NOTICE OF CONSIDERATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

Mr. MANSFIELD. Now, Mr. President, it is the intention of the leadership to ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, Social Security Amendment of 1970, that it be laid before the Senate and made the pending business.

When that measure is pending, the distinguished chairman of the committee, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), will then proceed. I understand, for approximately 2 hours.
Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550. I do this so that it will become the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair inquires of the Senator, does he ask unanimous consent or move?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I move, yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Montana.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance, with amendments.
The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550), an act to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, H.R. 17550, the social security amendments of 1970, is truly a monumental bill. In terms of dollars, the $10 billion of benefits provided by this bill make it the most significant social insurance legislation Congress has ever considered. In terms of people, the impact of the bill considered as a single thought in mind—to expedite the legislative process. It is axiomatic that one bill can be acted on in less time than three. The committee was advised that amendments to add the family assistance plan to this bill would increase imports.

Under the amendments to upgrade the work Incentive plan, the bill offers the hope of independence to 2 million persons today unable to qualify for gainful employment and must suffer the indignity of dependence on welfare to sustain themselves and their families. The Committee on Finance has added important new titles to the bill—one dealing with international trade matters, and another which includes a substantial test of various alternatives to the welfare mess and offers significant reforms in the programs of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled. This latter part of the bill also reaffirms the intent of Congress in several areas regarding welfare—where the courts have misconstrued the welfare statutes with resulting large increases in welfare caseloads.

These new titles are added to the bill with a single thought in mind—to expedite the legislative process. It is axiomatic that one bill can be acted on in less time than three. The committee was advised that amendments to add the trade bill and amendments to the family assistance plan to this bill would be offered during the debate on the bill. They all look on this social security bill as though they were going to be presented to the President, and that makes the bill a prime target for controversial amendments late in the session.

There are Senators on the Finance Committee who favored these amendments and there are others who oppose them. We spent considerable time discussing procedures for acting on the bill and in the final analysis it was agreed that we would vote on the questions in committee. The crucial motion to add the family assistance plan was rejected by a 6-to-10 vote of the committee. The crucial vote on the trade bill came on a motion to separate it from the social security bill. The motion failed by a vote of 16o-11.

So the bill as reported by the committee does not include the family assistance plan but it does include the trade bill. The basic matters covered by the trade amendments are not new to the Senate. Nonetheless, the Committee on Finance voted unanimously to interrupt its executive sessions and hold public hearings on the trade amendments before we voted on them.

Let me now describe the significant features of the committee bill, and I shall submit for the record a more detailed summary of the provisions of the bill.

The committee bill provides $6,500,000,000 of additional benefits under the cash portion of the social security program.

INCREASE IN SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Under the committee bill, social security payments to the nearly 26 million beneficiaries on the rolls at the end of January 1971, and those who come on the rolls after that date, would be increased by 15 percent, with a new minimum benefit of $100.

The House-passed bill would have increased benefits by 5 percent, with a minimum benefit of $67.20. The committee increased the minimum social security benefit from the $67.20 in the House bill to $100 in order to provide substantial help for those who have the greatest need—those whose social security benefits are so low that they have no other income—and most do not—they are unable to meet their basic everyday needs for food and shelter.

Under present law monthly benefits for workers who retire at age 65 in 1971 now range from $64 to $193.70; under the House-passed bill they would range from $67.20 to $203.40; under the committee bill they would range from $100 to $213.10. A couple living in January 1971 would average $196 under present law; under the House-passed bill they would average $217; under the committee bill they would be increased to $233.

The committee members studied intently the massive volume of statements submitted for the record. We also had available to us 16 volumes of House hearings on this matter, which took over 1 month to complete. In the testimony, the hearings of the Committee on Finance held in 1967, which covered some 1,200 pages of testimony, and the committee's oversight review of U.S. trade policy in 1968 covering another 1,000 pages of submitted documents.

Considering the features of the bill which revise the social security tax structure, it is a fair statement that H.R. 17550 literally reaches into every home in America.

The following chart indicates the value of benefits increased in H.R. 17550 as reported by the Committee on Finance, and the number of persons affected by them.

Let me now describe the significant features of the committee bill, and I shall submit for the record a more detailed summary of the provisions of the bill.

The committee bill also corrects a discrimination under which families already on the rolls at the time of enactment of a social security increase get the increase while those coming on the rolls in the future are denied it. Under our bill, all families will benefit from this increase and from future increases without regard to when they become eligible for benefits.

Cost-of-living increases

Once the benefits are brought up to date, they need to be kept up to date. And while the Congress has in the past acted to maintain social security benefits at realistic and adequate levels, there have been lapses in legislation during times of rapidly rising prices. The automatic cost-of-living increases provided in H.R. 1750 will insure that salary levels and benefits increases will not occur in the future.

While the committee is in agreement with the sense of the House bill as to the desirability of an automatic adjustment in social security benefits, the committee bill revises the House text to stress the role of the Congress in setting social security tax and benefit levels. Under the committee bill, social security benefits would rise automatically as the cost of living increases in the event Congress failed to legislate on social security benefits or taxes. The full cost of the automatic benefit increases would be met equally by increases in tax rates and in the tax base which would go into effect at the same time that benefits are increased, with the strictly actuarial function of determining the base and the rates being performed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The committee bill provides that the automatic increases would go into effect unless Congress acts otherwise to effect a change in social security benefit levels, a change in the schedule of social security tax rates, or a change in the social security tax base. In effect, we are guaranteeing that congressional inaction will not prevent automatic social security hikes in periods of rising prices.

Increase in family maximums

The committee bill correctly identifies a discrimination under which families already on the rolls at the time of enactment of a social security increase get the increase while those coming on the rolls in the future are denied it. Under our bill, all families will benefit from this increase and from future increases without regard to when they become eligible for benefits.

Special payments to people age 72 and older

Under present law, special payments of $46 a month for an individual and $69 for a couple are made to people age 72 and over who have not worked under the program long enough to qualify for regular cash benefits. This is the so-called Frouty amendment of 1966. Under the committee bill, as under the House bill, the payments would be increased January 1, 1971, by 5 percent, to $48.30 a month for an individual and $72.50 for a couple.

Generalization of the Retirement Test

Another important feature of the committee bill makes significant improvements in the retirement test. These improvements—which were also in the House bill—provide an increase from $1,680 to $2,880 in the amount a beneficiary under age 72 may earn in a year and still be paid full social security benefits for that year. The change reflects increases in earnings levels that have occurred since the present amount of $1,680 was set in 1967. The bill also provides for automatic upward adjustments of the amount in the future as earnings levels rise, thereby making it unnecessary for Congress to act in the future to keep the earnings exemption in line with raises in wage levels generally.

Under present law, under the House bill, $2 earned between $1,680 and $2,880 results in a $1 reduction in benefits; each dollar earned above $2,880 reduces benefits by $1. This dollar-for-dollar reduction that applies to earnings above $2,880 reduces incentives for beneficiaries to work. The committee bill would provide for a $1 reduction for each $2 earned with respect to all earnings above $2,000, so that the more a beneficiary works and earns, the more he or she would have. The bill would also increase from $140 to $166.60 the amount of wages the beneficiary may earn in a given month and get benefits, or, if he or she did not receive benefits, his or her annual earnings.

In 1971 about 650,000 beneficiaries would receive additional benefits, and about 380,000 persons who would receive no benefit under present law would receive some benefits as a result of the retirement test liberalizations. The additional benefit payments for the first full year would be about $404,000,000.

Liberalization of the Retirement Test

- Provisions relating to disability
  - About 2,700,000 widows and widowers on the rolls at the end of January 1971
  - Under the present law, the method of computing benefits for men who are 72 and older who are receiving or would have received. Unfortunately, the way the House bill was written a widow could actually receive a benefit substantially higher than her husband received before his death. Generally, under the committee bill the widow would receive either 100 percent of the benefit her husband was actually receiving at the time of his death, or, if he was not receiving benefits, 100 percent of the benefit he would have been eligible for at age 65.
months to 4 months. About 140,000 people—disabled workers and their dependents and disabled widows and widowers—would be able to receive a benefit for January 1971 as a result of this provision. About $155 million in additional benefits would be paid out during the first full year.

DISABILITY OFFSET

The committee deleted the provision in the House bill which would have raised the ceiling on income from combined worker's compensation and social security disability insurance benefits from 80 percent to 100 percent of the disabled worker's average current earnings before the onset of his disability. The objective of the offset provisions is to avoid the payment of combined amounts of social security benefits and workmen's compensation payments that would be excessive in comparison with the beneficiary's earnings before he became disabled. Although the committee agrees with the compassionate objective of the House bill, it feared the combination of First, payments equal to past wages, plus, second, tax exemption for these amounts, could result in payments in excess of prior take-home pay and this could jeopardize efforts to rehabilitate the worker and restore him to gainful employment. The committee was of the opinion that the best interest of the disabled worker in his own rehabilitation.

MEDICARE AND MEDICAID

During the past 2 years, the committee has devoted an extensive and almost disproportionate share of its time to determining and evaluating the many problems in the huge Medicare and Medicaid programs.

Parenthetically, it might be worthwhile to mention that during our years of work we have shared with the Committee on Ways and Means information we have developed. The Committee on Ways and Means, Mr. Bennett, has given us the benefit of their efforts.

The Medicare and Medicaid programs are here to stay. With that in mind, it was our duty to provide for the recommendation to the committee to act to correct the problems which our work revealed. The House, in its bill, attempted to and did develop solutions to some of the important problems. We accepted, and in some instances, improved upon amendments in the House bill designed to bring Medicare and Medicaid costs under control. We have also added amendments to further achieve the common objectives of both the House and Senate—reasonable and equitable controls on the costs and utilization of health care services with the minimum final to past wages, plus, second.

We believe the amendments of the House and those added by the Finance Committee will go a very long way toward assuring the taxpayers and the millions of citizens who depend upon Medicare and Medicaid that those programs will function more effectively and economically in delivering quality health care.

Let me describe the more important features of this part of the committee's bill.

PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

My distinguished colleague from Utah (Mr. BENNETT) has worked very hard on the provision in the committee's bill that provides for the establishment and use of professional standards review organizations. I would not wish to let this opportunity go by without recognizing his outstanding efforts in developing this provision.

Under this provision, professional standards review organizations would be established to review the utilization of health care provided under the Medicare and medicaid programs. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would, after consultation with national and local health professions and agencies, designate appropriate areas throughout the Nation for which professional standards review organizations would be established. Areas may cover an entire State or parts of a State, but generally a minimum of 300 practicing doctors would be included within one area.

Organizations representing substantial numbers of physicians in an area, such as medical foundations and societies, would be invited and encouraged to participate. Where the Secretary finds that such organizations are not willing or cannot reasonably be expected to develop capabilities to carry out professional standards review organization functions in an effective, economical, and timely manner, he would enter into agreements with such other agencies or organizations with professional competence as he finds are willing and capable of carrying out such functions.

The Secretary would approve those organizations which can reasonably be expected to improve and expand the professional review process. The initial approval would be made on a conditional basis, not to exceed 2 years, with the review organizations operating concurrently with the present review system. During the transitional period, Medicare carriers and intermediaries are expected to continue their present professional review process. The initial approval of the professional standards review organization where the professional standards review organization has acted. This reliance will permit the most complete appraisal of the effectiveness of the conditionally approved professional standards review organization. Where performance of an organization is unsatisfactory, and the Secretary finds that prompt necessary improvement fail, he could terminate its participation.

Provider, physician, and patient profiles and other relevant data would be collected and reviewed on an ongoing basis to the maximum extent feasible to identify persons and institutions that provide services requiring more extensive review. Regional norms of care would be used as a routine process in routine checkpoints in determining when excessive services may have been provided. The norms would be used in determining the point at which physician certification of need for continued institutional care would be made and reviewed. Initial priority in assemblng and using data and profiles would be assigned to those areas most productive in pinpointing problems so as to conserve physician time and maximize the productivity of physician review.

The professional standards review organization would be responsible for the services of qualified personnel, such as registered nurses, who could, under the direction and control of physicians, aid in assuring effective and timely review. They would also be authorized to use the services of effective hospital utilization review committees and local medical society review committees in performing their tasks.

Where advance approval by the review organizations for institutional admission is required, such approval would provide the basis for a presumption of medical necessity for purposes of Medicare and medicaid benefit payments. Failure of a physician, institution, or other health care supplier to seek advance approval where required, could be considered cause for disallowance of affected claims.

A National Professional Standards Review Council would be established by the Secretary to review the operations of the local area review organizations. They would be composed of physicians, a majority of whom would be selected from nominees of national organizations representing practicing physicians. Other physicians on the Council would be recommended by consumers and other health care interests.

INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR HEALTH ADMINISTRATION

We on the committee have been increasingly concerned about making sure that the Medicare and Medicaid programs operate effectively and as Congress intends. I know other Members of the Congress and the people who administer these programs have been concerned, too. But these programs are very complex and fail to reach sometimes, and the review processes being used cannot identify problems or discrepancies as soon as we all would like. And sometimes the problems are very difficult to correct the problems that have been found. I want to commend two distinguished members of the committee—the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Rusk), and the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Williams)—who sponsored a provision in the committee bill that will go a long way to alleviate our concern about these difficulties. The provision will establish an Office of Inspector General for Health Administration within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.
His responsibilities will be patterned after the successful approach by the Agency for International Development and the investigative responsibilities, with respect to congressional requests, that U.S. Tariff Commission has undertaken. In carrying out his responsibilities, he will not be under the control of any officer of Health, Education, and Welfare other than the Secretary, and he will be provided with sufficient authority to make sure that Medicare and Medicaid functions as Congress intends. He will continuously review these programs, and any other health programs established under social security, to determine their efficiency and economy of administration, their compliance with the law, and the extent to which the objectives and purposes for which they were established are being realized.

He will recommend ways to correct deficiencies or to improve these programs. And he will have the authority to suspend regulations, or portions of regulations, which he finds not in harmony with congressional intent or which will lead to inefficiency and waste. It is important to have a mechanism for dynamic and thorough review of these programs, and that the person with this responsibility be at a level where he can promptly call attention to problems and deal with them in a timely and effective fashion. Armed with the authority provided under this provision, I believe the voice of the Inspector General will be effective in improving the efficiency and economy with which the medicare and medicaid programs are administered.

WAIVER OF NURSING REQUIREMENTS IN RURAL HOSPITALS

Several members of the committee were concerned about the problem created by the need to assure the availability of hospital services of adequate quality in rural areas and the fact that existing shortages, and the rural nursing shortage, generally make it difficult for some rural hospitals to meet the nursing staff requirements in present law. The committee has attempted to resolve this problem by making a provision which would allow the Secretary, under certain conditions, to waive the medicare requirements that a hospital have registered professional nurses on duty around the clock. This requirement could be waived only if, First, the hospital has at least a registered nurse on the daytime shift. Second, has made, and is continuing to make, a real effort to hire enough nurses to meet the requirements, and Third, is unable to employ qualified personnel because of nursing shortages in the area. Also, the hospital must be located in an isolated area and the hospital's facilities are in short supply and the closest other facilities are not easily accessible to people of the area. And finally, it must be known that nonparticipation of the hospital would seriously reduce the availability of hospital services to medicare beneficiaries living in the area.

The Secretary would, of course, regularly review the situation with respect to each of these hospitals and the waiver would be granted on an annual basis for a period of only one year. This waiver would apply only to the nursing staff requirements and would expire on December 31, 1970.

PROFICIENCY TESTING OF HEALTH PERSONNEL

In 1967 the committee recommended that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare consult with appropriate professional health organizations and State boards of health to develop and apply appropriate means—including testing procedures—for determining the proficiency of health care personnel otherwise disqualified or limited in responsibility under regulations of the Secretary.

The Department has taken little or no action, except with respect to directors of clinics, in demoting proficiency testing and training courses. The personnel problems which existed in 1967 and which the committee sought to correct have been aggravated as a result of the Department's inaction.

We are all aware of the acute shortage of nursing personnel in America. This has forced many hundreds of nursing homes to cover some shifts with "waived" practical nurses, who have years of experience, are competent, but they do not meet the medicare and medicaid charge-nurse requirements. Therefore, unfortunately, many otherwise-qualified nursing homes may be forced out of the medicare program because of the unavailability of a registered nurse or a licensed practical nurse who meets the requirements. Similar problems exist with respect to physical therapists, medical technologists, and psychiatric technicians.

The committee has therefore added to the House bill a provision which requires the Secretary to determine appropriate means of determining the proficiency of health personnel disqualified or limited in responsibility under present regulations. The committee expects that the Secretary will regularly report to it and to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives concerning the progress in this area.

REIMBURSEMENT OF PHYSICIANS IN TEACHING HOSPITALS

The committee is aware that a major problem—of almost scandalous proportions—in medicare administration is the payment under part B on a fee-for-service basis for the services of "supervisory" physicians in teaching hospitals—services which in many instances were never rendered by the physician in whose name they were billed. We estimate these payments to be more than $100,000,000 annually and in general, such payments were not made prior to medicare. It certainly was not the intent of Congress that rare professional non-physicians be paid for services to such things as the cost of producing medical services, costs of living, and

The House bill attempts to deal with this problem by providing an upper limit on payment under part B—physician's bills—for services of certain teaching physicians on a cost rather than a charge basis. Payment on a fee-for-service basis would only be made if there is general billing and collection from those able to pay.

The committee believes, and has amended the House bill to provide, that payments for services furnished by supervisory physicians in teaching hospitals should be made on a cost basis under part A—hospital insurance—unless the patient is truly a private patient or unless the hospital since 1965 has charged all patients in full, including the medicare deductible and coinsurance amounts, and has collected from at least half of them. For donated services of teaching physicians a salary cost would be imposed equal to the average cost of other physicians.

LIMITS FOR DETERMINING REASONABLE CHARGES FOR PHYSICIANS' SERVICES

Another specific concern of the committee has been the threat that continuing increases in physician's charges pose to the effectiveness of the medicare program. We certainly recognize that there are complex reasons for these increases. Part of the problem is that more and more people are seeking medical care and the increasing number of doctors is not increasing fast enough to keep up with the demand. But something must be done.

The House bill which the committee approves without change moves in the direction of an approach to reimbursement of physicians that ties recognition of fee increases to some reasonable index that reflects what is happening in the rest of the economy, thereby limiting recognition of inflation of doctors' fees. And amounts that economic data indicate would be fair to all concerned. Under this approach, recognition of fee increases would continue, but it would be dependent on the development in other parts of the economy that have a bearing on the physician's cost of doing business. What is proposed is not a limit on what a physician may charge under the medicare program, but rather a limit on what the program will recognize as the prevailing fee in the locality. Thus, a limitation would be imposed only where a physician's charges are significantly higher than the usual or prevailing charge in the locality for the same service, or where a physician raises his customary charge significantly above former levels.

This is not an effort to penalize any group in the health care delivery system or to interfere with anyone's right to receive just compensation for their services. The objective is to move toward a system of determining reasonable charges which will be related to the general state of the economy. Indexes will be developed to take into account such things as the cost of producing medical services, costs of living, and... earnings of other professional people. This approach should provide the individual physician with an objective measure of the fairness of increases in his charges.

LIMITS ON REIMBURSEMENT FOR CAPITAL EXPENSES

The committee also approved the provision in the House bill that would authorize the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to prohibit or substantially reduce reimbursement amounts for depreciation, interest, and other expenses related to capital expenditures for plant and equipment in excess of $100,000 where such expenditures appear to be unnecessary. The committee determined to be inconsistent with State or local health facility plans. This feature is similar to a provision in the committee bill of 1967. Under this program, the Secretary would make agreements with States to utilize the services of qualified health planning agencies to help in administration of this provision. The agencies will submit findings and recommendations to the Secretary to assist in determining the capital expenditures that are inconsistent with the plans developed by these agencies.

The committee amended the provision to provide for review at the State level when negative decisions are made by the planning agencies. This provision would not impede the growth and expansion of hospitals and skilled nursing homes but would provide guidance to assure that future growth is achieved in a sensible, orderly manner. It should have little or no effect on most hospitals and nursing homes since additional facilities are generally constructed only in response to a need of the community. But this provision should discourage a hospital from acting without regard for the needs of the community.

LIMITATION ON COSTS RECOGNIZED AS REASONABLE

Under present law, providers of services are paid on the basis of reasonable cost. However, there are a number of provisions that make a determination that the costs for a particular provider are not reasonable.

The committee is mindful of the fact that costs can and do vary from one institution to another as a result of differences in size, in the nature and scope of services provided, type of patient treated, location of the institution, and various other factors affecting the efficient delivery of needed health services. It is also true, however, that costs that are the result of gross inefficiency in operation or provision of expensive services that are not medically necessary. These costs cannot properly be considered "reasonable" for purposes of payment under medicare and medicaid.

Accordingly, the committee approves the House provision which would give the Secretary new authority to set limits on costs recognized for certain classes of providers in various service areas. This new authority differs from existing authority in several ways and meets the particular problems identified above. First, it would be exercised on a prospectively, rather than retrospective, basis so that the provisions would not apply to services, projects, or advances that are determined to be inconsistent with State or local health facility plans. This feature is similar to a provision in the committee bill of 1967. Under this program, the Secretary would make agreements with States to utilize the services of qualified health planning agencies to help in administration of this provision. The agencies would submit findings and recommendations to the Secretary to assist in determining the capital expenditures that are inconsistent with the plans developed by these agencies.

The committee bill again recommends that the Senate add certain services of optometrists and chiropractors to the benefits available under medicare. In addition, the committee has been concerned that the new medicare option without sufficient controls could turn out to be an enormous or arranged for by a health maintenance organization—a group practice or other prepayment capitation plan. The committee amended the provisions to include safeguards with respect to reimbursement of physical therapists, and other specialists such as social workers, nutritionists, and dieticians. Under the bill payments to these providers will be limited to a "salary-related" basis. In effect their payment will not be on a fee-for-service basis, but will be limited to the amount generally equal to the salary such a person would reasonably have been paid if he were an employee. Of course, adjustments are authorized for expenses incurred by these people as self-employed persons—office expenses, travel expenses, and the like.

The new system of publicizing deficiencies in health care facilities is also included in the committee bill. This information would enable physicians and patients alike to make sounder judgments about their own use of available facilities in the community and should also serve to speed up the process of correction of the deficiencies.

HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS

The bill as passed by the House would provide medicare beneficiaries with an option to have a health maintenance organization—a group practice or other prepayment capitation plan. The committee amended the provisions to include safeguards with respect to reimbursement of health maintenance organizations and, of great importance, safeguards to protect and assure that the interests of medicare beneficiaries who choose this option are fully protected.

both instances, safeguards are provided to assure no deterioration in the quality of care provided under the program.

In addition, the bill provides that aged persons not eligible for hospital insurance may "buy in" to the program, paying the full cost of care and without permitting the Secretary to exercise discretionary judgment.

INTERMEDIATE CARE FACILITIES

Another amendment, authorizing intermediate care under medicaid rather than under title XI, as at present, emphasizes that intermediate care facilities are institutions providing health-related services beyond those provided in skilled nursing homes. For the first time, it would make such care, now limited to those receiving or eligible for cash assistance, available under medicaid to the medically indigent. Intermediate care would authorize the Secretary that appropriate and effective utilization review and medical audit procedures are being applied to intermediate care, as is already required for patients in skilled nursing homes.

One area where we have put off too long the provision of Federal aid for badly needed hospital care concerns the treatment of mentally ill children. Many of these poor unfortunate could be helped to a better life if adequate care is provided for them in their youth. I am pleased that the committee agreed with me when I offered an amendment to provide Federal matching payments for them. Under this amendment Federal matching payments would be authorized under medicaid to States for care of mentally ill children under 21 years of age in public mental institutions. Such funds would be available where States maintained their present fiscal effort, for patients in accredited mental hospitals who are undergoing a program of active medical treatment. Presently, such Federal matching payments would be available only for persons 65 or over.

MEDICAID'S UNIFORMITY RULES REVIEW

Under present law, all medicaid recipients in a State must be covered for the same services, and the services must be available throughout the State.

Present title XIX requirements for "statutiveness" of amount, duration, and scope of benefits have created problems for States who want to contract with organizations such as neighborhood health centers or prepaid group practices, to provide services to title XIX recipients. The services are often broader in scope than those available under medicaid, but are not available throughout the State.

A committee amendment facilitates arrangements with comprehensive health organizations and health groups offering services different from those in the regular State medicaid plans.

It is also made it possible for States to utilize reasonable uniform deductive provisions and copayment features in their medicaid plans for the medically indigent without requiring that they also apply to the welfare recipients covered by the plan. This will help make it possible to trim medical expenses. State review by such an effort.

PROTECTION AGAINST CATASTROPHIC ILLNESS

The Committee on Finance is concerned about the devastating effect which a catastrophic illness can have on families. Unfortunate enough to be affected by such an illness. Over the past decades science and medicine have taken great strides in their ability to sustain and prolong life. Patients with skillful medical care, which recently would have been rapidly fatal, can now be maintained in relative good health for many years with the aid of dialysis and transplantation. Patients with severe strokes can now be restored to a level of functioning which would have been impossible years ago. Modern burn treatment centers can keep victims of severe burns alive and can offer restorative surgery which can in many instances erase the after effects of such burns.

These are but a few examples of the many improvements which recent progress in science and medicine has had. This progress, however, has had another impact. These catastrophic illnesses and injuries which heretofore would have been rapidly fatal and for which there was not too much medical knowledge, now have an enormous impact on a family's finances.

To deal with this situation, the committee has added to the House bill an amendment which would establish a catastrophic health insurance program beginning in January 1972 for all people under age 65 who are insured under social security, supplemental security income and minor children. People under 65 who receive monthly social security benefits would also be eligible. People over 65 would not be covered since Medicare which already meets the needs of all but a very small minority of beneficiaries.

It is estimated that only 30 to 35 per cent of our people have catastrophic insurance and stand against the costs of catastrophic illness through major medical or comprehensive medical plans. I am very proud to be the sponsor of this amendment which I believe will go a long way towards lifting the financial burden from those who are already carrying the heavy load of sickness and despair.

The benefits provided under the catastrophic health insurance program would be the same as those currently provided... under parts A and B of medicare, except that there would be no upper limitations on hospital days, extended care facility days, or physician visits. The major benefits excluded from medicare, and consequently excluded from this proposal, are nursing home care, outpatient prescription drugs, dental care, and full inpatient and outpatient psychiatric coverage.

The deductibles in the plan would parallel the deductibles under parts A and B of medicare. There would be a hospital deductible of 30 days' hospitalization for each person and a supplemental medical deductible initially established at $2,000 per family.

After an individual is hospitalized for 60 days in 1 year, he would become eligible for payments toward his hospital expenses beginning on the sixty-first day of his hospitalization. Any posthospital extended care services which he received during the sixty-first through ninety-first day of his hospitalization would also be eligible for payment. After the hospital deductible is met, the program would pay hospitals substantially as they are presently paid under medicare with the individual being responsible for a coinsurance payment equal to one-fourth of the inpatient hospital deductible as determined for medicare purposes. Extended care services would be subject to a daily coinsurance amount equal to one-eighth of the inpatient hospital deductible as determined for medicare purposes. If the program were in effect in January 1971 the coinsurance for the individual would be $15 a day and extended care services $7.50 a day.

The medical deductible would apply to the entire family. After a family had incurred expenses of $2,000 for physicians' bills, home health visits, physical therapy services, laboratory, and X-ray services, and other covered medical and health services, the family would become eligible for payments toward these expenses. After the medical deductible had been met, the program would pay for 80 per cent of all eligible expenses, with the patient being responsible for coinsurance of 20 per cent.

As in the medicare program, these coinsurance features are intended to limit program costs and to control the utilization of services. The program would be administered by using carriers and intermediaries as in the present medicare program. Medicare's quality standards for institutions would also apply. Social security, with the cooperation of carriers and intermediaries, would determine when the deductibles have been satisfied. To keep the paperwork down, bills would not be accepted under the supplemental plan until they totaled $2,000 per family.

The committee estimates that more than 1 million families of the approximately 49 million families in the United States incur medical expenses which will qualify them to receive benefits under the program. The first year's cost of the program is estimated at $2.3—2.9 billion on a cash basis. A separate catastrophic insurance trust fund with its own employer-employee tax would be established to fund the catastrophic insurance program. It is expected that this trust fund will face substantial financing shortages and will need to be augmented. The higher creditable earnings resulting from the increase in the ceiling on earnings will make possible benefits that are more reasonably related to the actual earnings of workers at the higher earnings levels. It was the view of the committee that more and more workers would have earned enough to qualify for the fund and, if this total amount and these workers would have benefit protection related to a smaller and smaller part of their full earnings.

INCREASE IN THE CONTRIBUTION RATES

Under the schedule of contribution rates for cash benefits contained in the bill, the contribution rates for employers and employees scheduled for 1971—72 would be decreased from the 4.6 per centum provided for under present law to 4.4 per centum each.

The bill provides for increases in the contribution rate schedule for the hospital insurance program. The contribution rate schedule for 1971—72 would be increased from 0.6 per centum each for employees, employers, and the self-employed to 0.8 per centum for 1971—72. The additional taxes for this part of the program would be used to balance the actuarial deficit and would make that program financially sound.

In addition to the contribution rate schedule to fully finance the catastrophic illness insurance provision added to the bill by the Finance Committee, the contribution rate schedule for catastrophic illness for 1972—74 would be 0.3 per centum each for employees, employers, and the self-employed.

For the benefit of Senators and others who are concerned with the long-range financing aspects of the social security program, and hospital insurance programs the following charts compare the combined tax rates and maximum tax payable under the committee bill, the present law and the House bill. I call attention to the fact that the rates under present law applies to maximum earnings of $7,800, while both the House bill and the committee bill apply to a wage base of $9,000.

I ask unanimous consent that the chart showing the tax rates and maximum taxes be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the chart was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. LONG. Let me also note for the record that the combined rate for cash benefits and hospital insurance is the same under the committee bill as under present law for 1971 and 1972 and is less adequate to pay for all of the benefits—the benefits provided under present law and the new benefits provided under the bill. Moreover, each of the separate trust funds will be soundly financed and over the next few years the total income to the program will be nearly $6,000,000.

Mr. LONG. As I mentioned earlier, benefits would be automatically adjusted to take account of increases in the cost of living. The cost of this increase would be met by increasing both the contribution and benefit base and the contribution rates so that each increase would meet one-half of the cost. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would determine how much the contribution and benefit base would have to be increased in order to finance one-half of the long-range cost of the proposed benefit increase, and how much contribution rates would have to be increased in order to finance one-half of the long-range cost of the proposed benefit increase. The Secretary would then publish in the Federal Register both the new, higher base and the revised contribution rate schedule, to be effective beginning January 1 of the year for which the benefit increase is effective.

Mr. President, now let me describe the additional matters contained in the committee bill.

The Trade Act of 1970

The committee approved the basic provisions of the House trade bill as an amendment to H.R. 17550, the social security legislation. The principal exceptions concern the export tax incentive called DISC and the repeal of the American selling price system of valuation.

Now, I will discuss the basic provisions of the amendment dealing with the foreign trade which has been approved by the committee.

The Trade Agreement Authority

The first aspect of the amendment deals with the extension of further tariff cutting authority to the President. The President has been without authority to reduce duties pending the Trade Expansion Act since July 1, 1967. This new authority would not be used to enter into another major round of trade negotiations. None are planned. But, there is another reason why this authority is needed. Under the rules of the game in international trade, whenever one country must increase duties or impose quotas in order to protect a domestic industry, the other country must also offer compensatory tariff reductions on other imports of equivalent value to the country whose exports would be adversely affected by the increased duty or quota. The alternative would be to face retaliation on the part of those adversely affected countries. It is clear that, under other provisions of this bill, the United States would be imposing some limited reductions on the imports of other countries. For this reason, it was felt necessary to extend to the President authority—through July 1, 1975—to cut tariffs by 20 percent in two stages. The committee made clear that it does not believe the President should offer "compensation" to countries which themselves have illegal tariff or nontariff barriers against United States exports, for which the United States has not been "compensated". In other words, in those situations we should go to the bargaining table and work out a mutually satisfactory solution to the question of compensation.

The revised escape clause and adjustment assistance provision

A third major area which the committee dealt with was in revising the stringent criteria in present law for providing adjustment (escape clause) relief to firms, workers, and industries which are seriously injured by import competition. With respect to the escape clause which is contained in the Senate bill, the committee felt that it is necessary to provide for tariff concessions must be found to be the major cause of increased imports, and increased imports must be found to be the major factor in causing serious injury. Two tests have proven so difficult that only one industry out of 20 applicants has qualified for relief since 1962. The executive branch agrees that these tests are too strict.

The Finance Committee substantially altered both tests to make it easier for a domestic industry to receive relief. The Senate amendment would require that in order to qualify for relief, the President must find that it is necessary to provide for tariff concessions in at least one-quarter of the total value of imports. This was the same test that existed for 11 years from 1951 to 1962, and it worked well. The committee agrees with the House that a "substantial cause" relationship between increased imports and serious injury was fairer to all than either the present law or the administration's recommendation of substituting the concept of "primary" cause for "major" cause in the statute.

The committee considered that the "escape clause" had a substantial cause "primary" relationship between increased imports and serious injury was fairer to all than either the present law or the administration's recommendation of substituting the concept of "primary" cause for "major" cause in the statute.

The committee also felt that the definition of industry should permit separate consideration to be given to those segments of a multiproduct corporation for producing one product which might be seriously injured by imports, even though the other cheek when foreign countries impose new nontariff barriers against U.S. products.

In addition, the Senate amendment agrees with the House that in antidumping and countervailing duty cases, the Treasury should have some time limits imposed upon it in making its determination regarding the imports involved. The Antidumping Act deals with injurious price discrimination, and countervailing duty statute deals with foreign subsidies. In the case of the antidumping statute, the committee would have 4 months to reach a tentative decision on the question of whether or not there has been price discrimination, except in extraordinarily complicated cases in which the Secretary may take up to 7 months. In cases under the countervailing duty statute, the Secretary of the Treasury would have 1 year to make decisions. Both the House and the committee agreed that these time limits will give assurance that decisions will be reached promptly on matters of vital concern to domestic industry.
other product areas may not be. This is called the "segmentation principle" and it too was on the books for 11 years without any difficulties between 1951 and 1962.

Another area in the escarp clause which the committee did take action on and which is new this year and that is the so-called "acute or severe." The bill, and the committee's amendment, the Tariff Commission must determine whether on the basis of the substantial cause-test an industry is being seriously injured by imports. That would be the first finding. Having made that determination and assuming it was positive, the Commissioners finding serious injury would also determine whether the injury was acute or severe. The term "acute or severe" denotes a degree of injury which is a level higher than serious injury and which could, if not immediately corrected, threaten the viability of an industry as a viable economic entity in the United States. Now, under either the initial determination of serious injury or the subsequent acute or severe injury determination, the Tariff Commission would recommend a remedy. If only the initial serious injury was found, the President would consider the remedy suggested by the Tariff Commission but would be allowed to proceed with other steps. If he deemed necessary to prevent serious injury, unless he determines it is not in the national interest to impose such restrictions. In the latter case, he must provide adjustment assistance to those firms and workers which are being seriously injured. If there are two affirmative findings by the Tariff Commission—one of serious injury and another of acute or severe injury—the President would have to impose the remedy recommended by a majority of the Tariff Commission making those determinations, unless he determines it is not in the national interest to do so. In other words, the second test puts a little more pressure on the President to accept the Tariff Commission's findings, but the President retains the authority. If he does not accept the Tariff Commission's recommendation he must nevertheless provide adjustment assistance. The committee deemed that this flexibility was necessary.

With respect to adjustment assistance, it is only necessary to determine that imports are contributing to unemployment or underemployment in the case of groups of workers, or to serious injury in the case of firms.

TEXTILES AND FOOTWEAR

Now let me turn to the textile and footwear provisions in the bill. The textile industry is the largest manufacturing industry in the United States with 2.1 million employees, many of them disadvantaged. The industry moved from the North to the South, and now is centered in the Pacific unless relief from low-wage imports is given. All the European countries have negotiated voluntary agreements with Japan and other Asian textile producers to limit imports of certain fiber and woolen textiles into the European market. That is the intent of this bill. The United States has been striving to obtain a similar agreement, because we have become the "dumping ground" for cheap imports, and our producers are facing severe hardships. But it does not appear willing to give us the same consideration that they gave the Europeans. The nonrubber footwear industry has also been hurt by growing imports. Thus, the bill provides for a new series of provisions in the bill, which were limitations on the imports of certain fiber and footwear articles equal to the average annual imports for the 3 calendar years, 1967 through 1969.

However, there is a great deal of flexibility in the bill. For example, the President is authorized to exempt any products from the statutory import quotas: First, which he determines are not disrupting the United States market, second, when he determines that the national interest requires such action, and, third, when the supply of any article in the domestic market is insufficient to meet the demand at reasonable prices, or, fourth, when voluntary agreements are entered into with foreign producing countries.

The President is specifically authorized to negotiate agreements with foreign countries under which imports of textile and footwear articles would be voluntarily controlled. As I have stated imports covered by such voluntary agreements would be exempt from the mandatory quota provisions of the bill. The main thrust of the legislation, therefore, is to share our market with foreign goods, hopefully on a voluntary basis, so that American industry and labor would not be severely injured by foreign competition.

Textile and footwear imports into the United States have been increasing very rapidly. The average imports of manmade fiber amounted to 1,380 million square yards in the 1967-69 base period, and for wool textile products it was 184.5 million square yards. As of June 1970, imports of manmade fiber textiles are running at an alltime record of 2.4 billion square yards. Apparel imports are also sharply up, and in some product areas, such as sweaters and shirts, imports have practically taken over the market. For example, in 1969 imports of sweaters reached 501,000 dozen. In 1969, imports of such sweaters had increased to 6,974,000 dozen. That is more than a tenfold increase in the space of 4 years. Such increases in imports year after year have begun to erode our textile and apparel markets. Many responsible individuals realize this. In an article appearing in the September issue of Fortune magazine, the former Minister of Finance in Japan, the Honorable Nobutane Kuichi made this wise statement:

"Confrontation between us and the world in which I'd like to see the growth-rate of our exports stay at 22 percent to no more than 10 percent, ideally 7 percent. I have told this to the Prime Minister and others and because everything is geared to exports."" Let us not forget that other countries having much more severe barriers to imports than the United States, face the same problems. Japan, for example, has import quotas. Europe controls its imports through border taxes and variable levies, and, in addition, has quantitative restrictions on Japanese and other Asian textile products, which serve to divert them to the United States. For example, this Nation exports only 50 percent of Japan's apparel exports; all Western Europe, with more than our population, absorbs only 5 percent.

Under these circumstances, they should not point their finger at us as starting a trade war. We do not want a trade war. But we cannot stand idly by and watch our industries go under and our labor force decimated by foreign imports while nothing is done. These provisions will insure that American industry and our jobs will be protected in a reasonable way while, at the same time, insuring an equitable share of our market for foreign goods.

NATIONAL SECURITY PROVISION

Another area covered by this bill is the revision of the national security provision of the Trade Expansion Act. Under this provision, the Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness must make a finding that imports of a particular article are threatening to impair the national security, he shall so report to the President. If the President agrees with this finding, he shall impose whatever restrictions he deems necessary to remedy the situation.

The House believed, and the Finance Committee concurs that wherever national security findings are involved, a quota would be a more suitable device for controlling imports than a tariff. In the first place, the quota would provide our tariffs to be kept at a level consonant with the national security objectives, whereas no tariff could give that assurance.

If the tariff were set too low, imports would come pouring in to depress our market; if the tariff was very high, it could shut off imports completely or involve very high costs to the U.S. consumer. In the case of oil, there is the control provided by tanker rates, which are extremely volatile. A tariff set on Monday might be inappropriate on Friday if tanker rates had moved up sharply in the meantime. We cannot control our tariffs to the fickle nature of these tanker rate variations, or to the whims of Arab potentates who have effective control over prices.

The Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness stated before the Finance Committee that a tariff would tend to increase the cost of oil to the consumer much more than a voluntary agreement on tanker rates, which are extremely volatile. A tariff set on Monday might be inappropriate on Friday if tanker rates had moved up sharply in the meantime. We cannot control our tariffs to the fickle nature of these tanker rate variations, or to the whims of Arab potentates who have effective control over prices.

WELFARE AMENDMENTS

The goal of working out progressive and productive proposals in the area of public welfare has occupied the committee for many months.
Looking at the overall structure of our public assistance system, the committee concluded that two different approaches were called for. First, there is no preexisting means test separate and independently of other programs for the aged, blind, and disabled and start a new program in that area. These programs, on the whole, have been working well. They have been responsive to the needs of poor people, and the rolls have remained fairly steady. The committee therefore determined to make desirable improvements in these programs, but not at this time to change the programs.

The situation with regard to the program of aid to families with dependent children is far different. The AFDC caseeload has tripled in the last 10 years, and we now have approximately 9 million AFDC recipients throughout the country. The rate of growth is continuing unabated, and every State is feeling the consequences. Equally disturbing is the fact that the vast majority of the AFDC rolls are eligible because of the absence of the father from the home. These are cases largely resulting from desertion, separation, or divorce. Four-fifths of the families being added to the rolls are eligible because of the absence of the father from the home. These are cases largely resulting from desertion, separation, or divorce. Further, a significant number of AFDC recipients are now receiving AFDC are families in which the father is absent, and this percentage will be increasing if present trends continue.

In conclusion, the committee felt compelled to develop workable and greatly needed improvements in those programs created by the Congress and greatly needed improvements in those programs created by the Congress to help AFDC families move toward economic independence. Along with these proposals to solve problems which are amenable to rapid improvement, the committee is advocating a broad program of testing which is aimed at finding long-range solutions to the overall problem of welfare dependency. At this point I would like to describe in greater detail just what the committee bill includes.

ASSISTANCE TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

First of all, the bill proposes a national minimum income level which would provide a considerably higher level of assistance for all recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled. Many of these people, who are among the most helpless and hopeless of all the poor in our country, are currently receiving assistance which is obviously inadequate for their needs.

We think it is urgent that increased assistance be given to those who are living in States where payments are very low. Thus, the bill would require States to pay a level of assistance sufficient to assure persons in these categories a total monthly income of at least $130 for a single person, or $200 for a couple. States would, of course, have the option of increasing the above standard for residents of their State.

To give some idea of the impact of this new minimum, let me point out that in the aged category, this provision would result in increased assistance for eligible single-aged individuals in about 31 States, and for eligible aged couples in about 36 States.

The committee bill would also, in effect, give needy persons in the adult categories more money in lieu of food stamps. We all know that many of them have suffered loss of dignity and pride by having to use food stamps when they go out to the local grocery store to do their shopping. This bill will give them cash, which they can use as they want, and when they want.

In addition, the committee wanted to make sure that those social security beneficiaries who are also public assistance recipients would share in the benefits of the social security increases which are provided in the bill. If present law remained unchanged, any increase in a social security check would mean an offsetting decrease in the recipient’s public assistance check. Therefore, the committee bill requires States to raise their standards of need for those in the aged, blind, and disabled categories by $10 per month for a single individual, and $15 for a couple. These recipients would in this way receive an increase in total income of at least these amounts.

Recognizing that the rapid growth in welfare expenditures in recent years has strained the fiscal capacities of the States, the committee bill makes sure that the States would not have to bear any additional costs resulting from these new benefits in the adult categories. A certain amount of fiscal relief will accrue to the States to the extent that welfare grants are reduced because of the increases which the bill provides in social security benefits. However, this relief is not necessarily distributed in a way which reflects the relative welfare burdens of the States under present law or under the additional requirements imposed by the bill.

We have worked out a proposal which, generally speaking, would assure persons in States 10-percent savings over their expenditures for adult assistance programs in 1970. The Federal Government would pay 100 percent of the cost of additional benefits for the aged, blind, and disabled which are required by the committee bill.

Mr. President, it is my belief that these changes proposed in the bill will be of enormous benefit to those Americans who are in need of old-age, blindness, or other crippling disability. We have been able to work out a way of increasing the minimum income level above the 1970 level, as recommended by the administration and approved by the House, and to make other needed improvements, without going above the amounts which the administration stated it was willing to allocate for these categories of assistance.

TESTING OF WELFARE ALTERNATIVES

Now let me turn to the problem of assistance to needy families with children. I have already outlined, and there is no need to repeat, the seriousness of the growth in the AFDC program. The committee has studied the present program. It has studied the proposal, with its many variations, which the administration made for the establishment of a new family assistance plan to be superimposed on the AFDC program.

In all honesty and sincerity, I would say that the committee bill is not perfect. I would say that on our honest evaluation are unimpressed with the principles in the proposal, but nearly all the witnesses also pointed out weaknesses.

As legislators, we know that the perfect law is yet to be written. We would not reject a proposal because of minor problems or omissions. These, we know, can be corrected in the course of time.

But when a proposal establishes a new direction, and goals are established that are so profound and attainable under the measures provided, then it is our responsibility to require a more thorough examination.

The committee bill would thus require the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to conduct up to five tests of possible alternatives to the AFDC program. One or two of these tests would test a "family assistance" type proposal for welfare, and one or two of the tests would test a "workfare" type proposal. In addition, the bill provides for a test in which a program of rehabilitation of welfare recipients would be administered by vocational rehabilitation personnel.

It is my hope, and the hope of the committee, that these tests would provide a sound basis for rational legislative action in the welfare area. We would also hope that each test would produce data from which could be estimated the various types of costs, the extent of participation, and effectiveness in reducing dependency on welfare which could be expected if such programs were adopted as a substitute for AFDC. The test could also be an informative experience which would facilitate the implementation of any of the test proposals which might eventually be enacted.

The bill would give the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare flexibility in choosing the areas in which the tests are to be conducted. However, it would require that the areas chosen be broadly representative of the country as a whole so that the data from the tests may serve as a reliable basis for future congressional action.

The tests are also to be conducted in such a way that valid comparisons among the various alternatives can be made. The bill therefore requires that the Department conduct the same number of "workfare" tests as "family assistance" tests—either one or two of each. In each pair of tests the beginning and ending dates of the two tests must be the same, the number of participants must be approximately the same, and the areas in which the two tests are conducted must be comparable as to popu-
I would be remiss in not pointing to the great contributions of the junior Senator from Georgia, Senator Talmadge.

Two matters that this Senator would like to bring these tradesmen to determine whether wage subsidies are one effective way of increasing the incomes of the disadvantaged and whether, if they are, the one-check or the two-check approach is preferable. The one-check approach involves passing the subsidy to the employer who includes it in his wage to the worker. The two-check approach envisions a wage supplemented by a payment directly from the welfare office.

Mr. President, I believe this problem of testing is both a responsible and a necessary way of meeting our present welfare crisis. We agree that the present system is bad, but we do not agree that it is so bad that the committee would be preferable merely because it is new or different. We want to find some real answers to the welfare problem and we believe that the way to do this is through careful experiments.

At the same time, we recognize that there are changes in the present legislation which should be made immediately, and we seek to correct them. The worst and most obvious defects.

WORK INCENTIVE PROGRAM

The committee and the administration are in substantial agreement as to the obligation of appropriate welfare recipients to work. The thrust of any welfare reform proposal must encompass the basic proposition that able-bodied welfare recipients should be required to work if child care and meaningful manpower training are provided—and that actual jobs must be available for such people after training.

Mr. President, I think the Congress has now reached the point where it is reluctant to see any more manpower training programs that do not result in jobs for participants. Moreover, the disadvantaged people of this country share this disenchantment—they say in increasing numbers "no more training programs without jobs."

The committee bill adopts almost all of the administration's requests for improvement of the work incentive program. It provides more favorable matching for manpower training expenses and for welfare services which support training, including the vital importance of day care. It also provides registration for employers in the employment service as a condition of welfare eligibility and puts into effect uniform Federal standards for referral of welfare recipients to WIN. All of these elements have been cited by the administration as crucial deficiencies in the work incentive program.

If any bill goes further—and here, I would be reminded pointing to the great contributions of the junior Senator from Georgia, Senator Talmadge. It comes to grips with some of the basic reasons for the failure of WIN which have been very disturbing to the committee. These reasons were the principal architect of the WIN program—I believe I was the initial sponsor of that amend—-and was responsible for the basic decision—that the Department of Labor would administer the manpower training program. However, the committee has been greatly disappointed in the implementation of the manpower training program.

The points of emphasis the Finance Committee thought were made abundantly clear in the 1967 amendments have been paid lip service or totally ignored. A meaningful program of on-the-job training and continues to be an unfilled Labor Department promise. The strictly required program of special work projects—public service employment—is a reality in only one State. Lack of coordination between the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare cooperation and that of their counterparts at the local level has been a major problem in the referral process and in the provision of necessary services to welfare recipients in work and training. The main thrust of the WIN program as it exists today remains in the direction of basic education and classroom training, which our experience with manpower training over the last decade shows does not result in the placement of people in jobs, but rather in a growing skepticism of both welfare recipients and the public as to the worth of such endeavors.

Mr. President, this situation must change. More effective administration must be provided, and WIN's on-the-job training and public service employment components must become a vital part of the program.

It is for this reason the committee bill includes a provision which would require heavy emphasis on these two components. As an alternative, a tax credit mechanism is provided which will link manpower training to the actual provision of jobs. I might say there has been a severe disappointment in the performance of the Department of Labor in accordance with its duties under the law.

The task of training welfare recipients for jobs and actually placing them in employment on a permanent basis is admittedly one of the most difficult tasks facing Government. The committee believes that the changes it is proposing for WIN are important, albeit some of these changes have been made without changes in the law as is. We are also aware that regardless of what the Congress does in this area the ultimate success of the program will, in large measure, be dependent on the dedication of the administrators at the Federal, State, and local level and the resources they are allocated. Thus, we believe it is incumbent upon the Department of Labor to show its commitment to WIN and to provide staffing at the Federal level which is commensurate with its responsibilities as the primary administrator of the program. Moreover, the WIN program must receive the kind of implementation which its importance deserves.

CHILD CARE

The bill also includes proposals which would greatly expand the availability of child care resources throughout the Nation. At the present time the lack of adequate child care represents the single largest impediment to the efforts of poor families, especially those headed by a mother, to achieve economic independence. The committee bill would seek to remove this impediment to participation while at the same time promoting child care facilities for all families which need them, by creating a Federal Child Care Corporation.

Although the Committee on Finance and the Congress, through past amendments to the Social Security Act, have attempted to meet the need for child care, they have been unable to overcome the great lack of organization, initiative and know-how which exists in the child care area. We have provided money, but we have found that money alone will not be enough. We need to move to the Federal, State, and local levels which will respond to both national and local needs for child care. We believe the Federal Child Care Corporation will be such a movement.

The Corporation would have as its first priority making available child care services to children of parents eligible for such services under the AFDC program, and who need them in order to participate in employment or training. However, it would also have the broader function of making child care available for any family which may need it, regardless of welfare status.

The Corporation would work in an uncomplicated way. Under the committee bill, $50 million would be given to the Corporation to provide initial working capital. This amount would be in the form of a loan by the Secretary of the Treasury and would be placed in a revolving fund. The money would be used by the Corporation to begin arranging for child care services. The Corporation would contract with existing public, private nonprofit, and proprietary facilities to serve as child care providers. The Corporation would also give technical assistance and advice to organizations interested in establishing facilities under contract with the Corporation. In addition, the Corporation could provide child care services in its own facilities.

Fees would be charged for all services provided or arranged for by the Corporation. Fees would go into the revolving fund to provide for further development of services and to repay the initial loan. They would be set at a level which would cover the costs to the Corporation and still provide the necessary child care facilities.

We have provided in the bill for construction authority for the Corporation, and would authorize the issuance of bonds for this purpose if new construction is needed. We envisage, however, that this authority will be used sparingly, and that every effort will first be made to utilize existing facilities.

I am deeply concerned about the quality of care which children are to receive, and I therefore want to emphasize that... the bill includes provision for Federal child care standards, to assure that adequate space, staff, and health requirements are met. In addition, facilities used by the Corporation would have to meet the standards of the National Fire Protection Association.

The bill includes inservice training authority, and the committee expects that this authority, along with the training programs under the WIN programs will be used to train welfare mothers, as far as possible, to work in child care programs. This will mean that while some mothers are being freed for work, others will be provided employment directly in child care facilities.

The Corporation, while providing a mechanism for expanding the availability of child care services, would not provide funds to subsidize child care. Those who are able to pay would be charged the full cost of services. The cost of child care needed by families on welfare would be paid by State welfare agencies.

Mr. Mohnihan. The committee bill makes a significant improvement in present law by providing for an increase from 75 percent to 90 percent in the Federal matching share for child care services. The bill would provide a substantial portion of this increase in the cost of services for a temporary period if the Secretary determined that necessary services would not otherwise be available. The 90 percent matching rate would be available to the States for child care for families receiving AFDC and also for past and potential recipients.

Family Planning Services

Mr. President, the committee bill provides for a major advance in enabling welfare recipients to obtain free family planning services by authorizing 100 percent Federal funding for State family planning programs, including both information and the provision of medical services.

As under present law, States would be required to offer family planning services to all appropriate recipients of AFDC. Includes, in addition to the eligible AFDC recipients and those who are likely to become recipients of welfare. Acceptance of services, as under present law, would be voluntary with the recipient.

A beginning has been made as the result of the congressional action in 1967 when 75 percent Federal matching funds was authorized for this purpose. The progress which has been made under these amendments, however, has not met the committee's expectations.

The provisions of the committee bill are consistent with the aims of the amendments adopted by the President in a speech in July '69:

"Most of an estimated five million low income women of childbearing age in this country who have adequate incomes for family planning assistance, even though their wishes concerning family size are usually the same as those of parents of higher income groups. It is my view that no American woman should be denied access to family planning assistance because of her economic condition. I believe, therefore, that we should establish as a national goal the provision of adequate family planning services within the next five years to all those who want them but cannot afford them. We have the capacity to do it.

The committee shares the goal of the President and believes that this is an appropriate step in its fulfillment. It notes that, according to testimony, Federal and other sources, full family planning services can be provided for about $60 per woman per year. This seems a small price to pay for the personal, social, and economic benefits which can be the result of an effective nationwide family planning program.

Emergency Assistance to Migrant Families

Some of the most disadvantaged citizens in our country can be found among migrant workers. When children are involved, the situation calls even more urgently for action, and this action must be of a national nature which is commensurate with the national problem.

Under existing law, emergency assistance to families in desperate need of support for a temporary period is available. The 90 percent Federal matching rate would be available to the States for child care for families receiving AFDC and also for past and potential recipients.

Obligations of Deserting Father

Mr. President, when we discuss welfare reform, we should always remember some of the root causes of the present crisis.

The facts are starting:

In 1969, three out of four families receiving AFDC were eligible because of the father's absence from the home. Think of that—75 percent. One out of six families is on welfare because of the father's desertion. With about 1,500,000 mothers and children are receiving AFDC, this means that about 1,500,000 mothers and children are receiving welfare today because the father of the family has deserted.

An illustration of the impact of desertion is New York where between 1961 and 1968 the cases of deserted or informally separated wives grew by 412 percent.

Nationally, the largest single cause of dependency among children is illegitimacy. In 28 percent of the families receiving AFDC, the mother is not married to the father of the child.

Congress, particularly in the 1967 amendments to the AFDC law, dealt with this aspect of the dependency problem. These measures, however, have failed to stem the explosive growth of the welfare rolls in the past 3 years, a growth largely consisting of families in which the mother either never was a father or in which the father has deserted the family or is otherwise separated from the mother.

During the hearings on the welfare bill, Secretary Richardson was asked his opinion about direct Federal action in desertion cases. He replied:

"We would support legislation which would make it a Federal crime to cross State lines for the purpose of evading parental responsibility. • • • From the standpoint of our Department to make this a Federal crime would help to reduce the problem, we think, and to that extent we would be for it.

The committee considers the provisions of present law useful and feels they should be retained. However, it is clear that the further action the committee would take to permit more extensive involvement of the Federal Government in cases where the father is able to avoid his parental responsibilities by crossing State lines.

Second, the committee bill would provide that an individual who has deserted or abandoned his spouse, child, or children shall owe a monetary obligation to the United States equal to 10 percent of any welfare payments made to the spouse or child during the period of desertion or abandonment.

The bill also provides that information required under the welfare law be furnished on request, by the Federal Government to the deserted spouse where a judgment for support has been obtained.

Daniel P. Moynihan has stated:

"New York where between 1961 and 1968 the cases of deserted or informally separated wives grew by 412 percent. The committee's view is that the right to welfare is no more substantial, and an assumption that welfare is a "property right" rather than a "gratuity" granted as a privilege by the Congress and subject to such eligibility conditions as it sees fit, is one that is being challenged by the welfare system as we know it..."

WORK INCENTIVE TAX CREDIT

Another amendment recommended by the committee provides for a tax credit for persons trained or placed through the work incentive program. The tax credit will amount to 20 percent of the employee's salary for the first year of employment, but it would decline each year by the employee should be discharged in the first year of employment. The committee feels that this amendment, part of a comprehensive revision of the work incentive program, would stimulate jobs for people who today need help from the welfare system for their sustenance.

VETERANS' PENSION INCREASE

The Committee on Finance, in its deliberation on this bill, has continued, as in the past, to be mindful of the special problems of the earlier pension increase. The Committee has included the text of S. 3385, a pension increase bill introduced by Senator HARKEN TALMAGE, chairman of the Subcommittee on Finance. The Talmage bill, incorporating the committee amendment, would increase pension benefits by $160,000,000 above present law, effective January 1971.

Pension increases are required because as social security payments are increased, the veterans need for a pension decreases, although by a considerably smaller amount than the rise in social security benefits. The committee amendments substantially offset these reductions.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, this concludes my prepared statement on the committee bill. I urge that it be approved.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a summary of the principal provisions of the bill.

There being no objection, the summary was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

II. SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

A. SOCIAL SECURITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

1. Provisions of the House bill changed, and new provisions added by the committee

The committee made a number of changes in the provisions of the House-passed bill. These changes affect benefit and retirement provisions.

In a number of cases, the committee bill would modify or eliminate provisions of the House bill affecting select groups of beneficiaries; these changes would help make possible a 10-percent across-the-board benefit increase compared with the 5-percent increase in the House bill. Other provisions in the committee bill include a $100 minimum benefit, an increase in the benefit for widows in the year of the death of a husband aged 62, a new computation point for men, liberalization of the retirement test, an increase in the maximum amount payable to a family, a reduction in the waiting period for disability benefits, and other less far-reaching but nonetheless important changes.

Social security payments to the nearly 20 million beneficiaries on the rolls at the end of January 1971, and to those who come on the rolls after that date, are to be increased by 10 percent, with a new minimum benefit of $100. (The House-passed bill would have increased benefits by 5 percent, with a minimum benefit of $67.20.)

The benefit increase would be effective for the month of January 1971, but would not be paid until April, and would mean additional benefit payments of $5.0 billion in the current year.

