increased by $3,000 per year beginning in 1990. In 1995, the earnings limitation would be completely eliminated.

The purpose of my amendment is to have these two reforms work in tandem. Consider the situation of an individual reaching age 65 in 1995. He or she will have the option of beginning to receive full social security benefits regardless of the amount of earned income expected in that year. By delaying receipt of benefits for 1 year, the potential recipient would be eligible for a delayed retirement credit of 4½ percent. Under my amendment, the choice would be between immediate receipt of benefits or delayed retirement with an 8 percent credit.

In my view, the prospect of receiving the actuarially fair 8 percent credit offers a much more compelling case for delaying receipt of benefits. This is particularly true when the benefit taxation features of S. 1 are taken into consideration. The decision to delay retirement would be a form of savings for the older worker, with the 8 percent credit representing interest on the deferred social security income. In many cases, while earning interest on their deferred social security check, they will be able at the same time to defer receipt of their taxable social security income until they are fully retired and in a lower tax bracket.

Provision of my amendment which remove the upper age limit on provision of the delayed retirement credit simply allow the repeal of the outside earnings limit and the increased delayed retirement credit to continue working together for all age groups. Although relative few individuals would probably defer receipt of benefits after age 70 or 72, those who do consider such an option should be able to take advantage of the same incentives provided to others who continue work after age 65.

The features of S. 1 described above, coupled with provisions of the bill which gradually increase the normal retirement age beginning at the turn of the century, demonstrate considerable congressional support for extending work lives. I commend Senator DOLE and other members of the Senate Finance Committee for their initiative in this area, which I feel is an extremely positive emphasis. Older workers do make significant contributions to our society. As life expectancies increase and the number of younger workers decline, we will be placing increasing reliance on the skills and experience of our older population. In addition to the sense of well-being which accompanies continued productivity on the part of older workers, prolonged work lives also boost the economy as a whole through the availability of additional tax revenues.

Obviously, it is difficult to pinpoint the total effect of these incentives on work behavior. However, a study conducted by the Urban Institute in 1978, entitled "The Aging of America: A Portrait of the Elderly in 1990," suggests that the results will be positive. This study assumed several changes in the social security benefit structure, including an increase from 3 to 5 percent in the delayed retirement credit and a liberalization of the outside earning limit. The study concluded that costs and tax rates of the social security program would be lower than would otherwise be the case. Moreover, projected income levels of the elderly would increase by 12 to 38 percent due to increased work effort. The report notes:

The major conclusion of this study is that it may be possible to reduce the tax burden on the working population and increase the income going to the elderly, through changes in the retirement incentive structure to delay retirement.

Believing that we should actively encourage individuals to work longer, I am attempting today to bring better coordination to the efforts already underway in this area. This amendment is supported by the American Association of Retired Persons—a group long committed to eliminating work disincentives to older persons—and I urge its adoption by the Senate.

I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for yielding to me.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I have examined the Kassebaum amendment, and I compliment the Senator from Kansas on offering it. It is indeed an improvement on what is in the Senate bill. It will accelerate the delayed retirement credit by a considerable amount.

It is also my understanding, after checking with the actuaries, that it is revenue neutral. Anything we can do to give people a worthwhile incentive to continue their active working career is an incentive.

On this side, we are happy to accept the amendment. Perhaps the minority manager would concur in so doing. I know of no objection to this amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I wish to reinforce the statements of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

This is an improvement to the proposal. It is attractive, and it approaches that happy condition called pareto optimality, where everyone gains and no one loses. Only the Senator from Kansas can think of things like that. It continues to amaze and delight us and adds to the proceedings in this body.

Mrs. KASSEBAUM. I say to the Senator from New York that I appreciate his very kind remarks. I had a lot of help in thinking of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the amendment is acceptable to this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 83) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DENTON). The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Bradley amendment be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. HEINZ. For what purpose shall it be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. SYMMS. For the purpose of laying down an amendment that we can work on in the morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAWKINS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 84

(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 525.)

(Purpose: To provide that no social security cost-of-living adjustments be made in 1983 and 1984)

Mr. SYMMS. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 84.

AMENDMENT NO. 502

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

1-YEAR FREEZE ON COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS

SEC. . Section 215(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, no increase shall be made under paragraph (2) in any benefit amount, primary insurance amount, or amount of monthly benefits based on any primary insurance amount for any cost-of-living computation quarter occurring during calendar year 1983.

"(B) For purposes of determining the extent to which the Consumer Price-Index for the base quarter occurring in 1984 exceeds such index for the most recent prior cost-of-living computation quarter, the base quarter occurring in 1983 shall be treated as the most recent prior cost-of-living computation quarter."

Mr. SYMMS. Madam President, the amendment I propose tonight and will discuss tomorrow for those Senators who are in their office would move the COLA for the next social security COLA for 1 year, a 1-year COLA freeze, to put the social security recipients on the same basis that we are putting retired military, veterans, and civil service pensioners, and I think it is only fair and equitable. So it would change the COLA 1 year. Instead of December 1983 it would be moved over to the same time commensurate with what is proposed by the administration with respect to those other people.

Mr. BAKER. Madam President, I understand that this is the amendment that we will take up tomorrow and that Members do not wish to debate it further tonight.

I gather from the acknowledgement of the manager and the distinguished minority manager that that is the case.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, if the majority leader will yield, that is correct.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume consideration of the pending business, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the distinguished Senator from Idaho is prepared to offer an amendment. I am pleased to yield the floor for that purpose.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee.

AMENDMENT NO. 525

(Purpose: To provide that no social security cost-of-living adjustments be made in 1983 and 1984)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I believe the amendment is pending; is that not correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SYMMS. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; they have not.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I bring up this amendment that is pending at the desk which would in effect freeze the social security COLA that is scheduled in the bill for the upcoming year. It would not tamper with the COLA's for those people who are in the neediest of positions—the SSI beneficiaries. The neediest in our society would be held harmless by this amendment.

I am not going to belabor the point this morning, Mr. President, because yesterday during the discussion of my amendment to move the effective date of COLA stabilizer I spoke at great length on the issue of the cost-of-living adjustment.

Nevertheless, I want to make a few points about this amendment. I think that the principal underlying reason for Members to support this amendment is one of fairness and equity.

One of the great founders of this country, Thomas Jefferson, spent his political career making sure that everyone understood that when we did pass laws that we tried to treat everybody in our society fairly and equitably.

Like Thomas Jefferson, I believe our primary responsibility is to insure that whatever legislation we pass is fair. If we are going to request one group of individuals to take a larger reduction or have to wait longer to receive a cost-of-living increase in their salaries or retirement income, then we should ask everyone to do so.

As I mentioned, in the fiscal year 1984 budget the President has requested that the COLA increases for civilian and military wages and retirement benefits be frozen this year. Last year the civilian and military workers and retirees received a lower cost-of-living adjustment than those receiving social security benefits. And the year before that we told the civil service and military retirees that they had to wait 6 more months for their COLA adjustments. Now we are in the process of requesting that everyone else except social security recipients take a 1-year delay in the COLA adjustment.

Mr. President, this is simply unfair. This amendment would simply make an attempt to equalize the reductions in the increases—it is not going to reduce anybody's check, it is just going to change when the increases come—and we have asked of these good people to take what other people in our society are taking. Besides making this legislation more equitable, the amendment would help stabilize the OASDI trust fund.

I have found that Americans are willing to make sacrifices if they know that everyone else is making the same sacrifice. We cannot continue this process of favoring senior citizens receiving social security benefits over and above every other group that is either getting a Government paycheck or some kind of a Government pension check.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment. It is an amendment which strikes right at the issue of equity.

I would like to share with my colleagues a comment that was made to me by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, Senator SIMPSON, chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee. He told me last year that every veterans group, including the Disabled American Veterans, said they were willing to take reductions in the future COLA increases if it was fair and equitable across the board, and applied to everyone.

The Commission, the Congress, and the administration have decided to ask for those reductions. We have not given the same increases to civil service retirees or to military retirees that we have given to the social security retirees.

This amendment would save the OASDI trust fund about $50 billion to $60 billion. I think if all Senators would vote for this amendment, then they could support the Armstrong amendment which will be offered later. Then we might actually have a social security package that we could pass without massively increasing the payroll taxes that will be required of us if we take this package as recommended by the Commission.

I yield back to the chairman of the committee. I am prepared to go for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DOLE. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will take just a minute. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with the intent or purpose of the amendment. Again, we have crafted this compromise which may not be perfect, and obviously is not perfect, but I believe this amendment would go beyond the bounds of the agreement. Therefore, I hope the amendment will not be accepted.

There is no doubt about it that the Senator from Idaho has adopted a very constructive approach and it would have the result he has indicated. But as I look at it in the totality of everything we have considered in the Commission and the committee, it is not an amendment that I could support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the present legislation, the bill before us, is not difficult to assemble in all its parts. The distinguished chairman has said that it is the weakness of the individual parts that comprises the strength of the whole. I feel strongly that this amendment, while perfectly well-intentioned and certainly moderate in many regards, goes beyond our ability to faithfully represent the consensus that this proposal embodies. Therefore, I would urge my fellow Senators not to accept it. That is said without rancor or any sense that this is beyond the bounds of reason. It is not. But I still would not accept the amendment.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished Senators from Kansas and New York for their comments. I am sorry they are not able to support the amendment.

I would like to say one other thing and then we can go to the vote.

The Senator from New York alluded to the fact that it is a well-intended amendment, a moderate amendment in its approach if one examines the substance of the amendment. However, due to the strength of the support for the Commission's proposal, there is opposition to the amendment.

I would make one last appeal to my colleagues.

I know that some of the members on the Commission feel bound to stay with what the Commission has proposed. Being a politician, I understand that and appreciate it. I certainly respect the Senator from New York and the Senator from Kansas for their position. But I would just say that we are trying very hard, whether we be Republicans or Democrats, to see this economy of ours start making a comeback. One of the reasons that we have had such a difficult time in having an economic recovery that will be sustained and lasting are the high interest rates. If any Senators have been noticing, the short-term rates have been creeping up slightly and long-term capital is almost nonexistent.

If the Congress, in its wisdom, could make a decision to adjust the rate of increases of the benefit programs across the board in the Federal Government, actually pass it and put it into law, I think we would find a response with respect to the long-term interest rates that would serve all of our constituencies very well. Capitalism cannot survive without long-term capital markets. Long-term capital markets are not going to be revitalized until the Congress controls our public pension programs. Long-term capital rates are necessary so that the young married couples can afford to buy homes, and so that the industrial companies can expand plants and equipment and modernize. A robust recovery will not occur until long-term capital markets are restored and capital is available to borrow over the long term and at a reasonable rate of interest.

This amendment and the amendments I offered yesterday will, in the long run, be beneficial to all Americans including the senior citizen community. Economic revival will make life easier for all Americans, for all families, and for all the people who are receiving social security benefits, who also have children and grandchildren.

We all have a vested interest in trying to see this thing put together the best way possible. This Senator reduced the goals he had in his amendment by 1 year, hoping that more Senators would recognize the moderation that is in this amendment and recognize that by this amendment being added to this bill, we will send a signal to the investors and borrowers in this country to start doing business over the long-term. If we can get long term capital markets restored, we will see a revitalization of the steel industry, the automobile industry, the homebuilding industry, and many other industries, which I think is what we want to have happen in this country.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. Even if we have to give up part of it in the conference it will be a step in the right direction, no matter how small.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART) and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) is absent because of illness in the family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRESSLER). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 13, nays 80, as follows:

So Mr. SYMMS' amendment (UP No. 525) was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Bradley amendment to set aside in order that I may call up an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 85

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington (Mr. Gorton), for himself and Mr. Jackson, Mr. Symms, Mr. McClure, Mr. Baucus, Mr. Melcher, Mr. Stevens and Mr. Murkowski, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 85.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place insert:

Sec. Professors of Clinical Medicine—Section 3121 (s) (relating to concurrent employment by two or more employers) is amended to read as follows:

(s) Concurrent Employment by Two or More Employers

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of sections 3102, 3111, and 3121(a)(1), if two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate such individual through a common paymaster which is one of such corporations, each such corporation shall be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual only the amounts actually disbursed by it to such individual and shall not be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual amounts actually disbursed to such individual by another of such corporations.

(2) UNIVERSITIES AND EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—For purposes of this subsection,

(A) the following entities shall be deemed to be related corporations:

(i) a state university which employs health care professionals as faculty members at a medical school which is the officially designated medical school for more than one state.

(ii) a faculty practice plan qualified as an exempt organization under section 501(c)(3) which employs faculty members of such medical school; and

(B) remuneration which

(i) is disbursed by such faculty practice plan to an individual employee by both such entities and

(ii) when added to remuneration actually disbursed (prior to the application of this paragraph) by such university, exceeds this contribution and benefit base (as determined under section 230 of the Social Security Act).

shall be deemed to have been actually disbursed by such university as a common paymaster and not to have been actually disbursed by such faculty practice plan.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, this amendment is necessary to avoid having the regionalized medical school for the States of Washington, Alaska, Idaho, and Montana pay approximately $500,000 annually in unreimbursable FICA taxes. The reason for this amendment stems from the unavailability of the so-called common paymaster doctrine to the unique circumstances at the regionalized school—the University of Washington School of Medicine. Professors of clinical medicine receive two paychecks—one from the university, and one from the medical school practice plan—a 501(c)(3) organization. Both organizations would have to pay FICA taxes under the provisions of S. 1. Because this school uniquely functions as the State medical school for four States, with diverse Federal research funding and appropriations from four separate States, the doctrine of related corporations using a common paymaster is not available to avoid the double taxation of the unreimbursable employer FICA contribution.

In addition, Mr. President, a similar situation exists at the University of Colorado to that which affects us, and this would also care for concerns of the Senators from Colorado.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GORTON. I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Washington for offering this amendment.

Mr. President, I support the amendment being offered by my colleague from the State of Washington.

The States of Alaska, Idaho, Montana, and Washington have organized the first and only regional medical school in the country. This regional medical school uniquely functions as a State medical school for four States, with diverse Federal research funding and appropriations from the four participating States.

The technical amendment being offered by Senator GORTON is necessary in order to avoid having that regionalized medical school pay approximately one-half million dollars more in unreimbursable FICA taxes.

The reason this amendment is necessary is because the doctrine or related corporations using a common paymaster is not available to them because the professors of clinical medicine receive two paychecks—one from the university and one from the medical school practice plan—a tax-exempt (501(c)(3)) organization. Since tax-exempt organizations are going to have to participate in the social security program, both the university and the medical school practice plan would have to pay FICA taxes as if they were two separate employers.

I urge my colleagues to approve this amendment.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I want to associate myself with the remarks of my colleague from Washington. This is a double taxation matter, and it certainly should be corrected. I strongly support the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas has looked at the amendment, and it also has been analyzed by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long). We are prepared to accept the amendment, and I think I can speak for both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 85) was agreed to.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the amendment of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY) be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 86

(Purpose: To provide that hospitals located in an SMSA in 1979 must be classified as urban under the prospective reimbursement system)

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I send to the desk an unprinted amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. CHAFEE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 86.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of section 301 add the following:

"(g) In determining whether a hospital is in an urban or rural area for purposes of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act, the Secretary shall classify any hospital, located in New England as being located in an urban area if such hospital was classified as being located in an urban area under the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area system of classification in effect in 1979."

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today is a very simple one which would resolve a problem that has existed for the past few years with the classification of the Newport Hospital in Rhode Island and other New England hospitals.

The Health Care Financing Administration recently reclassified the Newport Hospital as rural. This same situation occurred in 1979 and after months of discussion between the hospital, myself, Senator PELL and the Administrator of HCFA, the problem was resolved, we thought permanently, when HCFA conceded and classified the hospital as urban as it had been previously. HCFA published language to this effect in the June 18, 1980, Federal Register. Early this year HCFA again attempted to reclassify the Newport Hospital as rural, after discussing the problem with HCFA I was assured that for the remainder of this fiscal year Newport Hospital will be classified as urban.

In order to insure that this issue will not be raised again and to clarify the unique situation of the Newport Hospital, which now has been acknowledged twice by HCFA, I am proposing that for the purposes of prospective reimbursement, this particular hospital be treated as though in an urban area.

It is my understanding that there is no objection to this amendment on the staff level and that the Senator from Kansas would be willing to accept it as part of the bill. I sincerely hope he will do so.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of my colleague from Rhode Island, Senator PELL, be added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, today, I join with Senator CHAFEE in introducing this amendment which clarifies the Health Care Financing Administration's urban/rural classification scheme as it applies to Rhode Island and Newport Hospital.

In my view, the designation of Newport Hospital as a rural hospital was a mistake considering the geographical reality of Rhode Island where Newport is, in fact, a metropolitan center. I was happy to have played a part in reversing this repeated error. I think, however, it is time we make certain that the error is not repeated again.

Newport Hospital's costs are at least comparable to those of other Rhode Island hospitals—all of which are classified as urban. I believe that a rural classification is an injustice which unfairly and incorrectly penalizes Newport Hospital and its patients. I join with Senator CHAFEE in urging the Senate to accept our amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. CHAFEE, has brought to my attention a problem faced by a hospital located in his State, a problem I believe may also be faced by other hospitals located in the Northeast.

The problem that has arisen, is one where a hospital has been designated as being located in an urban area then told it was in a rural area—and then back again to urban. Because of the design of our new medicare reimbursement system, which establishes separate rates for urban and rural hospitals, these hospitals may be put at an unfair disadvantage. I believe the amendment offered by Senator CHAFEE offers a reasonable solution to this problem, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 86) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHAFEE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, it was my intention at this time that I was going to offer an amendment which would establish a social security option account.

While the bill we are considering today does provide a long-term solution to the solvency problems confronting the social security system, the proposal I was planning to offer, would have provided a more secure and flexible retirement program for many working Americans, while at the same time provide tax relief, stimulate individual savings, promote capital formation and strengthen the long-term future of the social security system.

I wish to outline this briefly and have my remarks in the RECORD. The chairman of the Finance Committee has agreed to accept a study on the question so this might be considered by the Congress at a later date.

Under the social security option account, individuals paying social security taxes could choose an alternative means of providing for their retirement. They would continue to pay social security taxes but would forfeit future social security benefits in return for a current income tax deduction.

The concept would work as follows:

First, individuals who pay social security taxes could establish a special retirement account and then deduct annual contributions from their taxable income. The account would be similar to the current IRA's and Keogh's.

Second, tax deductions would be limited to 20 percent of the amount of income subject to social security taxes. Thus, the maximum individual deduction would be about $7,000-plus today.

Third, in return, individuals with SSOA's would forfeit one-half percent of their social security retirement benefits for each $1,000 contributed to the account. For a person who contributed the maximum amount to an SSOA in any year, the maximum annual rate of forfeiture would be 3½ percent plus. At this forfeiture rate, an SSOA would become attractive to working Americans in a broad range of age and income categories.

Fourth, upon retirement, individuals with SSOA's could receive benefits from their accounts, along with reduced social security benefits; if an individual had invested enough in an SSOA, he or she would forfeit all social security benefits.

Private industry analysis of this proposal shows that by the year 2005, the SSOA could reduce social security outflows by $10 billion to $25 billion annually in 1981 dollars, providing needed relief prior to the time when the system will face its most severe financial crisis.

In addition to relieving financial pressure on social security, the SSOA would stimulate long-term capital formation to finance economic growth. Again, private industry analysis indicates that within 10 years, the SSOA program would generate a capital pool of $40 billion to $100 billion, in 1981 dollars. A significant percentage would be new capital, rather than dollars shifted from one form of savings to another. The SSOA would create a new long-term capital source that would be stabilizing in today's economy.

When the SSOA was compared with other savings incentives including the expansion of current IRA's, both concepts would stimulate savings and capital formation but the SSOA has the added advantage of benefiting the social security system. After retirement, each dollar lost to the Treasury through SSOA tax deductions would be more than offset by a $2.50 savings in social security benefit payments. Over the long term, establishment of SSOA's would produce substantially greater public benefits than the simple expansion of IRA's or Keogh's.

The SSOA has other advantages as well. Retirement income would be determined by a prearranged personal savings plan, not political decisions as is the case with the social security system. The contributor would influence the investment decisions. SSOA's thus offer a degree of personal control, predictability, and individual responsibility not possible with social security.

In addition, SSOA's would fill in some the present gaps in our Nation's retirement policy. Presently few tax incentives exist for individuals to generate funds for their own retirement. Many employers provide pensions for their workers, but not all workers receive pensions and changes in employment often curtail benefits. KEOGH plans are available only to the self-employed individuals. IRA's have fairly low caps on contributions.

The SSOA's would represent an important change in direction for Federal programs. It would veer away from ever-increasing Government entitlements, with their uncontrollable demands on the Federal budget. It would help restore the long-term solvency of the social security system and return to its original purpose of providing retirement floor. Individuals will gain more responsibility for their own retirement planning. Moreover, SSOA's would link tax relief to spending reductions and further solidify this direct relationship as a cornerstone for future fiscal policy.

The SSOA plan is not the total answer to the problems confronting the social security system and the economy, but it makes a major contribution toward a secure retirement for all Americans.

For the most part, Americans have treated the problem of security in retirement as a distinct issue from the overall health of the Nation's economy. Policymakers have addressed the crises presented by the long-term well-being of the social security program, the gaps in the Nation's retirement programs, the excessive tax burden, and the lack of adequate capital investment as separate matters. But, as the National Commission on Social Security has recently determined, our Nation's retirement programs will be healthy only if the American economy as a whole is healthy. And, I would venture to say that the capability of this economy to recover lies in our ability to solve the unfunded liability problems facing our public pension systems. Too often, for example, past attempts to solve problems facing the social security system have adversely affected private retirement planning or economic productivity. Therefore, the challenge is find solutions that achieve diverse public goals.

The foremost goal of the Nation's retirement policy should be to provide an economic climate in which all Americans can plan for income security in their postemployment years. Yet within this broad goal, the specific features of individual choice, long-range planning, flexibility, and innovation should be encouraged. Opportunities should be provided in both public and private programs to encourage the widest range of choice and greatest amount of security. Finally, as Sanford Ross recently pointed out, the entire system of retirement plans—social security, private pensions, and individual savings—must be rationalized so they work together.

Social security is an essential foundation for the Nation's retirement system. Long-term planning for the social security system must address the long-range funding problems and the actuarial deficit that presently afflict the system. A second goal should be to prevent any increase in the social security tax burden, which, for more than half of all American families, now exceeds their income taxes. Third, efforts should be made to mitigate the effect of present demographic trends on the fiscal integrity of the trust fund, perhaps by encouraging people to rely less on the system in meeting their retirement needs. Fourth, Government actions should reinforce people's confidence that the social security system is strong and will provide a minimal floor of benefits for their retirement. At the same time, however, the public should understand that social security is not a comprehensive retirement program and that it must be supplemented by individual retirement planning and saving.

Most importantly, security in retirement requires policies that retard inflation, stimulate productivity, create jobs, and foster growth. Because a significant portion of the Nation's GNP is dedicated to retirement programs, these resources should be used, where possible, to stimulate rather than retard economic productivity. Private retirement programs are, and should be, a major source of savings and capital formation. Moreover, because high taxes retard economic growth and thus indirectly burden retirement programs, tax relief is an essential element of comprehensive Federal retirement policy. Furthermore, to the extent possible, retirement policy should contribute to full employment, high wages, and new jobs, because these factors will widen the economic base upon which retirement programs must rest.

The social security option account contributes to these public policy goals. It allows individuals who pay social security taxes to choose an alternative means of providing for their retirement. They may establish a fund to pay their future retirement benefits by deducting from their Federal income tax their annual contributions to this fund. Deductions would be limited to 20 percent of their social security wages—that is, the amount of income subject to social security taxes.

In return, individuals who establish SSOA's forfeit a portion of their social security retirement benefits. They continue to pay social security taxes, but, in effect, trade future social security benefits for a present income tax deduction. The amount deducted must be paid into an SSOA, a tax-free, privately administered account similar to an individual retirement account or Keogh plan, from which an individual may draw funds when he or she retires. Thus, an SSOA does not diminish revenues from flowing into the social security old-age and survivors trust fund, but enables people to rely on private pension sources instead of social security payments in their retirement. By reducing future outlays from the trust fund, it strengthens the social security system. By linking public and private roles in retirement planning, it creates an opportunity for individual retirement planning based on specific contributions that is available to the vast majority of working men and women, encouraging them to save and channeling their savings into investment into the Nation's economic base.

The problems facing our Nation's retirement system are closely interconnected. Low productivity, inflation, and high taxes make it difficult for individuals to save for retirement and diminish the value of their savings. Because social security benefits levels have risen substantially and are indexed to the Consumer Price Index many people have little incentive to save for their retirement. A lack of savings, in turn, increases their reliance on social security. To meet increasing expectations from social security, benefits and taxes are raised further—as is being done in the legislation before us today—thereby discouraging savings, deterring capital formation, and dampening productivity. Thus, each problem aggravates the others.

We must take these interrelated concerns into account when choosing solutions to the problems facing the Nation's retirement system. Proposals to change the social security system, retirement programs, or the tax structure should address the broader goals of creating a productive and predictable economic climate in which individuals have the flexibility to plan their retirement efficiently, the incentive to save for their future, and the opportunity to invest in the Nation's future. Dealing with broader goals will lead to integrated solutions that address the myriad problems confronting Americans in retirement. The legislation before us does not take an integrated and comprehensive approach toward solving the solvency problems of the social security system and that is exactly why I believe my amendment will greatly enhance the package we are considering.

The SSOA plan will stimulate the development of a large pool of new capital. Retirement funds have been an increasingly important source of investment income. The assets of private pensions, for example, have grown from $52 billion in 1960 to over $330 billion in 1979. The social security program, in contrast, builds no capital stock because of its pay-as-you-go approach. The SSOA would provide an important vehicle to reverse that trend.

This new capital would be available for creating new jobs, improving labor productivity, and increasing wages, which, in turn, would produce additional social security revenues. In addition, reducing the demand for trust fund expenditures and expanding social security revenues also will reduce the pressure to increase social security taxes, which may diminish savings and capital formation.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this measure. It is a proposal which will not only help the social security trust fund, but future retirees and the Nation's economy.

FORFEITURE RATE

In order to determine the actuarial effects of the SSOA plan, it is necessary to evaluate how the rate of forfeiture of social security benefits would affect the decision to establish SSOA's.

The calculation of a forfeiture rate requires determining initially the factors that influence an individual's decision to select an SSOA as an alternative to social security. Among these factors are a worker's age, tax bracket, anticipated growth in wage levels, interest rates, et cetera. Once these factors are established, it is possible to show how a given rate of forfeiture will affect the retirement planning decisions of individuals of different ages, income levels, and investment philosophies. It is also possible to estimate the number of people to whom an SSOA would appeal and the resulting effect on general revenues, savings, and capital formation.

Based on this analysis, the study considered the effects of varying forfeiture rates, assuming that wage levels and interest rates grow at approximately the same rate. A rate of forfeiture of 0.5 percent per $1,000 was selected because it makes an SSOA attractive to the largest number of people at varied income and age levels without an unreasonable loss to the Treasury in general revenues.

At the 0.5 percent rate, workers aged 30 in the 30-percent marginal tax bracket would earn a better "return" on an SSOA than from social security benefits. Older workers would require higher incomes to have the incentive to select an SSOA. Workers aged 40 in the 40-percent marginal bracket or aged 50 in the 50-percent bracket would earn a better return on an SSOA than from social security benefits.

In reality, each individual's retirement planning would involve varying assumptions about wage growth and interest rates. Different assumptions would substantially alter these conclusions. Thus, while workers age 40 in the 50-percent tax bracket would find SSOA's attractive, they would not do well if the prevailing interest rate fell below 7 percent, or the wage growth rate increased beyond 10 percent.

Higher interest rates would mean greater accumulated earnings in the SSOA account and thus higher SSOA benefit levels. Higher wages, however, would mean that the individual would qualify for relatively higher social security benefits which are indexed to increases in wage levels. If the workers marginal tax rate after retirement remained at 50 percent, they would also find SSOA's less attractive. The effect of these variables upon individuals would depend on their particular situations.

Moreover, the individuals assumptions about the economy would also affect this determination. Concern about a poor or risky investment climate could lead to little or no investment in SSOA's. On the other hand, if people believed that the social security program would not pay adequate future benefits, the SSOA would be attractive regardless of tax bracket or wage level.

Studies have indicated that a 0.5-percent forfeiture rate would serve the public goals of encouraging savings and stabilizing the social security system as well as the private objectives of income security in retirement and flexibility in retirement planning. It would appeal primarily to young and middle-aged workers in middle to high tax brackets.

I yield to the distinguished chairman.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have discussed this amendment with the distinguished Senator from Idaho, and I think he has an excellent idea, but it is a matter that we have not been able to focus on because of the work of the National Social Security Commission and working on the bill itself in the Finance Committee.

I have suggested to the Senator from Idaho that if he would be willing to replace or substitute for that amendment an amendment that would direct the study by the appropriate agency, that would be very helpful. I am not certain whether he has had an opportunity to do that.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 87

(Purpose: To direct the Secretary of the Treasury, or his delegate, to conduct a study on the feasibility of implementing social security option accounts)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment for a study by the appropriate agency and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 87.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of Title I, insert the following new section:

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury, or his delegate, should conduct a study of the feasibility of implementing "Social Security Option Accounts." Such accounts would have the following characteristics:

1. Individuals who pay social security taxes could establish a special retirement account and then deduct annual contributions from their taxable income. The account would be similar to the current IRA's and KEOGH's.

2. Tax deductions would be limited to 20 percent of the amount of income subject to social security taxes. Thus, the maximum individual deduction would be about $7,000 plus today.

3. In return, individuals with SSOA's would forfeit one-half percent of their social security retirement benefits for each $1,000 contributed to the account. For a person who contributed the maximum amount to an SSOA in any year, the maximum annual rate of forfeiture would be 3½ percent plus. At this forfeiture rate, an SSOA become attractive to working Americans in a broad range of age and income categories.

4. Upon retirement, individuals with SSOA's could receive benefits from their accounts, along with reduced social security benefits; if an individual had invested enough in an SSOA, he or she would forfeit all social security benefits.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury should submit to the Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under section (a) by June 30, 1984.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, the amendment simply states that Treasury do a study on the concept of the amendment that I originally intended to offer and report back to the Finance Committee by June 30, 1985. It would be 18 months.

I yield back my time.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

The proposal to allow employees to establish a special retirement account similar to an IRA (with tax deductible contributions) in place of a portion of their social security benefits is an interesting concept and is worth study.

It would undoubtedly have the potential for increasing the private pool of capital and encourage individuals to take more responsibility for their own retirement.

Such a program could take some pressure off the social security system by encouraging those who can to save for retirement rather than relying primarily on social security.

However, this is a major change in the role of social security and tax incentives to encourage retirement savings. It is appropriate to require a thorough study of the proposal before Congress is asked to enact it into law.

For instance, we need more information on whether these accounts will be attractive enough to gain wide acceptance as a partial substitute for social security benefits, and we need to analyze the impact on general services.

As Senator SYMMS outlined, his original proposal would allow employees to establish a special retirement account similar to an IRA.

I think this has a lot of potential and a lot of merit, and I do believe that this approach now taken will give us an opportunity to take a look at it because it is a major change in the role of social security and tax incentive to encourage retirement savings. It is appropriate to require a thorough study of the proposal before Congress is asked to enact it into law.

I can assure the Senator from Idaho that we will do what we can to make certain that it is a study in the real sense of the word and it can come back to us within a year.

