Washington, DC 20503

Dear Mr. Vought:

	53,973
Brief summary of significant agency activities that will continue during a lapse:
We will continue activities critical to our direct-service operations and those needed to ensure accurate and timely payment of benefits. Please refer to Enclosure 1 for additional information.
Brief summary of significant agency activities that will cease during a lapse:
We will cease activities not directly related to the accurate and timely payment of benefits or not critical to our direct-service operations. Please refer to Enclosure 1 for additional information.

We are excepting about 54,000 employees from furloughs under applicable exceptions to the Antideficiency Act. The functions of the excepted employees will remain largely the same as those described in our most recent plans. We are also excepting additional staff to support our information technology (IT) programmatic applications and infrastructure, including those activities supported by carryover funds for our IT modernization, and our fraud prevention activities related to the timely and accurate payment of benefits to the public. Since our current appropriation extends the period of availability for dedicated program integrity funds to 18 months, any program integrity funds carried over would be available during a lapse in appropriations beginning the following fiscal year. I have enclosed a chart setting forth our estimated total employee count by agency component and a brief description of the functions excepted employees from each component will perform in the event of a partial shutdown. This letter further explains our legal basis for conducting those functions during a partial shutdown.

During a lapse in appropriations, we must cease all activities for which our annual funding has expired, unless an exception to the Antideficiency Act applies. See 1980 and 1981 Opinions from Attorney General Civiletti (1980 and 1981 Opinions). Three exceptions apply to our work: the wind-down activities exception, the protection of life and property exception, and the Necessary Implication exception. See id. With respect to the wind-down exception, Attorney General Civiletti explained that, “[F]ederal officers [may] incur those minimal obligations [during a lapse in appropriations] necessary to closing their agencies.” 1980 Opinion. In 1981, Attorney General Civiletti advised that Federal agencies may obligate funds during a lapse under the protection of life and property exception by showing a “reasonable necessity” of the funded activity to ensure the safety of human life or protection of property. 1981 Opinion. Attorney General Civiletti also opined that the Necessary Implication exception allows a limited number of Government functions funded through annual appropriations to continue despite a lapse in their appropriations because the lawful continuation of other activities necessarily implies that these functions continue as well. Id.

In 1995, the Department of Justice, Office of Legal Counsel (OLC), issued a memorandum specifically noting that the activities necessary for disbursing Social Security benefits that “operate under indefinite appropriations” are examples of activities permitted by necessary implication. Further, the 1995 OLC memorandum extended the Necessary Implication exception to those functions performed by one agency necessary to support the funded functions of another agency.

Funding for the programs under Titles II, XVI, and XVIII of the Social Security Act will continue, even in the event of a lapse in appropriations. Indefinite trust funds supply Title II and Title XVIII benefits. General revenues fund Title XVI payments. However, the current appropriation funds those payments through the first quarter of the following fiscal year. Because there is funding to pay these benefits, the Necessary Implication exception allows us to perform those activities needed to ensure that benefits are accurately and timely paid, despite a lapse in appropriations. Our continuing functions related to making accurate payments during a lapse in appropriations is consistent with our previous contingency plan and is legally justified under the 1981 Opinion that permits us to “continue the administration of the program[s] to the extent of the remaining benefit funding.”

The enclosed charts detail the critical functions we would continue during a lapse in annual appropriations lasting between one and five days. Should a partial shutdown last longer than five days, we would reevaluate the number of excepted employees performing such functions and possibly increase the number of excepted employees as we did during the 2013 shutdown. Under the Necessary Implication exception, we will except only those employees critical to our direct-service operations and those employees whose work and oversight are critical to support those operations. Specifically, with respect to the Office of Hearings Operations, we will except decision writers and support staff for our administrative law judges. We will also retain a limited number of SSA employees and necessary law enforcement agents from our Office of the Inspector General under the protection of life and property exception. We anticipate allowing employees to conduct orderly wind-down activities for no more than four hours on the first day of a lapse in appropriations consistent with the guidance of your office.

If we have a lapse in appropriations, we will encourage the disability determination services (DDS) to continue limited services during a lapse under the Necessary Implication exception with the understanding that we will reimburse the DDSs for their work once we receive funding. However, because DDS employees are State employees, we cannot direct the States to except or furlough their employees during a lapse. Each State will have to determine whether it can maintain limited DDS operations and pay its employees during a lapse.

Once we received restored appropriations, we will resume normal operations by:

- Notifying employees that the shutdown furlough has ended and that they are to return to work on a specified date;
- Providing supervisors with flexibility regarding leave and attendance issues if employees encounter problems returning to work on the day specified;
- Ensuring that IT systems are up and running smoothly for employees returning to work; and
- Resuming program activities related to grants and contracts and other fiscal and financial matters.

We will keep your office informed about any other actions required to resume normal operations after a shutdown. We are committed to ensuring that, consistent with the constraints of a partial shutdown, we conform with applicable law, regulation, and guidance, yet continue to serve the American people in these difficult times.

Sincerely,