Increased Widows' and Widowers' Insurance Benefits

Under present law, when benefits begin at or after age 62 the benefit for a widow or widower payable to a dependent who was 62 or older when the deceased worker died would be 50 percent of the amount the deceased worker would have received if his benefit had started at age 65. A widow can get a benefit at age 60 reduced to take account of the additional 2 years in which she would be getting benefits.

Under the House bill and the committee bill are aimed at providing benefits to a widow equal to the benefits her husband was receiving, or would have been brought to the committee's attention, however, that in some cases the widow, under the House bill, would actually receive a benefit substantially higher than her husband received before his death. Under the House bill, a widow would be entitled to 100 percent of the amount her deceased husband would receive if he became a beneficiary after reaching age 65. On the other hand, actually lower benefits would be spanning age 65, his benefits would be actually lower. For example, a man entitled to $150 monthly if he retires at age 65 would receive reduced benefits when he retires 18 months before reaching age 65. Under the House bill, his widow age 65 or older would receive $150 if the rules of $150; under the committee bill, she would receive $135, as did her husband. Generally, under the committee bill the widow would receive either 100 percent of the benefit her husband was actually receiving at the time of his death or, if he was not receiving benefits, 100 percent of the benefit he would have been eligible for at age 65.

About 2.7 million widows and widowers on the rolls at that time would receive additional benefits, and $645 million in additional benefit payments would be made in the first full year.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Cost-of-Living Increases

The House-passed bill would have provided for cost-of-living increases in benefits and in the related indexes for compensation and in the exempt amount under the retirement test which would have subordinated the role of cost increases in determining benefit levels. The committee has recommended increases in the social security tax rates and in the tax base, with the rates performed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The committee bill would provide that the automatic benefit increases would not go into effect if in the year before the year in which the increase was to be effective Congress and the President had disallowed any automatic increases in social security benefit levels, or a change in the schedule of social security tax rates, or a change in the schedule of social security tax rates, or a change in the schedule of social security tax rates, or a change in the schedule of social security tax rates.

Age 62 Computation Point for Men

Under present law, the method of computing benefits for men and women differs in several respects. The age 65 must be taken into account in determining benefits for men, while for women, only years up to age 65 must be taken into account. Also, benefit eligibility is determined by years of coverage up to age 62 for men and up to age 62 for women. These differences which provide special advantages for women would be eliminated under the committee bill and under the House-passed bill by applying the same rules to men as now apply to women.

The House-passed change would apply immediately to those already on the rolls as well as to all new entrants in the future. Under the committee's bill, there would be a gradual transition to the new procedures so that the provision would not become effective until the credits earned in benefits in the future, the number of years used in determining insured status and in computing benefits, those becoming entitled in benefits in the future; the number of years used in determining the worker's benefits would range from 1.5 to 1.88 times the worker's average earnings at age 65.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Actuarial Reduction for Women

Under present law when a woman applies before age 65 for a retirement benefit based on her own earnings, her benefits are actuarially reduced to take account of the longer period over which benefits will be paid. If she subsequently applies for a husband's benefit after reaching age 65, her wife's benefits are also reduced to reflect the fact that she began to receive benefits before age 65. The committee bill would eliminate actuarial reduction in such cases; the committee bill would retain the provisions of present law.

Benefits for Divorced Women

The committee broadened the provisions of present law which require that in order to qualify for benefits as a divorced wife, divorced widow or a surviving child of a former husband, (1) she must be residing with the worker, (2) she must have been married to the worker for at least one-half of her support from her former husband, (3) she was receiving at least one-half of her support from her former husband, or (4) there was a court order in effect providing for substantial contributions to her support by her former husband. The House-passed bill would delete these requirements.

Waiting Period for Disability Benefits

Under present law there is a six-month waiting period before a disabled person is eligible for social security disability insurance benefits. The committee bill added to the House bill a provision to reduce the waiting period for disability benefits by two months, so that benefits would be payable on the basis of a four-month waiting period, rather than a six-month period.

About 140,000 people—disabled workers and their dependents and disabled widows and widowers—would be able to receive a benefit for a result of this provision. About $188 million in additional benefits would be paid out during the first full year.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Childhood Disability Benefits

The committee bill, like the House bill, would provide childhood disability benefits for the disabled child of an insured retired, deceased, or disabled worker, if his disability began before age 22, rather than before 18 as under present law. The committee added a new provision to permit a person who was entitled to childhood disability benefits to become re-entitled if he again becomes disabled with no prior entitlement to such benefits was terminated.

About 13,000 people—disabled children and their mothers, who are immediately becoming eligible for benefits, primarily as a result of extending the age limit to 22. About $13 million in additional benefits would be paid out during the first full year.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Disability Benefits Affected by the Receipt of Workmen's Compensation

The committee bill modifies the workmen's compensation offset provisions to raise the ceiling on income from combined workmen's compensation and disability insurance benefits from 80 percent to 100 percent of the disabled worker's average current earnings before tax.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Disability Insurance Benefits for the Blind

The House-passed bill contained a provision which would eliminate the general eligibility requirement for blindness. Under present law when a woman applies for the first time to receive benefits, the provisions of the Social Security Act. The committee bill revises the requirements for disability insurance benefits for blind people. Under the committee revision, disability insurance benefits would be payable to any blind person (as defined in the law) who has credit for at least 4 quarters of social security coverage, regardless of his ability to work. About 225,000 people, blind workers and their dependents, would become immediately eligible for monthly benefits. About $225 million in disability benefits would be paid out during the first full year.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Adoption of Child by Retired or Disabled Worker

Under present law a child generally is adopted by the committee bill, the child, adopted when a natural child or a stepchild) who is adopted payment of benefits to a child (other than a natural child or a stepchild) who is adopted by a disability insurance beneficiary after the latter becomes entitled to benefits.

Effective date—January 1, 1971.

Refund of Social Security Tax to Members of the Sect

Under the present law the sect provided for noncontributory social security wage credits to members of the sect who are "em-
For 1971 about 650,000 beneficiaries would receive additional benefits, and about 380,000 persons who would receive no benefits under present law would receive some benefits. Additional benefit payments for the first full year would be about $404 million.

Effective date.—Taxable years ending after 1971.

Disability Insurance Benefits Applications Filed After Death
The committee bill would permit disability insurance benefits (and dependents' benefits based on the dependents' entitlement to disability benefits) to be paid to the disabled worker's survivors if an application for benefits is filed within 36 months after the disabled worker's death.

Effective date.—Deaths in and after year of enactment.

Penalty for Furnishing False Information To Obtain a Social Security Number
Under present law, penalties are not provided for individuals who give false information in order to secure multiple social security numbers with an intent to conceal their true identities. This has led to a number of problems in private industry and in the administration of the social security program. Therefore, the committee bill, like the House bill, would provide criminal penalties if an individual furnishes false information with the intent to deceive the administration of Health, Education, and Welfare for the purpose of obtaining more than one social security number and in earnings levels; and (c) that for medical supplies, equipment, and services, that, in the judgment of the Secretary, generally do not vary significantly in quality from one supplier to another, charges allowed as reasonable may not exceed the lower levels at which such supplies, equipment, and services are widely available in a locality.

Termination of Payments to Suppliers of Services Who Abuse the Medicare Program
The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be given authority to terminate payment for services rendered by a supplier of health and medical services found to be guilty of fraud. An administrative appeal of such determination, and a review team would be established to furnish the Secretary professional advice in carrying out this authority.

Repeal of Medicaid Provision Requiring Expanded Programs
The requirement in present law that States have comprehensive Medicaid programs by 1977 would be repealed.

State Determination of Reasonable Hospital Costs
States would be permitted to pay hospitals on the basis of their own determination of reasonable hospital costs. The Secretary, in consultation with the National Commission on Medicare and Medicaid, would determine physician referral patterns and the medical charge level in each locality, and the prevailing charge level in a locality may not be increased by the Secretary, unless the Medicare allowance for physicians' services is increased by 10 percent.

Federal Matching for Modern Claims Processing Systems
The Secretary would be given authority to terminate payment for services rendered by a supplier of health and medical services found to be guilty of fraud. An administrative appeal of such determination, and a review team would be established to furnish the Secretary professional advice in carrying out this authority.

The committee modified the limitation on reimbursement for institutional therapy services to a "salary related" basis, and also extended the limitation to apply to other therapists, diabeticians, social workers and medical records librarians for their services provided in an institutional setting.

Medicare Benefits for People Living Near U.S. Border

The House bill provides that Medicare beneficiaries living in the border areas of the United States would not be eligible for inpatient hospital care if the hospital they use is closer to their residence than a comparable U.S. hospital. Also, the House bill would be accredited by a hospital approval program with standards comparable to Medicare standards. The committee added to the House bill a provision extending coverage in these cases to physicians' and ambulance services furnished in conjunction with covered foreign nursing facilities.

3. New provisions added by the committee

Professional Standards Review Organizations

The committee provided for the establishment of Professional Standards Review Organizations (PSROs) to represent substantial numbers of practicing physicians in local areas to assume responsibility for comprehensive and ongoing review of Medicare and Medicaid programs. The purpose of the amendment is to assure proper utilization of care services provided in Medicare and Medicaid through a formal professional mechanism representing the broadest possible cross-section of physicians in an area. To date, only one third of PSROs have been established.

Community mental health centers, and ambulatory care facilities.

Medicare beneficiaries could choose to have their care provided by a health maintenance organization (a prepaid group health or other capitalization plan), Medicare would contract with such an organization, and would reimburse them on a capitalization basis at a rate equivalent to the per capita costs of Medicare beneficiaries in the area with actuarial adjustments taking into account variations in patient mix. Provisions accruing to the organization, beyond their retention rate for non-Medicare members would be passed to the Medicare enrollees in the form of capitalization. The committee substantially tightened the provision so as to define more specifically the quality standards and other mechanisms which would apply to the organizations as well as including additional safeguards against potential abuse of capitalization.

Physical and Other Therapy Services Under Medicare

The committee removed the provision in the House bill which would authorize reimbursement up to $100 for physical therapy services in a therapist's office.

The committee modified the limitation on reimbursement for institutional therapy services to a "salary equivalent" to a "salary related" basis, and also extended the limitation to apply to other therapists, diabeticians, social workers and medical records librarians for their services provided in an institutional setting.

To date, only one third of PSROs have been established.

Community mental health centers, and ambulatory care facilities.

Medicare beneficiaries could choose to have their care provided by a health maintenance organization (a prepaid group health or other capitalization plan), Medicare would contract with such an organization, and would reimburse them on a capitalization basis at a rate equivalent to the per capita costs of Medicare beneficiaries in the area with actuarial adjustments taking into account variations in patient mix. Provisions accruing to the organization, beyond their retention rate for non-Medicare members would be passed to the Medicare enrollees in the form of capitalization. The committee substantially tightened the provision so as to define more specifically the quality standards and other mechanisms which would apply to the organizations as well as including additional safeguards against potential abuse of capitalization.

Physical and Other Therapy Services Under Medicare

bursement up to $100 for physical therapy services in a therapist's office.

The committee modified the limitation on reimbursement for institutional therapy services to a "salary equivalent" to a "salary related" basis, and also extended the limitation to apply to other therapists, diabeticians, social workers and medical records librarians for their services provided in an institutional setting.

Medicare Benefits for People Living Near U.S. Border

The House bill provides that Medicare beneficiaries living in the border areas of the United States would not be eligible for inpatient hospital care if the hospital they use is closer to their residence than a comparable U.S. hospital. Also, the House bill would be accredited by a hospital approval program with standards comparable to Medicare standards. The committee added to the House bill a provision extending coverage in these cases to physicians' and ambulance services furnished in conjunction with covered foreign nursing facilities.

Professional Standards Review Organizations

The committee provided for the establishment of Professional Standards Review Organizations (PSROs) to represent substantial numbers of practicing physicians in local areas to assume responsibility for comprehensive and ongoing review of Medicare and Medicaid programs. The purpose of the amendment is to assure proper utilization of care services provided in Medicare and Medicaid through a formal professional mechanism representing the broadest possible cross-section of physicians in an area. To date, only one third of PSROs have been established.

The House bill provides that Medicare beneficiaries living in the border areas of the United States would not be eligible for inpatient hospital care if the hospital they use is closer to their residence than a comparable U.S. hospital. Also, the House bill would be accredited by a hospital approval program with standards comparable to Medicare standards. The committee added to the House bill a provision extending coverage in these cases to physicians' and ambulance services furnished in conjunction with covered foreign nursing facilities.
The committee also provided that anyone who knowingly or willfully makes, or induces, the taking of any false statement of fact in any application for medicare or medicaid payments, to include the soliciting, offering, or acceptance of kickbacks or bribes, including the fixing of a fee or the payment of a fee for a patient referral, by providers of health care services. The penalty for such acts, as well as the acts currently subject to penalty under sections 1902(a)(19) and (20), is imprisonment of up to one year, a fine of $10,000, or both. Inclusion of American Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands Under Title XIX

The committee bill would include the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and American Samoa as eligible to receive funds under title XIX for medicaid and crippled children programs (title V).

Provision for Reasonable Approval of Rural Hospitals

The committee added to the House bill a provision that authorizes the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to waive, on an annual basis, the requirement that hospitals have registered professional nurses on duty at all times. The committee believed that such a provision would seriously reduce the availability of hospital services to beneficiaries residing in rural areas. The waiver authority would expire December 31, 1975.

Consultants for Extended Care Facilities

The committee added to the House bill a provision for the designation of State agencies to provide consultative services to those extended care facilities which request their assistance. The committee believed that such services would help to assure the provision of dietary and social services. Medicare payment would be made only if the facilities were found to be in compliance with all requirements in rendering these consultative services. The provision of such services by the States would satisfy the medicare requirements relating to the use of consultants in the appropriate specialty areas.

Public Access to Records Concerning Inspectors' Qualifications

The committee added to the House bill a provision under which the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to designate an independent inspector to conduct inspections of an institution's significant deficiencies (such as deficiencies in the areas of staffing, fire, safety, and sanitation) a matter of public record readily and generally available at public library and other public availability. The committee mandated that such inspections be conducted in that State under medicare for reimbursement of skilled nursing care, if the Secretary finds that they are based upon reasonable analyses of costs of care in comparable facilities.

Authorization for Establishing Liens to Permit Refund of Excess Medicare Payments

The committee added a provision to the House bill to facilitate the recoupment of overpayments to providers of services by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, when he determines it to be necessary for purposes of recovering an overpayment to a provider, to establish a period of time (not to exceed 180 days) during which the amount of the overpayment, preserving in the course of such action the right of the provider to contest the amount of the overpayment and to seek release of the lien to be directly to the State agency for the costs incurred in rendering these consultative services. Medicare payment would be made to the State agency for the costs incurred in rendering these consultative services.

The committee added to the House bill an amendment that would authorize direct payment to laboratories for diagnostic tests at a negotiated rate provided that such rate does not exceed the amount which is payable under present law.

Refund of Excess Medicare Premiums

The committee would authorize the refunding of excess medicare premiums paid prior to a beneficiary's death.

Waiver of Recovery of Erroneous Payment

The committee provisions would limit medicare's recovery of erroneous payment to a three-year period from the date of the payment, prohibiting recovery of recoverable amounts.

Provider Reimbursement Appeals Board

The committee amendment would establish an appeals board to hear appeals on reimbursement decisions made by intermediaries, under certain conditions, where the amount at issue was $10,000 or more.

Prosthetic Lenses Furnished by Optometrists

The committee amended the definition of physician in medicare to include a licensed doctor of osteopathy, but only with respect to establishing the medical necessity of prosthetic lenses.

Chiropractors

The committee amendment would delete the study of chiropractic services called for in the House bill and would substitute a provision calling for the coverage under medicare of services involving manipulation of the spine by licensed chiropractors. The committee believed that chiropractors meet certain minimum standards established by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

The same limitations on chiropractic services would also be applicable to States providing such care under medicare.

Colostomy Supplies

The committee provided for the inclusion of materials directly related to the care of colostomy patients as a reimbursable expense under medicare.

Section 1902(d)

The committee amendment provided for the repeal of section 1902(d) (which requires States to maintain their level of fiscal expenditures from year-to-year) of the Social Security Act. Thereafter, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would have discretion to determine the level of fiscal expenditures for the financial year to which the provisions of the section would apply.

Increase in Maximum Federal Medicaid Matching for Puerto Rico

The committee would provide that at least 30 million under the committee provision.

The $20 million ceiling on Federal medicare matching funds would be increased to $30 million under the committee provision.

Health Screening of Children

The committee would authorize the Secretary to establish orderly priorities in the implementation of the presently required health screening for children programs, subject to the approval of the Secretary.

Intermediate Care Facilities

Under the committee amendment, the intermediate care facility program would be transferred from title XI to title XIX. An ICF would be required to have at least one full-time licensed practical nurse on its staff, and care in ICF's would be subject to professional audit and utilization review requirements. The committee would also authorize receiving active treatment in public institutions meeting appropriate standards established by H.E.W. would be eligible for Federal matching funds.

Termination of Nursing Home Administrators

The committee amendment would provide that any nursing home is required to accept claims for underpayment within a reasonable period of time (not to exceed 180 days) after which medicare would not be liable for the amount paid under such claims.

Refunding of Excess Medicare Premiums

The committee amendment would authorize the refunding of excess medicare premiums paid prior to a beneficiary's death.

Waiver of Recovery of Erroneous Payment

The committee provisions would limit medicare's recovery of erroneous payment to a three-year period from the date of the payment, prohibiting recovery of recoverable amounts.

0. FINANCING OF SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS

In order to pay for the additional costs of the trust fund the changes proposed in the committee bill, including the new catastrophic insurance program, and the existing actuarial deficit in the hospital insurance program, the social security tax base would be increased from $7,800 a year to $9,000 a year, starting January 1, 1971, as in the House-passed bill.

In addition, a new schedule of taxes would be provided. Like the schedule of taxes proposed in the House bill, the committee bill would decrease the taxes paid under the cash benefits program over the next few years, and increase the taxes paid under the hospital insurance program. Also, the committee bill provides an additional tax of 0.3 percent in 1972, rising to 0.4 percent in 1980 to pay for the catastrophic illness insurance provided in the bill.

E. TRADE ACT OF 1970

Purposes

The committee's trade amendment (Title III of this bill) is derived, with changes, from H.R. 18970 which passed the House of Representatives on November 19, 1970.

In brief, the general purposes of the Committee's trade amendment are:

1. To provide to the President limited and temporary tariff-reducing authority for compensatory purposes until July 1, 1975; and

2. To strengthen our unfair trade practice statutes and thus enable industry and workers who are adversely affected by unfair foreign trade practices to receive a fair opportunity for relief.

3. To revise the adjustment assistance and tariff adjustment procedures and criteria in the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, and provide a fair opportunity for industries, firms, and workers to receive adequate and prompt relief;

4. To provide for the importation of textiles and footwear, unless: (a) the President finds them not to be in the national interest or (b) voluntary agreements limiting such imports are compatible with the national security, or with foreign government, requirements.

5. To make various changes in our tariff and trade laws which will streamline the procedures dealing with import issues; and

6. To terminate the existing procedures dealing with import issues.

Trade Agreement Authority

The President's trade agreement authority under the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 terminated at the close of June 30, 1967. The President has been without such authority since that time. The committee, at the request of the Congress, on November 18, 1969, requested renewal of the authority, including new and revised terms.

The committee amendment would extend the President's authority to enter into new trade agreements, or to revitalize past trade agreements, under the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 to July 1, 1975. The President is given new authority to reduce duties by as much as 65 percent in 2 years, provided that the terms provide for the major benefits to remain for at least two stages.

D. FINANCING OF SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUNDS

The committee amendment would limit the President's authority to enter into and carry out new trade agreements or to revitalize past trade agreements in which compensatory concessions are necessary to offset the effects of an increase in foreign duties under existing or new restrictions placed on U.S. goods by the United States or other countries under Section 301 of the Kennedy Round of trade negotiations. The agreement provisions or restrictions agreed to would decrease the taxes paid under the cash benefits program.

The changes provided under the program would be effective at the same time as the provisions of the Kennedy Round reduction.

Other Presidential Authority

Concern has been expressed about the barriers to adjustment faced by American workers in a particular product or material are less rigid the criteria for determining serious injury and increased imports are met in title III both for tariff adjustment for industries and adjustment assistance in the case of firms or groups of workers.

Tariff Adjustment and Adjustment Assistance

The new basis for determining serious injury are the same for tariff adjustment for industries and adjustment assistance.

Tariff Adjustment. In present law, the criteria for determining serious injury are too stringent. Under the new provision, the Tariff Commission, in the case of tariff adjustment, the President, in the case of adjustment assistance, shall determine whether increased imports "contribute substantially" toward causing or threatening to cause serious injury. In the case of tariff adjustment, the committee provided that increased imports must be related in whole or in part to the duty or other customs treatment reflecting tariff concessions agreed to by the United States.

If serious injury is found to an industry, those Commissioners finding injury are to make an additional determination under the new provision. This additional determination will be in the affirmative if the Tariff Commission finds that imports of the article are: (1) acutely or severely injuring a domestic industry or (2) threatening to acutely or severely injure a domestic industry.

A majority of the Commissioners present and voting to be required for an affirmative determination, and a majority of those Commissioners finding injury under the criteria provided must determine the type of adjustment required to remedy the injury.

When the Commission finds and reports to the President an affirmative injury determination, the President is required to take such action as he deems necessary to prevent or remedy the injury so found unless he determines that such action is not in the national interest. In such a case, he must make an affirmative determination by the Commission on the question of acute or severe injury, the President is required to impose the duties and restrictions the President finds necessary to prevent or remedy the acute or severe injury unless he determines such action is not in the national interest. As is presently provided, if the President does not make effective the remedy determined by the Tariff Commission, he must report to the Congress within 60 days of the receipt of the Tariff Commission's report and findings. In such case, the existing provisions of the Trade Expansion Act would apply as the Congressional implementation of the Tariff Commission finding as to the action necessary to prevent or remedy the injury would continue to apply.

Section 352 of the Trade Expansion Act with regard to orderly marketing agreements a factual report to assist the President at any time, negotiate such agreements on articles subject to tariff adjustment or upon articles subject to safeguarding action, shall receive an affirmative injury determination.

New review procedures on pending tariff adjustment action are provided. In any review, the Tariff Commission shall in such tariff adjustment actions, it must include information on steps taken by firms and workers to apply for and receive the assistance of the President under the act. In addition, in any review of tariff adjustment actions by the Tariff Commission, the President may determine to extend, in whole or in part, or terminate such actions, the Commission shall be required to determine whether the existing restrictions on imports are sufficient to prevent or remedy injury to the domestic industry.

Tariff Adjustment Assistance. When the President, the committee amendment amends the procedures for petitions by firms or groups of workers to provide that petitions by firms or workers are to be made to the President rather than to the Tariff Commission. The Tariff Commission will continue to receive the petitions, but the President shall be responsible for making his determination as to eligibility of firms and groups of workers to apply for adjustment assistance.

The amendment provides increased trade adjustment allowances payable to adversely affected workers. Under existing law, the allowances are 65 percent of the average weekly wage or 65 percent of the average weekly manufacturing wage, whichever is lower. The amendment provides such allowances of at least two stages.

The amendment provides that the President does not provide tariff adjustment for an industry after an affirmative injury determination by the Tariff Commission, he is required to provide that the firms and workers in that industry may request certification of eligibility for adjustment assistance.

The committee also provided the Tariff Commission with a period of 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act to make the necessary changes in its rules and regulations to implement this provision. At the end of this period, the Tariff Commission shall make the tariff adjustment and adjustment assistance petitions filed under the provisions of this Act. No petition may be filed (under section 301) of the Trade Expansion Act until the Tariff Commission is sued new rules and regulations, which must be published 90 days after such enactment.

Quotas on Certain Textile and Footwear Articles

We believe that the tariff adjustment and amendment described above will be insuficient to deal with competitive situations facing many domestic producers in the economy. However, the effects of rapidly increasing imports on two basic industries are such as to require extraordinary measures. Part B of title III of this bill deals with the extremely serious threat to the textile and apparel industry and to the nonrubber footwear industry.

Under part B of title III, the total quotas on imports of cotton textile or footwear articles are to be limited by category and by country beginning in the year 1971. For the year 1971, the total quotas on imports of cotton textile articles or footwear articles is to be limited to the quantity determined for the preceding year plus an increase determined by the President. Any such increase is to be limited to a percentage not over 5 percent of the total quantity permitted to be entered in the immediately preceding year as the President determines to be consistent with the purposes of this act.

The President is authorized to exempt from quotas imports of articles: (1) which he determines are not disrupting the U.S. market, (2) when he determines that the national interest requires such action, or (3) when he finds that the supply of such articles in the United States is insufficient to meet demand at reasonable prices.

In addition, the President is authorized to impose import duties on cotton textile or footwear articles on a voluntary basis. Imports covered by such agreements would also be exempt from quotas. Such duties are to be limited to the quantity determined for the existing Long Term Arrangements on Cotton Textile and Footwear.

Determination with respect to the establishment of or change in quantitative limitations or exemptions from such limitations, other than those made by the President, would be subject to the rulemaking provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act.

The quota provisions in the bill would terminate on July 1, 1976, unless the President finds that the supply of such articles in the United States is limited. Countervailing duties would be imposed if the Secretary determines that such limitations are not an adequate substitute for a countervailing duty with respect to the article in question.

Tariff Commission

In view of the added investigative and statutory responsibilities of the Commission, which will result from this legislation and in view of the concern of the committee to protect the independent nature of the Tariff Commission, the committee provided, in effect, that the Tariff Commission's budget shall be directly appropriated by the Congress (as is the budget of other independent agencies such as the General Accounting Office), and that the Executive shall not have the authority to reorganize the Commission. The committee bill also would direct the Tariff Commission to do a number of studies which could, in the groundwork for a fresh approach to U.S. trade problems and agreements.

Comprehensive Studies by the President and the Tariff Commission

There are a number of pending problems in the field of international trade which require intensive study. One such problem is the apparent lack of balance and reciprocity in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The presently constituted GATT agreement contains provisions that were written in 1947 when the United States had an overwhelmingly dominant position in world trade and was determined at that time to put more dollars in the hands of the then war-torn European countries. The international economic positions of Europe, Japan, and the United States have changed so radically since the end of World War II that a new executive agreement incorporating the provisions of the GATT agreement into all trade and investment matters appears to be desirable. As a first step toward the reality of the latter, the committee bill authorizes and directs the executive branch and the Tariff Commission to conduct a series of studies concerning the positions in world trade and the rules under which trading nations can freely and fairly compete. It is expected that this series of studies will lead to concrete negotiating proposals to the Congress and ultimately to new agreements and machinery for coping with all trade and investment problems.

Foreign Trade Statistics

The committee trade amendment also provides for the collection and publication of U.S. export and import statistics and for the use of current f.o.b. value and thus include the cost of insurance, freight and other charges associated with c.i.f. value. This is the practice recommended by all countries by the United Nations and the International Monetary Fund for comparing balance of trade statistics. Over 100 countries have agreed to use the same f.o.b.-c.i.f. basis of measuring imports; only the United States and a few other countries use the free on board (f.o.b.) system, under which imports are tabulated at their price in the foreign port.

The committee amendment also provides that the bill will be amended to include the乌.S. exports, which are financed wholly by Government grants and credits, should be shown separately from other exports on all monthly statistics which are published by the Department of Commerce.

Miscellaneous Trade Provisions

The committee trade amendment also would provide certain tariff-rate quota concessions for certain raw materials and related products and on mink fur.

The committee also provided a quarterly allocation of meat import quotas and closes the movement of boneless, chilled, and frozen beef and veal. The committee amendment does not extend the current multiple-use arrangements for other products not currently under quota.

The committee amendment also provides that additional invoice information will be required on shipments entering for the purpose of statistical classification of imports.

The committee amendment also would restructure the rate of duty on parts of old binders.

A new provision of law would authorize the President to impose a suspension of trade with a nation which permits the uncontrolled or unregulated production of or trafficking in certain drugs in a manner to permit these drugs to fall into illicit commerce and ultimately to new agreements and markets.

The committee amendment also provides that the President must issue a report on the U.S. position in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade amendment also.

1. Aid to the aged, blind, and disabled

National Minimum Income Standards for the Needy Aged, Blind, and Disabled

The committee bill would establish a national minimum income standard for families who receive cash assistance under federally matched State welfare programs for the needy aged, blind, and disabled. States would be required to provide a level of assistance sufficient to assure persons in these categories a total monthly income from all sources of at least $30 for a single individual or $60 for a couple. In the aged category this provision would allow the Governor to provide for a couple. In the aged category this provision would allow the Governor to provide for the needy aged, blind, and disabled States would be required to provide a level of assistance sufficient to assure persons in these categories a total monthly income from all sources of at least $130 for a single individual or $200 for a couple. In the aged category this provision would also provide for the needy aged, blind, and disabled persons more cash in lieu of food stamps.

Pass-Along of Social Security Increases to Welfare Recipients

Under other provisions of the bill, the social security benefit increases are to be passed on to the needy aged, blind, and disabled persons who receive cash assistance under federally matched State welfare programs for the needy aged, blind, and disabled. States would be required to provide a level of assistance sufficient to assure persons in these categories a total monthly income from all sources of at least $130 for a single individual or $200 for a couple. In the aged category this provision would also provide for the needy aged, blind, and disabled persons more cash in lieu of food stamps.

no benefit from these substantial increases in social security since offsetting reductions would be made in their welfare grants. To the extent that the individuals would not at least some benefit from the social security increases, the committee bill requires States to raise their standards of need for those whose disability or blindness results by $10 per month for a single individual and $15 per month for a couple. As a result of the bill, States would be required to provide a medically or physically disabled, or who are also social security beneficiaries, would enjoy an increased monthly income of at least $10 ($15 in the case of a couple).

DEFINITIONS OF BLINDNESS AND DISABILITY

The committee bill provides for the establishment of nationally uniform definitions of the federally matched programs of assistance to the blind and disabled. The definitions adopted are those already applied in the disability insurance program established under title II of the Social Security Act.

The term “disability” would be defined by the committee bill as “inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment which can be expected to result in death or has lasted or can be expected to last for a continuous period of not less than 12 months, notwithstanding the official of the meaning of “substantial gainful activity.”

The term “blindness” would be defined as “central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with the use of correcting lens.” Also included in this definition would be the particular sight limitation which is referred to as “tunnel vision.”

Under present law each State is free to provide a different definition of blindness and disability, and the committee bill would permit States to continue to assist individuals who are now on the rolls under the existing programs but whose eligibility would not be considered blind or disabled under the new Federal definitions.

Prohibition of Liens in the Program of Aid to the Blind

The committee bill would prohibit any State from imposing a lien on a blind individual's property as a condition of his receiving Federal funds under the Aid to the Blind welfare payments. Present law leaves the matter of liens up to the discretion of the States.

Fiscal Relief for the States

The committee bill includes a provision which generally would not require States in furnishing assistance to the aged, blind, and disabled to spend more than 90 percent of their expenditures for this purpose in calendar year 1970. The 10 percent savings would be paid from Federal funds as follows:

1. Federal Child Care Corporation

As a mechanism to expand the availability of child care services, the bill would establish a Federal program to make grants to States to provide child care services to children of parents eligible for services under the AFDC program. However, the Secretary would be required to (a) participate in arrangements to encourage States to participate in employment or training. However, it would also have the broader function of making child care available for any family which may need it, regardless of welfare status.

The bill provides for $50 million as initial working capital for the Corporation. This amount would be in the form of a loan by the Secretary of the Treasury and would be placed in a revolving fund. The fund would be used by the Corporation to begin arranging for child care services. Initially, the Corporation would contract with existing public, private nonprofit, and proprietary facilities to serve as child care providers. To expand services, the Corporation would also give technical assistance and advice to organizations interested in establishing facilities under contract with the Corporation. In addition, the Corporation could provide child care services in its own facilities.

Fees would be charged for all services provided or approved by the Corporation. The fees would go into the revolving fund to provide capital for further development of services and for repayment of the Corporation's loan. The fees would be set at a level which would cover the costs to the Corporation of arranging child care.

The bill also includes a provision which authorizes the Corporation to issue bonds for construction. If, after the first two years of operation, the Corporation feels that additional funds for capital construction of child care facilities are needed, up to $50 million in bonds would be issued at 100 percent Federal financing. The proceeds would be set at a level which would cover the costs to the Corporation of arranging child care.

Funds resulting from operating the Corporation would be placed in a revolving fund. The money would otherwise be unavailable. The 90 percent matching rate would be available to the States for child care facilities, the bulletin program, and the Federal share of public service employment.

central visual acuity of 20/200 or less in the better eye with the use of correcting lens.
Registration of Welfare Recipients and Referral for Work and Training

Under present law, all "appropriate" welfare recipients would be referred to the welfare agency to the Labor Department for participation in the Work Incentive Program. Certain categories of persons are stat-tutorily exempted from this program, but many of the rest may volunteer to participate in the Work Incentive Program even if the State welfare agency finds them inappropriate for mandatory referral.

Another criticism of the program has been that the State application of those standards of "appropriateness" for the program have resulted in widely differing rates of referrals and program participation. The committee's bill would eliminate this situation with a series of amendments. First, it would require welfare recipients to register with the Labor Department as a condition of welfare eligibility; under present law, they need not do so unless they fit within one of the following categories:

1. Children who are under age 16 or attended school;

2. Persons who are ill, incapacitated or of advanced age;

3. Persons remote from a WIN project that their effective participation is predicted;

4. Persons whose presence in the home is not necessary because of illness or incapacity of another member of the household; and

5. Mothers with children of preschool age.

At least 15 percent of the registrants in each State would be required to be prepared by the welfare agency for training and re-forcement of the Work Plan for each year; States failing to meet this percentage would be subject to a decrease in Federal matching funds for aid to families with dependent children. The committee's bill would also establish a clear statutory basis in determining which individuals would receive employment or training, and "by generally requiring the Department of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare and their counterparts at the local level. The committee's bill would require a separate WIN unit in each area to be established as a joint panel of employment agencies and manpower agencies in preparing employability plans for WIN participants and in program planning generally.

Earned Income Disregard

Under present law States are required, in determining income for eligibility with Dependent Children, to disregard the first $300 monthly earned by an adult plus one-third of additional earnings. Costs related to work required under the program, however, are also deducted from earnings in calculating the amount of the welfare benefit.

Two provisions are included concerning the earned income disregared under present law. First, Federal law neither defines nor limits what may be considered a work-related expense, and this has led to great variation among States and to some cases of abuse. Second, some States have complained that the lack of an upper limit on the earned income disregard has the effect of keeping people on welfare even after they are working full-time at wages well above the poverty line.

The committee bill would deal with both of these problems by changing the earnings disregard formula and by allowing only day care as a separate deductible work expense (with reasonable limitations on the amount allowable). Under the committee bill, States would be required to disregard the first $600 earned monthly by an individual. In the case of an individual working part time, plus one-third of the next $300 earned plus one-fifth of amounts earned above this.

Family Planning services

Under present law, family planning services must be offered all appropriate welfare recipients; 75 percent Federal matching is available in meeting the cost of family planning services. The committee's bill would provide 100 percent Federal funding for family planning services offered recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children. In addition, there would be 100 percent Federal funding as the State's option, for those who were once welfare recipients or who are likely to become welfare recipients.

5. Emergency assistance for migrant families

The bill would require the States to establish State-wide programs to provide emergency assistance to needy migrant families with children. The Federal matching rate would be 75 percent. Under present law the establishment of programs for migrant families is optional with the States, and the Federal share is 50 percent. As under the existing program, assistance could be in the form of money payments or payments in kind. Assistance would be limited to a period not to exceed 30 days in any 12-month period.

6. Obligation of a deserting father

Present law requires that if the State welfare agency undertake to establish the paternity of each child receiving welfare who was born out of wedlock to secure support for him; if the child has been deserted or abandoned by his parent, the welfare agency is required to secure support for the child from the deserting or absent parent. Under the internal arrangements adopted with other States to obtain or enforce court orders for support. The full Federal match is required to enter into cooperative arrangements with the courts and with law enforcement officials to carry this program. Access is authorized to both Social Security and Internal Revenue Service records in locating deserting parents.

The committee added to these provisions an amendment which would make it a Federal misdemeanor for a father to cross State lines in order to avoid his family responsibilities.

In addition, the committee bill also provides that an individual who has deserted or abandoned his spouse, child, or children shall owe a monetary obligation to the United States to the extent of the property payments made to the spouse or child during the period of desertion or abandonment. In these cases the Federal Government has assumed an order for the support and mainteance of the deserted spouse or children, the obligations of the deserting parent would be limited to the amount of Federal monies paid towards this order. If the State has obtained a court order, the Federal Government would attempt to recover the Federal share of welfare payments to the deserting father's family. If the State has not obtained a court order, the Federal Government may only attempt to recover the Federal share of the welfare payments. The deserting parent's obligation could be collected in the same manner as any other obligation against the United States.

The bill also would authorize Federal officers, in the event of desertion, to require the deserting parent to furnish this information to such parent's spouse (or to the guardian of any child in which a court order for child support has been issued).

7. Clarification of congressional intent regarding welfare statutes

Denial of eligibility for aid to families with dependent children is a continuing parent-child relationship.

Under present law, aid to families with dependent children is available to children who have been deprived of parental support by reason of the "continued absence from the home" of a parent. In a recently decided opinion, the Supreme Court held that the State could not consider a child ineligible for welfare when there was a substitute parent with no legal obligation to support the child. The Court stated: "We believe Congress' intended the term 'parent' in section 406(a) of the act * * * to include only those persons with a legal duty of support." The committee bill would clarify Congressional intent by permitting States to take into account the presence of a man in the house if there exists between the man and the dependent child a continuing parent-child relationship. For purposes of determining whether such relationship exists between a child and an adult individual, only the following factors could be taken into account:

1. They are frequently seen together in public;

2. The individual is the parent of a half-brother or half-sister of the child;

3. The individual exercises parental control over the child;

4. The individual makes substantial gifts to the child or to members of his family;

5. The individual claims the child as a dependent for income tax purposes;

6. The individual arranges for the care of the child when his mother is ill or absent from the home;

7. The individual assumes responsibility for the child when there occurs in the child's life a crisis such as illness or detention by public authorities;

8. The individual is listed as the parent or guardian of the child in school records or other public records; or the individual is known or has knowledge of the identity of the parents or guardians of the child.

9. The individual makes frequent visits to the place of residence of the child; and

10. The individual gives or uses as his assets any earnings or property which are owned or controlled by him in dealing with his employer, his creditors, postal authorities, other public authorities, or others with whom he has business, social, or legal relationships, or obligations.
A child-parent relationship could be determined to exist only on the basis of an evaluation of these factors taken together with any evidence which may refute any inference that they do not exist.

DURATION OF RESIDENCE REQUIREMENT

The committee bill requires States to impose a one-year duration of residence requirement for eligibility for AFDC. However, Federal matching would not be denied solely because a State failed to meet this requirement. If a welfare recipient moved to a State after a one-year duration of residence requirement, his State of origin would be required to continue his welfare payments until the recipient remained on welfare payments for up to 12 months, by which time the individual could establish eligibility for welfare in his new State of residence.

LIMITATION ON DURATION OF WELFARE APPEALS

Recently the Supreme Court ruled that assistance payments could not be determined before a recipient is afforded an evidentiary hearing. The committee bill would also require the recipient to be entitled to an evidentiary hearing, to which it is determined a recipient was not entitled to receive. Any amounts not repaid could not be considered an obligation of the recipient to be withheld from any future assistance payments which to the individual may be entitled.

STATES PERMITTED TO SEEK TO ESTABLISH NAME OF PUTATIVE FATHER

A recent court decision held that a mother's refusal to name the father of her illegitimate child could not be used in denial of aid to families with dependent children (AFDC). The applicable State requirement was held to be inconsistent with the provision in Federal law that "promptly furnishes all eligible individuals" on the grounds that the State regulation imposed an additional condition of eligibility not required by Federal law. The Court reached this conclusion despite the explicit requirement in Federal law that States attempt to establish paternity when a child is born out of wedlock.

The committee's bill would clarify congressional intent by specifying that the regulation requiring States to "promptly furnish" a countdown method to determine the recipient's eligibility for AFDC. The applicable State requirement was held to be inconsistent with the provision in Federal law that "promptly furnishes all eligible individuals" on the grounds that the State regulation imposed an additional condition of eligibility not required by Federal law. The Court reached this conclusion despite the explicit requirement in Federal law that States attempt to establish paternity when a child is born out of wedlock.

The committee amendment permits States, if they wish, to require as a condition of eligibility that the recipients allow a caseworker to visit the home. Home visits would have to be made at a reasonable time and with reasonable advance notice.

REGULATIONS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

The committee bill would curtail the regulatory authority of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare in several particulars.

"Declaration Method" of Determining Eligibility Permitted But Not Required

The Committee would preclude the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare from requiring by regulation that States use a simplified declaration method in determining eligibility. As under current law, States would be free to use this method if they so wished, but they could not be required to use it.

DEFINITION OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Under present law, Aid to Families with Dependent Children may be paid to a family headed by an unemployed father, at the option of the States, where the family meets other eligibility requirements (including population, per capita income, and unemployment rate).

VETERANS' PENSION INCREASE

The committee bill incorporates the text of S. 3385, a bill to increase pension benefits to veterans and widows by up to 9 percent. The committee bill would also increase the income limitations for veterans and widows by up to 9 percent. The committee bill would also increase the income limitations for veterans and widows by up to 9 percent. The committee bill would also increase the income limitations for veterans and widows by up to 9 percent.
Reporting of Medical Payments

Present law provides that a person who makes payments to a health care service provider in the course of a trade or business to another person, amounting to $600 or more in a calendar year, must file an information return showing the name and address of the payee and identifying the recipient. However, under the general requirements of this law, the provider is required to report direct payments to providers of health care services (often described as "assigned" payments), from the program or the program activity for which the payment is made, as well as reporting any amounts paid to individuals for services rendered to an individual who is not an employee ("unassigned" payments), and to provide any other information. These requirements specifically include professional service corporations, proprietary hospitals, and other persons engaged in a trade or business as conduits for providers of health care services.

The provision also requires the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to study the extent to which "unassigned" payments are made by the Federal Government for health care services in the case of direct or "assigned" payments made by the Federal Government for health care services. In addition, the reporting requirement for "unassigned" payments must meet the standards for the program or program activity for which the payment is made.

The reporting requirements specifically include professional service corporations, proprietary hospitals, and other persons engaged in a trade or business as conduits for providers of health care services.

The provision also requires the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to study the extent to which "unassigned" and "assigned" payments are made by the Federal Government for health care services. This study must be completed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare annually and submitted to the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means annually.

The study must be conducted if they are ordinary and necessary in carrying on the provider's trade or business. This provision provides a special tax incentive for providers of health care services engaged in a trade or business and requires the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to study the extent to which "unassigned" and "assigned" payments are made by the Federal Government. In addition, the reporting requirement specifically includes professional service corporations, proprietary hospitals, and other persons engaged in a trade or business as conduits for providers of health care services.

then, of course, he would have the right to insist that every amendment be the subject of debate, explanation, and a roll-call vote and insist on the presence of a quorum during all the consideration. While it is not unusual, I believe it would very much expedite procedure on the bill.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, before the Senator yields, will he yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I agree fully with the chairman. I have discussed the matter with him earlier and said I thought we could get this committee's agreement. For example, the first committee amendment merely changes the title and renumbers. That amendment is just a routine amendment. The next amendment is a question of whether we would provide additional security benefits by 5 percent, or to $100. I would suggest we could agree on the first committee amendment, and the next committee amendment could go over until tomorrow. We would know what the next amendment would be and we could have a vote tomorrow.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the first committee amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is a unanimous-consent request pending.

Mr. HARRIS. That was withdrawn.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That has been withdrawn.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the first committee amendment be agreed to. It amends the titles.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection.

The first committee amendment was agreed to, as follows:

Mr. LONG. I yield for a question.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for yielding. I would like to have the attention of the Senator from Delaware, as well. I think the instruction of the Senator from Delaware. I commend him for his willingness to agree later on to portions of the committee bill being amendable in the second degree. There will be objection to title III, the trade portion of the bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct.

Mr. HARRIS. My intention is that we should try to get a vote this week on the welfare reform bill, the amendment to be offered by the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. FRANCISCO) and the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), in amendable form, so that I can before its final consideration offer amendments to it, and that we also get down to the social security bill this week.

Would the Senator have any objection at the appropriate time to the welfare section of the committee bill being considered as original text? I understand he would not object to that.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. When we get to the welfare section?

Mr. HARRIS. Yes. Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. As far as I understand, we have not theretofore had any objection. I would not object to that, I know what the Senator from Oklahoma has in mind, so when it is offered it would be subject to an amendment, and I think it should be. The Senator is correct in that, that the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment will be subject to amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am in agreement with what the Senator seeks to achieve. I do not think there would be objection. I think that is the appropriate way to proceed.

The only exception I was making is that if we should not be on the trade section we would have to be voted on, catastrophic insurance is a section unto itself, and social security insurance would have to be voted on. I would say there would be a half dozen votes and we would be pretty much down to the serious arguments.

Mr. LONG. If there is no objection to that part of it, I believe in moving ahead any way we can, provided it does not prejudice anyone's rights. I do not see how it would prejudice anyone's rights if we agreed now on the welfare portion being original text.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. If the Senator will withhold that until tomorrow I think we could work out something that is agreeable, something that would be acceptable. As the Senator knows, there is a problem in the trade section. I can understand their position on that. I have mentioned catastrophic insurance. In a couple of hours we could call the meeting adjourned. I do not want to prejudice anyone's rights. I do not see how it would prejudice anyone's rights if we agreed now on the welfare portion being original text.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I appreciate the answers of the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Delaware. I hope that we will be able to act on this before the lapse of title III, dealing with trade, so that we can get a vote on social security and welfare reform, this week.

I am very hopeful the Senate will act promptly. We must make increased improvements in the social security, medicare, and medicaid programs, and real welfare reform. I have worked toward that end in the Committee on Finance.

Mr. President, I have set forth my position concerning H.R. 17550 in separate views printed in the committee report, and I ask unanimous consent to have my views printed at this point in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the separate views of Mr. HARRIS were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEPARATE VIEWS OF MR. HARRIS

INTRODUCTION

The initial objective of H.R. 17550 were to provide more adequate social security benefits and to make needed improvements in medicare, medicaid and maternal and child health programs.

The objective of H.R. 16311 was to effect urgently needed reform of a failing welfare system. These objectives are highly laudable. However, by the addition of unrelated matters, the wishes of Congress to compromise and seek basic improvements for some provisions, these original objectives have been made hostage to other, less noble, aims.

The Trade Act of 1970 was added as an amendment to H.R. 17550. Various amendments to the present welfare laws were agreed to which can only be characterized as regressive and punitive. An amendment to establish a Federal Child Care Corporation, which would be expected to represent a substantial and objectionable change in child care programs, was adopted. I, therefore, voted against reporting the bill. My reasons for doing so are here set forth in detail.

SOCIAL SECURITY

A. Increase in benefits and minimums

The committee made several greatly needed improvements in the social security provisions of H.R. 17550. The 5 percent increase in benefits, adopted by the House, was stepped up to a 10 percent increase. The committee also rightly voted to provide a $100 minimum social security benefit level.

With these increases, H.R. 17550 became an acceptable advance this year toward fairness in our social security program.

B. Workmen's compensation offset

The committee made certain other changes in the House bill provisions regarding social security and child care programs. The provision in the House bill, amend present law which requires social security disability benefits to be reduced when workmen's compensation benefits are also payable and when the combined payments exceed 80 percent of average current earnings before disablement, was stricken.

The House bill called for a reduction in benefits by the amount by which the combined payments exceed 100 percent of average current earnings before disability. This provision should be restored.

C. Financing

When the committee finished its work, it had voted approximately $10 billion in additional benefits. It then turned to financing.

I believe the committee was mistaken in not properly taking into account the present regressive nature of the social security tax system and in not fully considering the economic impact of the financing arrangements which it approved.

The social security tax system is not as nearly based upon ability to pay as is the Federal income tax. There is an upward limit—presently $7,800, and $9,000 under the committee bill—on total amount of salary which is taxed. The tax is in a flat rate basis; it is not graduated.

I believe that the payroll tax under social security has reached the saturation point. I therefore, supported an effort to finance a portion of benefits from general revenue. This effort failed.

Alternatively, I offered a financing plan which would make the social security tax system more progressive, raising the wage base to $12,000 in 1971. This allows social security to pay out of the present soundness with less of an increase in the rate tax over a period of years. The following table shows the financing plan which I offered and which was rejected by the committee. As indicated, in addition to providing a more sound social security plan, the present annual fiscal impact in each of the funds involved—OASDI, health insurance, and the new catastrophic health insurance—the plan which I offered would avoid a cash deficit in any year in any of the funds.

Note: The excesses of income over outlays resulting from this schedule follow:

The financing plan which I offered would also provide an additional much-needed, important economic impact. It would postpone an increased tax rate from 4.8 to 5.2, which is expected to go into effect in January 1971 under present law. Unless this rate increase is postponed, it will have a seriously damaging effect on consumer demand at a time when the economy is too sluggish and unemployment intolerably high. Stimulation of consumer demand through postponement of the present scheduled tax rate increase and through increased benefits would not be inflationary by serving to cause expanded production volume, allowing some reduction in unit costs.

The revised manner in which Federal budgets are now made up and presented, taking into account income and expenditures from social security and other trust funds, more clearly points up the fiscal impact of decisions concerning social security benefits and rates.

In addition to the right of social security beneficiaries to more adequate benefits, the payment of increased benefits will provide a much-needed increase in consumer demand, aiding economic recovery. This fiscal impact should not be offset by increased rate increases, primarily the way in which the automatic adjustment of the benefits is tied to an annual deficit in the various funds or to provide general actuarial soundness.

D. Cost-of-living increase

The committee worked long and hard on the problem of how to insure that the purchasing power of social security benefits is maintained. On the whole the committee accorded with the House and agreed with some aspects of the automatic adjustment provisions—primarily the way in which the automatic adjustments of the base are furnished.

The committee made some major changes in the automatic adjustment provisions that were proposed by the administration and passed by the House of Representatives. Many of the changes are reasonable, but some aspects of the provisions agreed to by the Senate were so changed or deleted that they are not fully acceptable and are to operate smoothly.

Second, the committee was faced with the problem of increasing social security benefits and automatic financing.

Third, the provision in the bill would require the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to promulgate increases in both social security taxes and the earnings base in order to provide increases in social security benefits.

There are reasons why the cost of living has increased by 5 percent or more between the last July-to-September quarter and the current quarter—determined benefit increases and the most recent July-to-September quarter. The automatic increases would be in addition to any increases that might be approved by Congress. The tax base is increased automatically every 2 years based on increases in the average taxable wages after 1971.

A. Health maintenance organizations

Medical costs have risen enormously. There are many reasons for this. One cause is the greatly increased demand for medical services without any increased supply in personnel and facilities. It is imperative that there be a massive increase in medical personnel and in medical facilities. The shortages are already acute, and they are growing alarmingly.

It is also vital that there be much better use of existing personnel and facilities. Toward that end, the committee approved the health maintenance organization concept contained in H.R. 17550. Under this provision, medical payments can be made to physicians on a per capita basis, rather than on a fee-for-service basis only.

This provision is an important step forward toward encouraging prepayment for group medical care. It permits an emphasis on preventative medicine.

B. Professional standards review organization

The committee supported a proposal to establish professional standards review organizations at local and State levels throughout the country, to review such functions as examination of medical and practitioner profiles; independent medical audits; on-site audits; and the development and application of norms of care and treatment.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to enter into agreements with qualified professional standards review organizations, principally local medical societies, to review the totality of care rendered or ordered by physicians for Medicare and Medicaid patients. Where medical societies are unable or unwilling to undertake this responsibility, the Secretary could contract with State health departments or other suitable organizations.

This provision has a laudable purpose: to insure quality care and to hold down unnecessary costs.

However, the provision contains many unknown, unknowable, and unpredictable factors. Further, there are serious questions about whether it grants organized medicine too much control over utilization of facilities.

The proposal should be tested before Congress puts it into effect on a total basis as the committee bill would do. I am not satisfied that this proposal will result in the savings which have been claimed by its proponents, nor am I satisfied that the review procedure is the best and most workable which can be devised.

The House provisions on peer review should be strengthened, and the Senate committee provisions should be stricken.

C. State maintenance of effort

Under present law States are required to maintain a level of financial effort in support of Medicaid and are required to build toward comprehensive Medicaid programs by 1977.

The State of Missouri asked the committee to pass legislation giving it a special one-time exemption from the maintenance of effort requirement. The committee could have granted this special request, based upon unique circumstances, without upsetting the present system.

But the committee went far beyond the Missouri request and repealed the entire section 1902(d) of the present law, under which States are required to maintain their efforts at the beginning of fiscal year ending June 30, 1977. The House of Representatives had previously stricken section 1903(e) which requires States to enact comprehensive Medicaid programs by 1977.

The repeal of both these sections is most unfortunate. The poor people covered by Medicare are entitled to the medical attention and care—not less. Their needs should not be ignored in order to slow the rising costs of this program and medical care generally. Section 1902(d) and section 1903(e) should be restored in the bill.

D. Physical therapy

The House bill provides for reimbursement of $100 of the cost of physical therapy on an outpatient basis to an independent practitioner under part B of Medicare. This provision was rejected by the Senate.

A great many beneficiaries need the services of a physical therapist, and these services can often be performed in the office of the therapist. The committee felt that the House approved, which is effect puts it on a trial basis, should be reinstated in the bill.

E. Blood replacement

The committee rejected a proposal to eliminate the requirement in the present law for a 10 percent deductible or a 20 percent co-payment. Under present law States are required to maintain a level of financial effort in support of Medicaid.

F. Medicare premium increases

The premium for part B, supplementary medical insurance, under Medicare has increased by more than 60 percent since the last 4 years. Originally the premium was $3 a month per person. It was increased from $4 to $5.30 on July 1, 1970. But the committee has increased it again.

It is imperative that there be a massive increase in medical and paramedical personnel and in medical facilities. The shortages are already acute, and they are growing alarmingly.

It is also vital that there be much better use of existing personnel and facilities. Toward that end, the committee approved the health maintenance organization concept contained in H.R. 17550. Under this provision, medical payments can be made to physicians on a per capita basis, rather than on a fee-for-service basis only.

This provision is an important step forward toward encouraging prepayment for group medical care. It permits an emphasis on preventative medicine.

The committee supported a proposal to establish professional standards review organizations at local and State levels throughout the country, to review such functions as examination of medical and practitioner profiles; independent medical audits; on-site audits; and the development and application of norms of care and treatment.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to enter into agreements with qualified professional standards review organizations, principally local medical societies, to review the totality of care rendered or ordered by physicians for Medicare and Medicaid patients. Where medical societies are unable or unwilling to undertake this responsibility, the Secretary could contract with State health departments or other suitable organizations.

This provision has a laudable purpose: to insure quality care and to hold down unnecessary costs.

However, the provision contains many unknown, unknowable, and unpredictable factors. Further, there are serious questions about whether it grants organized medicine too much control over utilization of facilities.

The proposal should be tested before Congress puts it into effect on a total basis as the committee bill would do. I am not satisfied that this proposal will result in the savings which have been claimed by its proponents, nor am I satisfied that the review procedure is the best and most workable which can be devised.

The House provisions on peer review should be strengthened, and the Senate committee provisions should be stricken.

The committee moved in the opposite direction and added three more criteria for the Federal Medicaid program.

The House bill provides for reimbursement of $100 of the cost of physical therapy on an outpatient basis to an independent practitioner under part B of Medicare. This provision was rejected by the Senate.

A great many beneficiaries need the services of a physical therapist, and these services can often be performed in the office of the therapist. The committee felt that the House approved, which is effect puts it on a trial basis, should be reinstated in the bill.

form for at least 3 years. I do not believe that the Senate and the House have made much progress. The welfare system, as it exists, is in deep trouble. There are too many people living in poverty, and the system is inadequate to meet their needs. We need to do more to promote the development of infrastructure and services. The establishment of a Federal Corporation is not the way to achieve the needed results.

The Corporation under the committee bill would be responsible for providing services for child care services in the various communities of each State. Existing public, private, and nonprofit facilities would be contracted with by the Corporation to serve as child care providers. Pursuant to the terms of the provision adopted by the committee, the Corporation could provide child care services in its own facilities.
of 1970, is invalidated by these figures. This objection to its provisions. First, I will set attaching nongermane legislation. Security amendments, Not only did I object to the overall thrust of the Trade Act, as well as specific objections to its provisions. First, I will set forth my general reservations about the act. It is presently estimated that in 1970 we will have a healthy surplus of over 83 billion in our trade balance. Last year, the surplus was 46 billion. If we continue on this year our exports have been growing considerably more rapidly than imports.

The argument that U.S. industry is becoming increasingly noncompetitive, which is often made in support of the Trade Act of 1970, is invalidates by these figures. This would have to be an especially poor time to risk loss of export markets by curtailing imports.

The lack of import of quotas which would be imposed under this bill would be the retardation of economic growth in developing nations. This is at odds with our larger foreign policy to encourage the strength and growth of these less developed countries.

B. Cost to consumers

Recently, Federal Reserve Board Governor, Andrew B. Tarter said that the textile and shoe quotas in this bill would cost the consumer an extra $3.7 billion, and that these costs could be disproportionately be borne by the poor because they must spend a larger share of their income on shoes and clothing than on such things as the housing, medical, and transportation needs of the importers of the industries’ case—and I want to return to this—it would seem that the consumer would be paying a very heavy price indeed for these quotas.

These costs could multiply if other consumer items were subjected to quotas under the liberalized escape clause.

C. Impact of inflation

Much attention has rightly been focused on the economy in recent weeks. The inflation alert is very much a present day anxiety to the NAM— all focus on the real danger of inflation. Mr. Arthur Burns, in speaking on measures that are required during the next week, cited the relaxation of existing quotas on imports. This comes at a time when new inflationary quotas would be imposed by the trade bill. We obviously cannot have it both ways. We must draw the line and choose between control of inflation and protectionism. Another voice raised in opposition to the import restrictions of the bill is that of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The Chamber has urged that a more constructive course on trade legislation be chartered in the next session of Congress.

D. Danger of retaliation

I have also noted in the press an increasing number of statements made by officials of the GATT nations, including some of our best customers—Canada, Germany, Latin America, Britain, and Mexico, to name a few—concerning the possible adverse consequences of the enactment of the trade bill. Whether or not these statements can be taken as blurring, on the assumption that other countries either could or would not dare mount such a campaign, this assumption necessarily correct? In many instances, other countries would be able to obtain the same goods of comparable quality from alternative sources. For example, U.S. manufacturers watch their trade balance with the United States very carefully and would be very prone to reduce the amount of merchandise if we were to restrict their exports to this country. Finally, I think the element of national pride would be at work here. If they feel—as they may well do—that the shoe quotas, for example, are unjustified, then they will naturally want to strike back. The risk of an international纺织ions in my judgment, severe. If that happens, no State will be immune from its effects. In testimony before the Finance Committee, the National Chamber attributed 4 million American jobs to total United States exports. The wheat farmers of western Oklahoma have made Okla- homa the number one wheat State in the Nation. A generation of eastern Oklahomans have pinned high hopes on the Arkansas River Basin project which the late Senator Dallas Smythe fought to get spent, turning it into a navigable access to world commerce. All of these stand in real jeopardy in the face of the new trade legislation.