Mr. SYMMS. Within a year, a year and a few months.

Mr. DOLE. So we might then have full hearings and take another look at it.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished chairman and I thank the distinguished Senator for his indulgence of the amendments that this Senator has offered.

I note that although they have not passed, I still think there is a great deal of merit for study, and I think that we will be back revisiting social security within the next 2 or 3 years and so most likely we will have the opportunity to offer a broader choice for the American people and do some things that would encourage more savings to help revitalize our needed capital market, and this would be one way to do it.

It would not affect everyone, I must admit, but it would be an option that some people might take and they would still be paying the social security taxes but they would have the opportunity as I perceive that they would help keep the contract or would not hurt the system as far as the fiduciary ability of the social security to pay its way out of the contract that it has with the American people but it would give those people who were able to do so an opportunity to have their own retirement in exchange for social security benefits.

I call for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho.

(Putting the question.)

The amendment (UP No. 87) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside so that I may present an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 88

(Purpose: Relating to interest on State loans.)

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio (Mr. METZENBAUM) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 88.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 235, lines 12 through 14, strike out "Interest shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C)," and insert "No interest shall accrue on such deferred interest."

On page 236, line 7, strike out "30" and insert "25".

On page 236, line 9, strike out "40" and insert "35".

On page 237, line 9, strike out "30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent," and insert "25 percent, 35 percent, 50 percent".

On page 237, line 12, strike out the quotation marks and the second period.

On page 237, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

"(9) Any interest otherwise due from a State during a calendar year after 1982 may be deferred (and no interest shall accrue on such deferred interest) for a grace period of not to exceed 9 months if, for such calendar year in which the interest was due, the State had an average unemployment rate of 13.5 percent or greater."

On page 237, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:

(c) Section 1202(b)(3)(C)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking the matter that follows clause (II) and inserting "No interest shall accrue on such deferred interest."

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, this amendment has to do with the solvency of the unemployment funds in the States and the obligations of the States to the Federal Government.

It is my understanding that the distinguished senior Senator from Illinois has an interest in a part of this amendment having to do with that which might be called interest on interest and by reason of that fact if the manager of the bill feels it appropriate that we lay this aside temporarily without losing its position on the calendar, I would have no objection to doing so, provided that we can get some understanding as to when the Senator from Illinois would be joining us.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I think in addition to the two Senators from Illinois, we have the distinguished senior Senator, Senator PERCY, and Senator DIXON—

Mr. METZENBAUM. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE (continuing). As well as the two Senators from Michigan, and the two Senators from the State of Pennsylvania.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I stand corrected.

Mr. DOLE. The Senators from Kentucky, Senator FORD and Senator HUDDLESTON have amendments, so I think it might be well if we notify them that the amendment is pending and give them an opportunity to come to the Chamber. We can take it up whenever they can be here. Senator KENNEDY has a couple of amendments as has Senator NICKLES. By that time perhaps they can be here.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Does the Senator from Kansas expect to go right through the noon hour?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

I would not expect a rollcall vote on this amendment.

Mr. METZENBAUM. No. But I wonder if I might suggest to those who have an interest in it that they could be in the Chamber at 12:30. Does that sound all right?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Under those circumstances, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily set aside, that it retain its place on the calendar, with the understanding that on or about 12:30 p.m., depending on what is pending at that time, that we return to further consideration of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 89

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an unprinted amendment number 89.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

"By January 1, 1985, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to the Congress concerning the feasibility and desirability of applying a prospective payment methodology to payment by all payers for inpatient hospital service. Such report shall specifically include consideration of the extent of cost-shifting to non-federal payers, and the impact of such cost-shifting on health insurance costs and premiums borne by employers and employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to setting aside the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today marks an historic occasion in the evolution of medicare. After 28 years, we are finally going to move away from the wasteful, inefficient method of paying for health care—cost based, retrospective payment.

For over a decade, I have urged the Congress to adopt prospective payment as the only way to control health care costs. In the early 1970's, we began by assisting the development of HMO's. HMO's are the model of prospective payment—and they have more than proven the value of this approach to controlling health care costs. In recent years, we have begun to recognize the important contribution made by State-based prospective payment systems.

Now at last, we are prepared to put medicare on a prospective basis. I applaud the committee for an important step in the right direction. But at the same time, I must raise certain important reservations. I believe that we should immediately adopt an "all payers" approach to prospective payment. If prospective payment is limited to medicare, much of the benefit will be lost. The reason is simple. If all programs are subject to prospective limits, hospitals must either reduce their costs or suffer the consequences. But if medicare alone is subject to these limits, the hospitals are free to make up the difference from other payers.

This cost shifting goes on under medicare today. Some have estimated that as much as $6 billion in costs were shifted to employees and employers in 1982—and that number might reach $12 billion by 1985. Whatever the magnitude—cost shifting undercuts the benefits of prospective payments, adds billions to employers' costs and billions more to worker health insurance premiums.

I have introduced legislation (S. 814) that provides for an all-payer approach to prospective payment. It would put an immediate halt to runaway health costs, for all Americans—not simply for the Federal Government. It relies primarily on the States to devise programs suited to their own needs. It would protect the elderly from rising out-of-pocket costs.

It is not my intention to offer this bill as a substitute for the provisions in the bill before us. I believe that my proposal is a more effective way to deal with health costs, and hope that my colleagues will take the time to study it—so that we can discuss these issues in the months to come. But I do believe that we must address the problem of cost shifting that will arise under the medicare only proposal.

As the chairman knows, this bill contains a provision requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to study the feasibility and desirability of applying the prospective payment methodology to all payers of inpatient hospital services. My amendment is similar to this provision, except that it would require that this report be made to Congress by January 1, 1985, and would specifically require the Secretary to determine the extent of cost shifting, and its impact on private hospital insurance premiums as they are paid by employers and workers. In this way, we will be prepared with the information needed to make a responsible and speedy decision on expanding the scope of the prospective methodology to private as well as public payers.

Mr. President, I have long been a believer in prospective budgeting. The provisions in this legislation concerning medicare, are helpful in trying to address the very difficult challenge we are going to continue to face in the future—the increase in costs of health care.

My concern is that as we put prospective budgeting with regard to medicare into the law, we are going to see an increase in costs outside of the medicare system.

All I want to do in this particular amendment is to have a review of the effect of the prospective budgeting and a report concerning the nature and extent of cost-shifting and have a report come back to Congress by early 1985 when we will have a new administration and we will be dealing with the problems of health care costs. It will make available to the Finance Committee information that will permit us to address this concern.

It will provide important additional information to the Senate and to Congress in order to try to deal with the problems of increased health care costs, and it will address what I believe is going to be a cost-shifting effect of prospective budgeting, if we just limit it to the medicare proposal.

I hope the committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am pleased to support this proposal to reform the way medicare reimburses hospitals. While I do not ordinarily like to see increased Government regulation of any kind, this prospective payment proposal for medicare is an appropriate, though not flawless, mechanism to address the double digit inflation currently experienced in the health care industry.

I applaud the administration for the swiftness with which it responded to the Congress in drafting this legislation. I applaud the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Mr. DOLE and his committee staff for their efforts in rapidly addressing this important issue. I also applaud the hospitals in this country for not opposing our efforts to bring some control to the escalation of health care costs and the concurrent dramatic yearly increases in the Federal Government's medicare budget.

As a result of prospective payment being applied to medicare, I am confident mechanisms within the marketplace of a competitive nature will develop which will help to limit the rise in overall health care costs. These mechanisms will occur with only a minimal amount of Government regulation and interference in the private health care industry. Therefore I am hopeful that in our consideration of this issue today that we do not apply it to all payors.

In reviewing the legislation, there are several issues of special interest to me and my constituents in Utah. I would like to briefly address them. One subject is capital costs. For the present time, both the Senate and the House bills provide that capital costs for hospitals are not subject to this new prospective payment system. The Senate specifically excludes reimbursement for capital costs under this program until after October 1, 1986. The House bill, on the other hand, asks that the administration study the issue and submit recommendations to Congress by December 31, 1983. The House bill goes on to state that it will be the intent of Congress to make a distinction between capital costs incurred before and after March 1, 1983, and to indicate that projects "initiated" before that date will somehow be treated differently in the future.

While I strongly prefer the Senate version, it is worth emphasizing that at a minimum hospitals should not be penalized for obligations legally incurred prior to enactment of this law.

An example in my own State should suffice to show the problem. The largest hospital in the State of Utah is in the midst of a much-needed major project. The State-granted certificate of need approval to this hospital for its major remodeling and construction project in November of 1980. While the construction and remodeling have proceeded at pace, the project will not be completed until sometime after the first quarter of 1985. The hospital incurred these substantial financial commitments with the expectation that capital costs would be paid on a reasonable cost basis.

There are several items in the Senate bill that I support and hope that they are retained in the final measure adopted by the Senate and the House.

First, I strongly support the Senate version on regionalization of DRG rates. I believe it is important to have a national rural/urban split in order to take into account the varying needs of hospitals serving different populations. However, too great a division regionally would only serve to reinforce the inefficiencies of some larger urban centers and at the same time not provide enough support to rural areas.

I also support the option for States to have their own program of prospective payment. I do not believe that the Congress should mandate a program of prospective payment for all-payers, which is really just the formerly considered and defeated Carter cost containment proposal. However, if a State has a good cost control program in place, then we should not place this Federal program on top of it. Of course, as made clear in the Senate bill, such State programs should not be more costly to the Federal Government.

Finally, I strongly support two other provisions of the Senate's version: The development of a independent commission to insure the mechanisms of this proposal; and a study to insure the various components of reliability of this prospective payment program.

I urge my colleagues to expeditiously support this legislation which reflects the Federal Government's desire to become a prudent purchaser of health care.

I would like to conclude by asking my distinguished colleague, Mr. DOLE to respond to one concern I have about the viability of one set of DRG's. the basis of DRG's is a system know as the MEDPAR files.

These files provide the Federal Government with historical medicare charge data. And is the basis for determining the number of cases in the relative cost weighting of diagnosed related groups: 356 of the 467 DRG's had a good sampling of charges from which to calculate a relative index. But according to information provided me by the administration, there is limited data on 111 of the 467 DRG's. I believe this situation needs to be corrected in order to insure the statistical viability of the DRG's used. As I understand, for various reasons, these 111 will be little used by medicare but might be used by other payors. Since these 111 weightings are not statistically sound, these classifications should only be made available to other payers with the specific addendum that they are not statistically valid and that further research should be made prior to their use. Senate DOLE would you agree with me that these problems should be duly noted when these DRG's are published in the Federal Register and that it is consistent with the legislation that this should be done?

Mr. DOLE. I thank my distinguished colleague, Mr. HATCH, for his comments. With regard to your question: I agree that these problems should be duly noted in the Federal Register and that to do so is consistent with this legislation and appropriate.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the Senator.

Now I also understand there may be proposed an amendment to require use of the prospective payment plan as an all-payers proposal. This must be vigorously opposed. The required use by all payers of the Federal diagnosis-related groups classification, weighing system and the specific payment rates set by HHS is nothing less than a design to discard the free-enterprise system in favor of a program of national controls which would turn health care in the United States into a Federal public utility. The health-care field is too diverse to impose these rigid controls across the board. And let me restate that if these controls are imposed, we, as a Nation, may not experience the quality of health care that we are currently provided.

It is one thing for the U.S. Government to act as a prudent purchaser of health care in a competitive marketplace with other purchasers of care. It is quite another thing for health care providers to be required to accept as payment in full from all private citizens and third-party payers rates dictated by a Federal Government agency. This has the effect of replacing the marketplace.

If this were not repugnant enough, I understand this amendment I am opposing might preclude judicial review of the Government's discretionary authority to establish the DRG system and payment methodology. Thus, it would vest in the Government the right to act arbitrarily and capriciously without accountability. Rather than functioning as the head of a Federal administrative agency, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be transformed into a Federal czar of national health with unbridled authority. Such a possibility threatens the health care available to the American people and thwarts efforts to make the health-care marketplace more price competitive.

In addition, there is quite limited practical experience with the DRG-based payment system. Although a DRG-based experiment has been conducted in the State of New Jersey for a few years, the results of this undertaking are not final or conclusive. In recommending a DRG-based system for prospective medicare payments, the Secretary of HHS refers to, what she characterizes as preliminary reports that the system worked in New Jersey.

Even if a preliminary indication in New Jersey is accurate, transposing the DRG system from New Jersey to a national level will necessitate numerous adjustments and changes. The administration of a program has to be more fully developed; the propriety of the proposed methodology for establishing the DRG payment on a national level for medicare patients still needs to be analyzed; the adequacy of the payment rates are in question, especially the 111 DRG's that the Federal Government does not have adequate, random sampling and now must find alternative sources for charge information.

In summary, the impact of the medicare DRG system on hospitals nationwide is uncertain. Imposing a DRG payment limit for all payers of health care would compound these adjustments and risks permanently crippling our Nation's hospitals. For this reason, I support the proposal from the Senate Finance Committee requiring the Secretary to report to Congress on the appropriateness of the DRG system. At this time I would like to read Blue Cross-Blue Shield's letter in opposition to any all-payer proposal. They state:

BLUE CROSS ASSOCIATION,
BLUE SHIELD ASSOCIATION,
Chicago, Ill., March 16, 1983.

Hon. ORRIN G. HATCH,
U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR HATCH: I understand that amendments or substitutions to the Medicare prospective payment provisions of the Social Security legislation (H.R. 1900) may be offered in the next few days in the name of further controlling health care costs. Apparently these proposed changes would either impose a Federal cost control system on all hospital revenues or would mandate state systems regulating all payors. On behalf of the nation's Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans, I would underscore the seriousness of the continuing escalation of health care costs, but would urge you to oppose any such amendments.

We have closely followed the development of the Medicare prospective payment proposals in both the House and Senate, and have largely supported them. We particularly support the notion of increasing the cost containing incentives that are needed in most hospital environments. Our primary concern over the proposals has been with the speed and scope of change which flow from Medicare's national use of a relatively new and untested reimbursement model. To mandate either the extension of this model beyond the Medicare program or an even more massive change in all health care financing would be exceedingly unwise.

Our opposition to the amendments or substitutions mentioned above stems primarily from our experience with a wide variety of reimbursement systems, over many years. This experience has led us to several conclusions:

To be effective, any cost containment program must include a variety of incentives for providers, consumers, and third party payors to contain costs.

There is no single best way to do that; the breadth and diversity of circumstances around the country requires reimbursement models responsive to local circumstances.

In most areas, effective negotiation between the purchaser and provider of care has the greatest potential for developing cost constraints sensitive to local needs.

Government mandates, where there is no local acceptance of or capacity to implement the mandated programs, are simply not effective.

Regulatory approaches have been tried in several states with only limited success; these mandatory systems often perpetuate institutions which no longer have community support; and such systems tend to block the development of more price-competitive alternatives to the status quo.

Not only does the Medicare reform bill, as reported out by the Finance Committee, contain truly far-reaching changes, but all across the country, there are private market reimbursement changes under way which are all stimulated by the critical need to contain costs. We would be pleased to work with the Congress to continue encouraging these new directions and to evaluate their short- and long-term impact on the cost and quality of health care.

Sincerely,

BERNARD R. TRESNOWSKI.

In conclusion, I support Medicare prospective pay but oppose any proposal to impose this untested system on all payors. All States, including Utah, should be allowed to experiment with several options including competitive solutions to health-care costs. What may work as an experiment in New Jersey should not be imposed on every payer.

PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, for the last 2 years, Congress has struggled to develop an equitable solution to social security. But that compromise has not been achieved at a low cost. The discussion and debate has occurred in a highly politicized environment. Too often the fears of the most vulnerable in our society have been played upon in an effort to gain the upper hand politically.

All of us have experienced the pain and anguish of seniors convinced that their primary, and in many cases their only, means of support would be eliminated or drastically cut back. Many workers have lost confidence in the system entirely.

Nonetheless, we appear to have found a solution to the social security problem, but our unwillingness to act early and the successful efforts by some to politicize the problem have exacted a huge price.

Another social security problem—Medicare—looms just beyond the horizon. Actuaries in the administration and at the Congressional Budget Office predict that Medicare will be insolvent in 3 to 4 years. We have the time to fix Medicare; the question is, do we have the willingness? Can Congress avoid politicizing the Medicare issue?

Already, some are playing off the fears of Medicare beneficiaries. This is a cruel trick to play on beneficiaries. In correcting Medicare, Congress will not abandon the beneficiaries. But an equitable solution cannot be achieved if everyone is running scared.

Today, as part of the social security compromise, we have included a major piece of Medicare reform, a reform that will improve efficiency and allow us to get the most out of our Medicare dollars.

As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's Health Subcommittee, I have been holding hearings since last summer on the issue of prospective payment for hospitals. We have heard from States that have their own prospective payment systems; we have heard from insurance companies engaged in prospective payment; we have heard from physicians and hospitals; and we have heard from consumers, beneficiaries, and experts in the administration.

The prospective payment provisions crafted by the Finance Committee and included in this bill are exactly what the Medicare program now needs. We have learned enough from our experience with cost-based reimbursement to know that it does not work. It wastes money, penalizes the efficient hospital, and encourages dangerous over-treatment.

We have taken the administration's proposal—which is basically a very good one—and made some changes; changes which I feel improve the proposal and ease the burden on hospitals as we move from the old system to a prospective payment system.

Prospective payment is not the final solution to Medicare reform. Other changes will be necessary. We must also look at including physicians, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, and other providers in a prospective payment system. And we must move ahead in our efforts to expand private sector vouchers for the Medicare population.

Under this proposal, beneficiaries will not pay any additional dollars out-of-pocket. But they will reap additional benefits. Efficient hospitals will be able to give beneficiaries more for the money, and that is good for both patients and taxpayers. Change is never easy. The change from a cost-based retrospective system to a prospective system will force hospitals and physicians to change behavior. But it is a change for the good, and it is a change that is desperately needed. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this important reform.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. I certainly agree with the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts. I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment. I have just asked the distinguished Senator from Louisiana and he has no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment (UP No. 89) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 90

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have another amendment which I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 90.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

"The Secretary shall provide that the amount which is allowable, with respect to costs of inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under this title, for a return on equity capital for subsection (d) hospitals (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) shall, for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be equal to the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B)) of the amounts otherwise allowable under regulations in effect on March 1, 1983. For cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986, the Secretary shall not provide for any such return on equity capital for such hospitals."

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the bill before us today marks a major change in the way the Government pays for health care. As my colleagues know, since Medicare was enacted, it paid for health care like the Defense Department paid for weapons—on a cost-plus basis. And the results were pretty much the same. Costs kept going up and up—but no matter how much the costs went up—there was always the plus—the profit.

With this bill, we are finally turning away from this wasteful way of paying for health care. I regret that this step is limited to Medicare, since I believe that we can only control costs with an all-payers approach to prospective payment. Nonetheless, it is a step in the right direction.

Unfortunately, on our way to eliminating cost-plus in Medicare, we have forgotten to eliminate the plus. Although we provide for a fixed payment per case, the bill still requires the Government to throw in a sweetener for a small number of hospitals—the profit.

I simply cannot understand the reason for keeping in the profit—known in the jargon as "return on equity." The whole point of prospective payment is to pay a fixed price. If hospitals are efficient, they get to keep the difference between the costs and the fixed payment. Is not that profit? Under this bill, we are going to pay a profit on top of the profit. And the second profit does not even have to be earned. It gets paid whether the hospital is efficient or not, whether it delivers good care or not. It just gets paid.

My amendment would address that issue. As prospective payment is phased, a first by 25 percent, then 50 percent, and then 75 percent, this amendment would phase out that additional profit item, the return on equity, over a 3-year period.

It is effectively the same concept that has been accepted by the House of Representatives. I do think it is a valuable and worthwhile saving. The estimate would be that there would be a $300 million per year saving when this is completely implemented.

Even under the current system, return on equity has produced unjust results—rewarding the well off, and pushing up Medicare costs. Return on equity costs Medicare about $300 million per year—not for expanded benefits for the elderly, or lower copayments, or lower deductibles. No—in fact the administration wants to increase costs for the elderly. No—this $300 million is for profit.

According to CBO figures, for-profit hospitals account for only 9 percent of Medicare costs. Excluding return on equity, they account for 11 percent of Medicare capital payments—higher than their overall share. When you add in return on equity—the real story is told. For-profit hospitals account for 20 percent of Medicare's capital payments, more than twice their share of overall Medicare payments. Medicare capital payments to for-profit hospitals are $7,170 per bed annually compared with $3,360 per bed for nonprofits.

Now, what effect do these payments have on Medicare and on the health care system generally? Well, they certainly do not go to help pay for care for the poor and the uninsured—like the 16 million Americans who have lost health insurance since the Reagan recession began. Their own spokesman has admitted that private hospitals skim well-to-do patients and leave the public hospitals to care for the poor and the lower middle class. But it does lead to a lot of unoccupied beds through acquisition and construction. For-profit hospitals have a 65-percent occupancy rate compared with the American Hospital Association average of 76 percent. And each unoccupied bed costs $112,000—a large share borne by Medicare.

And for-profit hospitals are more expensive for Medicare—primarily because of return on equity. According to a recent study, for-profit hospitals cost Medicare about 13 percent more than comparable not-for-profit hospitals.

The result has been that return on equity has served to increase both capital and operating costs for Medicare. It does no good to adopt a prospective payment system if we exclude from it the most unjustified inflationary component in the Medicare system—return on equity.

Now, I know what the opponents of this amendment will say. They will say: "Return on equity is a difficult issue. We need to study it before we act. We do not know what the effect will be." Well, prospective payment by diagnosis-related group is a difficult issue. We do not know what the effect will be on public hospitals. But does the committee ask us to study first and then act. No. We are to act first, ask questions later.

We do not know what the effect will be on urban hospitals. Or rural hospitals. Or, most important, quality and adequacy of care for the elderly, the poor, and the sick. Does the committee ask us to study first and act later on behalf of the elderly and the sick. No. But when it comes to hospital profits, suddenly we are cautious. Suddenly we are unwilling to take the plunge. I say that is wrong. I say it speaks of administration policies that are too willing to sacrifice the neediest to save the greediest. And I say we stop now.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD several tables and articles.

There being no objection, the matters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TABLE 1.—DISTRIBUTION OF ESTIMATED MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR CAPITAL COSTS, BY HOSPITAL OWNERSHIP

| | Percent of hospitals | Percent of Medicare costs | Percent of Medicare capital payments | | Estimated '83 annual year 1984 Medicare capital payments ² |

BIG HOSPITAL CHAINS CONTINUE HEALTHY SHOWING EVEN AS LIMIT ON MEDICARE COSTS APPEARS CERTAIN

(By Gary Putka)

Congressional efforts to curb Medicare costs might be considered ill tidings for the stocks of the nation's big hospital chains, which derive 40% to 45% of their revenues from the federal program.

Instead, a couple of the stocks have been moving briskly upward recently. And yesterday, the hospital-management companies held their own in a downward market, even though it was investors' first chance to react to Wednesday night's passage in the House of Representatives of a Social Security measure containing Medicare curbs.

The reason for the stocks' surprising strength appears to be that the bill didn't come out quite as badly for hospitals as some had feared. In fact, for hospitals that are run for profit, some analysts see distinct advantages in the way that the House would change Medicare payments.

The Senate Finance Committee began work on its version of the Social Security measure late yesterday. And while there are no assurances that the final version of any bill would be exactly as the House passed it, there's widespread feeling in Washington that a similar measure will be enacted into law.

Late yesterday, the Senate Finance Committee voted to include the Medicare provision in its version of the Social Security bill.

On Wall Street, some of the biggest hospital chains are already well on their way to recovery from fears late last year that the measure would be a bitter pill. Hospital Corp. of America, the largest hospital operator, has risen about 12% in the past two weeks. Humana is up about 10% over the same span. Others, which haven't outperformed the market in recent weeks, reacted well yesterday to the news from Washington. They included American Medical International, which gained 1/2 to 3/4%; Lifemark, up 1 to 3/4%; and Universal Health Services, up 1/2 to 2/3%. National Medical Enterprises, another major player, ebbed 1/4 to 3/8%.

The bill passed by the House would set fixed Medicare payments to hospitals for 467 categories of treatment. Under the current system, hospitals receive reimbursement for costs, plus a regulated return on equity, currently about 7% to 8% on an after-tax basis.

Before all aspects of the House's proposed legislation were clear, some had feared that the new "prospective payments" plan would mean that hospitals operated for profit wouldn't make any profit when dispensing services under Medicare, an aid program for the elderly. What seems to have dawned on investors lately is that the payments system will enable hospitals to pocket the difference if they can provide services at less than the fixed payments.

The payment schedules are expected to be guided by the average costs for providing services of all hospitals within nine geographical regions established by the bill. John Hindelong, health-care analyst and director of research A.G. Becker, believes that for-profit hospitals are so much more efficient in providing services than nonprofit hospitals, that they will be able to improve their profit margins in Medicare as a result of the new system.

Mr. Hindelong hasn't changed his earnings forecasts for the companies, however, because "I've been expecting this legislation for awhile." He believes Hospital Corp. will earn $2.80 a share this year, up from $2.25 in 1982; Humana, $2 a share in the year ending Aug. 31, up from $1.60; American Medical, also on an August fiscal year, $2 up from $1.60; and National Medical, $1.85 in its year ending May 31, up from $1.47 it earned from operations last year.

But there isn't any consensus about the effects of the proposed payments schedule. Bill Hayes, who manages the $50 million Fidelity Select Health Care mutual fund, said he believes that the hospital chains won't do any better under the new system. Nonetheless, he says he bought some of the issues yesterday, although he wouldn't say which.

"At least it isn't a major negative," he said. "And the situation is still one of demographics. We have more older people who will need more health care in the future." Mr. Hayes said he expects the major hospital chains' profits will grow at least 20% a year in the next three years. Some of this growth, he reasons, will come from acquisitions, as it becomes increasingly difficult for nonprofit hospitals to make it. "The Little Sisters of the Poor . . . are going by the boards," he said.

From an investor's point of view, the stocks are already assuming big growth rates. Their price-earnings ratios, although not as high as some high-technology medical companies, range between 17 and 20, much higher than the market as a whole.

Perry Wyson, a Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., investment adviser, tracks hospital-management companies two ways. Mr. Wyson's medical-stock newsletter has done analyses that show the industry is "grow, grow, grow," he said. But his "Consensus of Insiders" report, which tracks corporate officers' stock sales and purchases in their own companies, shows heavy insider selling of Hospital Corp. of America and Humana in the past six months, enough to keep him from recommending the two issues.

FIRMS FIND HOSPITALS ARE HEALTHY BUSINESS

(By Don Kirkman)

WASHINGTON.—The hospital that will open its doors in Crawfordsville, Ind., in 1985 won't be run by the customary group of physicians, or church or local government.

It will be owned and operated by a profit-making corporation, American Medical International of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Crawfordsville's new hospital is part of a trend in the United States and overseas.

Encouraged by multibillion-dollar federal health programs, private business corporations are building, buying, leasing or managing under contract thousands of health facilities that once were operated by municipalities, churches, physicians and small businessmen.

It's true of hospitals, nursing homes, diagnostic laboratories, artificial kidney treatment centers and doctor groups that offer prepaid medical plans.

While some people worry that the health corporations are driving up costs, defenders say corporations are the way of the future.

"The health field is a heck of a growth opportunity for private corporations," said Michael Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals.

"Doctor-owned hospitals are selling out or going broke. Catholic and municipal hospitals are turning over their hospitals to private corporations, and the large chains are moving in."

There are now more than 1000 privately owned hospitals in the United States (of 7,000 overall), and another 500 are leased or operated by corporations. Each year, the number is increasing.

The reason for the rapid growth of corporate-operated hospitals is Medicare, Bromberg said. With the government now guaranteeing payment for tens of millions of elderly patients, a hospital can make money if it's properly run.

Five large hospital corporations "are going wild," Bromberg said, continually opening facilities in the Sun Belt states and affluent suburbs throughout the country.

Most of the private facilities aren't large—usually 100 to 300 beds—and their staffs are smaller than those of municipal and sectarian hospitals of comparable size.

What they offer, however, is a great deal more personal attention per patient from physicians, nurses and staff, Bromberg said. "On a day-by-day basis, our private hospitals are a bit more expensive than public hospitals, but our patients remain in the hospital a day less than the public's, so their total bills are lower."

Bromberg acknowledges that the private hospitals "skim" well-to-do patients from public hospitals. He says simply that the main role of the public hospital is to care for the poor and lower middle class.

Bromberg said the biggest of the private corporations is Hospital Corp. of America based in Nashville, Tenn. American Medical International is No. 2. HCA owns or operates 381 hospitals and AMI 115. Three other firms own between 50 and 100.

Paul Ginsberg, an economist for the Congressional Budget Office, says he's worried about the expansion of corporate-owned hospitals because their basic motive is to make money.

"I think they're a two-edged sword," Ginsberg said. "They're providing services for communities that need them, but they're also driving up health care costs. There's no incentive in those hospitals to reduce costs."

But Cameron Thompson, a spokesman for the FAH, says the private hospitals "have the capital to build modern facilities or improve existing facilities; have fine personnel and management expertise; and can recruit physicians for communities that are having a hard time attracting doctors."

"We think the systemization provided by corporations is the way of the future," Thompson said. "It's a good thing for Americans and provides better health care for them. But it costs a lot of money."

Mr. KENNEDY. I hope to have the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee and also the chairman of the subcommittee of the Finance Committee, both of whom have been extremely innovative in moving us toward real and effective cost controls, to hear out their views on this particular issue.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me suggest that I understand the point raised by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts.

As he indicated, there is a cost saving of about $300 million, when totally implemented.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. There is a provision, of course, in the House bill, a 3-year provision, and I would guess we would have some flexibility in conference.

Certainly the Senator from Kansas is aware of the problem. In fact, the bill currently contains a provision that directs the Secretary to report back to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment on the method by which all capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, can be included within the prospective payment system.

So I do not believe I have any basic disagreement with what the Senator from Massachusetts wants to accomplish. But I hope he might give us the opportunity to work this out in conference. The bill now provides the basis to fully address the problem.

I might also indicate I think the distinguished majority leader wanted to say a word on this, and maybe I could yield to the Senator from Minnesota while we are waiting for the majority leader.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. President, let me just add another dimension in the discussion of the issue, and compliment the Senator from Massachusetts for raising it.

First, perhaps by way of clarification of the issue, it is not necessarily a sweetener or a profit that is being added by this bill. It is a sweetener of sorts that has been present in the system since 1965.

As the Senator from Massachusetts indicates, this is probably an appropriate time as long as we are addressing capital from the standpoint of the way we reimburse, a very appropriate time to address the return on equity issue, and I agree with him on that.

We have a strong concern, and we have had a strong concern, about the whole issue of how and what role we play in financing the access of for-profit, not-for-profit, and Government hospitals to capital in this country. We have come a long way from the old Hill-Burton days, the tax-exempt days, to some relatively unpredictable future, and it is a time in which compensations and sweeteners and things such as that ought to get out of the picture.

I think in this medicare reform we are taking the first step in the direction of some discipline on the whole decisionmaking process because, in effect, we are addressing the hospital income area, and rather than saying to the hospitals, "Whatever you want to charge for a day in the hospital or for a particular procedure that is conducted in the hospital we are going to reimburse you for those costs," we are saying, "we are only going to reimburse so much money for each of 467 various types of diagnosis."

So right off the bat, the hospital corporations or the government units that operates these hospitals knows they can only make so much money on the front end for treating patients in the hospital. That is the first essential discipline in this process.

The second is to go back behind that and to look at the various ways, other ways, that capital needs are met. Funds can be raised through bank loans, stock sales, bond issuances, the sale of assets, acceptances of gifts, Government aid such as the Hill-Burton guarantees, tax-exempt bonds, and the return on equity, a whole variety of ways, and that is why—and I know the Senator from Massachusetts supports this—we made the decision that in 3 years we are going to blend capital costs into the prospective payment system.

That is why we want return on equity and all the other capital issues examined over the next 18 months with a report back to us by the first of the year in 1985 about what we ought to do about all of these issues as we prepare for that fourth year in this system in which we are no longer going to have these distinctions in the capital area.

So I say to the Senator from Massachusetts that I expect that I and many of us on the Finance Committee may ultimately end up supporting a phase-out of return on equity and other methods by which the Government finances capital costs associated with health care.

I would indicate, as the chairman has indicated, that we have been given the flexibility in conference to come to the ends that I think all of us would agree we need to come to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished floor manager, the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) for yielding. I find myself in the not uncommon position of supporting the chairman of the Finance Committee in his opposition to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY).

This amendment, Mr. President, is similar to the language added by the House Ways and Means Committee. Quite simply, it would phase out compensation, under medicare, for return on equity to proprietary hospitals. The amendment does not, however, address any of the other costs of capital, such as interest on debt. Thus, passage of this amendment would greatly distort the means of capital formation toward incurring debt. I do not believe that it is good public policy, Mr. President, to effectively eliminate equity as a source of capital for hospital construction and modernization.

Furthermore, both the House-passed and Senate-reported bills contain a requirement for the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct a study on the role of compensation for all capital costs. I think that it is only proper that any changes in the present computations wait until that study is completed. At that time, we will be better able to evaluate the appropriate compensation for all types of debt through the medicare system.

Given these considerations, I would urge the Senator from Massachusetts to consider withdrawing his amendment, which I understand he is inclined to do. I would also urge the chairman of the Finance Committee to hold the Senate position in conference. I believe that it is premature to address the issue in this legislation.

Again, I thank the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) for yielding.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as I had other discussions both with the chairman of the Finance Committee and the chairman of the subcommittee, I know they are aware of this issue.

This is an appropriate time to address it. The fact remains, as we have effectively phased out the whole planning process, we see an increasing number of proprietary hospitals with increasing capital expenditures. Once that capital investment is actually made, it remains then for the succeeding generations to end up paying for it. So this is an important time to act. I do think it is an important matter in terms of long-term savings. I welcome both the interest and the attention that the Senator from Minnesota and the chairman of the committee have given to it.

I hope that they would give additional attention in the conference with the House of Representatives on this issue. I am quite willing to see that matter considered in the conference. We will have an opportunity to review it down the line, in any event. But I certainly welcome the attitude and the disposition of the chairman of the committee and the chairman of the subcommittee.

With those assurances, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to withdraw his amendment. The amendment is withdrawn.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 91

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have another amendment that I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Bradley amendment will continue to be set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 91.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 215, after line 16 insert the following new subsection:

"(k) Section 1903(s)(3) of such Act is amended by—

(1) striking out "on July 1, 1981, and" in subparagraph (A),

(2) inserting "(i)" after "the Secretary" in subparagraph (D), and

(3) after "year" in subparagraph (D), striking the period and adding the following new clause:

"or (ii) in the case of programs established after January 1, 1983, is satisfied, based on assurances made by the State, that the annual rate of increase in aggregate hospital inpatient costs per capita or per admission (as defined by the Secretary) in the State during any subsequent calendar year will be at least two percentage points less than the annual rate of increase during that calendar year in such costs per capita or per admission for hospitals located in the States (excluding from such computation any State which has in effect a qualified hospital cost review program during that entire calendar year)."

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as my colleagues know, the Reconciliation Act reduced medicaid payments States are entitled to by 3 percent in fiscal year 1982, 4 percent in fiscal 1983, and 4.5 percent in fiscal year 1984.

States which had comprehensive hospital cost containment programs in place, July 1, 1981, were entitled to a 1-percent reduction in the reduction rate if they could demonstrate their rates of increase in hospital costs were 2 percent below the national average increase.

Only seven States—Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Washington—met the deadline—had programs in place on July 1, 1981.

These seven States will get a 3½ percent reduction in their medicaid payment next year. Every other State in the country will have its payment reduced by 4½ percent—even if it has adopted a cost-containment program.

And the West Virginia Legislature last week adopted a cost-containment program. West Virginia, however, because it did not have a program in place in the summer of 1981 will not qualify for the bonus point.

My amendment would correct this inequity by removing the requirement that the State program be established by July 1, 1981. Under my amendment, any State that enacts a qualified hospital cost review program and can satisfy the Secretary that its program will reduce the rate of increase in hospital costs at least 2 percent below the national average would receive the 1 percent reduction.

Mr. President, runaway health costs are bankrupting our business and industry, disrupting Federal, State, and local budgets, and imperiling the security of our senior citizens. No American is immune from the ravages of health inflation, but its impact is harshest on the most vulnerable in our society—the young and the old, the sick and the poor, and the struggling family trying to make ends meet.

For too long the Congress and the executive branch have failed to show the leadership necessary to tackle this critical question. We have slashed away at the rate of increase in Medicare and Medicaid—not by making fundamental changes in the health care system—but by shifting those costs—dollar for dollar—to the elderly, the sick, and the working American. Rampant inflation in health care costs continues unabated.

While we have failed to face head on the need to control health care expenditures, a number of States have taken the initiative and developed all payor prospective payment systems. They recognized that only by including all payors, could they finally protect their citizens against uncontrolled health inflation.

If we cannot bring ourselves to put the reins of spiralling health care costs, we must do all we can to encourage States to develop effective all payor cost-containment systems.

The legislation before us today would permit States to run their own Medicare programs if they adopt all payor hospital cost control systems that will not result in greater Medicare expenditures.

Those seven States that beat the statutory deadline will have an unfair break—they can opt out of the Federal Medicare program, run their own all payor program and get a break on their Medicaid payment. My amendment would give every State an incentive to move to establishing their own systems by giving them a slightly smaller reduction in their Medicaid payment. It would recognize the move West Virginia has made in adopting an all payor cost-containment system. The incentive is admittedly modest—CBO estimates that it would return to the State less than 15 percent of the savings that accrue to the Federal Government from the State program. The benefits to our national health care system are potentially enormous.

Mr. President, this amendment is really quite simple. What we are trying to do is encourage States to take action in the area of cost containment. We have seen a number of States that have effective cost containment programs, including my own State of Massachusetts, and also maintain a program that assures quality health care.

The increases, for example, in hospital costs in the States that have had effective cost containment have been significantly below those that have not had cost containment. In the current legislation, we have provided a financial incentive to the States that have taken that action by providing an additional point of matching payment under the Medicaid program. This has served as a financial inducement for those States which have an effective cost containment program.

This amendment would offer that same opportunity to other States that, in their own wisdom, make the decision to move toward cost containment. It is an encouragement to those States to move in that direction.

I think if it was totally implemented, if all the States had a cost containment program, it would cost $150 million, but the savings would be in the billions of dollars.

So what we are trying to do with this particular proposal is apply that encouragement to the States in the future that adopt cost containment programs as we have for the States that have already enacted it.

It seems to me, Mr. President, it is only fair. It does again, address the issue of trying to limit the very substantial escalation of health care costs, which now are three times the rate of inflation.

I am mindful, Mr. President, that, for example, West Virginia last week adopted a cost containment program. West Virginia, however, because it did not have a program in place in the summer of 1981, would not qualify for the bonus point. This amendment would basically correct this inequity by removing the requirement that the State program be established by July of 1981.

Clearly, any State that implements an effective cost containment program is going to be saving the Treasury tens of millions, probably hundreds of millions of dollars. Over the period of years, this amount would come up into the billions.

So I hope, Mr. President, that we would try to encourage the States. This is a very modest program, but it does seem to provide some carrot to the States if they will move toward an effective cost containment program. It seems to me those States ought to be treated equally with those States that have already adopted the program.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, there is on its face, I imagine, a certain logic to the Senator's amendment. As he pointed out, in the agreement that was reached during consideration of the 1981 Reconciliation Act, there was a provision for certain States to offset their Medicaid reductions and that applied to States that already had waivers from the program. So I suppose you could see some logic in saying that anybody else who gets a waiver in the future ought to qualify.

However, we have considered this at some length. Unfortunately, for the case of the Senator from Massachusetts, we have come to several different conclusions from those that he has come to.

First, it is our feeling that this whole discussion belongs much more appropriately in the consideration of the Medicaid budget process, which we will have before us in the coming months, rather than in the context of Medicare reimbursement.

Second—and this was discussed at some length during the course of our 1981 discussion and it is something that we are trying to provide more of, so to speak—the State here have a lot of incentives to establish rate-setting systems if they desire to do so. It really is a question of, do you need to give them more incentives or not? The fact of the matter is there are plenty of incentives out there right now.

So the position here is, very simply, why should we reduce Federal savings from this program in order to encourage the States to do something that already makes good sense in and of itself?

The bill that we are discussing, and which it is the intention of the Senator from Massachusetts to amend, goes another step further in the area of flexibility, because it provides opportunities for States which had desired to establish rate-setting systems to do so and it sets out some ground rules for doing it. But, in effect, it is an encouragement to States, such as the State the Senator represents and others, to go ahead with their rate-setting systems or to establish new rate-setting systems.

I suppose the bottom line on it, Mr. President, also, is the fact that accepting this amendment would result in a cost to the Federal Government of at least $57 million in fiscal year 1984 and a cost of as much as $160 million in the future.

It is our judgment that the States are going to do these things without the $57 million or the $160 million, so why should we forego that kind of saving?

I would say to the Senator from Massachusetts that the whole issue of Medicaid and the Federal role in that process is one that this Senator at least is deeply concerned about. We plan to schedule a series of hearings this summer on that subject.

We acknowledge the fact that at the State, local, and community levels the savings as well as the quality can be best preserved. We do not know how to do that end of it all that well, but we need to find for us the national commitment to the needy in this country in the health care system. It is through that hearing process that we intend to start in late spring and early summer that we hope to find the most appropriate answer where you can get the quality, you can get the accessibility, and you can also get the savings at the State and local levels while we provide that necessary financial commitment to every person in this country so that they do not have to vote with their feet in order to find health care in America.

I can certainly make that commitment to the Senator from Massachusetts, that the issue that he is trying to resolve here hopefully we can resolve with the help of the States through this process of defining our role versus the States' role in providing health care to the needy.

I would encourage the Senator to consider those arguments and, if he can find it within his heart to do so, to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I gather from the response of the Senator from Minnesota he is not prepared to indicate support for the concept even when we consider the Medicaid later this year. If he would accept it at that particular time, I would be willing to see us delay. I do think this is an appropriate vehicle because this legislation has very significant provisions in it to encourage States to move toward cost containment.

The judgment of the Congress in 1981 was that if States have a cost containment program, it will yield savings not only to Medicaid but to Medicare and all hospital payers. They do not get this real incentive unless they hold the rate of growth below the national average. So they repay many times over in terms of savings to the Federal Government. It does seem to me that if it made sense in 1981 in terms of equity it would make sense now.

If it is a question about the vehicle, I am glad to wait until we consider it later on. If it is a question of the concept, I am prepared to move now.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Let me say in response to that, that from a personal standpoint it may be a combination. I suspect if we discuss our differences in concept on the right vehicle, this Senator might be more susceptible to the arguments being made by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I do think that the reason for this proposal is really quite compelling.

I am grateful for the openness of the Senator from Minnesota, but I would just as soon let the Senate have an opportunity to speak on this issue. I am prepared to move to a vote.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER) and the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART), and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) is absent because of illness in the family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATFIELD). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 64, as follows:

So Mr. KENNEDY's amendment (UP No. 91) was rejected.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BAKER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that it be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 92

(Purpose: To provide that benefits no longer be paid to aliens not authorized by law to live and work in the United States)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. NICKLES), for himself, Mr. MELCHER, Mr. BOREN, Mr. EAST, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. ABDNOR, Mr. ARMSTRONG, Mr. GOLDWATER, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. WARNER, Mr. PRESSLER, Mr. MATTINGLY, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. HUMPHREY, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 92.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

DISALLOWANCE OF BENEFITS NOT AUTHORIZED TO WORK IN THE UNITED STATES

SEC. . Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following section:

"§ 234. Prohibition of benefits to illegal aliens

"Notwithstanding any other provisions of this title—

"(a) An individual can only receive benefits if, at the time such individual files his or her claim for benefits, such individual can show that he or she—

"(1) is a U.S. citizen, or
 "(2) was once a U.S. citizen but had voluntarily relinquished such status, or
 "(3) is an alien who been legally admitted to work, or

"(4) was once an alien who was legally admitted to work but had voluntarily relinquished such status.

"(b) Subsection (a) applies only with respect to individuals who first become eligible for benefits after December, 1983."

SUSPENSION OF BENEFITS TO ILLEGAL ALIENS

SEC. . (a) Section 202(n) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof:

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, no monthly benefit under this section or section 223 of such Act shall be paid:

"(A) to an individual for any months for which the Attorney General notifies the Secretary that such individual is subject to—

"(i) a final order of exclusion entered under 8 USC 1226, or

"(ii) a final order of departure entered under 8 USC 1252, or

"(iii) a voluntary departure in lieu of deportation under 8 USC 1254(e); and

"(B) on the basis of wages or self-employment income which were earned by an individual during any period for which the Attorney General furnishes information sufficient for the Secretary to determine that such individual is not legally permitted to work in the United States."

(b) The amendment made by this section shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits payable for months after December 1984. Nothing in this section shall prohibit current enforcement measures.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, the amendment that I have sent to the desk would stop social security benefits from going to aliens who have worked illegally in this country. Joining me as cosponsors are: Senators MELCHER, BOREN, EAST, HAWKINS, BOSCHWITZ, ABDNOR, ARMSTRONG, GOLDWATER, BURDICK, WARNER, PRESSLER, MATTINGLY, GRASSLEY, HUMPHREY, RANDOLPH, HEFLIN, THURMOND, and JEPSEN.

Mr. President, the amendment I offer today is simple. First, it would allow the Social Security Administration to not pay benefits to any alien who the Immigration and Naturalization Service says is living or working in the United States illegally.

The second provision would work in a prospective manner. It would provide that those persons who are applying for social security benefits can only receive benefits if they are either a United States citizen or an alien who is living in this country legally.

As my colleagues know, it is currently unlawful for aliens to enter or work in the United States without the express permission of the United States Government. Unfortunately, present law with regard to social security do not reinforce this prohibition against illegal aliens working in this country.

Under current social security eligibility criteria, an alien who is living or working in this country illegally can earn and receive social security benefits.

I hope my colleagues will review the GAO report which is to be published soon with estimates on the number of aliens who are receiving social security benefits illegally.

In this report the GAO calculates that between 200,000 and 500,000 aliens may be receiving benefits up to as much as $2.4 billion per year illegally. Obviously, these figures are, at best, a rough estimate since there is really no exact way of knowing how many aliens are living in this country and working in this country illegally.

I think that the main point is that our laws are not currently working together. We prohibit aliens from entering our country unless they have the Government's permission, but then we turn around and support those aliens that break immigration laws with social security benefits.

The amendment that I and 18 of my colleagues offer today would correct that inconsistency in the following manner.

First, those persons who are applying for social security benefits would have to fall into one of the following categories:

First, a U.S. citizen.

Second, a former U.S. citizen who voluntarily gave up their citizenship and left the country.

Third, an alien who has been legally admitted to work in this country, either initially or through amnesty.

Fourth, an alien who was formerly living and working in this country legally but has since left the country.

In addition, the amendment would allow SSA and INS to share information on those aliens who are found by INS to have been living or working here illegally. This insures that these illegal aliens do not receive social security benefits once they have been deported or have voluntarily left the country. The effective date on this second provision is January 1985, although current enforcement measures that INS and SSA are involved in are to continue. The reason for the effective date being 2 years away is that this is when SSA and INS will have the computer capabilities to cross check cases in a more complete manner than is currently being done.

I urge my colleagues to support this measure. Perhaps no other change that we have contemplated for social security has the unanimous support which this one does. Although it is a small measure, I believe that this is an important one for restoring confidence in Congress ability and willingness to make commonsense changes in the laws which govern Americans.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY. Did the Senator vote for the immigration bill that was reported by the Senate last year?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. In that bill was a provision that forgave those people who were in the United States illegally until the time that bill was passed. Can the Senator tell me what would be the effect on these people if the legislation was again passed and adopted? They are presently illegal immigrants in the country. In some cases, most probably they are getting social security benefits or building up credits. What will happen to them under the provisions of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. NICKLES. To respond the Senator's question, under our amendment, an individual can only receive benefits if at the time the individual files for his claim, such individual can show he is either a citizen or in this country legally. If Congress passes legislation providing amnesty, then they would be entitled to receive benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. When they file for the benefits—meaning when they reach age 65 or when they are disabled or reach 62? Is that the intention?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. When the Senator says "filed for those benefits," does that mean receive those benefits, or does that mean when they have stated that they were eligible to receive social security benefits, even though at that time they were illegal immigrants?

Mr. NICKLES. If at the time they filed, they were either American citizens or in this country legally, they would receive those benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. What does the word "filed" mean?

Mr. NICKLES. When they make application to receive social security.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Will the Senator clarify his view? The Simpson-Mazzoli legislation, which we adopted last year, granted amnesty to a large body of persons—we do not know precisely how many, but we have reasonable estimates—who would be allowed to remain in the United States. I do not recall that they were granted citizenship.

Mr. NICKLES. The second part of my amendment would cover the question of the Senator from New York. When it states:

 or is an alien who has been legally admitted to work, or was once an alien who was legally admitted to work but had voluntarily relinquished such status.

If they were legal at the time of application, then they would be entitled to receive social security. If they were classified as illegal, they would not receive benefits.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Is it the Senator's intention that a person who was covered by the amnesty provisions of the legislation adopted last year would thereupon become a legal alien, legally admitted?

Mr. NICKLES. If that is what Congress should pass in the immigration bill, then those aliens would be legally entitled to receive the benefits under this amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. They cannot have been legally admitted. Has the Senator's proposal provided for these persons? The purpose of the Senate was to allow the people to remain in the United States and to continue working and legalize their status. But it cannot legalize their entry. They entered at a past time.

Mr. NICKLES. If they are living in the United States legally, then they can receive benefits.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I see.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate the Senator's questions.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Let us assume the case of an alien who came here 30 years ago and has been working ever since and has been a good citizen in the community but never became a citizen, never really gained any legal status. Now it comes time for that individual to apply for social security benefits. Under the Senator's amendment, would that individual, who had been paying his taxes for 30 years, be deprived of social security benefits?

Mr. NICKLES. Let me make sure I understand. Did the Senator say that the person was working illegally in the country for 30 years?

Mr. METZENBAUM. No; it would not be illegal. The person had been working in the country for 30 years. I do not think that during that period he would have been violating any laws for having worked, and he had been under social security rules. Nobody had raised any question with him. He was just one of those persons who had not seen fit to take out citizenship papers. Maybe he even served in the war. What happens? He is now 65 years of age. Do we say to him, "You can't have your benefits because one afternoon, on the floor of the U.S. Senate, the Senate adopted an amendment, and you had no knowledge of it and most other people did"? Suddenly, he or she is without social security benefits.

Mr. NICKLES. I think the question can be answered.

The Immigration and Nationality Act provides that if a person is not a U.S. citizen, then in order for an alien to work in the United States they actually have to receive from the Department of Labor, a green card. If an alien has this card or other documents stating his or her legal status in this country, then they would receive the benefits.

However, if they were working in the United States, under the example of the Senator from Ohio, for 30 years, with a suspect or a false social security card and under false circumstances, they would not receive benefits.

Mr. METZENBAUM. If they had not received that green card, even if their entry had been illegal, but it would not be possible under some circumstances to get a green card making it possible for them to work.

Mr. NICKLES. If they received the green card, that is the Department of Labor saying it is legal for them to work, then they would be qualified to receive benefits. Even if they had not worked legally but worked illegally for 30 years and the amnesty provisions were passed, they would receive benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, let me try to be specific with the general question I asked earlier.

Let us assume someone has been in the United States working illegally, as an illegal immigrant, for 3 years. The Simpson-Mazzoli bill is passed and provides amnesty for that category of worker.

Under the Senator's amendment, would that worker be eligible for social security benefits that were accrued during those 3 years that he or she was an illegal immigrant?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct. They would receive those benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Senator alluded to a GAO study. Could the Senator tell me when that GAO study was published?

Mr. NICKLES. I mention in my statement that that report is in the process of being published. It is expected to be released at the end of March.

Mr. BRADLEY. And the Senator has obtained the information from the GAO as to what is in the study prior to its release?

Mr. NICKLES. That is correct. There is a draft report that has been circulated which I would be happy to give to the Senator.

As a matter of fact, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the report with my comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. (See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BRADLEY. How many illegal immigrants did the GAO study state were now receiving social security benefits?

Mr. NICKLES. The report provides only rough estimates, based on a number of studies which have been done. Estimates range from 1 million to 12 million, the most accepted range being 3.5 to 6 million.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Senator used some number $2.4 billion. What is that related to?

Mr. NICKLES. That was a figure which GAO arrived at by calculating the annual cost to the trust fund if 25 percent of the illegal aliens working in this country were to receive social security.

Mr. BRADLEY. So, according to this GAO report, which will be published and preliminary information the Senator has, if there are anywhere from 1 million to 12 million illegal immigrants in the country and anywhere between 25 percent of 3 million to 5 million of those illegal immigrants are now receiving social security benefits, to the level of $2.4 billion, is that what the Senator is asserting?

Mr. NICKLES. Yes, Senator. GAO came up with estimates and said that if 10 percent become vested which is probably a minimal number, about $900 million in benefits would be going out annually, and if 25 percent were becoming vested, it could be as much as $2.4 billion.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Let me put two questions if I may.

First, we have not seen this GAO report which evidently says they cannot prove what they do not know, but they can maybe. But is the Senator aware that the Inspector General of Social Security recently ran a random sample of 80,000 social security checks and found 2 to be irregular? Out of 80,000, 2, which really would be a remarkable performance for any large system. And I do not know but just from what we know from the Inspector General that does not seem to jibe with what we hear that we are going to hear from the GAO. I just make that point. I do not want to go beyond that.

But the distinguished author of the immigration legislation that we adopted last year is in the Chamber, and the Senator from Wyoming might wish to comment.

Do I understand that if the legislation granting amnesty were not to pass, then we would be denying social security to a large number of persons who have worked and earned it? We have proposed amnesty, but if it somehow just did not happen, as it did not happen last time, would they be denied that?

Mr. NICKLES. If a person applies for social security, then they would have to say, "Yes, I am a U.S. citizen," or "I worked legally in the United States," one or the other.

Second, we would allow Immigration to contact the Social Security Administration when they find someone who is working illegally in the country so that they could stop payments to them. Present law does this, when illegal aliens are deported.

When Immigration notifies Social Security and says "We are deporting an individual, he has been working in the United States illegally," then social security stops his benefits. That is present law. However present law also provides that if Immigration contacts Social Security and says, "We found this alien working illegally," and that alien leaves the country voluntarily, then that illegal alien can continue to receive benefits even though he worked in the United States illegally.

It is a large loophole through which a large percentage of illegal aliens can receive or continue to receive benefits. I might add, according to this GAO study, the volume of benefits received versus the dollars contributed by aliens is enormous, basically because an individual contributes for a relatively short period of time.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. That is because of automatic raises in the system.

Mr. NICKLES. No; that is because the alien works only half as long as an American beneficiary and then returns to his home country, where additional dependents are added who collect benefits for a long period of time. The ratio is about $23 received in benefits for every dollar contributed into the system. It is quite a drain on the social security system.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I wish to see the GAO report.

May I say to my friend from Oklahoma that the distinguished Senator from Wyoming is in the Chamber. I hope he can speak to this matter before our debate concludes.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. president, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I have a question which is in the same general area as the question of the Senator from New York. I did wish to inquire about the relationship between the Senator's amendment and the bill sponsored by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming which, of course, would grant legal status, eventually citizenship, to a large number of people who are now illegal aliens.

Do I correctly understand this amendment, to the extent that any such person is granted permanent resident status in the United States and/or becomes a citizen, that person would be entitled to the entire social security benefits which all of his or her employment has earned even though some of that employment took place during a time in which the immigrant was illegal? That is to say, is it true that this amendment speaks only to one's status at the time when one applies for benefits? If you are legal when you apply for benefits, you get everything that you have contributed?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

As I mentioned earlier to a similar question, the amendment says that an individual can only receive benefits if at the time the individual files for benefits, he or she is either a U.S. citizen or is legally living in the United States.

Mr. GORTON. But once they have made that showing, their benefits are based on their entire work experience, even that during the time in which they were illegal?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GORTON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, in responding to the distinguished Senator from Washington, the Senator from Oklahoma said that the status will be determined at the time they apply and show their citizenship. I have a problem because I do not know whether we can devise any acceptable procedures to carry this amendment out.

Those applying for benefits would be required to show proof of citizenship or legal alien status, which was the question that the Senator from Washington just addressed.

Unfortunately, Senator, there is no system for doing that. Existing immigration documents are not adequate. Immigration kits now exist, which consist of forged documents. Social security personnel are going to pass judgment on who is and who is not a legal alien. Frankly, coming from a State which has a very large percentage of Hispanics and which is on the border, I am very disturbed about how we are going to devise a system that does not have Hispanics who apply, run through some special kind of check to see if they are citizens or not.

Mr. NICKLES. It is really not as complicated as it may appear. Applicants will either show that they are American citizens or that they are legally in this country. That would take care of your concerns, would it not?

Mr. DOMENICI. No, it would not. What do you make beneficiaries do now if they are applying? What do you make them do to show proof if they are entitled now? They do not have to produce an American citizenship document; they have an earnings record and a social security card.

Mr. NICKLES. That is part of the problem. There is no control. Criteria for receiving social security benefits do not include legal status in this country. The social security system we have was designed to benefit American workers primarily or persons working legally in the United States. Many beneficiaries do not fall into either one of these categories and they are receiving a sum of dollars draining the system.

A person coming into the United States has to receive from the Department of Labor a permit to work in this country, showing they are working legally in the United States. This can be shown as viable proof of legal status for benefits. I am not saying that what we have is perfect. But, what we can do is eliminate a lot of the benefits that are going to individuals who are leaving the country after having been found to be illegally in the country. Now, when Immigration finds them, they leave, but under law continue to receive benefits.

Mr. DOMENICI. Then you are saying that basically you do not know precisely what procedures are going to be used, and you do not have one presently on the books. Who is going to devise it?

Mr. NICKLES. We have talked to and worked with the Legal Counsel of INS. We have worked with the Social Security Administration, both of which are supportive of our efforts.

Our original legislation has been refined so that it can be done administratively by the appropriate Departments. We have coordinated with both INS and with SSA to come up with something that would give the needed flexibility.

I might add that the second part of our amendment only assures that SSA has the proper authority and mandate to stop benefits which might go to aliens who have been found to be living and/or working in the country illegally.

The effective date on this provision is after December 1984 because Immigration has requested adequate time to get their computer system ready for this kind of cross-check.

We also put in a provision which says, "Nothing in this section shall prohibit current enforcement measures," because we did not want to stop SSA of INS in their current activities to stop benefits when an alien is deported.

Mr. DOMENICI. But that only addresses the issue of Immigration sending evidence to Social Security. My question has to do with proof of citizenship up front. Are you changing that from current law? You just described how you might get stricken from the rolls if INS advises that they have somebody on the rolls who is illegal. My question has to do with qualifying from the beginning, not how you get taken off. Are you changing the requirements up front? For example, somebody is going in now and applying: Are you changing the law as to what they must use as proof that they are entitled to social security?

Mr. NICKLES. That is the first section of our amendment, Senator.

Mr. DOMENICI. You are changing the law.

Mr. NICKLES. Yes. We are saying that a person cannot receive benefits unless he is an American citizen or is living in the United States, legally. This is the prospective portion.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. MELCHER. As one of the co-sponsors of this amendment, let me say that the intent is not to create a barrier that might be envisioned by some of the questions asked by individual Senators, but to create the mechanism of showing that those who are not citizens have either derived their jobs by way of the blue card or the green card, that is the green card from Immigration that it is OK to try to stay and receive a job or the blue card from the Department of Labor authorizing them to be able to work in a certain position.

It is an attempt, the amendment simply attempts, to close the drain off of social security for those who have not complied. It does not, I do not believe, attempt in any way to or create a restriction for somebody who was not a citizen but who legally worked in the country, had a job and diligently performed that work for years. There is nothing to prevent that individual from receiving benefits.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy to yield for a question.

Mr. CHAFEE. I appreciate the sentiment in which this amendment has been offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, who has been concerned and has given a lot of attention to these matters, and justifiably so.

Let me just say about the amendment that this is the type of amendment that if squared away completely, if we had hearings on it, if we completely understood it and the concerns that have been voiced here on the floor were taken care of, this is the type of amendment that would pass. In other words, I do not think it is necessary to have this amendment attached to the social security bill in order to have it passed. It could be deferred, and we would have a chance to review it and have hearings on it in the Finance Committee, and then come up, after careful consideration, and take care of the problems that were voiced on the floor.

But let me just say to the Senator from Oklahoma this whole area is fraught with difficulties.

I am amazed that the Commissioner wrote the Senator this letter on March 18, because the Commissioner appeared before our committee on a simpler matter; namely, the payment of benefits to legal aliens. In this legislation that is before us on the floor, it provides that legal aliens who return overseas, in other words do not remain residents in the United States, can only collect for benefits what they have put into the fund plus interest. In other words, they cannot even collect the employer's contribution.

Mr. Svahn was present when we were considering this and certainly did not take a position in favor of it. He voiced some concerns about the administrative problems. But the administrative problems that are involved in the Senator's amendment are far more difficult.

It seems to me, if we should adopt the Senator's amendment on the floor today, which I hope we will not and I hope the Senator will not press it, we are going to cause, I think, considerable hardship and unfairness to a host of people who are unable to prove certain facts going into the distant past.

It is a fact there has never been a hearing in the Finance Committee or, I believe, in the House Ways and Means Committee—and I cannot testify to that—on this matter. As a matter of fact, when this came up before the Ways and Means Committee, it was deferred on the insistence or the urging of Mr. PICKLE because there had not been hearings on this matter. So it is not in the House bill.

In the Senate bill it was brought up and many of us felt—we are dealing solely with legal aliens and the payment to them overseas—and many of us felt that it was improper to proceed without more consideration with the difficulties involved.

Now the Senator is coming forward on the floor of the Senate with this amendment which, as has been pointed out with various arguments—and I am anxious to hear what the Senator from Wyoming, who has worked long hours on this in connection with his immigration measure, has to say. Here out of the blue comes this measure. I think we are going to do great hardship to a host of potential beneficiaries.

Let me also say this: Never before, as I understand it, in the social security system, have we provided that those who pay in do not get their benefits. But that may be right. Perhaps it is correct. Perhaps in this group of illegal aliens, I cannot see that you make any provisions for those who come in illegally who subsequently become legal. But set that aside, maybe we want to take that step. But I think it is a step we ought to only take after careful consideration and hearings on it.

It may well come out the way the Senator wants or a slight variation, but this is the type of amendment that can be considered separate from this bill and will certainly have a good deal of attention and I believe support normally from this body.

So I hope the Senator will not press his amendment.

(Mr. DURENBERGER assumed the chair.)

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator yield for a comment on the point just made?