E. Renewal of textile negotiations

The trade bill was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee after the Secre- tary of Commerce announced that the United States-Japanese textile negotiations had broken down and that the administration therefore reluctantly supported legislative action. In the past weeks, however, these negotiations have been resumed. There is ad- ministered no assurance that these negotia- tions will be successful either in the short or long run. But the fact of their resump- tion is surely significant and affords further reason for pause in considering the trade bill. The Japanese Government feels an early voluntary agreement is desirable because if there is no agreement and no legislation is passed this Congress may pass even more restrictive legislation next year.

F. Textile and shoe quotas

To the best of my knowledge, there has been no objective determination that im- ports of textiles and shoes is doing serious injury to the domestic textile industry. Of course, the industry itself makes vehement allegations that both textile and production lines have been put at risk by imports. But has any reasonable independent body like the United States Tariff Commission, ever come to that conclusion? I would emphasize that I am not asserting that there are no parts of the textile industry that may be injured by im- ports. I am merely stating that the evidence to date is not there is a serious import-related problem affecting the entire industry.

In the future it is clear that action is cer- tainly required. Pull use of present legal remedies should be made. Stronger and more pervasive device would be the administration’s authority to impose new restrictions on imports. The point of the bill is that the administration could result in voluntary limits on specified imports.

However, that is testimony from the American Textile Manufacturers Institute reflect that initial textile exports have expanded by $200 million over the last 12 years. More U.S. employees are engaged in making textile mill products now than in any year except 1968. The number of companies engaged in textile mill manufacturing is at an all time high. Net sales, both in textiles and apparel, are at the highest figures since the 1960 figures. Taken as a whole, these facts do not support allegations of a severely depressed industry, requiring emergency legislation. In the absence of impartial evidence of harm from imports, I must question the need for, and the wisdom of, unilateral textile quotas, especially in view of their cost to the consumer and the possible retaliation against these Japanese negotiations may be successful.

As for shoes, a task force of the adminis- tration has not produced a list of countries for which there is any justification for quotas. Nevertheless, the President has asked the Tariff Commission to determine whether such quotas are caused by adverse consequences to the domestic industry. This is the proper way in my judgment to develop a rational and intelligent action concerning imports.

G. Escape clause provisions

Another provision of the trade bill that is very troublesome is the amended escape clause, which has traditionally authorized the President to impose higher tariffs or quotas on imports found to be injuring a domestic industry. The following aspects of the new escape clause are open to serious question.

First, under the trade bill the Tariff Commission would have to determine whether imports are a “substantial” cause of serious injury. Instead of “substantial,” present law reads “major” and the administration’s bill would have substituted “serious.” These words may sound like semantic quibbles, but the difference between “major” and “substantial” will spell the difference between justified and reasonable and a promiscuous use of the escape clause.

Second, the bill resurrects the concept of the geographic segmentation, which was traditionally authorized the President to impose higher tariffs or quotas on imports found to be injuring a domestic industry. The following aspects of the new escape clause are open to serious question.

H. Foreign import restrictions

The committee has gone even further than the House bill in making Section 252 of the Trade Expansion Act of 1962 a protectionist device. At the present time, section 252 au- thorizes—but does not require—the Pres- ident to impose foreign import restrictions on countries that are illegally or unrea- sonably restricting our exports. The key issue, course, is the question of whether a foreign import restriction is illegal or unrea- sonable. The right of any member of the GATT to impose new restrictions is severely restricted by that agreement—as it should be if any order in international trade is to be preserved.

Under the committee’s bill, the Secretary of Commerce would determine if a foreign import restriction is illegal or unreason- able. If he made such a determination, the President would be authorized to work out a solution with the foreign country concerned. If he could not, then the United States would have to take retaliatory action. This is—pure and simple—another violation of the GATT. The right of “third country” to subsidize— that is to say, that the United States can flout the rules of the game and get away with it.

1. Status of GATT

The committee struck the new separate authorizations to determine whether our annual contribution to the GATT’s is.

This will probably not seriously jeopardize future agreements, some of which the general au- thorization available in the organic legisla- tion of the Department of State. But it is obviously a vote of no confidence in the only international organization that offers any... hope of maintaining and strengthening a fair world trading system. The committee struck the provision on the ground that it would give "statutory recognition of the GATT, which has never been submitted to the Congress for approval." The fact that the GATT is a valid executive agreement, concluded pursuant to the authority of section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, is not itself a statutory executive agreement, it need not, of course, be submitted to Congress for approval. This question dealt extensively in a 1956 memorandum of the Legal Adviser of the State Department to the then chairman of the Ways and Means Committee (see H. Rept. 2007, 84th Cong., second sess., 113-131 (1956)).

J. American selling price
The committee struck the provision in the House bill by clear legislative history and the committee's bill by express statutory language. It would give the President new tariff reducing authority only for the purpose of granting compensatory tariff concessions when we increase import restrictions under the escape clause or by some other means. In other words, this is an authority that at best permits us to stand in the same place, but envisages no further net reduction in tariffs.

The Kennedy Round was concluded in 1967 and the last tariff reductions agreed to will take place on January 1, 1972. Isn't it time to give the President the authority to start moving again in lowering trade barriers? How can the momentum of trade liberalization be maintained if we stand pat. Beyond the positive and enormous harm done by the bill, it also fails to seize critical opportunities to move ahead.

(1) Tariff-Reducing Authority.—The House bill by clear legislative history and the committee's bill by express statutory language would give the President new tariff reducing authority only for the purpose of granting compensatory tariff concessions when we increase import restrictions under the escape clause or by some other means. In other words, this is an authority that at best permits us to stand in the same place, but envisages no further net reduction in tariffs.

The Kennedy Round was concluded in 1967 and the last tariff reductions agreed to will take place on January 1, 1972. Isn't it time to give the President the authority to start moving again in lowering trade barriers? How can the momentum of trade liberalization be maintained if the past leader of that effort is powerless? And especially in the trade field, the absence of progress only invites retrogression.

(2) Non-Tariff Barriers.—Even with the provision authorizing the elimination of ASP, the House bill failed to provide for negotiations on nontariff barriers, though everyone agrees that this is the single most serious problem in the trade field. As it stands now, the President must act at his peril if he acts at all. On the one hand, he can negotiate on nontariff barriers without any prior congressional approval and simply hope that the Congress will provide the necessary implementing legislation after the fact. The handling of ASP, of course, affords little encouragement. On the other hand, the President can request specific authority before beginning any particular negotiations on non-tariff barriers. The Congress may then so circumscribe his authority as to render it valueless or give him none at all. Since it has not yet seen what reciprocal advantages it might afford the United States. The only way I can see out of this dilemma is to have the Congress give the President, perhaps in the form of a resolution, the "license" to negotiate, while reserving all of its authority to pass upon any necessary implementing legislation. This would at least give the President the encouragement he does not now have to tackle non-tariff barriers and attempt to commence an international negotiation on the subject.

The total effect of the trade bill is, in my judgment, antagonist to constructive ways of dealing with the current problems in international trade. It assumes that the United States can take unjustified and induced illegal actions and somehow get away with them, without provoking retaliation or undermining the world trading system. This seems to me to be a hopelessly naive and false assumption. It is my opinion that if the Senate will seriously consider how harmful the present trade bill is and how great is the need for a constructive trade bill, then we may still have the time to avert the appalling consequences of a return to protectionism both in this country and throughout the world.

I re-emphasize that I am concerned about the allegations of serious injury resulting from imports being voiced by the textile and other industries. Present law provides for remedies in such cases. Full use of present provisions should be employed where need is indicated. Adjustment assistance should be used to ease the conversion of industries and jobs in cases requiring such relief. Diplomatic negotiations should be pressed. Lastly, the Congress should carefully and deliberately consider additional thoughtful trade legislation, which is in keeping with our past policies of free trade and which does not violate international agreements which we have previously made.

I attempted twice in the committee to have the trade bill stricken from the social security bill. I will renew this effort on the floor of the Senate. Should this motion fail, I intend to offer a series of amendments to improve the Trade Act.

Final conclusion
All of the legislative proposals included in H.R. 17550 are in need of thoughtful legislative consideration. My opposition to specific proposals in the bill by no means indicates a lack of concern for responsible action on the problems raised thereby. But, it is too late in this post-election Congress to hope for any fruitful action on so many diverse issues placed under the same umbrella.

Therefore, it is imperative, as I have set forth in these separate views, that the Senate in the remaining days devote its time to improving our social security and related programs and to meaningful reform of our failing welfare system. The other matters can and should be set aside for consideration by the next Congress.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that certain amendments I intend to propose to H.R. 17550 be printed and lie on the table, and that certain amendments I intend to propose to the welfare reform amendment to be offered by the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Ribicoff) and the Senator from Utah (Mr. Bennett) be printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be received and printed, and will lie on the table.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I merely want to state that I fully support the proposal of the Senator from Oklahoma that we try to make the portion of this bill relating to welfare reform original text so that any amendments offered to it will be subject to amendment in the second degree. I hope that procedure can be worked out. I think most of us would like
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, under the agreement of yesterday, Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, be laid before the Senate and be made the pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Jordan of Idaho). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the Medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance systems, to make improvements in the Medicare, Medicaid, and material and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Pursuant to the previous order, the Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, the pending amendment makes the increase in the benefits that were increased by 5 percent, which would have cost in 1971 $1.7 billion.

The Finance Committee by a majority vote increased these benefits. Instead of leaving the benefits at 5 percent, they increased them to 10 percent. They raised the minimum social security payment of $100.

The two amendments appear combined in this amendment and when merged the result of the action of the Finance Committee is a cost of $5 billion over existing law, or $3.3 billion more than that which was provided in the House bill.

That will be the question before the Senate when this particular amendment is voted upon. As indicated yesterday, I tried to get a unanimous consent agreement in order to move along on a consideration of the various features of the bill, some of which I support and some of which I do not. However, I did feel that the Senate had a right to work on its own, and that after reasonable debate we should be able to proceed to a vote.
That effort is a matter of record and has been made.

We were unable to get such a consent agreement. I do not criticize those who felt they could not consent. I am sure they had good and valid reasons.

I am going to make another effort here to show the Congress how we could do a different thing with the Finance Committee. We have the question in the bill involving the catastrophic insurance. We have the question of the trade act, which is title 3 of the bill. This is something about which Members of both sides of the committee have very strong feelings. Others have very strong feelings about the family assistance plan. We are in this situation parliamentary-wise with the amendments—the trade amendment, the family assistance amendment, or any other amendment—could be offered to one of the committee amendments.

The problem is, however, that if they are offered to any committee amendment, that would be an amendment in the second degree. Therefore, it would not be subject to any modification, or verification even though in the discussion it may be pointed out to the membership and even the sponsors of the amendment that there should be changes in the amendment.

I, too, would have some amendments to offer. I believe also be precluded. I think it would be most unfortunate for the Senate to get itself into such a parliamentary situation.

Mr. President, in order to show the Senate what kind of a parliamentary snarl we can get into, and almost get into at this time. I know of at least two proposals that Senators were considering offering as amendments to the trade amendment, or the family assistance amendment. It has been pointed out that at the end of that amendment the Trade Act could be offered and would be in order, or the family assistance plan could be offered and would be in order. Neither would be subject to any amendment. They would be voted on the merits.

Some might say that is simple enough to get a vote. However, after the years and maybe if we were ordered on an amendment to an amendment to an amendment, any one Senator would have to do would be to stand up and ask for a division. We would then have had exactly 68 votes before we could vote on the amendment. Those committee amendments after the division would require a vote on each at first degree. Therefore, each one is to strike out a different line. True, it does not mean anything, but it would have required a rollcall vote and would have put the Senate in a more silly posture than it is now, if that is possible.

For that reason, last night I made a unanimous-consent request that approved this amendment and prevented the Senate from getting into that ridiculous situation.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if I correctly understand the situation, if a Senator wanted to amend the first committee amendment, which would simply strike the table of contents in the bill, he could have insisted on a motion to separate, and it would have required the Senator to have a separate vote to strike on every single item in the table of contents. That alone would have required 68 rollcall votes, if it had been insisted on.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The Senator is correct. And after that they would be subject to a quorum call between each one and a motion to table on that. We would have two rollcall votes. So there would be 136 rollcall votes and 136 quorum calls.

I point out that to show how we could get into such a ridiculous picture.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if a Senator wanted to offer an amendment to the simple committee amendment to strike the table of contents, any Senator who did not want that amendment to come to a vote would have to have 68 rollcall votes and 136 quorum calls before we ever got to a vote on the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. He could. But it is even simpler than that because the first degree It is not subject to a vote on the trade section or family assistance, would want a rollcall vote and that would be applicable to the entire package; and all they would have to do would be to request a division, and we would have 68 rollcall votes. I hope that will not happen and that we can proceed in an orderly manner. If such an amendment, whether it be for family assistance or an amendment dealing with any other subject, is offered to any committee amendment that is in the second degree it is not subject to any amendment or any variation. This is not good legislative practice.

Last night the chairman mentioned, and it had been mentioned in committee, the possibility of getting unanimous consent to have amendments considered en bloc. In that case any Senator who got recognition would have the amendment and have it voted on up or down; his amendment then would be subject to amendment in the second degree—the family assistance plan or whatever it might be, in effect, to the original text because that is the way we would be considering it. That would give an opportunity to the Senator from Oklahoma or anyone else who wanted to offer amendments to amendments; they could offer them to the committee bill as we have done many times before.

I have asked the Senator to propose in this measure that I do not like and that I hope will not be agreed to. I shall discuss those in due course. It is in recognition of this fact that I have worked over night and talked with several members of this body, we have somewhat of a consensus of opinion. I have not talked to everyone, but I believe we have somewhat of a consensus of opinion that it would be better for all concerned to have the unanimous consent granted that the committee amendments be considered and agreed to en bloc and as agreed to be considered as original text for the purpose of amendment.

I have asked the Committee to write out this request so it would be in the usual form. In that manner anyone who has the floor could have his amendment offered.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. RIBICOFF. The Senator from Utah (Mr. Bennett) and I are very anxious to have a definitive vote on the family assistance plan. We recognize the parliamentary situation that if these amendments are not adopted en bloc and made original text that the amendment offered would not be subject to amendment. The family assistance plan is so complex and has so many facets that I do not have a feeling of self-righteousness that we should deprive other Senators from offering their own concepts and ideas. I know the Senator from Oklahoma has many thoughts of his own. The Senator from Idaho has many thoughts of his own. Other Senators have thoughts on how this amendment should be reported.

Consequently, in all fairness to the Senate and to this measure, we would propose that the measure from Delaware would be agreed to without objection. If this were the case, then the amendment I would offer—and I would hope to receive the support from the Chair at the earliest possible moment—would be an amendment in the first degree, giving each Senator an opportunity to offer his amendments and in this way we could have a complete discussion of all the amendments. I think other Senators have thoughts on how this measure should be reported.

I believe this is the fairest way to handle the proposal and to that end we could go forward to a vote on the family assistance program before we adjourn sine die on January 3.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I will yield in a moment but I do want to point out that I am not doing this necessarily to wreck the proposal; that is the answer to a previous proposal. As the Senator knows I would just as soon see that proposal defeated. However, I am perfectly willing to take my chances on it. I think the proposal is not good. I am perfectly willing to do that and let the Senate vote.
December 17, 1970

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 20451

But in the meantime, if it is going to be adopted it would be better to have it improved, if it is going to have improvements can be made. It is better to be in a posture where we can make a change in it, and under the other situation we would be almost locked in.

Second, Mr. RUBICOFF. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I appreciate what the Senator has just said. As I said, every Member of the Senate would be on equal footing so he could get recognized and have whatever amendment he wanted to offer.

Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Oklahoma, and I would like to ask to yield to anyone else who wants to comment on this without my losing my right to the floor.

I yield to the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. HARRIS. I thank the distinguished Senator. The Senator, has, indeed, talked with a number of Senators, including me, and I think it is his intention to make this request today to adopt the committee amendments en bloc and make them original text. I think that is the orderly way to proceed.

If we can pass welfare reform—real welfare reform—this year, and get the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Utah in amendable form. What the Senator is asking for is a way to do that in an orderly manner; and then, those of us who want to amend various sections of the bill, and strike the trade provision, as I do, would have that opportunity to do so.

I join in the request of the Senator from Delaware and I hope it can be agreed to as the orderly way to proceed.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware, I thank the Senator. Some Senators, and to be frank, I, personally, was reluctant to enter into this, as the chairman knows during discussions in committee, because there were sections on which I wanted direct rollcall votes.

There is this difference which we all recognize. It takes one more vote to strike something from a bill than to put it in. Then, if it is for the better, or for the worse, one vote I do not know that it is important.

The main thing is to get it to a vote.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from New York on the same conditions.

Mr. JAVITS. I would like to advise the Senator, who has just made the request, and if he will allow me, I would like to state the reasons. Will the Senator yield for that purpose?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes, I yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. JAVITS. I understand.

In the first place, let me state that I was not informed of this unanimous consent proposal, and that I heard of it because one hears about everything in this Chamber. I hope very much that in the course of the debate on this bill, when the amendments are made, and the Senator from Oklahoma and the other Senators, that we should really, in all fairness, start the practice of advising Members who other Members know things that are expected in whatever is going to be proposed.

We were told yesterday by the majority leader there need to be no worry on that score. This is hardly an auspicious beginning.

Second, I did not concoct the plan to include social security, medicare, medicaid, a massive and historic trade bill, and family assistance in all one bill. Nor did I develop the idea of not filing a clean bill, which the committee could have done, but filing a bill full of amendments so that you block the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. HARRIS), me, and any other Member who may have an amendment because as the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RUBICOFF) mentioned it is all done in the third degree.

So the doctrine of original sin does not make me feel guilty at all. This is the way the Senate Finance Committee wanted it. If the view of the Senate is going to be expressed in a fair way it is going to be fair to both sides. The Senate Finance Committee wanted it this way, this is the way the Committee on Finance from the floor.

The only condition is that members of the committee must now be prepared to live with their decision. You asked for every one of these amendments to be voted on. You did, I did not. Therefore, if I am asked to vote contrary to your original intention what is wrong with that? The Members of this Chamber know full well I want the family assistance plan considered as well as social security. I do not think anybody else should be "over weaned"—to use a kind word, because the trade bill is very bad legislation and we are being denied the opportunity to acquaint the country with this fact and being denied the opportunity to consider trade legislation in the way that it should be considered.

With all respect to the Senator, who is trying to make the best of a bad situation. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. If I may reply, I reply to the Senator from New York, my colleague and friend, with mixed emotions. What he is saying he wants done exactly what I would like to accomplish, but I do not want to take the responsibility for underwriting a filibuster to defeat the bill. When the trade bill was offered on this bill I voted against it. I thought it was wrong to take a bill which came from the House and add it to the social security bill. I voted that way and will be voting that way on the Senate floor. There is no question about that.

On the other hand, I also voted against attaching the family assistance plan, which was the Senate Finance Committee, on three occasions, one time being rejected by a vote of 14 to 1, another time by a vote of 10 to 6, and I forget the rollcall vote the third time, but the majority of the committee refused to approve that bill.

The Senator from New York, much as I respect him, is trying to add the family assistance plan to this historic piece of legislation which was defeated by our committee, but he is not willing to abide by the majority will of the committee which put the other one in. I am willing to abide by the will of the majority of the committee and the Senate in both cases.

I personally know no easier way to defeat the bill—in fact, there is no easier way than to have a vote on every separate amendment. There are 290 odd amendments in this measure. The Senator can sit down and count them himself.

If the Senator from New York insists of filibuster he will be defeated; because I respect him highly. If that is his wish then I will carry out his instructions, and when we get through we will have had 280 rollcall votes which will be reconsidered, and the number of rollcall votes will double to 560. I hope, if the Senator from New York wants to filibuster the bill he will do it differently than by rollcall votes.

I am only pleasing with him to go along. I will support a motion to strike this trade section, and I do not see why he would object. I have been here only 24 years, and I do not claim to know as much about the parliamentary situation as the Senator from New York. I might hazard a guess that he might defeat his purpose by insisting on objecting to this request.

I would hate to see us get into such a snarl, and I plead with him to reconsider his position.

Before I yield to the Senator from Delaware (Mr. LONG) let me add that certainly the leadership of the Senate is not necessarily on my side in these matters. The Presiding Officer will be the one to recognize Senators. I shall not control that. I do not have as much control over who is recognized as he will have. I am going to make my brief remarks here today, and I am trying to restore some semblance of order.

I call attention to the fact that yesterday we almost got into the situation where we would have had to have 135 rollcall votes to get to the measure, just because of what the Senator opened. I do not want to see the Senate get in a posture which, as I said earlier, would make us appear more silly than that posture in which we are now appearing with five filibusters nominating at the same time. I would say we are going to have to get hats for the filibusters. We are going to have to get five different hats with different colors, and we are going to have to number the filibusters because we are getting to a situation where we do not know which side we are on and whether the Senators are in or not. I have never seen such a state of confusion as exists in the Senate today. I know that if this procedure is insisted upon we will be in an even greater state of confusion.

I have said repeatedly we are not going to filibuster this bill. I think there is logic enough in the argument I can present that it will persuade the Senate to defeat the bill. If the Senator from New York insists of this filibuster there is no easier way, than to have a vote on every separate amendment, or what is better referred to as the guaranteed annual income. I am an optimist. I think I can defeat it. I will take my chances, and I do not want to see the Senator from Connecticut. But I am perfectly willing to abide by the decision. of the Senate. I would consider it an indication of weakness on my part if I were afraid to face the Senate on a vote. I am not. I welcome the opportunity.

My position was sustained in the Finance Committee. The plan was defeated by a 14-to-1 ratio, and each time the Finance Committee recognized the argument against starting on such an unsound plan as this. The committee sustained my position. I think the Senate will do likewise. If I am wrong I shall congratulate Senators and perhaps go home and, who knows, we may all live on welfare.

I say let us vote. If Senators are not afraid of their positions let us vote. I am not afraid to vote on it. I will vote against it. But I say let us vote, whatever the results.

I yield to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, just to make clear that what the committee has done is the usual way of doing business, may I remind the Senator and the Senate that last year we had a revenue bill in the Senate, with many amendments that the Senator from Louisiana, the chairman of the committee, asked that the whole bill be drafted as a substitute package for the House-passed bill. We did it that way last year. Some did agree with that procedure. That is not the usual way of doing business, I must admit.

In that case Senators then proceeded to strike amendments first to the House bill. We had two tiers of amendments, amendments in the first and second degree being offered to the House bill, and then amendments in the first and second degree being offered to the committee bill, with the result that we had two tiers of amendments, each with a second tier on top of them, all of them being subject to be called up and debated. That procedure has been much more cumbersome way of proceeding than the way that is being proposed.

With regard to revenue bills, the Committee on Finance cannot report out a committee amendment to the Constitution, which will not permit the Senate to originate revenue bills. They must originate in the House. The Senate is limited to the power to amend. What the Senate Finance Committee can do, within the power to which the Senate is limited, is to amend such bills, be it in the nature of a committee substitute or be it through amendment to the bill itself subject to amendment, and the amendment is subject to amendment in both tiers, depending on the order in which Senators want to call their amendments up.

So far as I am aware, that is the big revenue bill, one as controversial as this one, with so many matters to be considered the possibilities of amendments are limitless. Even though we are subject to limit ourselves, we cannot limit Senators. They have a right to offer amendments.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is right. I would like to point out this further, which is a parliamentary fact of life from which we cannot escape. We can proceed any way we wish the family assistance plan can be offered to the end of some committee amendment at this time or whenever a Senator gets recognized, but there is no possible parliamentary situation that can be obtained in the Senate whereby this bill can pass without Senators standing up and voting on the trade section. There is no way it can be done except by unanimous consent on a third-degree amendment; and we know that consent will not be obtained so there is no possible way to do it. So if all certain Senators want is a vote on the family assistance plan with the full knowledge that it is not going to become law, then they are doing so with tongue in cheek, voting for something they never intend to become law. I say let them stand up and acknowledge their hypocrisy publicly, because that would be the most hypocritical action that could be taken.

I repeat, there is no possible way—and I will yield to any Senator who can challenge that statement—even if the family assistance plan is added to the bill, to get a vote on final passage of the bill without first standing up and voting on the trade and other sections. It cannot be done.

That is the only way it can be done. So Senators would not be yielding any rights that they have by this agreement. In my opinion, to proceed otherwise would be to acknowledge that all we want is a vote on the family assistance plan with the full knowledge and consent that it is going down the drain; and I will be a party to no such hypocrisy.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. LONG. The Senator recognizes, does he not, that simply to agree to the committee amendments en bloc does not mean that the Senate is for the committee amendments? It just means that we will regard them as original text so as to expedite the completion of action on this bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Certainly not, because of the amendments as the Senator knows, I would be voting against; and I shall be offering amendments to strike out some of these sections, because, as the Senator knows, I do not support some of the amendments. I have not changed my opinion. When an amendment to strike out the trade section is in order I expect to support it.

But that is not the issue here. We have a right to vote, whether we expect to win or lose, and I can certainly see us getting into a parliamentary snarl here. That is the reason why, as I said before, I arrange to be recognized first here today because I hope I can persuade the Senate of the logic of what I shall suggest.

Whoever the Chair recognizes in the days ahead, who desire this procedure can move to strike any amendment that is offered. A Senator can make a motion to lay it on the table immediately after it is offered if the Chair can recognize the next man.

I shall be frank with the Senator that I do not see where he is gaining much by objecting to this request. I should like to have the opportunity to offer committee amendments; and in fact, as I have stated, I shall insist on it. I shall be happy to designate those amendments which I should like to see on and have a time limitation on the particular amendments; but I can get recorded before this bill is passed by offering an amendment to strike. That is easy, and the only thing I have lost is one vote; and I do not consider that we have enough votes anyway.

I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, it is important to have a supposed enemy of this program, who desires to defeat family assistance, trying to work out a program to give us an opportunity to vote, and the distinguished Senator from New York, who is an outstanding friend and supporter of the family assistance program, putting the Senate in the position where the family assistance plan will be defeated.

The Senator from Delaware, from the start, has been consistently against the family assistance program. The Senator from New York has indicated that he desires to be a cosponsor of the family assistance program. The irony of the entire situation is that is a Democrat on this side who is doing everything he can to see that the family assistance program is passed. The Senator from Delaware had been adamant from the start about having a series of votes and using the parliamentary procedure to prevent a vote on the family assistance plan.

After conversations and discussion among many of those who were interested, we tried to work out a method of procedure to give every Member of this body an opportunity to try to perfect this proposal. I know that the Senator from New York would like to see adopted many of the proposals that the Senator from Oklahoma would like to submit. That is my understanding, and if I mistake the Senator from New York I would like to be corrected. I know that the Senator from Oklahoma had a series of amendments on which the Senator from New York saw eye to eye with the Senate. We agreed, and I thought every Member of this body, we had to get ourselves into a parliamentary situation to give the Senator from Oklahoma and every Member of this body an opportunity to have a vote on this amendments, up and down.

Now we are in a situation, of course, where we have come back to where we started. I shall still try to get recognition from the Chairman of the Finance Committee, and I am optimistic that we have enough votes anyway.
I cannot agree with the Senator from Delaware when he says that this is all a charade. I recognize how slim the chance will be to finally adopt the family assistance plan, or any other part of this bill. The clock is indeed running out on us. But here is a program that the President of the United States has had before Congress and the country for a year and a half. It has been a controversial program. Hearings have been held in the House of Representatives and in this body, and much time has been spent.

I believe it becomes very important for the country to find out how the Senate actually feels. I would hope that this bill could be passed in sufficient time for a conference, but if it cannot be passed sufficiently in advance to permit a conference and for final approval by January 3, at least we will have indicated sufficiently to the Nation that Congress with the President of the United States, makes a commitment toward eliminating poverty which would enable us, early in the New Year, to move immediately forward, without further hearings, to take up the Social Security and Family Assistance program.

I would sincerely hope that the distinguished Senator from New York, who does not have to yield to any man in his concern for those in poverty, those people on welfare, and the most unfortunate part of our population, would consider what is happening as a result of his objection, and the Senate would reconsider his objection to permitting these amendments to be adopted en bloc, and then letting the Senate proceed in an orderly way to discuss, to debate, and to amend the family assistance program, and proceed to a final vote.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I certainly hope the Senator and I can obtain that agreement. I do not believe we may yield in this matter en bloc during this last day of the session, and I do not believe the Senator would yield en bloc. But I believe that the Senator and I should have an opportunity to consult one's colleagues, and without even an arrangement of hours or by arrangements such as the Senator suggests, without even an opportunity to speak, and asking the Senate to consider all of the committee amendments, and proceed by asking unanimous consent of the Senate to consider the Wilson Amendment to the conference, and for final approval by January 3.

In the meantime, we can make some progress by taking up the other preceding titles, giving us a chance to debate the family assistance plan and welfare reform, and if the Senator from New York will agree to that, then I think we can start moving.

Of course, if he will not agree to it, we are right back where we started from. I would suggest some type of a midground on which we could all agree.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The difficulty with that is we cannot ask unanimous consent to consider title 4 until we hit title 3, and the Trade Act is in the middle; that cannot be changed. It is there. I can see why the Senator from New York or those who oppose the Trade Act would not want to agree to titles 1 and 2 en bloc, because if we could do that, the Senators would immediately be before the Senate. I am not trying to fool anyone on this.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield, without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I have heard with the greatest of interest the views of my colleagues, and I am not obtuse or dull at all.

As to the gentle irony of the Senator from Connecticut, I respect and admire him greatly, and I yield to no one in my affection for him. But it is not unusual to put the screws on a Member who has the temerity to tell the President he wants to do something they want to do. The Senator from Connecticut may not have the same feeling I do about the trade title, which I think could be disastrous to our country. I believe that the aged nothing—indeed, I get them something; because, instead of being tied up in a whole package which is bound to have a retaliatory effect, they ultimately will be extracted from it and will have their social security; and I hope very much that we will have that and the family assistance plan for the poor of the country considered, as they should be, alone and on their merits, without being used as a Judas goat for the trade bill.

I understand the feeling of every Senator, and he has an absolute right to say what he does and to make it as tough for me as possible. But every Senator has to obey his conscience as to what he considers to be the best interests of the people in his State and of the Nation, and I think I have done so in this.

As to the statement made by my friend, the Senator from Delaware, as to the state of confusion, this is war. War is always confused. Yet, somehow or other, great captains have emerged. Somehow or other, when the confusion is over, some decisive has happened. I have deep confidence that something decisive is going to happen here, but there will be a little confusion to start with.

So, with all respect, I am not at all dismayed by these pleas and entreaties. I know that the Senators know they do not have to make them to me. It does not make any difference, anyway. But I should like to explain my own position, because I think that is owed to the Senate, and it is important.

In the first place, I do not stand alone, and I knew nothing about this until this minute, except by rumor. Therefore, the very least—and it is always the most profitable way one could do it—would be to tell a Member such as myself, "We are going to ask for this. We think it is good for you. Call a meeting of your supporters and find out whether or not they agree with you, and come to the floor in a way and to a resolution which is reflective of the view of your side."

This was not done. I am caught flat-footed, as it were. I have to object or not object, or the cow is out of the barn. Second, this is a lame duck Congress. A new Congress has been elected, which will come into office on January 3. Yet, the attempt is being made to decide massive questions of national policy within the day that is all we have in a lame duck Congress, with which itself is highly questionable—certainly on such profound issues as those we face now.

It is one thing to complete our business. We have appropriation bills or other bills on which we have been working a long time, which were voted by the House and the Senate and on which the President has signed, and we are trying to reconcile differences, and so forth. But these are brand new things, enormous things, of greatest consequence to the future history of our country and, in case of the trade bill, perhaps the world. Yet, we will not take the least bit of care or sure. Otherwise, we would be unkind to the poor, who have to live in this world, too, unless we go right along now and vote these things out under limitation of debate of hours or by arrangements such as the Senator suggests, without even an opportunity to consult one's colleagues who are similarly minded.

I would most respectfully suggest that, instead of putting Senators such as myself on the spot, which is not fair, but I will object—I am telling the Senate now that I object.

I think it is very unwise and unfair and I think that Senators such as myself should have an opportunity to get together with their fellows and come to some understanding and disagree and why, in some kind of coordinated way, instead of being faced with this on the floor; and then there are entreaties and the fact that I, too, am entitled to this same right, I am decisive on the theory that one has to yield his judgment and his conscience and say, "Yes."

I am terribly sorry, but my people did not send me here to have that kind of brain or that kind of will.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I should like to reply to the Senator from New York.

I am going to make a copy of his speech and use it later when we get into debate on the family assistance plan because he has expressed my sentiments exactly about how unsound it is to bring up proposals which have been rejected by the committee and which are not germane to the bill before the Senate. I thank him, because it is a much better speech than I shall be able to prepare, and I am going to deliver it, with his consent of course, and I will credit him later.

He has made a strong argument against approving the family assistance plan.

As to the question that confusion will result and that the cow will be out of the barn, I will say that if this objection persists I am afraid it will not be a matter of the cow out of the barn but the bulls in the china shop before we get out of here today, because I can see a mess created.

I would repeat this point. We cannot get final passage on the family assistance plan, the social security increases, or any other proposal in this bill until the Senate first calls the roll on the Trade Act. It cannot be done. There is no possible way under Senate Rules unless there is unanimous consent to strike the Trade Act out and there is unanimous consent that no one will offer any amendments dealing with the Trade Act. We know that that is not possible.

If we are going to be on notice that this is going to be filibustered regardless of whatever we do later in the session I would most respectfully suggest to the leadership to pull this bill down unless we can get an agreement that there is going to be some orderly process here. I would dislike sitting here for the next 12 or 14 days—I will not mind it so much because I have quite a little time ahead of me in which to rest and enjoy it while the rest of the Senators are back here working. I do not see the idea of sitting here the next 12 or 14 days—I will not mind it so much because I have quite a little time ahead of me in which to rest and enjoy it while the rest of the Senators are back here working. I do not see the idea of sitting here the next 12 or 14 days, spinning our wheels at Christmastime, giving the impression to 13 or 14 million elderly people, “We’re going to give you a 10 percent increase in your social security benefits; we’re going to raise your minimum to a hundred dollars; we’re going to give you a cost of living escalation; we’re going to give you the family assistance plan,” when 100 Senators know that is not going to develop. Let us not kid them. This is Christmas. It is cruel to these people who have no knowledge as to what we are doing; it is cruel to mislead them. I think it is a hoax.

I hope that the Senate in the closing days of this session will have more Christmas spirit in its bones than to promise this to a lot of people who need it and to whom Senators know they will not be able to deliver it.

I pray let us lay it aside if we are not going to vote on it. I am willing to vote on it.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. MANSFIELD. I think it is about time for the Senator to stop, because my heart is beginning to bleed.

All I want to say is that the leadership will not pull this bill down. We will stay with it until a decision, if possible, is reached one way or the other.

In the meantime, because of the time we are wasting and the filibustering going on, and the filibustering within the filibusters, the minutes fly by, the hours are passing, and the days are rapidly fading into the distance of the new year. We have approximately 10 days left in which to attend to this matter and other matters. We have at least six filibusters, perhaps seven now, of various sorts going on. We are looking foolish.

I find no fault in serving in a lameduck Congress, may I say, because every Member is elected to serve as a representative of the people until noon on the 3d of January next year. I do not denigrate any Member who is serving out his last months—in this instance, his last days—because he is carrying out his responsibilities; he is performing his duties as he is supposed to.

I am wholeheartedly in accord with the proposal made by the distinguished Senator from Delaware that the committee amendments be considered and approved en bloc. In that way, we can make some progress and stand a small chance of disposing of the proposed legislation. Without that, there is no chance.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, do not know that it would serve any purpose, but I should like to try. I am going to suggest the absence of a quorum, if I may, without losing my right to the floor, in order that we may discuss this subject a little further with some Senators, in the hope that we may reach an agreement. But if we cannot, I will call off the quorum and will resume my remarks.

I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to suggest the absence of a quorum without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I know not too much hope of getting it agreed to, I send to the desk a unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed unanimous-consent request will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments be considered and agreed to en bloc, and as agreed to be considered as original text for the purpose of amendment.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The unanimous-consent request is not agreed to.

The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I regret very much that we are placed in this position because I think it would have been the most orderly procedure to have offered the amendments as they came before the Senate. I was perfectly willing, as I said before, to debate the family assistance plan when it was before us. Other Senators could have gotten recognition as far as I am concerned immediately after I release the floor, which would have been in very short order, and whoever is recognized could have been recognized. I told the Presiding Officer that the Senator from Connecticut wanted to be recognized next, and he could have presented his family assistance plan and it would have been before the Senate in an orderly manner. In that way it could have been debated, amended, or whatever the Senate saw fit to do. I respect the right of Senators to proceed as they see fit. But we are confronted with this situation.

It is obvious we are not going to get this bill enacted until we face the question of what we do or do not do with the trade agreement section. There is no possible parliamentary situation that could develop in the Senate where the Senate could vote on final passage of the bill without first having accepted or stricken from the bill the trade agreement section, which is title III. There is no possible way that could be done so we will have to face this issue first.

The reason I would have liked to have this agreement is that I think it is most unfortunate if the roll were called on the question of raising social security benefits by 10 percent and raising the minimum to $100, together with all the other benefits, and have that news go over the country so that the people would believe they are going to get those increases just a few days before Christmas, when every single Member knows it will not become law under those circumstances unless we can settle the trade issue in the Senate.

Therefore, since this situation has developed, we should face the issue. As I said before, I voted against placing the trade section in this bill. I would hate to see the Senate take that step. I know a majority of the committee, and a substantial majority of the committee, voted to put this section in the bill as title 3. I respect the decision of the majority of the committee. The majority of the committee by a vote of 14 to 1 rejected the family assistance plan on one occasion, by a vote of 10 to 6 on another occasion, and I forgot the vote on a third occasion but it was by a substantial margin. So we have that situation.

I am willing to face all of this but I am a great believer that if we are going to have a lot of filibuster let us have it and get it over and either settle the issue or not.

Therefore, even though I am opposed to and object to the trade section, I am going to submit an amendment to the bill that provides that at the end of the committee amendment we insert an amendment which is the Trade Agreement Act. We will settle that issue right now and then proceed with the rest of the bill in an orderly fashion, I hope.

Therefore, Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to be inserted at the end of the pending committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with. It is just the title of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and, without objection, the amendment will be printed in the Record.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield, with the understanding that I do not lose my right to the floor.

Mr. JAVITS. Yes, with the understanding that the Senator does not lose his right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, as I heard the amendment read, it did not make any change in the original committee amendment—that the wording is the same as title III of the bill. Therefore, I ask the Chair whether such an amendment is in order. I realize something may be added to it. The Chair has it there for examination. I did not hear that it made any change in the original committee amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no rule that prevents its being offered. Later, if it appeared to be redundant, a motion could be offered to withdraw it or to strike. The committee amendments are not a part of the bill until they are agreed to on the floor.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. JAVITS. My inquiry is directed to whether a point of order would lie against this amendment because it does not actually amend any part of the committee amendment. The Chair has the amendment before him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that a point of order would not lie at this time.

Mr. JAVITS. Could the Senator from New York have the Chair's reason, according to the Parliamentarian?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, may I comment? It would not lie for the same reason that a point of order would not lie against the family assistance plan. I checked into both of them. I think it would have been better if we had done otherwise, but the Parliamentarian very clearly stated that the amendments are in order. The family assistance plan would be in order as the Senator from Connecticut was going to offer it.

Mr. President, this amendment is being offered on behalf of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. TALMADGE) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. FANNIN). I am in this position. I disagree, as I told the Senators, with the trade section in this bill, but I do think that if we are going to have to face it before anything is done, I want it faced head on and I do not want to disillusion a lot of these people. I am reserving the right to vote against this amendment.

I would be willing to withdraw this amendment—and the Senator knows I have bent over backward to get an agreement. This is not a threat; I am not offering it in that way—if we could have unanimous consent to let this go over until tomorrow, when Senators could have time to think this over, and maybe we could get together. I would withdraw this amendment and would be the first to renew my request if we could have that unanimous-consent agreement. I hope it can be done. I think this would be the better way to proceed.

I am caught in the situation. I have no choice, because the minute I release the floor I know the family assistance plan will be offered, which is another unrelated bill, not subject to a point of order again, as the Senator points out.

If we are going to face this decision later let us just face it now.

If we can get unanimous consent to lay this bill aside until tomorrow at the 3 o'clock session with the understanding that I resume my right to the floor so there will be the same parliamentary situation I shall withdraw that amendment and express the hope that with Senators who agree to this trade section we would reach an agreement on the amendments.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. I did not ask my question with a view to challenging the Senator. I wanted to get the parliamentary situation for other amendments which I or other Senators may offer.

I might say at this earlier, Providence may be leading us by the hand. The trade amendment is the sticking point in the bill, and the Senator has properly tabled it, and let us have it out. Let the administration face it, and let us face it. Let us try to find our way out of this maze. It may be the best thing to do. I ask nothing from the Senator at all. He has one horse.

Mr. GRiffin. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield without losing the floor?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. GRiffin. The Senator from Delaware has offered an amendment to the pending committee amendment. I ask this as a parliamentary inquiry. For the information of the Senator, the Senator from Michigan correct that no further amendment may be offered to the trade amendment which the Senator now has before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that this is an amendment in the second degree and is therefore not open to further amendment.

Mr. GRiffin. So if we proceed to a vote on this amendment, we will have to vote up or down?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I agree with that ruling. That is as I understand it. It is most unfortunate, but that is the situation.

I am only offering this trade amendment to point out the situation we would be in with the family assistance plan. The same thing would be true.

I hope the Senate will not get into this posture on either of these bills. I want them voted up or down.

If the Senator made a motion to strike out this trade section and it were in order I would expect to support it. Any Senator can offer such a motion. It may be amended in a form that both the Senator and I would be supporting. Perhaps we would not.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. SCOTT. I am aware of what the distinguished Senator has in mind, and I would be hopeful, under the circumstances, that if we proceed as he is doing, I do not think the leadership on either side is making any suggestion that we go over until 3 o'clock tomorrow.

Mr. SKIPP. No. I think we ought to stay on the pending measure. I am sorry that in my absence—not because of my absence—but in my absence the request of the distinguished Senator from Delaware, which would have brought about the acceptance of all committee amendments and would have in effect presented us with a clean bill, was not agreed to. I think that what he suggested was proper and was the appropriate and efficient way to proceed. This way we are getting the cart before the horse.

Frankly, I do not know what position will be taken on the pending measure. I do not want to disillusion a lot of these people. I am reserving the right to vote it up or down.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield for an observation, with the understanding that he does not lose the floor and that his speech will not be counted as a second speech?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield with that understanding.

Mr. CURTIS. I would like to point out that there are many things in this voluminous bill. There are many improvements in many of our social programs. There are improvements in the medicare program. There are improvements in the medicare program.

If we labor for days and perfect this bill, I would say it would be better if we got accustomed to being confused. I think we ought to take advantage of whatever hours are left and do what we can to act on the President's program.

Mr. SCOTT. My purpose is to get those measures in the President's program which can be enacted, if at all possible, written into law. I do not see anything to be gained by going over until 3 o'clock on this or any other amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield for an observation with the understanding that he does not lose the floor and that his speech will not be counted as a second speech?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.
on the trade portion of the bill, then the whole Senate has wasted its time. It has labored for nothing. It was held out to the country that certain acts would be taken and certain things would be corrected and certain problems would be solved, but then we would go to the end of the line and there would be no legislation because of the filibuster on the trade bill.

So since that is the only one feature where it appears there might be a filibuster, I think the thing to do is to face up to it now rather than labor here for days, improving or rejecting or approving family assistance and all the other provisions in the bill only to have the entire bill come to naught.

Suppose we got a social security, Medicare, and welfare bill that met with the approval of the majority of the Senate, after long hours and days of work; then, face a filibuster, I think the thing to do is to face up to it now rather than labor here for days, improving or rejecting or approving family assistance and all the other provisions in the bill only to have the entire bill come to naught.

The well-being of the United States requires this trade legislation. I must urge, therefore, that the Senate examine these matters with great care, in an endeavor to put this legislation into acceptable form. I therefore, that the Senate examine these matters with great care, in an endeavor to put this legislation into acceptable form. I would hope that such legislation could be passed at this session of Congress.

So the President himself, Mr. President, has invited very careful consideration of the matter. He has flagged its importance, and, as I said a minute ago, it may very well be that Providence is leading us by the hand in respect to what the exigencies have compelled us to do. So the Senator from Delaware to do.

I should like to make, in conclusion, just one further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the President and the Parliamentarian.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. JAVITS. If this amendment, Mr. President, is rejected either by tabling or by rejection on a vote, does that displace in any way title III of this bill, the so-called trade title?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It does not.

Mr. JAVITS. So title III would still remain to be voted up or down, no matter what we did about this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. JAVITS. I thank my colleague. Now may I say to the Senator from Delaware that though I think, as I say, that Providence may have led us all by the hand in the right direction, I shall nevertheless take the occasion, when, as, and if we adjourn tonight, to gather my colleagues together and, still without any assurance that it may or may not be done, give the Senate our best judgment as to how we think the Senate and its work may be facilitated and our consciences and our principles sustained in respect to this matter. I thank the Senator very much for his kindness in yielding.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the amendment now offered by the distinguished Senator from Delaware be agreed to by the Senate, and thereafter, when the committee amendment dealing with trade is presented, is it voted down; does the Williams amendment still remain in the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SARR). It would remain if thereafter the bill was passed, with the Williams amendment, as agreed to, as a part of the original bill.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I have checked this point, and I agree with the ruling of the Chair. It would be redundant because to a certain extent it would be repetitious, and since there was nothing in the bill itself when it went to conference, one of the sections could be dropped.

Mr. President, as I said, I regret the parliamentary situation in which we find ourselves, but I think we should face this issue. I say again that if, tomorrow when we reconvene, this matter has not been disposed of, and we can get an agreement on these amendments en bloc, I shall be the first to support a withdrawal of this amendment, so that we can proceed in an orderly fashion, because I think it would be much better.

However, since we cannot, I feel that we have no choice here. Because I think we had just as well face up to the issue. To make sure that we do, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment. I yield the floor.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, is this vote to amend the pending amendment? Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President. Yes. Mr. MANSFIELD. Will the Senator try to get a time limitation, so we can get on with the bill?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, we do not need a time limitation, because I, too, think we should get on with the bill. I ask that the clerk call the roll.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 1147

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, Senator YARROSOUCHE, Senator SAXE, Senator MATTHIAS, Senator HART, Senator HUGHES, Senator McGovern, and Senator MONDALE, I send to Senator SAXBE, Senator MATHIAS, Senator HART, Senator HUGHES, Senator McGovern, and Senator MONDALE, I send to the desk an amendment to the catastrophic health insurance provisions of H.R. 17550, and I ask that the amendment may be ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be received and printed, and will lie on the table.

Mr. KENNEDY. The purpose of the amendment is to launch a new Federal "seed" program to improve the Nation's existing health care system, and to help prepare the system to meet the extraordinary new demands that will be made upon it by the catastrophic health insurance program.

The measure to provide Federal insurance against the cost of catastrophic illness is one of the most significant provisions added by the Senate Finance Committee to the social security bill. I share the committee's concern over the critical problem of catastrophic illness. Indeed, I believe that one of the most serious aspects of our national health crisis for millions of our citizens is the very real fear of financial ruin because of serious illness.

At the same time, however, such a program, if enacted by itself, runs the risk of substantially increasing the existing imbalances in our health system. I believe that if a program of insurance against catastrophic illness is to be enacted at this time, it should also include provisions dealing with the equally serious problems of the organization and delivery of health care in the Nation. In other words, I feel that any new major health insurance program cannot be simply a financing mechanism. It cannot be permitted simply to increase the effective demand for health care, without at the same time taking the essential steps that are necessary to insure that the new demand can be met, and that high quality health services will actually be available.

The amendment I have proposed would establish a "Health Resources Development Account" in the Catastrophic Health Insurance Trust Fund, to help solve the critical problems of manpower, facilities, and other resources in the Nation's health care system.

The Health Resources Development Account would be financed by earmarking 10 percent—approximately $250 to $250 million a year, based on present estimates—of the funds in the Catastrophic Health Insurance Trust Fund for the purposes of the account. The funds in the account would be used as "front end" money to supplement other Government health development efforts. They would pay for establishing new group practices, for manpower training and education, for creating and developing new categories and skills in the health field, for strengthening health planning activities in States and localities, and for a wide variety of other innovative programs.

Funds from the account would not replace the regular appropriations for support of ongoing health services, such as aid to medical schools and hospitals. Rather, the funds will be applied as a catalyst for innovation in all parts of the health system. In making this commitment, Congress will recognize its responsibility to the American people to assure the availability of health services, not merely to provide a payment mechanism for such services.

The approach adopted in this amendment has been specifically endorsed by many experts in the health field, including the report last June of the administration's Task Force on Medicaid. In addition, a similar "resources development fund" approach is contained in part F of S. 4297, the bill that Senator YARROSOUCHE, Senator SAXE, 14 other Senators, and I have introduced in this Congress to establish a program of comprehensive national health insurance for the United States.

At this time, however, I would like to emphasize as strongly as I can that the amendment we are offering today is in no sense tailored to any particular version of health care. Rather, it offers a program designed to develop the health resources needed to meet the new demand that will be made on the health systems by any extension of existing Federal health insurance programs, whether it be the catastrophic illness insurance program in the committee bill or any other program.

Mr. President, today's Washington Star carries a perceptive article by Judith Randall emphasizing the importance of including resources development provisions in health insurance legislation. Otherwise, as she states, the reach of such legislation will surely exceed its grasp.

Mr. President, I hope that this amendment will be accepted by Congress as part of the pending legislation. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment may be printed at this point in the RECORD, together with the article by Miss Randall.

The amendment and article were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

On page 402, line 11, delete the quotation mark.

On page 402, Insert after line 11 the following:
Mr. SAXE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. SAXE. I am glad to be associated on this amendment with the Senator from Massachusetts for another reason. I must feel that if we go into an extensive insurance program, however well-intentioned, we will simply add to the already difficult situation of expenses that cannot be avoided today with high-priced hospital beds, and not trying to keep people out of the hospital by preventive medicine, by having preventive facilities, and by having trained personnel who can be available to persons who otherwise would wind up in the hospital.

I feel very strongly that our health distribution method in this country at the present time is sadly in need of review, and that to dump good money after bad on this catastrophic system, without putting money into the training of personnel and the providing of preventive facilities, will not solve any problem; it will simply raise the cost and increase the crowding and the load upon our physicians.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Ohio. Together with Senator Yarborough, he was one of the initial sponsors of our national health insurance program. He realizes that the health care system, what he really to do is to improve the organization and delivery of health care, as well as the financing. If we are going to provide quality health care, we must approach the problem in this multifaceted manner.

I commend the amendment that was offered in the Finance Committee with respect to catastrophic illness insurance, and to have it included as one of the critical needs of our health system. Many citizens who have built up savings over the course of their lives are threatened with the loss of their savings because of catastrophic illness. We must begin now to attack this problem, but we must also begin to come to grips with the problem of the shortage of health manpower in this country and all the other inadequacies of our health delivery system.

The whole thrust and purpose of this amendment is to take a small but important step to allay some of the fears associated with that shortage. I think it is a responsible approach. I think it is extremely reasonable in terms of resources. It will not take additional commitments of resources. As a result, hopefully, we will begin to reduce the inflationary trend that has been rampant in the en-- tire health service area in recent years. Inflation in the health area is between 2 and 3 times as much as it is generally in our economy. I think that one of the principal reasons for this excessive inflation is that in programs like medicare and medicaid, the Federal Government has increased the demand for health care, without providing any means to increase the supply of health services. It is for this reason that the Senator from Ohio and I and other Senators have offered this amendment.

ceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, under the agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:
H.R. 17550, to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the Medicare, Medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Without objection, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) is now recognized.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President,—

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please come to order.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have not informed the Senator from Delaware what I am about to say, but I had informed the Senator from Georgia and I had mentioned the matter to the Senator from Rhode Island; namely, that I intend to move to table the pending amendment to the committee amendment when the bill is laid before the Senate.

Having made that explanation, Mr. President, I now move that the pending amendment—

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield only for a question.

Mr. JAVITS. I ask the Senator this question. In view of the fact that Members have not been notified, and I know of at least one Member who is on his way here, having heard the rumor. Does not the Senator feel some little time, say, 30 minutes, or a small amount of time, should be granted Members who are within reach but cannot get here—

Mr. LONG. I would be willing, if I could obtain unanimous consent to do so, without prejudice to myself or losing my right to the floor, to suggest the absence of a quorum in order that—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, we have debated this long enough. Let us face the issue. I would regret if it were tabled. As I said earlier, I did not support putting this provision in, but the Senate should stand up and vote on this trade proposal and I would hope they would not table it now. We could call the roll immediately and vote on it now.

On a direct vote I will vote against the measure.

Mr. MONDALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. After that, they can offer the family assistance plan which I object to, as Senators know, and we can go to a rollcall on that in a short time. Let us do our business and go home. But if we are going to have to vote on this, let us not hide behind a tabling motion—and I say that with all due respect to the opinions of all. Let us face up to it like men.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, under the agreement.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

[Acknowledgment of Senators present]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The court will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll; and the following Senators answered to their names:

The distinguished majority leader, if I may do so without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, the Chamber is getting a little crowded, and I would hope that there would be a little clearing out of the Chamber so that Senators can find their way around.

I do not like the idea of attatches sitting on the floor in this Chamber. I would suggest that the Sergeant at Arms be instructed to make sure that those who have no business here go; the rest can stay.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Sergeant at Arms is instructed to follow the order of the Senate.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that the clerk read it.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment.

The legislative clerk read the amendment, as follows:

At the bottom of page 6, insert the following: "at the end of the table proposed to be struck out."

At the bottom of page 6, insert the following:

"There shall be added to the primary insurance amount of each individual and the maximum amount of benefits payable on the basis of his wages and self-employment income, computed as provided above, amounts equal to those necessary to increase such primary insurance amount and maximum amount, respectively, to the amounts which would result from use of the following table instead of the preceding table:

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. President, I would like to call the attention of the Senate to the possibility of a constitutional amendment which would place the entire social security system under national control. This is a matter that has been under consideration for some time and there are those who are of the opinion that such a measure is necessary to protect the welfare of the people.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, this is a matter of great importance to the House language proposed to be struck, and I propose to put into effect a minor change upward to the effected changes by the Senate committee in the social security charts.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. President, I will withdraw the amendment, and ask for the Senate's advice on this matter. The PRESIDENT pro Tem. The Senate will deal with the amendment.
unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with. The amendment at the desk is the family assistance plan which has been at the desk since December 9, with renumbering of some pages.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I ask the Senator from Connecticut a question? Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield for a question.

Mr. MILLER. Do I understand that the way the amendment is now before the Senate, it is an amendment in the second degree and therefore no amendment to it is possible?

Mr. RIBICOFF. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. I object to the unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read the amendment.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator withdraw that for a while?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, may we have order so we can hear every word that the Senator reads?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a request? The amendment is at the desk and it is about to be read and it is the pending business. With the Senator consent to yielding for a moment, and I will ask unanimous consent for a colloquy with the distinguished majority leader on a matter of the highest importance?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Provided that I do not lose the floor.

Mr. SCOTT. I would like to ask the distinguished majority leader, because this is to me the greatest interest to all Senators here.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I object to the request. The Senator cannot hold the floor and farm it out. It is all right with me to give consent, but I do not think any Senator can hold the floor while it goes on.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order for the reading of the amendment to be interrupted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk had not started to read the amendment yet.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I can only repeat, this is a matter of the greatest importance, which all Senators want to hear.

Mr. HANSEN. I am sure they will.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the ruling of the Chair that the request for dispensing with the reading of the amendment was made by the Senator from Connecticut and was objected to by the Senator from Iowa. The clerk will read the amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the majority leader be recognized for 2 minutes prior to the reading of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ERVIN. Mr. President, from the last objection, I understood that the Senator would not consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment.

Mr. LONG. No, I am only asking unanimous consent that prior to the reading of the amendment the majority leader be recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will be in order. Will Senators take seats, or at least walk in silence?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, the distinguished minority leader and I have had several meetings in the last few days discussing the situation in which the Senate finds itself in the declining days of this Congress.

We are disturbed at the image which this body is showing to the American people, but we are more disturbed at the image we are showing to ourselves. We are facing a most difficult period in the history of the Senate and the Nation—and the two are synonymous—and we think that it is vital that we have a meeting to discuss this impasse, and it is the intention of the distinguished minority leader and myself to ask for an executive meeting of the Senate at the conclusion of the vote on cloture tomorrow.

Mr. SCOTT. Which would take place at 11 o'clock, on the assumption that we are continuing at 10 a.m. tomorrow, is that correct?

Mr. MANSFIELD. We are convening at 9. The first hour is set aside. Then the voice vote is to take place at 11 a.m. with the hour commencing at 10 a.m. under controlled time.

The purpose is that the leadership wants to lay the problem before the Senate and ask whether the Senators wants done to get out of the impasse in which we find ourselves. We will have a list of filibusters now in being and of filibusters proposed, and we will try to lay out to our colleagues just what the consequences will be if we do not get together and do what has to be done collectively. Alone, the leaders have no power—only that grace which Senators give them.

We want your advice and counsel. We are not disturbed about the image outside, but we are very disturbed about the image of the Senate to the Nation itself; and I would hope, on the basis of your considering this matter tonight, that when the meeting is called tomorrow, we will be able to get together and work ourselves, in some fashion, out of the impasse in which this body—and this body alone—finds itself at the present time. I think that the Senate owes the country itself.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, would the distinguished majority leader permit me to make an observation? I simply want to say that I agree. Tomorrow we can come to the Senator from Iowa to ask the Senator from Connecticut a question.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Connecticut whether he would consider making a unanimous-consent request that his pending amendments be read, and, preferably with a time limitation.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, let me explain to the Senator from Iowa why this cannot be done.

As the Senator realizes, yesterday when the Senator from Delaware made his unanimous-consent request, I was quick to accede to it, after discussions with the Senator from Delaware. I was more anxious to give every Member of this body an opportunity to file amendments and vote on the amendments to the family assistance program.

The unanimous-consent request to the Senator from Delaware was objected to. Then we found ourselves with the trade amendment. Now, if I make this unanimous-consent request, the family assistance program would then be open to any other kind of amendment, so we must consent to the family assistance program.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I have a point of order. Is it not in order for the Chair to entertain a unanimous-consent request concerning the pending amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair rules that the clerk had started to read the amendment. He should not have been interrupted, and the amendment will be read.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, a point of order. I thought I heard the Chair state that the clerk had not begun reading the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair never had that opportunity, I might say to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, may we have the reporter read back the Record on that point?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Official Reporter may do so.