Mr. NICKLES. I will be happy to yield the floor unless the Senator has a question to me.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will put it in the form of a question.

As the Senator from Rhode Island indicated, the committee dealt with the problem of noncitizens who are not residents receiving social security benefits. In this legislation now pending before the Senate is a provision that limits the benefits paid to aliens who are not residents of the United States to the amount that they paid into the system plus interest. It is, I believe, applicable to aliens who were in this country legally or illegally. There is no distinction between them. Therefore, that provision already in the legislation appears to take care of the principal concern expressed by the Senator from Oklahoma of an illegal alien who is discovered by the Immigration Service and is ordered to leave the country and subsequently leaves—and the Senator has expressed a legitimate concern—and then, going back to the country of origin, receives benefits the same as other social security beneficiaries which generally results in a return far greater than the amount of taxes paid.

I ask the Senator: Since that concern is already addressed in the legislation, is there any other reason to pursue this particular amendment? As I understood it, that was the Senator's principal concern in response to the questions raised here today.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate the Senator's question. The Lugar amendment, which passed and which I co-sponsored, did curb the amount of benefits. There has been a growth of benefits in some cases for those who were living abroad and receiving social security. I supported provisions to curb that growth. However, those were persons who were legally working in the United States.

Our amendment addresses those who are working illegally in the United States and who Immigration has deported.

What we are trying to do is say that if Immigration finds a person working illegally, then they would lose their benefits.

The other aspect of our bill, the prospective part, I think is much greater and more important. It insures that this abuse does not happen in the future. In other words, if a alien is working illegally in the United States, they probably would not even apply for social security because they would say, "Wait a minute, I am going to have to show I was legally working in the United States."

Mr. MITCHELL. I would say it is my understanding—and I think it ought to be checked—that the provisions in the bill now do not distinguish between aliens who work legally and those who work illegally in this country, but rather the only distinguishing factor is whether or not the beneficiary is an alien and no longer resides in this country; that is, the distinction that the Senator has suggested between the provisions in the bill and his amendment do not, according to my understanding, in fact, exist in the bill. I think that ought to be checked. Obviously, if I am incorrect I will stand corrected.

But I was involved in the committee discussions, as was the Senator from Iowa, who was present at the time, and I do not recall any mention being made of limiting the provision now in the bill only to those aliens who had been legally in the country. Rather, the only distinguishing factors are whether or not they are aliens and whether or not they are no longer residents of this country.

If that is so, then it seems to me that the principal reason for the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma no longer exists if this other provision remains in the bill.

Mr. NICKLES. Let me explain a little bit further. There is a reason for this legislation to exist. Again, I compliment the work that the Finance Committee has done in adopting the Lugar amendment—the existing language that is in the bill that is before us.

However, we would go a step further. Our amendment would say right now that when Immigration finds a person who is working illegally, they will notify the Social Security Administration and say, "This person is working illegally and should not be entitled to receive benefits." We make that prospective. It gives them plenty of time to coordinate their computers. The amendment tells Immigration to work with Social Security. And, by January 1, 1985, the two agencies would be able to coordinate their efforts on this matter.

Let me go into this a little further. Currently, an alien can receive a social security card. They receive it for purposes that they type on the card, not for work purposes, but they can use it for credit cards, et cetera. However, Social Security has found that people use this social security card, even though they are not entitled to work legally in the United States, to earn and receive social security benefits. Now Social Security will be able to coordinate better with Immigration and say, "We have a person working illegally in the United States," and they can contact SSA.

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand what the Senator is saying, that he wishes to extend the limitation on benefits to aliens who remain in this country based upon what their alien status is, whether they are legal or illegal. All I am saying is that the argument that the Senator has been using this afternoon in response to questions—that is, that we have to close this loophole that exists because when illegal aliens are discovered they then leave and go back to their countries and continue to receive benefits—is not a valid argument because that loophole is already closed in the provisions in the bill.

You have other reasons, and I understand that. The Senator wants to go beyond the bill.

All I am saying is that it does not seem to be a valid excuse as an argument for your amendment to choose a loophole that is already closed in the bill.

Mr. NICKLES. If I can go further, Immigration can find someone working illegally, and can contact Social Security. Presently, however, Social Security would keep sending out checks if the individuals did not leave the country. Those checks would still be received.

Mr. LEVIN. Would the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I am glad to yield.

Mr. LEVIN. If at the time a person applies for benefits they are here legally, and at the time they worked they were not here legally, would they receive benefits?

Mr. NICKLES. The answer to your question, Senator, is yes.

Mr. LEVIN. The amendment says the individual can receive benefits if at the time they can show that they are an alien who has been legally admitted to work. Under my hypothesis, the person had never been legally admitted to work but had always been illegal during that work time, now they are a legal resident though not a citizen.

Mr. NICKLES. The answer to your question is if they were not working and are not currently legally in the country, then, no, they would not.

Mr. LEVIN. The Senator is saying that he would deny benefits to persons who are legal residents of the United States who contributed to the social security fund, perhaps for 30 years, because they were not legal when they contributed even though they are legal when they apply?

Mr. NICKLES. We mention one of two things: If they are U.S. citizens or if they worked legally. I see where the Senator is trying to crowd somebody in between those two things, but I do not see it as a likelihood.

Mr. LEVIN. I think it is very likely to work for 30 years and build up an account with the social security system. They then may very well want to become legal residents of this country so they could receive benefits to which they thought they were entitled.

For legislative history, however, this amendment would not permit benefits to persons who were legal at the time they apply if they were not legal at the time they worked?

Mr. NICKLES. Again, I think the Senator is not interpreting my amendment correctly. If they were U.S. citizens or if they have legally been admitted to work, then they would receive benefits. The Senator is saying that they were not legal when they worked, that they worked 30 years illegally and 2 days later they applied for social security after they had become legal. If legal means they have American citizenship or have been granted amnesty or something other than American citizenship, then I intend that they would be able to apply for and receive benefits.

Mr. LEVIN. But that could be 5 or 10 years after their work life has been completed. They are now here legally but for the 20 or 30 years that they worked they were here illegally.

Under this amendment, somebody who is legally a resident of the United States could be prohibited and would be prohibited from receiving benefits if at the time they worked in the United States they were here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. No, I do not think that is the case. Maybe this will help clarify the record, however.

Mr. LEVIN. One other question: I understand the Social Security Administration will accept money from people who are here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. The Social Security Administration right now has no criteria for citizenship, legal or illegal.

Mr. LEVIN. So they do accept money from people who are here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. Under this amendment, even though they accept money from folks who are here illegally they will not pay out any money unless they became citizens or became legal before they retire.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Let me refer again to the GAO study. GAO talks about the benefits paid out in relation to contributions paid, a ratio of about 23 to 1. In other words, 23 times the benefits received for every $1 contributed. That compares to a U.S. citizen of about $5 received for every $1 contributed. So we are still talking about a massive drain on the social security trust fund.

Mr. LEVIN. On that point if the Senator will yield for a further question. Does the Senator provide that they would return to these folks the money contributed to the system if they do not get the benefit?

Mr. NICKLES. No. If an individual is working illegally, under present law they do not get their money returned and neither would they in this legislation.

Mr. LEVIN. If the Senator will yield for one other point, the legislation says that a person who is otherwise entitled to benefits will not receive them unless they meet this test. My question is, if you are going to take away a benefit to which a person is otherwise entitled, which they earned, do you not at least want to return to that person the amount of money he contributed to the system? Is that not minimal fairness, if you take away benefits a person would otherwise be entitled to?

Mr. NICKLES. I will answer the question in the negative. How can a person earn a benefit if he worked illegally? It is against the law for the person to work in the United States. They are breaking the law.

Mr. LEVIN. Is it against the law to take his money into social security?

Mr. NICKLES. The person should not have the job and should not be contributing to the system in the first place.

Mr. LEVIN. But is social security breaking the law by taking his money.

Mr. NICKLES. There is a thought.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Will the Senator yield for a comment?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy to, but I would like to present some concluding remarks.

Mr. MELCHER. Would the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MELCHER. I think it is clear that Social Security takes the money, the contribution of both the employee and the employer, on the presumption that they are working legally. If we want to stipulate the social security should examine all of the employees and the employers to make sure they are legal, we can do so. But that proposition has not been presented. Social security simply takes a contribution from the employee and the employer on the presumption that they are here legally.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, could I speak briefly? The Senator from Wyoming wants to speak also.

If I may say, it comes with little grace and ill-behoves the Social Security Administration to suddenly endorse this proposal with respect to illegal aliens, unknown quantity, unknown numbers, unknown locations, when this very Administrator defeated by his own testimony in the House-Senate conference the actions of this Senate declaring that the Social Security Administration should produce a tamper-proof social security card, a card which would not be purchasable on any street corner in El Paso, Texas, as it were. "No," said he, "we will not have anything to do with that."

He prevailed upon the House conferees to turn down the position of the Senate in this regard. He could not care less about counterfeit cards.

Now they come along with this matter which I have to say, in my view, represents a violation of the 14th amendment's rights, even of illegal aliens; it is confiscating property. I know the Senate Finance Committee, as the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island said, would be happy to have hearings on this. We would be happy to have the GAO come forward and tell us what they know, have people comment on it, listen, think about the constitutional issues, think about the whole range of effects which we do not now understand.

I now would like to cease in order to hear the Senator from Wyoming, who, I hope, will speak.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I was just thinking how opportune it might be to offer an unprinted amendment consisting of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983. This might be a dandy time to do that. But I shall not do that.

I am fascinated to hear this very serious debate, and it should be. I have heard phrases like "fraught with difficulty," "What are we really doing," and "What will be the impact." The good Senator from Michigan outlined some serious questions. The Senator from New York makes a fascinating statement on the social security system. There is much truth in there; much truth in what the Senator from Rhode Island says as well as the Senator from Montana, and particularly the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. President, I remain absolutely intrigued and fascinated by the debate, because it is with a strange sense of irony that I recall last year's debate when we had the Supreme Court decision on who should bear the cost of training the children of illegal aliens in the United States. The supervisors of Los Angeles County came to the subcommittee to share with us that two-thirds of the children born in their largest hospital are born to illegal alien mothers; and the Los Angeles County supervisors are asking, who will bear that cost?

And now, today, we are justifiably concerned about the burden on our social security system created by benefit payments to undocumented workers. There is so much stuff in this one that I just say, welcome to the fray.

We already have laws that say if you are deported, there will be no benefits; but there is no way for the INS, with its present personnel, to handle deportation proceedings for the illegal aliens they apprehend. They do not have the personnel to deal with the numbers. The Chula Vista sector last week had 5,000 apprehensions in a single day—along 60-mile segment of our Mexican border. That is double any kind of activity like that ever under the history of that sector. That is the situation in the United States right now.

All of these concerns so ably addressed by so many various persons and philosophies just scratch the surface of the problem created in this country by a singular national failure. The first duty of a sovereign nation is to control its borders, and we do not.

The other irony is the only other nation on the Earth that does not control its borders is the United States of Mexico. The problem on their southern border matches ours.

If we had had the courage to address the problem of immigration reform in Congress during the last 10 years, to follow the only possible solution, which is employer sanctions against those who knowingly hire illegal, undocumented workers, and to provide some form of employment verification which is not carried on the person but only available at the time of new hire—the only real issue is not how much do they leave on the table, how much do they take off, do they do work that American workers will not do—we would not have to address these issues today. The issue is this: When you have a fake green card and with that fake green card you receive a valid social security card, a valid AFL-CIO card, a valid food stamp card, a valid medicare card, a valid driver's license and valid unemployment insurance coverage, you have gimmicked the systems of the United States and the systems were not built for that kind of gimmickry. They are not actuarially able to handle that kind of gimmickry.

The Social Security Administration testified one time that they are not really concerned about how many fake cards are out, because at the time someone sought benefits, they would have to show up as a live human being in front of a live interviewer. I said, "Well, that is one way to run a railroad. It is not exactly the way I would do it."

But we have developed some interesting things. These things and this matter we grapple with here are the wholly unpleasant situations that result from illegal immigration. They would not be facing us today, nor would we have the national disgrace of a furtive, fearful, exploited, illegal subsociety of human beings numbering millions extant in these United States right now if we faced up to the root cause of the problem—loss of control of our borders.

Mr. President, we must adopt measures which are not nativist nor mean nor racist but we must reform what are absolutely absurd, cumbersome and unworkable immigration laws.

I thought I would get up and make that little plug for the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983 because we are going to see that legislation soon. Markup is coming at the end of this month. I call upon my colleagues to carefully examine the bill, which would solve this situation before us today.

There is never a good time for immigration reform. That I can assure my colleagues. But the discussion and debate on amendments such as this show the strains on our society, the totally inappropriate results that will take place if we continue apathetically to do absolutely nothing and pretend uncontrolled illegal immigration is going to disappear. I trust congressional maturity might lead us toward some solution, because the matter will be before us and will be pressed upon us again and again and it will never go away.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, Members of the body, I think the appeal by the Senator from Wyoming to look at the bigger picture is well in order. On the other hand, I am supporting this amendment, and have in fact cosponsored the Senator from Oklahoma's amendment.

I do not know what the Senator from Kansas will do when he wants to dispose of the debate on this amendment and the bill. I shall leave that to him. But I think the effort by the Senator from Wyoming to look at the bigger picture needs to be applied specifically to this amendment as well. The amendment is not offered solely in the vein that we want to save money from the social security funds, that we want to make it more sound, even though it will have that impact, according to the GAO report.

The broader picture is this: There are many law-abiding citizens of America, people who spend their whole lives abiding by the laws in this country, and they also have the oddity that they expect other people to abide by the law in this country. They see efforts of people who are not law-abiding citizens to dip into the till and to threaten the financial soundness of a system that they pay into, and they do not like it.

I think their concern goes even beyond that and points to something that ought to concern us. That is the necessity of reestablishing credibility in the social security system. People who are working today, paying into the system, paying high taxes—every one of them would ask us who are out at the grassroots, is there going to be any money there for them to draw from?

It is the same way with those citizens who are retired today, drawing out of the system. They, too, wonder about the soundness of the system. It is not as credible a system with them as it was one, two, or three decades ago.

Having people who are illegally in the country who have, legally or illegally, been paying into the system is not the point. The issue is that some are illegally in this country drawing out of that system, affecting the soundness of it, bringing about a lack of respect for the system, and that is something we must deal with. That is a broader picture we have to deal with. This amendment by the Senator from Oklahoma just deals with a very small portion of our effort to reestablish credibility in the system.

As you think about the people you meet on the streets of the little towns and rural areas of your State, stop to think how many times you have been asked about people who are illegally in the country drawing out of the system and if there has not been a plea for a stop to be put to practice. This amendment does not deal with the situation totally, but it deals with it to some degree. If we would respond affirmatively to this problem, as we have tried to do with other provisions in the bill now before the Senate, then we would help reestablish that credibility. That is the greater concern that we all ought to have. The immigration problem, reestablishing control over our borders, is a major concern that we also must have. These issues have a great deal to do with the credibility of our political system and our boundaries and with our institutions in responding to those concerns. It is pretty much the same way with the social security system.

This system was established 40, 50 years ago, and it is a very integral part of the social fabric of America. We want to maintain it as such. A necessary part of that is to help everybody have more confidence in it. So it is in that vein that I am supporting this amendment, not because it deals in any way with the financial soundness of the social security system.

A broader, more encompassing provision is included in the social security package reported out of the Senate Committee on Finance which limits social security benefits to aliens. Its importance lies not so much with its revenue impact, but on the signals it sends to the American public that Congress is indeed trying to clean up the administration of this program. I am extremely gratified that with the great efforts of the chairman, Mr. MYERS, and the committee staff, we were able to fashion a provision to deal with the previous problem in social security payments to aliens. Special notice must also be given to Senator LUGAR and his outstanding leadership in this area.

Finally, I would like to thank Senator PRESSLER for bringing to light some of the very real problems which exist under current law. We have had several discussions on the importance of this measure, and his support has been greatly appreciated. Senator PRESSLER's early recognition of the inconsistencies in the present treatment of nonresident aliens is to be commended, and I know he joins me in expressing tremendous satisfaction with the remedial language contained in S. 1.

The specific recommendation adopted by the committee and included in S. 1 would significantly tighten eligibility requirements for alien workers living abroad. The bill denies benefits to alien dependents of alien workers who were added while outside the United States. This specific provision gets at the very heart of the problem where alien beneficiaries acquire a tremendous number of dependents after they have left this country. The bill also reconciles several sensitive and complex policy issues by paying benefits to workers who are citizens of a country with which the United States has a reciprocal social security coverage arrangement.

For those aliens who continue to qualify for social security benefits, the individual would receive benefits until such time as he had received an amount equal to what he paid into social security plus interest.

The need for such legislation has become increasingly evident over the past few years. And has been amplified by the previously mentioned GAO study outlining the phenomenal magnitude of the problem. Let me briefly summarize some of the startling findings of that report, 34 percent of all dependents abroad were added to the social security rolls after the wage earner became entitled to benefits. And approximately 84 percent of such dependents were aliens.

GAO also discovered alien retirees have worked less time in covered employment and have paid less social security taxes than the average American worker. Of the 313,000 social security beneficiaries living abroad in 1981, GAO estimated 194,000 were aliens. Perhaps the most startling finding was that where U.S. retirees receive about $5 for each dollar paid into the system, the average alien receives $23 in benefits for each tax dollar paid into social security. It is a disgrace when the laws of this Nation allow us to treat aliens better than we treat our own citizens. Congress has this opportunity to tighten up one area of glaring mismanagement in the current system. It is only appropriate that during the consideration of such a monumental reform package as S. 1, we include this measure which does not affect a single U.S. citizen. I hope my colleagues in the House will also see fit to embrace this long overdue change.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a letter from the Commissioner of Social Security.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMISSIONER OF SOCIAL SECURITY,

Baltimore, Md., March 18, 1983.

HON. DONALD L. NICKLES,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR NICKLES: As we have discussed, I agree with your amendment to deny Social Security benefits to illegal aliens. We will work closely with the Immigration and Naturalization Service to identify new Social Security applicants who are illegal aliens as well as those who leave the country under threat of deportation.

The kind of amendment you are proposing represents an important first step in the process of dealing with this serious and growing problem.

We look forward to working with the Congress after the pending legislation is enacted to finding ways of dealing with the broader issues involving payment of Social Security benefits to noncitizens and nonresidents.

Sincerely,

JOHN A. SVAHN,
Commissioner.

DIGEST

In this report GAO examines the circumstances under which social security benefits are paid to alien retirees and dependents living abroad. GAO also questions the propriety of continuing to allow aliens, who work in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act, to earn social security credits.

The first issue centers on a set of Congressional concerns that have been voiced from time to time since the early days of the program, and which were expressed by Representative G. William Whitehurst in a 1981 request for a GAO study. The concerns deal with whether it is fair and affordable for the American social security taxpayer to have aliens work in the U.S. for a relatively short period and then retire to their native lands and receive benefits for themselves and their dependents for long periods of time.

The Social Security Act does not restrict benefits to aliens or to only people living in the U.S. However, when social security benefits began in 1940, there were only 100 beneficiaries abroad who received $12,000. In 1981 these numbers had grown to 313,000 beneficiaries abroad who received nearly $1 billion. Of the 313,000 beneficiaries, 194,000 (62 percent) were aliens and most of these were alien dependents.

GAO found that 34 percent of all dependents abroad were added to the social security rolls after the wage earner became entitled to benefits. About 84 percent of such dependents were aliens. (See p. 13.) Moreover, GAO found that alien retirees abroad have, generally, worked less time in covered employment and paid less social security taxes than the average worker.

In 1956 the Congress enacted legislation designed to curtail benefits to aliens abroad, but because of the many exemptions included in the legislation, it has had little effect.

The concerns which prompted the legislation are still valid today—aliens can work in the United States for a relatively short time and then return to their native country and retire and receive benefits for themselves and their dependents.

The payment of social security benefits to aliens not only represents a valid policy question for the Congress, but also presents a number of difficult and complex issues. Some of these issues involve (1) the equity of treating aliens differently than Americans, (2) the international reaction by countries whose citizens will be adversely affected and the potential retaliatory action of curtailing benefits to Americans under their systems, and (3) the administrative question of requiring alien workers to pay full FICA taxes although they might receive benefits for retirement or disability in a curtailed or capped amount.

GAO also identified an inconsistency between the Social Security Act and the Immigration and Nationality Act—aliens are allowed to earn entitlement to social security benefits while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act. Although there are not complete and accurate data on the impact that this situation is having on social security, GAO estimates that perhaps a billion dollars a year could flow from the trust funds to pay aliens on the basis of their illegal employment.

CHAPTER 3: ALIENS CAN EARN ENTITLEMENT TO SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS WHILE VIOLATING THE IMMIGRATION AND NATIONALITY ACT

The Immigration and Nationality Act provides for regulating admission of aliens to the U.S. The Act requires that before aliens are permitted to enter the U.S. for permanent employment, the Secretary of Labor must certify to the Attorney General that there are insufficient U.S. workers willing, able, and qualified to perform the work at the time and location it is to be performed and that such employment of aliens will not adversely affect wages and working conditions of U.S. workers similarly employed.

The Social Security Act allows aliens to earn social security insurance credits regardless of their employment or resident status in the U.S. Section 210(a) of the Social Security Act defines employment for the purpose of social security credits as any service performed in the U.S. by an employee for an employer irrespective of the citizenship of either. Consequently, aliens who are admitted to the U.S. to attend school, visit, or for other purposes, but not for permanent employment, can earn social security credits by illegally working at a job covered by Social Security. Similarly, aliens who enter the U.S. illegally can earn social security credits as a result of employment during the time of their illegal stay. The accumulation of social security credits by legal and illegal aliens can lead to insured status and entitle them to social security benefits earned through unlawful employment.

This chapter discusses both legal and illegal aliens who might have earned social security credits while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act, and the potential cost of paying benefits to such aliens.

Aliens have illegally worked and earned social security coverage

The number of aliens who have illegally engaged in employment and earned social security credits can not be precisely determined. Under the Social Security Act a wage earner's citizenship does not affect his eligibility to earn social security credits and, for that reason, SSA has not maintained data on the citizenship of all workers who pay social security taxes. SSA has some information on legal aliens who have violated their immigration status by engaging in employment, but it does not have such data on aliens who have entered the U.S. illegally and engaged in social security-covered employment during their illegal stay.

Legal Aliens Working Illegally in the United States

According to SSA's statistics, about 289,000 legal aliens have engaged in employment covered by Social Security since 1974.

Until 1974, SSA made no distinction based on citizenship when issuing a social security card. Beginning in 1974, as was required by the Social Security Amendments of 1972, SSA began issuing social security cards to legal aliens who requested them for "non-work purposes." These purposes included opening bank accounts, registering for school, and obtaining a driver's permit. When SSA issued social security cards for such non-work purposes, it coded its enumeration records to indicate that these SSN's were for non-work purposes.

In 1975, SSA discovered that social security-covered earnings were being reported under many of the SSN's that were issued for non-work purposes. This was not a violation of the Social Security Act, but SSA did gather statistical data on these incidents and shared the information with the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), since these alien wage earners were apparently violating their immigrant status. This information flow was discontinued after the enactment of the Tax Reform Act of 1976 because of questions regarding interagency transmittal of taxpayer information. These questions were resolved in 1982, and SSA plans to transmit the information on aliens who worked illegally since 1976 to INS and will resume transmitting information to INS on aliens who are illegally working in the U.S.

Also, SSA has begun noting "for non-work purposes" on the face of new social security cards issued to legal aliens if they are not permitted to work in the U.S.

Illegal Aliens Working Illegally in the United States

The exact number of illegal aliens who have entered and worked in the U.S. and earned social security credits cannot be determined. This occurs, in part, because illegal aliens conceal their illegal immigrant status when they apply for social security cards. When they are successful in obtaining social security cards, those cards and numbers cannot be distinguished from legitimate ones. Therefore, little is known as to the number of illegal aliens who have earned social security credits under fraudulently obtained social security cards, or those who have worked and paid taxes under someone else's SSN.

Various studies, including one by GAO,¹ have developed estimates of the number of illegal aliens in the U.S. The estimates range from 1 to 12 million, but the most widely accepted range is from 3.5 to 6 million. One study showed that between 65 and 88 percent of a group of illegal aliens who were interviewed had been employed while residing in the U.S. and had paid social security taxes on their earnings.²

Potential cost to social security due to aliens engaging unlawfully in covered employment

Despite the statistical limitations of the various illegal alien studies, one can develop a rough estimate of the impact on the social security trust funds of payments to illegal aliens. To illustrate such potential impact, we used the lower range of the most widely quoted illegal alien population estimate (3.5 million) and the lower estimate of those illegal aliens who had been employed while in the U.S. and paid social security taxes (65 percent). We chose the lower range of the estimates because of uncertainties as to the statistical reliability of these estimates. Using these data, we estimated that from 2.2 million³ aliens had worked in social security covered employment and had received some social security credits.

It is unknown how many of these wage earners have earned sufficient quarters of credits to be eligible for disability or retirement benefits. There are no reliable data on social security payments made to aliens as a result of their unlawful employment. Nonetheless, we developed three estimates to show the potential annual costs to the trust funds if 10, 15, and 25 percent of the illegal alien workers had qualified for and were receiving benefits in 1981. We used the average alien family benefit rate ($4,160) for aliens abroad in 1981 to complete the estimates. Our estimates show the following cost ranges:

$.9 billion (if 10 percent of the illegal aliens had qualified for social security),

$ 1.4 billion (if 15 percent of the illegal aliens had qualified for social security), and

$ 2.3 billion (if 25 percent of the illegal aliens had qualified for social security).

Applying these same assumptions and the 10-percent estimate to the legal aliens who have unlawfully worked in the U.S., adds another $.1 billion cost to the trust funds.⁴ Therefore, legal and illegal aliens combined could cost SSA about $1 billion per year as a result of unlawful employment if only 10 percent of the aliens working illegally eventually receive benefits.

Should social security benefits accrue from unlawful employment?

In 1954, a bill was introduced in the Congress (HR 9366) which said, in part, that earnings derived from covered employment by individuals during periods when they were unlawfully residing in the U.S. would not be used in establishing eligibility for, or the amount of, social security benefits. Furthermore, the bill said these earnings would be deleted from such individuals' earnings record upon the Secretary's receipt of notification from the Attorney General of an alien's periods of unlawful residence in the U.S.

These provisions were deleted from the bill, however, by the Senate Finance Committee after it received the Secretary's comments on the feasibility of its implementation. The Secretary endorsed the objective of these provisions, but he opposed enactment on the basis of the disproportionate administrative burden it would impose on the Department and SSA, compared to the benefits that might be realized. He noted, for example, that he would have received 900,000 notifications of unlawful employment would have had to be deleted from the aliens' Social Security earnings records—a task he thought too administratively burdensome to accomplish.

working in the U.S. was discussed during hearings before the House Subcommittee on Government Operations in November 1973. A Member of this Committee stated, in part, that it seemed almost incongruous that aliens could participate in illegal activity—working in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act—and earn social security benefits. If their status had been known, they would not have been permitted employment, instead they might have been deported. If aliens are formally deported for illegal work in the U.S., they do not receive benefits. The member of Congress asserted that these wages/earnings were, in effect, illegally obtained with regard to the Immigration and Nationality Act. He further stated that if the employment upon which the entitlement is based was illegal, the law should require that the benefits be disallowed.

If legal resident and employment status were required in order to earn social security credits, we believe SSA could enforce it by implementing a two-phase process. In the first phase, SSA could delete any earnings and credits derived from such earnings when it discovers that an alien has reported earnings while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act.

The second phase of the enforcement process could be applied when aliens or their surviving dependents file application for benefits. At that time, SSA could require that sufficient evidence be provided by the claimant that the wage earner was in legal alien status and was authorized to be employed when his social security credits were earned. Otherwise, no credits would be allowed for earnings during any calendar quarter in which the wage earner was in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Conclusion

The Social Security Act does not prohibit aliens from earning entitlement to Social Security benefits based on earnings derived from covered employment in the U.S., even if the individuals were illegal residents, or legal residents who had engaged in unauthorized employment.

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, both types of aliens may be deported if discovered for illegal entrance or violating their immigrant status by engaging in unauthorized employment.

There is a gap between the provisions of the Social Security Act and the Immigration and Nationality Act, which allows aliens to earn entitlement to Social Security benefits while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act. Consequently, millions of aliens both legal and illegal may have engaged in unauthorized employment and earned entitlement to Social Security benefits. The effects that benefit payments to these workers could have on the trust funds depend on their numbers and benefit levels.

The Congress may wish to consider whether aliens who work illegally in the U.S. should be allowed to earn entitlement to social security benefits for such work. If the Congress decides that aliens should not earn credits for illegal work, it could require proof of legal immigrant status before benefits are paid.

● Mr. MATTINGLY. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the efforts of the Senator from Oklahoma which rectifies inconsistencies in current law concerning social security payments to individuals who have worked in America illegally. Senator NICKLES' amendment will give the Social Security Administration authority to stop payment of benefits or credits from going to any alien who is in violation of U.S. employment and resident laws. In addition, it would require the wage earner or dependent to provide sufficient evidence to the Social Security Administration that vestige in the system was earned while working and living legally in the United States.

Time and again throughout the past few weeks, as I have discussed the crisis the social security system is facing with citizens from Georgia, they have expressed their frustrations over misuse and abuse of the program. Often, they have mentioned this very issue, the payment of benefits to illegal aliens. The citizens of America realize that those who operate outside of the laws of this Nation should not be allowed to reap the benefits of Federal programs designed to aid our citizens. I believe recognition of this fact and action by the Congress is long overdue. Again, I am pleased to cosponsor the amendment of my colleague from Oklahoma.●

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, as a cosponsor of this amendment, I rise to urge my colleagues to adopt its provisions. I had previously cosponsored the Senator from Oklahoma's legislation, S. 595, which would accomplish the purposes of this amendment, and would also reduce benefits to aliens living abroad. The average alien abroad has been receiving $23 dollars for each dollar contributed, compared to the average American wage earner receiving $5 for each $1 contributed.

The purposes of the latter aspect of S. 595 was adopted by the Senate Finance Committee in their recommendations for this bill. I commend Senator LUGAR and the members of the committee for this action.

The Government Accounting Office estimates that illegal aliens in America may be receiving from $900 million annually in social security benefits to $2.4 billion annually. When Americans are asked to make the sacrifices we are asking in this difficult compromise package to save the social security system, how can we allow aliens who have worked illegally in this country, who have perhaps prevented Americans from receiving gainful employment during this time of high unemployment, to skim possibly $2 billion from the depleted social security coffers?

I applaud my friend, the Senator from Oklahoma, for introducing both the legislation and this amendment to resolve glaring inequities in the current law. These inequities no doubt evolved unintentionally, but they are inequities which I am sure most Americans will want corrected now.

● Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I want to voice my opposition to the amendment offered by Senator NICKLES from which would eliminate social security benefits for some individuals who worked and contributed to the social security system while they were in this country illegally.

I share the Senator's concern of not encouraging or rewarding illegal immigration into this country. However, I could not support his amendment because it was overbroad and confiscatory.

I can understand why someone might want to stop the payment of social security benefits to individuals who are in this country illegally at the time that they are receiving the benefits.

But it is unfair to deprive an individual of social security benefits who has paid into the system for a number of years and who is now in this country on a legal basis, because they were here illegally when they were working. For example, under the amendment it would be possible for an individual to come into this country illegally and work for 40 years. During that entire time, they could have paid social security taxes. They could then go back to the home country for a few years, and then be readmitted to this country legally based on family bonds which may have been established earlier. Under the Nickles amendment, this individual would be ineligible for receiving social security benefits. The amendment specifies that benefits could only be collected if the individual can show that he is a U.S. citizen, or was once a U.S. citizen but has relinquished that status, or was once an alien who has legally admitted to work but gave up that status, or is now an alien who has been legally admitted to work. In the example I cited it is possible for an individual not to meet any of these criteria. Specifically, although the 70-year-old individual may be in this country legally now, she or he was admitted because of family bonds and not admitted "to work." I find it hard to believe that the authors of this amendment intended this effect, but it is the effect, nevertheless.

Also, this amendment is confiscatory because it would prohibit the payment of any social security benefits which are based on those working periods during which they were in this country illegally. In this case, the individual would not even be able to receive that portion of the social security benefits which were made up totally of their earlier contribution into the system.

I, therefore, oppose the adoption of the Nickles amendment, even though I share some of the frustration and anger of people with the present system and believe we should find equitable ways of avoiding rewards or encouragement for illegal immigration.●

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I cannot speak for the Committee on Finance but I certainly know the sentiments of its members and that this is a serious subject. We have made a major provision in the present law with respect to illegal aliens residing abroad and receiving benefits, one which involves in effect taking from them their employer contributions, which were certainly a property right as far as I am concerned, but we did anyway. There is much to be learned. The Senator from Wyoming has spoken eloquently and calmly about the complexities. We will address those complexities in hearings and in orderly legislation which this body will not fail to take up, I am sure. Therefore, Mr. President, without prejudice to the provisions of the amendment as such but because we do not know enough about the subject and must learn much more, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), and the Senator from Georgia (Mr. NUNN) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) is absent because of illness in the family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 58, as follows:

So the motion to lay on the table Mr. NICKLES' amendment (UP No. 92) was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I wonder if we might agree to accept this amendment based on the tabling motion. I have discussed it with the proponents and opponents of the amendment. There is no similar provision in the House-passed bill.

I can understand some of the concerns that have been expressed. I think even the author of the amendment indicates that there is one area that he is willing to address.

If we might do that, I think we could take care of some of the concerns in the conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The amendment (UP No. 92) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I will take a minute.

Given the importance of the legislation before us today, I would like to take a moment to state for the record the reason why my good friend and colleague, Senator BIDEN, is not able to be present for this session.

Senator BIDEN, as we all know, commutes daily from his home in Wilmington to Washington. As his train arrived this morning, he was greeted by the news that one of his sons had suffered a dislocated hip in a sports accident at school and had been rushed to the hospital, where he needed to be put under general anesthetic to have the hip put back in place.

As any good father or grandfather would; Senator BIDEN immediately took the next train back home and is with his son now at the hospital.

I am happy to report that the Senator's son is doing well, and I know that we all wish him a speedy recovery.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Rhode Island, amendment No. 88.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for 1 second?

Mr. METZENBAUM. I yield.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas understands first the Senator from Ohio, Senator METZENBAUM, has an amendment pending. That will be modified by an amendment by Senators PERCY, DIXON, and LEVIN. When that is completed—and I understand the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma will speak in opposition to the amendment—we have an amendment from the distinguished Senators from Kentucky, Senators FORD and HURDLESTON. That will be followed by a colloquy between myself and the Senator from Kentucky, Senator FORD. That will be followed by an amendment by the distinguished minority leader, to which I am not certain there is no objection, followed by an amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

I think, depending on the length of debate, if we can just stay on this area we might take care of a lot of the unemployment matters now.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 88, AS MODIFIED

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I have an amendment pending at the desk and I now ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to send a modification of that amendment to the desk with the understanding that the Senators from Illinois and the Senators from Michigan may be permitted to reinsert the language which will be deleted from my amendment by modification, and without unanimous consent being granted I am informed that it would violate the rules of this body, and it is for that reason that I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COCHRAN). Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senators RIEGLE, and LEVIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment, the modification.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio (Mr. METZENBAUM) proposes a modification to his amendment numbered UP 88.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

On page 236, line 7, strike out "30" and insert "25".

On page 236, line 9, strike out "40" and insert "35".

On page 237, line 9, strike out "30" percent, 40 percent, 50 percent, and insert "25 percent, 35 percent, 50 percent".

On page 237, line 12, strike out the quotation marks and the second period.

On page 247, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

"(9) Any interest otherwise due from a State during a calendar year after 1982 may be deferred (and no interest shall accrue on such deferred interest) for a grace period of not to exceed 9 months if, for such calendar year in which the interest was due, the State had an average unemployment rate of 13.5 percent or greater."

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment and the modifications which are to be suggested, which are to be offered, in a second degree by the Senator from Il-

Illinois and the Senators from Michigan and, I believe, the Senators from Kentucky as well, deal with a problem that has arisen by reason of the loans that have been made by the States from the Federal Government in order to continue to meet their unemployment obligations, and the Finance Committee, in its wisdom, has seen fit to provide some assistance but, at the same time, it provided some conditions in connection with the repayment of those funds. According to the committee report the bill requires State law changes which both increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 30 percent the first year, 40 percent the second year, and 50 percent the third year in order that the State may qualify for deferral of interest payments.

My amendment would change those numerical figures to 25, 35, and 50 instead of 30, 40, and 50.

The committee report stated that for interest due October 1, 1983, the change would have to affect benefits and taxes in calendar year 1984.

The committee bill is silent as to which calendar year the States' action must affect in order to qualify for deferral.

I now address this comment to the manager of the bill if I may have his attention for just one moment, if I could have the attention of the manager of the bill for one moment, Senator DOLE—I apologize to the Senator from Nevada—it is my understanding that in determining if a State qualifies for the deferral for interest due October 1, 1983, you look at the effect of the benefits and the tax changes in calendar year 1983, and I believe that my interpretation of that conforms with the staff on that subject. Would you confirm that for me, please.

Mr. DOLE. Yes; that interpretation is a proper one, 1983 would be the base year used for a determination on deferral of the interest owed in that year.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Now, another part of my amendment would provide that a State with high unemployment would be able to qualify for a 9-month grace period in which to remit the interest charges which are due. A State would qualify for this relief only if it has an average adjusted unemployment rate of less than 13.5 percent for the 12-month period immediately preceding the date on which the interest is otherwise due.

I hope the Senate will see fit to adopt the amendment but I believe there are two other portions of my amendment that I very strongly support, and it is now my understanding that the Senator from Illinois on behalf of himself, Senator DIXON and myself is prepared to offer that language that was originally in our amendment and has been set aside in order to accommodate the Senators from Illinois.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague and my fellow midwesterner from Ohio for yielding for this purpose.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 93 TO UP AMENDMENT NO. 88 AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To provide that deferred interest shall not be subject to further interest.)

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY), for himself, Mr. DIXON, Mr. METZENBAUM, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. GLENN, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. FORD, Mr. HUDDLESTON, Mr. RANDOLPH, and Mr. SPECTER, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 93 to Mr. METZENBAUM'S unprinted amendment numbered 88.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio add the following:

On page 235, lines 12 through 14, strike out "Interest shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C)." and insert "No interest shall accrue on such deferred interest."

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, the pending amendment that I have at the desk I offer on behalf of my distinguished colleague, Senator DIXON, who is the principal cosponsor. I wish to state that he has worked on every aspect of this problem with me. His vast experience in the Illinois government caused him to be particularly helpful in causing the State now to face up to its responsibility to reduce benefits and increase contributions so that we can meet the problem faced by the State.

We are joined by Senators HEINZ, HUDDLESTON, FORD, RANDOLPH, BOSCHWITZ, GLENN, and SPECTER as cosponsors.

Mr. President, I would also like to express my appreciation to Senator DOLE for working so closely with us on this amendment and for his attention to the special problems facing Illinois and other very high unemployment States, including the State of Ohio.

I am very honored, indeed, to add as a cosponsor of the pending amendment the Senator from Ohio, who has been deeply concerned about the problems of employment and the very high cost attendant to that unemployment in Midwestern States.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator METZENBAUM be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, while we hear a great deal of optimism lately about how economic conditions will improve, we must recognize that many States today remain in serious trouble. The unemployment situation in Illinois is nothing less than shocking. When other States stayed stable throughout the country, Illinois went up again last month. We are at 13½ percent, and 13½ percent of our workers without jobs means a tremendous tax on the State, on its income, and on this particular unemployment compensation fund.

In some urban areas in Illinois, 1 out of 4 people are unemployed. These terrible conditions are the primary reason that Illinois has been forced to go into debt to the Federal Government.

The severity of the State's employment problem brought Governor Thompson to Washington to testify earlier this month before the Finance Committee to ask for some temporary relief from the interest burdens being placed on Illinois. He requested that the 10-percent interest on new net borrowing be reduced, and subsequently asked for my help and the help of Senator DIXON in eliminating the compounding interest on this debt. My preference would be that we do as Governor Thompson suggested and make both of these changes.

The pending amendment seeks to cover only the elimination of compounded interest. We have discussed this in great detail with the distinguished manager of the bill. We recognize the problem, but we do urge the conferees on this bill to consider reducing the interest rate, as well.

Let there be no mistake about it, I support Senator DOLE'S efforts to encourage States to put their unemployment systems in order. For this reason, I oppose attempts to eliminate or defer indefinitely all incentives for fixing the States' unemployment systems. In providing these interest incentives, however, we must be sure not to place burdens on the States which push them beyond the point of no return.

Over the last 10 years, the Federal unemployment trust fund has been strained by State borrowing attributed to two causes: A series of economic downturns in the last decade which have affected some States harder than others; and the inability or unwillingness of many States to either raise taxes or reduce benefits to keep their systems in balance. Because borrowing was interest-free until last year, there was little incentive for States to make the maximum effort needed to get their own houses in order.

In 1981, Congress faced the problem of attempting to balance two conflicting needs. It was our responsibility to make sure that the Federal trust fund remains fiscally sound so that it can continue to service the urgent funding needs of high unemployment States. Unnecessary borrowing was to be discouraged and States were to be given new incentives to tighten up their own systems. It soon became clear, however, that the States with the greatest debts to the Federal trust fund were States with continuing high rates of unemployment and severe economic problems which made them least able to repay their debt in the foreseeable future.

In the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, Congress enacted legislation calling for 10 percent interest payments on new net borrowing which was intended to decrease borrowing from the Federal Government. In addition, some relief was made available to States with high unemployment problems by allowing employers to qualify, under certain conditions, for a cap on the so-called penalty tax. When the legislation reached the Senate floor, I offered an amendment, along with my colleague ALAN DIXON, to enable the State of Illinois to qualify for this relief, and the issue was ultimately resolved on the floor.

Since that time, economic conditions in my State have deteriorated. The 1982 unemployment insurance deficit in Illinois was $800 million and, even if the State had paid benefits at the level of the national average, our higher unemployment rates still would have caused a deficit, estimated to be about $545 million. This is in spite of a substantial effort to reduce the costs of the State system by enactment of a $500 million package in 1981 of increased taxes and reduced benefits. Additional efforts are underway in Illinois right now to further tighten up our system.

Governor Thompson, business, labor, and State legislative leaders, have been meeting over the past 4 weeks in Chicago and Springfield to fashion a new package of higher taxes and reduced benefits in order to limit as much as possible additional borrowing. I know our Governor met in Chicago with Chairman DOLE on January 19, with other Governors in attendance, as well.

The elimination of the compounding of interest on Illinois' debt will save the State an estimated $40 million over a 4-year period. The remaining 10 percent interest on the debt will still place a heavy burden on the State—a burden which is more than is really needed to encourage it to fix its unemployment system.

I hope the conference can look at this point and consider reductions in the level of interest payments.

However, this $40 million savings represented by the pending amendment is a first step in the right direction.

I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. President, I wish to thank my warm friend and distinguished senior colleague for those fine remarks. I am honored to cosponsor with him this amendment which is significantly important for our State.

Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, BOB DOLE, for his attention to the critical problems of my State of Illinois, as well as others, which have incurred a substantial debt to the Federal Government for unemployment insurance.

As we all know, there are many reasons for these debts, and the solution to solvency is not a simple one.

I wish to say to my distinguished friend from Louisiana, who has been kind enough to listen to my concerns in regard to this problem in my State and many similarly situated States, that through the leadership of our Governor and the State legislature, in cooperation with labor and business leaders, we are working on the final details of a package of $1.151 billion in tax increases and $777.3 million in benefit cuts to shore up this system. Now, that is a pretty bitter pill to swallow. It will be introduced as an amendment to House bill 327, which is currently before the Illinois State Labor and Commerce Committee. This is in addition to $500 million in reduced benefits and increased taxes in 1981.

This is a major change, Mr. President. But it is necessary in order to show the Federal Government that our State is making a substantial effort to meet a very substantial problem. I do not want to leave the impression that Illinois has been irresponsible, for we have not. Our tax effort is well above the national average—27 percent above and 12th in the Nation to be exact. But we are also third among 10 large States in unemployment, with a 13.5 percent rate in February. The length and depth of this recession is something that was never figured into our unemployment insurance system. It is designed to have some surplus in good times to carry States through during the bad. But the bad times have endured longer than that system could support.

I believe that any assistance that the Federal Government can offer to the 31 borrowing States should be, in effect, a partnership of responsibility. The States should show a goodfaith effort at making change in their systems which will contribute to improved solvency. Unemployment is a national problem—it is not the sole responsibility of States and local areas. Our economic difficulties affect each State, and have an impact on the world economy as well. Therefore, it is right for the Federal Government to be involved in aiding States to pay back their debts.

We are not asking for forgiveness of these debts. We are asking for a reasonable way of allowing us to pay them, a way which will not jeopardize the overall recovery effort. If we tax businesses to the point where they lock their doors and lay off more people, rather than hiring those already out of work, unemployment will increase and the overall solvency problem will be exacerbated. If we cut benefits to the point where people cannot meet even their most basic needs, then the system is no longer doing what it should.

The amendment proposed by Senator PERCY and myself, as well as others, would improve the package of assistance being proposed by the Finance Committee. It would eliminate the accrual of interest on the interest payments being deferred under the plan. This will mean a savings of that interest on interest of $30 to $40 million for Illinois, over the 3 years.

Again, I commend my friend from Kansas for addressing this critical problem, and for keeping further options open to improving this package. I have never seen Senator DOLE duck an issue of grave importance that has been within the purview of his committee, and some of those issues have been tough to address.

Mr. President, I also wish to thank my colleague, my colleague and warm friend from Louisiana, the ranking member, RUSSELL LONG; and my colleague from Ohio, who has accommodated us.

I earnestly hope that the Members of this body will support us in this effort to help those very tragically affected major States of this Union which have suffered under a terrible burden of high unemployment for a great many months.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the amendment of the Senator from Illinois, Senator PERCY. I agree with him in every respect in his excellent analysis of the situation of States like Illinois, Pennsylvania, and others, that are burdened heavily with the costs of this recession, where people have been forced out of work for longer periods than we have experienced in our recent memory.

His amendment will eliminate the interest on the interest, the compounding. Frankly, in my judgment, it is a very small step we should take to improve the Finance Committee package.

I particularly want to emphasize his point that it would be extremely helpful to States like Pennsylvania, Illinois, and other of the urban, industrial States that are having to set their houses in order, if the interest that is now 10 percent by statute could be further reduced.

It is my understanding—and I would like the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee if he would be so kind to respond to some questions—that in 1983 there would be a revenue loss or additional borrowing to the Federal Government somewhere in the neighborhood of between $230 million and $320 million. Does the Senator from Kansas know if that is approximately correct, depending on the number of States?

Mr. DOLE. I am advised that is approximately correct.

Mr. HEINZ. In 1984 there would be a favorable impact on the Federal Government in the way of reduced borrowing of somewhere between $700 million and $1.025 billion. Is that about correct?

Mr. DOLE. I am advised that is about correct, yes. Keep in mind that such an effect will only occur if State legislatures make certain reforms in the UI programs.

Mr. HEINZ. And, again, in 1985 there would again be a favorable impact on Federal borrowing of between $82 million and $172 million. It is only in 1984 that there would be any unfavorable results, somewhat minimal, somewhere between $180 million and $75 million unfavorable cash flow for the Federal Government. Is that correct?

Mr. DOLE. As I understand, that is correct, provided the borrowing States take the action necessary to reform their systems.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Kansas for responding to those questions. As I add up those numbers, and taking the most conservative assumptions, it means that over the 4-year period 1983-86, we could expect a favorable impact by passing this legislation, including Senator Percy's amendment which would have a reduction of some $40 million and the impact, that the Federal Government will come out about $340 million better off as a result of what the Finance Committee has done.

Mr. President, that suggests to me that there is room in conference to get some additional relief to our hard-pressed States. It is my hope that the conferees, both the Senate conferees and the House conferees, will bear in mind the already significant burden that our States bear and indeed will make every effort to achieve relief. In terms of this Senator's priorities, I would hope the first place we would look would be at the interest rates that we are now charging the States and we would seek to lower the 10 percent.

Mr. BOREN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I am certainly in sympathy with the situation being faced by the States, and the situation explained by the Senator who presented this amendment. I think all people in the country have compassion for that situation. I am told that in some of these States the benefits have been cut. I believe the Senator from Illinois, Senator Dixon, told me that benefits have been cut some $700 million in the State of Illinois and revenues increased over $1 billion. Certainly, those kinds of efforts have been brought about because of the economic necessities of those States and deserve the understanding, the thoughtful understanding, of all the rest of us, particularly those from States which have, to some degree, escaped the full impact of needing to take actions of that magnitude.

But I am concerned that we not go too far in what we are doing. I think that those who represent these States would understand that if we were to open the door too far, we would take all the pressure off from all the States to take actions that are necessary to keep their financial houses in order.

Over the past 3 or 4 years, the Finance Committee has worked very, very hard to bring about some positive changes in the unemployment compensation program. In many cases, the programs have been tightened up, the costs have been reduced, and certain categories, such as those who have voluntarily quit their jobs as opposed to those who are unemployed, have been no longer qualified to receive benefits. These were changes that were long overdue. In fact, we went for some 40 years in this program without any changes at all in the area of saving any costs. I am told from the period of time when the program was first adopted, it was not until the Finance Committee took action some 3 or 4 years ago that a single dollar was ever saved out of that program, that costs were reduced by even 1 penny. Every single change in the intervening decades have been changes which added costs to the program.

So I am concerned that we not go too far while reacting and responding to what is truly a financial emergency. While we attempt to be very understanding, we also have to realize that there are some States which have taken even more drastic actions than others. I believe the State of Michigan and the State of Louisiana have met this 30-percent threshold change. They reduced their benefits or raised their revenues as much as 30 percent.

If we were to go too far or if the Senator from Ohio was proposing an amendment saying to go to 5 or 10 percent, I assure you I would be opposing it, not only from the point of view of the general public in the States but of the States which have measured up to this very high standard. It would not be fair to Michigan or the other States which have taken actions for us then to say, "Now that you have taken the tough actions we will pass something to water down the requirements so that other States can come in under an easier test."

This is a modest change that we are talking about, a 25-percent cut in benefits or increases in revenues. Certainly, I would agree with the Senator from Ohio that is not minor but it is a harsh degree of the sacrifice required.

I am not going to oppose that portion of the amendment. I would ask the Senator from Ohio if he understands the point we are making and if he will help us in the future, that we not have a recurring year after year effort to water down these standards too much because they do need to keep pressure on in some of the States to assure that those State governments react in a responsible way.

I would hope he would be willing to join me in this effort, and in this case if we try to show sympathy and understanding we not make this a recurring situation year after year to do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I very much appreciate the thoughts expressed by my good friend, the Senator from Oklahoma. The points he makes have validity. I appreciate very much his referring to this matter, not making a battle royal in connection with the pending amendment but raising his concerns, voicing them.

Certainly, we share those concerns and we look forward to working with him to see to it that we do not have to return time after time for the same kind of special consideration.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Ohio. I might just ask the senior Senator from Illinois—the other part of the amendment envisioned in the change from the 30 down to 25 percent to the threshold is a matter of the interest penalty that has been raised by the senior Senator from Illinois and the Senator from Michigan and the junior Senator from Illinois and others. Would it cause problems if we only provided this removal of the compounding of the interest for, say, a 2-year period and still be able to defer for 4 years, but give us a chance to look at this again in 2 years? Or would this create an undue problem?

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, first, let me say to my distinguished colleague that I have listened attentively to his concerns. I very much appreciate his willingness not to object at this time. As a former Governor, I think he can walk in the shoes of Governors of States such as Illinois that have such a tremendous influx of immigration.

We have a problem unlike Oklahoma's, in many respects, where we have structural unemployment. We do stand 10th, because of the very high cost of living, among States in benefits paid, whereas Oklahoma, because of its more favorable conditions, is 49th in that regard and owes no-debt whatsoever. Illinois' debt is a crushing $2 billion.

In answer to the specific question of whether we should sunset this in 2 years, I think it would cause some real concerns. The compounding which I am asking be deleted, would not have kicked in until the second year anyway, thus, a 2-year sunset would provide little relief. I assure my colleague that our Governor and State legislature, as testified to by my distinguished colleague (Mr. Dixon), are doing everything conceivable to face up to this situation—reduce benefits, increase the income to this fund, and reduce this debt—just as rapidly as they possibly can.

Two years may simply be too soon. The compounding effect compounds the problem, obviously. Emotionally, as I explained privately to my distinguished colleague, this has been a source of great agitation and concern.

I think this step alone—I hope in conference, we can look at the rate we actually do charge. Even with adoption of the amendments before us, Illinois will have $70 million in interest alone added to its debt owed the Federal Government next year. Compounding of this interest would place excessive and unnecessary burdens on a State already under tremendous strain. Given these factors, I hope we would not eliminate compounding for only 2 years.

Mr. BOREN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. PERCY. Yes.

Mr. BOREN. There is not a provision like this in the House bill, is that correct, at this time?

Mr. DIXON. There is not.

Mr. BOREN. Therefore, in terms of the proposal we are talking about now, there would be no possibility that the figures would come out of the conference any less stringent; the least possible stringent standards that would come out would be the standards in this amendment, is that correct?

Mr. PERCY. Yes. I point out, Mr. President, that the compounding figure we are talking about does not kick in until near the end of 1984.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments that my colleagues have made. I did come to the floor because I am concerned. As I say, we have made such progress in the Committee on Finance on this subject, I think it is something we do not want to engage in a massive retreat from. At the same time, I do not think that we should take the position that we are so locked into what we have done in the past that we shall not consider the suffering that is going on in parts of this country right now.

I know the people in my State have been fortunate. We are one of the two most fortunate States in this category. It is also partly because we have had the most massive changes in our unemployment compensation laws. That is part of it, too, at the States level. We have completely rewritten our law in the past decade.

We do have a strong feeling that we are a part of this country and that we cannot stand by and have others suffering in other parts of the country without its ultimately reflecting on our own people. We do want to be helpful to those in other parts of the country.

Mr. President, I shall just say I am not going to lodge any objection. I shall not ask for any rollcall. I shall not oppose this amendment. I appreciate the sensitivity that my colleagues have expressed to the need to keep the system stringent so that we do not just open the doors so widely that States no longer have an incentive to take action. I hope that we can hold this at this point now and that we shall not see further attempts in the future to weaken the standard.

I appreciate the time of my colleagues, but I did think it wise that we have an airing of this. I can say to all of them that they have been very persuasive and forceful in the arguments that they have made. I am sure the people in their States appreciate the efforts which they have made here, on the floor, in their behalf.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I think we are going to concur on this matter. I think there is pretty general agreement that it is a good amendment. Do I understand the Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN) wishes to be recognized to speak on this matter on which he is a cosponsor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, let me just thank my friend from Oklahoma for his usual reasonable approach on this. As he knows, we spoke on this in private and after this amendment is accepted and adopted, I shall be offering an amendment which does the same as the earlier act, avoiding compounding the interest on the tougher act, which we adopted a few months ago—just as the Percy-Dixon-Metzenbaum-Heinz amendment would avoid compounding it on this act.

I just wanted the Senator to know that I shall be offering that. I do thank him very much for his position.

Mr. BOREN. I thank the Senator very much. I do understand his amendment is the same. For the reasons already stated, I shall not be lodging any objection to that amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I also commend the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma because, as he indicated, we have made some substantial progress in the Finance Committee. We relied, I say for the record, largely on the expertise of the Senator from Oklahoma in this field. We appreciate his assistance in the committee and his constructive remarks on the floor today.

Let me reassure the Senator from Oklahoma and other Senators, because there are some States that are not borrowing, we cannot continue taxing nonborrowing States to take care of those who are borrowing, even though some of the borrowing States are among the hardest hit—Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Michigan—by the recession and high unemployment.

When I met with some of the Governors in Chicago earlier this year and later here in Washington, the demands they made were great. They wanted interest forgiveness; they wanted reduced interest rates; they wanted no compounding on interest—we have agreed on that—they wanted forgiveness of old loans, and they wanted to apply mandatory payments to interest-bearing loans before repaying old loans. They had a laundry list that would not stop.

It seems to this Senator we can try to accommodate some of their concerns, because many States are in a real financial bind. However, many States, particularly Michigan, Louisiana, and the District of Columbia, have made rather Draconian changes in their systems. They stand as examples to such States as Pennsylvania and Ohio. There can be some relief without abandoning the principle of tightening up the State programs. That is what we tried to do in the Finance Committee proposal.

I think we should encourage States to continue to make changes as Illinois is about to do. I understand that in a few days, based on the agreements reached by the political leadership in that State, organized labor, management, and others, Illinois may enact some real reform.

I assure the Senator from Oklahoma that there is no effort here to abandon what we believe are some of the most important changes in the UI field in many years—the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 reforms.

Mr. President, I have agreed to support the amendment offered by the Senators from Illinois and the Senators from Pennsylvania even though it represents a liberalization of the interest requirements enacted as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981. The Percy/Dixon/Heinz/Specter amendment removes the requirement that interest be charged on the interest deferred as a result of the 5-year deferral which is provided under this bill.

There is no doubt that this amendment will have a fiscal impact. The Federal Government will forego the collection of interest on deferred interest and this is a sum which will never be recouped. The record should indicate that is what will happen.

However, it is my view that the big borrowing States may need additional encouragement to bring their programs to solvency. These States also may need additional time before the payment of large sums of interest to the Federal Treasury. The loan and interest relief provisions of S. 1 do provide the additional incentives and time for States to reform their State programs. Unfortunately, economic conditions in those States have been such that the payment of a large interest liability could be crippling to the reform effort itself.

The Percy amendment, preventing the accrual of interest on deferred interest, would result in a major benefit for the big borrowing States. Interest will still be paid by the States on the original borrowing, however, they will be relieved of the burden of a constantly growing interest liability.

This is a major amendment providing substantial relief. It represents a concession on the part of all taxpayers in nonborrowing States—the very point the Senator from Oklahoma made.

I trust, as we have already had some indication, that my colleagues representing the borrowing States will recognize this concession and that they will make an effort to encourage their States to accept this relief and go about the business of reforming the State systems.

I understand that a number of Senators wish to cosponsor this amendment, including Senators DURENBERGER, BOSCHWITZ, FORD, HUDDLESTON, and RANDOLPH.

I have been discussing with Senator PERCY why we cannot change the interest rate charged on State borrowing. We have made a reduction in cases where the States have made big changes. But the interest rate charged the States on new loans is the same interest rate that the Federal Government pays the solvent States with reserves in their unemployment accounts deposited with the U.S. Treasury. The rate charged to the States is capped at 10 percent. Thus, the States are charged a fair interest consistent with the interest rate paid by the U.S. Government.

So I would say to Senators that I realize that they are going to have inquiries from their Governors and others as to why we cannot get the interest rates down.

Well, we suggested to the Governors that if we could pay them less interest on the reserves, maybe we could charge less interest on borrowing, but that did not seem to ring the right bell.

I want to assure everyone that we believe we have provided some relief to the States who face a difficult time and serious unemployment problems. At the same time we have not gone overboard on relief. We know there are other States watching what we do to see if we are discriminating against States who refused to borrow but chose instead to tighten their programs.

The Finance Committee reported a responsible loan and interest relief provision which is deserving of the support of the full Senate. The committee developed a plan which will allow a State to spread the interest it owes on borrowing from the Federal Government over a 5-year period. The State can also qualify for a reduction of 1 percent in the interest rate charged on borrowing. Additionally, a State which does not qualify for the full cap on the loss of Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) credit may now qualify for a partial cap.

Some action on the State's part for this relief is, of course, necessary. The Finance Committee proposal requires States to make progress toward solvency of 30 percent the first year, 40 percent the second year, and 50 percent the third year to qualify. Senator METZENBAUM's amendment changes those levels to 25 percent and 35 percent. If the State makes an effort to reach solvency which increases those percentages to 50, 80, and 90, the interest rate charged on borrowed funds will be reduced by 1 percent.

This limited relief will have a Federal budget impact. The loss of interest paid to the Federal Government could total as much as $319 million in fiscal year 1983 and $483 million in fiscal year 1984. The partial cap of the FUTA credit loss will also have an impact—$145 million in fiscal year 1984 and $360 million in fiscal year 1985. However, the committee recognized the fact that the current recession has been deeper and more prolonged than we expected in the summer of 1981 when the interest requirement was enacted. Therefore, the committee was willing to make some temporary changes in the current law in order to allow States extra time to enact the necessary State law changes to bring their programs closer to solvency.

Some background may be helpful to put this whole issue in perspective. Twenty-six States, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands have totally exhausted their unemployment benefit reserves. These jurisdictions have received Federal loans of over $11 billion and more borrowing is certain. The account in the Federal unemployment trust fund from which loans to States are made is also insolvent and general Treasury borrowing has become necessary. In total, over $15 billion has been loaned to the States over the past 10 years.

Obviously, the current insolvency of the unemployment trust fund is not a new development. In fact, in the early and mid-1970's, 25 States and jurisdictions depleted their trust fund reserves and required advances from the Federal Treasury. Many of the debtor States repaid their advances. However, 11 of the 25 States have been in debt continuously since then, and 4 others have repaid loans only to borrow again a short time later. Obviously, a number of States did not permit reserves to build up in their trust funds during the recovery years as is the purpose of the account system. Some States, such as Pennsylvania, instead used the brighter economic picture as an excuse to lower taxes and increase benefits.

Under the law in effect in the 1970's, it made good fiscal sense for a State to borrow from the Federal Government to meet benefit costs. After all, the loans were interest free and repayment was not required for up to 2 to 3 years after the loan was made. A State's employers were supposed to experience a loss of the credit against the Federal unemployment tax, but Congress passed several delays of the offset. Credit reductions were not imposed for loans outstanding from 1975-80. Finally, credit reductions were effected and, as of January 1, 1983, 16 States and jurisdictions are experiencing credit reductions.

Congress recognized that the brakes had to be applied to unlimited State borrowing. In the 1981 Reconciliation Act, we enacted the interest and loan reform provisions which a number of States are seeking to escape this year. First, interest of up to 10 percent is now charged on loans made after April 1, 1982, except those classified as "cash-flow." Second, States are allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met. Since the enactment of these provisions, some 22 States have made changes in their State laws to increase solvency. A number of States have made truly remarkable reforms—Michigan and Louisiana are the primary examples.

Other States have, unfortunately, chosen not to take the high road. Instead, those States have continued to borrow and to incur large interest liabilities. Some States have expressed the view that Congress will "bail" them out by eliminating or "forgiving" the interest liabilities. Some States even believe that the Congress will forgive old loans and reschedule payment of new loans. We have heard some States say that they will simply refuse to pay and that the Federal Government will be unable to enforce the interest charges. Other States threaten to increase the taxes on employers in the State to pay the interest charge. Few States have been willing to make the reforms necessary to eliminate or at least reduce the need for borrowing.