Connecticut has modified his amendment.

The Chair might suggest to the Members of the Senate that the Senator from Connecticut has modified his amendment in accordance with the amendment that the Senators have on their desks. The Clerk is reading the modification.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. CURTIS. When the vote comes up on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, will that vote be limited to voting up or down on the Senator from Connecticut that the Clerk has read? We are told that the amendment was to be read in full and that no amendment to the amendment would be allowed. My question is, when the vote is taken, will it be limited to the words that the Clerk has read?

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. The Senator’s assumption is correct—that the vote will take place on the language as read by the Clerk in the modified amendment as submitted by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware and Mr. ERVIN addressed the Chair.

Mr. CURTIS. No other language?

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. That is correct. He may modify that amendment himself until the Senate takes some action on it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Is the Clerk reading the titles or is he reading the full text?

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. He is reading the full text of the amendment as submitted by the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. PRESIDENT—

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President—

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Clerk was reading the amendment, and I therefore insist on the regular order because the Clerk is being interrupted to suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER (Mr. Cook). By unanimous consent it could be, otherwise the Clerk will proceed to read the amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENTIAL OFFICER. The regular paper having been called for, the Clerk will proceed to read the amendment.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I send to the desk a modification of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Hughes). The Senator has a right to modify his amendment.

The modification is as follows:

On page 101, line 2, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof "and" and between lines 2 and 3 insert the following paragraph:

"(3) with respect to aid furnished under the plan for any month—

"(A) the total of the amounts used to determine the needs of an applicant for or recipient of aid shall be at least $10 higher than the total thereof which would have been used to determine his needs under the State plan as in effect for March 1971, or

"(B) in the case of two or more such individuals who are, as determined in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, members of the same household, the sum of such totals used for the month for which the determination is being made shall exceed the sum of such totals for March 1971 by $10 plus $5 for such individual in excess of one, except that, in the case of any State the plan of which provides for meeting less than 100 per centum of its standard of need or provides for considering less than 100 per centum of requirements in determining need, such plan shall provide such methods as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe for achieving as nearly as possible the results provided for under the preceding provisions of this paragraph.

For purposes of paragraph (3), the 'State plan as in effect for March 1971' means the State plan (approved under this title) as in effect for March 1971 or, if there was no such plan in effect for such State for such month—

"(i) the State plan which was in effect for such month and was approved under title I, in the case of any individual who is sixty-five years of age or older,

"(ii) the State plan in effect for such month and approved under title X, in the case of an individual who is blind, or

"(iii) the State plan in effect for such month and approved under title XIV, in the case of an individual who is severely disabled, except that if two or more of clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) are applicable with respect to an individual, it shall be the State plan under which the total is the higher (or highest), and except that if none of such clauses is applicable to an individual, it shall be the one of the State plans approved under titles I, X, and XIV which were in effect for such month, under which the total which would have been applicable to him is the higher (or highest)."

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, welfare reform is the most urgent domestic legislation—

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. For a question?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. No; to get the yeas and nays on the modification.

Mr. RIBICOFF. No, I will not yield to have the yeas and nays on the modification ordered, because it was discussed here during the meeting that there may be other Senators here.

Mr. RIBICOFF. No; I would object to that. I have the floor. Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order, Mr. Ribicoff. Mr. President, welfare reform is the most urgent domestic legislation now before Congress.

Men of all persuasions agree that our welfare programs have become a national scandal. Under present law, weak or nonexistent incentives to work and maintain the family structure, and categories which exclude up to one half of our poor, all contribute to the disastrous system now in operation. The administration's family assistance plan, first proposed 16 months ago and under careful consideration by Congress for almost a year, may be the first step we take toward the reform of our welfare programs.

Some believe this legislation goes too far; others argue that it does not go far enough. In my own mind, this amendment does not contain everything I believe is ultimately required in our welfare programs. But, if this is not a perfect program, it is a necessary program.

Passage of the amendment Senator Bennett and I propose would be the most important step in three decades toward decent, workable, efficient, and humane public assistance system in the United States.

Under this proposal, fourteen and a half million Americans will be eligible for benefits under present law. Two million people will be helped out of poverty. For the first time, every family with a child will be assured a minimum income. Uniform national standards and eligibility criteria will simplify administration and equalize opportunity throughout the country.

Let us be clear about the nature of this amendment. It will not reduce Federal or State or the number of eligible recipients. Family assistance will cost an additional $4.3 billion in the first year of operation. These costs include $600 million for increased day care centers and work training programs, as well as almost $1 billion for the aged, blind, and disabled.

The needs of the poor, the disabled, the blind, and the elderly will not permit us to do less. This country must realize that we cannot save money by wasting lives.

The Present Welfare System

Welfare in the United States today is a failure.

Assistance payments are insufficient to meet minimal needs. Family and work incentives are lacking. Eligibility is based on arbitrary categories rather than need. While Congress has established a legal right to income assistance, it has provided a system which frustrates the exercise of these rights and demeans those who do exercise them.

Under present law, fully half of all poor people, including two out of every three poor children, do not receive any aid.

The aid to families with dependent children program—the largest and most generous of present welfare programs in 54 different jurisdictions throughout the United States.

No national standards exist for either benefits or eligibility. Payments vary from an average of $46 per month for a family of four in Mississippi to $265 for such a family in New Jersey. This disparity is further aggravated by complicated State variations in criteria for eligibility and standards in the first year, which can be received. In addition, the administration of the program has varied widely from State to State and locality to locality in terms of equity and responsiveness to the needs of recipients.

Mr. GRiffin. Mr. President, will the distinguished Senator from Connecticut yield at an appropriate time?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I am pleased to yield now to the Senator from Michigan, without relinquishing my right to the floor.

Mr. GRiffin. I wonder if there is a possibility of getting the yeas and nays on the Senator's amendment, when he has modified it to the extent that he desires, because if that is possible, then we can tell a lot of Senators they can go home. Otherwise, I have been served with notice that there may be a live quorum in the evening, and I do not know whether to warn Senators or not.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield—

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I have the floor because of the request of the assistant minority leader, and then I shall be pleased to yield to the distinguished Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I would like to have the yeas and nays ordered on both the Scott amendment and the Ribicoff amendment. Then Senators will know that this matter cannot go through on a voice vote but that there will be a rollcall vote.

The Senate has a chance to modify his amendment, and I did not object to that. He has another modification at the desk, and I have no objection to that. But since he has modified it I would like to ask for the yeas and nays on the two amendments tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Hruska). The Chair will instruct the Senator that he cannot request the yeas and nays on the pending amendment without unanimous consent.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I ask for the yeas and nays on the pending amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from Delaware so that he may request unanimous consent that it be in order to ask for the yeas and nays on the Scott amendment?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I personally have no objection. I just want to make my position clear while the majority leader is here. I personally am satisfied with the positions that we are put in from a parliamentary standpoint and under the rules of the Senate it is not subject to an amendment.

There could mean that 90 Members of the Senate agreeing on an amendment could not get the amendment adopted unless the Senator from Connecticut approved. He is the only man out of the 100 who would have the right to amend this proposed amendment. He could listen to the debate and amend it to his own satisfaction, but not the satisfaction of all others.

Mr. President, I do not wish to proceed with that power in the hands of any one Senator or in any one place. I tried hard to get this situation to where we could have the right to amend, but having failed, I just want us to vote it up or down, and then we can offer amendments. Therefore, I would ask the Senate's permission to ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. GOODELL. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate from Connecticut has the floor. The Senate will be in order. Objection is stated to the request of the President from Connecticut, and the Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. It does not require unanimous consent, Mr. President.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York withhold his objection briefly?

Mr. GOODELL. I withhold my objection.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield without keeping his right to the floor, so that I may explain my position?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes.

Mr. SCOTT. My position is that I have no objection, personally, to the yeas and nays on the Scott amendment, because I am an interested man. I think the Senate may have been advised of the desire to modify it. Some Senators may be for it and some against it, but no one has asked to modify it, and under those circumstances if it will expedite the proceedings, I have no objection to the yeas and nays.
Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, I object to the Senator yielding for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That request will be made again later tonight.

Mr. RIBICOFF. The administrative inefficiencies and red tape associated with welfare programs are notorious. Individual States and localities must develop budgets of need with required close investigation of the economic status of each family. However, these standards are often unrelated to actual State payments and complicated formulae, using static and maximum pay-ments, are necessary to calculate the final benefits payable to each eligible family. Tiny, but complex adjustments are made to reflect changes in the composition of the family, the ages of its members, its changing economic status, or as special emergencies occur. The resulting paperwork overwhelms the administrative structure. The organization is fraught with error and is largely incomprehensible to recipients and the public.

The major defect of AFDC however, which makes it impossible to reform by simply adding national standards or greater administrative efficiencies, is its categorical restriction of eligibility. AFDC does not provide assistance to those families headed by a full-time working man.

The assumption on which AFDC rests—that the income of full-time workers is by definition adequate—is simply not valid for large numbers of families. In 1968, 39 percent of the poor families with children in this country were headed by full-time workers. Their poverty is seldom the result of a defect of character or a failure to try. It is rather the result of the inescapable fact that large numbers of jobs, for a variety of economic reasons, are below not pay an adequate wage—especially for persons with large families.

As a result of this inadequate and inefficient system, welfare has become a costly, irregular, and caseload expansion under AFDC increased by almost 30 percent from June 1969 to June 1970.

The lack of incentives to work and maintain the family structure have meant that the number of children in families with female heads only under AFDC have more than doubled in 10 years.

The facts are very clear. Welfare in the United States has already become a national disgrace.

THE FINANCE COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

It is regrettable that in the face of such chaos a majority of the Finance Committee has chosen not to come to grips with meaningful welfare reform legislation.

I share the view of the committee that full employment legislation should be tested thoroughly before implementation on a nationwide basis.

But testing alone in a time of urgent need is not enough.

In August, 1969, the President outlined reform legislation which, while not perfect, would take several important and constructive steps toward a strong welfare system.

The House of Representatives passed legislation embodying the basic principles of the President's proposal—the family assistance plan.

After a series of hearings, however, the Senate Finance Committee regrettably refused to consider this plan in detail and substituted an amendment calling merely for 2 years of tests.

Clearly, passage of a 2-year test program requiring more legislation at the end of that test period means no welfare reform until 1974 or beyond. Reform is much more urgent than that.

The proposal Senator Bennett and I intend to make provides for extensive testing in the period between enactment and the effective date of welfare reform. The most innovative proposal, to assist the working poor, would be tested in several areas for more than a year. Extensive pretesting of this nature would provide more than adequate time to iron out the problems in organization and administration of family assistance. Furthermore, information derived from careful evaluation of existing working poor programs in six States would be readily available.

THE PRINCIPLES OF REFORM

Welfare is not a subject of interest only to the poor and the welfare worker. The measure of a whole society is taken from the adequacy, equity, and efficiency of its programs for the needy. Their progress is the measure of our progress.

The principles of adequate welfare are simple and paramount:

First, assurance to all members of society of an income adequate to meet their basic needs;

Second, Incentives and opportunity for the employment of all citizens;

Third, encouragement and support of the basic family structure;

Fourth, enforcement of national standards supported and financed by the Federal Government; and Fifth, simple and efficient administration dedicated to assisting rather than demeaning or demeaning the poor.

We are a wealthy people. As the perquisites of citizenship have increased, so too have our responsibilities to our society and our fellow man. As a nation, we can no longer tolerate a system of public assistance which fails to meet the most basic principles of humanity.

THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

The basic principles of family assistance are designed to meet the problems now plaguing our society. Ensuring a minimum payment to all families in need, it is designed to provide uniform national standards and simplified administration.

Most important, the program extends eligibility to those families who have been arbitrarily and unwisely excluded from assistance.

Family assistance will replace the 54 different State and territorial AFDC programs with a single program for families. It would also substitute a single Integrated adult welfare system for the fragmented programs of aid to the aged, the blind and the disabled.

Americans are becoming more mobile. Poverty and welfare are national problems requiring national solutions. Foremost in any such national solution must be an effort to assure that citizens who live in different States do not receive greatly different treatment from their governments. Family assistance establishes minimum support levels: $1,600 per year—plus about $860 in food stamps—for a family of four, for citizens in all 50 States.

Family assistance insures the provision of a minimum benefit by full Federal financing of that portion of the payment. In addition, the States, assisted by 30 percent Federal matching up to the poverty line, can then assure more adequate total benefits by supplementing the minimum payment.

Nationwide uniform eligibility rules will make possible another vital reform: simplification and streamlining of the notorious welfare paperwork and administrative morass. Family assistance terminates the present practice of basing eligibility on minute investigations and computations of family budgets. Eligibility for aid would be determined on a simplified basis, which would include cross-checks of earnings data and a sample of recipients' reports as protection for the system.

INCLUSION OF THE WORKING POOR

The most important advance proposed by this amendment is the extension of public assistance eligibility to the working poor. This innovative step is supported by several amendments.

First, coverage of the working poor eliminates one of the major inequities in present law. If we are to require recipients to work, we cannot then make them worse off financially than if they did not work.

Second, aid to the working poor promotes a consistent set of work incentives for welfare recipients. To make these incentives increasingly effective there is included a major manpower training and child care program with over $600 million in additional funding; and a strong program of public service employment.

The Ribicoff-Bennett amendment takes a major step to increase work incentives for welfare recipients. To make these incentives increasingly effective there is included a major manpower training and child care program with over $600 million in additional funding; and a strong program of public service employment.

Recipients under family assistance will be required to register for and accept jobs or work training in order to receive FAP benefits. Benefit levels will be decreased by $500 per family for a failure to register.

THE REVISED FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

The latest administration revision of family assistance was submitted in October to the Senate Finance Committee. While this was a strong program—there were a number of changes which I felt were necessary to improve the program—before it was presented to the full Senate. I made these suggestions both in a formal letter to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and in informal consultation of these improvements are contained in the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment.

A NATIONAL GOAL

Today, one in every eight Americans is poor. In the wealthiest nation in history, our poor outnumber the total population of Canada. More than a third of our poor are children. Many of the rest are ill, disabled or elderly. These people are tragic evidence of our neglect, and lack of commitment to end poverty.

Our growing national affluence has not been fully shared. In a future which promises greater riches, for many, but continued poverty for some, we have, in program — as are provided by the House of Representatives and the original administration. The potential for social division unparalleled in our country.

Our failure has been a failure of commitment rather than resources. We have the means to end poverty. Let us resolve to do so. As a beginning step, Congress must establish a national goal to end poverty in this decade.

The unemployed parent program

As passed by the House of Representatives, H.R. 16311 provided for mandatory State supplementation — with Federal sharing — of families headed by an unemployed father—AFDC-UP. Under present law, this is an optional program which exists in 23 States.

In the administration revisions of H.R. 16311, this mandatory AFDC-UP has been deleted.

I strongly support inclusion of this program — as provided by the House of Representatives and the original administration proposal. Restoration of this provision will benefit some 90,000 families, or more than 300,000 poor people.

Restoration of the requirements for the FEDERAL SUPPLEMENT TO THE INCOME MAINTENANCE PROGRAMS

In August 1969, the President, in his welfare address to the Nation, strongly supported the principle that no recipient would be kept off his proposal than under existing law. Unfortunately, a subsequent revision of H.R. 16311 would adversely affect families with outside income in 22 States by reducing State supplements. Restoration of the standard-of-need provision in section 452 will remedy this unwise provision.

Minimum wage levels for welfare recipients

A universally recognized objective of welfare reform, clearly stated in the President’s welfare message, is the great need to move the poor from relief rolls to payrolls. Legislation toward this laudable goal, however, must not sacrifice very basic objections to providing a ready-made pool of forced labor for employers. Minimum wages are job killers.

Substandard wages perpetuate poverty. At $1 an hour, a fully employed husband and father of two children earns almost $2,000 below the barest minimum income required for marriage.

Therefore, I propose that provisions be added to this reform legislation stipulating that welfare recipients required to accept work earn a reasonable wage, preferably the basic minimum wage of $1.60 an hour. The Ribicoff-Bennett program takes a major step in this direction by guaranteeing wages of at least $1.20 an hour.

Additional safeguards for state and local employees

There must be assurances that State and local welfare employees, who would be encompassed by the new Federal program, are treated fairly with respect to their seniority, salary, and pension rights earned under their previous employers.

Federal administration of fully federally financed welfare programs

Welfare reform must reduce the major inequities and complexities that result from over 50 different welfare systems with their varied forms, requirements, and regulations. In many States today, the system is operated by three separate levels of government: Federal, State, and local. The redtape, inequities, and sheer complexities of these arrangements must be reduced.

Therefore, I propose that reform legislation adds a provision for mandatory Federal administration of all welfare programs which are 100 percent funded by Federal money. This provision will be a major step toward our goal of universally applied standards for all recipients.

Public service employment

The major goal of any public assistance program should be the provision of adequate employment opportunities permitting recipients to supplement and eventually replace welfare payments by earned wages.

Regrettably, the original family assistance plan presented to Congress contained not a single job opportunity.

Therefore, I propose a public service employment program for recipients of FAP benefits or State supplementation. Under the amendment, the Secretary of Labor would enter into grants or contracts with public or private nonprofit agencies to create jobs in a wide variety of enumerated fields of benefit to the public.

Special provisions were designed to assure that such jobs are not dead-end jobs and that they offer opportunities for career advancement. The Secretary of Labor is required to review each employment record at least once every 6 months.

The jobs provided must meet standards with regard to health, safety, and working conditions, not jeopardize existing employment, and otherwise conform to certain protections. Wages paid must at least equal the Federal minimum wage or, if higher, any applicable State or local minimum wage or the prevailing wage for such jobs in the same labor market area.

In order to encourage movement by participating individuals into regular jobs and to insure that these jobs involve the performance of useful work, provision is made for declining Federal matching over time. Ninety percent matching is provided for the first 24 months during which such employment is required, and 50 percent thereafter.

The Secretary of Labor is obligated to expend at least $150 million annually on such public service jobs. The funds may come from appropriations pursuant to part C of the Social Security Act or from any other funds available to the Secretary of the Department of Labor under other acts.

Work requirements for mothers of school-age children

In 1967, the Senate recognized the inherent social difficulties of forcing mothers of school-age children to accept employment. At that time, the Senate passed an amendment which exempted mothers of school-age children from required employment during the hours children are home from school.

The most cursory examination of history shows that the victims of legislation forcing mothers to work are the of those mothers. Our own national traditions are based on the belief that the best interests of the child are best protected by its mother. The decision whether to accept employment while the child remains at home should be left solely with the mother.

While not exempting mothers of school-age children from work, the proposal of Senator B. and myself would guarantee to mothers of these children only be required to work if adequate child care facilities are available. In actual fact, the work priorities practically assure that these mothers of school-age children will not be affected by work requirements.

Additional safeguards for the legal rights of welfare recipients

The administration’s family assistance legislation provided for a marked and regrettable change in the legal rights of welfare recipients by requiring that stepfathers assume legal responsibility for their stepchildren. Most States do not impose an obligation of support on a stepfather. Generally, our federal system has left matters of domestic relations laws to the wisdom of the States. Thus, the effect of the original FAP provision was to impose a discriminatory obligation on the stepfathers or poor families.

State savings and adult categories

In addition to these provisions, two other provisions of the amendment are of utmost importance.

Additional categories

Senator and myself propose to assure minimum payments to the aged, blind and disabled of $130 a month for an individual and $230 a month for a couple. This provision will make payment to approximately 1.5 million recipients. For an individual old-age recipient, the amendment would increase payment levels in 31 States; for a couple, and it would increase payments in 47 States.
cipients under the adult categories. This provision extends the simplified administration concept proposed under the family assistance plan.

The amendment would also assure an individual aged, blind or disabled person an income equal to more than 80 percent of the poverty level. For couples the minimum income would be in excess of the poverty level.

STATE FISCAL RELIEF

Almost every State in the Union is facing a financial crisis over rising welfare costs. Under the proposal of Senator Bennett and I, each State would have the benefit of a virtual freeze on increased welfare expenditures. The freeze would be based on 90 percent of the State expenditures incurred in calendar year 1971. For the first year of operation, our program would provide over $400 million in direct State savings. In succeeding years these savings would increase in direct proportion to the expected increase in expenditures now expected under present laws. At the present time these costs are escalating by 30 percent a year.

I ask unanimous consent that the following table showing State savings be printed in the Record:

Footnotes at end of table.

The committee's amendment set forth a long list of criteria by which a parent-child relationship could be established and the man be held responsible financially for the child.

In addition to the unrealistic burdens this would place on welfare administration, the provision would penalize the children for the conduct of the mother.

An unrelated man who visits a child's mother, no matter how regularly, cannot be required to provide a meaningful parent-child relationship. If he does make financial contributions, these are counted in determining the family's benefits now.

ADDITIONAL COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS

Mr. RICHCOFF. Mr. President, I also want to say a word about other committee amendments to the present welfare laws.

As I have pointed out, I believe these amendments to be entirely inadequate. Furthermore, many of them are actually detrimental to the present chaotic program. I shall briefly mention four of these amendments.

USE OF FEDERAL FUNDS TO SUPPORT THE MEDICAL CARE OF CHILDREN

The first of the committee amendments prohibits the use of Federal funds to pay directly or indirectly the salary of any individual who participates in legal actions designed to interpret or test federal law. This is a particularly unwise provision in a time when it has become of paramount importance to stress the need for settling differences within rather than without our institutions.

No Federal legislation should be immune from established and recognized judicial scrutiny. In our adversary system of justice, this scrutiny is best developed by legal actions initiated by the parties in interest. Powerful corporate foundations are fully entitled, in our system, to test laws in courts and deduct the costs of legal representation. In many cases, the only advocates for the poor are community legal services personnel who, by a conscious policy decision of Congress, are often supported by Federal funds. To deny these funds is to deny the right of effective advocacy to a large segment of our society.

American justice is based on the theory that all citizens are equal before the law. By denying effective representation in cases involving laws most directly affecting the immediate lifestyle of the poor, equality of rich and poor before the law becomes a myth.

The amendment also provides that the only advocate for the poor in the courts be the public interest or the public interest lawyer. The amendment also provides that the child may be eligible for AIDC.

In addition, the committee has resurrected a provision permitting States to deny AFDC benefits to children in families where a man may be occasionally present, even though he has no legal duty to support them.

In 1968, the Supreme Court struck down a similar "man in the house" provision on the ground that an unrelated adult in the home has no legal obligation to support the child and, therefore, the child may be eligible for AFDC.

PERCENT FREEZE ON STATE EXPENDITURES

The committee's amendment on this subject was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, December 18, 1970.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

1 These amounts would constitute estimated calendar year 1972 State expenditures under the new program, except for voluntary program liberalizations by the States between the bill's enactment and the effective date. Such liberalizations would be financed by the appropriate matching formulas for title IV, iv, x, and xvi.

The committee's amendment set forth a long list of criteria by which a parent-child relationship could be established and the man be held responsible financially for the child.

In addition to the unrealistic burdens this would place on welfare administration, the provision would penalize the children for the conduct of the mother.

An unrelated man who visits a child's mother, no matter how regularly, cannot be required to provide a meaningful parent-child relationship. If he does make financial contributions, these are counted in determining the family's benefits now.

RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS

In 1963, the Court declared durational residence requirements unconstitutional because they interfere with the right to travel.

The committee has sought to reestablish residence requirements, requiring that a recipient receive payments equal to the benefit level of the State from which he moved.

Whether this provision would correct the constitutional defect cannot be predicted, but it certainly would create inequities between residents of the same State. It would penalize new arrivals who were not previously on welfare but came to require it in the State to which they move, and would restrict the mobility of the poor who wish to seek better economic opportunity in a different State.

DENIAL OF AN UNEMPLOYED PARENT

Present law authorizes a program, at State option to support families in which the father is unemployed. This program is now operational in 22 States. In its regulations, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has defined "unemployed" to mean less than 10 hours a week or 80 hours a month, is far too restrictive, and, in effect, defeats the purpose of the unemployed father program—AFDC-UP. It is hard to conceive that a man working 12 hours a week can be fully employed and in the point, it is unrealistic to expect that the wage of a few hours of work a week can adequately support a family. A more reasonable definition of employment will provide greater incentives for the partially employed to continue and improve their work skills.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following article be printed in the Record, as follows:

In 1968, the Supreme Court struck down a similar "man in the house" provision on the ground that an unrelated adult in the home has no legal obligation to support the child and, therefore, the child may be eligible for AFDC.
Among other things, this means that the family of five at one end of the spectrum works to support his wife and children. It also means the family is entitled to no public assistance except for food stamps. The Nash Family Assistance Plan, now facing a final showdown in the Senate, would change all that. Were the plan approved, the Robertsons would qualify for the assistance payments.

The Robertsons would qualify because they are members of a large, distinct segment of America's poverty population—those who work and now get no benefits, and those who get welfare but do no work.

The half million working-poor families live in Nash County, N.C., where James Robertson lives, is representative of the new South. In the last ten years, it has seen its industrial employment go up 40 percent, its per capita income almost double.

But plenty of farms remain, with plenty of farm workers, tenants and laboring families. The farm economy, even within the parts of the region booming with new industry, is also reliant to a great extent on cheap labor.

Southern conservatives believe it. And they say it. Another factor is the enormous impact the plan would have on the Southern economy. Hundreds of millions of dollars in new purchasing power would pour in, a seemingly attractive feature for Southern businessmen. But the Southern economy, even in the parts of the region booming with new industry, is also reliant to a great extent on cheap labor.

The issue won't die, that's sure. If for no other reason than state and county governments, burdened by soaring welfare and Medicaid costs, are scrambling for the kind of fiscal relief the bill would bring. The 92nd Congress almost certainly will face the problem all over again if it isn't solved this year.

For the short term, failure of the 1970 Family Assistance Plan to avoid another political confrontation will mean there would command more cash income than he has ever before seen in his life.

In his early 40s, is a farm laborer. He lives rent free but owns none of the land on the farm where he works.

"WORKING POOR" FAMILY

During the non-growing season, from October until spring, Robertson is lucky to get three days work a week at $6 a day wages. Then the work pace picks up, and In October until spring, Robertson is lucky to get none of the land on the farm where he works, cumulated indebtedness to his "boss man," hour days, and his wife and their oldest boy, August and September, when the tobacco wages. Then the work pace picks up, and In October until spring, Robertson is lucky to get none of the land on the farm where he works.

The measure has run a bizarre and tortuous course over the year, passing the House by one of the most one-sided votes in the history of Congress, and chassising to the Senate's Standing Committee on Labor and Health and Education by a surprisingly large margin only to run afoul of the diabolic, stubbornly independent Senate Finance Committee.

Now, after months of wrestling with it, the committee rejected the plan. It approved the single revolutionary premise—cash benefits for a poor family who would command more cash income than he has ever before seen in his life.

"WORKING POOR" FAMILY

The committee, the Senate's Standing Committee on Labor and Health and Education, is also reliant to a great extent on cheap labor.

The committee, the Senate's Standing Committee on Labor and Health and Education, is also reliant to a great extent on cheap labor.
In Los Angeles County, Calif., for instance, one person in every nine is on welfare.

Marvin Friedman, the county's assistant welfare director who was in Washington last week on a three-day visit with the Family Assistance Plan, talked of the impact on local finances, a $80 million boost in county spending on welfare, $60 million tax relief, and nearly $1 billion for every $100 of assessed valuation.

"The reaction is fierce," he said. "The whole thing is a polarizing influence, and it's getting worse. The pressure is on our county supervisors to do something. But we're in a box."

There is evidence that great numbers of the welfare-see also feel boxed in, their payments often inadequate to live decently and are hard-pressed states searching for ways to keep these benefits down.

It's because of such dilemmas that people use strong language to condemn the existing system. "A huge monster," President Nixon called it. "A godawful mess," was HEW Secretary Richardson's phrase.

The question is whether the Family Assistance Plan will do what the western legislators want: prevent a welfare system. "The requirement is punitive. Most are judged incapacitated. Some of those who are able-bodied and jobless, their families made eligible for welfare in 23 states that have unemployed-food programs."

Of nearly 2 million welfare mothers, 302,000 are now working full or part-time. Many do so under relatively recent provisions of the law enabling welfare mothers to earn money and still draw benefits. Before lowering these benefits, the states disregard the first $30 a month the woman makes, plus one-third-of what else she earns, plus work-related and child-care expenses.

Another 134,000 mothers are in work-training or waiting for enrollment to train under what is called the WIN program.

That leaves 1.7 million unemployed AFDC mothers. The Nixon administration claims nearly 80 percent of these mothers have pre-school children, exempting them from work registration. Of the rest, because of health, education or disability, HEW believes only about 50 percent are truly employable.

And so of 12 million welfare recipients, those who have pre-school children, the unemployed fathers and the employable mothers of school-age children—total about 500,000.

But even with these people, problems remain. Every survey shows that a large majority of welfare mothers want to work. But they can't do so. They can't find a job. Child care is another. Transportation is a third.

The Nixon legislation includes In its $4 billion price tag, $66 million for work training and child care programs. Yet as New York City's Ginzberg points out, these will not come along easily. Child care programs are particularly difficult and costly to establish.

"We should face the fact," said Ginzberg, "that not all that many people will come off welfare into jobs. What we can hope for is that the number of people who may help keep people from going on welfare, from becoming dependent."

But no one knows to what extent the plan will do so.

Ginzberg's reasoning and hope are based in part on a belief shared by Presidential Counselor John F. Kennedy and others that money going to working-poor families can help reduce the kind of family breakup—divorce, separation— that leads to dependency.

But men like Ginsberg and Moynihan concede there is too little information on the effects of welfare programs with the labor department in the last year that entered the AFDC rolls. No one is able to say, for instance, how many came from people who have pre-school intacy families and how many were never there at all.

Much of the controversy over welfare and attempts to reform continue to turn on "workfare."

It may be significant that under the Family Assistance Plan, Mr. Nixon would be responsible for administering the work-registration and work requirement provisions of the law enabling welfare recipients to earn such supplemental funds, welfare recipients came to employ agencies only through referral by welfare case workers.

Mr. Friedman said Los Angeles County's Friedman. "It will eliminate an awful lot of bureaucratic paper shuffling. Besides, if someone loses a job, we don't have to apply for a job rather than welfare?"

At the Labor Department, top officials are aware that, as Assistant Secretary Jerry Rosow put it, "If this program passes, the monkey's going to be on our back, but anyone could be able to blame the welfare workers anymore."

Rosow rejects the argument that the work requirement is inconsistent with today's tight labor market. "There may be a tight economy, 'we'll be back up to full employment.'"

Asked how many welfare clients he reasoned going to work, Rosow replied: "If we can get about 100,000 to 200,000 people to work in first year or two, we'll consider it a success. I refuse to set up a long-run figure."

If conservative critics of the Family Assistance Plan find these figures unpersuasive, they also continue to claim that kind of reform effort has to be accompanied by payments to the working poor.

The justifications for tying the two kinds that sees a man with a full-time job worse off than a man keeping only a part-time job supplemented by welfare, or the other way around, it is possible for someone to quit a full-time job to go on welfare, go back to some kind of work and, between welfare benefits and earnings, do far better than the working poor.

But they were not able to build In the kind of positive monetary work incentives the plan's designers now think the work committee wanted. Time and again, said to make it more attractive for welfare recipients to work, HEW officials came back to say that was impossible within the $4 billion framework of the plan. It was a mathematical taffypull that no one could win.

Meanwhile, conservative resistance hardened. Some of the liberal groups, chiefly John Gardner's Common Cause, went to work for the plan, but others were too far away from George Willey and his welfare mothers, continued to both damn and praise. The President, for his part, turned to talk of getting the welfare bums to work.

Time ran on, and now it is nearly out.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent to have printed the Racoons of the impact of the States on the revised family assistance plan—The Ribicoff-Bennett Amendment. would be a flat ceiling. Thereafter, the State’s obligation would increase only by an amount equal to the increase in the Consumer Price Index between 1971 and the year in question.

The Senate amendment would make the aid available on a cash rather than an in-kind basis. Thus, the States would know the dollar limits of its welfare burden, and could budget and set tax policy to absorb those increases from the ceiling on State welfare costs is to transfer to the Federal Government the entire cost of caseload increases, which is the biggest existing item of welfare costs.

Quite beyond the ceiling involved in this amendment, each State would actually have to deal with anywhere from 10 to 18 percent 1971 welfare expenditures in the first year of operation of the new program. This is misleading.

2. If any State voluntarily increased its benefit levels in the future, it would receive 30 percent Federal matching, up to the poverty level, for the family (AFDC) category, and 25 percent matching in the adult (aged blind, disabled) category.

3. States are given major new options with regard to the administration of all income assistance programs, as follows:

- Option to transfer all Department of Labor funds, without regard to the source of their legislative authorization or usage of the Comprehensive Manpower Act.

We are grateful for your strong and continued support on this critical legislation.

Respectfully,

DANIEL P. MOYNIHAN, Counselor to the President.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a brief description of the family assistance proposal as offered in amendment to H.R. 17550.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE PROPOSAL AS OFFERED IN AMENDMENT TO H.R. 17550

I. FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS
A. Eligibility for the new family assistance

Each family with children whose includable income (for definition of excluded income see below) is less than the family benefit level, and who meets the work test requirements, for the first two members of the family and $300 for each additional member—would be eligible for a family assistance benefit. The amount of the benefit would be the difference between these amounts and the non-excludable income. For example, a family of four with income (excluding earnings incentive or disregard) of $1,000, with two children, would receive a benefit of $500, or $1.25 per hour.

The bill provides for Federal administration of the family assistance program as offered in amendment to H.R. 17550.

II. STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFIT

Each State which has an AFDC payment level in November 1970 higher than the family assistance benefit must agree to supplement the family assistance benefit up to the higher payment level—thus providing additional resources to families above the Federal poverty level, if lower. State supplemental payments would be required for families whose income is at least one parent is unemployed, incapacitated, or engaged in public service employment. The States would have to establish a ceiling at $720 a year of earned income plus 1/2 of the earnings incentive in excess of $720 as an earnings incentive. The Federal government would provide 30 percent matching for these required supplemental payments, but there would be no matching for supplementary payments which exceed the poverty line.

The bill provides for Federal administration of payments to those ineligible for State supplementation (the working poor), and of the AFDC-UF groups—but not for the working poor.

An eligible family must consist of two or more people related by blood, marriage or adoption and living together in the United States. The head of the family must be an adult (under age 18 or under 21 if attending school). The Secretary would apply State law in determining family relationships.

C. Registration with public employment service

Each member of a family found to be eligible for family assistance benefits would be required to register with the public employment office unless he or she is:

1. unable to work because of illness, incapacity, or advanced age;
2. a child under age 6;
3. the mother, if the father is already required to register;
4. a students who is required to care for an ill member of the household;
5. a child who is either under the age of 15 or a student.

Any person who fails to fall into one of the above exempt categories can still voluntarily register at the employment office.

If an individual with no job refuses to do so or refused a suitable training or job opportunity without good cause, he could lose his eligibility for family assistance and State supplementary (see below) benefits. The family would continue to receive a reduced benefit, however.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 17, 1970.

HON. ABRAHAM RIBICOFF, U.S. Senator, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR RIBICOFF: In the aftermath of the President’s veto yesterday of the Comprehensive Manpower Act questions have been raised about the Administration’s commitment to earmark $150 million of Department of Labor funds for public sector programs for Family Assistance recipients.

That commitment by the Administration remains intact and will be honored if the amendment is enacted. If not, there is no imprecision in the text of your amendment at all. The language earmarking provision can stand alone, without passage of the Comprehensive Manpower Act, we would accept a clarifying change. Specifically, we would support deletion of the words “for public service employment programs or other similar activities,” which appear on page 54, lines 20-21, of the Family Assistance bill (amendment no. 1097 to H.R. 17550) to make clear that the earmark applies to all Department of Labor funds, without regard to the source of their legislative authorization or usage of the Comprehensive Manpower Act.
to Federal administration of its supplemental program, the Federal share of the administrative costs would be increased from 50 percent to 100 percent. This would mean substantial financial relief to the States choosing this option.

IV. WORK AND TRAINING PROGRAM

A. New program established

The existing Work Incentive Program would be expanded into a program which would be established to take its place. The Secretary of Labor would assure the development of an employability plan for each individual registered in an employment office under the family assistance program according to a system of priority categories.

The individuals would then receive the services and training called for under the plan. The Secretary of Labor is directed to earmark $150 million for public service jobs, family assistance program, according to a selection plan.

Additional fiscal relief to the States choosing this option.

If the State chooses to contract with the Secretary to administer the program, the Federal government would pay 100 percent of the administrative costs.

As under the family assistance plan, the Secretary could enter into an agreement with a State under which the Federal government would provide all funding for the functions of employment offices involved in administering the program for the aged, blind, and disabled. If the State chooses to contract with the Secretary to administer these programs, the Federal government would pay 100 percent of the administrative costs.

VI. OTHER PROVISIONS

A. State savings provision

Each State must spend the same per capita amount, but no more than 90% of its actual calendar year 1971 expenditures for maintenance payments in carrying out the bill's provisions. (The CY 1971 base subsidy would be adjusted annually for cost of living increases.) Thus, required State spending in the new program's first full year would be 10% less than the prior year's expenditures.

B. Special provisions for Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands

Both the new family assistance and adult categories of assistance programs apply in these jurisdictions, but all of the dollar figures in both programs (except the initial earnings disregard) are increased by $50 per month in family assistance to recipients in these programs. In addition to FAP and State payments, the Secretary would also provide allowances to cover the transportation and other costs associated with the training.

C. Child care and supportive services

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized to make payments for the costs of the first $85 per month of child care needed by parents participating in the work, training, or rehabilitation programs and required to provide other supportive services—such as vocational rehabilitation, health and counseling—needed to enable recipients to enter training and jobs, and the Federal government would pay 90 percent of the cost of such efforts.

The Aged, Blind, and Disabled

A. Federal standards and requirements

The present separate titles for programs for aid to the needy, aged, blind, and disabled are repealed and a new combined Federal-States title is established to provide assistance to essentially the same people. Under the new program, the States could not have any duration of eligibility for citizenship or citizenship requirements, or have relative responsibility provisions.

The States would be required to (1) provide a payment sufficient to bring each single recipient's total income up to at least $130 a month ($230 for a couple), of, if higher, the standard now in effect, (3) follow the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare's definition of blindness and severe disabilities, and (3) use the Federal definition of eligibility for both the family assistance program ($1500 plus home, personal effects and income-producing property) and the aged assistance program ($1500 plus personal support). The establishment of the high minimum income standards for the aged, blind, and disabled is accomplished by the elimination of food stamp benefits for these recipients.

The earnings incentives for the disabled and aged have been increased, requiring the States to pay 90 percent of earnings plus 1/2 of the rest for the severely disabled (the same provision which now exists for the aged assistance program in the first month of earnings plus 1/2 of the rest for the aged (the same as the family assistance earnings disregards).)

B. Federal matching provisions

The Federal government would pay 90 percent of the first $65 average payments made to eligible persons, and 35 percent of the remainder up to a limit to be set by the Secretary. The Federal government would also pay 50 percent of the administrative costs.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment to the Scott amendment and the years and nays on the Scott amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from West Virginia? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and I ask unanimous consent that I retain the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays be ordered on both amendments.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I am privileged to yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays be ordered on both amendments.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia, I object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Bennett amendment to the Scott amendment and the yeas and nays on the Scott amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that he may ask that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has already granted unanimous consent that it be in order to order the yeas and nays on both amendments.

Mr. LONG. Objection was heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I think there is a misunderstanding. The request was made for the yeas and nays on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment and then the yeas and nays on the Scott amendment as amended by the Ribicoff amendment. That is proper procedure.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair informs the Senate that earlier unanimous consent was requested that it be in order to order the yeas and nays on both amendments at the same time. That request was granted, there being no objection. A request was made on one amendment later, and there was objection.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on both amendments.

The yeas and nays were not ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair states that it requires 18 for a proper second.

Mr. GORE. Regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Regular order is requested. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor under regular order.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Louisiana without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the yeas and nays be ordered on the two amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GORE. I object. The Senate ought not to operate without some reasonable proximity of a quorum.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that I not lose my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. LONG. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The assistant legislative clerk resumed the call of the roll.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further proceedings under the quorum call be terminated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS
OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system,
to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child-health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr.
President, I do not wish to delay the Senate, and I am not making any points of order tonight or discussing it, but I will mention this point: I merely invite attention to the fact that the Scott amendment which was offered to H.R.
175550 earlier, the amendment reported by the clerk, was different from the amendment appearing in the Journal. I am sure that the Senator from Penn-to pursue an amendment which, if enacted, would repeal 80 or 90 percent of the Social Security Act. It is not subject to a point of order. I want to make that clear.

Mr. SCOTT. I must say the Senator from Delaware could have told me what he had in mind with regard to the request for the yeas and nays. I knew the Senator had something, because he always has something, but we did not know what it was. Now that we know what it is, perhaps we will appreciate it at a later date. But the Senator is in error if he thinks I am going to withdraw this amendment at this time.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am sure the Senator is not going to withdraw it. We are in agreement on that. I am going to be frank and say that I would prevent the amendment from being withdrawn. I do not approve of amendments being offered in the Senate where only the manager of the amendment can change it. I doubt that the White House or the Senator from Pennsylvania will want a proposal acted on which would repeal 80 percent of the Social Security Act. I hope that tomorrow we can reach an agreement. I am sure no point of order could prevail. I will defend the Parliamentarian on that. When the Senator from Pennsylvania proposed to repeal 80 percent of the Social Security Act it is a change, and I put that in capital letters.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, while there may be some error, no change was intended, and no change affecting any social security beneficiary will ever become law. This is a mighty big bill, with a lot of pages, and there will be plenty of opportunity as we go along perfecting various amendments and putting in amendments to make sure that in some subsequent amendment and in some subsequent procedure the complete charts are put in, so the Senate will arrive at a point where it can vote on a 10-percent social security increase and a $100 minimum. I am sure that between the Senator from Delaware, myself, and other Senators, there will not be difficulty achieving any result of that kind.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am sure of that, because I cannot conceive of the Senator from Pennsylvania wanting to repeal 90 percent of the Social Security Act. I cannot conceive of that, and that was what struck me when I saw the amendment at the desk. That is the reason why I wanted to get this outlined on the Record tonight; Senators should be on notice as to the situation before the Senate.

Mr. SCOTT. I do not think there is any question of good faith on the part of the Senator from Pennsylvania and on the part of the Senator from Connecticut in their desire to achieve what the committee has so well and carefully wrought; namely, an increase in certain social security benefits. I am not aware how the Senator from Delaware voted on those increases, but I will say now, and as often as I have the opportunity, I will vote for them. I am for the social security benefits. I am for these charts.

If the Senator from Delaware had advised us that we were offering a chart which would repeal part of the Social Security Act, we could have corrected the matter on the floor in less than 30 seconds, and we will always be willing to correct the matter on the floor in less than 30 seconds if the Senator will permit us.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. If the Senator from Pennsylvania had sought my advice I would have been delighted to have given it to him.

Mr. SCOTT. I assure the Senator I will. I always do.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I was not asked my advice when the proposal was presented, so I took it at face value that he knew what he was doing. I have such respect for the Senator from Pennsylvania that it never dawned on me that he did not know what he was doing.

Mr. SCOTT. I was going to say that no Senator knows what he is doing when the Senator from Delaware gets through with him, because he has expertise which is so superior to the rest of us. I agree with that. That is why we are going to miss him. But the Senator from Pennsylvania knew what he was doing, all right. The Senator from Pennsylvania is not aware to this minute whether or not a chart had been changed or had not been changed. The Senator only knows the chart had been changed when it was in his hands, and another copy went to the desk, and that is where the mystery lies.

The Senator from Pennsylvania takes that responsibility in having concurred in sending up the second chart. The Senator from Pennsylvania’s intention is good. His purpose is good. His desire to achieve a social security benefit increase is good. He will gladly consult the Senator from Delaware to see how, in the exercise of his infinite wisdom and mercy, we will achieve the desired result.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Whenever the Senator seeks my advice I assure him that he will get it.

Mr. SCOTT. I will be glad to accept the advice up to the cliff, and there I will take a good look over it to see where we are going.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I assure the Senator from Pennsylvania he will be well advised to be guided by any advice I give him.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

Mr. MANSFIELD. Now, Mr. President, under the agreement which has been operating and which expires at the conclusion of business on Tuesday next, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate turn to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, and that it be laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the Senate will proceed to its consideration.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, since our meetings yesterday, we have held some discussions.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, we cannot hear the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator may proceed.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, since our meetings yesterday, there have been some discussions about the most expeditious way to move ahead with the social security bill. We have not been able to reach any sort of agreement.

My impression is that the administration is very hopeful of obtaining a vote on the family assistance plan or, if not that, then, in the alternative, a test vote to give some indication of how the Senate feels about the measure.

I have inquired of the possibility of obtaining a limitation to assure a time certain to vote on this measure. That cannot be obtained at this time.

Mr. President, I am convinced that the Senate is not going to pass this measure and that, for whatever political advantage it might give one group or the other or any particular individual, it will be time wasted which could have been used in passing some of these bills that it is possible to pass in this session.

Accordingly I will make a motion to table the pending amendment. I believe the Senator from Delaware wanted me to yield to him before I made that motion.

I ask unanimous consent that I might yield to the Senator from Delaware without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, do I understand that the Senator will be making a motion to table the measure even before some of us can get a chance to present our case against the bill?

Mr. LONG. That is my intention. But prior to doing that, I would like to yield.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I think we ought to have an up and down vote on the family assistance plan.

I would vote against the motion to table, hoping that we could get a vote on it.

I wonder if the Senator might not put some kind of request to the Senate for a limitation of time on the merits. Perhaps we could arrive at some kind of an agreement at some day certain, even if it is after we come back from Christmas.

We should try to get a vote on the merits. Could the Senator put that question?

Mr. LONG. If the Senator wants that done, I ask unanimous consent that we vote on the pending amendment, which is the family assistance plan, at 5 o'clock on Tuesday next.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, what is the request?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on the family assistance plan at 5 o'clock next Tuesday.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I presented a unanimous-consent proposal for the Senate to vote on all amendments as well as final passage of the bill as amended. Many of those Senators now standing up and speaking on this matter apparently were not in favor of that agreement.

If we can get consent to vote on the entire bill I would go along with the request, I offered such a unanimous-consent agreement before.

However, I will not be a party to political hypocrisy to get a vote on the family assistance plan when in the back of the Chamber it is being said it will die anyway. That is the greatest act of political hypocrisy I have heard. I have so expressed myself downtown to those proposing that this farcical procedure be followed.

If we are to vote on social security and a family assistance plan let us vote on them in good faith with the intention that it will become law and not so that Members can go home and brag about having done something in order to get votes. We are dealing with people who should not be kidded by either political party.

I am ashamed that some Senators from our side would seem to cooperate in that hypocritical suggestion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request?

Mr. DOLE. I object.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senate yield?
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS
OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have no doubt that this motion should be tabled.
The parliamentary situation in which we find ourselves at this moment is that we have several hundred committee amendments.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, may we have order?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Louisiana may proceed.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, we have greed to one amendment, which is an amendment to strike the table of contents of the House bill. Assuming we plan to pass the Senate bill, that table of contents does not belong there.

Now, we are on the next committee amendment, and we have been on it for some time. This is an amendment to strike and insert. We have an amendment pending on the insert part, the tail end of the amendment, which we cannot dispose of because a motion to table failed on that by a vote of about 1 to 2.

Now we are confronted with another amendment, one that would be on the front end of the committee amendment, on the strike part. That is an amendment that we will be debating for a long time before it comes to a vote—if indeed it does come to a vote, which I doubt.

In addition, Mr. President, the amendment is offered in such a way that it cannot be amended and there are at least 100 different provisions that are extremely controversial in the amendment. It is offered as an amendment to an amendment.

I understand that due to the imperfec-tions in it, which cannot be corrected without unanimous consent—and I am under the impression unanimous consent will not be given—it would repeal most benefits under the social security program, an unintended defect. But this is the situation, and obviously this is no way to legislate.

This matter should be brushed aside; it cannot become law anyway. All we are doing is wasting time. But in the hope that it might give some indication of how the Senate feels about the amendment, I move that the amendment be laid on the table.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senate withdraw that?
Mr. LONG. I withhold the motion for 2 minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I have opposed the guaranteed annual income proposal for reasons I think are valid. During the discussion of this bill as yet I have never been able to obtain the floor in my own right due to the arrangement from the White House offices and the minority leadership of the Senate that recognition would go to those in favor of the plan. The result has been that none of us who have reasons to oppose the plan have had a chance to speak to point out what is wrong with the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment.

Our committee worked on this proposal for months. I would certainly hope—and I say this as one who opposes the amendment—that the Senate defeats the motion to table which has been made. I plead with my colleagues to defeat this motion in the hope that we may have a chance to debate this matter on its merits.

I think we should. I suggested a procedure to get it before the Senate. I respect the Senator from Louisiana. I understand he is making this motion at the request of the White House representative. I do not know what they will accomplish by it. I am sure it will not be agreed to. I hope it is not, and I appeal to all Senators who have said they are for the family assistance plan and those who are against it to vote against the motion to table so that we may discuss it on the merits. Surely the proponents of this measure are not afraid to debate and vote on its merits.

I thank the Senator for yielding. I am ready to vote.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I appreciate what the distinguished chairman is trying to do. He is trying to be very realistic to find out what the sentiment of the Senate is. I respect the position of my distinguished friend, the Senator from Delaware, with whom I am opposite on this proposal. I hope the Senator from Delaware would have an opportunity to state how he feels with respect to this matter. I know he feels strongly against the proposal and his views are entitled to be heard. I hope he has time to explain his views.

But personally, I shall vote against the motion to table because if it is presented it could very well be the only test by which the Senate can possibly be heard as to whether Senators are for or against family assistance. It would be my hope that the Senate would be for the family assistance program and could so indicate by voting against the motion to table.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, this will not be a test of how the Senate feels or would vote on the plan because I for one am going to vote against the motion to table. I know that I am going to vote that way and many other Senators are going to vote that way even though they are opposed to the bill. If a vote is what the Senator wants we can go ahead and vote, but it is only a waste of time and proves nothing except that there are those who are afraid to debate this fantastic proposal on its merits. Apparently they have very little confidence of their ability to defend the bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, under those circumstances I do not believe we would have a test of how the Senate feels about the amendment so I am not going to make the motion. Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. COTTON. Mr. President, what the Senator has said makes what I was going to say completely nongeraneum. But it seems to me I find myself at this time in disagreement with my friend from Delaware, as much as I like him and respect him.

It seems to me we have reached a point in this debate and we discussed this point very frankly when we were by ourselves—where much of what we are doing is utterly useless and serves no good purpose, and I do not care what the executive branch says. As a matter of fact, it might do them some good, and it would not do them any harm, to send some of their boy scouts to sit in the galleries for a few hours. They might learn something. Some of them have never even sat in a Senate committee hearing and they do not seem to be well versed in legislative procedures.

But whatever the executive branch says, the distinguished minority leader feels compelled to say—and I respect him and try to follow him at least part of the time—the issue is whether we are going to spend more time debating and not getting anything done of the so-called family assistance plan which has come out of the committee in one form, and is before the Senate in the form of an amendment by the Senator from Louisiana to lay the amendment on the table. It is a matter of the Senate feeling about the bill, and voting the Senator from Ohio (Mr. YOUNG) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PASTORE), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. McCARTHY), the Senator from Utah (Mr. MOSS), the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. NELSON), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PASTORE), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. ROSENBERG), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. TYDINGS), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. WILLIAMS), and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. YOUNG) are necessarily absent.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS) is necessarily absent.

The Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD) is absent for official business.

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. DOMINICK) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDY) are absent because of illness.

Also necessarily absent is the Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER), the Senator from New York (Mr. JAVITS), the Senator from California (Mr. MUNTY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) was necessarily absent.

If present and voting, the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. DOMINICK), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDY), the Senator from California (Mr. MURPHY) and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) would each vote "nay."

Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the amendment on the table. The result was announced—yeas 15, nays 65, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to lay on the table the Ribicoff amendment, No. 1168. Mr. LONG and Mr. HOLLAND requested the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Louisiana to lay the amendment on the table. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. KENNEDY. The Senate will be in order.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

the promotion and encouragement of illegitimacy when families with generation after generation on welfare.

I should like to point out what the bill before us would do. This bill actually provides a $1,300 cash bonus from the Federal Government to a mother to have an illegitimate baby. But only if she can demonstrate that she was not married beforehand.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDENT pro-OFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I cite this example which was called to the attention of the committee. Use, for example, two welfare families.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, a point of order. The Senate is not in order. I ask that the Chair bring the Senate to order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. We asked the department to check how this bill would work in actual practice in four States. We picked two large States and two small States. The large States we picked were Illinois and New York, and we picked Arizona and Delaware for the small States. I said we wanted to pick mine as well as someone else's.

Suppose, for example, there are two welfare families under the provisions of this bill, if it passes.

Family A has a boy 17, a girl 12, and a girl 6. Family B has a girl 16, a boy 11, and a girl 8. Each family will get welfare payments based upon the size of the family. This means that for this boy or girl below the age of 18 as dependents they will collect, first, $300 from the Federal Government; they will collect a larger mandatory supplement from the State; they will benefit from Medicaid if they need medical attention; they will get additional rent allowances and above all, they will get food stamps; forth; they will get additional food stamps as a result of the larger dependency in each family.

If this boy and this girl get married each family loses one dependent, and the family benefits are automatically reduced proportionately. When this boy and girl are married they do not get anything under this bill, even though they have no jobs or anything else for support. They can starve, so far as this bill is concerned, until they have been married long enough to have the first baby. Then they become a new welfare family, eligible for payments under the AFDC program. No provision would help them, no matter how destitute they may be the first year; they have this handicap until they can produce the first child.

On the other hand, suppose the boy and girl want to get married but realize they cannot do so financially, and the girl becomes pregnant. He does not marry her before the baby is born. Then they can move off and start collecting welfare as a family of their own, under the aid to dependent children. I repeat, if this bill is enacted, by postponing the marriage until the baby is born they can collect a cash payment in the first year of $1,300 more than he can if he marries the girl before the baby is born.

What kind of social bill is this where the Federal Government underwrites a proposal of paying a $1,300 bonus to bring that first child into this world as an illegitimate baby? Has that child that in late life? Is that what Senators want to approve.

This situation was called to the attention of the committee, and we called to the attention of the Department. All the Department said was, "We'll correct it next year." I say correct it before you pass this bill. I will not support any bill that will pay a cash benefit on the part of the Federal Government, a premium of $1,300, to have an illegitimate baby, more than they would if it is born in wedlock.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the table be ordered to have printed at this point in the Record the table furnished by the committee and the staff, approved by the Department, relating to the problem of illegitimacy.

Then, for no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Increase over case 2: 1,300 1,300 1,300 1,300

1 Eligible for Medicaid, surplus food, and housing.

2 Eligible for food stamps.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. It is clearly evident that the bill has been improperly labeled as a reform package. For example, this bill does not correct the problems of existing law whereby family breakup is encouraged.

Under this bill, suppose a family is living together—an unemployed father and mother and four children. If the father marries a new wife, either because of problems or by mutual agreement—perhaps only moving across the corridor in separate apartments—they then become two families eligible for welfare, instead of one.

This is the bonus in welfare which they as a group collect as the result of split families.

In Phoenix, Ariz., under the administration's plan they will get $956 more by living as a split family than if they live together. They can visit across the corridor, and if an additional child is born it can go on the welfare rolls.

In Chicago, Ill., as a split family they will collect $2,064 more in assistance. Think of it—$2,064 more benefits under the bill of the administration if the husband will desert, take two children, and leave the wife with two children.

Is this the kind of reform that the Congress wants?

In New York a welfare family will collect a higher premium on family splitting; they collect $2,500 more as two families than if they live as one family. They can collect that every year under this bill if they will just separate—the husband taking part of the children and the wife taking the other children. Again, it is clear that this is reforming the existing law. I challenge anyone to say that that is reform. I say that this is making a farce of the situation and think what this does to these cases.

As to the unemployed father, they claim to have corrected that under this Ribicoff-Bennett plan, but I am not sure. I understand that the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment is intended to correct that point, and I will withhold comment until I have had it fully analyzed; I will withhold comment until I have had it fully analyzed; I will pass over that point for the moment.

I think that these problems are why a majority of us have opposed this bill a committee. We have had three different votes in the committee. Once the bill was unanimously sent back to the Department for revision. They brought back practically the same package. The House-passed bill was rejected by a vote of 14 to 1 on a roll-call vote in the Finance Committee. They had another vote in the committee, in which the bill as revised was rejected by 10 to 6. But each time the Department comes back and wants another vote. All they want is a vote. Is it not time someone thought about a reform of our welfare system in stead of the vote, let us go on with the vote. Let us go on with the vote. Let us go on with the vote.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. TALMADGE. Does the Senator recognize particular revision of this plan it is, from HEW? Is it six or seven? How many different versions of this plan has the Department submitted?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. It is at least six. I have kept count and I understand the present bill was revised again yesterday at the suggestion of the administration just a few minutes before the Senate convened.

Mr. TALMADGE. We have lost count, also. It has been six or seven.

The Senator will recall the time just prior to adjournment, when we had a recess for the elections, when the Under Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare came in with a stack of amendments, about 12 inches high, that no member of the Finance Committee had ever seen, and no member of the Finance Committee knew what was contained in that stack on the Finance Committee voting at that particular time on a stack of amendments they had never seen. Does the Senator recall that?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct. The bill as proposed consisted of approximately 400 or 500 pages and was only delivered to the offices of Senators about 5:30 the night before.

Mr. TALMADGE. I never got mine.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I did not, either, until about 20 minutes before the committee met.

We walked in, and the Department said, All well that is done. The committee have then a vote and rejected it by a margin of 10 to 6.

Now we are told the Department wants another vote in the Senate even though they accepted the committee's last revision in a conference before adjournment.

Mr. TALMADGE. The Senator has been in the Senate 34 years. Has he ever seen such irresponsibility as that during that period of time?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Never. And I hope it will be 24 years before it.

Mr. TALMADGE. So do I.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. As the Senator knows, that vote was on the eve of the adjournment, just before the recess for the election. As I recall, it was about 5:30 the night before.

Mr. TALMADGE. The committee soundly rejected that proposal. The committee did not have any idea what it was, and by unanimous vote, as I recall it, we instructed the staff to analyze the bill. The Department had sent down to us that morning. We had never seen it before. We instructed the staff to send each member of the Finance Committee to our homes during the recess and have a copy of the bill and an analysis of the bill to get printed and send each a copy and an analysis—in order that we could study it, so that when we came back into session in November our Committee would be ready to proceed in an orderly manner and to vote intelligently for or against it.

I have here a letter sent by Mr. Vail of the staff of the committee, which I will put in the RECORD, that he sent to me and the other members of the committee on October 26. This was after the recess. I read the letter dated October 26, 1970:

U.S. Senate, Committee on Finance, Washington, D.C., October 26, 1970.