What does State borrowing and the failure to repay loans mean to non-borrowing States? In essence, it means a tax increase on every citizen in the solvent, responsible States. The Federal Treasury does not borrow in the private marketplace interest free. The cost of Federal borrowing contributes to the deficit and is thus passed on to every taxpayer.

The Finance Committee proposal responds to the needs of the debtor States, but it does not ignore the solvent States. Further changes which may be proposed on the floor or suggested in conference could upset the balance which the Finance Committee has attempted to establish. Allowing States to escape interest charges effectively forces the States with fiscally sound programs to subsidize States that fail to balance benefit expenditures against tax revenues.

Providing relief to States simply on the basis of unemployment rates higher than the national average ignores the fact that a number of States with high unemployment—Oregon and Alaska, for example—have not borrowed but have instead reformed their programs to bring outlays and expenditures closer into balance.

I urge my colleagues to support the Finance Committee loan and interest provision modifications with no further changes. We are close to the point at which the administration may just refuse to approve loan and interest relief at all. Let us not jeopardize what we have accomplished.

Mr. SPECTER addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SPECTER).

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Kansas and the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma for their comments in support of these amendments which will provide significant relief for States like Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, and Ohio.

After listening to the debate on the subject this afternoon, I should like to briefly comment that there is more involved in this issue than the reform of unemployment compensation programs. The central problem arises because of the very, very high unemployment levels in States like Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, and Illinois. That is the central issue for which we have not yet found an answer.

Two months ago, when the unemployment rate nationally declined from 10.8 to 10.4 percent, the unemployment rate of Pennsylvania increased from 12.9 to 13.7 percent. We truly face a national problem. The unemployment rate in Pennsylvania turns significantly on the serious situation in the American steel industry, which is compounded by the problem that the Government has taken ineffective stands against dumping by foreign importers. The International Trade Commission shows that subsidies of British steel were in the range of $250 a ton, but compromises were worked out on that issue largely in recognition of foreign relations between the United States and Great Britain and the implications of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The impact of automobiles turned on relations between the United States and Japan. This is truly a national problem where some States as a result of a great many factors have incurred great disadvantages.

The central factor of this unemployment compensation problem is the unemployment rate itself. So that when the distinguished Senator from Kansas relates to the comments about the laundry list that the Governors of a number of States have presented, they are talking about some very serious long-range problems which may have to be addressed on another day.

I thank my colleagues from States which have not incurred this kind of problem for their consideration, and I think that the step taken on the absence of interest, on the compounding factor, and the delay of interest is a significant step forward. However, we cannot lose sight of the underlying problems and the necessity for a national approach to this problem which has resulted in some States being hit harder than others. The problem is far beyond the control of those individual States and to a significant extent is because of national objectives on foreign policy resulting in national policies which worked to the disadvantage of a few States like Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

● Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for Senator Percy's amendment. I am a cosponsor of his amendment because I feel it is necessary to offer some relief to States who have experienced high unemployment for a long period of time; 29 States are now borrowing from the Federal unemployment trust fund because they do not have the money to pay the unemployment claims. Over 225,000 Minnesotans are unemployed, with over 125,000 in actual claim status. The drain on the financial system has been enormous.

Minnesota requested $43 million for the month of March, and due to the shortfall in the trust fund received only $18 million. Hopefully we have resolved this problem by passage of the supplemental appropriations bill, but Minnesota will still have an outstanding loan of $400 million by the end of this month.

To put this in perspective—Minnesota's tax collections for the UI program are projected to be only $200 million this year.

According to the State's department of economic security, they are paying 10 percent interest on $208 million this year, plus paying the three-tenths of 1 percent penalty from last year. This penalty adds another $25 million to the bill.

The amendment now being offered would partially relieve States like mine, by eliminating the requirement that States pay interest on the interest charged them. This will save Minnesota several million dollars.

I also am strongly supportive of the work the Finance Committee has done to help out the States who are borrowing. Their proposal to allow deferral of payments to States who have made honest efforts to resolve their financial difficulties is a welcome step. I appreciate Senator DOLE's cooperation and responsiveness on this issue.

I believe that the Finance Committee's efforts, along with this amendment, will go a long way toward putting State UI programs into the black. ●

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise as a cosponsor of the amendments offered by my colleagues from Michigan and Ohio. These amendments constitute modest but important relief for high-debt States devastated by the recession.

Nowhere have the disastrous effects of this recession been felt more keenly than in my State of Michigan. Michigan has suffered double-digit unemployment for 38 consecutive months. In order to pay unemployment benefits to its jobless workers, Michigan has incurred a debt to the Federal Government that exceeds $2.3 billion. Michigan is forced to pay over $216,000 per day in interest charges alone. Estimates indicate that Michigan will owe almost $275 million in interest charges during 1983-86. Michigan is a proud State struggling to recover from the economic agony that it has suffered. It has enacted major reforms in its unemployment insurance laws to accelerate the repayment of its debt. The staggering interest charges it faces, however, make its recovery exceedingly difficult. The interest relief embodied in the Metzbaum and Levin amendments will help speed the recovery in Michigan and other industrial States.

The Metzbaum amendment provides a 9-month grace period for interest payments due on October 1 for those States whose unadjusted employment rate for the prior 12 months equals or exceeds 13.5 percent. This provision will benefit those States which continue to suffer exceedingly high unemployment by granting them more time to raise additional revenues. While it does not forgive the interest payments due, it provides needed relief for high unemployment and high debt States such as my own.

The Levin amendment permits a waiver of all interest assessed on amounts permitted to be deferred under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982. This provision simply mirrors the interest waiver that other States will receive on amounts they can defer as a result of a provision in this bill. Estimates indicate that this interest waiver will save Michigan $11.3 million during 1984-86.

I urge my colleagues to join me in support for these important amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. METZENBAUM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. As I originally indicated, this amendment was a part of the original amendment. It obviously has good support on the floor. We appreciate the consideration given to it by the Senator from Oklahoma. I am prepared to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 93) was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 94 TO UP AMENDMENT NO. 88 AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To provide that no interest shall accrue on any deferred interest.)

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. FORD. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN, for himself, Mr. RIEGLE, and Mr. METZENBAUM), proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 94.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 237, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following: (c) Section 1202 (b)(3)(C)(i) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking the matter that follows clause (II) and inserting "No interest shall accrue on such deferred interest."

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this is a second-degree amendment to the Metzzenbaum amendment, and I believe it is acceptable to the committee and acceptable to Senator METZENBAUM.

A few months ago, Mr. President, we agreed to defer interest under certain circumstances on loans from these funds. Today we are agreeing to defer interest under other circumstances for other States for loans from these funds. We have just agreed to the Percy-Dixon-Metzenbaum modification which says that on the deferred interest we will not be compounding interest, we will not require those States to pay interest on interest. The amendment which I have just sent to the desk does the same thing for the deferred interest under the bill which we just adopted a few months ago called the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 that we are doing on today's bill. It would in effect say, for the same reasons, that we do not want to charge interest on those deferred payments as we are deciding today not to charge interest on interest on the deferrals that we are allowing today.

I might just quickly say that my State of Michigan, which benefited under that early act, has increased taxes by $2 billion and cut benefits by $1 billion. It is the kind of Draconian action which the chairman has referred to. We have taken that bitter medicine.

We are very appreciative of the work of the chairman of the Finance Committee in working this out with us. He has been extremely accommodating. I must say again, as in so many other matters that come before the Senate, in the first instance a few months ago in working it out so that we could get some relief from the compounding interest in today's bill.

I also want to thank the Senator from Ohio for accepting this amendment, for working through this process with us. We have worked very closely with him, as we have worked very closely with Senator DOLE. He is the principal cosponsor along with Senator RIEGLE of my modification to his amendment. I am very happy that he has agreed to go at it in this way, and again my thanks to the chairman of the Finance Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Michigan and cosponsors is a good amendment, one of those we talked about at an earlier point. I am happy to accept his amendment to my amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Michigan is consistent with what we have just done with regard to the Percy amendment. The amendment should be adopted. We support the amendment.

I was just explaining to the Senator from Michigan that if anybody does not understand what has happened in his State, they should take a look at loan projections based on the President's budget assumptions and provided by the U.S. Department of Labor, dated March 15, 1983. These projections indicate that Michigan is borrowing about $1.1 billion in 1983, $816 million in 1984, $596 million in 1985, $294 million in 1986, down to $87 million in 1987, and zero in 1988. These figures take into account the substantial reforms enacted by the State legislature in December 1982 under the leadership of then Gov. Bill Miliken.

These DOL figures are based on assumptions, but they do indicate the magnitude of the changes made in that State. They also provide an indication of why we believe we are justified in providing some relief for States like Michigan, which have made such drastic changes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 94) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment of the Senator from Ohio?

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, we are about ready to act on this amendment, as amended by both second-degree amendments, but before doing so, I should like to express my appreciation to the Senator from Kansas, the manager of the bill. He has done that which he felt necessary in order to send a strong and loud message to the States, as well as to see to it that the States do try to catch up with their arrearages and meet their obligations to the Federal Government. Yet, he has been understanding enough to make it possible for this amendment, as amended by the two second-degree amendments, to be considered and to be acted upon. I express to him my appreciation for his cooperation on the floor of the Senate.

I wish I could say the same about the Department of Labor, because in considering this amendment, we attempted to find out from the Department of Labor what the projected interest payments were, on a State-by-State basis, through 1988. For some reason unbeknown to me, they indicated that that information had a kind of confidentiality about it, which I cannot understand. They talked about it being State sensitive.

I have heard a lot of things around this community being marked confidential and privileged, and so forth, but I cannot understand why figures such as that are State sensitive from the Department of Labor.

I wish to advise them, in loud and clear tones, that I do not expect them to refuse any Member of the Senate or any Member of Congress any information of this kind, unless there is some special law that makes it possible for them to do so.

Having gotten that off my chest, Mr. President, I am happy to proceed with action on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 88), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I had omitted one matter. I ask unanimous consent that the name of my colleague from Ohio, Senator GLENN, be added as a cosponsor of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 95

(Purpose: To change the date after which a State solvency action must have been taken)

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment on behalf of myself and my colleague, Senator HUDDLESTON, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Bradley amendment will continue to be set aside.

The amendment of the Senator from Kentucky will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky (Mr. FORD), for himself and Mr. HUDDLESTON, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 95.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 235, line 23, strike out "October 1" and insert "March 31".

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, this amendment that I and my colleague from Kentucky, Senator HUDDLESTON, are offering is of a technical nature. It moves back the effective date from October 1, 1982 to March 31, 1982, for board would go a long way to restoring public confidence in the social security program. When the original Social Security Act established a Social Security Board as an independent agency, it was clear to the public that this program would be managed as a separate social insurance program with its own tax contributions. This Board had no matters competing for its attention and its resources other than the efficient management of this important program. Young workers could clearly understand the relationship between their tax payments and their eventual entitlement for benefits. There was no confusion about how the tax revenues were being used or why changes were made in the program.

I wish to highlight why this is a necessary approach.

Over the years, the Social Security Board has been subsumed under other administrative units and has become only one part of the confusing array of health and welfare programs provided by the Federal Government. In the process, the operations and objectives of the social security program have been obscured, both within the Government and to the view of the general public. This process of absorption began in 1939 when the original Social Security Board was subsumed under the Federal Security Agency. In 1953, the Social Security Administration was made a part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare—later the Department of Health and Human Services. In 1977, as part of the reorganization of the Department, medicare was separated from the Social Security Administration and placed, along with the medicaid program, in a new Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA). Several public assistance programs, including aid to families with dependent children and child support enforcement programs were at that time shifted to the Social Security Administration to be administered. As a result, today there is no clear distinction in either the organization or the administration of the Department's programs between those programs which are financed with general tax revenues and those which are based on the payroll tax contributions of workers.

Not only is the present organization confusing and distressing to those in the public who are contributing taxes today in the expectation of receiving benefits in the future, it is also counterproductive to the efficient operation of the social security program. In recent years, the Social Security Administration has shown increasing signs of difficulty in administering the social security program. Constant turnover in leadership at the Department and the agency level has made it difficult, if not impossible, to establish consistent policy priorities in that very important agency.

The clearest evidence of this ever-fluctuating policy has appeared in the failure of the agency to develop a consistent plan to upgrade and revise its computer system which can survive long enough to be implemented. As a result, the Social Security Administration is now operating a computer system barely able to keep up with the maintenance of earnings records on hundreds of millions of workers and the regular computation of benefit checks for over 35 million beneficiaries.

As one of the operating divisions within a conglomerate Cabinet-level Department, the Social Security Administration has been saddled with responsibilities for programs unrelated to social security which place an added burden on its already overcommitted staff and computer resources. In addition, as part of a broader Department, the agency is apportioned both program and administrative budget reduction targets based on overall departmental needs and without regard to social security program considerations or operational needs. This mathematical apportioning of resources and responsibilities is interfering with the ability of the Social Security Administration to manage the social insurance program it was intended to administer.

While the Social Security Administration resources are stretched to the limit, the separate administration of the medicare and cash benefit programs has led to duplication of staff in budget, policy planning, and administrative services between these two agencies and between them and the Department as a whole. This duplication is both a source of added overhead cost and a source of problems in coordination of activities and policy.

From our perspective, the most distressing side effect of this administrative confusion is that our constituents are finding it increasingly difficult to get decent service from the Social Security Administration. Increasingly constituents with errors in their checks or earnings records are having to seek recourse through their Congressman's district office because the Social Security Administration is slow or reluctant to respond to their concerns.

The confusion in the general public about the social security program and its administration is a major source of declining public confidence in the program. In the last few years, confidence in the future of the social security program has declined sharply—among younger people in particular, the proportion of those with little or no confidence in the program has risen from one-half to three-quarters. I see this confusion about the financing and management of the program in the letters I receive from constituents. Many younger people believe their payroll tax deductions are used to finance welfare programs.

I have people come up to me every time I am having a town meeting in the State and they say: "Senator, you have just to get these welfare programs out of the Social Security Administration. They are robbing us of our retirement."

Of course, we all know there are no welfare programs in the social security program. It is the old age and survivors program. There is the disability program. There is a health insurance program, medicare. Each of those programs have their own tax rate to pay for those programs. There are no welfare programs in social security.

Others believe that changes in the program are made only to reduce budget deficits or to finance increases in the defense budget. The sense that this program can be altered merely to meet budget needs or for other largely political reasons is a major source of the recent loss in public confidence.

Mr. President, the agency I am talking about is the second largest agency in the Federal Government. The Social Security Administration has more employees (80,000) and a larger budget (over $150 billion) than any other Federal Department except the Department of Defense. This is an agency that dwarfs the rest of the Department of Health and Human Services, and yet it is treated as only one of several divisions in that Department. I believe it is time the Congress clearly indicated its intention to consolidate and separate the operations of the social security program so that its important mission can be accorded the special attention it so badly needs.

I recognize that the separation of this agency raises a number of difficult questions about reorganization. Quite rightly these questions should be the subject of a careful study to develop the details of a reorganization plan. But I hope we will not be deterred now by these questions from expressing our intent to develop a strong Social Security Administration with a clear set of responsibilities, strong leadership, and the resources to manage this important program effectively. It will take a strong signal like this from the Congress to convince the American people once again that this earnings-related program is unique and separate and is not simply another of the many discretionary programs this Government operates from time to time.

I think, Mr. President, we are only going to really clarify that question for our constituents when we have a separate Social Security Administration. We are only going to run it right when there is a separate Social Security Administration, and that is why I want and hope that my colleagues will accept this amendment.

I might add that later on this afternoon I will offer an amendment to take one of the other steps which I believe is necessary and that is to separate the social security old age and survivors and disability insurance programs financially from the unified budget, but that is not what this amendment seeks to do.

So at this point I am only urging my colleagues to join me in setting in motion the process of restoring as it once was the Social Security Administration to independent status.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN), has been discussed and also has been modified so that it now is a study.

I think the idea has a great deal of merit.

The one concern we had with the original amendment was that it became self-executing if nothing were done by a certain date. It now satisfies the chairman and others that it is a good amendment and we hope that it might be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The amendment (UP No. 98) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 99

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY) will continue to be set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 99.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Beginning on page 239, line 16, strike out through page 240, line 11, and insert the following:

PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO PAY INTEREST

SEC. 414. (a) Section 303(c) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "or" at the end of paragraph (1), striking out the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting "; or", and adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(3) that any interest required to be paid on advances under title XII of this Act has not been paid by the date on which such interest is required to be paid or has been paid directly or indirectly (by an equivalent reduction in State unemployment taxes or otherwise) by such State from amounts in such State's unemployment fund, until such interest is properly paid."

(b) Section 3304(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to certification of State unemployment compensation laws) is amended by redesignating paragraph (17) as paragraph (18) and by inserting after paragraph (16) the following new paragraph:

"(17) any interest required to be paid on advances under title XII of the Social Security Act shall be paid in a timely manner and shall not be paid, directly or indirectly (by an equivalent reduction in State unemployment taxes or otherwise) by such State from amounts in such State's unemployment fund; and".

and shall not be paid, directly or indirectly (by an equivalent reduction in State unemployment taxes or otherwise) by such State from amounts in such State's unemployment fund; and".

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment should have followed the other amendments relating to unemployment insurance. But the Senator from Pennsylvania wanted to offer his amendment, and the Senator from Kansas deferred.

What my amendment does is to strengthen the collection authority of the Federal Government in regard to overdue interest on unemployment compensation loans.

First, the amendment spells out the implicit fact that a State's failure to pay its interest liabilities could result in the loss of State certification.

This would mean that State employers would no longer be eligible for full credit against the Federal unemployment tax. Such a proceeding has been carried out fully only once. However, it does provide an effective tool for enforcement and compliance questions with the States.

Second, the amendment would withhold administrative funds from a State which fails to meet the payment schedule of its interest liabilities. The funding, which is all Federal, would be withheld until the required payment is made.

The amendment provides for the late payments which qualify under the Metzbaum amendment, but the provision I am proposing would become effective for late interest payments beyond the grace period.

I urge my colleagues to approve this amendment as it is simply good business policy to require payments in a timely fashion of debts. The Federal Government hopefully will never have to utilize this provision, but it should be available if necessary.

I think this amendment has been discussed with the minority manager of the bill. It is a strengthening amendment, and I hope there is no objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the amendment?

Mr. LONG. I do not object. It accomplishes the purpose it has in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The amendment (UP No. 99) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. HUDDLESTON) has an amendment which we are in the process of reviewing, and perhaps while he is discussing it we can take a look at it.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 100

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, I thank the floor manager of the bill. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will continue to be set aside. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky (Mr. HUDDLESTON), for himself and Senators DANFORTH, RANDOLPH, FORD, and PELL, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 100.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I add the following new section:

Sec. . (a)(1) Section 210 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"ELECTIVE COVERAGE FOR MINISTERS AS EMPLOYERS

"(r) Services performed in the exercise of his ministry by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church who has made an election under section 312(v)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 with respect to such service shall constitute employment under this section beginning with the first day of the calendar quarter in which coverage becomes effective with respect to such service under section 312(v)(3) of such Code."

(2) Section 210(a)(8)(A) of such Act is amended by striking out "except that" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "except as provided in subsection (r), and except that."

(3) The last sentence of section 211(c) of such Act is amended by inserting "(i)" after "unless", and by inserting before the period at the end of the sentence the following "or (ii) in the case of service performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry as described in paragraph (4), the service constitutes employment under section 210(r)."

(b)(1) Section 3121 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (definitions under Federal Insurance Contributions Act) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(v) MINISTER.—

"(1) TREATMENT OF SERVICE AS EMPLOYMENT.—Service performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, shall constitute employment under this section if—

"(A) he has elected to have such service covered as employment under this section; and

"(B) the church has elected to have such service covered as employment under this section.

"(2) ELECTION BY MINISTER AND CHURCH.—

"(A) Any minister who makes an election under paragraph (1)(A) shall file a certificate of such election in such form and manner, and with such official, as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe. Such certificate shall specify the date on which the minister wishes such election to become effective for him, but in no case shall such election become effective (i) prior to the first day of the earliest calendar quarter which begins on or after the first day of the sixth calendar month before the month in which the minister files such certificate, or (ii) later than the first day of the quarter following the quarter in which the minister files such certificate.

"(B) Any church which makes an election under paragraph (1)(B) shall file a certificate of such election and a waiver of exemption from the taxes imposed by section 3121. In such form and manner, and with such official, as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe. Such certificate shall specify the date on which the church wishes such election to become effective for the church, but in no case shall such election become effective (i) prior to the first day of the earliest calendar quarter which begins on or after the first day of the sixth calendar month before the month in which the church files the certificate of such election, or (ii) later than the first day of the quarter following the quarter in which the church files such certificate.

"(C) In any case where a church is subject to the control of a national, regional, or other governing body with respect to the selection and compensation of its ministers (under the constitution, by-laws, or other administrative arrangements of the denomination of which such church is a part), the election under paragraph (1)(B) through the filing of a certificate under subparagraph (B) may be made on behalf of the church by such governing body; and any election so made shall be deemed for purposes of this subsection to be the election of the church.

"(3) EFFECTIVE DATE OF COVERAGE.—Coverage shall become effective with respect to service specified in paragraph (1) on the first day of the first quarter for which both an election by the minister is effective under paragraph (2)(A) and an election by the church is effective under paragraph (2)(B). Such service shall constitute employment under this section beginning with the first day of the calendar quarter in which coverage is effective with respect to such service.

"(4) APPLICABILITY OF ELECTION.—

"(A) Any election under this subsection shall be irrevocable. An election made under this subsection by a minister shall apply with respect to any service performed by such minister in the exercise of his ministry in the employ of any church which has made an election under this subsection; and an election made under this subsection by a church shall apply with respect to any such service performed in the employ of such church by a minister who has made an election under this subsection.

"(B) A church which has made an election under this subsection shall not, for purposes of sections 3102 and 3111, be considered to be the employer of any minister who has not made an election under this subsection".

(2) Section 3121(b)(8)(A) of such Code is amended by striking out "except that" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "except as provided in subsection (v), and except that".

(3) The last sentence of section 1402(c) of such Code is amended by inserting "(1)" after "unless", and by inserting before the period at the end of the sentence the following: "or (ii) in the case of service performed by a duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry as described in paragraph (4), the service, constitutes employment under section 3121(v)."

(4) The second sentence of section 1402(e)(3) of such Code is amended by inserting "and shall not be affected by any election subsequently made under section

3121(v)(1)(A)" immediately before the period at the end thereof.

(C) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to service performed on or after the first day of the first calendar quarter which begins after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, the amendment I am proposing to the pending social security legislation would bring consistency and equity to the social security payroll tax system for members of our Nation's clergy. I am pleased that the distinguished Senator from Missouri, (Senator DANFORTH), the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. RANDOLPH), Senator FORD, my colleague from Kentucky, and the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PELL) have joined me as cosponsors of this amendment. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator DANFORTH has devoted a great deal of time and effort toward the social security issue and therefore, I believe, has a unique perspective on the problem addressed by our amendment.

Current law requires that clergy members be considered self-employed for the purposes of social security taxation. This means that they must pay taxes on their wages based on the rate applied to the self-employed, a rate measurably higher than that paid by employed individuals.

The inconsistency arises out of the fact that in the vast majority of cases, the clergy member's salary is not self-generated, but is actually paid by the church or synagogue just as that of all other individuals serving that house of worship.

The church, therefore, is withholding income taxes from clergy salaries as employees of the church, but at the same time is not paying the employer portion of the social security tax for its clergy based on current law which deems these individuals self-employed.

The situation as it now exists requires one Government agency, the IRS, to recognize clergy members as employees of their church or synagogue, while another (SSA) insists that, for social security tax purposes, these individuals are self-employed.

The amendment I am proposing would relieve this inconsistency by providing the option for churches and synagogues to contribute the employer's portion of the social security tax on behalf of their clergy. Briefly, it would permit duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed ministers to enter into voluntary agreements with their churches to be treated, for social security tax purposes, as employees of their church or synagogue. In essence, it would be a mutual decision arrived at between the two parties involved.

Mr. President, I believe this approach to be both purposeful and compromising; it restores a balance to the method by which we tax these respected members of our community, while allowing those churches and clergy members with particular objection to this change to simply opt against implementing it.

The language I am proposing merely provides the vehicle for change, and allows the final, sometimes delicate employment classification of clergy to be made by those directly affected by it.

It is important to point out that my amendment does not tamper with the actual revenue inflow to the social security trust funds, since it simply shifts responsibility for a clergy member's social security payroll taxes from one source to another.

I am submitting for the RECORD a letter from the National Council of Churches indicating their support for my amendment.

Mr. President, I believe my amendment adequately addresses a problem which is in great need of correction, and I urge my colleagues to join Senator DANFORTH and I in support of it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the letter to which I referred be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN THE U.S.A.,

Washington, D.C., March 18, 1983.

Hon. WALTER D. HUDDLESTON,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR HUDDLESTON: On behalf of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, I write to commend your efforts in relation to the question of Social Security coverage for clergy.

We support the amendment you are offering today, which would allow clergy the option of being treated as employees for purposes of Social Security.

Since some religious groups may not wish to have their clergy treated in this way, we especially appreciate the fact that, under your amendment, the election to be covered as an employee would be completely optional.

Thank you for the leadership you have provided on this issue.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES A. HAMILTON,
Associate General Secretary and Director, Washington Office.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I would be happy to respond to any questions the manager of the bill or the distinguished ranking member might have at this time.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with Senator HUDDLESTON in offering this amendment, which touches a subject with quite an interesting history. Under the Social Security Act at present, members of the clergy can only be considered self-employed persons. This means that they bear a larger social security tax than an employed person, who pays one-half the full social security tax. Many clergymen and women would, for the purposes of social security, prefer to be considered employees of their churches. Similarly, many churches, properly interested in providing a decent standard of living for their ministers, would gladly pay the employer share of the social security tax in order to reduce their ministers' social security tax burden.

More is at stake in this question than, mere dollars and cents. The root question is more than a financial one. Some ministers could never consider themselves the "employees" of a church. Likewise, some churches could never agree that they are in an employer-employee relationship with their ministers or priests.

It is for this reason, as I understand it, that an employer-employee relationship has been avoided for purposes of social security.

The beauty of this amendment is that a clergyman or clergywoman and his or her church, by a voluntary and mutual agreement, could consider themselves in that relationship of employer and employee. Under such an agreement, the clergyman would pay the employee share of the social security tax, and the church the employer share. Again, the amendment mandates no such change—it merely allows such a change if both parties agree.

Happily, the amendment is revenue neutral. It will not affect the social security trust funds.

I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Huddleston-Danforth amendment would allow ministers to be treated as employees for FICA tax purposes if both the minister and his church elected such treatment.

There would be no adverse impact on the trust funds and no adverse impact on general revenues by the adoption of this amendment since our bill equalizes the SECA rate and the combined employer-employee social security tax rate.

My only concern would be whether the affected ministers and churches would agree that this is an appropriate amendment. It is my understanding that there is no problem so long as the provision is elective—which it is—and that, in appropriate circumstances, a national, regional, or other governing body has the authority to make the election on behalf of the local church. These concerns have been addressed by the amendment, in a fair and equitable manner.

Therefore, the Senator from Kansas believes the amendment should be accepted, and I have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. LONG. I have no objection.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I move the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRIBLE). Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment (UF No. 100) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, we are waiting for the arrival of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI).

We have disposed of 10 or 15 amendments since noon, so we have made good progress.

I do not believe there are that many amendments left. We have an amendment by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY), the Senator from Louisiana, and other amendments relating to that one topic. If there are other amendments, I would say to Members who may be in their offices that we would like to continue to dispose of amendments this afternoon. I think that is the hope of the majority leader; is that correct?

Mr. BAKER. That is correct.

Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we really need to do as much as we can this afternoon. I congratulate the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the committee, and others for moving along as expeditiously as they have been doing.

May I ask the manager of the bill whether or not he thinks that we can be usefully employed this afternoon for another hour or so, so that Senators can be on notice?

Mr. DOLE. I would say probably another hour, maybe an hour and a half.

Mr. BAKER. I would like to get to third reading if we can, and, if we cannot, to do as much as is possible to do in any event so that we can finish this bill on Monday.

Mr. DOLE. There may be one additional rollcall vote today.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum while we await the arrival of the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas is advised that the amendment we had hoped to take up now probably cannot be disposed of or even considered until sometime on Monday. It concerns whether or not social security should be within the budget process. That may take, I would assume, at least an hour or an hour and a half of debate. Hopefully it would not take longer than that amount of time.

Because of a conflict between four or five principal players we cannot act on that amendment this afternoon. I hope that other Members in their offices who may have amendments could offer them. I know the distinguished

Senator from Florida, Senator HAWKINS, has an amendment, as does the Senator from New Jersey, Senator BRADLEY. Both will require rollcall votes.

If there are Senators who believe they have noncontroversial amendments, this would be a good time to discuss them and determine if they are noncontroversial. We would like to dispose of additional amendments this afternoon. It is our purpose to complete action on this bill on Monday.

I suggest the absence of a quorum while, hopefully, Members start coming this way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REMOVING SOCIAL SECURITY FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, it had been my intention to offer my amendment to remove social security from the unified Federal budget this afternoon, but Senator CHILES, the ranking member of the Budget Committee, and Senator DOMENICI have travel arrangements that, were I to offer the amendment at this time, would prevent them from fully engaging in debate. What I shall do instead is discuss the amendment this afternoon. I shall send the amendment to the desk not to be taken up and to be considered, but I shall simply have the amendment printed and printed in the RECORD at this point but not as if for consideration.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I, insert the following:

REMOVAL OF SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET

SEC. . Part A of title XI of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"REMOVAL OF SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET

"SEC. 1136. (a)(1) For the fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1984, and ending before October 1, 1988, the President shall, in accordance with the second sentence of section 1104(c) of title 31, United States Code, establish a separate functional category for requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, and a separate category for estimates of revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The categories established by the President pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be used in the preparation and submission of the budget under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for each such fiscal year. The budget submitted under such section for each such fiscal year shall not classify requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays and revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to this paragraph.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for a fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1984, and ending before October 1, 1988, shall use the categories established by the President under paragraph (1) in specifying the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund and in specifying the recommended level of revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. A concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any such fiscal year shall not classify the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays for such Trust Funds or the recommended level of revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(b)(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, at the time the President submits the budget under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, and at the times the President submits the supplemental summary and changes in budget authority, outlays, and receipts under section 1106 of such title for any such fiscal year, the President shall transmit to the Congress a separate statement specifying requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for such fiscal year and estimates of revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year. The budget for any such fiscal year submitted under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, and any supplemental summary or changes in budget authority, outlays, and receipts submitted under section 1106 of such title for any such fiscal year, shall not contain any requests for new budget authority or any estimates of outlays or revenues for any such Trust Fund for such fiscal year or any estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, shall not include in the provisions specifying—

"(A) the appropriate level of total new budget authority and total outlays required under section 301(a)(1) of such Act for such fiscal year;

"(B) the estimates of total new budget authority and total outlays for each major functional category required under section 301(a)(2) of such Act for such fiscal year; or

"(C) the recommended level of Federal revenues required under section 301(a)(4) of such Act for such fiscal year, any amounts attributable to budget authority and outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for such fiscal year or any amounts attributable to revenues for any such Trust Fund or revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year.

"(3) Any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, or any amendment thereto or any conference report thereon, shall not contain any specifications or directions described in the second sentence of section 310(a) of such Act which relate to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, or revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(C) The budget outlays of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, shall be exempt from any general limitation imposed by statute on budget outlays of the United States, including any limitation on net lending.

"(d)(1) For the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1988, and the succeeding fiscal years, the President shall, in accordance with the second sentence of section 1104(c) of title 31, United States Code, establish a separate functional category for requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays for the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund and a separate category for revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The categories established by the President pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be used in the preparation and submission of the budget under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, for each such fiscal year. The budget submitted under such section for each such fiscal year shall not classify requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays and revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to this paragraph.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for a fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, shall use the categories established by the President under paragraph (1) in specifying the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays for the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund and the recommended level of revenues for such Trust Funds and for revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. A concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any such fiscal year shall not classify the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays for such Trust Funds or the recommended level of revenues for such

Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(e) The provisions of subsections (a)(2), (b)(2), (b)(3), and (d)(2) are enacted by the Congress—

"(1) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the House of Representatives and the Senate, respectively, and as such they shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, or of that House to which they specifically apply, and such rules shall supersede other rules only to the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

"(2) with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules (so far as relating to such House) at any time, in the same manner, and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of such House.

"(f) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'budget outlays' has the same meaning as in section 3(1) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974;

"(2) the term 'budget authority' has the same meaning as in section 3(2) of such Act; and

"(3) the term 'concurrent resolution on the budget' has the same meaning as in section 3(4) of such Act."

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, let me take my colleagues' time to consider what I view as a very important choice before the Senate.

The amendment we shall take up on Monday, that I shall offer then, would separate the operations of the social security trust fund, first, as a distinct functional category in the next congressional and Presidential budgets, and then would remove social security entirely from the unified budget beginning in fiscal year 1989. Specifically under this amendment, the operations of the old age and survivors insurance—OASI—the disability insurance—DI—the hospital insurance—HI—and the supplemental medical insurance—SMI—trust funds would be separated from functional categories 550 and 600 and displayed as a separate function in the President's and the congressional budget effective with the fiscal year 1985 budgets.

In addition, the operations of the OASI and DI trust funds would be separated from the President's budget and the congressional budget and exempt from any general limitation on spending of the U.S. Government, effective for fiscal year 1989.

Mr. President, so that there is no misunderstanding of what this amendment would achieve, I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis of it be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT TO REMOVE SOCIAL SECURITY FROM THE UNIFIED FEDERAL BUDGET BY SENATOR HEINZ—SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

(a)(1) For fiscal years 1985 through 1988, the President's budget would contain a separate functional category for the budget authority and outlays of the Old-Age and Survivor's Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI), the Hospital Insurance (HI), and the Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI) trust funds; and a separate category for the revenues to these trust funds. These trust funds would not be classified in any other categories. Budget authority, outlays, and revenues for these trust funds would still be included in the budget totals.

(2) Budget resolutions for fiscal years 1988 through 1988 would use the categories established by the President in specifying budget authority, outlays, and revenues for the OASI, DI, HI, and SMI trust funds. These trust funds would not be classified in any other categories, and would be included in the budget totals.

(b)(1) For fiscal years 1989 and beyond, budget authority, outlays, and revenues of the OASI and DI trust funds would not be included in the unified budget submitted by the President. However, when the President sends the unified budget and mid-year revisions to the Congress, he would send, in addition a separate statement on the operations of the OASI and DI trust funds.

(2) Concurrent budget resolutions for fiscal year 1989 and beyond would not include in the totals, functional categories, and revenues, any amount attributable to budget authority, outlays, or revenues for the OASI and DI trust funds.

(3) Concurrent budget resolutions, and amendments to or conference reports on concurrent budget resolutions would not include reconciliation instructions to Committees which relate to the OASI or DI trust funds, effective for fiscal years 1989 and beyond.

(c) The OASI and DI trust funds would be exempt from any general limitations on outlays and net lending which might be imposed (e.g. were there a statutory requirement that outlays could not exceed revenues in any given year, the OASI and DI trust funds would not be included).

(d) For fiscal years 1989 and beyond, the SMI and HI trust funds would be included in the unified budget but would be treated as a separate functional category in the budget.

(e) This provision simply restates that limitations on what can be included in concurrent budget resolutions are considered part of House and Senate rules and not a matter of statute, and can be changed as such by either House.

Mr. HEINZ. For the sake of emphasis and clarity, let me say again that the amendment insofar as it affects the congressional budget process, including reconciliation, would only be with respect to the two cash benefit trust funds—old age and survivor's insurance and disability insurance—and that it is those two and those two only that would be removed from the unified budget beginning in fiscal year 1989. Therefore, it would not remove the two medicare trust funds, HI and SMI. The medicare trust funds would remain in the budget as a separate functional category.

There are two reasons for leaving the two medicare trust funds in the budget. First, although one of these—HI—is financed by the payroll tax, there really is no relationship between the earnings of the worker and the benefits provided under the program. Once an individual is entitled to medicare, they have full access to the benefits of the program, no matter how many quarters they worked beyond the minimum of 40 quarters, and without regard to the amount of earnings they had in this period. So in this regard, the sense of having earned the benefits is really quite different than it is with regard to the cash benefits.

Second, and more important in my mind, is that the medicare program is facing serious financing difficulties beginning in a few years and extending into the foreseeable future. These financing problems are so severe that they call into question our ability to continue operating medicare as it is currently structured. Medicare's financing problems are only a signal of far greater financing problems in the general area of health care. With hospital costs rising at twice the rate of inflation, we are not only facing alarming increases in medicare expenditures, we are facing a substantial erosion in tax revenues as well through our income-tax treatment of private health insurance. These are problems we will have to address broadly throughout the budget. The solutions to them may involve a restructuring of medicare financing making it inappropriate to have this program outside of the unified Federal budget. So I do not believe this is the proper time to address the issue of how we should treat medicare financing in the unified budget.

Mr. President, I would like to contrast the financing problems we have in medicare with those we have been experiencing in the cash benefit programs, because I think this reinforces the justification for separating the cash benefit programs from the unified budget. While the nominal cost of funding the current structure of benefits in OASI and DI is expected to rise substantially over the next 75 years, the cost of these programs relative to the economy as a whole will not necessarily increase over levels we are already supporting. In other words, today the cash-benefits account for about 5.2 percent of the GNP, and under intermediate II-B assumptions, they are expected to be 5.4 percent of GNP in 2060. In the interim, OASDI outlays will fluctuate under these assumptions between 4 percent and 6 percent of GNP. But the point is, over the long run, this is a relatively stable spending program. Where Federal spending fixed as a percent of GNP in the future will be the case, this program would account for a relatively stable share of that spending over quite a long period of time.

Medicare, however, is quite a different matter. Health care costs generally have been and are expected to continue rising at alarming rates. Health care accounted for only 6 percent of GNP as recently as 1965. It has jumped to nearly 11 percent of GNP today and is still climbing.

In sum, I think it makes good sense to wait until we resolve the problems in health-care financing and see how medicare is financed at that time before we make any final decisions about including or excluding medicare from the unified Federal budget.

Mr. President, for several years, Congress has been debating whether social security ought to be a part of the unified budget and whether it ought to be considered each year in the context of the congressional budget process.

I believe the time has come to stop discussing that question. We have given it a tremendous amount of study. I believe the time has come to act.

We have before us today a social security financing bill which will do a great deal to restore public confidence in the social security program. It will provide $165.5 billion in additional financing in the shortrun and totally eliminate, under current forecasts, the longrun financing deficit. Despite its success in providing new financing, it fails to address one of the root causes of declining public confidence, namely, cynicism about the way the Congress develops social security legislation.

I have been in a number of forums where the work of the Finance Committee and of the Budget Committee has been misunderstood. Any time somebody proposes to try and put social security on a firm financial footing so that we may assure the elderly that their benefit checks are going to go out, someone will get up and say: "These changes are being proposed to balance the budget on the backs of social security recipients."

How many times we have heard that in the last 2 years are too numerous to count. Whatever the reasons, there is a general misunderstanding in the public of the way social security is financed and of its relationship to the rest of our Federal programs.

Many people honestly believe that the Federal Government uses social security funds for other purposes and that the current financing problems have resulted because the Congress has repeatedly raided the trust funds.

Mr. President, I do not know of a single Member of this body who wants to be accused, even to let it be thought for a moment that they want to make a single change, no matter how modest, in the social security system if it is for the purpose of balancing the budget, or for that matter for the purpose of helping finance the defense budget, or any purpose other than maintaining the solvency of social security itself.

But I must say, I think the fact that we have had to deal with social security in the annual congressional budget debate in the last few years is largely to blame for this growing public skepticism. Congress has given the American people the impression that payment of social security benefits is conditional upon the status of the overall Federal budget, and not solely upon the financial condition of the trust funds. Annual quick fixes in social security, made in the rush of reporting out a comprehensive budget, have flown in the face of the fact that this is a social insurance program dependent on long-term commitments by workers and the Government. Its inclusion in the budget process has made it look more like discretionary spending than the social insurance that it is.

Mr. President, the need to restore public confidence in the long-term stability of social security is of overriding importance. In the last few years, while the Congress has been debating what to do about social security, the public, particularly younger workers, has lost faith in the future of this program. In 1978, surveys showed that nearly half of all workers between 18 and 49 had confidence that they would receive benefits from the program when they retired. Today, fewer than one in four of these workers believe they will receive benefits. Mr. President, that is not a reversal. It is a wholesale loss of public confidence. It is a serious problem because the whole structure of this social insurance program rests on a compact made across generations. Younger workers today pay taxes to finance benefits for today's retirees in the expectation that future generations will also be willing to pay taxes when it is their turn to retire. Such growing doubts about the future of social security threaten to undermine the willingness of workers to support the payroll tax upon which the entire system rests.

The bill before us will begin the process of restoring public confidence in social security. In part, we will do this through the financing measures we adopt here. But we will also need to reassure the 115 million contributing workers and 35 million social security beneficiaries that these measures are being adopted solely to finance social security. To do this we must remove the social security trust funds from the unified Federal budget.

Restoring public confidence in social security is one good reason for removing social security from the budget, but it is not the only reason. If we look at this question from a budget perspective, it is even clearer that social security does not belong in the unified budget.

Mr. President, the social security program is a very different kind of program than those we generally find in the budget. It is a program which has its own dedicated taxes and its own financing reserve. This reserve is intended to provide resources to the program, cushioning it from the ups and downs of economic cycles. When social security runs deficits, it draws on its reserves; when it runs surpluses it builds the reserves back up. As part of the unified budget, however, social security's deficits add to the budget deficit and its surpluses mask budget deficits that might otherwise be more apparent. But social security is not a program which should be continually adjusted to correct these temporary effects on the overall budget. It is a program which should be set on a sound financial basis and, to the extent possible, left alone to weather economic and demographic fluctuations with its own resources.

If we make the mistake of leaving social security in the unified budget, I think we are going to have tremendous difficulty in the future managing the social security program in a consistent manner. None of us can know for sure what the future will hold, but there are a few events which we know have a high probability of occurring. One of these which is going to have tremendous effects on social security financing, is the inevitable aging of the baby-boom generation. Like a rabbit swallowed by a snake, this generation will advance slowly through the age groups—first swelling the ranks of workers, and then, after 2015, swelling the ranks of retirees. This demographic pattern will result in annual surpluses for social security from the 1990's for about 25 years—in other words through about 2015—followed by annual deficits for social security after 2015. It seems to me, if we can gaze into the crystal ball for a moment, that this will lead to two kinds of problems in the context of the unified budget.

Mr. President, the charts behind me indicate the periods when social security will be in surplus and when it will be in deficit. As my colleagues can see, there are very large yellow areas between the years 1990 and 2015 that represent both annual and accumulated surpluses. After the year 2015, there is a large area of red that diminishes over time to a greater or lesser degree, depending on assumptions, that represents deficits, both annual and accumulated, that the system will experience.

Let us look at one of the surplus years. Take the year 2010. Under present law in that year, the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance trust funds are going to receive in revenues an estimated $60 billion in 1982 dollars, today's dollars—not the dollars of the future some 30 years hence—they will receive $60 billion more than they will spend in outlays, adding this to a trust fund of more than $600 billion, again 1982 dollars, not future dollars.

If we enact H.R. 1900, as I hope we do, this surplus could run as high as $125 billion in that year, and the trust fund itself might total as much as $1 trillion that year.

It seems to me that if we have annual surpluses this large there will be enormous pressures for excess Government spending in other areas since this excess spending could occur without generating or creating a budget deficit.

Now let us gaze still a little further ahead into the future, and what we see is a very different problem for social security and, indeed, for the country. This time let us look at the year 2025. Now the OASDI trust funds are spending under current law about $100 billion more than receipts in revenues, again in 1982 dollars, and it is beginning to draw down on its reserves of more than $230 billion.

If H.R. 1900 is enacted, the deficit would be somewhat smaller, perhaps only $50 billion, and trust fund reserves would be quite a bit larger. But the general problem will be the same. These large deficits—equal to about 5 percent of Federal outlays—will put tremendous pressure on the Congress to either cut spending in other Federal programs or cut spending in social security, despite the fact that social security will have adequate trust fund reserves to meet its own needs through the 2050's and beyond.

These pressures to cut more or spend more because of the fluctuations in social security appear substantial when we look into the future. But we can see similar, though less intense, pressures operating on the Congress today. In fiscal year 1969, when President Johnson first included the operation of the social security trust funds in the Federal budget, it had the side effect, because social security was running surpluses in those years, of making the spending on the Vietnam war look smaller, and obscuring its impact on the budget deficit. By contrast, in recent years, social security deficits have intensified the overall budget deficits and increased the pressure to cut spending. On at least one occasion, these pressures have led the Congress to make cuts in social security that were, in my opinion, hasty and ill-advised.

The mismatch between social security and the unified budget is only too clear. The horizon of the budget process is 1 to 3 years. By necessity it must focus on program changes which can go into effect quickly and produce either immediate savings or immediate increases in revenues. On the other hand, the horizon of social security is an individual's working career and retirement. Its trustees project the actuarial balance of the system over a 75-year period. To consider social security only in terms of its financial condition in the next year or so is not only shortsighted but can be extremely dangerous for the long-run integrity of the system.

Some have suggested that my legislation would take social security off budget and hide it somewhere in the murky gloom of unknown and uncontrolled off-budget agencies. This is ridiculous. I do not think anyone would seriously believe there is any danger of losing a program the size of social security in the shadows. We will always know where it is and what it is doing.

It is interesting to note that even before social security was thrown in with the rest of the budget, the role of social security spending as a part of overall Federal spending was abundantly clear to the Congress. Prior to the submission of the first unified budget, there were two separate Federal budgets: a trust fund budget and an administrative budget. Though these budgets were presented separately, they were combined in a single table for use in assessing the overall impact of all Federal spending programs on the economy. The amendment I will offer on Monday would not hinder in any way the ability of the Congress to evaluate the economic effects of social security spending. What it would do is separate the issue of social security solvency from other budget issues which are substantively unrelated.

Mr. President, the time has come to clarify for the American public that social security is an independent and separate program which must survive on its own basis and not be continually adjusted to respond to budget pressures. I ask my colleagues to support this method of dealing responsibly with the issue when we address it on Monday.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ANDREWS). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have just conferred with the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator DOLE, who is on the floor. He indicates to me that there are one or two, maybe three, other amendments that can be disposed of this afternoon. I hope so, because we need to do as much as we can. It does not appear that those amendments will require rollcall votes.

In view of that, and in view of the number of absentees on both sides of the aisle which have developed by this hour, I wish to announce that there will be no more rollcall votes today. We will continue on this bill, however, and do as much of it as we can without further record votes today.

I urge Senators who have amendments and are willing to take them up today to come to the floor and make that known to the two managers.

Mr. President, so much has been done today that I feel we all should offer congratulations to the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member, who have done their usual excellent job of moving this bill along. I believe that we are now in striking distance of finishing on Monday.

I announce, Mr. President, that Senators should be prepared to stay late on Monday and finish this bill, because it is essential, in my view, that we get this bill to conference as soon as possible.

The adjournment resolution that will come to us from the House of Representatives will provide for the adjournment of the Senate over for the Easter recess on Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday.

I need not belabor that point, except to say that the sooner we get the social security bill out of the way and get to conference and get the jobs bill out of the way, the sooner we will be able to adjourn and perhaps improve the schedule for the Easter recess by a day or so.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The Senate resumed consideration of H.R. 1900.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. SARBANES. Is it the majority leader's intention to try to finish the bill on Monday?

Mr. BAKER. Yes, it is.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, in view of and following what the majority and minority leaders have discussed, I would indicate that we are not encouraging any more amendments. We have still some to deal with. I know that the amendment by Senator BRADLEY, if he pursues that amendment, will be a record vote because there is strong opposition, including opposition from the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Finance Committee to that amendment.

Senator HAWKINS, the distinguished Senator from Florida, has an amendment which would cost about $2 billion. We do not have $2 billion. That will be strongly opposed.

And as far as I know at this point, then the budget issue will probably require a rollcall vote. I am talking about Monday.

Others, if they pursue the amendments, could require rollcall votes.

Sometime perhaps on Monday the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Senator LONG), will have an amendment which will be amended and that will require some rollcall votes.

So there will probably be a number of rollcall votes. I doubt any would be before 2:30 p.m.

I know we are waiting. Senator BENTSEN has an amendment.

Would he be willing to add Senator THURMOND as a cosponsor to his amendment?

Mr. BENTSEN. I am delighted to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will continue to be laid aside.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 101

(Purpose: To treat nonqualified deferred compensation the same as other elective deferred compensation for social security purposes)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an unprinted amendment which I send to the desk and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN), for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. ZORINSKY, Mr. DURENBERGER, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. SYMMS, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. SASSER, and Mr. BRADLEY proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 101.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SECTION 1. Strike lines 3-19 on page 104 and strike lines 20-25 on page 106, and lines 1-11 on page 107 and in each place insert the following new paragraph:

"(2) treatment of certain nonqualified deferred compensation plans"

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Any amount deferred under a deferred compensation plan shall be taken into account for purposes of this chapter as of the later of

"(i) when the services are performed, or

"(ii) when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture of the rights to such amount.

"(B) TAXED ONLY ONCE.—Any amount taken into account as wages by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not thereafter be treated as wages for purposes of this chapter.

"(C) DEFERRED COMPENSATION PLAN.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in clause (ii), the term 'deferred compensation plan' means any plan or other arrangement for deferral of compensation other than a plan described in subsection (a)(5).

"(ii) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN GOVERNMENTAL PLANS.—In the case of a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)), the term 'deferred compensation plan' shall include only a plan described in sections 457(a), 457(e)(1), 457(e)(2)(B), 457(e)(2)(D), and 457(e)(2)(E).

SEC. 2. Strike lines 4-18 of page 110 of amendment 516 and insert the following:

"Any amount deferred under a deferred compensation plan (within the meaning of section 3121(v)(2)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) shall be taken into account for purposes of this title as of the later of when the services are performed, or when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture of the rights to such amount. Any amount taken into account as wages by reason of the preceding sentence shall not thereafter be treated as wages for purposes of this title."

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE.—Sections 3321(v)(2) and 3306(r)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as added by this section, shall apply to services performed after December 31, 1983.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an amendment to correct what I believe to be an unintended result reached by the Finance Committee.

Many employers, particularly small employers, use nonqualified deferred compensation arrangements as a method of providing retirement income for their employees. Under current law, amounts deferred under these nonqualified deferred compensation plans are not subject to FICA (social security) or FUTA taxes when received as retirement payments. The blue ribbon Greenspan Commission did not recommend a change in this treatment. Likewise, the House of Representatives did not subject these deferred amounts to FICA or FUTA taxes.

Unfortunately, the Finance Committee has chosen to subject these nonqualified, deferred amounts to FICA and FUTA taxes when actually paid as retirement payments. This has the result of subjecting recipients to a social security tax burden when they are already retired and receiving social security. It has the additional onerous effect of eliminating the person's social security benefits because of the wage limitations. By indirection, it effectively increases the wage base for these persons way beyond the wage base currently in the bill, which, as we know, has already been dramatically increased. Finally, the Finance committee amendment is retroactive and, consequently, would drastically increase taxes by changing the rules after people already elected to defer some of their compensation.

My amendment corrects these results by simply subjecting these amounts to FICA and FUTA taxation when the amounts are deferred, not when they are eventually paid or made available. This simple, easily understood solution is exactly the same as the Greenspan committee recommendation and the House and Senate Finance Committee action in reference to section 401(k) plans and all similar plans under the bill. My amendment will help preserve the social security base from erosion by, in effect, ignoring nonqualified deferred compensation agreements for social security purposes without, however, imposing a drastic penalty on this form of compensation.

In most cases, under nonqualified deferred compensation agreements it is a relatively simple matter to determine when amounts are deferred and the amount that is being deferred. Likewise, as in many other areas of our tax law, simple rules can be established to determine the present value of amounts deferred in other cases.

My amendment preserves social security benefits for retired persons by simply making amounts deferred under nonqualified compensation plans subject to FICA and FUTA when deferred, not when eventually paid or made available.

There is negligible revenue loss, if any, and the amendment should be adopted.

Mr. President, what we are dealing here with is an amendment that deals with deferred compensation and under the present law, this is one where you would not have a tax incurred. What I am asking for and what has been checked with the chairman of the committee and with Senator LONG, the ranking minority member, is a piece of legislation that is revenue neutral and was not in the blue ribbon commission report of recommendations nor was it in the House bill and frankly would allow the deferred compensation to be recorded as of the date that it is earned rather than deferred to some future date at the time when it was received.

I believe that is the proper way to approach the problem and if we do not have that, then I think we have an unintended result in what was reported out of the committee and I believe that it would result in a number of deferred compensation plans being dropped.

I believe that is a good way to try to encourage retirement plans, and I urge very strongly that this amendment be accepted, and I state that it has been submitted to staff and to the chairman of the committee.

I yield to the Senator from Kansas for any comments that he may make.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment has been discussed with both the Senator from Texas and the Senator from South Carolina, and earlier today I had a colloquy, which is in the RECORD, with the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Senator THURMOND, on this same subject.

This amendment is further clarification, and, as the Senator from Texas indicates, it is a conforming amendment in many respects.

Essentially, the Bentsen-Thurmond amendment will conform, as closely as possible, nonqualified deferred compensation arrangement to the FICA tax treatment, section 401(k) plans as agreed to by the Finance Committee. It is fair to treat all deferred compensation equally for FICA purposes.

There may be additional areas such as ad hoc cost-of-living adjustments which may have to be worked out in conference, but this amendment goes a long way toward equalizing the FICA tax treatment of qualified and nonqualified deferred compensation arrangements and should be adopted.

I am willing to accept the amendment as I understand the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is willing to accept the amendment.

I am happy to yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to thank the able manager of the bill.

We feel this is a sound amendment, and I hope the Senate will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

The amendment (UP No. 101) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, are there other amendments that might be disposed of without record votes?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I inquire of the distinguished chairman of the committee if there are other amendments that appear available to us? If not, I intend to ask the Senate to have a period for the transaction of routine morning business.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know of no other noncontroversial amendments. There are some that may become noncontroversial, but at this point we are still in the negotiation and discussion stage.

So I think that is about all we can do today.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, it has been a good day, and the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member should be commended for their good work this day.

TREATMENT OF DEFERRED EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION UNDER THE SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS TEST

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to have a brief colloquy with the distinguished floor manager of the social security bill concerning the bill's treatment of deferred employee compensation under the social security "earnings test."

I have been advised that, as reported from the Finance Committee, the social security bill apparently would have had the unintentional effect of causing thousands of retired recipients of deferred compensation to lose all or part of their social security benefits.

This would occur as a result of the interaction between the revised definition of "wages"—which would include certain types of deferred compensation—and the "earnings test", which causes social security benefits to be reduced if the retiree has earnings in excess of the allowed amount. Since another provision of the bill completely eliminates the retirement earnings test by 1994, an objective which I strongly support, I am sure that it is not the intent of the committee to bring under the earnings limitation a large group of individuals—retired recipients of deferred compensation—who heretofore have not been subject to it in respect to that deferred compensation.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator's observations are well founded. This was simply a drafting error which we will take care of through a committee technical amendment. The amendment reflects the intent of the committee that the receipt of income by a retired employee under a deferred compensation plan will not be counted as earned income for the purpose of the earnings test.

Mr. THURMOND. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee for recognizing and taking care of this problem.

DRG'S

Mr. BURDICK. I say to the chairman, I hope we can clarify a concern I have about the diagnosis-related groups, or DRG's. I am concerned that the proposed system will not take into consideration the costs at those institutions which have research costs associated with the care of their patients.

As you may know, the Senate Appropriations Committee, on which I serve, has a long history of supporting community-based cancer centers. In fact, the Labor-HHS Appropriations Subcommittee has included report language in 2 of the last 3 years directing the National Cancer Institute to continue this effort. In part because of this interest, the Institute is establishing closer links between local community physicians and hospitals and the larger cancer centers. Two examples of this outreach are the regional cancer research groups and the community clinical oncology program. These kinds of programs are allowing patients at the local level to participate in and benefit from NCI research. In the upper midwest, we have a fine program developing in which community-based physicians and hospitals are involving their patients in cooperative research programs which benefit not only the patients, but the larger body of medical knowledge. This research does not involve excessive additional costs, but it sometimes requires a greater intensity of care, more careful monitoring, additional testing or slightly longer hospital stays.

I feel strongly that this kind of cooperative, community-based research should continue so that citizens from all parts of the country can share the benefits of NCI research. I would hate to see the prospective reimbursement system limit this or reduce the opportunity for participation for medicare patients. I would hope that the Secretary will have the flexibility to recognize the additional research-related costs that may be involved in these cases, and that she or he will have the authority to make appropriate adjustments for them.

Mr. DOLE. I fully understand your concerns about this and share your belief in the importance of community-based research. We have no intention of discouraging legitimate research from taking place. Under the terms of our bill, the Secretary will have the authority to take the intensity of these cases into consideration in making adjustments to the standard DRG's.

Mr. BURDICK. I thank the Senator for clarifying this matter. ●

● Mr. DECONCINI. Mr. President, I see that judicial and administrative review are not available for the initial rates for each diagnosis related group (DRG) and the DRG classification system itself.

I wish to clarify that, subject to the present jurisdictional requirements for review by the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB), judicial and administrative review are available for matters relating to updating the rates, including the composition of the market basket, and the Secretary's decisions on the advisory panel's recommendations.

Mr. DURENBERGER. That is correct. The exclusions from judicial and administrative review are those items necessary to maintain budget neutrality during fiscal year 1984 and fiscal year 1985. In addition, the establishment of specific DRG's and their relative weights are not reviewable. Matters affecting aggregate expenditures and the DRG rates in subsequent years are reviewable.

Mr. DECONCINI. Are subsequent additions to or subtractions from the initial list of DRG's reviewable?

Mr. DURENBERGER. I do not believe so.

Mr. DECONCINI. Then the Secretary could cut the number of DRG's in half, or double the number, or do anything else he wanted at his total discretion. He could also refuse to change the relative weights of the DRG's, even though it was absolutely proven that a given DRG was under or over weighted. This is particularly significant because, as I understand it, a relatively small number of DRG's account for the majority of all hospital discharges. The Secretary could make all these changes at his total discretion regardless of their impact on hospitals and patients. This is a very broad grant of discretionary authority, and one that I believe my prove unwise.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the concerns of my colleague from Arizona have some merit. We have attempted to address these concerns in part by establishing an independent commission of experts whose responsibility it will be to work with the Secretary in determining the changes that need to be made in and among the various DRG's. In addition, I expect to hold hearings during the second session and into the future, and to consider any reasonable changes to the legislation as become necessary as we learn more about the new system. I invite my colleague from Arizona to share with me his specific recommendations.

Mr. DECONCINI. I thank my friend from Minnesota for his generous assistance and continued able leadership in the health area. I look forward to working with him next session.●

● Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, one of the most important pieces of legislation to be enacted into law this century is the Social Security Act of 1935. It is an act of Congress that affects virtually every American, providing protection against destitution, assistance during ill health, and dignity in retirement. The program has been enormously successful and popular. During the almost 50 years of its existence, the social security program has expanded both coverage and benefits. Funding for the program has followed Franklin Roosevelt's decision to use the payroll tax rather than general revenues. Today, even those who publicly oppose it rely on it to undergird their own security, whether they realize it or not.

As the program matured, it was relatively painless to expand benefits. Money was flowing into the trust fund, and outgo was minimal. This halcyon period reflected the fact that the number of covered workers retiring was small in relation to the active work force, and the economy was quite robust.

Social security has reached its mature phase. The program covers virtually all workers and the tax applies to most wages. The number of retirees has expanded as the original participants have retired. This maturing has coincided with a period of sluggish economic growth and high inflation. The two developments have been devastating to the financial stability of the social security trust fund. As the number of retirees to workers has increased, the ability of workers to finance this pay-as-you-go program has diminished because of a weak economy.

The social security system is faced with a funding crisis. This crisis has two parts, the short term and the long-term phases. Earlier this year, the National Commission on Social Security Reform presented a series of recommendations to the Congress which would keep the program solvent for both the short and long term.

Merely reaching an agreement on recommendations was a major achievement for the Commission. The members represented many different perspectives on social security. However, the severity of the problem forced a consensus. As I said last month, there are provisions in the package with which I agree and other provisions with which I disagree. But, this is a time for realism, and I realize that we all must swallow hard and do what is right. I joined as a cosponsor of S. 1, the social security reform bill. I also cosponsored S. 76, a bill to resolve the remaining long-term funding problem by raising the retirement age.

Last Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee approved the reform package by a vote of 18 to 1. I strongly support the package. The committee bill improves on the Commission recommendations by including a sensible solution to that portion of the long-term funding gap not addressed by the Commission. The Finance Committee rejected higher taxes over the long term. Instead, the retirement age will be increased to age 66 by the year 2012. And, initial benefits will be reduced by 5 percent beginning in the year 2000. Though the benefit calculation will be reduced, benefit levels will continue to grow as the wage level increases. This will avoid any hardship caused by the 5-percent reduction.

The Finance Committee also approved other sensible changes. The retirement earnings test would be eliminated. Thus, the penalty on work would be removed for those who have reached the retirement age. We also improved the tax credit to offset the burden of increased payroll taxes for the self-employed. Last, the committee agreed to changes in the treatment of spouses and former spouses to improve the treatment of women. For instance, two dropout years would be allowed for child bearing without losing entitlement to benefits.

This is a good package. The advancement of this program demonstrates that our political process does work, that the Congress can successfully deal with major problems. I urge my colleagues to support the Social Security Amendments of 1983.●

time so we may dispose of these amendments in a timely fashion.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, when the Senate convened today, I indicated that there were a number of absentees and it would appear to be very difficult to anticipate final passage of this bill today, with the likelihood that we would have to go over until tomorrow. For a change, I have good news, Mr. President. I have to report that our absentee list has shrunk to less than half the size reported to me earlier today.

While we have an agreement and understanding that there will be no votes prior to 2:30 p.m. this afternoon, I urge the managers of this bill to get on with the matter at hand and see if we cannot finish this bill today at a reasonable hour or, if we cannot finish it, at least make substantial progress toward that goal. I am prepared to stay as long as the managers want to stay, but so that Members may make their plans—and I know a good number may have to rearrange or remake their plans based on the schedule today—I also ask that we get an appraisal soon of how much we can do, whether we can finish, and to what time the managers would like to go.

With that, Mr. President, let me rescind the statement I made earlier. We may be here later than I had thought. We may be able to finish the bill. That is still a fond hope, perhaps, but I think it has improved considerably by the reduction in the number of absentees that had been reported.