Hon. John J. Williams, Milford, Del.

Dear Senator Williams: You will recall that during executive session of the Finance Committee on October 13 with a 150-page discussion of the Committee a revised version of the Family Assistance Plan and urged that the Committee vote on it before the recess.

The revised plan, described as a 'core' bill, covers more than 150 pages. The Committee felt that a major amendment of such proportions should be carefully studied before a vote is taken. Therefore, it directed the staff to publish the 'core' bill, related amendments, and supporting tables, documents, research, charts to be prepared by the Department and submitted to the Committee. It was the Committee's instruction that this material together with an analysis prepared by the staff of the Committee be submitted to each member of the Committee for his home during the recess. In this way each of the members would have an opportunity to study the Administration's most recent welfare proposal before the Committee reconvenes.

I had hoped that the printing job and the staff analysis could have been completed before now. The staff analysis presented to the Committee has been set in type, the Department has not completed its study of the additional drafting and rewriting they are undertaking. It would seem to serve no useful purpose to send you the staff analysis if the "core" bill the Committee has studied is still being changed by the Department.

I wanted to let you know why we have not yet completed the Committee's instruction to promptly forward the printed material to the members at their homes.

Sincerely,

TOM VAIL.

Mr. Vail apologizes for the fact that he could not get the information from the Department to complete the analysis. A second letter from Tom Vail, chief of staff, dated November 5, states that the material has been received.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. John J. Williams, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Williams: I am enclosing a copy of the Administration's revised version of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970.

You will recall that Under Secretary John Veneman of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare submitted a revised version of the bill to the Committee during its executive session on October 13 and asked the Committee to accept it. The Committee rejected the bill. Instead of voting on the new version at that time, the Committee decided that it should be printed, together with an analysis by the staff, and sent to members of the Committee during the recess.

The enclosed Committee Report represents the Department's revision of the document. A brief analysis with comments, tables and charts prepared by the Committee staff is printed on blue paper at the front of the document, followed by materials prepared by the Department, the text of the Department's revised version and an analysis prepared by the Department for possible Committee consideration, all printed on white paper.

If you have a copy of the bill submitted by Mr. Veneman on October 13, you will note that the Department's latest version of the bill differs in a number of respects from the October 13 version due to the changes made by the Department fairly continuously between that date and the date of final printing. It is a sequence of changes, unannounced, which prevented us from printing the document and forwarding it to you sooner.

Sincerely,

TOM VAIL.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, in the November 5 letter he said he had just received the information, and yet they came before the Committee on October 13 with a 150-page package which they wanted us to vote on without reading. It took the Department another month to get back to the Committee a printed version.

This is the kind of confusion and lack of cooperation that has been existing in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. I know there is confusion in the Senate, too, but I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on.

Department officials came before our committee, and never have I seen witnesses coming before a committee representative of that Department. I know there is confusion in the Senate, too, but I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on. I do not have any idea of what is going on.

Mr. Vail apologizes for the fact that he could not get the information from the Department to complete the analysis.

Congress of the United States. I am really amazed that some of these very simple questions do not get a very quick and easy response—such things as just asked a minute ago about medicaid, and the question I asked yesterday concerning the delays in the delivery of care. It seems to me that those are things which ought to have been easily available, because they are of interest to every one of us. I sought out in advance when you put this plan together.

Mr. President, that opinion was the unanimous sentiment of the Finance Committee. After that miserable presentation had been made it was so apparent that the Department did not know what the bill was about that the committee interrupted the hearings and called an executive session. The Secretary of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare was called in and asked to go back and rewrite the bill. Meanwhile we suspended the hearings until HEW could report back and we could at least find out what was in the bill.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. STEVENS. Is the Senator referring to Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Finch?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. No, to former Secretary Finch.

Mr. STEVENS. Secretary Finch.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes.

Mr. STEVENS. What is the committee that the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Harris) made concerning Secretary Finch or Secretary Richardson?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. It was made at the time Secretary Finch was the head of HEW.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FARKAS). The Senate will please be in order.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, for the information of the Senate, that quotation by the Senator from Oklahoma appears in the committee hearings which are on Senate desks under the date of April 30, 1970.

Mr. STEVENS. If the Senator will yield additionally, briefly, it appears that the Senator has made some rather broad statements regarding the ability of these two men who have been Secretaries of Health, Education, and Welfare in the period that I have been here. I am sort of amazed to hear such a broad statement being made, coming from my good colleague from Delaware, concerning either of these gentlemen. I wonder whether the Senator could tell me how this occurred, how they happened to get such many versions of the bill? Was it because of the complete reticence on the part of the Finance Committee to consider the bill at all in the first instance? What was the number of versions that the bill has gone through?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. If any one has the answer to that question, I would appreciate hearing it. I do not have the answer. The committee scheduled very promptly the hearings on this proposal. The committee has tried to work diligently with the Department, but each time we kept getting some reason why the Department had to ask for more time. It definitely was not the committee's fault that the Department kept changing its mind.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Inasmuch as it has been suggested that the Finance Committee was dragging its feet, I would like to point out that the hearings were scheduled by the committee the day after the House had passed the bill, to begin within 2 weeks of House passage. It was at the request of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare that the hearing was postponed, but when he did come before the committee the day after the House had passed the bill, to begin within 2 weeks of House passage. It was at the request of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare that the hearing was postponed, but when he did come before the committee, the day after the House had passed the bill, to begin within 2 weeks of House passage, the hearings were scheduled, and that is the point.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Oklahoma (Mr. Harris) said that was the poorest presentation he had ever heard on any major piece of legislation. He said that he had come prepared to support it but he had heard a presentation that was planning to scuttle the bill in the committee and perhaps that was why there was such a poor presentation by the administration witnesses. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is the final word. He said that no one could have contrived such a scenario as had been witnessed there that day, that no one could have contrived to give a presentation that was made so poorly.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct.

I would like to dispel the thought that the Finance Committee is responsible for the bill's being before the Senate at this late date. The question has been asked, how come so much delay in consideration of the administration's family assistance plan? The delay was entirely the result of dilatory action on the part of the Finance Committee. Let me make the record straight on that.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Delaware yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. HANSEN. In an effort to shed some light on this question further, as posed by the distinguished Senator from Alaska (Mr. Stevens), we suggest possible reasons why so many different revisions were made of a plan. I assumed that it must have been scrutinized and studied, and must have been prepared and followed with diligent efforts. I would hope that the HEW would have come before Congress with a plan that had not been considered and scrutinized and examined from every angle, because we are aware that with respect to medicare and medicaid, every time an actuarial study is made of these programs, the costs have increased. The costs will result from their continued implementation as compared with the revenues that are intended to fund them, indicate that over a period of 25 years, those two programs will be $210 billion in the red.

Now with that experience behind it, I cannot think that the HEW would have come forward without having a considered plan. But while these may have been many revisions—I have forgotten how many—I can only say to my good friend from Alaska that as we examined the proposals in the family assistance program, against the backdrop of the goals that the President hoped to obtain with the welfare reform, we cannot see that the proposal accomplished the objectives the President had in mind.

The incentives that would encourage people to move from welfare into the private sector of the economy as working citizens could not be identified.

As the distinguished Senator from Delaware has pointed out and as the distinguished Senator from Georgia has pointed out as well, on different occasions, in the city of New York, a working mother with four in the family—a female head of the family with four persons, if that mother were to take the benefits that are available to her as a resident of the State of New York, living in New York City, taking advantage of public housing, and if she got low-income supplements which would be available to everyone in the State, if she took advantage of medicare and medicaid, if she used available food stamps, and took advantage of the such other programs available there, she, without working at all, could have the equivalent of a zero dollar income.

But if she went out and took a job and went off welfare and moved into the type of activity that the President of the United States has called for in this bill to the State of New York, she would earn through that employment $7,000 a year, she would be $1 poorer by working and earning $7,000 a year than she would be if she had not turned a hand.

I think this is the sort of questioning that came about in the Finance Committee that may have caused our good friends at HEW to come forward with no less than seven revisions.

I say this to say what I do not know. I am speculateing. I do not know what was in their minds. All I know is that when the members of the committee started to examine the bill and not to probing and simply did that, the distinguished chairman of the committee, it seemed as though the bill did not accomplish what it was supposed to accomplish.

I am in complete accord with the President of the United States. I want welfare reform. I want to give the people of this country an opportunity to go to work and to give them some incentive to go to work.

I do not believe this bill accomplishes that. I am delighted that we rejected the motion to table. I do not suspect the discussion ended on the floor of the Senate, and the floor of this Chamber, the distinguished chairman of the committee to consider the bill at all in the first instance. What was the number of versions that the bill has gone through?
Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. I would like to call attention to the chart in the rear of the Chamber. It shows how this bill, if enacted, would work.

Much has been said to the effect that this bill only provides $1,000 for a family of four. Everyone asks, "What are you complaining about? That is a very small amount for a family of four."

I agree. But the $1,000 is only the beginning. This $1,000 direct Government payment automatically triggers in these mandatory supplementary payments which are outlined on the charts in the rear of the Senate Chamber.

These are the mandatory payments to the family in addition to the $1,600 from the Federal Government. In New York this $1,600 payment triggers in $2,156 additional State supplement payments, which is 70 per cent of Federal participation. This brings the family's cash income to $3,756, tax-exempt; but that is not all.

In addition to that they can get food stamps with a value of $312. The food stamp bonus was $312. Then there are medicare benefits for this family which cost on an average of $1,153 annually, plus another $989 in rent supplements or public housing. This is a total of $2,210 for this family of four in New York City.

Suppose the city letter carrier that is delivering this welfare check has a family of four. His income is taxable, and after he pays taxes he has $6,009 left, $1 less working and earning $7,000 a year than the same size family gets if on relief.

Is that a work incentive? That is what is called a work incentive program under the administration's bill. It is an incentive for what? It is an incentive to go on welfare and to quit work.

Let us examine this New York chart further. If they earn $1,000, they would have after taxes $6,746 in money and benefits in kind. If they earn $7,000 the family of four, after taxes, will have $6,209 left. If $1 less than if they remained on welfare.

In other words, they talk about a training program to train a man or woman to improve his or her earning capacity. Suppose the head of this family is earning $6,000 and goes to a training school and gets promoted to $7,000 a year; he has $1,300 less income than he would if he had spit in the boss' eye and never gotten the promotion. He would have $7,512 in cash and benefits under this bill if he earned $6,000 a year, but if he earns $7,000 he drops back to $6,209 after taxes.

Suppose a plant is operating with employees on a $7,000 wage base, and the union leaders sit down and negotiate an increase to $8,000. If the management agrees to raise their salaries to $8,000 a year average, each worker would have $6,781 after taxes. That is for a family of four. That is the result if they get an increase of $1,000, or a raise from $7,000 to $8,000. But if their union is on the job and will consult with the management and say, "Now, boss, instead of raising these salaries for your employees $1,000, cut them all back to $6,000." The employee with a family of four earning $6,000 would have after taxes $7,512 in cash and benefits in kind, an increase of $1,300 over what he would have if he continued to earn $7,000.

Is that the kind of work incentive program that Senators want to approve? That is not the kind of incentive that I support. This bill if enacted will pay a premium to the man who slides back into welfare.

The so-called work incentives are in reverse. I have been here in Washington for 24 years. I have never had Potomac fever yet. I hope I do not get it before I leave. If such a proposal as this is the result we had the department check these examples for four States. We did not ask them to check the 50 States, but I asked them: Do you have any reason to think that if you check any one of the other 46 States the result would be different?" They said, "No." The answer was emphatic, so we accepted these statistics as a national pattern.

There is no doubt that if they had any other State that would come up with a better showing for their so-called work incentives program we would like to have it. They did not have it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this chart relating to how this bill if enacted would work in New York be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the tabulation was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Now, to get back for just a moment to how this bill has been handled by the Finance Committee. Surely it took time. It took a long time. I have spent more time on this bill than I have on any other bill that has ever been before the Finance Committee.

The bill was first recommended by the President on October 2, 1969. The Ways and Means Committee reported it on March 11, 1970. It passed the House on April 16.

I might say that when the President first sent this proposal down I endorsed it. I thought it sounded like a great plan. That was before we analyzed the bill.

Mr. President, before I proceed further, I think I need to make one point very clear. My criticism of this bill is in no way directed at the author of the pending amendment, the Senator from Connecticut, because he has been most cooperative. He has worked hard to try to get a realistic program.

But the Senator from Connecticut wanted this tested first. As of January 1970 there were 10,436,197 people on relief in this country. If this bill is enacted this number will increase to 23,784,300, or more than double, and there is no reform as to correcting abuses under existing law.

Mr. TALMAGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield first to the Senator from Connecticut and shall then yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. This is a very complicated amendment.

There are still many doubts in my mind. I do not feel so self-confident that I have all the answers. I know from long experience that whatever bill always conorm with what the social scientists may present in a legislative act. That is why I was so anxious to have a pilot program.

My feeling is that before this plan should ever go into effect, there should be a pilot program. The Ribicoff-Bennett proposal contemplates a pilot program that gives an opportunity to determine what is right and what is wrong with this legislation.

That would give us an opportunity before July 1, 1972, to make whatever corrections we may. I believe the basic plan is a good one.
To the chart in the rear of the Chamber. The first charts had even more glaring inequities. We have had so many charts and changed bills that it is hard to keep them separate.

The chart will show that under this bill a family of four would receive $1,600; that is, $500 each for the first two members and $300 for each child. In addition to this $1,600 there is the $188 State supplement, the food stamp benefit totaling $828, as well as the medical and housing benefits. Under this bill this family of four would get $3,775 in cash and benefits in kind. These are all tax-exempt benefits. This is $447 more than the family would have if the head of the family had full-time employment at the minimum wage.

If that same individual earns $5,000 a year he would have a total in cash and in kind of $5,358, but if he gets a promotion to $8,000 he loses $57 and goes back to $5,301.

Can this be called an incentive to work?

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for an unanimous-consent request?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes. I shall proceed with these charts later. I shall yield at this time, because we can not get this information presented today. I promised to yield to some of the other Members. I think it is important that the Senate understand this plan and understand just what is embraced in it because not much has been said about the plan on its merits.

In passing, I will make just this comment. We were told that the plan was endorsed by the Governors conference. The Governor of Missouri was before the Senate committee and he presented our committee with a resolution endorsing... the family assistance plan on behalf of the Governors conference. He said at that time he supported that endorsement. Then he continued that he thought that he had discharged his duty as chairman of the Governors conference and would like to tell the other Senators that he had read it.

He went on and gave a devastating analysis, recommending against the enactment of this bill. Four of the five Governors present had found that the bill was incorrect and should not be enacted into law until it was tested and proved. They pointed out the disastrous results, it would have in their States. I shall refer to that testimony later.

I wanted to dispel the idea that this plan has been endorsed before our committee by the Governors conference. I know Governors have wired in recently that they want this plan. They have been told I come much it would benefit their States if they could get it. I shall discuss that a little later to point out that this plan has been misrepresented, that it does not represent a saving to the States in their overall expenditures to the extent that they have been led to believe. In fact, the results will be a larger cost to the States.

Mr. MILLER. Looking at the charts the Senator has set up in the rear of the Chamber, I notice that it is stated that the figures represent current law and medicaid increase. In trying to decide where the Federal Government participates on a matching basis. The States can balloon its cost. Therefore, to that extent it is a wide-open ticket into the States in their overall expenditures to the extent that they have been led to believe. In fact, the results will be a larger cost to the States.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Each Senator has been given the welfare payment, level, and the Federal Government participates on a matching basis. The States can balloon its cost. Therefore, to that extent it is a wide-open ticket into the States in their overall expenditures to the extent that they have been led to believe. In fact, the results will be a larger cost to the States.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, would the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. MILLER. I am trying to bring out a part of the history of the development of this whole thing in the Committee on Finance, specifically with respect to medicaid and the so-called family health plan.

It is my recollection that at the time of the original hearings and the charts, we found this horrible discrepancy and these horrible disincentives in the plan, and then, when the department came back, that they made the major revisions that it had, which was incorporated in a series of charts, was doing away with medicaid and replacing it by this family health plan, with a contributory feature; and its effect on that basis that certainly a good number of the disincentives have been cranked out of the plan. Does the Senator from Delaware recall that?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes, I do. Mr. MILLER. Does the Senator from Delaware recall that?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes, I do.

Mr. MILLER. Does the Senator from Delaware also recall that when some of the members of the committee expressed great interest in the family health plan, we were told that it wouldn't be possible for the department to prepare and present the legislative language for this plan until sometime early next year?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. And that was several months ago, that they said that, was it not?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes.

Mr. MILLER. I would like to ask either the Senator from Delaware or the pro-
Mr. RIBICOFF. No. There is no provision for a family health plan. As the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIBICOFF), if I could have my attention, whether or not the pending Ribicoff-Bennett amendment makes any provision at all for this family health plan.

Mr. RIBICOFF. And I might add that any enhancement of a health program for the poor that is not part of the health plan for the poor in the States, or part of the health program of the States, would be very desirable. It is important that the health program of the States be adequate and that the States do their share. We are also aware of the need that a family health plan be presented could be revised between the time we come back, whenever that is, in January 1972, and July 1972. I have said I have been asked the time that somewhere during the course of this testing, we would watch the testing very carefully in our oversight function, to see how it is working out, and then, as a result of what we discover in these tests, undoubtedly we would be called on and we would want to initiate revisions of our own.

Mr. MILLER. The Senator from Connecticut has made a point, but he knows that I, and I would guess practically everyone else on the Finance Committee, thoroughly agreed as far as the testing program was concerned. But the Senator's response seems to indicate that since this plan would not go into effect for quite a while, the Senate and Congress would have a chance to do something, perhaps that had to be worked out in the health plan in the interim. I suppose if Congress can do that, we could also suggest that sometime before this whole thing goes into effect, Congress can do practically anything else with the plan by legislative action.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes, they could.

Mr. MILLER. If that is so, then, of course, that raises the natural question, why must we go ahead on a plan that is to become effective? Why not just the test program?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I think what we are trying to do is recognize that to put this plan into effect is very complicated. The administration has a lot of work to do even to get ready for July 1, 1972. It could not get ready for July 1, 1972, unless it felt that there was a reasonable or good probability that this was going to become law. If we did not have the trigger device that this plan goes into effect July 1, 1972, the administration would not put it to the Finance Committee and to Congress its own health program, to take care of this basic need.

I think it should be pointed out that under the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal, the overall plan does not go into effect until July 1, 1972, for the working poor and January 1, 1972, for others.

Mr. MILLER. Will the Senator from Delaware permit a further question?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Well, Mr. President, if I may interject for just a moment, I do not wish to monopolize this discussion. I am about halfway through my analysis of this bill. I would like to wait and pursue this later and yield the floor to other Senators, after yielding the floor to Senator Ribicoff from Illinois, who has been waiting patiently. Then, I understand we are coming in at 9 o'clock Monday.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes. Would the Senator from Illinois yield on that point?

Mr. PERCY. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would the Senator from Delaware give the Senate an idea of about how much longer he intends to pursue this subject this afternoon?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I would like a reasonable opportunity to pursue it. Several Senators want to leave, and I think this is important enough not to present it to an empty Chamber. I appreciate the attendance we have had here, which has been very good. But I would not want to tire us out. We did not do that all last night, and I was wondering if there would be any objection, at the conclusion of this discussion and yielding around, to asking unanimous consent that after we resume consideration of this bill, I could proceed and call it the same speech.

Mr. MANSFIELD. May I say that as far as the leadership on this side is concerned, we are perfectly agreeable to such a proposal, but may I also say that I would hope that sometime soon we would have the opportunity to vote on this proposal, in which the administration has such a significant and overriding interest, either in whole or in part, on the basis of a time limitation or on the basis of the agreement suggested some days ago by the distinguished Senator from Illinois, because we ought to face up to it in some way or other, and insofar as we can, obviate the President's expressed wish or desire or suggestion that it did not face up to this and several other proposals, he intends to consider withholding his signature from the resolution which has passed both houses calling us back on January 21.

So I am perfectly agreeable to what the Senator suggests. I only wish there were some way we could get down to voting on this conglomerate bill, just so the Senate can dispose of it one way or another.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I will yield in just a moment.

I point out that the Senator from Montana, the majority leader, has been very gracious and cooperative about some of the things I will comply with either request. I can just take my chances to get the floor. I know that with a recess a Senator is allowed to speak twice. But I will leave it to the Senator as to how they want to proceed. I have tried not to monopolize the time.

As the Senator knows, since this bill has been before the Senate the past couple of days, by a prearrangement between the minority leadership and the White House I specifically was not recognized until others who were speaking for the bill had presented it.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Just a moment. Is the Senator referring to me?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. No; I said the minority leadership. The majority leader has been most cooperative.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I know nothing about it.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The leadership on our side—

Mr. GRIFFITH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I was not recognized before, and this was the first opportunity I have had to speak on this bill since it has been before the Senate.

I have done a great deal of work on this bill. I think I am presenting some reasons why there are problems here and some valid points which I think can be thought about by other Members of the Senate. I have brought out some of them, and I would like them to be looked at over the weekend so that Senators will realize what they are voting on. I should be able to complete this analysis Monday.

There is another point which shows the danger of legislating hastily on a proposal such as this. The Connecticut delegation from Connecticut will agree with me on this point. I am not quarreling with the parliamentary procedure in which this was brought before the Senate. It is under the rules of the Senate, but when Congress tries to legislate on the floor, problems develop.

Consider this: Suppose the Senate passes the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment as it is now before us. It is offered as an amendment to the Scott amendment in order to get it into a position which deals with social security increases. I assume Senators will vote in good faith. Then after that, suppose they approve the Scott amendment as amended by the Ribicoff amendment, the family assistance plan, which is what the administration is asking for. So what will have been done? These amendments, if approved as now before the Senate, would repeal 90 percent of the Social Security Act that is now on the books, and all those present beneficiaries to a welfare status. Perhaps that was not intended, but that would be the result.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I will yield in a moment.
It may be an inadvertence, but the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. Scott) sent to the desk two pages numbered 8 rather than 7, and I believe I read the result is that if Congress approves these two proposals, for which we are asked to vote affirmatively, we will have repealed the social security benefits for every present social security recipient who did not establish an average monthly payroll of $468 a month. That means that more than 11 million people who are drawing social security benefits today would not get their checks after the date of enactment.

Some one said it is not as bad as it sounds; that they are picked up under the family assistance program, and they will be eligible under the pending bill. Do Senators want to advocate that drastic step? Yet that is what we would get. It may be that this was a mistake, but it is a mistake that was discovered only because some of us read the amendments before they were voted upon. This shows the danger of introducing a bill or sponsoring a bill and voting for it without reading it. That is why I say this bill needs at least a 1-hour period in closing days of the session to consider the amendments to this bill. The majority leader's fault. Let me emphasize that.

Mr. MANSFIELD. It must have been entirely inadvertent. Any one of us could have made the same mistake.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The sponsor would not have made the mistake if he had taken the time to read it before he submitted it. Conceivably, had the Senate complied with the request they would have called the roll and voted "yea" for it. That is why I say this bill needs a 1-hour period in closing days of the session to consider the amendments to this bill.
December 19, 1970

the Senate is filibustering on another bill from 9 o'clock to 3 o'clock and then is being held over. This bill delays the Social Security legislation in the dark hours of the evening. But considering what is proposed in the bill I can understand that. Maybe the sponsors do not want the light of day. If so, that is the responsibility of the one pending in this bill, but I assure Senators that with a modern lighting system some of us are going to enlighten them. Again, I do not want this to be interpreted that I am going to filibuster. I have been here 24 years, and I have never taken part in one; and I am not now.

All I want is an opportunity to explain my views. I know that the Senator from Connecticut would be the first to admit that this bill would not be before us even now if it had not been for the fact that I and others who oppose the bill made quorums and gave consent to meteto s of the committee during sessions of the Congress. It would have been a simple matter at any point to get up and say, "I object to the committee meeting." This was not done.

I have no fear as to the outcome of the vote. I am merely outlining what the problem is, and apparently there was, it can be corrected. After we vote on the Ribicoff proposal, an amendment to the Scott amendment could be offered and considered to correct the error that the Senator from Delaware has pointed out.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. If some-
I am on this side of the aisle, and I am expressing opposition to the proposal. I do say that as a loyal member of the Republican Party I always express eloquent support for the President of the United States and his various plans. It is wonderful to have such support, even though it may be on some bill on which we disagree.

The President also said he wanted his trade bill. They are both in this same bill. They were both recommended in the same message in the same paragraph. The President asked for, one right after the other.

Suppose I renew my request at a later time. I will have both the late Senator agreement after I have had a reasonable time to present my views. Others also want to speak, and they must be protected.

The same thing should be true about the Ribicoff amendment section. We are talking about the President’s proposal. I remember the President in February made an eloquent plea to Congress about the need for the legislation dealing with the strike of the railroads. Congress never acted. The President repeated his plea time and again. Nothing was done. We almost had a bad situation develop with the strike a couple weeks ago. All we did was postpone that for 3 months.

Why was this bill not considered? I think that should have been acted on. I would welcome a chance to vote on it. That bill has been before Congress for a long time. It has not even had the courtesy of committee consideration.

I only wish that we could have had this early in our consideration and have support of the President’s proposals before. Even though it is late I welcome it.

I am willing to vote on this proposal. But on the other hand, there is not a chance in the Senate of the Senate—and if there is I will yield to the floor and say that there is any possible way under the parliamentary rules of the Senate, even if we vote on the Ribicoff amendment and on the Scott amendment, that it could ever possibly become law unless we vote up or down on the trade bill and on the welfare sections.

If all that those who are sponsoring this are after is only a vote so that they can go home and brag to their constituents how they voted, that is one thing. I can tell the Senate how it can do that. I am willing to vote for anything that will do that. I will yield to the floor and then yield to the floor.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I have one question of the Senator from Delaware. My own support for the Nixon family assistance plan is primarily on the fact that there is built into the plan an incentive to work.

As I understand the Senator from Delaware, he has come to the conclusion that there is a disincentive to work that is greater than in the existing welfare plans. If that is true, I am deeply disturbed by the analysis he has made. As I understand, the President’s bill has built-in financial incentives to work that are greater than under the existing welfare. But it does not rely solely on financial incentives. It has certain other incentives that are part of the plan.

My belief that these will work is based upon the fact that in Illinois for 5 years now we have had a requirement that for a man who is a welfare recipient get training. That has caused about 50,000 people who were on welfare to have gainful employment as a result of these requirements.

My understanding is that the family assistance plan proposed by the administration does require registration for work training or vocational rehabilitation as a precondition to receiving payments; that it has a proved provision for direct education of the family; it has explored work training opportunities, a requirement to accept suitable work or training, and an expanded child care program which would free mothers for work who otherwise are tied down, and enhance development of the child at the same time.

Lastly, it provides aid to the working poor in removing the incentive to quit work for welfare. Those are all provisions built into this bill.

I cannot see why there is more disincentive to work under the plan than under welfare, where many of the provisions I mention do not now exist.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware, I refer to the report to the committee of November 5, page A-25, and use the example for Chicago, Ill. Under the present law there are incentives to work. This is an example of a four-member-family headed by a woman and refers to the net retained of each earned dollar. Under the present law when that woman goes out and works, with her child in a day care center, she can keep 34 cents from each earned dollar. Under this bill, the administration proposal, she keeps only 27 cents, which is one-half as much as under the present law. My point is that if we have to move away from all need more incentive than there is under the present law, I want an incentive in the law where these people will be phased out of welfare.}

In my State they would keep 71 cents today from what they earn when they get a job compared with only 23 cents of that does not understand this bill. There is not the same incentive.

In New York the cut is from 60 to 30 cents. I agree with everything the Senator has said about the need for welfare reform, but the Senator has spoken on the basis of the analysis of this bill as they have been describing it downtown. I have said I endorsed the President’s recommendation and still endorse what he seeks to achieve. I will support a bill tomorrow if we can get a bill with a mathematical formula to achieve what he seeks, but this bill goes in the opposite direction. The problem we have is that when these figures and different systems are related to each other there is not an increase in work it is not there, but there is an increase in incentive not to work.

For the four States that were selected we took two large States, Illinois and New York, and two small States, Arizona and Delaware, as examples. If a person gets $6,000 in Illinois after taxes he has $6,001, including the housing bonus. This does not all the family would have left.

If that same person earns only $1,000 she has total cash in welfare payments and benefits in kind—food stamps, and so forth—equating $6,197. That is
These charts I am using were not prepared in my office. I insisted that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare prepare these charts and submit them to the committee with the name of the person who had them on so that when I presented them to the Senate they would not say, "Well, John Williams has seen nuts. It is inconceivable and it is hard to believe that these notes are here." I advised the Senator by committee by an overwhelming vote not to report the bill. I think it is too bad for the Senate to accept when the Senate understands what is involved and not take action about this matter. The Senate knows I have repeatedly tried to limit debate in this instance. I want the Senate to know what is involved before it votes, but then I vote. I want the Senate to work its will. I would want it or to see the Senate approve a plan that could only expand the extravagance of our present welfare system.

Let us not forget the taxpayers and wage earners who pay for this welfare.

That is the reason why I personally think the best course for this session of Congress would be as follows: I think the President and those who support this program are wrong. I think it is too bad for the Senator from Connecticut would endorse this point. I am going to make the suggestion that this program be referred to prejudice and that when Congress comes in at the next session it take the time to try to work out a solution and do it without the administrations charge of negligence on the part of the majority party or the minority party. We are not going anywhere if we try to turn this into political arguments. The question of whether it is a Democratic Congress or a Republican Congress who should be passed?

There is no man who respects the President more than I do. I supported him long before the convention. I expect to be supporting him long after this bill is passed and, I hope, forgotten. There is no question about that. I think it is right to hold out the hope that the President is a welfare reform bill. It is not. I think it would be bad for Senators to go back to their States and say, "We in the Senate passed a program that is going to help you as a welfare recipient, and we passed it or to see the Congress which blocks it is illsimmatel. The question is, Is it public legislation which should be passed?

that would be more understandable. In-

I think we need to solve this problem

I regard the Senate to be a reliable source; that at least seems to me to be true. I say that on the basis of the information which I have received from whom I regard to be a reliable source is accurate. In the light of the pending legislation, that it should be made public, and that we should find out from our Government precisely what the situation is.

Mr. ERVIN. Is the Senator unwilling to disclose the source of his information, so that some of the rest of us might be enabled to ponder whether it is reliable or not?

Mr. MONDALE. Well, I would only say that the Senator from North Carolina that the source, which asked not to be disclosed, is known to me as being very reliable. But in any event, I am sure our Government could quickly advise us of the facts.

rate, and Congress is not being advised of this important step, it is a very, very serious matter, which undermines the integrity of the legislative process, and I considered it to be of sufficiently serious import to communicate this matter to this time, hoping for a prompt answer from the administration.

Several Senators addressed the Chair. Mr. ERVIN. In other words, the Senator did not receive this information from Old Nicodemus, who travels only by night?

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONDALE. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, these seem to me to be very serious charges. I think that for the Senate to proceed on the assumption that they deserve credence would be a very risky operation. I can only say to my good friend from Minnesota, for whom I have the highest regard, that it would seem to me that if there is validity to the contentions that he has made, it is now time for us to find out, if we can, to be entitled to know specifically what has been revealed by his sources, and those sources should come forth and identify themselves; and until they do, I would consider it to be a matter with no credence to them. It reminds me of stories that were heard during World War II, when there were all sorts of rumors about peace. It took a long time after that bill that has been heard before we actually had any peace. I do not mean at all to impugn the message that has been brought to us by my good friend from Minnesota. But I say that it is important that we know, first of all, specifically who is making such a statement, and then check out with sources in the administration the accuracy of those statements. After these steps have been taken, if they both disclose that the statements indeed deserve credibility and are true, then I would say at that time, and only at that time, is it proper to lay aside any considerations of that nature, even at the time the administration has made such a statement, that those who have been consulted, that the Senate has been informed, that there is validity to these rumors. I can only repeat what I have said. I receive this information and then check it insofar as I felt I could. As I felt I could. I think it is a serious allegation. The administration could make its response.

Mr. DOLE. With whom did the Senator check?

Mr. MONDALE. I have checked as far as I felt I could. I think it is a serious allegation. The administration could make its response.

Mr. DOLE. When the Senator received the information, was any effort made to check it with any administration official?

Mr. MONDALE. An effort was made to check it insofar as I felt I could. As I said, I independently concluded that it is a credible source, and I thought the announcement of what I had learned should be made at this time.

Mr. DOLE. Did the Senator make the announcement and then check with the administration?

Mr. MONDALE. I have checked as far as I felt I could. I think it is a serious allegation. The administration could make its response.

Mr. DOLE. Did the Senator make the announcement and then check with the administration?

Mr. MONDALE. I have checked as far as I felt I could. I think it is a serious allegation. The administration could make its response.

Mr. DOLE. With whom did the Senator check?

Mr. MONDALE. I will not go beyond what I have just said.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator cannot even reveal the source with which he checked?

Mr. MONDALE. I have gone as far as I am going to go on that.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONDALE. I yield.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I was busy conferring with the distinguished Senator from Connecticut (Mr. HARKER) and the distinguished Senator from Delaware at the time the Senator made his statement, so I did not hear it. But I am told that he said that, on some source, he understands that our Government was insisting upon possibilities agree to the severe conditions that our Government was insisting upon in the negotiations.

Mr. GRIFFIN. I should like to add this information to the colloquy. If such an agreement has been arrived at, it must have been within the last 2 days, which surprises me very much, because 2 days ago, acting in the place of the minority leader, I met with the Japanese Government in my office. I will have to check and get the names. The names of Japanese officials are difficult to remember and pronounce. They were representatives of the Embassy, and one was a distinguished Senator from the Japanese Diet, who came to me to plead with me to see if our Government would not change its bargaining position, that they were too far apart and they could not possibly agree to the severe conditions that our Government was insisting upon in the negotiations.

So I will have to say that that is very surprising to me, and I suppose it would be surprising to the officials of the Japanese Government, who apparently do not know that such an agreement was arrived at.

Mr. MONDALE. I am told that this development occurred within the last 2 or 3 days.

Mr. ERVIN. Will the Senator from Minnesota pardon the Senator from North Carolina if the Senator from North Carolina would remind the Senator from Minnesota that these negotiations have been carried on under the auspices of the Department of Commerce, and if the Senator from North Carolina would further suggest to the Senator from Minnesota that there is a telephone line—many telephones—connected to the Department of Commerce, which could have been resorted to in order to ascertain the validity of these rumors?

Mr. MONDALE. As the Senator from North Carolina may know, these negotiations are being conducted under the direction of Mr. Peter Flanigan, of the White House.

Mr. ERVIN. But the Senator knows that the Department of Commerce has worked on them in conjunction. As a matter of fact, the Secretary of Commerce has personally attempted to get negotiations underway and has engaged in many of them himself.

Mr. MONDALE. It is my understanding, and has been for some time, that the principal negotiator, the textile agreements, is Mr. Flanigan, although initially the Commerce Department and its Secretary were principally involved, and that the situation as I describe it is now essentially correct.

Mr. ERVIN. I will ask the Senator from Minnesota whether he has any reason to believe that Mr. Flanigan cannot be reached by telephone?

Mr. MONDALE. Just permit me to say that, as I indicated earlier, I have received this information from a reliable source. I believe that it is essentially accurate. At this moment, with so few legislative hours to go, and affecting, as it does, a fundamental issue of national concern, I thought it important to make this known.

Mr. ERVIN. Does the Senator from Minnesota think they are going to decide normal trade policies on such rumors as this?
Mr. MONDALE. For example, just a few moments ago it was proposed that we agree on a unanimous time agreement on the trade legislation, which could have been taken and agreed to without knowledge of this occurrence. I think that would be a very serious situation.

Mr. ERVIN. The Senator from North Carolina would be very glad to vote early Monday morning on the trade agreement and would make a unanimous-consent request to that effect had he any anticipation that it might be granted.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MONDALE. I yield.

Mr. STEVENS. What type of agreement was contemplated by the report the Senator has—a voluntary agreement on the part of the Japanese to limit their exports to this country? I do not quite understand the nature of the agreement the Senator indicates was about to be entered.

Mr. MONDALE. This is at the heart of the whole controversy surrounding the need for legislation to impose arbitrary trade quotas by statute affecting textiles. The argument has been widely discussed that if only the Japanese would reach an understanding with our Government for some sort of informal restraint on the importation or the exportation of Japanese textiles into the United States, an understanding affecting manmade and woolen fabrics, such as that which now has been reached and long since reached in the cotton textile field, it might not then be necessary to have statutory restrictions.

The development which I have reported earlier would have a fundamental bearing on whether any action would be needed by Congress by way of statutory restrictions on textile quotas.

Mr. STEVENS. If I may interrupt there—

Mr. MONDALE. Because we are within minutes or hours or days from adjournment of this Congress, because we are being presented with proposals for limiting debate on the trade bill which I regard as being one involving revolutionary changes in American trade policy, and because I received the information I had earlier reported on the source which I found to be fully credible, I thought it important to make that disclosure.

Mr. STEVENS. I might say to the Senator that I happen to be one of those who voted with him on this matter, but on the other hand, if the Senator’s report is one on a voluntary quota system, which is what the Japanese Government saw fit to impose on the steel exports about 2 years ago and then promptly disregarded, I might seriously have to consider changing my mind. It may be that if the Senator is indicating we should not act in the Congress on the basis of some unilateral representation to the Japanese Government, that they are ready now to take action and indicate, because the passage of the trade bill is imminent, that they would be willing to enter into some form of voluntary agreement on their part, that is one thing; but if the Senator is indicating that our Government and theirs are about ready to enter into a solemn agreement that would be presented to the Senate for ratification, that is an entirely different matter. If I had been the Senator, I would have checked that out before putting it out to the public.

Mr. MONDALE. This is not a proposed treaty which would require our ratification. This is an informal trade proposal between the United States and Japan. My understanding is that the proposal that was offered either provided the basis of agreement or was immediately in danger of providing the basis of agreement and was an offer by this Government to the Japanese.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MONDALE. Mr. President, I yield the floor.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, under the usual agreement, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 1443, H.R. 17550.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

H.R. 17550, to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, a previous order was entered into which granted to the distinguished senior Senator from Delaware (Mr. Williams) the right to the floor. I ask unanimous consent that... prior to the recognition of the Senator from Delaware, notwithstanding that order, that I might be recognized and that later, when the Senator from Delaware is recognized, he be recognized under the terms of the order as set forth in Saturday’s session.

Mr. CURTIS. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CURTIS. President, President Nixon is to be commended for his statement and his position in favor of welfare reform.

For about 2 years, now and prior thereto, President Nixon has called the attention of the country to our welfare program. I think also that he has had a great interest in what welfare reform is, we as a country, going to undertake and what they would like to have changed, we would get another answer. It is true that there has not been agreement on just what welfare reform means. I think we must all admit, against it, means that we put more justice into the program. I think it means that if there is an individual who is suffering from misfortune, who has had no opportunities and his need is desperate, that he should be treated in a humane and a generous way. But, by the same token, I think it means that if there is some one who has not tried very hard, who is lazy and greedy and ask for an amount in order to see how he can get more, that it means justice for that person also.

Mr. President, I am willing to admit that the abuses are few in number number, and I mean this issue is involving the abuse of the welfare procedure. It is not only the savings in dollars and cents. It is something else.

If we have a program that is improperly drawn, if individuals who should not be on welfare are on welfare, even though they are few in number, it tends to polarize the population, it tends to create an animosity and resentment against the recipients of welfare. That is most unfair to the unfortunate person who is on welfare because of no choice of his own. Therefore it is in the interest of the poor, it is in the interest of the unfortunate, it is in the interest of the Federal Government. It is estimated that should this proposal become law, instead of 3 percent, it will then be 11.8 percent or an increase of almost fourfold.

Mr. TALMADGE. I have the figures on the estimates for Nebraska, if the Senator will permit me to read them. The recipients as of January 1970 in Nebraska numbered 43,550. Under the proposed amendment, it would become 167,700 which would be an increase of 283 percent in 1 year’s time. Mr. CURTIS. That is correct. I thank the distinguished Senator for his contribution there in.

Mr. TALMADGE. In my State of Georgia, if the Senator will permit me to read the figures there, we have 328,400 people on welfare. Under the proposed amendment it would immediately become eligible for welfare. But is it not true that some States’ eligibility would be as high as 33 percent?

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator is correct. In my own State of Nebraska, 3 percent of the population now draw welfare payments that are financed in part by the Federal Government. It is estimated that should this proposal become law, instead of 3 percent, it will then be 11.8 percent or an increase of almost fourfold.

Mr. TALMADGE. What is it that makes the differences? Mr. CURTIS. I am willing to admit that the abuses are few in number number, so that the abuses are few in number, and I mean this issue is involving the abuse of the welfare procedure. create a public sentiment in this country that would make it difficult for the people on welfare and it would make it difficult for the children who are attending school. It may cause a wave of public sentiment that would end up in some laws that might be a bit harsh.

Mr. TALMADGE. Is it not true that at present many honorable, hard-working, God-fearing people, through no fault of their own, are earning low wages, and they see other families on welfare not doing any work whatever, where that person on welfare may be able-bodied and not doing any work; that such a state of things create a great deal of dissatisfaction among the American people at the present time?

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator is correct. It is a sentiment that may become recipients is increased, by the same token there will be an increase in the number of cases where there might be a serious question.

Mr. TALMADGE. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. President, it would be my hope that every Senator in the Chamber would read four or five pages of this legislation and would make no statement on the floor that would be an increase in the number of cases where there might be a serious question.

Mr. TALMADGE. I thank the Senator for his contribution.

Mr. TALMADGE. I thank the Senator for his contribution.
offered or because he had experience doing something else. He could refuse to go to work on either ground, either because he had no experience in the type of work offered or he could decline to take the job because he thought he was qualified to do something else that would pay him more.

I am sure the Senator intends to point out further in his statement that the amendment as it is proposed here would permit that a job would be unsuitable unless it paid the prevailing wage rate. I can understand how we might insist that someone get the prevailing wage as a condition to going to work if he has earned the right to welfare benefits under unemployment insurance. But when we are talking about a person who has not done any work before and knows nothing about the kind of work required for a particular job, that is something else.

Le was take the situation of a person who is offered a job as a domestic. If that person has not done any work, even domestic work, is it not asking too much that the person be paid the prevailing wage rate? I would have to say no. If a person has had experience in doing the work and has a reputation for honesty and for not picking up everything that is not nailed down and for not paying lowly everything that is nailed down then that is a different matter.

When one combines all the conditions spelled out in the amendment in order for a job to be considered suitable, a person has every way under the sun to provide that a job was unsuitable unless it paid the prevailing wage rate. I can understand how we might insist that th1 work requirement means something to the people. But can any of us eliminate similar circumstances, are working for less than a minimum wage rate for this type of work—and even though other individuals situated in the same community, facing similar circumstances, are working for less than that amount.

I am willing to admit that welfare reform is defined differently by different people. But can any of us eliminate simple justice as an important ingredient in welfare reform? If the prevailing wage in the area for the type of work is more than $1.20, then that becomes the minimum wage for a welfare recipient. This would be true even though people in the locality not on welfare were working on jobs for less than $1.20 which may be the prevailing rate for this type of work—and even though jobs at these rates may be the only jobs available.

In our conference, amendment 1097 would set the following order of priority in providing work and training for welfare recipients who register with the Labor Department:

First. Unemployed fathers and mothers who volunteer.

Second. Family members 16 or over not employed, in school, or in training.

Third. Persons already employed full time.

Fourth. All other persons registered.

With this order of priority, it is highly unlikely that any mother would ever be required to accept employment. Mr. President, I hold in my hand a newspaper clipping bearing the date of November 29, 1970. The heading of this clipping says, "$12,000 Families Getting AFDC Welfare of $170 a month.

The AMT set for a family of two parents and three children is $1,484. The gross wages per month for two parents and three children are $1,484. The AFDC program when they do not need it.

Then the story goes on and tells how, because of a loophole in the law, individuals and families are on the AFDC program when they do not need it. It just happens, Mr. President, that the story was based upon ten cases taken from the welfare rolls in the State of Nebraska which were selected at my request. I did not request those specific cases. I asked the Senator to provide those cases. I have studied the problem; and I think it is important that we observe what the problem is, and then consider it in the light of the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment.

And, for example, case No. 5. This illustrates the need for reform. This case comes from Sarpy County, Nebr. There are two parents and three children. They are on AFDC. The gross wages per month that the man draws amounts to $796.85—it lacks 13 cents of being $800 a month. But in order to see if having someone on welfare and still having him work would encourage him to work more and get off of welfare, Congress passed some amendments in 1967 which permitted certain disregard of income in order to encourage individuals to work. Those disregards included his taxes, his social security taxes, his union dues, and his transportation expenses.

So this family, after you disregard all those expenses, has take home pay of $612.33 a month.

When someone applies for welfare, the caseworker sits down with them, ascertains what their rent is, their food needs, utilities, child care, care of an ill person in the home, or whatever it is, and adds that up. In this particular case, the budgetary need of this family was $503.50. The take-home pay was $612.33. They were actually earning $108.83 more than their budgetary needs. But because the law permitted them to disregard their expenses of working, which in this case ran over $187, to disregard $30, and then to disregard one-third of the rest of their earnings, this family was drawn into the AFDC program when they do not need it.

Mr. CURTIS. That is correct.

Mr. Williams of Delaware. This is one of the same examples, as I understand it, that the Senator called to the attention of the Finance Committee, and that amendment, which is now before the Senate would not correct this situation but would perpetuate it.

Mr. CURTIS. That is correct. Mr. President, I want to invite attention to a very startling thing. When these ten cases were laid before the Finance Committee, there were other facts that were sent in from other States, particularly California. Our staff had done some work on it, and an amendment was adopted dealing with this loophole. I am not sure if the ten cases I am talking about, applied the new formula to them, and it closed the loophole. That is in the Finance Committee bill. Do Senators know how it happened with the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment? It will strike this reform out.

There is another provision in the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment that would happen with the AFDC program when they do not need it.
taken off the rolls nor will his welfare be reduced.

Mr. President, not only does this proposal fail to bring about any reform; its very provisions prevent any reform in welfare law.

It is not easy for me to stand here and oppose a proposal instigated by my President. I am a partisan. I plead guilty to it. But I say that the President of the United States is not to blame. I say that the technicians who took over, whether they be close to him or in the bureaucracy, utterly failed the President of the United States. They have not come up with a legislative proposal that would deal with the abuses and shortcomings of our present welfare law. They have not brought in a proposal that would do as the President wants done—have individuals go from welfare rolls to payrolls. The President of the United States has been failed miserably.

Mr. President, if we adopt the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, the provision worked out to prevent abuses such as I have referred to is out.

The State of Nebraska is not one of the most wealthy States. The citizens there have to work hard for their money. We are not blessed with precious minerals, coal or an abundance of oil or any other great source of wealth. Our people work hard and our population is small. But if the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment prevails, it will eliminate a saving to that State of $1,800,000 annually. I have received an estimate that that is what the State would save by the committee's language which would take care of these abuses. And if the Senate adopts the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, that is out. Not only is the language repealed, but, also, as I have said, it contains other language that guarantees that no welfare recipient will be taken from the rolls or have his welfare cut.

How on earth can anybody suggest that that is welfare reform? Well, they cannot. It just is not.

Mr. President, much has been said that the adoption of this proposal would save money for the States. I suggest that the Governors and the members of the State legislatures take that with a grain of salt. They had better read the bill. It was not such a bad idea when the clerk was required to read the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment in total. It was not a bad idea at all. Frankly, I think it should be read some place, and at least should be read by those who advocate it.

I am going to say something about the saving provisions in this bill. The savings provision in section 542 of amendment 1097 is designed to replace the Federal-State matching provisions applicable to cash public assistance programs for families with children, and for the aged, blind, and disabled. Under this saving clause, States would generally be required to spend 90 percent of their 1971 State costs for welfare payments.

That has been repeated over and over again. The fine print has not been repealed. Starting in 1973, this State share would be increased each year according to a formula based on the Consumer Price Index. Thus, for example, if that index rises by 5 percent per year, after a period of 10 years, States would be required to expend for cash public assistance an amount equal to more than 140 percent of their costs in 1971. Has any Governor been told of that possibility? Oh, he was told only about the 90 percent provision.

I contend that perhaps the President of the United States is not the only person who has been deserted in reference to this proposal. The individuals responsible for this bill, in my opinion, have been unfair to the President of the United States. They have not delivered a proposal that he discussed in the public forum for months and months, and they have not delivered a proposal that has been fully presented to our Governors and the members of the State legislatures.

In addition to the possibility of an increase in what the State has to pay in the cash amounts, there is something else. In addition, any liberalizations of welfare programs which are not required by Federal law but result from optional State action would not be covered by this savings clause, but would come under the regular matching provision. Thus, if the cost of living increases and a State decides to provide its welfare recipients an increase in assistance to meet the rise in living costs, the State will have to pay twice: once to meet its share of the increased assistance, and once more because the rise in the cost of living will trigger an increase in the State's mandatory level of payments subject to the saving clause.

It should also be pointed out that the savings clause in amendment 1097 covers expenditures for cash public assistance only and not expenditures under related programs which might be expected to increase substantially if the amendment became law.

Medicaid is a good example of that. In many of the States an individual is eligible for medicaid if he is recipient of welfare. It was pointed out awhile ago that an estimate of the increase of the number of welfare recipients in my State of Nebraska would be almost fourfold, so that there would be almost four times as many people eligible for medicaid, and under the law they have to treat them all alike, but the medicaid expenditures do not come within this 90 percent savings clause.
Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. Do I understand correctly that the table which the Senator just placed in the Record might not be quite applicable to a table similarly prepared with respect to the pending amendment?

Mr. CURTIS. My point is that I think it is substantially descriptive of the pending amendment.

Mr. MILLER. I was wondering whether the distinguished manager of the amendment, the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Ribicoff), could tell us whether the table that the Senator from Nebraska has referred to does differ at all from the impact of the pending amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I might say, first, that I have not had the opportunity to show it to the Senator from Connecticut, but will do so now.

Mr. MILLER. May I say to the Senator from Nebraska that I have assumed, up until now, that the amendment before us would result in substantially the same from the impact of the pending amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. I think that is correct.

Mr. MILLER. I do not know. That is why I thought perhaps the Senator from Connecticut, one of the co-sponsors of the pending amendment, could tell us.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I would say that the table being offered by the Senator from Nebraska is substantially correct. There may be a slight variation of a percentage point, but for the purpose of the argument that the Senator from Nebraska is making, there is a very substantial rise and there would be some variations in the fact that we are paying, under my amendment, a couple of hundred dollars instead of $210—it might vary it a little bit. But for the purposes of the argument that is being made, the tabulation is very substantially similar, the Senator is correct.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I thank the Senator and I thank my distinguished friend, the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. President, this tabulation shows, for instance, that as of last January, 7.3 percent of the population of Alabama were drawing federally financed welfare payments and if the program is enacted into law, this 7.3 percent will increase to 19 percent. In the State of Georgia, 7.2 percent of the population are now drawing such welfare payments, and if this proposal becomes law, it will then be 22.5 percent of the people that will be eligible to draw welfare payments.

I have already pointed out that in the State of Nebraska 3 percent of the population as of last January were drawing federally financed welfare payments of some kind. This proposal was to become law the number eligible is estimated to be 11.7 percent of the population. That is an increase of almost fourfold.

Last January the number of recipients in Nebraska were 43,550. This proposal, if it were enacted into law, would make eligible an estimated 167,700.

On page 6 it provides for a determination of eligibility and, among other things, it says:

Such determination shall be made on the basis of the Secretary's estimate of the family's income; the same and such estimate shall in turn be based on income for a preceding period unless he has reason to believe that conditions of income in have or are likely to occur on the basis of changes in conditions and circumstances.

The Secretary will have to estimate in advance the income. What will they do about overpayments? I know what will happen, and even though they are fully employed, for cash benefits if this bill passes.

On page 5 we find how much income a family can have and still be eligible for benefits.

It says it will be $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus $300 per year for each additional member.

That amounts to $1,600. If they have income of $1,599 for a family of four, they are eligible. However, there are certain items excluded from income.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I will yield in a moment. Mr. President, $720 is excluded. Then I return to page 9. It provides:

Subject to limitations as to amount or otherwise, prescribed by the Secretary, the earned income of each child in the family who is, as determined by the Secretary, a student regularly attending a school, college or university, or a school engaged in educational training designed to prepare him for gainful employment:

(2) the total unearned income of all recipients, of a family in a calendar quarter . . . which is a small amount.

It further provides:

(3) An amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to the cost of maintaining such member for children's benefit, which the Secretary deems necessary to secure or continue in manpower training, vocations, rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment . . . .

(4) The first $720 per year of income is excluded.

Mr. President, there are Senators who say that the bill does not provide enough. We are studying the philosophy of this bill I do not know that I am in a position to argue the point. But I think it is well that we determine who would be eligible, and although they are fully employed, for cash benefits if this bill passes.

Seventh, scholarships are excluded.

Sixth, training allowances are excluded.

Eighth, home produce is excluded.
Those are specifically mentioned. However, other things must be taken into account.

Many of these potential recipients will be subsidized with respect to housing. They will be living in premises where the welfare administration is not responsible. That is not included in the test for eligibility.

They will be eligible in many instances, perhaps all, for free medical care. That is not included in the test for eligibility.

Some of them may buy a home under the 235 program where the payments to carry their loan might be $180 and the Government might pay $100 or half of it. All of these subsidies are cash out of the Treasury to such families.

That is why, when one adds up all the possible benefits that in many instances can and will be paid, he arrives at the figures that appear on charts such as the distinguished Senator from Delaware presented to the Senate last week, and no doubt more of those charts will be presented.

I yield to the senior Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, we were speaking a moment ago about the Governors' conference examining this bill. It is not true that the five Governors representing the Governors' Conference, when they testified before the committee pointed out that originally the Governors had endorsed the bill based on press releases from Washington describing the purpose of the bill and what the bill would achieve, but they said that after they read the bill they decided it was more or less a monstrosity and should not pass?

If the Senator will yield further I would like to read the testimony of Governor Hearnes in that connection.

Mr. CURTIS. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. There has been much misunderstanding about this matter. Last Saturday, I stated that when the President outlined his work program and said he wanted welfare reform for the benefit of the present assistance recipients should be established as the basis for adding this vast new segment of the population to the welfare system.

Finally, the workability of the entire new welfare program is still to be proved. I agree with Senator Musgrave's suggestion that the reform measure be thoroughly tested prior to placing it into effect. I understand the HEW is funding experimental projects in Seattle, Washington, and Gary, Indiana, and another one on a statewide basis in Vermont.

Continuing his state: On Tuesday we could create staggering disorder if we would move into a program as vast as that encompassed by H.R. 16311, until a thorough trial period has proved its value.

With testimony such as that and with similar testimony from four of the five Governors along similar lines I think Congress would do well to weigh the advice of these Governors who have had experience in administering this program.

I now quote Governor Hearnes' answer to a question by the distinguished Senator from Idaho (Mr. JORDAN):

Senator JORDAN. Governor Hearnes, could you tell the how many of your Governors would vote if they sat up on this side of the table for the House-passed legislation with full implementation now?

Governor HEARNES. Senate, I think those who would read the bill would not be for it in its entirety.

As he and other Governors pointed out in their testimony, we could create staggering disorder if we would move into a program as vast as that encompassed by H.R. 16311, until a thorough trial period has proved its value.

Congress made a great mistake a few years back when it adopted the medicaid program proposed by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare on the premise that it would cost only $338 million more than the then existing Kerr-Mills bill, which at that time was around $6 billion, or $1,294,779,000. To-day we are spending over $4 billion on that medicaid program.

It would be a great disservice to the country and to the States to put an entirely new welfare program of this size into effect when we have had no testimony or any evidence presented by the Department or the administration as to how it would work.

I shall not take the time of the Senate now to put in the testimony of the other Governors. I shall do that when I am speaking in my own right. But every Senator should read the testimony of these Governors who testified before our committee on what they thought of the measure after they read it. These Governors had endorsed it before they read it, but after they read it four out of five did not endorse it. The fifth admitted he had not read it.

Mr. CURTIS. I thank the distinguished Senator. What the Senator has said is highly important. Earlier today I pointed out that there were many items that constitute costs of welfare for a State that are not included in the savings clause, whereby the Federal Government guarantees that their expenses will not exceed 90 percent of the base year. That representation has, in my opinion, failed to provide the full story to the Governors and other State officials on what they will face if the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment is adopted.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The Senator is correct. I talked with some of the Governors. They recognize and they do not dispute the fact that this measure does not provide any reform, as they had been led to believe they would get. But most of them are desperately hoping they can unload the cost of the existing programs on the Federal Government. They are buying this measure on the promise that it will solve their State budgetary problem.

The misunderstanding that develops from the administration's promise that the States will save 10 percent of last year's cost, and that they will save 10 percent. But that is only a small fraction of the total program. Federal cost in all welfare programs is $238 million more than the then existing Kerr-Mills bill, which at that time was around $6 billion, or $1,294,779,000, for a total of about $11.5 billion.

Now, the welfare cost of the program for adults, the blind, and the disabled is 4 percent of the total welfare cost. The States will save 10 percent on this 20 percent, which means they save 2 percent of the overall annual costs. The 10 percent savings is on only 20 percent of the total costs of administering the program. The 10 percent savings is on only 20 percent of the total costs of administering the program. The 10 percent savings is on only 20 percent of the total costs of administering the program.

Furthermore, nothing is being said about who pays for the 14 million welfare recipients that this amendment is designed to help. Mr. CURTIS. I thank the Senator. I mentioned a provision that increased costs by reason of inflation, the rise in the consumer index, must be borne by the States. If the index goes up 5 percent a year at the end of 10 years, the cost instead of being 90 percent carried by the States would be 140 percent of the base period.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Yes. Another point that should not be overlooked is that, regardless of how this bill may be modified or amended to achieve transfer of the cost from the States to the Federal Government, the ultimate cost of the program is going to be paid by the same people, the American taxpayers. As far as dollars of the American taxpayers, they are buying this measure on the promise that it will solve their State budgetary problem.
could be transferred to the Federal Government and relieve the States and cities of a lot of money, but the taxpayer would not be saved a dime.

Mr. CURTIS. That is correct. I would also like to point out that an expenditure on the individual locality does not have a great impact on inflation, but centralized expenditures in the Federal Government under deficit financing have a tremendous impact upon the rate of inflation.
Therefore, we are not helping the people of the United States, whether they be taxpayers or nontaxpayers, by merely transferring expenditures from the State and local level to the Federal level.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield.

Mr. CURTIS. We are taking money right out of their paycheck through inflation.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. But I think the main point we should never lose sight of is that while we are talking about reforming the existing welfare system, there actually is no reform in this bill. The Department officials repeatedly told us that not one welfare recipient will be getting 1 cent less than he got this last year.