AMENDMENT NO. 520

The amendment is as follows:

On page 100, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

DISABILITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

Sec. : (a) Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

DISABILITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

Sec. 234. (a) Every individual who—
 “(1) meets the criteria for entitlement to old-age insurance benefits which are specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 202(a) (but only if he first meets the criterion specified in paragraph (2) of such section in or after the calendar year 2000).

“(2) is under an occupational disability (as defined in subsection (c) of this section); and

“(3) has filed application for disability retirement benefits.

shall be entitled to a disability retirement benefit for each month beginning with the first month for which he would be so entitled under clause (A) or (B) of section 202(a) if such benefit were an old-age insurance benefit, and ending with the month preced-

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business will be stated.

The acting assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I shall take a minute to notify Senators, who are in their offices, or their staffs, that we wish to immediately start work on the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

There are a number of amendments that I understand will be brought up. Some may require rollcall votes.

The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY). We are certainly willing to proceed with that amendment.

The distinguished Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) has a couple of amendments. We are willing to proceed with those amendments. The Senator from Florida (Mrs. HAWKINS) has an amendment. We are willing to proceed with that amendment.

But I hope that we can have the cooperation of Senators so that we can move this bill along and hopefully finish it this evening because we have at least six or seven amendments which may require rollcall votes.

So, Mr. President, I hope that those who have amendments will come to the Chamber at the earliest possible ing whichever of the following months is the earlier: the month in which he dies, or the month in which he attains retirement age (as defined in section 216(1)).

"(b) Except as provided in section 202(q)(12), an individual's disability retirement benefit for any month shall be equal to his primary insurance amount (as defined in section 215(a)) for such month.

"(c) For purposes of this title, the term 'occupational disability' (with respect to any individual) means the inability of such individual, by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment (as defined in section 223(d)(3)), to engage in substantial gainful activity of the type primarily performed by such individual during the 10-year period immediately preceding the onset of such inability (or, if such individual has not engaged in any one type of such activity for 2 years or more during such 10-year period, the inability to engage in substantial gainful activity requiring skills or abilities comparable to those of any gainful activity in which he has previously engaged with some regularity and over a substantial period of time).

"(d) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining whether or not an individual is under an occupational disability; and an individual shall not be considered to be under an occupational disability unless he furnishes such medical and other evidence of the existence thereof as the Secretary may require.

"(e) Except as otherwise specified in this section or in other sections of this Act, the provisions of this title shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits in the same way they apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits."

"(b)(1) Section 201(h) of such Act is amended by inserting ", including payments of disability retirement benefits," after "226".

"(2) Section 202(a)(3) of such Act (as amended by section 201(c)(1)(A) of this Act) is further amended by inserting "or disability retirement benefits" after "disability insurance benefits".

"(3) Section 202(q) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits payable under section 234 in the same way it applies with respect to old-age insurance benefits; except that paragraph (9) shall not apply and, with respect to an individual applying for or receiving disability retirement benefits, the reduction period and adjusted reduction period for any such benefit shall be determined under paragraph (7) as though retirement age (as otherwise defined in section 216(1)) were age 65."

(4) Section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "or 234" after "benefits under section 202" in subsection (a)(2)(A); and

(B) by adding after "or" at the end of subsection (b)(2)(A) the following new clause:

(iv) disability retirement benefits under section 234, or"

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to benefits for months after December 1999.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the pending amendment is the Bradley amendment, is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from New Jersey, as I recall, did briefly discuss the amendment last Thursday. At that time, I suggested to the distinguished Senator that he give us an opportunity to look at it, because it is an area that the Senator from Kansas had not had a chance to focus on. We have since had that opportunity.

The amendment does not take effect until the year 2000, so I hope we shall not have to rush in to do something today that is not going to take place until the year 2000. We have not had 5 minutes of hearings on this in the Finance Committee. It does liberalize the eligibility for disability benefits for older workers in the year 2000 when the increase in the retirement age becomes effective. It would cost something like $600 million a year in 1983 dollars, which is .04 percent of the taxable payroll in the long range. The proposal would work, as I understand it, so that people age 62 or older who are not disabled enough to qualify for benefits under the regular DI program would be eligible to receive payments out of the retirement fund if they were "occupationally disabled." This would include people who could no longer perform the major occupation they held during the preceding 10 years. Such people would then receive benefits financed out of the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund at a rate equal to the amount payable to early retirees under present law. In other words, they would not receive full benefits—as they would if they met the regular DI eligibility requirements—nor would they suffer the full penalty for early retirement that would be in effect under S. 1 after the turn of the century.

An "occupationally disabled" person aged 62 after the year 2000 would be eligible for 80 percent of his full benefits, rather than 75 percent were he or she to simply take early retirement.

Mr. President, this amendment may have great merit. I assume it does or it would not be offered by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, but raising the retirement age will clearly put new strains on the DI program. The majority of the National Commission acknowledged this in the statement recommending that the retirement age be increased.

As stated in the Commission report:

Because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and be able to work longer, we assume that the disability program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

It is not that I am not sympathetic to the idea of the Senator from New Jersey. It just seems to me it is an area we ought to look at carefully before we suggest adopting it on the House program. It is not in the House bill. I suggest we schedule hearings on this proposal. Again, I see no great urgency, since we have some time before we reach the year 2000. Some have more time than others.

I support the approach in the House bill of studying our options carefully. We have the time. As I have said, the retirement age does not change for another 17 years, then only a month a year.

The House bill (H.R. 1900) would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report to Congress by January 1, 1986, with a comprehensive study of the implications of raising the retirement age for people in physically demanding jobs and those with health problems. Such a report would contain any recommendations the Secretary finds necessary or desirable.

On that basis, Mr. President, I hope we might reject this amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this amendment is a very important message to send to that small group of working Americans who look at the action of the Senate with regard to retirement age and conclude that, while indeed, life expectancy has increased, their ability to work longer has not increased commensurate with that raising of the retirement age. There are still people in very difficult manual labor jobs in the country who, by the time they reach age 62, are ready for retirement, and certainly by the time they reach age 65 are ready for retirement. All my amendment does is say to this group of Americans that they shall not be penalized because of the action that this Congress will no doubt take in raising the retirement age.

As it is now, a worker can opt to retire at age 62 and receive 80 percent of his benefits. Under the Finance Committee bill, once the retirement age is reversed, that benefit would drop to 75 percent of his full retirement benefit if he chose to retire at age 62. Likewise, at age 63, under current law, if a person chooses to retire because his profession is exceedingly difficult, he or she could receive 87 percent of the full retirement benefit. Under the bill pending before the Senate, that benefit would be reduced to 80 percent. Under current law, if a person chooses to retire for health reasons at age 64, he presently will receive 93 percent of his full retirement benefits. Under the bill we are now considering, that would be reduced to 87 percent of the full retirement benefit. At age 65, under current law, a person who chooses to retire may receive a full 100 percent of his retirement benefit. But under the bill that we are now considering, that person who is planning to retire at age 65 will have that benefit cut to 93 percent of his full retirement and it will not be until age 66 that he will be able to receive 100 percent of what has been promised to him through the social security system.

Mr. President, all this amendment says is that people with poor health who are working in difficult professions—in professions in which manual labor and occupational strain and occupational safety are very real threats to their physical well-being—if they choose to retire at age 62, they should have the same rights and benefit levels as they do under current law prior to the proposed changes in the social security retirement age. That is all this amendment says. It will be characterized by some as an enormous new disability program. It is not. It simply holds harmless those people who are out there today who would qualify for early retirement and get 80 percent of the social security benefit.

I say let us not cut him back arbitrarily to 75 percent of their full benefits. Why 75? Why not 85, why not 70, why not 80? What is the rationale for 75 percent?

Mr. President, this amendment is, I think, a prudent amendment because it has a much smaller eligibility pool than the disability program. There are about 100 million workers in the United States today, and all are potentially eligible for disability benefits, but the eligibility pool for people helped by this amendment is not all 100 million workers. It is, rather, about 6 million workers—those people who are between the ages of 62 and 66. So this is not a new large disability program that 100 million people will be eligible for. This is a very narrow program that attempts to hold harmless those people who themselves have had very dangerous work experiences and deserve the same retirement benefit as they would receive under current law.

Another point, Mr. President, is that the cost per award for this new program is significantly smaller than the regular disability program. The average disability worker with a family who qualifies for disability insurance now receives about $841 per month. For our program, the average increase over the regular OASI benefit that a worker with a spouse would receive is about $35 to $50 a month. That is all. It is not a new disability program costing an additional $800 a month per worker. It says to those 6 million workers between the ages of 62 and 66 that if they, indeed, are in a line of work that is adverse to their health, they should have the right to get the same benefits as they would under current law, which means an additional $35 to $50 a month.

Mr. President, to say to someone who has had a very dangerous occupation, someone who has worked in a steel mill for 30 years, or someone who has worked in an asbestos factory or in a coal mine, or whatever, "Yes, you can retire at age 62 but if you retire, you can only get 75 percent of your benefit instead of 80 percent." I think, is the wrong message to send to a large number of American workers.

Mr. President, the growth in the disability program, indeed, has exceeded expectations and the question has to be asked: Will the same thing happen to this program? Mr. President, I say no for two reasons. First, we have a smaller eligibility pool—not 100 million workers eligible but only 6 million workers eligible. And, second, the cost per award is much smaller—not $841 per month but $35 to $50 per month.

Mr. President, we are legitimately addressing a very critical issue—the long- and short-term stability of the social security system. We should not neglect what a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission itself said about the need for this kind of amendment. Mr. President, a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, including Senators Dole and Heinz, recommended that the retirement age be raised, that is true. In addition, these same members recommended a liberalization of the disability program for those aged 62 or above, and I quote from the Commission report:

Disability benefits are now available under somewhat less stringent definitions for those age 60 to 64. However, because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and be able to work longer, we assume that the disability benefits program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

Mr. President, that is not the Senator from New Jersey speaking. That is not the Senator from Louisiana speaking. That is not the Senator from Iowa speaking. That is a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, composed of that wide spectrum of American political life, that came together and gave us a solution in very difficult political times to the threat that exists out there to our social security system. The recommendation I have just read comes from the Commission, not from any one Senator, and it says very clearly, "Let us do something about those who will have their benefits reduced if they, indeed, fall under, as they will if we do nothing, this change in the retirement age of the social security system."

So, Mr. President, it finally comes down to a question of timing: Do we pass an amendment such as this that clearly expresses the intent of Congress to hold harmless these older workers in ill health who are in dangerous professions? Do we provide for these people the right for an early retirement benefit or do we simply commission a study and say to these people, "Your day will come in the future. Maybe."

Mr. President, I think that my conclusion is quite clear. It is important for us to include this amendment in this bill to say to that group of Americans that they still count, and that they will be protected. Mr. President, I prefer to act now and tell these people out there who are working that we are going to be able to hold them harmless against charges in the retirement age. The Secretary still has 17 years to devise regulations that will answer the worry of every Senator about the possibility that this program might be abused, which, as I have said, because of a smaller eligibility pool and a smaller increase in benefit, is highly unlikely.

Mr. President, I do not think that that is too much to ask, and that is, indeed, why I have offered this amendment. It comes again at the time when we are proposing to raise the retirement age from 65 to 66—the House has raised it to 67—and, indeed, to reduce early retirement benefits. The amendment is quite simple, and I hope that the Senate will see its merit and adopt it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following individuals be added as cosponsors: Senators Hollings, Sasser, Hart, Glenn, and Biden.

Mr. Sasser. Mr. President, I rise today to offer my support for the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Bradley). The issue of raising the retirement age is one which certainly cannot be taken lightly. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey sufficiently addresses serious inequities which would exist if the retirement age were simply raised without regard for those who find that they no longer can work past a certain age.

I have had grave reservations over raising the retirement age above 65 because of its adverse effects upon the early retirement benefit formula. For many workers, particularly those in stressful or physically demanding occupations, it is important to keep the option to retire early open. Very simply put, there are many individuals who cannot work past the age of 62. These individuals must be afforded protection from an unwarranted reduction in early retirement benefits. The Bradley amendment provides this protection.

Supporters of raising the retirement age point to demographics: longer life expectancy rates and labor supply shortages in the coming century. These statistical calculations, however accurate, fail to take into account workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be unable to work or will be unable to find employment when they are older. The Bradley amendment would establish a new program that will allow a limited group of workers aged 62 up to the "normal retirement" age to qualify for "disability retirement benefits." Workers qualify for these benefits if they can demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held during the 10-year period before the onset of their disability. The costs of the program are minimal, estimated to be 0.04 percent of payroll, and benefits would be paid out of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund.

Without this amendment, I believe it would be very hard for many of us here to support raising the retirement age to conform to the Senate Finance Committee recommendations. Thus, I urge my colleagues to join me in lending support for this needed amendment.

THE DISABILITY RETIREMENT SAFETY NET

● Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am pleased to cosponsor the disability retirement amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY), which would all a measure of fairness to the provision of the social security bill which raises the retirement age for full benefits.

If we increase social security's retirement age, we need to have a safety net for older persons, who for health reasons, cannot continue working. This amendment provides that a limited number of workers between the ages of 62 and 66 would receive a "disability retirement" benefit if they are unable to continue their jobs because of poor health. These benefits would be paid according to the current law retirement benefit formula.

The disability retirement amendment's purpose is to provide financial protection for those older workers who cannot keep their jobs because of poor health, yet cannot meet the stringent standards of the regular disability insurance program. It would allow these workers to retire with dignity and security. Older workers would be eligible for benefits if they can show they can no longer perform the major type of work they did before the onset of health problems. This is of particular importance for manual laborers.

The savings provided for in the Finance Committee bill slightly exceed those estimated as necessary to insure the long-term solvency of the social security system by 0.08 percent of payroll. Since the amendment is targeted to help a specific group of workers—an estimated 10 percent of future retirees—it would not be a solvency buster. Rough calculations show its long-term cost to be relatively low—0.04 percent of payroll—which can be accommodated by the bill's savings.

Overall life expectancy has increased since the 1930's. This has not been at issue in the debate over increasing social security's retirement age. One of the major questions has been whether there will be parallel improvements in health and the ability to work, and whether certain groups of people will be unable to participate in a trend toward longer working life.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform had two witnesses who testified on the issue of increasing social security's retirement age. They were Dr. Jacob Feldman from the National Center for Health Statistics and Dr. Robert Butler, formerly Director of the National Institute on Aging. Their testimony supported the conclusion that an increase in retirement age would have a disproportionate impact on some future retirees.

Dr. Feldman testified that the downward trend in mortality for men aged 50 to 69 had been matched by increases in the incidence of disability. For men aged 60 to 64, Dr. Feldman said that during the past decade the rate of longevity has improved 10 percent, but during this same time, the disability incidence rate has increased 26 percent.

Dr. Butler told the Commission that minority citizens in physically demanding jobs largely retired before age 65. Unfortunately, at this time, these citizens still endure poorer health and mortality rates nearly double of other workers. They suffer the addition burden of a higher unemployment rate.

Dr. Butler's testimony is consistent with data from the Department of Labor's national longitudinal survey, which has shown health and one's employment history tend to interact to cause retirement from the labor force before age 65. A study published just a few months ago in the Social Security Bulletin, "Mortality and Early Retirement," offered additional analysis that workers seeking retirement at age 62 were more likely to suffer health problems and higher death rates than other workers.

Available evidence demonstrates that workers who retire early for the reason of poor health tend to be the recipients of lower social security benefits. Many of them spend a lifetime in physically demanding jobs. These are the people who cannot afford significant reductions in their social security checks and are most in need of full, early retirement benefits.

I commend Senator BRADLEY for his work on this amendment and for raising the issue for the Senate's consideration. I urge all my colleagues to vote for the pending amendment.●

Mr. LONG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I regret that I cannot support the amendment.

The Senator from Louisiana was one of those who sponsored the amendment many years ago to provide disability benefits both under public welfare and under social security.

Mr. President, our experience in that program has been disappointing in that we had so many more people who have claimed and obtained the disability benefits than we had in mind. I recall when Walter George, a Senator from Georgia at the time and former chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, made the closing speech for the amendment on social security. He laid out the number of people that we expected to be affected. His estimate was based on what he could obtain from the Department and from other sources.

Looking at our disability program today, we have about three times the number of people in that program, with the program costing about three times as much in terms of percent of payroll, as the Senator from Georgia estimated at that time.

As a cosponsor of the amendment, I know that I was in good faith in supporting it and voting for it, and so were the other cosponsors. I am sure the same applied to every Senator who voted for that disability proposal.

What happened down through the years was just human nature, I suppose, among those administering such a program, which would cause them to be more tolerant toward those persons who were handicapped, who were partially disabled but not totally and permanently disabled.

We have a program today costing about $18 billion in social security alone because of disability, in terms of percent of payroll, about three times what we estimated that program would be costing us at this point.

I am not here to look with scorn on those judges and the administrative personnel who handled this program down through the years. I believe that with regard to many of these people who obviously had a severe disability, looking at it personally, they would be inclined to be sympathetic toward the applicant. In many cases, the applicant would know that he could retire on disability if he could persuade others that he was disabled. He would start out by persuading himself he was disabled, and then persuade others that he was disabled, including the persons who had the responsibility to handle the administrative appeals.

I can just picture a judge, having reversed the people in the Department who found that this applicant was not disabled, saying to himself: "Well, I think I will sleep well tonight. I know that person wasn't really totally and permanently disabled, but I felt sorry for that man and his family. They need the income, and that fellow probably couldn't find a job anywhere else. So, thanks to my decision, he will be taken care of, at the taxpayers' expense, from this day until the good Lord calls him home. While I know that is not what Congress had in mind, I don't feel bad about it. I feel good about it. I'll have a good night's rest by deciding that case in that person's favor."

I have no doubt that that is the way a lot of judges looked at it when they were restoring to the rolls those people who had been found not to be totally and permanently disabled and who were never intended to go under that program.

We are having great difficulty trying to get the genie back into the bottle, and so far we have not succeeded in doing that.

I think that if Congress at this point voted a benefit for occupational disability, which would obviously be intended to be a liberalized standard of disability, this would indicate that Congress is not really serious about staying to the strict definition of disability that is in the law.

Things have happened in recent years to give signals to those who are trying to administer programs for us out there, tough though it may be to reject people who are severely handicapped, but not totally disabled. The signals coming from Congress have not always been as clear as they are today. For us now to put into the law a program for occupational disability can only be construed by those who are out there in the field, trying to do what Congress intended—and that is to provide disability benefits only where somebody is so disabled that the person is incapable of holding any job, incapable of earning any substantial income from gainful employment of any sort—that Congress is retreating from the position it took.

Mr. President, if this provision is to be approved by the Congress, I have no doubt that if it becomes the law, long before the effective date of this provision, long before the year 2000, there will be other amendments triggering more benefits to persons who are occupationally disabled; and I have a lot of sympathy with that.

It was my father, as a young lawyer, and his brother, a more senior lawyer to him, in the State of Louisiana, who played a major part in winning the lawsuits to have a person construed in our State as being totally and permanently disabled when a person was occupationally disabled; this is, disqualified to do the job that person had done previously.

The State law had provided that there would be a certain benefit schedule if a person lost a hand, and there would be a larger benefit schedule if he lost two hands, and a still larger benefit schedule if he were totally disabled. In the case of my father and his brother, they were successful in persuading the court that if a person had been a switchman on a railroad and had a job that required two useful hands, he was totally disabled if he lost one hand. I find much sympathy for that type of proposal because it runs in my family tradition.

However, Mr. President, must we do this now, understanding that during the next 18 year this will be setting the stage for large increases in disability payments in other programs, totally unrelated to this?

It challenges the imagination to think of the many different situations in which one can urge that this precedent be used to advance disability coverage to others. If we put this into the law, how can anyone contend that, once having provided a special benefit for disability on an occupational basis at age 62, we should stop at age 62? Cannot Senators understand how a Senator in the future could appear with his amendment and say, "The Congress has already agreed that this person ought to receive retirements benefits for occupational disability at age 62. That is agreed in the law. Having agreed to that, why should he have to be 62? Why not 60? Why not 56? Why not 52? Why not 50? How can you be so cruel? This person is disabled from doing that job, and he is only 49 years old."

Mr. President, from what begins to be a small acorn, a giant oak grows; so that the taxpayers, in due course, are picking up the tab for all this.

That has been the history of many of these spending programs, particularly in the social welfare area. Someone starts out with something, makes an eloquent appeal, such as today, and in due course he sells Congress on it, without Congress thinking about the ramifications and what happens further down the road.

I know there is no particular joy to me—and there is no particular joy to the Senator from Kansas—to stand here and oppose more and more benefits, to advocate that we tighten up on programs rather than loosening up on them. But that sort of duty besets one when he assumes a position of responsibility.

It was a degree of pressure this Senator never experienced before, when he became the ranking member of the Finance Committee and at one time the chairman of the committee, to have to be the one to oppose all these proposals that were going to do many things for many people, at great expense—some of them at not such great expense—knowing that we do not have the money to pay for them.

But, Mr. President, this would do no good for anyone for the next 18 years. As the Senator from Kansas, the distinguished chairman of the committee has pointed out, if this is right we have plenty of time to do this during this next 18 years. If it is not something we can afford, we would be unwise to set a precedent that would lead to a great deal of additional cost in other areas that the mind of man cannot fully anticipate at this moment.

I hope that the amendment will not be agreed to at this point and that this proposed liberalization, along with others that will be suggested, will be reserved by the Senate for hearings on future social security and public welfare bills, because this is an area that we will continue to explore. This is an area that in time we may want to liberalize. But I submit that the time is not yet here.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. Indeed he found himself in very difficult positions when he was chairman of the Finance Committee in the Chamber arguing against expansions of the disability program. I understand his long record of responsible spending policy, and I understand it is not easy to do what he has done over the years.

But I would argue to the Senator from Louisiana that this is a different kettle of fish—that the pool of potential eligibles for this new program is not 100 million workers as it is under the disability program. It is only about 6 million workers who find themselves between the ages of 62 and 66.

Mr. President, I understand how the Senator can say that it is very difficult to know whether someone is really disabled when he is there before a judge with his human case. Indeed, judges possibly allow more people on the disability rolls under the law because of this human factor.

Same paragraph but under my amendments, that human factor is limited by one thing, and that is demographics. There are only a certain number of people between the ages of 62 and 66 and they are only a fraction of the number potentially eligible for disability.

Mr. President, the Senator's other fear is that if we take this step to hold harmless those people who are out there working in manual jobs and dangerous occupations, somehow or other we will lower the age from 62 to 60 and then 55. I think it is important to remember that it was in 1956 that early retirement for women was put into the law and 1961 that early retirement for men was put in the law. So, Mr. President, I argue that it would be unlikely that we would do anything irrationally on the retirement age since we have not done anything since 1961 for men and 1956 for women.

I think the best way to get at the modesty of this amendment is to take a human situation and look at what the law is today, what it would be under the bill presently pending, and then what it would be if this amendment is passed.

Mr. President, right now let us say that one is a steelworker. He reaches age 61 or age 60 after working 30 years in the steel mill. He has problems breathing. He has gone to work every morning before dawn for 30 years. He realizes that his health will not allow him to continue to work to age 65. He would like to spend some time with his family. So this person under current law decides he will opt for early retirement at age 62 and accept 80 percent of the benefit that he would receive if he worked until age 65.

That is the calculation that the worker makes today: "I am in bad enough shape that I will retire early and take 80 percent of what I would get if I continued to work until age 65."

Mr. President, all this amendment does is to say that this person will continue to receive 80 percent of his benefits if he retires at age 62. If this amendment is adopted, there is no greater incentive to retire at 62 than there is under current law. There is simply no greater incentive because the person would still only get 80 percent of his benefits. Right now the best argument against the charge that the cost is going to mushroom into some gigantic spending bill is that right now you do not find people stumbling over themselves to retire and take only 80 percent of their benefits. They continue to work.

Mr. President, under the bill before us, this person's benefits would be cut to 75 percent. Why cut it to 75 percent? Keep it where it is now at 80 percent. Again, there is no more incentive for that person to retire early with my amendment than there is under current law.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to address the cost issue. The Senator from Kansas said that according to the social security actuaries the cost will be $600 million a year, or one-hundredths of 1 percent of payroll. I personally find it very difficult to determine what costs are going to be. I can see the outward limit but I find it difficult to see what costs are precisely going to be. I do know one thing and that is that there is a surplus in this bill over what the long-term needs are, of $1.2 billion a year, or eight-one-hundredths of 1 percent of payroll, and all this amendment would do is to cut that surplus in half.

Mr. President, I think that the least we should do is send the right message to those sick people who have had very hard work lives and should be able to retire at age 62 with 80 percent of their benefits, as under current law, instead of 75 percent of their benefits, as under the bill before us.

Mr. President, if the Senator has concluded, I am prepared to ask for the yeas and nays unless the Senator is going to accept the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. No; I would like to but I cannot.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am not certain there is going to be any surplus. We had all these actuaries working up the long-term and the short-term estimates, and 0.04 percent is half the projected long-term surplus. But there are other amendments going to be offered, in fact one by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, that would wipe that out and more if he is successful because we are advised by the actuaries that, in fact the Federal employees are not included, we are going to lose 0.28 percent of payroll, which is a substantial amount. That is long term, and that would more than take care of any surplus which is probably only hypothetical in any event.

But I urge the Senator from New Jersey to wait, and again I do not quarrel with any of his statements, but I do not understand why with a program that would not even take effect until the year 2000, when we are trying to rush and pass this program to save the social security system we have to act on his program right now. I understand there has never been a hearing, not 1 minute, not 1 hour, not 1 day of hearings on this particular subject concerning what we call occupationally disabled in the Finance Committee.

It would seem to me before we launch into a new program that may have great merit, we may want to see whether there are other things that should be done in addition. We may decide the program does not have any merit or very little merit, but at least the matter ought to be heard and, therefore, it would seem to me, as I said earlier, that the House took the appropriate course in asking that the Secretary of Health and Human Services report to Congress by January 1, 1986, with a comprehensive study about the implications of raising the retirement age for people in physically demanding jobs and those with health problems.

The Senator from Louisiana has had much more experience in this area than the Senator from Kansas. We watched the disability program grow between 1970 and 1980, where the cost of the disability program rose fivefold, from $3.3 to $15.8 billion. Between 1970 and 1977 alone, the number of disabled workers on the rolls almost doubled, from 1.5 to 2.9 million.

As my colleagues are aware, a series of events in recent years, including the periodic review of continuing disability and generally tighter administration, have led to a recent decline in the number of people on the DI rolls.

Today the program spends about $19 billion on 4.4 million beneficiaries, including spouses and children.

Twenty-two percent of the DI worker beneficiaries are 62 or older; 10 to 12 percent of new awards are made to people 62 or older.

So it just seems to me that we ought to proceed with caution when we start out and when we talk about making modifications of the disability determination process. That was a statement that was made by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, and one this Senator shares.

Again I think it would be great to stand here all day and appropriate more benefits for this group and more benefits for that group. The only reason we are here today is because we provided too many benefits in years past, and that is why we are asking Federal workers to come into the system, why we are delaying the COLA's, and why we are taxing benefits and accelerating payroll taxes, because we have been too generous in the past.

I hope we will not make that same mistake. Give us a chance to look at this over the next few years. There is no big rush. Certainly there is no need to do it today on this legislation.

So, Mr. President, I hope this amendment will be defeated. I thought about moving to table the amendment. Does it make any difference to the Senator? Is it better if it us up or down? It is better for you.

Mr. BRADLEY. Yes, I would prefer an up-or-down vote.

Mr. DOLE. If you can assure me you would lose. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRADLEY. It depends on how many of my colleagues indeed want to address the problems of the person in ill health who has been out there in a very hard physical job for 30 years at the same time that we are addressing the issue of the raising of the retirement age.

I hope we will have an up-or-down vote.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas is willing to have an up-or-down vote. I know the Senator from New Jersey feels strongly about the amendment. It would have been my hope that he would have made this very persuasive argument and then withdrawn the amendment and then allow us to have a chance to have an appropriate hearing.

It would seem to me this should be a fairly clear test on whether we should liberalize a program 17 years in advance, which does not make much sense to this Senator, and I hope my colleagues will reject this amendment, give the Senate Finance Committee an opportunity to take a look at it before we make any such change.

The Commission recognized this problem, and, as the Senator from New Jersey properly pointed out, the Senator from Kansas was a member of that Commission. But I would like to have the amendment voted on so that we can get onto other amendments and maybe pass this bill, although I must say there are rumors lurking around that there is another withholding amendment to be attached to the social security bill. Apparently, the American Bankers Association, not having been successful in attaching the withholding amendment to the bill on the jobless and the homeless, want to attach withholding to the social security bill. I hope that is not the case. The American Bankers Association has a lot of money and not much else to do, and this looks like another good target for the strategists in the American Bankers Association.

I am prepared to vote on this one and, hopefully, get onto something else.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I would like to add Senator RIEGLE as a cosponsor of this amendment, and I ask unanimous consent to do so, and to just clarify for my colleagues who are listening that this amendment does not deal with interest withholding. This amendment deals with whether we are going to hold harmless those people who have worked hard for 30 years in the steel mills and are forced to retire because of poor health.

Mr. DOLE. I think we ought to withhold judgment on it until we have had hearings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senator RIEGLE will be added as a cosponsor.

Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. PRESSLER), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE), the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER), and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. WALLOP) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) and the Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD) are absent due to a death in the family.

Mr. BYRD I announce that the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON) and the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAWKINS). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 61, as follows:

So Mr. BRADLEY's amendment (No. 520) was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order, please.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 102

(Purpose: To require the Quadrennial Advisory Council to study and make recommendations on the increase in the retirement age and its effects on SSI, DI, and unemployment compensation programs)

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. HEINZ) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 102.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 100, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

(d)(1) The 1987 Quadrennial Advisory Council on Social Security appointed pursuant to section 706 of the Social Security Act shall study the effect of raising the normal retirement age, and shall recommend to the Congress changes in the supplemental security income program, disability insurance benefits, and unemployment compensation which may be necessary to meet the special needs of individuals between the ages of 62 and 66, effective in the year 2000 who are unable to work because of poor health or lack of employment opportunities.

(2) In order to adequately address the issues described in paragraph (1), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall appoint to such Council representatives of organized labor, and experts on the problems of older workers, disability and employment, and the labor market. Such experts shall be appointed subject to the approval of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance and the chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, the amendment I am offering would direct the 1987 Quadrennial Social Security Advisory Council to study the effect of raising the normal retirement age in social security, and to report to the Congress on changes which should be made in the supplemental security income program, the disability insurance program, and unemployment compensation to assure that the needs of those who will be unable to work longer are met.

Madam President, the proposal to raise the retirement age gradually to 66, beginning in the year 2000, is a partial recognition of the dramatic changes that have taken place and are expected to continue to occur in life expectancy. Over the last 40 years, life expectancy at age 65 has increased among men by 2 years, and among women by 5 years. By the year 2000, life expectancy is expected to increase by another 1½ years among men and another 2 years among women. It is also a proposal which is expected to coincide with changes in preferences for work and the demand for labor which should occur before the turn of the century. By the year 2000, we fully expect that our older citizens will not only be living longer, but that they will want to and be able to work longer as well. Demographers today project that toward the end of this century there will be proportionately fewer younger workers in the labor force, leading to labor supply shortages and an increasing demand for older workers. In addition, today's younger generation, which entered the labor force later, has developed a higher level of education and skills, and has worked in less physically demanding occupations than their elders, may prefer to work longer than the current generation of retirees.