Mr. CURTIS. And there can be no reform in those cases where there is an abuse.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct. Those who advocate reform have been going around the country calling attention to the glaring examples of abuse under our existing welfare system.
I agree that we need reform, but the point is that this bill does not reform it.
The only way to reform the welfare law is by taking away or reducing payments to persons who are not entitled to those payments. This bill does not correct a single abuse in the existing program.

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator is correct.
I would like to call attention to four examples which appear on page 28, lines 4 to 7, inclusive. They read as follows:

1. the provisions of, and the rules and regulations under, sections 446(a)(2), (c), and (d), 443(a), 444, 445, 446 (to the extent the Secretary deems appropriate), 447, and 448 shall be applied.

Mr. President, it is interesting to note what that means. That means that the States' welfare programs must comply with the Federal rules for eligibility. That exists even though a State is paying a supplement and is bound to continue that supplement. It means that the right to receiving a supplement is abated away from the States. It is placed in Federal hands. The States must comply with it, and if they have been paying a supplement, of it they have best paid more than the Federal share, they are obliged to continue that supplement not only for the present recipients but for those who will be added to the rolls under the new right that will be provided over which the State has no control at all.

A while ago I called attention to one abuse that existed under existing law in the State of Nebraska, and that, if the committee could not stop it, they would not be able to correct. I want to call attention to some more cases that fall in that category.

This case involves a mother and two children under the ADC program. The mother has gross wages of $455 a month.
Under existing law, she is entitled to deduct the transportation expense, union dues, and so on, and child care expenses. So after all of those disregards, she has an income of $301.43.

Under the law and under the rules, an estimate of her budget needs are, taking into account all the necessary items of expenditure. Those budget needs are determined to be $259.
She earns $42.43 more than her budget needs, excluding the $153.50 that is considered an expense of work.

But because of present law, $175 of the income is presently disregarded, making her eligible for a welfare payment of $132.57, even though her gross wages exceed her budgetary needs.

That is corrected in the committee bill.

Mr. WILliAMS of Delaware. That is stricken out. If we pass the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment.

Mr. President, the State of Nebraska is a case that I have just been talking about is not what might be called the case of a culturally deprived person. She has a high school education and is employed as a presser in a cleaning establishment. Yet we are asked to pass a bill that would perpetuate that abuse.

The case I have just been talking about is another case where the committee did not correct an abuse. Washington County is a State with one of the most generous welfare programs in that country. She is entitled to an ADC payment of $338.35. Thus her $130 child support.

Here is another case: A mother and children under ADC. The mother's gross wages are $565.32. After deducting taxes, social security taxes, transportation, child care, and union dues, her take-home pay is $361.90. Her budgetary needs are $269. Her earnings exceed her budgetary needs by $92.90.

But because all the expense of going to work is disregarded, and $30 is disregarded, and one-third of the balance, she is entitled to an ADC payment of $118.87.

This individual has had 1 year of college and is employed by a packing company. Her gross wage is $50 a month in excess of the beginning caseworker in the welfare program in that country.

The committee dealt with these problems and agreed on some language in the committee bill that would bring reform in situations like this. The Ribicoff-Bennett amendment strikes out that reform and carries a provision which amounts to this: she cannot do anything about it.

Let me tell about another case, of a mother with two children on AFDC. Her gross wages are $516.15 a month. The labor expenditure is for three children aged 15, 13, and 12. One child has attending college, the other working, and the third is employed in an establishment. Her gross wage is $50 a month for child care, transportation, taxes, union dues, and social security, is $304.98. Child care is deducted, so she is only being charged with $214.50. When her gross wages are actually $618.

Her budgetary needs are determined to be $277. She is earning $27.98 each month more than her budget needs—earnings in a computed income, which, because it is under $130, disregarded.

This lady is employed by Western Electric Co., and her gross pay exceeds that of many of the welfare workers who receive anywhere from $100 to $150 a month.

Here is a case where the gross wages of the mother with 5 children are $399.10—almost $400 a month. Her take-home pay, after she pays her transportation, is $390. Her former husband pays her $130 child support.

So after the expense of earnings, she has an income of $469.17 a month. Her budgetary need is fixed at $423.50. Thus her income is over $45 a month over her budgetary needs. Under one clause of the formula for disregarding, she draws an AFDC payment of $226.70. She has a high school education, and works with a research organization. One of her children lives with the State, the other lives with the people, and the State pays her $30 a month during the summer. Because she is in college, her income is disregarded.

Here is another case: A mother and two children on AFDC. This mother has gross wages of $569.22 a month. Her take-home pay, less transportation, amounts to $455.88. Her budgetary need is determined to be $338.35. Thus her take-home pay amounts to $97.53 more than her budgetary needs. But, because of the formula that calls for disregarding certain of her earnings, she draws an AFDC payment of $155.43. The budget includes board and room expenses for one child in college.

Mr. President, the State of Nebraska has one of the most generous welfare programs in the country. I think this is the amount that we pay by only one State.
The program is carefully administered.
People are not put on welfare, ordinarily, unless there is need. But if they are placed on the rolls, the State and local units of government pay an amount that is adequate.

So when the State of Nebraska comes in and points out abuses, and points out situations where the operation of the program is not correct, we do not ignore who pay, but also casts a stigma upon all those who are on welfare, it is not a matter of penny pinching: it is a matter of state government operation.

Here is another case: A mother with one preschool child on AFDC has gross wages of $309.05. But her take-home pay, less transportation and other work expenses, is $99.90. Her budgetary monthly need is fixed at $171.34. So her take-home pay, after disregarding transportation and work expenses, is $31.56 more than her budgetary need. But because the law says that the first $30 shall be disregarded, plus one-third of the earnings thereafter, she draws an AFDC payment of $94.79. This lady has a high school education and attended airlines school.

Here is another case: A mother and two children on AFDC. She has gross wages of $115.20. The take-home pay less transportation and work expenses leaves her $96.72 a month. She draws an AFDC benefit of $140 a month.
Mr. CURTIS. I will yield in a moment.

The experience in Nebraska, and I am sure in every other State, is the contrary—that the provision of the 1967 law, permitting people to be employed and then disregard the first $30 of their monthly income and one-third thereafter, was latched onto the principle that the way to reform welfare is to permit people to have their wages and welfare, also.

They should have examined the records and see what is happening when that principal has been in operation. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Georgia.

Mr. TALMADGE. The distinguished Senator pointed out that this was sold as a work of incentive program, and he stated that, of course, all of us on the Finance Committee know that the very opposite is true. I yield further on that point, I hold in my hand page A-25 from the data that the Finance Committee staff developed on this bill:

Diminished incentive for low-income work under administration provisions. For a family of four, of $360 less than if left to the one that is work disincentive rather than a work incentive.

Mr. TALMADGE. Would the Senator yield in order for me to ask unanimous consent to insert these figures in the RECORD at this point?

Mr. TALMADGE. I thank the Senator for yielding, and I compliment him on the great speech he is making.

If the American people realize what this bill purports to do, in my judgment, it will be overwhelmingly defeated. The Finance Committee studied it carefully in hearing after hearing, and the first vote got only one out of 17 affirmative.

They finally managed to work around to get seven affirmative votes out of 17, and they are the best ever obtained in the Finance Committee. Is that not the Senator’s recollection?

Mr. CURTIS. That is my recollection, yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. In connection with the points that the Senator from Georgia made about this not being a work incentive, I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that tables presented to the committee and the analysis of the bill, which I mentioned the other day they have been changed somewhat by a revised bill that came back in October, but still the principles are there. For example, if a female head of a family of four, had $1,600, with the food stamp and other benefits she would get in State supplements, it would amount to $3,480 in January and February, with increased earnings to $4,180, if she makes $1,000; but if they worked twice as hard and made overtime, they go down to $3,100 or $360 less than if left to the one that makes $1,000.

If that same person works harder and increases his earnings to $3,000, that drops back to $3,766. In other words, the more they earn the less they have. They lose more than 100 percent of their increased earnings. It is not an incentive to increase earnings. It is quite the opposite. It is an incentive that if one earns money, he drops back closer to welfare because they are more than the earnings which they are after.

Mr. CURTIS. I thank the distinguished Senator. It is true that the provisions of this measure constitute a disincentive to work.

Mr. TALMADGE. If the Senator will yield further on that point, I hold in my hand the hearings before the Committee on Finance of April 29, 30, and May 1, 1970. I quote from page 230 thereof, as follows:

The proportion of women with some earnings within that program is relatively high; maybe the magnitude of a third or something, and I think we can.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The Senator from Nebraska referred to the fact that this did not correct the problem swallowingly argued (as do, though typically there are not five cents worth of research findings on the subject) that the availability of AFDC payments does lead to family breakup.

In other words, Mr. Moynihan says there is not 5 cents worth of research to support the contention that by paying welfare to the fully employed will prevent family breakups.

Incidentally, I want to read again from Mr. Moynihan. This was in a letter to the Washington Post on Thursday, November 25, 1970:

"By and large the attacks on the proposal from ultraconservatives have been factually accurate. I think they have. I do not know what a ultraconservative is. The statement there that the attacks have been factually accurate is correct. I state further: They understood well enough the basic principles of the legislation, and the essential details of its operation, and they opposed them.

This, at least, is a credible position. On those premises I agree with this distinguished professor. It is based upon facts that are accurate. We understand what is in the bill and we opposed it.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia referred to the fact that this did not correct the problem. I am speaking of the administration paying $1,300 as an inducement to split and divide the family unit. It is indefensible. These are bonuses that they could get from ultraconservatives have been factually accurate. It states further: They understood well enough the basic principles of the legislation, and the essential details of its operation, and they opposed them.

...tails of this proposal have fallen far short of the President's goals.

Mr. CURTIS. I submit the matter can be brought to a vote. I do not desire to take more time on the matter.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I move that the Senate agree to the conference report.

The motion was agreed to.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, under the previous order I was to be recognized; however, the Senator from Connecticut suggested that he has a statement to make. I would like to yield to the Senator from Missouri and others. The Senator from Pennsylvania has a statement to make also. I ask unanimous consent that rather than holding the floor and yielding to them I be recognized and regain the floor under the previous order when the consideration of the bill is resumed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Connecticut wanted to proceed next. I will reserve my remarks until tomorrow.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, arguments against the family assistance plan have been made in the last few days.

A number of these arguments were illustrated by the use of charts and statistics. These arguments and figures have been used to suggest that serious work disincentives are created or worsened by family assistance. This is not the case.

The Ribicoff-Bennett proposal authorizes the most significant step forward in 30 years to develop work incentives within the welfare program. This step is the inclusion of the working poor within the welfare system.

Over 1.8 million American families encompassing 10.5 million persons are headed by full-time workers with income at or below the poverty line. These families are not now eligible for Federal welfare assistance. Yet, under existing law, other families which might live in the same neighborhood or even next door, are better off on welfare without working. For the millions of working families, family assistance is the first welfare program which makes it worthwhile. Under family assistance, eligibility will no longer be confined to those who do or cannot work. The elimination of the present discrimination against working families is a major work incentive.

In New York City, which has administered a working poor program for 20 years, a 13-month study found that over 97 percent of working families remained working families after receipt of welfare benefits. Many of the remaining families changed their status only because of illness or death of the father.

I ask unanimous consent that a short table showing how family assistance will help the working poor be included at this point in the Record.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.
Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment also proposes an expansion of Federal work training and child care programs. $386 million would be spent in the first year of the program for expanded day-care opportunities. More than $200 million will be spent to provide work training and upgrading programs.

In addition, through an amendment proposed by Senator Harris and I, a strong public service job program for welfare recipients will be initiated. The Social Security Administration has pointed to moving welfare recipients from relief to work is the lack of actual jobs at the end of the work training programs. The Ribicoff-Harris proposal takes a small but important step to remedy this problem.

Under the family assistance program, every able-bodied welfare recipient will be required to register for these work and work training programs. Failure to so register will mean an immediate loss of $500 of FAP benefits.

The charge has also been made that family assistance would further encourage break up of families and illegitimacy. Mr. President, those problems are precisely what family assistance is designed to prevent. By providing assistance to all families—not merely broken families, as is now the case—the program eliminates the incentive for low-income families to separate.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. HANSEN. According to the information I have, the October revised provision would retain the $500 penalty provision, as the distinguished Senator has pointed out, but would delete the provision for disregarding income tax payments. Testimony developed at the hearings on the bill showed that the $500 reduction in family assistance would actually result in a reduction of only $241 in family income since benefits under other kinds of welfare type programs increase as family income decreases.

May I ask the distinguished Senator from Connecticut if that checks with his understanding of the bill?

Mr. RIBICOFF. May I say that I do not have that information. It would depend on what the total amount was that a person was receiving. I do not imagine that a person with a family of four receiving $1,600 would be involved much by way of income tax. I do not have the figures. I shall supply them for the Record if the point is one that is legitimate.

Mr. HANSEN. I thank my friend.

There being no objection the figures are as follows:

A family of four with no other income would lose $500 of family assistance if a member of that family refused to register for work. In addition, State supplementary payments would be reduced by one-fourth. This reduction in payment would result in the total loss to the family would be $875. This loss might be reduced by anywhere from $50 to $200, I should think, by increased benefits to the family because of its economic reduction.

Mr. RIBICOFF. In addition, the most scientific methods now in existence will be employed to provide a continuing evaluation and investigation to prevent fraud in this program.

It has been mentioned that the family assistance plan provides a $1,300 incentive for couples to have children. This so-called incentive is also present in existing programs. The defect could be easily corrected by exclusion of eligibility for childless couples, which is a step I have advocated for sometime and even proposed to the Finance Committee in the form of an amendment to H.R. 1831. This, of course, would be a further expansion of family assistance.

Reliance has been placed on charts which attempt to set forth the "notch" effect of family assistance by which, it is explained, the programs will encourage welfare recipients not to work.

These charts, which are confined to examples of families headed by mothers, show the cumulative dollar totals of welfare, food stamps, medicaid, and housing programs.

It is my opinion, which is shared by many, that these tables do not show the true effect of family assistance or reflect its impact on the welfare recipients.

First, over 90 percent of all welfare recipients cannot accumulate all the benefits which are shown on these charts. Slightly over a third are eligible for food stamps, less than 10 percent are in public housing. Furthermore, these charts are exclusively used to show the circumstances of female-headed families which will comprise less than half of the eligible recipients under this program. Female-headed families in which a working male will not be eligible for medicaid, or State supplements.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. It is true that the charts refer to female-headed families, but that form was selected deliberately. We asked if a different picture would be shown if the Department had provided different charts for male-headed families, and the answer was "No." If they would provide different charts it would be glad to display them. They did not submit any, so I assume that while the picture would be slightly different the patterns would be the same. If the patterns were the same it is the Department itself that is at fault for not advising us. I repeat, these are the charts they sent to the committee, and they selected the types we were going to use.

Mr. RIBICOFF. May I say to the Senator that I share some of the frustration mentioned by other members of the Finance Committee who are on the other side of that line? It is absolutely true that the committee, collectively and individually, asked for information time and time again, and this information has not been forthcoming. I, as well as they, reacted with proper cooperation which the committee was entitled to have. It would have made the job of all of us much easier if the information had been forthcoming.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is correct.

If the Senator will yield further, another point to be made on these charts is that they tried to point out that there would be a minimal effect by saying that less than 8 percent of the people were in the labor force. Increased family income in rural and urban areas, where there is no public housing. Those figures are misleading because in the city of Wilmington in my own State, the figure representing those who are in the labor force is only 28 percent, while in New York State the figure is a much lower one. But in New York State and in some other States they use rent supplements instead of public housing. So when they talk about public housing, they do not include rent supplements or various other programs which should be included.

I think all those programs must be re- laid down to show the effects Connecticut would insist on getting all that information.

If we take an area where public housing is not used and that item of the program which Is substituted for that particular program should be substituted. Unfortunately we have not had any cooperation from the Department in this matter. I am a real. I think they do not like the information lost in getting information. It has been impossible in our case. I think it is absolutely true that these tables do not show the cumulative dollar totals of welfare recipients not to work.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I thank the Senator.

Second, few, if any, welfare recipients actually need to work in order to qualify for eligibility for medicaid. This is not a cash program, but a health program. Sickness is unpredictable. When no illness is incurred no medicaid benefits are received. It is unlikely that loss of medicaid coverage would deter anyone from working particularly when other, private health plans would be available.

Furthermore, the family assistance plan actually corrects the many additional "notches" which the present program perpetuates. Those few that remain are not the result of family assistance but of medicaid itself. If we look at the picture above, many of these "notches" are illusory and most are corrected by family assistance.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point? I dislike interrupting him.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The Senator is correct. In one city the average medicaid benefit was calculated at $1,100 per family. It is true that family A may not have benefited from any medicaid at all and another family may have benefited to the extent of $2,500. There is this other factor to consider, however. While it is true that a family may not benefit under medicaid, depending on the health of the family, if one goes on the labor force and is no longer on welfare it has to pay for the health insurance. So that is an extension because he has to pay for that health insurance. That is what creates this notch plus the fact that money earned is taxable while welfare payments are tax-exempt.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I think that point will be touched upon by the next point, that the family assistance program actually corrects the many additional notches.
which the plan perpetuates. It is true that taking the result of the family assistance plan is that most of these notches are illusory and most are corrected by the family assistance plan.

I can understand what the Senator from Iowa is saying. I am on the committee, and I can understand his continued frustration when we talk about the family assistance plan and when the Medicaid and housing and other programs have not been drawn together to make a whole. But when we talk of the family assistance plan, many of the notches as a result of other programs Congress has adopted, including the amendments of those programs, are eliminated.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I agree completely on that point. I said the other day that if we forgot momentarily the other programs related to welfare and looked at nothing but the charts presented on the family assistance program one could have a picture of a progressive incentive to work. It is when we start considering the other programs that people say we are developing a welfare state. I was disappointed that since the other agencies are still a part of the Government these plans had not been put together and considered as a whole.

There is no excuse for their not having been considered together.

Mr. RIBICOFF. That is one reason why I have been so insistent on having pilot programs, because the family assistance plan goes into effect in July of 1972. It would be my hope that, in the trial period, we in the Finance Committee would monitor it very closely and get an overall picture of all the other programs working together with family assistance, and we would have an opportunity between March 1, 1972, and July 1, 1972, to correct any inequities.

This is a monumental program, and I have tried to be the best of my ability, on this basis, to point out that we do not know all the answers, that I share many doubts of other Senators; but I do believe in the basic philosophy, and that the program is worth trying.

STATE SAVINGS

A point has been made that the State savings clause in the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment only applies to the expenses of the adult categories. In fact the 90-percent-freeze clause applies to families as well as aged, blind, and disabled recipients.

Under present law welfare costs under AFDC—both State and Federal—are increasing at the rate of 30 percent annually. At this rate, with no change in the law, costs will more than double in 3 years. The fiscal savings provision in the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment is vitally necessary to save the States from financial catastrophe.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS

Mr. President, there has been some misunderstanding regarding the position of the Republican Governors on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of a telegram responding that the Republican Governors’ Association favors the amendment by 14 to 2 be printed in the Record at this point.

The telegram is dated December 16, and was sent from Sun Valley to Secretary Elliot Richardson.

There being no objection, the telegram was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Secretary Elliot L. Richardson, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Washington, D.C.

At a meeting the morning session of the Republican Governors Association this noon, I presented the matter of the family assistance plan and the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment to the RGA and the BGA who voted to support the President’s family assistance plan with 14 in favor, 2 opposed and 3 abstentions.

RUSSELL W. PETERSON,
Governor of Delaware.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I am glad to yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. RIBICOFF. That is correct. This would allow a foundation which would like to supplement and even raise above the poverty level recipients of grants to make such grants to individuals. The Senator is correct in his statement.

Mr. TALMADGE. Let me give the Senator a hypothetical case. Many foundations do outstanding jobs in cancer research, tuberculosis research, and other health matters. Suppose they take some eminent doctor, and give him a grant of $100,000 a year to do research on a cure for cancer. Under that provision, would he not be eligible for welfare at the same time?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I think that is far-fetched. While it could be possible, I cannot imagine an eminent doctor who was doing cancer research with a $100,000 a year grant who would not have income from a hospital or university upon which he would have to pay taxes, but would rely upon himself and his family living on $1,600 ayear.

Mr. TALMADGE. I am asking whether the Senator’s amendment would not authorize his eligibility for welfare.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes; it might authorize his eligibility, but as a realist—and I know the Senator from Georgia is a realist, too—I have no fear of that taking place.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, we are dealing with a law now, and not a theory. The Senator admits that his amendment would authorize such an individual to be eligible for welfare if he were living on a grant of $100,000 a year.

Mr. RIBICOFF. True; but while this could happen, I do not think the law is that much of an ass.

Mr. TALMADGE. That is what the Senator wrote into the amendment, and I am asking him to explain it, and he admits that what I say is true. That is just one of the many imperfections in this amendment that I think ought to be clarified.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware, Mr. President, while, as the Senator suggests, that might be a far-fetched example of what could happen, I point out that when we were considering the Tax Reform Act and that section dealing with foundations we had an example where a foundation had taken practically the entire staff of the late Senator Kennedy and given them for 2 years a grant of approximately $25,000 a year with travel expenses. They were going to take care of those individuals, the excuse being that they had no other source of income.

On that basis, if this bill had been in effect, all the members of the staff of that Senator would not only have their grants from that foundation but would be eligible for welfare payments under this bill because we were told in the committee that they had no other source of income.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I would like to add that on page 10, line 11, the amendment refers to “food stamps or any other assistance—which is based on need.”

I do not believe that a research chemist doing research under a foundation grant would be in need. The amendment also contains an assets test.

Mr. TALMADGE. Will the Senator yield further?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. TALMADGE. In line 11, the word “or” in that paragraph, should that be the alternative.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I would like to pursue this matter further, but the minority leader must make a statement by 6 o’clock or be taken off the floor.

As the Senator from Delaware knows from our colloquy on his unanimous-consent request of a few days ago, I was most anxious not to have this amendment in the second degree. I was very hopeful to be able to afford every Member of this body a chance to put in perfecting amendments, whether it be the Senator from Iowa, the Senator from Oklahoma, or the Senator from Georgia. I would have been the first to try to correct the point that the Senator from Georgia has made, but we were put in this position that there is no alternative but to make this amendment in the second degree.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The Senator is correct on that point. Both he and I tried on two or three occasions to get this bill into a posture where it could be amended and voted on its merits, but neither of us were able to get it into that posture.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I would be very surprised if the Senator from Iowa were not prepared to vote for this amendment, if the Senator from Georgia were not prepared to vote for this amendment.

Mr. TALMADGE. I think that is an assumption Mr. President, which is not correct.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, the amendment is not a Republican amendment.

Mr. TALMADGE. I think that is an assumption which is not correct.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may present a letter for printing, as follows:

STATE SAVINGS

A point has been made that the State savings clause in the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment only applies to the expenses of the adult categories. In fact the 90-percent-freeze clause applies to families as well as aged, blind, and disabled recipients.

Under present law welfare costs under AFDC—both State and Federal—are increasing at the rate of 30 percent annually. At this rate, with no change in the law, costs will more than double in 3 years. Mr. JAVITIS subsequently said: Mr. President, on Saturday, certain analyses were made by the distinguished Senator from Delaware respecting the effect of the family assistance plan contained in the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal upon my State of New York. I asked the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to analyze those analyses made by Senator Williams. They do not agree with him, Mr. President, as to their effect and the alleged inequities which would result. I shall discuss these in detail at an appropriate time, but I did feel that at the earliest moment they should stand in the Record, so that anyone who wishes may read these replies.

So I asked unanimous consent that the letter of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, signed by the Honorable John G. Veneman, Under Secretary, be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

December 21, 1970.

Hon. Jacob Javits,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Javits: The following is in response to your request for comment on certain statements made by Senator Williams (Delaware) In the Congressional Record of December 19, relating to the effect of the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal upon the State of New York.

On page 520807, Senator Williams cites an example that leaves the impression that the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal would pay a $1300 bonus for an illegitimate child. He states that "this bill actually provides a $1300 bonus from the Federal Government to a mother to have an illegitimate baby over and above what would be paid if the baby were born in wedlock."

Under the existing AFDC program, a childless couple is not eligible for benefits—nor would they be under the Family Assistance Plan. The presence of children is required for eligibility.

In fact, it is the present program which rewards illegitimacy. Currently, families in which the father is married and working full time are not eligible for any federally assisted welfare. But if the father were not married to the mother, she and her children would be eligible. FAP, would for the first time, make the intact family eligible thus reducing the financial reward for illegitimacy.

The Bill also mandates State supplementation to families in which the father is unemployed. This is now done in New York on an optional basis but it is not done in 23 states. In these latter states, an intact family may now receive no assistance even though it has no income. In contrast, families where the father has deserted or in which the child is illegitimate would be eligible. Thus, the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal is a step toward reducing illegitimacy and desertion.

In Senator Williams' comments he left another distorted impression regarding benefits available in New York. In the chart published on page S 20810, an impression is left that a family of four in New York without any earnings would receive money and benefits totaling $6210.

The following facts must be considered:
(a) probably no more than 1 or 2% of the families on public assistance in New York have available to them all of the benefits listed on the chart.
(b) only 7½% of the welfare recipients in New York City live in public housing which is worth $989 to a family without income.

Ninety-two and a half percent of the families do not receive this $989.
(c) The impression is also left that all recipients receive food stamps valued at $312 annually. The fact is that 80% of the welfare recipients in New York do not participate in the food stamp program.
(d) The impression is left that every family on public assistance receives $1153 in medical benefits. This is the average expenditure in New York and is available only if there is illness. The payments are made directly to the providers of the medical services for an illness incurred by the family.

Another issue was raised by Senator Williams on page 20607 where he stated that "in New York, a welfare family will collect a higher premium on family splitting. They collect $2508 more as two families than if they live as one family. They can collect that every year under this bill, if they will just separate—the husband taking part of the children and the wife taking the other children."

This is highly distorted. In this respect the Bill does not change the present law. In New York, under law, a family of six, husband, wife and four children receive a total of $329 per month, plus rent. A family of three receives a cash payment of $179 per month plus rent. Thus, the total of two families of three would be $358 per month plus rent. This means that the net cash differences between one family of six and two families of three is $289 per month or $348 per year rather than $2508 stated by Senator Williams. The family situation with respect to rent, Medicaid, and food stamps would be the same in both cases.

If I can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to let me know.

Sincerely,

John G. Veneman,
Under Secretary.

Mr. JAVITIS. Mr. President, I have shown a copy of this letter to Senator Williams, who desires me to yield on this matter.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator from New York putting this letter in the Record and I note it is signed by Mr. Veneman.

I only point out that the charts I used in my statement of last Saturday and the figures I quoted were also presented to the committee by Mr. Veneman, the same Mr. Veneman. This is the first time I have heard of an administration contradicting his own figures by claiming he gave false information to a congressional committee.

This only shows the confusion and that they cannot even agree 2 days at a time, because all the figures I used were over the signature and finished by HEW. Let them decide which time they are telling the truth.

It further supports my position that we should reject this bill, and I think we need some new men in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare who at least can stay on the same side of a question 24 hours.

I shall discuss this letter later. Perhaps the committee erred in not placing the Government witnesses under oath.
Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, we cannot hear the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Delaware may proceed.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I am going to make another effort to see if we can get this bill off dead center and to a point where the Senate can vote either up or down on various provisions in which we are interested.

There is no question but that there seems to be quite a bit of controversy in this bill.

Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators will be seated. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator may proceed.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, since no one is interested, perhaps this is a good time to present the unanimous-consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the request?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I thought I would get silence if I made that suggestion.

The Senator from Pennsylvania appears ready to object, but I hope he will not object when the request is presented.

We have a problem here where there is considerable discussion and controversy about whether the Senate should or should not agree to the family assistance plan. There is also a controversy with regard to the trade agreements.

I am going to make the suggestion that we delete titles II, III, IV, and V from the bill, which deal with trade, the catastrophic insurance, the welfare amendments, and also delete the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment and the Scott amendment and the Talmadge amendment, which I offered for the trade agreements.

That would strip the bill down to titles I and II. Title I is social security and cash benefits and title II provides revenues in medicare and medicaid. If we would strip the bill down to those two titles we could get this bill enacted this afternoon. We could soon dispose of the social security section and on Monday the medicare and medicaid section and take the bill to conference. This would get these social security increases out to the public at an early date.

If the proposal is to be successful it would be necessary to have a gentleman's agreement that these controversial matters now being deleted will not be submitted as a part of the revised bill, because if one of those titles is submitted the others will be submitted, and we will be back where we are now.

If that is done we could ask unanimous consent to consider the amendments in titles I and II en bloc for the purpose of procedure, and they could be considered as original text for the purpose of amendment. Further, I would agree to limit the time on all amendments to 1 hour.

I do not know whether we could get such an agreement, but there must be a recognition of the fact that this bill will not become law as long as the trade sections and guaranteed annual income features are added to it. In the meantime, a lot of people who are hoping for an increase in social security benefits are going to be disappointed.

I am wondering if the Senator from Pennsylvania could go along with such a proposal.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senatory yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. SCOTT. I would say, first, to the Senator that I would like to read to the Senate a letter of today's date addressed to Representative ORAL R. FORD of the other body. This may help answer the Senator's question. The letter states:

DECEMBER 22, 1970.

HON. ORAL R. FORD,
U.S. House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR JERRY: In response to your question about my attitude toward the Social Security legislation now stalled in the Senate, be assured that I favor quick enactment.

Some Senators contend that Social Security legislation cannot be salvaged in this Senate unless welfare reform bills and other vital measures are sacrificed. I am not yet willing to concede the Senate's indifference or impotence. I have urged the Senate to bring to vote all of this important work that lies before it. There is still plenty of time to do what is necessary before January 3.

Should the Senate be unable or unwilling to adopt these vital measures by then, I will resubmit the Social Security benefit increases and welfare reform, along with the other key bills that remain unacted. And I will propose that the Social Security increases be retroactive in their effect to January 1, 1971, so that no Social Security recipient is harmed by the Senate's failure to act.

Sincerely,

Under the circumstances whereby the President has made clear his desire for the inclusion of welfare reform and social security, and the feeling we should act on both, I have not, of course, lodged any objection at this time but I would wait until the Senate submits his proposal.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I will submit it as a unanimous-consent proposal because it is always gratifying to find the Senator supporting the President, and I would not want to let this session of Congress go by without giving him that opportunity.

Mr. SCOTT. The Senator knows I support the President about as often as any Member of the Senate, and I cite the Congressional Quarterly as evidence of that.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am well aware of the Senator's record. He always votes with him when he thinks the President is on his side.

Mr. SCOTT. When the President is right, which is the largest part of the time.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Seriously. I think this proposal is the only logical solution. As the Senator from Connecticut will confirm, I supported him before on a series of unanimous-consent requests to limit debate, and I would like to see this matter voted on, up or down, all features of the bill.

As the Senator from Connecticut knows, I am opposed to the pending Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, and I expect to vote against it. However, I have no objection to the Senate voting, and I shall abide by the decision of the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut be the first amendment voted on, and that we vote on all amendments to amendments, up or down, at this session.

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator from Delaware now proposing that as an unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I withhold it now, but I am going to propose it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator agree that we vote on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment after the unanimous-consent request at 5 o'clock Tuesday, December 29?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Why wait until Tuesday? Is the Senator afraid to vote tonight? We could vote in 2 hours.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that time start running immediately, that there be a time limitation on all amendments, including the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, of 2 hours, and that there be a limitation of time on all amendments to amendments.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, obviously the Senator knows he will get no such unanimous-consent proposal agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I am an optimist.

Mr. JAVITS. I am sorry. I have the reservation. The Senator knows that he will not get such a unanimous consent. On the other hand, the suggestion of the Senator (Mr. Williams) is an excellent one. If the Senator from Delaware wishes to get a vote on the Ribicoff amendment, I do not think anyone is afraid to do so. With respect to the Senator's proposal, I have no objection to voting today on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, but the Senator knows very well when he wraps it up with everything else, it is going to be objected to; and if the Senator insists on pressing his request, I will object.

Mr. President, I do object.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I presented this proposal in good faith. I realize that one amendment at a time be could be taken up, and we could get the amendment if every Senator agreed. On the other hand, we are not going to get anywhere unless we get consent to all of them. I think that is perfectly proper procedure.

Under the amendment the very first rollcall vote would be on an amendment to which I have very strong objections and one on which I will do everything I can to urge the Senate to defeat. I am willing to have that as the very first vote. I do not know what more one could offer.

Since there has been an objection there is another possibility. In the parliamentary situation in which we find ourselves, the Ribicoff amendment, much to his regret, is not subject to amendment. The Senator from Iowa has amendments which he would like to be considered and thinks they should be. The Senator from Oklahoma has amendments which he would like to offer.

Since I cannot get consent to the first request, we would probably have to eliminate from the pending bill the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment and the Scott amendment and the trade amendment which I offered on behalf of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Talmadge). That would leave the bill—if the Senator from Pennsylvania will just wait a minute before objecting because it is like introducing amendments without reading them sometimes it is disastrous to object before one knows what is being asked.

That is the first part of the proposed agreement.

The second part would be to consider all the committee amendments en bloc, and treat the bill as original text. Then it would be open to amendment.

I would be willing to go along with that, and if the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Ribicoff) has recognized first, in order that he may offer his family assistance amendment. It would then be the pending business before the Senate and would be subject to amendment by the Senator from Oklahoma or the Senator from Iowa, or whoever else wanted to offer amendments. Then we could vote on them. That would be proper procedure. I would be willing to enter into a time limitation on these amendments.

I have discussed this matter with the Senator from Connecticut. This is not taking his amendment down. It is only taking the agreement terming it. He cannot do that, and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Ribicoff) can offer it to any part of the bill. In that manner we would get to a vote. His amendment would be the first to be offered and could be put anywhere in the bill. Then we could proceed in an orderly manner.

I would be perfectly willing to present that combined package as a unanimous consent and apply to the amendment which the Senator from Connecticut be the first Senator to be recognized.

I yield to the Senator from Vermont. Mr. Aiken, there are millions of people in this country who are almost wholly dependent for their welfare and happiness on their social security. Presumably, the hundreds of thousands of others who are desperately in need of medical benefits, of which the Senator from Delaware is aware.

I do not think it is a good Christmas present for those people to tell them that we are going to insist on a situation in the Senate which denies them even a little bit of help. I wish we could enable them to enjoy life a little more and to enjoy a little better health when we vote on the request of the Senator from Delaware. I think I would be ashamed to object to it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I wonder if we can make it clear and whether the Senate understands what the proposal of the Senator from Delaware is. I would like to have it made clear.

My understanding is that the Senator from Delaware proposes that we withdraw both the Williams and Talmadge amendments, the Scott and Ribicoff-Bennett amendments, that all the committee amendments be adopted en bloc, and that the bill be considered as original text; that at that stage the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment be the first amendment to be offered to the bill; and that then, of course, since it is in the first degree, that it will be subject to amendments from the floor; that a time limitation be agreed upon for all amendments to the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment and a time limitation on the Bennett-Ribicoff proposal. There will be definitive votes on all those amendments. That is the only proposal the Senator has in mind at this point.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I would have no objection to such a limitation if we could get it. The Senator (Mr. Williams) has outlined it correctly. I repeat, in this consent we would withdraw both the Williams-Talmadge and the Ribicoff-Bennett-Scott amendments. That would leave the bill as reported by the committee. Then we would agree to all the committee amendments en bloc and treat them as original text for the purpose of amendment. Then at that point, as far as I am concerned, I think the Senator from Connecticut would be recognized to offer the Bennett-Ribicoff amendment, or whatever amendment he wished, as a substitute for part of the bill or as an addition to the bill, and to offer it in any manner or at any point he wished. In that way we could proceed to a vote.

As far as I am concerned, the agreement could provide that the Senator from Oklahoma would be recognized to offer an amendment. I do not care who offers the amendment, but let us get to voting on it.

I think the Senator from Oklahoma has an amendment. I know the Senator from Iowa has an amendment.

I repeat, so that we can get started, I would be willing to have it understood that included as a part of the agreement is the understanding that after the Senator from Connecticut offers his amendment, the next amendment will be that of the Senator from Oklahoma. I do not know who gets the floor after that, but I just mentioned the Senator from Connecticut so that he would know he would have the first opportunity to offer his amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield. Mr. CURTIS. Is the Senator offering a time limitation on all amendments to be offered?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. No. That request was objected to earlier.

After the Senator from Oklahoma offered his amendment he might ask for
Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I have only one printed amendment, but, as I think the Senator from Connecticut knows, I have three or four others, at least, that I would like to offer.

I stated the other day just what the Senator from Oklahoma has said, that way that Senator, in my judgment, was to have a time limitation. I think it might be better not to have a uniform time limitation, because some of these amendments would require long discussion than others; but let us all very clearly understand, I certainly would be most happy to join in any agreement on an ad hoc basis, preferably to have a time limitation. The Senator from Connecticut says that he would like to have this time available and the opportunity available, and yet it was my understanding that the other day when the Senator from Pennsylvania filed a technical amendment, the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Arizona, the only Senator who put their amendment on that technical amendment and looked it up. Mr. RIBICOFF. That is right.

Mr. MILLER. And that was with full knowledge of the matter; it was planned, and without consultation of others of us who have amendments, certainly not with me and I know without consulting with at least one or two others who had amendments, who put their amendment on that technical amendment and locked it up. Mr. RIBICOFF. First, I would like to have a uniform time limitation, because other Members of this body should have the opportunity of offering amendments to this complicated proposal. I wonder if I could make inquiry of the Senator from Connecticut if he would like to have this time limitation of 30 minutes, 15 minutes to a side, on the amendments which I wish to offer, because I am anxious that we get an up-or-down vote on the welfare amendment, the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Texas were the ones who put their amendment on that technical amendment and locked it up. Mr. RIBICOFF. That is right.

Mr. MILLER. And that was with full knowledge of the matter; it was planned, and without consultation of others of us who have amendments, certainly not with me and I know without consulting with at least one or two others who had their amendment on that technical amendment and locked it up. Mr. RIBICOFF. That is right.

I am pleased that there has been a little reassessment of the matter. I am not going to be a dog in the manger about it. I want to see progress made, not to hold up our work. I think that, in fairness, I just should point out that the mess we are in now has been made, made deliberately by those who filed the technical amendment and the amendment to it. I am willing to go along notwithstanding that, and work out an agreement, but let us all very clearly understand that we are in this mess because of a deliberate act. There was nothing accidental about it at all.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, may I respond?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, may I respond?

Mr. WILKINS of Delaware. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. RIBICOFF. There certainly was not anything accidental. It was deliberate, and the reason why it was done was that we did not get a unanimous-consent agreement on the original proposal made by the Senator from Delaware, and the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Texas, has introduced his amendment, and a filibuster was going on that amendment.

The Senator from Utah, the Senator from Pennsylvania, and I realized that unless this procedure, if we would never get a vote on the family assistance program, because we would have a filibuster on the trade provision. I pleaded it, in my judgment, to have no alternative than that procedure to bring the family assistance program before the Senate as the pending order of business. We did that deliberately; we}] do that, and we will at least be off to where we can vote up or down on something.

If the Senator from Oklahoma does not have his amendment ready, the Senator from Connecticut can yield to whomever he pleases to present an amendment, and at least we would be voting. I ask unanimous consent that this be done en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I have been waiting patiently for the Senator to yield, because this is exactly the path we traversed the other day, and I shall object, and do object, if that is needed right now, for this reason, if I may just explain the point:

The prospect of a vote on the family assistance plan is delightful, but it does not mean anything to the poor unless something is going to happen on the bill as written which will result in all of Iowa being pointed out. Everyone knows—I am not going to say the Senator from Delaware knows, because that is his business—but I know and most other Senators know that unless we strip from this bill everything but titles I and II, nothing is going to happen. So those who are really desirous of working on social security—and I am—and those who are really desirous of working on the miscellaneous matters in title II, have a remedy, as a matter of fact. A motion can be made, notwithstanding the pendency of the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, to do exactly that on a motion to recommit, and report back forthwith.

So, Mr. President, airs of injured innocence, or of seeking to make the record, or get a vote, or seek amity, which materially compromise substantive issues, do not impress me. I am not afraid of it. I believe that a historic issue faces the Senate in respect to the trade war and the world. That is very important to the American people, and all America, and I am not going to see it sloughed off if I can help it—but I cannot, unless all of these general pleas for consensus.

Mr. President, we all know what it is about. We are not children. We all know very well that there are deep issues when you get by titles I and II. No one has any objection to titles I and II, or dealing with them. In the hope that we can do something for our people so that they will get their checks a couple of months, perhaps, earlier than they would if we acted otherwise.

But to engage in this byplay, I think, is a bit unworthy of the Senate.

We have been over this track before. This is nothing different than what we decided before. Obviously, if he had any intention to oppose the trade section, I am going to oppose it with every move I have open to me, and one is to recommit it to the committee which put the trade on—with no need for it; we do not even give the House of Representatives the dignity of considering their bill. We have put on all these amendments; they did not do that, we did.

So, Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, in the hope that we can do something for our people so that they will get their checks a couple of months, perhaps, earlier than they would if we acted otherwise.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I rise to order.

Mr. TALMADGE. As every Member of the Senate knows, the Constitution of the United States provides that this body shall adjourn sine die on January 3rd. At that time, all bills pending before Congress die. Only if we reach agreement alive when Congress adjourns sine die.

It has been obvious to every Member of the Senate now for a number of days that no matter of great controversy could pass in the limited time remaining for us to transact business during this Congress. Today is December 22. We are recessing today to go home and spend Christmas with our families, to return on December 28, to spend 4 or 5 days in which we could possibly transact business before the Senate. That leaves little or no time to handle conference matters with the House of Representatives and pass legislation.

What I think the Senate should do is to wrap up the conference reports upon which it can reach agreement. In those matters on which we cannot reach agreement, such as the guaranteed annual income and the trade matter, which I happen to support.

The Finance Committee has pending on the calendar the excise bill, which has been passed by the House of Representatives. We could pass that and adjourn. By way of amendment, the social security increase that the House of Representatives passed, which is 5 percent, or the increase that the Senate has passed, which is 10 percent. Those are not matters of great controversy. I think we could act on them speedily, and we could adjourn and go home.

In the closing days of this Congress, when the Senate has been spinning its wheels—and every Member of the Senate knows it has been spinning its wheels—that is a disservice to the Senate and a disservice to the country.

I would hope that we would act accordingly, that we could wrap up the matters upon which we can act. We could invest the social security benefits for our aged people, and I would hope we would defer the other matters, when every Member of this body knows that we were urged to adjourn sine die until the new Congress convenes next year.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I thank the Senator.

I know that the Senator from Georgia as well as the Senator from Arizona have felt very strongly about the need for trade legislation. They had a perfect right to offer this amendment to the bill. The Committee and the Senator from Arizona have always supported their position. I appreciate the fact that the Senator from
Mr. RIBICOFF. My understanding is that the Senator from New York objected.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Not to this.

Mr. JAVITS. I do not object to that.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. This proposal would move that H.R. 17550 be recommitted to the Finance Committee, with instructions to report back forthwith, after making the following deletions:

Delete titles 3, 4, and 5. Titles 3, 4, and 5 and the trade amendments, the catastrophic insurance, and the welfare amendments.

Delete the pending Williams-Talmadge trade amendment.

Delete the pending Riebcoff-Bennett-Scott family assistance amendment.

If that motion was approved it would leave in the bill only title 1, which deals with changes in the Social Security Act, and title 2, which relates to changes in the existing medicaid and medicare programs.

If this motion is agreed to, I would then agree to a unanimous-consent request that all committee amendments in titles 1 and 2 be approved en bloc and that they be treated as original text for the purpose of amendment. If that consent is granted I would then be willing to support or ask unanimous consent for a time limit not to exceed 1 hour on any amendments—and we might dispose of it either this afternoon or tomorrow and let it go to conference.

Later, after the social security bill is passed, if they want to lay before the Senate another minor bill now on the calendar, we have them there, they can make the trade amendments or the family assistance amendment the pending business and maybe get a vote. But let us get social security out of the way first.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I have just heard Senator Talmadge make the statement he did, which I know to be a very difficult statement for him politically. Mine is difficult enough, considering the number of people who want FAP in my State and the relatively fewer people who are opposed to the trade legislation. It is a more difficult statement for him politically, and I should like to note in fact. It is very statesmanlike. What is more important, it is a heavy admission against interest. I wish to tell my colleague how much at least one Senator appreciates what he has done.

Mr. TALMADGE. I am grateful to the senior Senator from New York for his generosity.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I should like to say, also, if the minority leader will indulge me—he is entitled to be recognized first—that what I think Senator Williams has proposed is probably the only practical way out.
knows, as I am not going to support this. What we would run into is just an agreement on a time limit, on that alone, and then I am caught in the position of having to work against the Senator from Georgia, who would be caught in a box with his amendment. We will not get that kind of agreement. I have no objection to getting this to a vote. The Senator knows that.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I am just questioning around for alternatives.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. I know that. I would be glad to discuss it with the Senator, but I think that if we are going to have to give all groups something, I would very much like and feel strongly that we need a test plan. The administration has said if they cannot get the family assistance plan, they would rather not have anything. I disagree with that. I think they are making a big mistake. But if that is the way they feel, since we would be taking away from the administration the family assistance plan, they would be losing. I am willing to yield on the point of the test and lock it all out and let it go over till next year. We will not get agreement that we will reach agreement—we all are having to give and take.

Mr. TALMADGE. I would strongly object to Senators picking out controversial propositions with which they are in agreement, with a time limit on their particular controversial proposal, but without a limitation of time on other controversial matters which other Senators might strongly support.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. That is the point. The Senator can go home to his constituents and say, "We gave all and got nothing." At the same time, I will withdraw the motion and I will be glad to confer with Senators or anyone else in the meantime until the chairman gets back.

Mr. TALMADGE. If the Senator will yield at that point, I have been advised that the distinguished chairman of the committee is still bound by the weather in New York, so I do not know what time he will arrive. He is making every effort to get here.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Can the Senator reach him? Mr. President, I yield the floor to the Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER). Maybe we can reach him by telephone.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWEIKER). The Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER) is now recognized.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I yield briefly to the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. HANSEN).

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, the pending amendment by Senators RIBICOFF and BENNETT was maneuvered so that, under the rules of the Senate, it is not open for any amendment at all.

We hear reports that the President is most anxious to have a vote on this amendment.

I find it hard to believe that the President understands the serious deficiencies in this amendment. If he did, I would expect him to urge the proponents to call back their amendment and make several modifications to it or to, at least,
Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, the table shows the tremendous increase in potential welfare recipients the pending amendment would lay a foundation for in the various States and possessions.

In Puerto Rico, for example, which has a population of 2.7 million, almost 10 percent of the people, or 268,000, are on welfare. This total could rise to 800,000, or 29 percent of the population.

In Louisiana, 9 percent of the population, or 346,000, are on welfare; but this total could rise to 834,000 or 25 percent of the population.

In Mississippi, 9 percent of the population, or 211,000, are on welfare; but this total could rise to 806,000, or 34 percent of the population.

In my own State of Iowa, 3.3 percent of the population is now on welfare; and this could rise to 8.5 percent under the pending amendment.

The percentage increase that this amendment could cause for each of the States and possessions is set forth in table 2 on page A19 of the staff analysis, and I ask unanimous consent that this table be printed in the Record at this point in my remarks.

There being no objection, the tabulation was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. MILLER. On page A17, the analysis discloses that the U.S. average of all the States could be 12 percent on welfare under the pending amendment; moreover, that 15 States would find from 15 to nearly 35 percent of their populations eligible for welfare.

Now I understand that not everyone entitled to welfare would claim it, because we have found this to be true under present law. Many of those who would be eligible would be eligible for only a very small amount of welfare, depending on the level of income of the so-called "working poor" which the administration's proposal seeks to cover. As a matter of principle, I see no justification for adding to the "working poor", because this appears to be essential in order to carry out a change in philosophy of welfare so that there will be an incentive to work rather than to work.

During the hearings, I called attention on several occasions to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare that the tremendous numbers of eligibles—especially in states—was of deep concern to many of us on the Finance Committee. I urged him to give us some optional changes which would reduce the number, while at the same time preserving the essentials of the new program. I specifically suggested that by using a cost of living differential by regions of the country, and as between urban and rural welfare residents, in computing the total welfare package, not only would greater equity be incorporated into the total welfare program, but the number of eligibles would be substantially reduced.

It was not until the San Clemente conference with the President last September 3 that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare came forward with one even option, and this was most unsatisfactory. Their analysis of the option showed that by merely dividing welfare eligibles between those living in metropolitan statistical areas and those living in nonmetropolitan statistical areas, nearly a half billion dollars could be saved. A saving of taxpayers' dollars is important—especially if it achieves equity among recipients.

The trouble is that such a simplistic solution would not save as much money as it would be supposed to be. A more equitable solution would not save as much money as one living in the New York or Chicago area? Furthermore, why should a welfare recipient living on a small farm receive the same amount of welfare as one living in the cities? Why, for example, should a welfare recipient in the Birmingham, Ala., area receive the same amount of welfare as one living in the New York or Chicago area? Furthermore, why should a welfare recipient living on a small farm receive the same amount as one living in a city of 25,000?

Even the Office of Economic Opportunity has established that for those living on a farm the poverty standard would be only 85 percent of that for those living in the cities.

To point up the need for a cost of living differential in this new welfare program, I invite attention to table 1 of a report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, issued on December 1969. This table reveals the differences in cost-of-living for a "lower budget" family of four among regions of the United States and between various cities within each region, and also between the cities and the nonmetropolitan areas—places with populations of 2,500 to 50,000—within each region. It will be noted that the differences are very substantial. For example, the cost of family consumption is $4,593 in Boston, Mass.; but it is only $4,960 for nonmetropolitan areas in the Southern region. Of course, the difference in cost for heat, as between Boston and a smaller city in the South, would amount for a considerable amount of this. In Anchorage, Alaska, the cost is $7,673 and in Honolulu, Hawaii, $6,997.

These figures relate to a "lower budget" family which was somewhat higher than for a welfare family living at the poverty line, but they point up what I have been saying about the need for a cost-of-living differential in this program. Is it equitable, I ask, for the same amount of welfare to be paid to a family of four, for example, in the same financial situation, living in a small town in the South as the amount to be paid in Alaska? It certainly is not. And we should never forget that welfare is supposed to be based on need.

I ask unanimous consent that the table be inserted in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

!Table Image

Footnotes on following page.
Mr. MILLER. Additionally, for 15 years, the Internal Revenue Service has been following a practice of imputing income to those who grow a substantial amount of the produce they consume. Where this is done by a family receiving welfare, it is obvious that the need for welfare is not as great as in the case of a family which does not do so.

The upshot of all this is that an amendment to the welfare reform bill was designed to cover these important areas of deficiency in the bill. It not only would direct the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make the studies needed to determine the cost of living differentials and the imputed income from growing a substantial amount of produce being consumed, with the assistance of the Department of Labor and the Treasury Department, but the adjustments in welfare would be put into effect by January 1, 1972.

This amendment was offered, along with other amendments and the so-called “core” bill—representing several revisions to the House-passed welfare reform bill—by the Senator from Connecticut in the Senate Finance Committee. It was clearly understood that if the committee agreed to the Senator’s motion, and it became attached to the social security bill, members of the committee would then have the opportunity to present further amendments to the welfare reform package. I might add that I had several other amendments besides the cost-of-living differential amendment offered as part of the package offered by the Senator from Connecticut. Mr. Raskin’s motion lost. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the amendment be printed in the Record.

In summary, the objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

VARIATIONS FOR DIFFERENCES IN COST OF LIVING AND FOR THE VALUE OF FOOD PRODUCED FOR HOME CONSUMPTION

(Senator Miller’s cost of living equalizing amendment)

Insert on page C107, after line 15:

"Sec. 108. (a) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall, through arrangements with the Department of Labor and Treasury, with any other agency or organizations having responsibility, make the studies needed to determine the costs of living differentials and the imputed income from growing a substantial amount of the produce consumed by the produce consumed by the families in the United States, and to determine the monetary value to a family for any amounts of family assistance benefits and supplements which are not available for recipients wherever they may reside in the United States." (c) The Secretary shall by regulations which become effective on or before January 1, 1972, prescribe a schedule of earnings which is to be imputed to any family which produces a substantial amount of food for home consumption, for purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits payable under part D and supplementary payments under part E of the Social Security Act, as amended by this Act. The Secretary shall include such adjustments and such schedule in the pretest programs authorized by section 105.

(d) The findings of the Secretary which are implemented under the preceding subsection shall also be applicable, insofar as the Secretary determines reasonable to do so, to imputed payments for medical care on behalf of individuals which are made on the basis of need under programs aided or assisted under the Social Security Act.

(e) Before January 1, 1972, the Secretary shall report to the Congress and describe the adjustments which he proposes to make and the regulations which he proposes to issue pursuant to subsection (b).

(f) The Secretary shall apportion such sums as may be necessary to conduct the studies authorized by subsection (a)."

MR. MILLER. Now, the Senator from Connecticut and the Senator from Utah have offered the pending amendment which some of us thought was the same package that had been offered in the Finance Committee. But it is not the same, and the change is certainly not desirable. In this case, it is desirable.

The purpose of the pending, the so-called welfare reform provisions of the pending amendment is clearly stated in section 540 of the Social Security Act. Mr. Curtis of Nebraska gave the Finance Committee several specific, real-life examples he had received from the Douglas Country, Nebraska, welfare office showing that, because of the present disregard formula for welfare, some welfare recipients have been able to draw welfare even though their income was considerably higher than that of other families not on welfare. Yesterday he presented these same examples to the Senate.

It seems to me that most of the members of the committee were deeply concerned about such a situation, and when we came to the disregard provisions under the work incentive program, we amended them, as set forth on page 465 of the pending bill. Under our change, the first $60 of earned income of individuals employed full time are disregarded; for those working part time, the first $30 is disregarded; plus one-third of up to $300 additional earnings and one-fifth of earnings in excess of $300 in each case.

I do not know why the authors of the pending amendment did not draft the disregard provisions of their amendment to reflect this change; and their failure to do so will simply mean that there will be more eligibles for welfare who do not need it.

Another defect in the pending Ribi- ccoff-Bennett amendment has to with section 464 on page 46, relating to the obligation of deserting parents. For some reason this amendment was drafted to delete the provisions upon the amendment was defeated. I refer to the “disregard” of section 105.

And so we now have before us, a package called “welfare reform” which would treat all welfare recipients alike, whether they lived in Anchorage, Alaska, Boston, Chicago, Champaign, Illinois, Chippewa, Wisconsin, Alabama, Puerto Rico, or on a small farm growing much of their own produce. This violates the fundamental principle of need as a basis of welfare. It is discriminatory and results in adding millions of people to the welfare eligibility list who do not need to be added, and it, therefore, is excessive in its cost to those who pay the taxes to fund it. On this one cost alone, it should be rejected. And I would hope that the President will have this serious deficiency brought to his attention so that he will have a more eligibles for welfare reform program has been distorted.

It simply will not do to say—as the Secretary of HEW did at page 600 of the hearings—that State supplement variations take care of the problem. These variations, where they exist, are anything but scientifically based, and this is because the States do not have the capability to do so. Only the Bureau of Labor Statistics has that capability.

There is another provision in the pending amendment which is inequality. I refer to the “disregard” of income in section 443(b) (4) on page 10. This provides that welfare payments shall not be reduced to the extent of earnings of a family of $60 per month plus one-half of the earnings beyond that.

It is unfortunate that the family assistance bill was brought before the House in such a way as to preclude any discussion of the amendments with alternative proposals, which the senior Senator from Iowa has tried to get considered in this body. He made many important contributions as a member of the Finance Committee. I say now that if we were to adopt the pending amendment, we would not reform in a constructive way the mess in which welfare now falls itself.

I agree with the President of the United States that welfare must be reformed. It is extremely costly. It is not serving the purpose of encouraging people to move away from welfare into private employment. We would all like to have the objectives that have been spelled out by the President of the United States become fact. I do not think they will become fact under the terms of this amendment.

I doubt very much if anyone who has studied this proposal objectively would have any very real reason to believe that the President's goals would be achieved by the adoption of this amendment. I recall the observation by the distinguished Senator from Connecticut when he said that had he known then what he now knows, he never would have recommended that the Medicare and medicaid programs, which he recommended will cost $21 billion at red when they have been in operation in 20 or 25 years, be adopted without first having been tried. That is the way I feel about the family assistance plan that is now before us.

I would hope that the Members of the Senate will study closely and heed the very profound observations made by my distinguished colleague from Iowa.

Mr. MILLER. I thank my friend from Wyoming for his generous remarks. I can also state that day after day the Senator from Wyoming was nearly always in attendance. I am sure he was in attendance at the time the Finance Committee through all the hearings and deliberations on the welfare reform proposal. I am sure he can verify the fact that the Senator from Iowa was there the second time in the committee in making every effort to give the administration an opportunity to present its case and to work with the administration in trying to make some progress on this bill. And in doing it, Senator from Iowa felt so highly opposed to it that they in good conscience felt it could never be cleaned up to be a satisfactory program.

I might say that I conferred, whenever I had an opportunity, with Governor-elect Shapp and Lt. Governor of Pennsylvania concerning the family assistance plan. Senator from Iowa was there the second time in the committee in making every effort to give the administration an opportunity to present its case and to work with the administration in trying to make some progress on this bill. And in doing it, Senator from Iowa felt so highly opposed to it that they in good conscience felt it could never be cleaned up to be a satisfactory program.

In recent weeks we have received a great amount of support for early passage of PAP from both Governors and Governors-elect.

REPUBLICAN GOVERNORS' ASSOCIATION

On December 10, 1970, in Sun Valley, Idaho, Governor Peterson of Delaware presented the Family Assistance Plan and the Ribicoff-Bennett Amendment to the Republican Governors' association in Executive Session. The group voted to support the plan with 14 in favor, 2 opposed, and 3 abstentions. (See copy of telegram to Secretary Richardson enclosed.)

BIPARTISAN GOVERNORS' MEETING WITH THE PRESIDENT

On December 11, 1970, several Governors and Governors-elect met with President Nixon and later with Secretary Richardson and expressed their support of the Family Assistance Plan. Senator Ford was the sponsor. The meeting was held at the request of the Governors because of their great interest in the legislation. Governors attended the meetings were Ogilvie, Cahill, Scott, Peterson of Delaware, Peterson of New Hampshire, Ray and Smith of Texas. Also attending were Governor-elect Shaup and Lt. Governor Dwight of Massachusetts.
I appreciate having the opportunity to comment on this important legislation.

Sincerely,

Kenneth M. Curtis, Governor.

State of Connecticut,
Executive Chambers, Hartford, November 27, 1970.

Hon. Elliott L. Richardson,

Dear Mr. Secretary: This will acknowledge your letter of November 13, 1970, relating to the Family Assistance Plan.

Connecticut, a state that has carefully reviewed this legislation, believes the basic concepts contained in the plan, namely, a national income floor, coverage for the working poor, national eligibility standards and federal administration, are vital to the welfare system.

To be concerned with the small amount of fiscal relief this plan provides States like Connecticut, which have already established high welfare standards.

I have asked our Welfare Commissioner, John Harder, to review the materials submitted with your letter, and will submit any additional comments deemed appropriate upon completion of that review.

We endorse this welfare reform and look forward to the day when the Federal Government assumes complete responsibility for this national problem.

Sincerely,

John Dempsey, Governor.

State of New Jersey,

Copy of letter sent by Governor William T. Cahill to all Governors on the Family Assistance Plan.

Dear Governor:

I am writing to you today to solicit your aid in attempting to resolve the problems we are facing in New Jersey. This is the State's first attempt to enact a welfare reform plan.

Governor Cahill—New Jersey. Wrote all Governors urging support of the Family Assistance Plan and asked them to assist in getting a Senate vote during the post-election session.

Governor Evans—Washington. Wrote all Governors on August 27, 1970 urging the support of the Family Assistance Plan. (See letter.)

Governor Ogilvie—Illinois. Issued a press release strongly supporting the Family Assistance Plan and stating that he would be seeking assistance in obtaining a Senate vote during the post-election session. (See letter.)

President's Family Assistance Plan now under consideration by the Senate Finance Committee.

After extensive consultation and thorough consideration of the implications of the proposal, I am convinced that the process is fundamentally sound. The Senate has before it the greatest single opportunity to reform welfare since the 1930's. The program treats poor people that any legislative body in this nation has had in three decades.

The President has said that welfare is a "colossal failure." On the basis of my experience as the Governor of a major industrial state, I must agree.

The present system is a waste of state and Federal money. It is a system that no one likes. And for good reason.

I have heard Illinois residents complain of intolerable injustices in the system. Beneficiaries are granted begrudgingly, without dignity and often arbitrarily. Desertion of families by fathers is encouraged. The present system builds in incentives not to work.

I have also seen another side. The system places great burdens upon the fiscal and administrative situation. I have seen astronomical growths in caseloads insidiously eating up moneys planned for other important welfare programs. I have seen the tremendous pressure which has come to bear upon the Federal government to increase Federal funds as early as during the second half of fiscal 1972 to assist them in meeting the welfare problem head-on.

This is the last chance, probably for years, for us to achieve meaningful welfare reform. While I cannot guarantee that the President's welfare reform program will be without flaws, I am convinced that it presents a far more acceptable alternative to the present system. As Secretary Richardson stated on Sunday, "This isn't a conservative-liberal issue: it's a question of sensible reform of an existing mess."

I therefore ask you to urge the U.S. Senators from your State to give the President's welfare program their support if it comes up for a vote during the present post-election session.

Sincerely yours,

William T. Cahill, Governor.

Statement on the Family Assistance Plan

The Administration of the State of Illinois has carefully reviewed the Family Assistance Plan now under consideration by the Senate Finance Committee.

I support the Family Assistance Program and believe it is a sensible approach to welfare reform, including, for example, wage incentives, job training, day-care assistance in finding jobs, penalties for not accepting reasonable employment, and a national minimum welfare standard of $1000. If passed, the act would become effective January 1, 1972, and all States would receive an infusion of substantial Federal funds as early as during the second half of fiscal 1972 to assist them in meeting the welfare problem head-on.

In the last chance, probably for years, for us to achieve meaningful welfare reform. While I cannot guarantee that the President's welfare reform program will be without flaws, I am convinced that it presents a far more acceptable alternative to the present system. As Secretary Richardson stated on Sunday, "This isn't a conservative-liberal issue: it's a question of sensible reform of an existing mess."

I therefore ask you to urge the U.S. Senators from your State to give the President's welfare program their support if it comes up for a vote during the present post-election session.

Sincerely yours,

William T. Cahill, Governor.
the effectiveness of which we have no adequate ways of measuring. I believe this approach gives the poor a freedom of choice in purchasing goods and services that will inspire them to take advantage of those services and motivation essential for true human renewal. Moreover, the Nixon plan giving an earnings supplement to the working poor has been implemented in Illinois, with the Secretary of Midwest Governors' Conference as well as the chief executive of the large industry. It is time to see what can be done to move the Nixon Family Assistance Plan out of the Senate Finance Committee and into final enactment this Late in July, I sent you the impact of the of the Department of Health, Education, and

Mr. CASE. Mr. President, as a cospon-or of the pending Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, I urge the Senate to act promptly to adopt the measure.

The debate over welfare reform and the proposed Family Assistance plan has gone on in the Congress for many months. Before the issue reached us in the form of legislative proposals, it had been debated over a period of several years by private citizens, advisory councils, welfare directors, and State officials.

So there is no lack of information on this issue, nor is there any need for further study or prolonged tests of the language that will permit the Secretary to waive part of a state's liability, should serious federal obligations be imposed.

Although we still have certain questions about some aspects of the law, e.g., the liberalized definition of disability, and the fragmentation of services that would be possible if cities of over 250,000 instited an administrative program in their communities, I urge you to carefully examine the impact of this provision on the ability of your state to deliver services effectively.

I have no doubt whatever that we can prove the capability such a program requires.

The plan to move the Nixon Family Assistance Plan out of the Senate Finance Committee and into final enactment this year.

The major changes on which agreement has been reached are:

1. Expenditures for Aid to Families with Dependent Children-Unemployed Parents and Aid to Families with Dependent Children-Foster Care will be excluded from the expenditure base for computing the "hold-safe" requirement.

2. The wide discretion granted to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with respect to payment levels under State Supplementation apparently will be retained as is.

3. If sufficient funds are not available to the states, expenditures under Title XX can now be limited on the basis of a state's own priorities although a balanced program of servces will be necessary. Additional services could be provided by municipalities with a population of 250,000 or more if there were sufficient local funds. Non-federal expenditures for services must be at least as high as fiscal 1970.

4. Under Title XVI the recognition of the economy of shared living arrangements was considered by HEW to be implicit in computing the $110 standard. HEW agrees, however, that this requirement should be made explicit in the law.

5. Under the emergency assistance pro-tion of Title XX, the intent apparently was that the states define the conditions and content of "emergency aid" and that HEW setting the outer limits. HEW agrees, however, that the law should be modified to indicate that "emergency" is to be defined by the state.

The representatives of HEW considered that our suggestions with respect to Title XIX would be more appropriately considered with the health insurance legislation to be introduced next February rather than in connection with the Family Assistance Plan legislation. The amendments made by the states on appropriate modification of Title XIX prior to the submittal of such legislation.

We still have a concern that a state might not be able to meet its fiscal obligations under the bill at some time in the future.

The problem is the timing of such development, and I trust that you and your staff will review the suggested changes and the impact on your state. Given these changes, the "hold-safe" provision appears to become a substantive rather than nominal limitation on state expenditures. We have appreciated the positive attitude of HEW staff and consider that solid progress has been made.

We hope that you, like ourselves, will support the legislation as modified.

ing of welfare that the National Governors' Association has described as a "federal welfare waigmire" and permit the states to revamp their welfare delivery system. The only way we can determine if social assistance is separated from the provision of the myriad of social services, can better management be achieved. In Illinois, in anticipation of the enactment of legislation such as this, we have already taken steps to test out the basic precepts of the President's plan in a designated geographical area. We need and welcome the challenge and the opportunity this legislation provides.

If we could assist the states to meet the crushing fiscal burdens of welfare; figures now available show ADC costs for August were fully 43% over the costs just one year ago. This is a rate of growth that totally dwarfs our annual revenue growth of 6%. Its size means that we must either cut back support for other programs in other important areas, or place further strains on a state revenue structure that is highly regressive compared with the federal. Neither of these alternatives is sound in policy or makes sense to the people.

I have repeatedly urged the federal government to contribute to those of the states with revenue sharing. For the same reasons, it must more fully fund welfare costs. The Federal Government must share its burden now. This is the real New Federalism.

Many shortcomings of the welfare system today exist because we have merely tinkered with its details and added band-aid solutions, thereby warping its underlying objective. The result is an unworkable system that people out of work cannot into the mainstream of American life. It is my strong hope that well-intentioned efforts will improve the Family Assistance. I am not responsible for its failure.

It is time for all persons truly interested in the improvement of our welfare system to come in force to support this legislation.

It is imperative that the states that bear the most direct responsibility for welfare have a major voice in shaping welfare reform policy. We all know that this legislation does not provide the full federal funding of welfare that the National Governors' Council has asked for. In my own budget message last April, I called upon the federal government to assume this cost and said "That in your course, the Federal government could make to state and local government would be to pay all public aid

It represents, I believe, the best hope of Congress to develop a fair, workable bill. At present, varying welfare programs across the nation do not provide national standards for either benefits or eligibility. There is no uniformity in Federal cost-sharing, and the administration of public assistance varies widely from State to State.

As has been pointed out, what we have, in short, is really 54 different programs in 54 different jurisdictions throughout the United States. Each State sets its own standard of need. Each State determines who will be eligible. Each State decides how much to pay. And each State gets a different share from the Federal Government.

Is it any wonder the system is not working and the people it is supposed to help are frustrated?

The continuation of a system so demonstrably inequitable and inefficient is not fair to the poor—especially those who need help and are not getting it under the present approach—and it is not fair to States and cities.

Welfare is no longer a local problem. We have become a highly mobile society and we have encouraged people to seek employment in urban centers where jobs and training have been expanded. The movement of people into cities and their inability to obtain employment, because of lack of skills and lack of opportunity, has caused a welfare mushroom. Most of these people have no recourse but to seek help through the aid to dependent children program.

In my own State of New Jersey, three-fourths of all public welfare expenditures go into this program. According to Governor Cahill, the average monthly number of welfare recipients rose from 106,000 to 306,000 during the past 5 years, an increase of nearly 200 percent. Net expenditures for this program—Federal, State, and county—rose from $59 to $216 million, a rise of approximately 270 percent. And State expenditures increased far more than Federal aid, or a rise of 55 percent. I am told that total State expenditures for welfare—and medicare—are expected to increase as much as 53 percent, or $100 million, next year alone.

Obviously, neither public welfare expenditures nor any other States experiencing similar skyrocketing costs can afford to continue to bear the financial cost of what must be recognized as a national problem, Help from the Federal Government is long overdue.

The family assistance plan does not do all I think it should, but it does represent a substantial improvement over the congestion of the 54 programs we currently have. Moreover, as now amended, FAP would provide, in addition to national minimum standards and workfare costs, a Federal share of 50 percent, or $2.3 billion, in urgently needed aid to three-fourths of the States, including those States bearing the heaviest burden of welfare costs. My amendment is not offered as a substitute for FAP but simply as a way of providing some relief until the family assistance program, if adopted by Congress, goes into effect.

I hope it will be possible to vote on both the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment and on my amendment before the Senate adjourns.

Mr. WILLIAMS of New Jersey. Mr. President, 35 years ago this Nation made a commitment to enable the elderly to live a life of dignity and self-respect in retirement. Enactment of the Social Security Act was a landmark in social legislation. It once again affirmed the high value we place upon human dignity throughout a lifetime.

Today social security protects workers and their families from loss of earnings because of retirement, death, or disability.

Without these benefits, many older Americans would be forced to go on the relief rolls or to depend upon relatives who frequently would not have the resources to support them.

And without these benefits 19 out of 20 beneficiaries would not even achieve a moderate standard of living.

Yet, the vast majority of older Americans are experiencing a retirement income crisis which is worsening, rather than improving.

Nearly 5 million elderly persons fall below the poverty line; Over 2 million are on welfare; and only about 1 in 5 has a job, usually part time and at lower wages.

Today older Americans are twice as likely to be poor as compared to younger persons. One out of every four persons 65 and older—in contrast to one in nine for younger individuals—live in poverty.

Even more disturbing, their aggregate numbers in poverty are now increasing, for the first time. Since 1968 the total number of elderly persons living in poverty jumped by nearly 200,000—from 4.6 to 4.8 million. In sharp contrast, the number of younger persons who would be considered poor declined by almost 1.3 million, or a 24 percent decrease.

These figures clearly show that piece-meal, stopgap measures are just not going to work. Today's retirement income problems cannot be solved by adding a few dollars every year or two to social security.

Immediate and far-reaching action is needed on several fronts.

The bill before us today has several provisions which will be of vital help to individuals living on limited fixed incomes.

Several provisions, in fact, represent a major step forward in dealing with the present retirement income crisis. They are specific, local or general proposals I have advanced in my omnibus social security legislation and other proposals to help the aged.

A 10-PERCENT BENEFIT INCREASE

In May, the House of Representatives passed a 5-percent across-the-board effective income increase, which I believe would, of course, be welcome by our Nation's 20 million older Americans.

However, our cost of living has been rising at an annual rate of about 6 percent—the most rampant inflation in nearly 20 years.

At this rate, the 5-percent benefit increase would be wiped out before a social security beneficiary received his first check reflecting this raise.

Sparking inflation continues to rob the pocketbook of every American. But no group is hurt more badly than older Americans living on fixed incomes.

As prices go up, their meager purchasing power goes down—usually quite sharply.

For an average retired couple, a 10-percent benefit increase would mean an additional $119 in annual benefits above the House level, or approximately $10 a month.

MINIMUM BENEFITS

Another significant improvement in the Finance Committee bill is the substantial increase in minimum monthly benefits.

Minimum benefits for a single person now amounts to $54 a month.

The 5-percent increase authorized in the House bill would only have the effect of raising this present inadequate base by $3.20 a month—from $54 to $67.20.

This is only a token amount and would be completely unrealistic for a person surviving in poverty.

The Senate bill would help to improve this measure substantially by providing a minimum monthly benefit of $100. This badly needed reform can be one of the most significant measures in the bill before us.

LIBERALIZATION OF THE EARNINGS TEST

Under present law, a person under 72 may earn up to $1,680 in annual income before his social security benefits are reduced.

For many senior citizens who need to work because of inadequate social security benefits, this limitation operates as a formidable barrier against the House and Senate bills, the existing earnings test is raised to a more realistic level—$2,000 before social security benefits would be reduced.

In addition, $1 in benefits would be withheld for each $2 of earnings above the $2,000 cutoff point. Under existing law, this one for two feature only applies to a $200 earnings band—from $1,800 to $2,000. Thereafter, $1 in benefits is withheld for each $1 of earnings.

A 100-PERCENT BENEFIT FOR WIDOWS

Another far-reaching reform in both the House and Senate versions is my proposal to provide 100-percent benefits for widows.
At present, they receive only 82 percent of the primary benefit of their deceased spouse.

One of the pressing reasons for making this upgrade is that it would ensure that six out of every 10 widows living alone have incomes below the poverty line. Especially disadvantaged are the Nation's very oldest women.

Another compelling argument for the measure was advanced by Dr. Joseph Pechman of the Brookings Institute:

An increase in the widow's benefits to a full 100 percent of P/A (the primary benefit amount that had been payable to the surviving spouse) would effectively aid the poor, per dollar of added cost, than any other change in the system, including a minimum benefit.

It is estimated that this change alone can provide an additional $260 in annual income for widows. Approximately 2.7 million widows and widowers will be benefited from this change.

AGE-62 COMPUTATION POINT FOR MEN

My proposal to provide an age-62 computation point for benefits for men—the same as now exists for women—has also been incorporated in both the House and Senate bills.

Under present law, 3 more years are used in computing benefits for a man than are used for a woman of the same age.

This difference in the treatment of men and women can result in significantly lower benefits being paid to a retired man than are paid to a retired woman with the same average earnings.

When the change in the committee bill is fully operational, the benefits for most men would be higher than under present law. And higher benefits would be paid to the dependents of retired men and to the survivors of men who die after age 62.

LIBERALIZED ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE

A number of improvements were also made in the Finance Committee bill to improve disability benefits.

For example, the Senate bill reduces the waiting period to qualify for disability benefits 6 to 4 months.

When the change in the committee bill is fully operational, the benefits for most men would be higher than under present law. And higher benefits would be paid to the dependents of retired men and to the survivors of men who die after age 62.

The bill before us today represents a significant step forward in many respects. But our task is still not complete.

Further refinements of this type should be considered. And it would be discussed in much greater detail in the Committee on Aging's final report on the economics of aging, which will be issued in the very near future.

A recent letter from Senator Nelson Cruikshank, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens, makes a very perceptive analysis of some of the major provisions in the 1970 social security bill.

His comments about the financing of the cost-of-living increases especially merit the serious attention of all Members of the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the Record for my colleagues to read.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF SENIOR CITIZENS, INC., WASHINGTON, D.C.

December 14, 1970.

Hon. Harrison A. Williams, Jr., U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Williams: This is in reference to H.R. 17560 (Social Security Amendments of 1970) which we understand is being reported favorably by the Senate Finance Committee and will probably be before the entire Senate this week.

As you know, this is a very complex bill containing many provisions and in some respects, especially in the basic Social Security program in Medicare, Medicaid, and Public Welfare. In one way or another practically all these proposals affect the well being of the older people of this country and we would have preferred that there were time for us to make an analysis of all the proposals and to present our views in detail. However, it appears that in the short time remaining to this Congress this will not be possible.

There are some aspects of this measure before you on which we would appreciate the opportunity of presenting our views.

CASH BENEFITS

The first of these is the matter of increasing the cash benefits under the Old-Age, Survivors and Disability Programs. The House-passed bill provides but a meager five percent across-the-board increase. The Finance Committee bill provides a 10 percent increase with $100 per month minimum benefit. While this represents a substantial improvement, it still falls short of meeting the economic needs of the elderly who, in the face of inflationary increases in living costs, are witnessing the erosion of their already meager incomes.

About 9 out of 10 older people now receive Social Security benefits and are largely dependent on them for meeting their maintenance needs. One out of every five senior citizens and one half of the non-married older persons have incomes of less than $400 a month per person. Average Social Security benefits are $117 a month for retired workers.

Inflation has hit older people the hardest because their incomes rise slowly—if at all—and because the greatest price increases have taken place in such necessities as home maintenance, food, clothing, shelter, and transportation. The most seriously affected are older widows or unmarried women dependent on their own meager incomes. The larger part of the older population. The average Social Security benefit for widows is $101 a month.

The bill before us today represents a significant step forward in many respects. But our task is still not complete.

Further refinements of this type should be considered. And it would be discussed in much greater detail in the Committee on Aging's final report on the economics of aging, which will be issued in the very near future.

A recent letter from Senator Nelson Cruikshank, president of the National Council of Senior Citizens, makes a very perceptive analysis of some of the major provisions in the 1970 social security bill.

His comments about the financing of the cost-of-living increases especially merit the serious attention of all Members of the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this letter be printed in the Record for my colleagues to read.
It is for such reasons that we appeal to you to give primary consideration to increases in cash benefits. Whatever disposition the Senate may make of the many other changes in H.R. 17550, this is one on which we feel confident you will want to take immediate action. And we urge you to take such action as will assure these families the revenue increases to provide not less than a 10 percent increase with the minimum benefit of $800 a month.

Cost of Living Increases

Secondly, we have some very definite views of the provisions for increases in benefits geared to increases in living costs which we would like you to consider.

We are, of course, opposed to increases whatever their basis. But we want to emphasize the position we have consistently taken, namely that cost-of-living percentage increases applied to the present low level of benefits as a base, will not alone meet the income needs of the elderly. To do this requires substantial improvements in present benefit amounts. Future needs could then be met in large measure by automatic increases based on cost-of-living figures.

Both provisions for automatic adjustment and for continuing responsibility of the Congress in this area appear to be provided in the escalator provision of the Senate Committee bill. Except that in this bill the provisions for the increases are not equitable, in our view, than those of the House-passed bill which would finance the increased benefits by increases in contributions and benefit bases, also geared to increases in cost-of-living.

Consequently, we would urge that the provisions for financing the cost-of-living increases contained in the House bill be retained along with the provision for "inter-viewing" by the Congress, as contained in the Finance Committee bill. We feel strongly that the burden of rising benefits geared to cost-of-living should not be borne by workers (and the families in the lower brackets) as would be the case under the financing provision of the Senate Committee bill.

Retirement Test

Finally, we support the proposed changes in the retirement test which are identical in both the House-passed bill and the Senate Committee bill. The liberalizations of the test both for the present and those for the future geared to cost-of-living appear as model adjustments required by changing conditions. We are opposed to any proposals for eliminating the test entirely, or for more far-reaching changes than those contained in the present bill.

The National Council of Senior Citizens, like the Senate Finance Committee, I am sure, has been called upon to request elimination of the retirement test on the allegations that the Social Security program should not "prevent people from working." In response to these requests we made a thorough study of the purpose and operation of the test and concluded that it would be most unfair to the great majority of retirees if this test were to be eliminated. After wide distribution of the results of this study and availability of our membership has supported our opposition to removal of the test.

The two provisions are (1) most elderly are not able to work, even if jobs in the present labor market were available, (2) the elderly would be of benefit to less than 10 percent of the elderly and this would include those who need help least of all: professional people, business executives and others who for the most part do not rely mainly on Social Security benefits for their livelihood and (3) the cost which would run about $275 billion the first year and more in later years, would undoubtedly prevent increases in benefits for those much more in need.

We appreciate your giving our views consideration as this vital measure comes before you for action. If we can be of any assistance in further clarifying our position, or in any other way, please feel free to call on us.

Sincerely and respectfully yours,

NELSON H. CRUKSHANK, President.

Mr. FANNIN. Mr. President, presentations by several members of the Finance Committee, from both parties, have illustrated the fallacy that the family assistance plan would create incentives for people to work rather than not to work. Supposedly workfare was the foundation of this program but it is now proposed that a President who wants a family assistance project to make it possible for information to be developed to prepare legislation for programs to accomplish this objective.

We need to determine what can be done to provide jobs for people under this 2 year period and not have a serious unemployment problem in this country and we must find a solution. Many of these people are on welfare and food stamps and are very much in need.

Mr. President, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare has estimated the current welfare caseload in the Nation at 12.6 million.

This is an increase of 2 million persons over the 1969 caseload.

Secretary Richardson has also been quoted as saying that in some States the hike in welfare caseloads is up as much as 30 percent over last year. This means that caseloads in some areas are more than doubled every 5 years.

President Nixon has set the current welfare budget at $8.7 billion—yet it is expected that the actual cost this fiscal year will毕竟是 $10 billion.

This welfare load already is a very substantial burden on the hard-working people of our Nation.

And yet, here we are discussing a program to double the number of persons who qualify to collect welfare payments.

This simply is not fair to those people in our society who work day in and day out to carry their own weight.

Mr. President, we are hearing the gamut of suggestions as to what income a person is entitled to as a birthright in this Nation. It ranges from $1,600 to more than $8,000. It is an indication of the apathy of some members that the guaranteed annual wage you may talk to.

What in the world has happened to our country?

Why are we so determined to travel down the same road that proved so disastrous to the British?

Our Nation became great and powerful by offering people opportunities—not by guaranteeing them handouts. Our people have prospered because of their sweat and toil and their willingness to sacrifice.

Perhaps it is a bit old fashioned, but I believe that some of the principles that made our country great still are valid. I do not see why we should pick the year 1970—or 1971—to do so. Let's adopt a realistic philosophy which is contrary to our heritage.

Those who have promoted the various guaranteed annual wage programs over the years have dwelt only on the plight of the poor. And I can appreciate this concern. I too am concerned about the plight of the poor. We certainly have not done enough for the aged and the ill who are dependent on us for more consideration. But let us talk for just a moment about the plight of the working man and woman and his family.

Throughout our history the bulk of Americans have been willing—and in most cases even thankful—to labor hard for their livelihood. They have been justly proud to carry their own weight and do an extra bit to help their Nation. Millions have started work in their teens. Mostly they have had precious little education. Many of them have lived to see their adult lives, 5 and 6 days a week doing against inflation—to give to the rich and give to the poor.

hard-working man to give to the non-workfare was the movement afoot. There is a faction that contends that people have a right to "freeload on their fellows, that no one has an obligation to help carry his share in the price of making society run. The guarantees of the guaranteed annual wage—or the family assistance that it is called in this case—make it sound as though welfare payments somehow materialize magically. They foster the old, worn myth that the State is something with endless resources that can provide for the needs and desires of everyone.

But we know better. Or at least I hope we do.

The Government has nothing to give to anybody that it does not first take from someone else.

If we double the welfare roles, then we multiply accordingly the amount of tax money that we must extract from the hard-working man to give to the non-productive members of our society.

This is not a scheme to take from the rich and give to the poor. It is a scheme to take from the middle- and low-income worker—already struggling against inflation—to give to the poor who are deserving of help or not. Again, I am not being critical of persons who have a legitimate claim to welfare, such as the aged or the ill who cannot work.

President, I am pleading for the man who is determined to work, who however he can to pay his own way in the best of American tradition. This is the man who would be the victim of the misguided legislation we are about to pass.

There is a lot of talk about the right of every man to live with dignity.

Too many of those people willing to live off the labor of others do not know the meaning of the word "dignity."

We have an unfortunate situation in our Nation at the current time where many well-educated or well-trained men and women, eager to work, cannot find employment in their chosen field.

These people are having a hard time maintaining their dignity. But many of them do not want to work. It is dignity when an engineer takes a job as a cab driver because he is determined to support his own family rather than go on the public dole.

It is dignity when a cab driver who has been out of work seeks any kind of manual labor to support his family. Recently there was a newspaper article which indicated that a job lacked proper dignity because it paid a worker only $3 per hour.

To me, a man who fails to work at a job paying $300 a month in wages so that he can collect $300 a month in welfare has no dignity. Mr. President, what we need is to reform our welfare system—not expand it.

The proposal we have before us just adds another layer to the same old mess. We need a program to encourage people to get off welfare. We must have something to break the pattern of generation after generation of welfare families. We must halt the proliferation of welfare providers that encourage people to keep their hands out.

The Government is only the intermediary in this—the handout really comes from the man who has done his day’s work, from the workingman, and from the workingman’s family.

What we need is a workfare program. We need meaningful reforms that will adequately provide for those unfortunate people who cannot possibly support themselves. We need to kick the perennial freeloaders, those who can work but will not, off the welfare rolls. And we need to offer incentives to put the properly motivated members of our society back to work.

There are those in our Nation who would sit back gladly and accept a free ride. They would feel not the slightest embarrassment or remorse. They believe these people are suckers. These people are immoral.

And there are other disadvantaged people we are trying to inspire to work who would be irrevocably damaged by any guaranteed annual wage scheme. These people are willing to subsist, and to have their children subsist. They would be content with $1,000 a year; they would be prosperous with $3,000 per year; they would be overwhelmed with $4,000 per year.

These people are not immoral. Their moral— their lifestyle— to use the modern cliché— has never looked upon labor as a virtue and they feel no scruples about living forever on whatever is given to them. A good way to describe them is the easy life of their life. This program would be ruinous to them.

Mr. President, we have already seen the phenomenon of welfare recipients organizing to demand more and more from the Government. We have seen them “occupy” the office of a secretary of welfare.

Mr. President, we have before us a plan to double the number of persons who would have credentials to join such pressure organizations and join in such disruptive tactics.

We would have roughly one out of nine persons in this country on welfare. This quarter of a million persons would be a tremendous political and administrative problem to be handled. All of those playing to this group would have to offer more and more benefits. He would have to promise to take more and more from the assembly line workers, butchers, mechanics, office workers, and other productive members of society to give to those who not only can not work but those who simply do not want to work. Mr. President, if this were a good program— if it were a welfare program, but if it were a good program—now would be the wrong time to try to launch it.

Our Federal Government already is faced with a deficit of $10 to $15 billion—and perhaps even more—during the current fiscal year.

What we need at this time are programs to put people in jobs, not on welfare rolls. We have an unacceptably high rate of unemployment. Welfare is not the answer to the unemployment problem.

Those who have been trying to sell us the family assistance plan talk vaguely about getting welfare recipients eventually into jobs. Yet their program makes no provision for new jobs. No one is saying where these jobs are going to come from.

What escapes me, Mr. President, is the logic of some of the people who are 100 percent for welfare and yet dead set against other legislation to protect American jobs. It is inconceivable that we can survive as a nation of welfare recipients after we have exported virtually all of our manufacturing jobs.

I think that the welfare reform issue is very closely tied in with the trade bill. Mr. President, and that is why I felt compelled to mention it is at this point.

I certainly am not opposed to welfare reform.

In the Finance Committee, I voted for a pilot program to test out some of the reform theories. We would have a chance to see what kind of incentives are effective in getting people off welfare and into productive work.

This is the only sensible way to approach the issue. Voting for a multibillion dollar new welfare program without a pilot project is like voting for production of a multibillion dollar new airplane—we might take the model airplane as an example—without providing for testing of prototypes.

I want to see if the family assistance plan will fly.

And more important, I want to see if it is going to fatally pollute the atmosphere of our Nation.

The proposal before us is fraught with assumptions of doubtful value.

The proposal before us is fraught with dangers. It is built on estimates and assumptions of doubtful value.

A trial run could either prove that the proposals are sound—or demonstrate that disaster would strike a full-blown program if we were attempted.

I firmly believe that the family assistance plan as now offered would be a disaster for the Nation.

This is not something I say lightly. I have supported 99 percent of President Nixon’s programs, but I most definitely oppose the program before us and everything offered so far by the administration.

President Nixon had a good idea—a work incentive program to cure the ills of the welfare system. Unfortunately he went astray in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The program presented to us is not only a continuation of the same old misguided welfare concept, but an expansion of the flask.

We have a program here which is aimed strictly at increasing the welfare rolls. It offers no real incentives to put people to work. It offers no machinery for encouraging or preserving jobs, or of getting welfare people into productive positions.

If this program is approved, I say again, it will be a disaster for our country.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, we are debating the most important domestic legislation of this Congress. I regret that we are doing so under the pressures of adjournment and under a tangled parliamentary situation. Mr. Nixon’s Family Assistance plan is so important that it deserves our most earnest and direct consideration.

The President has called this legislation the key focal point to Executive branch action in the continuing process of domestic reforms. I was proud to cosponsor the original version of the plan last year and am pleased to join in sponsoring the current proposal. It is the result of the efforts of an alert group of enactable individuals, including the Vice President, who was among the first to advocate a Federal floor under welfare payments as a means of relieving the fiscal burdens on the States.

This legislation, if adopted, will have a constructive impact on millions of Americans, both those who, as taxpayers, are now forced to support the obsolescent welfare system, and those who, as recipients, are subject to its inequalities and whims.

Especially important is the import of the Nixon proposal for the coming generation of Americans. We have an opportunity here and now to take a long step toward freeing America’s children from the tragic welfare cycle of dependence and poverty, and enabling them to grow up in a united family, in an atmosphere of dignity and self-reliance.

In an eloquent address to the White House Conference on Children on December 13, the President spoke of the meaning of the Family Assistance plan for the next generation. I ask unanimous consent to include the text of the President’s remarks in the Record at the conclusion of my statement.

Mr. President, the Family Assistance Plan is based on the premise that all Americans need money to live and incentive to work. Beyond that, it establishes national uniform eligibility standards, and narrows the present variations in benefits. It combines strong work incentives with substantial income maintenance. It will lift a great and growing financial burden from State and local governments, enabling them to turn their limited resources to other pressing public problems.
This legislation is not perfect; no bill of this scope could fully satisfy everyone. But it is a bold step forward and deserves Senate approval this year.

There being no objection, the text of the President's remarks was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. Secretary, Mr. Mayor, Mr. Chairman, and ladies and gentlemen, all of the delegations of this Conference:

Before I begin my prepared text, I would like to express my deep appreciation to all of you who have come to this Conference, and to the kind personal entrance that was arranged on this occasion.

One of the great privileges for the President of the United States, of course, is to hear Hall to the Chief. I have heard it many times since I became President almost two years ago. I have never heard it played better than by the East Atlanta School from over here, an elementary school.

Speaking as one who played a very poor second violin in a high school orchestra, I appreciate all of the work and the talent that is represented therein by the leader who was able to develop those talents.

I am proud and grateful to share with six of my predecessors, starting with Theodore Roosevelt and most recently, Dwight Eisenhower, in having the honor of convening a White House Conference on Children. I take very special pleasure in welcoming all of you here.

Our concern at this Conference is with the welfare of all children. We look for the children who happen to be children under the age of 14, and who represent one-fourth of all the beings who are living in America.

When I refer to them as 55 million individual human beings, I mean to put the emphasis on that—in the fact that nothing is so important as to ignore the private world of the child; nothing so removed from the statistical abstractions of a chart or a computer.

In talking about our children, we are talking about our world and about its future, but the most special, the most human, the most individual sense of anything we do or consider.

The refreshing little flower emblem that has been adopted as the symbol of this Conference is a reminder to us of one very simple and very basic truth: that the world of the child is a very different one, very special, and full of promise and very much alive.

It also reminds us that whether we speak of a community of 200 people or of 200 million, the important thing to remember is that no two are alike.

I am sure of some you have heard the little television commercial, a musical one, that has the little ditty that goes "No one else in the whole human race is exactly like you."

Because of this, what is right for one child may be all wrong for another.

Here in Washington, in government, we have a tendency to worry about things like the mass, about cities of more than a million or less than a million, of people over 85 or those under 21, about whole school systems or less than a million, of people over 85 or those under 21, about whole school systems or cities of more than a million or less than a million.

By 1975, I am sure that each one of you is here taking part in this great Conference because you do care not only about children in the mass, but about children. I hope you will help us in government to keep the focus on that one child.

One of the special glories of America is that we are a nation of individuals and individualists. We produce people, not automations. We recognize diversity not as an evil but as a virtue. We learn not to one institution alone, but to many to perform the great task of achieving a better life for all of us.

We recognize, of course, the role of government. In the home, the school, the volunteer agencies that are so distinctive a feature of American life. And we know that the least of which is individual cooks, and additional cooks, do enrich the broth.

There is, of course, a large and vital role government must play in insuring the best possible opportunities for the child.

Tonight I would like to speak briefly to you about a program, a Federal Government program, presently being considered by the United States Senate, which I believe particularly deserves your support.

The great issue concerning family and child welfare in the United States is the issue of family income.

For generations, social thinkers have argued that there is such a thing as a minimum necessary family income, and that no family should be required to subsist on less. It is a simple idea, but very profound in its consequences.

On August 11, 1969, over a year ago, I proposed that for the first time in America's history we in this great, rich country establish a floor under the income of every American family with children. It has, in turn, been called by others the most important piece of domestic legislation to be introduced in Congress in two generations.

In terms of its consequences for children, I think it can be fairly said to be the most important piece of social legislation in the history of this Nation. I am sure you know the story of the legislation. In April, it passed the House of Representatives by almost 2-to-1. Then it went to the Senate. It is still stuck there, but it is not lost. There is still an opportunity for the 91st Congress to change the world of American children by enacting this bill.

In these closing days of that Congress, I want to emphasize once again unequivocally my personal support for the welfare reform this year, and to urge your support for welfare reform this year.

In the last 10 years alone—listen to this—the number of children in America who have been deprived of the barest minimum has tripled to more than six million. Think of it—six million children—six million children in an unfair and tragic system that rewards people for not working instead of providing incentives for self-support and independence; that drives families apart, instead of bringing them together; that brings welfare snoopers into their homes, that robs them of pride and destroys dignity. I believe we should change that.

The welfare system has become a consuming and tragic system that wages war against the community, against the family, against the individual, and most of all against the very children who are our concern, our concern, our concern.

But how far removed this can get us from the story of the legislation. In April, it passed the House of Representatives by almost 2-to-1. Then it went to the Senate. It is still stuck there, but it is not lost. There is still an opportunity for the 91st Congress to change the world of American children by enacting this bill.

SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS
OF 1970

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Boces). The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, the Chair now lays before the Senate the unfinished business which the clerk will state.
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
Mr. PRESIDENT. Mr. President, I move that H.R. 17550, the Social Security Amendments of 1970, be recommitted to the Committee on Finance with instructions as set forth by me. Mr. President, I move that H.R. 17550, the Social Security Amendments of 1970, be recommitted to the Committee on Finance with instructions as set forth by me. The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senate continues in its present course, as I believe it will, the Senate will be able to take up the measures in Title V which the Secretary has enumerated and also the pending floor amendments, which are the Ribicoff-Bennett and the Scott amendments, and the amendment that was offered by the Senator from Georgia and which deals with trade amendments, and require the Finance Committee to report back sections 1 and 2 as the committee originally reported them to the Senate but with the modifications and the amendment 5. Am I correct in that understanding? Mr. LONG. That is correct. Personally very much dislike to move to strike some parts of the bill after having given the States a part of the bill. Likewise, in committee I voted to add the amendment known as the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment. This also provides to strike the catastrophic health insurance part, which is my own handiwork, and which I hope I may be permitted to say with some pride of authorship is perhaps the best thing in the bill. It was agreed on in the conference report. But, Mr. President, these are matters which in all probability the House would not accept in conference even if they did pass the Senate. I have been led to believe that it might be the case if we went to conference.

I would not want the responsibility of the Congress adjourning without having achieved that which can be achieved so far as social security benefits are concerned. The minimum would be 5 percent across-the-board increase provided by the House bill although the cost of living has already gone up more than 5 percent this year. So I would think, in conference between the Senate and the House, that the House would agree to as much of a social security increase that represents an increase in the cost of living, and perhaps might agree to go somewhat further than that. I am confident the Senate would send back to the conference what it voted for. I don't think it would vote the $100 minimum for social security and the necessary financing to pay for it. That would be in conference and I am confident the House would be willing to consider it, along with the Senate and House cost-of-living proposal, and the reforms in Medicaid and Medicare.

If my motion is not agreed to it would mean 28 million beneficiaries under social security would have been denied justice by the Senate and the House. It also means the States would be required to give a sense of certainty to every State and to the people of the United States. Mr. President, I make this motion after extensive consideration. I have been before the Senate for 8 months, and that was not a lark. I have been before the Senate for more than a week. I have been before the Senate for 8 months, and that was not a lark. I have been before the Senate for more than a week. I have been before the Senate for more than a week. I have been before the Senate for more than a week.

The Ribicoff-Bennett amendment has been the pending business before the Senate for more than a week. This proposal has been endorsed by six former Secretaries of H.E.W. As well as many public and private groups. It has the support of the Democratic and Republican Governors across the Nation who have to live with the problem of welfare on a day-to-day and a year-to-year basis.

The proposal provides a new framework to replace the present disastrous welfare system. It provides a means for dealing with the child, the sick, the blind and disabled. It is coupled with strong work requirements. It provides for fiscal assistance to the States.

One of the proposals in the amendment— which was a late starter. It is the one that is a proposal that I thought was important, and the administration has agreed with me, that the time has come to give a sense of certainty to every State in the Nation.

Every State in the Nation is on the verge of bankruptcy. Their budgets show red ink year in and year out. There is not a Governor who knows from year to year what his budget requirements will be.

We have finally assured, in this proposal, each and every State that the amounts the States would be required to pay for welfare would never exceed 90 percent of their expenditures in 1971, adjusted for the cost-of-living increases.

The Social Security Amendments of 1970, as we debated, has been in the public press and in the public eye.

The Senate Finance Committee held days upon days of hearings. We spent days upon days in executive session. I cannot understand how we in the Senate... can go home by noon of January 3d without giving the Senate an opportunity to vote yes or no on family assistance. The least we could do, it would seem to me, would be to vote upon the matter and pass or fail it, and then be consistent enough to try how the Senate is divided on family assistance. Are we for or against it? I appreciate the objective—and it is a most worthy one—of the chairman, to at least try to put some social security by January 1. But in any event, the beneficiaries under social security will not receive their payments on January 1. They will not start receiving their payments until the end of January. Representative Miller, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and the ranking minority member, Representative Byrnes, have said publicly that any social security bill passed after January 3, 1971, would be retroactive to January 1, 1971.

The President of the United States has also made the statement and the community groups of people people under the social security bill that if Congress passes a social security bill in 1971, he will advocate that it be retroactive to January 1, 1971. Consequently, not one single penny of the $1,600 per family beneficiaries will lose a penny by our delaying the passage of the social security proposals until early in February or March instead of at the present time. This makes it too important to be sloughed aside.

I disagree with the President of the United States on many of his proposals. I disagree with the President of the United States on many of his vetoes. But I am completely in accord with him on his concept that the time has come to reform welfare. The President of the United States has come up with one of the most imaginative programs in the entire social field. It is a matter that we must address ourselves to during the next decade. It would be tragic if we were to vote up or down the family assistance program.

I for one would hope that the motion to recommit would fail.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I am going to support the motion. I do so with mixed emotions.

I must say to my friend, the Senator from Connecticut, that I do not believe he has properly stated the case because the case is not merely one of voting up or down the family assistance plan.

The case is a matter of voting up or down an amendment that is far more than just a single $1,600 family assistance proposition. It is a tremendously long package of legislative language which has been massaged and remassaged for weeks before the Senate Finance Committee. It does not even contain all of the provisions which many of us in the Finance Committee wanted to see in the measure. It is almost in the same degree in the same manner as the Governors' conference when we had five Governors representing the Governors' conference before the committee. The committee of those Governors was that they did not want the $1,600 family assistance proposition. It is a tremendously long package of legislative language which has been massaged and remassaged for weeks before the Senate Finance Committee. It does not even contain all of the provisions which many of us in the Finance Committee wanted to see in the measure. It is almost in the same degree in the same manner as the Governors' conference before the committee. The committee of those Governors was that they did not want the $1,600 family assistance proposal. Unfortunately, we do not have the bill with modifications—at least, not the modifications some of them were talking about.

We just have a long, well-intentioned amendment which is now locked in so that amendments cannot be offered to it. The Senate Finance Committee, Federal Officers from Connecticut the other day about opening this up to amendment, I was told that we did not dare do so because there would be many amendments and we would never get the amendments taken care of.

I do not know why we did not try it that way first instead of using a parliamentary tactic which now puts this matter before the Senate in such a position that those who would like to see something done about the miserable welfare situation cannot in good conscience vote for the measure because it is overloaded.

The Senator from Delaware, the Senator from Nebraska, and I have pointed out some of the serious defects that exist in the measure as it is now pending before the Senate.

I might say furthermore that I do not think it would be fair to spend a spade to talk about no one being able to live on $1,600 a year. That is not the proposition before the Senate at all. What we are considering is a total welfare package which amounts to perhaps up to $3,500 to $4,000 a year.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, may we have order?

THE PRESIDENT. The Senator will suspend for a moment. The Senator from Massachusetts is correct. The Chamber is not in order.

The Senator may proceed.

Mr. MILLER. What we are talking about is a total welfare package of which $1,600 is merely a part. If one wishes to be realistic about it, we are talking about a package consisting of $1,600 for a family of four, plus food stamps, plus State supplements, public nursing, and in many cases, plus public housing, with a total welfare package amounting to perhaps $3,500 to $4,000 a year for a family of four. So let us not talk about nobody being able to live on $1,600 a year, because nobody is being asked to live on $1,600 a year.

I deeply regret that a parliamentary maneuver was entered into by the proponents of the pending amendment which has placed it before the Senate without the Senate having an opportunity to offer a single amendment to it, to modify it so that some of those serious deficiencies which have been pointed out, and which Senators can read about in the Record, could be removed from the pending amendment.

I think the record will bear out that I was one of the members of the Committee on Finance who worked day in and day out to try to give this measure a chance, to try to perfect it, and to put in modifications of the kind the Governors' conference wanted. Unfortunately we were not permitted to seek to add the measure as an amendment to the pending bill.

I might say further that at the time the vote was taken the Committee had the understanding was that, if it were added to the pending bill, the committee during the next several days would have an opportunity to go over it paragraph by paragraph and to work some modifications into it. We never had that chance.

So when this amendment was being talked about as prospective legislation in the House, the President had said that before the full Senate a good many of us hoped it would be offered in a manner which would enable us to offer modifications to it by way of amendment. But those who promoted this amendment fixed it in their own best reasons, not to put it before the Senate that way and to use a parliamentary device, legitimate though it may be, under which the Senate cannot do a thing about it except vote up or down, then we will hope we can do something about the welfare package next year.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am sure the Senator heard the statement made by the able Senator from Connecticut, vote it up or down. Those who promoted this bill, we were on the losing side when we sought to add the measure as an amendment to the pending bill. The amendment which is now locked in so we never had that chance. We will never get the amendments taken care of.

It is well to point out that if this bill should pass, it will be retroactive, because beneficiaries would get their increased welfare without having the amendments taken care of.

If the Senate does not pass this bill and the House sends us a new bill next year, there is no reason why Senators who are trying to do something about votes for their constituents to try to add trade amendment on that bill, or why that bill might not become involved in a controversial family assistance plan, again modified, and by the time that battle is finished in the House and Senate it might be August before those people get checks, retroactive though they may be. They would be another 5 or 6 months waiting for something to which they are rightfully entitled.

Furthermore, some of those people will die between January and August, with the result that those people never would get the increase to which they are entitled.

So I would say to the Senator that when one looks at the facts of life that exist today, what is practical and can be done, if the Senate insists on continuing to tie up this bill with trade legislation and a family assistance plan, a social security bill will not become law this year. If Senators are determined to have their way about family assistance and trade legislation, there is no reason... to think the same determination will not prevail in the next Congress, with the result that the amendment could be equally as damadant, so the bill might not become law next year.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, the Senator made a very valid point. He might have added, however, that the things he has been discussing, that the Committee on Finance, after many long days, made some real and constructive improvements in the medi-care and medicaid provisions and old-age assistance provisions; and if these are scuttled they will not take effect for some time. These are the kinds of changes that should take effect "yesterday." That will be delayed out.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield.

Mr. LONG. Is it not true that the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment, pending at the desk, does not go into effect as far as any beneficiary is concerned, until January 1972, anyway; and as far as the 14 million people it would add to the welfare rolls and the 6 million it would add to the medicare rolls—

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I might add just a footnote to what the Senator from Connecticut has so eloquently said, and that is that if we are going to make a change in the rules, one of them should be in a rule which prohibits a major amendment to a major piece of legislation. The chairman is correct that there is more of an immediacy problem in social security, medicare, and medicaid than in a welfare reform plan. But in fairness I should respond by pointing out that the Senator should take effect "yesterday." That is symptomatic of the so-called rule XXII controversy, which will break out again in January, and, second, the key place of the administration in everything that is happening here.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I asked the Senator to yield so I could reply to our distinguished chairman instead of a single amendment filed to it. A trade bill legitimately should come to the Senate instead of a rule which prohibits a major change in a major piece of legislation. The chairman is correct that there is more of an immediacy problem in medicare and medicare than in a welfare reform plan. But in fairness I should respond by pointing out that the Senator from Connecticut has so eloquently said, and that is that if we are going to make a change in the rules, one of them should be in a rule which prohibits a major amendment to a major piece of legislation. Mr. RIBICOFF. I have the floor. I might add just a footnote to what the Senator from Connecticut has so eloquently said, and that is that if we are going to make a change in the rules, one of them should be in a rule which prohibits a major amendment to a major piece of legislation. If a trade bill was being pushed against us for solution and every institution in the world is under attack and every institution is being pushed for change, whether such institutions live or die, I think we should use this rule as a weapon in our hands. Mr. MILLER. I promised to yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. Aiken. Mr. President, I would like to see most of the Senate version of the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment if I had the chance and felt that by approving those provisions we were not killing the whole bill.

planning would have been regarded as a breathtaking accomplishment. It is highly significant that population control has now ceased to be politically controversial. Congress in its wisdom has also completed action on bills to insure the broker- age accounts of small investors, extend aid to the interrupt public service, and to prove the comprehensive assistance provi- sions of the Crime Control Act of 1968, and amend the food stamp plan.

Only time will tell if I was mistaken. Representative Paige, Texas Democrat, and his conservative colleagues on the House Committee have made some substantial concessions on their strident bill, although it remains inferior to the com- promise, constructive bill put through the Senate by Senator Exner years before the Great Depression began, the most dural illness in Congress is that poverty is due to an individual's moral failings. No amount of government coercion or food stamp blackmail can make men work who either cannot or will not work.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, other things can happen, as the Senator from Vermont pointed out, if we give them a chance. So, in spite of my deep feeling for FAP, I, too, am beginning to have the feeling that I shall vote for the motion in order to do something instead of accepting the certainty that we can do nothing. But, in order to do it and make it successful and make it whole to the American people, I think the administration must play a part, and I hope very much it will.

I thank my colleagues very much.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? is really saying this: That with the short time remaining for the Senate between now and the last day of this Congress, it would be, to use his language, against the best interest of the country to be arbitrate.

Mr. JAVITS. That is correct.

Mr. MILLER. And he indicated that after we had time, which we will have early next year, to debate this matter at length and analyze it forwards and backwards, then, but not until then, we would be able to say we had not acted arbitrarily.

Mr. JAVITS. That is exactly right. And if people, to add just one more suggestion. Brimmer of the Federal Reserve gives us figures as to what it will cost the consumers of this country to put quotas on foods and textiles. No one here has been able to tell those figures either up, or sideways, except in the most cursory and on-the-surface manner, because we simply have not had the time and opportunity to do it in depth.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. MILLER. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I thank the Senator, and I will yield him as well as the Senator from New York, because I, too, agree that what we have to consider now, with the very short time remaining, is how to get worthwhile things done: and that a more day labor to be permitted to bring down to a close with reference to matters vital to the Nation's defense.

But, Mr. President, to come back to the motion of the Junior Senator from Florida, I feel it would warrant your attention even though I cannot go into the details of our closed session of some 2 or 3 weeks ago, that the Senator from Florida then made that same suggestion as has now been made by the Senator from Louisiana. Of course, I agree with him, and, of course, I shall vote with him. I think that the thing we should do is recommit this legislation and particularly so. I think that the thing we should do is recommit this overburdened legislation—back to the committee, with adequate instructions to report it, so that an immediate conference can be held with the House of Representatives, and particularly so, that the much-needed increases to the recipients of social security can speedily and safely be put into effect.

I am told there are something like 26 million recipients of social security. Some Senators spoke of the need of doing something for all the States. I cannot think of a conference which would help the people in every State—there are needs and there are needs of them, even in our smaller States—to a greater degree than to help them out somewhat through the improvement of the social security payments.

So I commend the Senator from Louisiana, and I shall support his motion.

Mr. President, while not saying anything adverse about the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut, I call attention to the fact that it is 139 pages long, and I call attention also to the fact that the distinguished senior Senator from Delaware has pointed out obvious defects in the amendment reached upon the parliamentary situation.

I was an original sponsor of the trade amendment in the form of a separate bill, offered by the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings) and others. I am particularly interested in that amendment. But I think that, putting first things first, the motion of the Senator from Louisiana for recommittal with instructions should be agreed to, and I think that the record ought to be perfectly clear now as to who it is, anyone, that will hold up payments to the recipients of social security in the increased amounts that the social security portion of this bill provides.

It will not be the Senator from Louisiana. It will not be those who support his motion. It will not be those who want to support his motion if no vote is permitted because of lengthy discussion. It will be those who, by one means or another, oppose the motion of the Senator from Louisiana. The Senator from Florida stands ready to support it and then I shall support it and, when it comes back, so that it can go to an immediate conference, and he hopes that the Senate will do just that. It is the only way we are going to get something done, and I want to stress the importance of reaching—26 million American citizens, many of whom are living under circumstances in which they need more money simply to live, simply to exist.

The Senator from Florida commends his distinguished friend, the Senator from Louisiana, on his motion, and hopes that Senators will permit it to be voted upon shortly, and that we shall then move ahead along the course suggested by the Senator from Louisiana.

I thank the distinguished Senator for yielding. I simply wanted to support him in his petition to support that part of the statement made by the Senator from New York in which he made clear that if we are to get anything done, that is the only way we are going to get it done.

I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. MILLER. I appreciate the comments of the distinguished Senator from Florida. As usual, he has cut to the heart of the problem and has done his level best to get on with the business of the Senate. Had it not been for him, I am afraid we would not have gotten to the business of the Senate on a great many previous occasions.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have...

S 21223

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield.

Mr. LONG. This motion does not strike what the committee proposed to do with regard to residency requirements.

The committee dealt with regard to the residency requirement would say that the State from which the welfare recipient is receiving welfare benefits would continue to pay him for 1 year after he leaves that State, during which time he would acquire residency to have benefits paid by the subsequent State.

The Senator will note that the number of people receiving AFDC assistance increased sharply after the Supreme Court decision on residency and the man-in-the-house rule. I suspect that the Senator will find that a great many of those people are on the welfare rolls twice—once in one State and once in another.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as I understand, the Senate has not done this. He is putting up to a vote, eventually, the most retrogressive, the most reactionary, the most punitive type of welfare legislation in the entire history of the country, and is a threat to the U.S. Senate; because I think most of us, including myself—and I thank the Senator for bringing it to our attention—were under the impression that what was being done was merely putting all but the social security provisions, and the argument was that we were going to make sure that 28 million Americans were going to get the social security provisions. But, apparently, the Senator has not done this. He is putting up to a vote, eventually, the most retrogressive, the most reactionary, the most punitive type of welfare legislation in the entire history of the country, and is a threat to the U.S. Senate; because I think that what was being done was merely giving us an opportunity to vote on social security, which apparently is not the case.

Mr. KENNEDY. Furthermore, would the Senator from Connecticut enlighten me on this: Are not these the provisions about which the Supreme Court has expressed an opinion in terms of their constitutionality or their basis in law?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the General Accounting Office took a sample of 600 cases in New York and some 14 percent of these were totally unqualified. Even New York itself agreed that 11 percent were not qualified, and that they should be looked into. That is what the question from the very poorest people, is meant by the welfare mess. There are millions on the welfare rolls who do not belong there and the only way to correct it is to put only those on who belong there.

I hope that we can do all the things the bill seeks to accomplish; that is, to help the 28 million people who need social security, and to help the migrant workers, and to provide for children and day care centers, and to help the old people of this country. All these things should be done.

I am satisfied that positions on the trade amendment are such that we will not reach a vote on the trade bill, nor on the family assistance program. Therefore, we should try to see that as much as we can be done is done to provide these benefits for the people.

The Senator does not strip it from titles 1 and 2. I would hope that we would not want to take out all the good that is in the other titles of the bill, all that we provide for little children, such as the increased matching for day care purposes from 80 to 90 percent.

I would hope that we would not strike out what the bill provides for the aged, such as the minimum of a $130 income for the aged on public welfare, if they have no other resources. I hope the Senator is not against that, or what we provide for with regard to migrant workers, the bill requires States to have a program with 75 percent Federal matching for the expenses of caring for migrant families with children. I hope he is not against that. I am sure that he would be for it.

There are many other things which are good in this bill and they should be voted on. There are some things we should do to tighten up on the welfare mess. For that is what it is, a welfare mess. A majority of people who talk about welfare call it that. Among other things the mess means that we have millions of people on welfare who do not belong there.

A woman in Louisiana was recently arrested. She was on the welfare rolls four times and was applying a fifth time when her 11-year-old daughter was arrested in Alameda County in California, who was a member of what is called "Cheaters, Incorporated," I believe, and she had gotten on the welfare rolls 10 times in Alameda just to save her daughter. She could not be eligible at all. All these kinds of things should be corrected somehow. Some effort was made by this committee to try to do something about these things.

The Senator says the residency requirement is vicious, well, whatever the Senator wants to do is all right with me. What we said on the committee was that it was all right to be on the rolls just one time, and in one State, but if they leave from one State and go to another, then the State from whence they came should pay for another year until they had achieved a residency requirement in the other State.

The General Accounting Office took a sample of 600 cases in New York and some 14 percent of these were totally unqualified. Even New York itself agreed that 11 percent were not qualified, and that they should be looked into. That is what the question from the very poorest people, is meant by the welfare mess. There are millions on the welfare rolls who do not belong there and the only way to correct it is to put only those on who belong there.
that the mother tell us who is the father of her child.

Mr. TALMAGE. If the Senator will let me interject there, there is another court decision where the welfare investigator cannot even go into the home to interrogate the child.

Mr. LONG. That is correct. Imagine that. Here is the court telling us that Uncle Sam has to support the child, yet the mother can refuse even to tell us who she thinks the father of the child might be.

I believe that, as a part of correcting this welfare mess, we should tighten up on the loose ends and perhaps loosen up on the tight ends. We can do a lot better by putting people on the rolls who belong there and taking those people off who do not belong there.

In any event, if there is anything the Senate does not like about this bill, they can vote on it, and that will be that.

Mr. SCOTT. If the Senator would yield me a moment, because I have not taken my share of this debate yet, and some Senators have been overburdened with the responsibility, I would like to say in response to my friend, the assistant majority leader, that I would not worry about the blame for the delays. There is plenty of blame to go around for everyone. Everyone can dip in and have some, because the reason we have taken so long and the reason we have not been able to get started because of fears and the many concerns among various Senators, some so-called free trade Senators who are determined not to let this matter get to a vote for fear some trade legislation will get in.

Other Senators have an interest in textiles, but not in shoes, or in shoes but not in textiles. Some do not care whether they wear anything or walk in anything whatsoever.

There are some that do not want the family assistance program. There are others who do.

Some Senators want social security in its pristine and virginal form as it left the committee—if that was a virginal form, which I must doubt. Other Senators wish to make certain amendments. The Senator from Massachusetts and I, I believe, will vote the same way on this amendment. We will vote against recommital to strip the family assistance program from the bill. I would like to see it there.

We are confronted with a condition and not a theory. The condition is that we are not getting anywhere. The theory is that it will work, but we have 100 different opinions on the matter.

We are worse off than the character described by the late Stephen Leacock who got on his horse and galloped off in seven different directions.

I think it is not necessary to say that one Senator is holding up the bill. In my judgment, everyone is holding everyone else up.

The Senate, instead of increasing the level of its edifice in the public regard, is engaged in holding up each other and mysteriously—perhaps not so mysteriously—lowering its edifice in the public mind.

The Senate is in a mess. It is about to vote on a motion to recommit which probably will pass. When it does, we will go on to the matter of social security and decide whether we will accept that measure or not.

Mr. President, I hope that, should this come down to a point where we can discuss only social security and its amendments, we will adopt and accept it and send to the other body—if we can find a memorable bill. I think that we shall have to hurry because the stories are that the other body is in a mood to be rather peripatetic by tomorrow night. While they cannot adjourn without us, they can leave without us. We are having trouble getting a quorum, or will have. Therefore, I would hope that the motion to recommit would not pass. My own judgment tells me that it probably does not let us at least get as much business done as we can. But, more important than anything else, let us have, before we drop this bill, an assurance from the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Senate, the Majority and Minority Committee of the other body that they will bring it up promptly in the beginning of the next session and act promptly on it and not put it away.

I would then hope that the majority leader and I could deliver certain assurances to this body which I have not had a chance yet to discuss. I think that I will be able to make some statement about the matter. Mr. President, last year, on the floor of this Senate, I had the privilege of introducing the Family Assistance Act of 1969 (S. 2986). At the time, I noted that "This bill constitutes one of the most important measures which the Nixon administration will undertake," and that it was vitally essential to the successful implementation of the President’s plan. The President’s plan has been designed to "reduce the millions of Americans on the verge of poverty and into productivity."

Nothing that has happened during the intervening 14 months—none of the tests—none of the hearings or the seemingly endless spate of words that have been written about this legislation—has caused me to alter my position. On the contrary, I am more convinced than ever that a complete overhaul of our welfare system is long overdue.

The family assistance plan is the vehicle through which this can be accomplished. It represents an idea whose time has come.

Our present welfare system is collapsing of its own weight. Only within the last decade, the cost of the program of aid to families with dependent children—AFDC—has tripled while the number of recipients has doubled. And yet, in spite of our largess, there is no end in sight.

In my own State of Pennsylvania, in the 1-year period from April 1969 to April 1970, there was a 23.7 percent increase in the number of AFDC recipients and a 51.9 percent increase in the amount of payments. Where will it all end?

Worse, still, inequities built into the system continue unabated. How can we justify a program in which the State of residence is a more important criterion than the state of need in determining the level of benefits?

We have before us a program impossible to administer equitably, which imposes an increasingly heavy financial burden upon the taxpayer, and which does not do the job it was designed to do in the first place.

We have long since passed the time when anyone would suggest that a solution to the welfare problem lies in making assistance difficult to get and unproductive to take. But it is clear that unless we act unconditionally, at least, this is exactly what we are doing. Unlike the quality of mercy that blesses both the one who gives and the one who receives, public welfare averaged 2.3 million workers.

The present welfare system, designed as a temporary expedient, emerged from the depression of the thirties to cope with the problems of the thirties. It is an amalgamation of legislation that should long since have been laid to rest.

It was established as an optional State program to provide assistance to specific categories of the financially indigent—the blind, the disabled, the aged, and dependent children and their guardians. Initially, able-bodied male workers were not eligible for assistance.

Despite the fact that large-scale unemployment, such as was witnessed in the thirties, is not an issue today, the poor are still with us. Moreover, notwithstanding our substantial economic growth, we now accept the fact that there will always be poverty and unemployment even in the midst of plenty. Even in 1968, a good year in terms of employment opportunities, monthly unemployment averaged 2.8 million workers.

The program of aid to families with dependent children, to which I previously referred, was designed primarily for families in which the breadwinners are unemployed with dependent children and their guardians. Initially, able-bodied male workers were not eligible for assistance.

result is that systems differ from State to State in such essential features as coverage, benefits, and administrative practices.

With all of these negative features, it is a wonder that the program has survived this long. But there have been two factors in favor of the status quo—inevitable and the lack of innovative, viable alternative which goes to the heart of the problem instead of treating the symptoms.

We must have for our consideration what has aptly been termed the most innovative social legislation of the past 30 years. All we have left to contend with is our inertia.

Some may justifiably argue that change is not necessarily progress—and with that philosophy I must agree. But let us look at what the legislation does contain.

The family assistance plan now before the Senate calls for payments to all families having incomes below stipulated amounts. At the same time, it encourages employment by requiring registration for work or training, while permitting recipients who are employed to retain a portion of their earnings. These features, together with the establishment of national eligibility standards and some measure of Federal administration, could combine to produce inroads on the problem of child poverty. It is also a state of mind and state of health. It is this state of mind and state of health to which I want to address myself briefly.

In a statement last April, the President remarked:

We all know how the present welfare system breaks up families, demeans human dignity, and condemns poor people to a state of mind and state of health to which it is not only a state of income. It is also a state of mind and state of health. It is this state of mind and state of health to which I want to address myself briefly. We know that it is not unusual for successive generations of the same family to bequeath to children born into poverty?

What is the alternative? If there is one, why has it not been produced since the President introduced PAP in August 1969?

There is one additional aspect of welfare reform that has not been emphasized sufficiently. Ordinarily, when we speak of the failure of the welfare system, we buttress our remarks with statistics which show the astronomical increase over the years in caseloads and cost. But there is a conspicuous lack of information on the failure of welfare to relieve poverty in terms of the waste in human resources.

When the President addressed the Nation in August 1969 on the need for welfare reform, he noted that "poverty is not only a state of income. It is also a state of mind and state of health." It is this state of mind and state of health to which I want to address myself briefly. We know that poverty is not only a state of income. It is also a state of mind and state of health. It is this state of mind and state of health to which I want to address myself briefly. We know that it is not unusual for successive generations of the same family to bequeath to children born into poverty?

As we contemplate the cost of implementing this program, may I suggest that we also consider the cost of rejecting it. The legislation before us provides a crescendo of concern regarding our national resources, and certainly no one would dispute the importance of this precious heritage. But what more important resource than its children does any nation possess? And how would one weigh our efforts in preserving this resource in terms of its collective state of mind and state of health?

We all know how the present welfare system breaks up families, demeans human dignity, and condemns poor people to a state of mind and state of health.

We know that it is not unusual for successive generations of the same family to bequeath to children born into poverty?

As we contemplate the cost of implementing this program, may I suggest that we also consider the cost of rejecting it. The legislation before us provides a crescendo of concern regarding our national resources, and certainly no one would dispute the importance of this precious heritage. But what more important resource than its children does any nation possess? And how would one weigh our efforts in preserving this resource in terms of its collective state of mind and state of health?

In his statement last April, the President remarked:

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senate yield?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I had agreed to yield to the Senator from Colorado first. However, I will yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I do not think that what the Senator from Connecticut has said in any way changes the matter and makes me wrong. The fact is that I said that in the tumult of this debate such support as there is over here has not been that good. There is some help in my judgment, for the family assistance plan. That plan has an excellent chance to win a majority of the membership of this side of the aisle.

It happens that only the Senator from Utah (Mr. Bennett)—out of great loyalty, fine and noble gentleman that he is—felt that he could support this plan in the committee. However, I do not think that is evidence of the degree of support over here.

Second, I point out to my friend, the Senator from Connecticut, that this motion is amendable. If he does not like what is in it and if I do not like what is in it, we can amend it. There is no closing of amendments. We are not going to vote on social security, because the present welfare load in the United States for proposing the program. I believe that the President was right. There are those who think great compassion, a program which is entitled to $1,600 a year.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, the President, the Senator from Connecticut, by his amendment in the second degree, in the first place, the efforts of the President from Delaware would not have been necessary at all. The foundation for our trouble was laid when this amendment was placed at the desk in the second degree, and the Senator from Connecticut was the one who did that. The Senator from Delaware had the courage and foresight to see that any society that would have to put it up to the Senate in that way. We shall have the opportunity to work our will on amendments to the bill. The Senator from Connecticut, by his parliamentary maneuver, in putting the matter in this present shape, is not being helpful to the President.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from Iowa, if I may reply, the only reason it is in that shape is that the Senator refused to accede to the requests of the Senator from Delaware to enable the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal, to be put in the first degree. I said I would accede to this arrangement after discussion with the Senator from Delaware; and we mentioned the reason we wanted it opened up was to give the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Oklahoma an opportunity to introduce whatever amendments which they had. When this request was refused we had no alternative and this was the only way to get the family assistance program before the Senate. It was not what we wanted. We had no alternative, after consultation among the minority leader, the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT) and me.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Delaware has adequately answered that. It is a disservice to the Senate if they had not done it this way. We have been flagellated and substituted the most reactionary element.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Iowa should be clear that the Senator from Connecticut puts it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, there is no need and there is no reason, save and except the family assistance plan that we should have been in session after Labor Day of this year. If we would not sit around blindly and accept the “stuff” that is dished out to us, not only by word of mouth, the press, radio, and so forth, that Congress is just getting so complicated we have to be here all year, and if we would start using our heads, we would not accept such a mess of potage as that kind of statement.

We lost our chance to get out of here in a reasonable time. We would have prevented one of the greatest mistakes this country if we could have got our business done at an early time in the year and not accept blindly the statement that we are supposed to stay here all year, and if we would not accept what I think is one of the greatest aspects of this Government, and that is the right of the people at home to see their Senators and Congressmen in their own communities, to get their interest, and their opinions of what they are doing helpful to the President.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from Iowa, if I may reply, the only reason it is in that shape is that the Senator refused to accede to the requests of the Senator from Delaware to enable the Ribicoff-Bennett proposal, to be put in the first degree. Here we are 3 days, 4 days, 5 days, perhaps, to adjournment. I know the Senator from Florida has not been speaking about his position. But there are others of us in the Chamber who have worked for things for many, many years in the Senate, who are being thwarted this minute. They are being thwarted in this Chamber, which I think is to the detriment of the people of this country, which will destroy one entire industry in this country, and which will destroy a whole area and retard social advancement. We have feelings, too. We feel as strongly about this as the Senator from Connecticut feels, but we have to face the facts. We have a troika here. I would like to see a family assistance plan written out. I am convinced, and I say this frankly, that the bill that has been reported to us does not contain many things, because questions have been raised here again and again to which there has not been provided full answers.

I would have been happy to have seen a pilot plan reported so that we could try it out in one section or some section and find out what it is going to cost and whether this Government can sustain it, and whether out of this multiplicity of welfare plans and "do good" programs which we have tampered with, overlapping again in this country, we could bring some sense and order in one family assistance program. This is what I would dearly hope the Senate could do. But I am a practical man, too.

In these last few 4 or 5 days, I know we are not going to resolve the free trade measure, in which the Senator from New York is so interested. I know we are not going to resolve the family assistance plan. I do think we have some commitments—let us take a look at them. I think the Senate has given itself no options, so diligently to a given portion of legislation that as committee has in these last 4 months. I am not going to call on such a committee to return, with the assurance and understanding which I understand the Senate to have given itself, that as soon as this matter may properly be brought before his committee, they will attack it again.

My personal feelings is that we owe to every member of that Finance Committee a debt of gratitude. I do not care whether they supported the plan or whether they were against certain phases of it, no committee has acted so diligently to a given portion of legislation as that committee has in these last 4 months. I may be off a month, but it does not matter. They have met night and day, they have met mornings, afternoons, and if we do not get the family assistance plan this year, if we do not work it out in a form which is acceptable to the Senate as a whole, we owe every member of that committee a debt of gratitude. The members of that committee, with every bit of power they had, and with consistent week after week, and day after day, and at night, involved in it, have done a job for all of us upon which we can build in the coming year.

If we are able to do this, I hope we are able to resolve it. At least if we take action which we can take, we can expect to do it.

When we get to rule XXII, we will talk about that in January.

I say again that every one of the members of the Finance Committee—I do not care whether they were for it or against it, it is all right. If we had heard the 350 or 400 witnesses, deserve the thanks of the Senate, whether we are able to resolve it at this moment or not.

Mr. President, I told the majority leader that I thought when we came back we should have a quorum call some time during the day, and I would hope to have an opportunity at a later time to suggest the absence of a quorum in order to find out who is present for business.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HOLLAND. I thank the Senator. I warned the Senator from Florida is not in politics. Six days from now he leaves the floor of the Senate. He is not interested in any political implications in connection with any of the several issues that we are discussing this week. I hope he will have an opportunity at a later time to suggest the absence of a quorum in order to find out who is present for business.

The Senator from Florida cannot be charged with opposing the President, because no less an authority than Congressional Quarterly has said that the Senator from Florida has been more realistic than any other Senator on this side of the aisle since the President has presided as such. The Senator from Florida has no apology to make for that. He has only one purpose, and that is to support what he feels is right.

The Senator from Florida has not only the Senator from Connecticut knows that. But after looking at the charts presented by my distinguished friend, the senior Senator from our oldest State, Delaware, the Senator from Florida has not participated in either of the filibusters that have been going on, on either the trade bill, which he supports, or the family assistance plan. He has voted with the President when he has thought he was right.

The Senator from Florida has not only the great respect, but deep affection, for the President. He has voted with the President when he has thought he was right.

care, increased matching for family planning, funds for migratory workers, and for persons training under the work incentive program; and $200 million to encourage the provision of jobs for welfare recipients.

Mr. President, here is a provision of the bill to which additional help for poor people, for children, the disabled, the blind, the aged, and for aiding persons who hope to better themselves through employment to bring them better off.

But the fact is that in several instances the court incorrectly construed the statutory language we ourselves wrote, along with the Committee on Ways and Means, and we have sought to set straight in precise terms what Congress meant. I would hope that this would not prevent the Senate from voting for the motion, because everything that would remain in the Pennsylvania edition. If it were possible to get cloture, I would have done that. I am convinced that there is no possibility of our being able to vote "aye" or "nay" on the family assistance plan during this week.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I yield the floor in my own right.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, as was stated a moment ago, we face a condition, not a theory. Does the Senator from Kentucky recognize that there is no possibility of our being able to vote "aye" or "nay" on the family assistance plan during this week?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I have an amendment.

Mr. SCOTT. So, If I may yield first to the Senator from Kentucky, then I shall yield the floor.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, first, let me say that I do not in any case intend to support the motion of the Senator from Louisiana. I believe that the Senate ought to act on bill which would support welfare reform. I am hopeful that yet we can, if this motion is rejected, get a vote on the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment. It is an improved version of an amendment which was adopted in the Senate Finance Committee—improved, I think, because of determined opposition. It has not been improved enough. If it were adopted by the Senate, it would be my hope to amend it, either through later motions to strike and insert or by other means, to improve it further still. I hope, therefore, that this motion will not be agreed to.

The thing that has us in so much trouble is the trade section of this bill, which I vigorously oppose. I oppose it both on the substance of the issues involved and on the procedural question involved. This section is totally non-germane to the principal issues involved in this bill—social security and welfare—and I would hope that the Senate would at last decide to put aside this nongermane section, the trade section. It is much too late in this session, with only two days of hearings in the Finance Committee, to try to write this kind of major trade legislation, the most important trade legislation we have seen proposed in this country since 1962.

So I would hope that that section could be left aside and we could proceed to consider social security benefits and welfare reform. I twice moved in the committee to strike the trade section from this bill, and I hope that that may yet be done by the Senate; and then the Senate, with proper deliberation, with proper hearings, could take up the whole matter, the very complicated matter, of trade early next year and act upon it.

I think that those who support the general provisions of the trade portion of this bill can be reassured by the statement of the distinguished Senator from New York—which I would echo—that there would not be an attempt to delay, through a filibuster or by extended debate, final consideration of some trade bill during the early part of next session, after the proper consideration had been given in the committee and on the floor.

Furthermore, I think Senators should be aware that, as has just been stated by the distinguished Senator, the adoption of the pending motion would be a nullity, because if the motion to recommit is agreed to by the Senate and the bill comes back here as a social security bill, it is likely that the whole matter which, as a matter of fact, I already have had printed, which is an improved version of the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment—improved by amendments which I feel need to be made to it. So we would be doing nothing at all. It is time for the Senate to get down to business on this issue and to make its decisions and adopt real welfare reform in this session. I do not believe we will save any time by proceeding with the motion to recommit with instructions.

Furthermore, as has been pointed out by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts and Senator from Connecticut, the motion of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana does not just strip this bill down to social security, medicare, and medicaid. The bill, as I understand it, would be the kind of amendment which, if this motion is successful, would still include welfare provisions. But those welfare provisions would not be the kind of innovative welfare reform, the kind of welfare changes that many of us feel are desperately needed. Instead, they would be the kind of regressive and punitive welfare amendments which the Senator from Connecticut has opposed on occasion in the past has rejected because they tend to abrogate the right of privacy to those who receive welfare, making it much more likely that they will continue in the cycle of dependency by making them the second-class citizens and attempting to punish them for their poverty, rather than offering the kind of helping hand we should offer.

So I, President, I now move to strike the motion of the Senator from Louisiana by adding to the instructions a provision that title V also be stricken, and I should like to be heard on the motion.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I should like to be heard on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair inquires of the Senator from Louisiana whether he is asking for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. LONG. I am asking for the yeas and nays on the Senator's amendment to motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I send to the desk the modified version.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the modified amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 405 strike lines 1 through 25 and strike all on pages 406 through pages 498 and on page 499 strike lines 1 through 17.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRIS. May I first say what the amendment is, and then I will be pleased to yield to the distinguished Senator from New York.

This amendment would add to the instructions under the head of amendments that the instruction that the entire title V of the reported bill be stricken as well as the other provisions which he would strike under his proposed instructions.

I do not do in any case intend to support the motion to recommit, but these are issues we will have to face in the Senate at one time or another if the motion to recommit is successful. It is, of course, true that some issues will have to be faced then; and if the motion to recommit was adopted, I would hope it would be adopted in its best form.

This amendment would strike the committee provision which would institute a type of 1-year residency requirement in the face of the Supreme Court opinion to the contrary, would strike that provision of the committee bill which would require the people who do not prevail in hearings, a provision which was certainly to deter challenges of illegal rejections of people and others, would strike the committee provision which would overturn another Federal case having to do with adding eligibility requirements which would be related to the needs of poor children, would strike the committee provision which would tend to abrogate the right of privacy guaranteed to citizens under the Constitution, it relates to welfare recipients; and would strike the committee provision which would do away with the present system which allows the declaration necessary for determining eligibility, with spot checks.

I will go into any of these provisions which Senators may want to discuss. I had hoped that the distinguished Chairman of the committee would be here to deal with this amendment. The amendment which I have offered would do another thing: it would strike from title 5 also the provision which was added in committee on the motion of the distinguished Chairman, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long), setting up a Federal Child Care Corporation. I opposed that proposal in committee. I do not believe it is a good
Mr. RIBICOFF. If he did not, I would. Let me make it perfectly clear. I had discussions on this proposal with the Senator from Delaware and I was under the definite impression, after my discussion with him, that we were going to strike out titles III, IV, and V. I was shocked to learn that that was not the case, that a portion of title V was retained, so that under the circumstances I do not think any such agreement would be binding. If the motion were defeated by a majority vote and the Senate adopted, I would feel honor bound, therefore, to reintroduce this amendment, the family assistance program, the Ribicoff-Bennett amendment.

Mr. CURTIS. That answers my question.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, let me wind up briefly. I would be glad to agree to a time limitation on the consideration of my amendment if there is any desire that be done. Someone may want to propose that at some later time. I do not want to hold up the Senate very long. However, I want to say a word in explanation of my amendment.

The amendment I have offered would take out those provisions which seek to go backward, insofar as the rights of welfare applicants are concerned, and do not go forward. I want to address myself briefly to the regressive welfare provisions of the committee bill which the motion I have offered would strike. I opposed these provisions very strongly in the committee, as did other members of the committee. I will only mention two or three of them.

First of all, there is the provision in the committee bill which would reverse the progress recently made concerning the declaration method of determining eligibility. Mr. President, when Mitchell Ginsburg some time ago became head of the welfare department in the city of New York, he began to acquaint himself with what one might call the eccentricities of the welfare laws in that city and State, and elsewhere around the country.

He found, for example, that there was a very detailed investigation that went on in regard to whether or not a welfare applicant had told the truth as to whether he had any insurance with some cash value.

The city of New York had a very detailed and complex system of following up that declaration that the welfare applicant had made, that he had no insurance with a cash value, by a series of letters and other checks with insurance companies around the country.

Dr. Ginsburg went conferences with the welfare staff of the city of New York what that elaborate system of checking the declaration on the welfare application cost.

He was told that that system of checking and investigating prior to the time the welfare applicant was able to receive assistance, during the past year, had cost the city of New York some $125,000, as I recall it.

He then asked how much money the city of New York had gained as a result of the elaborate investigation system.

The answer was that the city had gained $7,500, as I remember it.
Dr. Ginsburg said to cut it out. He said, in effect, "Let us continue this investigative program."

"Someone asked, "What about the cheats?"

Dr. Ginsburg said, in effect, "We cannot continue to spend $125,000 a year in the investigation of welfare rules."

Mr. President, that kind of case can be duplicated all around the country. Welfare caseworkers over the years have become almost a hated enemy of a lot of welfare recipients around the country. It is not right that they should be, because they have been made investigators and law enforcement police and almost everything else. In addition to being social workers and trying to help people get a chance to get out of poverty and to get off welfare and to be self-sustaining and to get a job, instead of rendering the kind of social services that case workers mostly would like to do and are trained to do, they have for so many years been trying to enforce the law against those whom they are supposed to serve.

The declaration method of determining eligibility was instituted during the past administration in HEW and has been carried on during this administration. The tests of that system have shown that only 1.8 percent of such applicants were eligible. Maybe there is less cheating and by cheat by those who apply for welfare than by those of us who fill out income tax returns. Why would not the same system of checking be applied to each one? Why would not that apply in both cases?

I will mention only two other provisions that my amendment would strike from the committee bill if it was adopted by the Senate.

One is the so-called man-in-the-house rule. The Supreme Court of the United States in the cases of King against Smith, Lewis against Martin, and Shapiro against Solon, against against Solomon, and Shapiro against Thompson, which knocked down the 1-year residency requirement for people in need of public assistance.

America is one country where whether a little child born in Mississippi, Oklahoma, or New York decides if that little child, that American child, is entitled to the same kind of chance for a decent life and the same chances for decent health, the right against hunger, and the right to live in a decent home and to go to a decent school.

Mr. President, years ago there were some who said that if Oklahoma or Mississippi had an inferior system of education or, if Oklahoma or Mississippi discriminated against little black children in their school systems, "That is the business of Mississippi," or "That is Oklahoma's business." There were some who said, "That is not our business in the Senate or at the Federal level."

In my view, that was wrong on moral grounds, but it has proved to be wrong on practical grounds because that child born in Mississippi or born in Oklahoma did not necessarily stay in Oklahoma or Mississippi. That child may move to Detroit, to New York, or to Chicago, and if he goes there by ravages of a segregated and discriminatory, educational system or if he goes there with the handicap of an inferior education, that has been shown to become the concern of every one of us, as a practical matter, and we pay double for it. Those of us who live in other States, other than those States where that ravages of a segregated and discriminatory education was first provided, pay our part.

The Supreme Court said that everyone in this country is a citizen of this country and that the American citizen of this country is entitled to the same kind of equal treatment under the law, and they said that residency requirements of 1 year came to an end, as has been done in many State welfare systems. They said that is unconstitutional.

The welfare system in New York City, for example, is held up as one that is supposed to draw people into that State. There is a myth that people go from place to place, across State lines, in order to gain the State with a more generous welfare system. That is a myth. The facts show that it is a myth. People do not move from State to State because of the difference in welfare laws or the difference in welfare programs. In New York City, for example, more than 3 percent of those who applied for welfare were from people not legally obligated to support the children involved.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, every provision the Senator seeks to strike would be subject to amendment if the motion to recommit carries. The Senator is saying he is not going to vote for the motion to recommit and he would have no obligation not to hear anything the motions suggests or provides, if it carries. He has already said he is going to vote against it, even if he gets his way, so what is the use of trying to humor the Senator.

On the other hand, I believe it would be well to point out with respect to those provisions that suggest or provide, if it carries, to recommit and he would have no obligation he is not going to vote for the motion to recommit carries. The Senator is saying what is the use of trying to humor the Senator?

When one votes for the motion there is an implied understanding that, having done that, if we want to pass the bill we will proceed to table further versions of family assistance and the Trade Act, to keep those off the bill in the event it is so reduced.

If the motion were agreed to the Senator could move to strike any part of that which remained in the bill, and that would be entirely in order. The motion would suggest that anyone could amend or strike from the bill something he did not like.

Unfortunately, the Senator will not let us get to that point. Now, he is filibustering-

Mr. HARRIS. In what way? I believe I offered to have a time limitation on the amendment.

Mr. LONG. The Senator keeps talking about the matter. The Senator made a long speech.

Mr. HARRIS. I will ask a question now, if the Senator will yield for that purpose.

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further debate on the pending amendment to the Long motion be limited to 30 minutes, equally divided between the Senator from Louisiana and me.

Mr. LONG. May I suggest it be 10 minutes equally divided.

Mr. HARRIS. I am pleased to agree to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, let me just make it clear that the Senator in his motion—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LONG. I yield myself 5 minutes.

The Senator in his motion would strike out every single provision that helps the people who need it most. For example, if his bill had passed, under the provision for 10 percent social security increases and a $100 minimum, States would be required to consider every item of income that a worker would go to a needy person. So when social security beneficiaries received a $10 or $20 or $30 increase in their social security checks, as the case might be, the States would be required to proceed to cut their welfare checks by the same amount that the social security checks had been increased.

I am sure the Senator would not like that to happen, but that is what would happen if the Senate agreed to his amendment.

We have provided that there will be a $130 minimum for people who are not even drawing social security, if they have no other income. That provision would be stricken out by the Senator's amendment.

There are other provisions relating to migrant families with children. I have seen the Senator vote to help migrant families, but his amendment would strike the very point. I think the Government would put up 75 percent of the cost of helping migrant families.

There is provision for 90 percent rather than 80 percent matching funds for child care. That provision would be stricken.

There is a provision for more generous matching funds for child care. That provision would be stricken. The matching formula for child care would be moved up from 75 percent to 90 percent. That provision would be stricken.

There is provision for tax credit for those who hire people who are on the work incentive program, which is designed to train people and get them jobs. That provision would be stricken.

Altogether, there are benefits amounting to $1 billion for people who need it most.

If the Senator wants to propose amendments to strike what remains in the bill, and we are going to have to go to conference with the House on this and on several other bills, we should not continue this futile exercise. I would have to oppose the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, because it just confuses the issue. It divides those who might have supported the action of the Senate Finance Committee. It is an overkill because, obviously, it is taking out some provisions which he would not want to be taken out.

Reluctantly, I am going to vote for the pending amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, even though my name is on the other amendment, because I realize we have reached the time and place now where, if we are going to be able to salvage anything, we had better proceed in the way he has indicated.

I have been assured, as have other members of the Senate Finance Committee, that when we meet again in the new session, if we can quickly get a bill over here from the House, we will have a much better opportunity than we have had in the closing weeks of this session to consider the whole problem more carefully.

So I hope the Senate will reject the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The Senator wants to make things go faster, and the best way to do that is to take out these provisions which I have listed. The other questions which are raised by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana are irrelevant because I have already asked the Chair about it, and the Chair has responded that if the Long motion is agreed to and the bill is reported back to the Senate, it will be amendable. We could then take up in an affirmative way, as I think we should, the items the Senator has set forth.

I do not think the committee went as far as it could have with regard to migrant workers. I think that issue should be brought up as an affirmative matter.

I do not think the committee did the right thing in relation to child care, as I said earlier. I would rather strike that provision from the bill and take it up in an affirmative way, if the motion is going to be agreed to, by later amendment. The other provisions which have been mentioned obviously are provisions which can be offered, if the motion is agreed to, by amendment; and I say now they will be, if we are not going to have any welfare reform, which is the import of the motion of the Senator from Louisiana, and then turn back again and say, not only are we not going to have any welfare reform, but we are going to go backward. My motion would prevent us from doing that.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Utah (Mr. Bennett).

Mr. BENNELL. Mr. President, it seems to me that if we are ever going to get this matter handled, it would be better to clear the decks. I have been opposed to the motion to recommit, but I realize that is a question of if we can quickly get a bill because we have to go to conference with the House on this and on several other bills, so we should not continue this futile exercise. I would have to oppose the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, because it just confuses the issue. It divides those who might have supported the action of the Senate Finance Committee. It is an overkill because, obviously, it is taking out some provisions which he would not want to be taken out.

So I hope the Senate will reject the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma to the motion of the Senator from Louisiana.

On this question the ayes and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Anderson), the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. Burck), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. Craig), the Senator from California (Mr. Cranston), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Dodd), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Eagleton), the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Eastland), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Gore), the Senator from Alabama (Mr. Gravel), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Hart), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Inouye), the Senator from Washington (Mr. Magnuson), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. McCarthy), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. McClellan), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. McGee), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Montoya), the Senator from Maine (Mr. Muskie), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Pastore), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Russell), and the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Symington) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Washington (Mr. Magnuson), and the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Pastore) would each vote "yea." Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Cotton), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Fong), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. Hatfield), the Senator from California (Mr. Muskie), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Percy), the Senator from Alaska (Mr. Stevens), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. Tower) are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. Dominick) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. Mundt) are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona (Mr. Goldwater) is absent on official business.

On this vote, the Senator from Oregon (Mr. Hatfield) is paired with the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. Mundt). If present and voting, the Senator from Oregon would vote "yea" and the Senator from South Dakota would vote "nay." If present and voting, the Senator from Texas (Mr. Tower) would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 42, as follows:

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I would hope that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana could accept this amendment to his motion. It does not deal with anything other than the modifications in the present law, some of which previously have been before the Supreme Court, that the Finance Committee decided to agree to in regard to welfare restrictions. This amendment does not strike the entire title V as the previous amendment would have done. Therefore, it is not subject to the objections which the distinguished Senator from Louisiana voiced in regard to striking the more wholesome, in my view, provisions of title V. It relates only to those welfare restrictions.

I would just say, in support of the amendment, that if it is the hope of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana that the adoption of his motion to recommit with instructions would shorten things down and the Senate could decide upon social security, medicare, and medicaid alone in this session, the Senator would be defeating his purpose if, having foreclosed, as as practical matter, a vote on welfare reform, he nevertheless proposes to the Senate very serious, very complicated, and highly controversial welfare restrictions, as his motion, unamended, would presently do.

So I would hope that perhaps the Senator could take this amendment; and that would have the effect, should the Senator's motion be adopted, of at least limiting the debate or tending to limit the debate to the items the Senator had in mind.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield.

Mr. LONG. If the Senator would refer to page 546, the table of contents of the bill, would he designate the sections to which his amendment makes reference? For example, is he referring to section 540 or 541?

Mr. HARRIS. I could give the Senator a list of these items, but I do not have it from the table of contents. I will just hand it to him.

May I say, while the Senator is looking at it, that the amendment would not relate to the child care provisions of the bill nor to the other provisions of the bill to which the Senator voiced his objections earlier, concerning the other amendment. This amendment would relate only to those restrictions on the present welfare law, which the distinguished Senator from Connecticut and I and others objected to very strenuously in committee—to refresh the Senator's memory—and the provisions to which the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts strongly objected on the floor of the Senate today.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, section 546, to which the Senator makes reference, is one that would be deleted by the motion I have at the desk, which is pending.

I wonder whether the Senator really feels, from his point of view, that it is regressive to have a definition of employment, for example, for the purpose of section 551 of this bill, which I understand is one he would strike.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, there is no use in us playing games of any kind. My intent is clear. If the Senator agrees with my intent, we can rapidly work out the matter if there is any defect in this amendment, which was drawn rather hurriedly.

May I say, in my own defense, that I had known that the Senator from Louisiana was going to make a motion to recommit with instructions, but it had been my understanding—and I did not get that understanding from the Senator from Louisiana, I hasten to say—that his motion to recommit with instructions to strike certain portions of this bill would also strike the restrictive welfare provisions of the bill, to which I strongly object, as the Senator knows.

Coming to the Senate floor and finding that that was not the case, I had to draw an amendment hurriedly. I drew one earlier—because of the problem in quickly trying to write out each page number and section—to strike the entire title V. The Senator objected to that. So now I have tried to make the amendment more specific, to strike only those welfare restrictions to which I have referred.

If the amendment is not precise enough, that can be worked out quickly, if the Senator feels he can agree to it.

Mr. LONG. I had understood that the Senator could vote on these various provisions that the Senator finds objectionable. It had seemed to me that the way to do it would be to recommence this bill with instructions to report back. The Senator apparently is not willing to let us vote in that fashion; but it seems to me if it would be well for the Senate to vote on these measures, I believe it is possible to force the Senate to vote on the individual issues anyway, and that way we could see what the sentiment of the Senate is with regard to the matters that the Senator would like to strike.

I would like to ask the present occupant of the chair if it is not correct that a Senator may insist on a division, in which case we would vote separately on each proposition that is offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Spong). The Senator is correct in that the Senator may demand a division of any portion of the bill, if the amendment is susceptible to division.

Mr. LONG. For example, sections 540 through 551, I would like to ask if it would be subject to a division which would permit us to vote on each one of those sections in turn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Would the Senator give the Chair the page numbers?

Mr. LONG. Each one is a separate amendment. For example, the first one is numbered amendment 276 and I would like to ask that there be a vote on committee amendment 275 first. I would like to ask, Mr. President, that we vote individually on section 540 and then on sections 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 550, and 551. There are all separate provisions.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I am always happy to have the response of the Chair first; then I shall be happy to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has previously ruled to the Senator that he has a right to ask for a division in these instances. Now the Chair has not as yet gone over these to say that all of them are susceptible to division, but in the interests of time we are doing that here and now. The Senator from Oklahoma has asked the Senator from Louisiana if he would ask the Chair to ask the Senator from Louisiana if he does.

Mr. LONG. I would like to ask that the Senate proceed to vote on the first amendment, which was drawn rather hurriedly.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I take it that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana made his original motion to reconsider with the idea that it might shorten the Senate's consideration of these matters. I do not see how that is consistent with the present request that we would divide up the amendment which I have offered to his motion and vote on it as many separate times as we possibly can. His own motion to reconsider with instructions to report back. The Senator from Louisiana should not decide what package the Senate will vote upon, how not able to put together a package and say, "Let us vote 'yes' or 'no' on his whole package." The Senator from Louisiana says he does not want the Senate to vote on welfare reform because that would take too much time, but instead he is going to hold us several votes on welfare restrictions. I say that will take too much time.

Mr. HARRIS. I now yield to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has the floor.

Mr. HARRIS. I thought I had the floor in my own right. I did not ask the Senator to yield to me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair asked whether the Senator from Louisiana yielded to the Senator from Oklahoma. The Chair asked him that in his ruling.

Mr. HARRIS. I always appreciate the Chair's help, but not particularly in this instance. (Laughter.) Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I will yield to the Senator in a moment, but it seems to me that we have an important issue here. The Senate should vote on it. It is one thing for a Senator to say that these are restrictive provisions or backstop steps. But it is another thing to start out by putting people on welfare when they do not belong there, and then, when we find they do not belong there, we have to put everyone else on welfare to be equitable. If we are considering taking that approach to welfare legislation, that is not a very logical situation. Another Senator might say that he does not like the 1-year residency requirement, or this and that other committee provision. The committee worked many long months on this subject, and I do not bring to the Senate a responsible bill.

The first amendment I seek to deal with relates to men who desert their families. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare said that this should be a crime and the committee amendment says it is a misdemeanor for a man intentionally to cross a State boundary for purposes of denying his family support, when desertion occurs, we have to tax taxpayers who are working to support their own families so that they will have to pay not only to support their own families but also to support through the care of the hundreds of thousands of the man who deliberately and intentionally crosses the State boundary to avoid discharging his obligations to his family. I do not think we should permit a father to avoid his responsibilities to his family by crossing a State boundary, and thus impose on the taxpayers the duty of supporting his child.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is not regarded as a flaming conservative. However, with regard to this issue, his attitude was that we should do something about fathers who impose such heavy burdens on the taxpayers. We should not do anything about It, let them do it? Let Senators decide what they want to do about a father who deliberately abandons his children and refuses to support them with the result that the Federal Government had to pay because the man crossed the State boundary to avoid his obligations to his family—knowingly and with the intention of doing so.

It is my understanding that about 16 percent of the families receiving welfare are cases where the father deserted the family.

If the father crosses a State boundary to get beyond the reach of that State law, why should it not be a misdemeanor? Why should he be sued for support of his family? Why should we not vote on it? Let Senators decide what they want to do about a father who deliberately abandons his children and refuses to support them with the result that the Federal Government and the State have to combine their resources to support that family. If Senators think that we should not do anything about it, let them so vote.

Senator Richardson said he would support such legislation.

He said: We would support legislation which made it a Federal crime to cross State lines for the purpose of evading parental responsibility.

The answer is not to put a lot more people on welfare, but to put somebody in jail or at least to try to prosecute him for deliberately abandoning his family. Why can we not vote on it?

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, how ironic the situation is to have the chairman of the committee pleading for a vote on these amendments which have had limited discussion and practically no debate. I believe that we should vote on practically every measure before the Senate before it leaves.

The family assistance program is the No. 1 issue in the President's program. We have been debating it for 1 week and the opportunity for a vote has been denied. I am for granting a vote on every measure of the Senator from Louisiana up or down. But if the Senate is willing to vote on the proposal for welfare restrictions, as opposed to other measures, I think the committee, I think there is also the obligation to have an opportunity to vote on the family assistance program.

I am going to give the Senate that opportunity, because if the motion to recommit is adopted, I then reintroduce the family assistance program as a substitute for title V. I hope that those Senators who have been calling for a vote on the family assistance program and give the President and the Senate a chance to vote up or down on the family assistance program.

The Senator from Delaware, Mr. RIBICOFF, speaks for the Senate without a filibuster.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I will explain to the Senate that the Senator disand not with the Senator from Louisiana on the trade bill.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut-tell us that if he does intend to offer his amendment, then reintroduce the family assistance program as a substitute for title V. I hope that those Senators who have been calling for a vote on the family assistance program and give the President and the Senate a chance to vote up or down on the family assistance program. I hope that the Senator from Louisiana will allow the same courtesy and will give the Senate an opportunity to vote on the family assistance program.

I am going to give the Senate that opportunity, because if the motion to recommit is adopted, I then reintroduce the family assistance program as a substitute for title V. I hope that those Senators who have been calling for a vote on the family assistance program and give the President and the Senate a chance to vote up or down on the family assistance program.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut tell us that if he does intend to offer his amendment, then reintroduce the family assistance program as a substitute for title V. I hope that those Senators who have been calling for a vote on the family assistance program and give the President and the Senate a chance to vote up or down on the family assistance program. I hope that the Senator from Louisiana will allow the same courtesy and will give the Senate an opportunity to vote on the family assistance program. I hope that the Senator from Delaware will join with him on his motion to recommit. I therefore took it to mean just that.

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the ranking minority member have said publicly a number of times—and it has come back to me from others in authority—that under no circumstances would they go to conference on the trade bill, the family assistance, and I have been for it. But we have been living for 8 years in that committee in a complete sense of comity.

I have the highest respect for the Senator from Delaware, and I trust that he has the same respect for the Senator from Connecticut.

During all of these weeks, we have been trying to arrive at some way in which we can reconcile the differences that confront the Senate, and especially with respect to the family assistance program.

The other day the Senator from Delaware told me that he intended to make a motion to recommit—I think that was on Tuesday, or the day before we adjourned—and report back, striking out titles III, IV, and V.

In a subsequent conversation with the Senator from Delaware, he said to me that he was under the impression that the Senator from Louisiana was going to join with him on his motion to recommit. I therefore took it to mean just that.

The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the ranking minority member have said publicly a number of times—and it has come back to me from others in authority—that under no circumstances would they go to conference on the trade bill, the family assistance, or catastrophic illness.

I do not believe in doing useless things. I recognize that we ought to wind up the Senate business and we ought to come back to the family assistance and family welfare next year, and that in the interim we should pass the social security but amendments to clarify the medicare and medicaid measures, with which the Senator from Delaware and I have been laboring for the past two years, which are noncontroversial and the changes are that the House would go along with them in the social security conference.

I was nonplused to find that when the motion to recommit was submitted, we were again on title 5 and the welfare restrictions.

I am willing to forego voting on amendments and on the family assistance program and come back next year.

But I cannot see why we are here now on other welfare restrictions.

It is the same matter that the Senate refused us a vote in respect to the President's program. If we are on welfare, then we have no alternative. If the Senator wants to vote item by item on the welfare restrictions, the Senator from the President should be willing to give the Senate the courtesy of an opportunity to vote on family assistance, because if the House refuses to go into conference on welfare restrictions, then the Ribicoff amendment will be subject to amendment by the Senate. That is the same conference that will refuse to go into conference on the welfare restrictions now advanced by the Senator from Louisiana.

I want to make the situation clear to the Senate because instead of shortening the session, I would hope we could do something. When I cut the Gordian knot, we are back where we started and nothing has been achieved. I was under the impresvery substantial contributions to their improvement.

To the extent that I can make any contributions to that, I shall be very happy to do so.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, we have only 5 days remaining in this session of Congress before we are required to adjourn by the Constitution. It was obvious some days ago that at the rate we were moving, we were spinning our wheels. We were not going anywhere, nowhere. The 20 million retired Americans on social security would be denied their raises, and the three million people drawing public assistance—the needy blind, the aged, and the totally and permanently disabled—would be denied the benefits which this bill would give them. It seems to me that now the Senate is beginning to make progress. But we can only make progress if we recognize the realities of what is possible this late in the legislative session.

Each of us is interested in practically every provision of this bill. I have the honor to represent a State that is heavily dependent upon textiles. Some 260,000 Georgians make their living either in the garment industry, or in textile mills, or in producing the cotton that is sold to the textile mills. There are some 2,400,000 Americans similarly situated throughout the country. They are losing their jobs at the rate of 100,000 a year.

The Senate, by overwhelming votes in 1948, in 1968, again in 1969, and again in 1970, has attempted to take corrective action in that regard. The House of Representatives heretofore has refused to accept our efforts in conference. This year, the other body sent a bill of its own. There was substantial opposition in the Senate to the House-passed bill, but the Senate Finance Committee, once by a vote of 9 to 3 and again by a vote of 55 to 31 on a motion to lay on the table, has recommended that these people ought to have some relief and some protection. The Senate, by a vote of 55 to 31 on a motion to lay on the table, has also indicated its desire to take affirmative action.

Knowing the realities of the situation, I do not think it is possible at this time to get a trade bill, and for that reason I shall reluctantly vote for the motion of my distinguished chairman, the Senator from Louisiana. I am happy to see the spirit of compromise on the part of the distinguished Senator from Connecticut and others who recognize that at this late date in the session, the Senate is not going to take action to add another 14 million people to the welfare rolls of this country without giving the matter adequate and thorough consideration.

I think, therefore, Mr. President, that in this spirit of compromise, even at this late date if it is still possible for the Senate to approve a bill to benefit those millions of elderly Americans who are in need and in dire straits. Some of them go hungry most of the time, because they have no income, and cannot make ends meet on the mere pittance they receive on public assistance or the small social security benefits that they are entitled to under the law.

For that reason, and only for that reason, I shall support the motion of my distinguished chairman. I ask him now if it will be possible for the Senate Finance Committee, early in the 93rd Congress, to take action to correct the trade legislation in order that we can do something to correct our hemorrhage of dollars and gold, our unfavorable balance of payments, and the loss of the trade which we are exporting to foreigners throughout the world. It seems to be the policy of many Senators to export all of our jobs and put all our people on welfare. But if we are going to export our jobs, it simply will not be possible to support our people on welfare, because we will not have the tax resources to support the welfare program.

Will my chairman hold hearings on it next year, so we can get early action on the trade bill?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I discussed this matter previously with the Senator from Georgia as well as the Senator from Connecticut. Both of them have made the point that we should hold hearings at this late date consistent with our other duties, because of the pressing need to act in this area.

I can assure the Senator that we will hold hearings at the earliest practicable time, and we can develop answers to this vexing problem.

Mr. BYRD of Virginia. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. BYRD of Virginia. Mr. President, I support the position taken by the chairman of the Finance Committee. What the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is attempting to do is to bring some order out of chaos. He is attempting to strip from the social security bill all of the nongermane amendments. If we are going to have a social security bill, we can only have that bill, as I see it, at this late stage in the session, if we take off all of these other amendments, and give the Senate an opportunity to vote for an increase in social security benefits, in order to give the social security recipients an increase in their benefits.

Many of the amendments that will be stricken off of the bill if this recommital motion is carried will be amendments which I have supported. Others will be amendments which I have opposed. But be that as it may, if we are going to bring a social security bill out of this Congress, if the Senate is to have an opportunity to pass a social security benefit bill, then it seems to me that we must be necessary to follow the recommendation of the chairman of the Committee for the time being, strip this bill of its nongermane amendments, and bring back a social security bill, which up to this point has been held hostage by other amendments, and then give the Senate an opportunity to vote for an increase in social security benefits, which benefits, it seems to me, are entitled to by these amendments, and then give the Senate an opportunity to vote for an increase in social security benefits, which benefits, it seems to me, the people so badly need in this time of inflation—and contrary to what many say, I do not think inflation is getting better; indeed, it may be getting worse.

I think the social security recipients are entitled to this increase in their benefits, and the Senator from Louisiana has indicated a way by which the Senate can pass this social security bill at this session and provide those benefits.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my motion.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LONG. I yield to the distinguished Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, I associate myself with the remarks made by the Senator from Georgia. I, too, shall support the chairman of our Committee on Finance. I think the reasons for my decision have been adequately set forth by the remarks made by the distinguished Senator from Georgia.

I think there is great need to enact some legislation which will protect this country against the loss of dollars, the loss of jobs, and the outflow of industries that we have been experiencing. But for the time being, I think the actions of the chairman have been courageous, honest, and forthright, and I shall give him my support.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I wish to join my colleagues, first, in praising the statesmanship exhibited by the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Ribicoff), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Harris), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Rencooff), and the leadership of the Senate in bringing this matter of trade legislation to a conclusion.

I think whatever we do now is bound to bring honor to the Senate, and I shall loyally cooperate.

I appreciate very much the statesmanlike attitude of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Talmadge), with whom I thoroughly disagree on his statements as to the merits of trade quotas, but I certainly laud his desire to get something done on what we can get done; and I certainly join on that wholeheartedly.

I rise only to make this point: I realize that everything must be the result of accommodation between men. It is a fact that the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Harris) and the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) are agreed in eliminating many, if not most, of the objectionable major changes in social philosophy in the welfare plan, by eliminating sections 540 through 551, including Federal child care, and a number of bills have been introduced on that issue, representing an enormous amount of creative thinking.

The Senator from Oklahoma has introduced one, the Senator from Indiana (Mr. Bayh) has introduced one, I have introduced one, and there has been a White House conference on the subject.

I really think, with all respect—and that is my reason, of course, for rising—that, if that, too, could be taken out of this consideration, it would be most helpful.

I only appeal to the chairman. I realize that many things have to be put together which lean on each other, and I trust the chairman of the Finance Committee and the Senator from Georgia certainly would not wish to cross him at this late date by offering another amendment. But I do submit to him, with all respect, that the deliberation in which he is now engaging—for trade, for the family assistance plan, and for catastrophic health insur-
I am certain that many Members feel precisely as I do about this issue. We believe in free competition. We are not protectionists as such. But we refuse to stand idly by when unfair overseas competition results in the shutting down of our factories and the unemployment of our workers.

This is painfully true in the case of the shoe industry in my State of New Hampshire and the rest of the Nation, just as it is the case of the textile industry throughout the country.

Two years ago the shoe and leather industry was the single largest manufacturing employer in New Hampshire, having a total work force of 20,536 people. By 1969, employment had dropped to 18,466 and the industry had lost its leading role.

In the past 2 years, almost 10 percent of the shoe factories in New Hampshire closed down, severely affecting the economy of the communities in which they were located, and by July of 1970, Mr. President, the shoe and leather work force had shrunk to only 16,400.

Now there are those, including the present administration, who apparently view the demise of the domestic shoe industry as unavoidable, inevitable, and, indeed, necessary to preserve our foreign trade policy.

I strongly disagree with that thesis, and I deeply resent having the economic backbone of my State and this industry severed on the sacrificial block of totally unrestricted free trade.

For the crucial fact remains, Mr. President, that in almost every single case in New Hampshire, the major reason for the shutting down of shoe plants and the resulting loss of jobs can be directly attributed to competition from cheaply made foreign shoes.

Let me repeat once again. I believe in free competition when that competition is fair competition. Our shoe and textile industries are the victims of unfair competition and this is why I continue to press the Senator to do all that he can to prevent a competition which will restore fairness and, in the long run, strengthen free trade.

Mr. President, I want to join the Senator from Georgia in expressing the hard facts of the situation before us. Within the time constraints facing us at this late hour of the 91st Congress a trade bill is an impossibility. It is also certain that a social security bill is vital to the needs of millions of our elderly citizens. There is solid agreement that social security and medicare are the victims of unfair competition.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Finance I report here-with H.R. 17550, the Social Security Amendments of 1970 modified in accordance with the instructions of the Senate. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. Moss. The bill will be stated by title. The legislative clerk reads as follows: H.R. 17550, to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and medigap programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the first committee amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate agree to the committee amendments en bloc and that this will not be done. In order to regard them as original text, preserving the right of the senators to offer amendments thereto.

Mr. JAVITIS. Mr. President, on previous occasions I have objected to because of the inclusion in the bill of the material which, in my judgment, and the judgment of many others here, has weighted down and presented an invitation to debate the debt issue for our country. But, Mr. President, it is still possible for any Senator to add on any of these amendments. I join with all my colleagues in the hope that this will not be done. In order to show to theyeas and nays on my amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. We are on limited time, and we should give our full attention to the debate.

The Senator from Nebraska may proceed.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I shall try to state my case concisely. I hope that the Senators present will follow it.

The amendment would strike from the bill that section which has been called “peer review.” The problem is how we define peer review.

In administering medicare certain abuses have sprung up. Our staff has done some fine work on this matter. In their report they concluded with the recommendation that the medical profession ought to police the medical profession. With that statement I concur. The committee had before it many problems, as the debate over the last two weeks has shown. There was testimony taken on this matter. However, the testimony is far conclusive as to a proper method of peer review.

Mr. President, we ended up with 39 pages or thereabouts on peer review which really has not had the attention that it ought to have. I am not opposing peer review as such. I oppose the language used. And I suggest that in the closing days of Congress, it ought to go out and we should have another look at it next year.

If we wish to examine some of the language, if we turn to page 234 in the bill, it will be seen that this peer review organization will have a lot of authority to police the practice of medicine insofar as these Government programs are concerned.

On page 234, lines 10 through 11 are in line with the idea that the medical profession should police the medical profession. But if we look at lines 20 through 24, we see what else would police the medical profession. I read what it says:

Such other public, nonprofit private, or voluntary organization which the Secretary determines, in accordance with criteria prescribed by him in regulations, to be of professional competence and otherwise suitable... .

It gives to the Secretary the power to select any organization he wants to tell the doctors how to practice, when a person should go to the hospital, when the facilities are adequate and many other far-reaching questions.

I contend that would enable the Secretary to turn to an organization of some crusader, such as Ralph Nader, or anyone else, to police the medical profession.

I call attention to some other language on pages 237 and 238. There is some very deceptive language there. It reads:

No Professional Standards Review Organization shall utilize the services of any organization which is not a physician to make final determinations with respect to the professional conduct of any physician, or any act performed by any physician in the exercise of his profession.

The catchword there is “final.” We could have an organization with thousands of clerks who could take a blue pencil and direct the practice of medicine, and we had one doctor at the top. That doctor would not have to be a practicing physician if he has been to medical school and has a license. He puts his initials on the final paper and will determine how the medical profession shall treat the patients.

Such language should not be agreed to in the closing days of this Congress. Surely, we should have peer review, but not that kind.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Chair maintain order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair admonishes the Senate to be in order. The Senator from Nebraska may continue.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, among other things, a peer review organization who is not a physician can police the medical profession. This has the real possibility that the bureaus can police the medical profession. I am not here pleading a case for the doctors. By and large they are well educated people who take care of themselves. I am concerned about the patients.

When medicare was adopted, the people were promised over and over again there would be no interference with the doctor-patient relationship; that they would not be treated in groups but that every individual would have free access to his doctor, unhampered by rules and regulations. But the question is what decisions to make, when to operate, what medicines to prescribe, and so forth.

I believe this language is too broad. I believe we should have something like...
Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. ALLOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator state again what his amendment provided?

Mr. CURTIS. The amendment would strike out the language on page 232 beginning at line 11 through line 15 on page 269.

Mr. ALLOTT. The Senator would strike out all of the language dealing with professional review?

Mr. CURTIS. The Senator is correct.

Mr. ALLOTT. There have been many of these situations which have gotten much more attention. It seems to me we are taking an erroneous step by including the language on page 234 in paragraph (b) and also including subparagraph (e), page 237, which, as the Senator mentioned, contains the word "final." The effect is that there could be an unqualified group doing this sort of work, and a doctor or a group of doctors could be totally tarred with a brush and perhaps their livelihoods imperiled, the only thing they would have would be on final review if they would have to say whether they did or not. Mr. CURTIS. I thank the Senator, I am on limited time. I do agree with the Senator.

Mr. ALLOTT. I did not realize the Senator was on limited time.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for 2 minutes?

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, may I inquire if I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. CURTIS. I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I support the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, as I did in committee.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a portion of the separate views I have filed to the report of the committee concerning this matter.

There being no objection, the excerpt was ordered to be printed in the Record as follows:

The committee adopted a proposal to establish professional and medical societies, including those of local and State levels throughout the country, to review such functions as examination of patient and practitioner profiles; independent medical audits; on-site audits; and the development and application of standards and treatment.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to enter into agreements with qualified professional and medical societies, principally local medical societies, to review the totality of care rendered or ordered by physicians for Medicare and Medicaid patients. Where medical societies are unable or unwilling to undertake the responsibility, the Secretary could enter into contracts with States or local health departments or other suitable organizations.

This provision has a laudable purpose: to insure quality care and to hold down unnecessary costs.

However, the proposal contains many unknown and unpredictable factors. Further, there are provisions that grants organized medicine too much control over utilization of facilities and payments of claims.

The proposal should be tested before Congress puts it into effect on a total basis as the committee bill would do. I am not satisfied that the proposal will result in the savings which have been claimed by its proponents, nor am I satisfied that the review procedures are comprehensive and most workable which can be devised.

The House provisions on peer review should be strengthened, and the Senate committee provisions should be stricken.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I particularly point out, as I said in those separate views that—

The proposal contains many unknown and unpredictable factors. Further, there are serious objections that it grants organized medicine too much control over utilization of facilities and payments of claims.

Mr. President, I support the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I require.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, Medicare's hospital insurance plan has a deficit over 1967 projections officially estimated at $216 billion over the next 25 years, if we go on as we are going. On the other hand, applying cost projections of the American Hospital Association, that deficit could be reduced to $270 billion. Any figure, or any figure between those figures is intolerable.

The committee overwhelmingly voted approval of the professional standards review amendment as the basic approach to bringing about effective medical—and not governmental control of Medicare and Medicaid. Our present Medicare and Medicaid utilization review is fragmented, piecemeal, and ineffective. The basic approach developed and sponsored by Senator BENNETT was modified by the committee in response to the constructive comments of organized medicine and hospitals.

The amendment is designed to assure comprehensive and ongoing review of care provided under Medicare and Medicaid by physicians at local levels—usually in minimum groups of 300 practicing doctors. The amendment includes every conceivable safeguard against pro forma or token assumption of responsibility by the government, and every conceivable safeguard to protect the public interest.

The Professional Standards Review Organization amendment is a responsible answer to the abuses by doctors and other providers of care other than the inadequate mechanism we already have.

Mr. BENNETT. I am grateful for the Senator's contribution. Some language was added to the amendment which I think he modified it to meet every reasonable objection of medical associations—then we would not have any mechanism to do anything about the abuses by doctors and other providers of care other than the inadequate mechanism we already have.

The plan, which has been entitled PSRO, the Professional Standards Review Organization—has been focused on for months by the staff of the committee, by the staff of HEW, and through consultation with many scores of doctors and professional organizations.

It would say that if any medical organizations are concerned, the last remaining disagreement is over how this organization shall be constituted. For obvious reasons there are many people in the United States who believe that the power should be lodged with the State medical society. I have opposed that because I do not believe it proper for any private organization supported by private insurance or Medicare and Medicaid, whose membership would be controlled by private rules, to administer such a law. Therefore, a program was established under which groups of local physicians in an area supporting 300 or more physicians would be invited to offer their services to the Secretary to carry out this review process.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I am happy to yield. Mr. LONG. Is it not true that in the years we spent studying these matters we found situations such as the following: We just cannot permit Medicare and Medicaid to continue as they have. We just cannot permit Medicare and Medicaid patients to be performing five times as many tonsillectomies as it would be the average doctor would be performing? When we looked into it, we found that we would be performing five times as many procedures. We should have been performing the same number as the others. Then we would find a doctor giving five times as many injections as other doctors. Then we found situations such as that in a hospital for elective surgery or elective care provided under Medicare and Medicaid. Where medicaid to continue as they have been performing with the Federal Government. The priority would be performing five times as many procedures. We should have been performing the same number as the others. Then we would find a doctor giving five times as many injections as other doctors. Then we found situations such as that in a hospital for elective surgery or elective care provided under Medicare and Medicaid.
take the patient into the hospital and then, after the patient has been there for a long time, the service decides it was improper and refuses to pay for it.

Our problem here is to set up a system by which the patients may take the surgery or the other treatment will fall within the Medicare rules and be paid for.

The amendment has been drawn so that the peer review organizations will see to it that a man whose patients are properly handled can be given blanket permission to take his patients in for treatment, and they will concern themselves only with the problems.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. TALMADGE. Can we not say that the position of the Senate Finance Committee on this amendment is that we want to return the ball game to the players?

Mr. BENNETT. That is right. That is exactly right, but we have to have an umpire in the ultimate sense.

Mr. TALMADGE. Either the doctors police their own profession or it will be policed in Washington by H EW.

Mr. BENNETT. That is right, we want to give the doctors the first opportunity. We want to give the local doctors, who are aware of the limitations and problems of their colleagues, a chance to pass on that.

If ever there was made here that all kinds of decisions can be made along the road and that the doctor only will make the final decision. That was put in there to make it possible for the doctor to use registered nurses or use paramedical people to handle the minutia that go into loading a doctor down with all the work and with all the comparatively unimportant decisions. These people would be employees selected by the doctors to represent them.

If this provision is knocked out of the bill, we are left with the House language, and the House language goes that the Secretary full does anything he pleases. The doctors will have no opportunity to review their own professional activity. The purpose of peer review is not to review the claims situation. It is concerned only with medical necessity, with professional standards, and with the possibility of finding less costly ways of treating patients.

If ever there has been worked over and carefully adjusted to every practical suggestion that has been made by the members of the medical profession, only with this provision has been treated, and I think it would be tragic if we knocked this provision out of the Senate bill and, therefore, had no chance in conference to do anything except take the House bill and thus handed the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to set up a process by which he would review and enforce conditions of Medicare.

There must be review. The situations, the difficulties that have been developed, demonstrate that. The doctors want a chance to review themselves. I think this provision gives them that chance without passing it automatically to a private group such as a State medical society. Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. I yield.

Mr. LONG. The language not directed to frauds other than shown on page 664 of the hearings. Here were two doctors practicing in a ghetto area of a larger city and they were performing, even though they were general practitioners, more tonsillectomies than all of the ear, nose, and throat specialists put together. A man might come into the doctor's office with a headache. The doctor would say, "It looks like an aspirin. Meanwhile, you also ought to have your tonsils taken out." So out would come the tonsils.

Such practices contribute directly to the provision of unnecessary medical services and that is one of the reasons why Medicare has cost twice as much as it should and why we have found some doctors making fantastic amounts of money under Medicare.

This provision would simply enable the doctors to establish a review organization and continually review the medical care in their community or area. It is only in the event that the doctors decline to do the job right that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare would get into the picture.

Mr. CURTIS. Does the Senator point out that the Senator from Nebraska has 2 minutes left?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I have the floor. This is on my time.

Mr. CURTIS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. About 2½ to 3 minutes.

Mr. BENNETT. I shall be happy to reserve the remainder of my time so the Senator from Nebraska can ask questions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, there is no effort on the part of the Senator from Nebraska to defend abuses. They should be stopped, and they are being stopped. The Senator from Georgia said this was an amendment to turn the ball game back to the players.

No one can read lines 20 through 24 on page 234 and say that is to turn it over to the players. It turns the review power over to any organization which the Secretary determines.

What do they have power to do? Here is what they have power to do: They are to ascertain whether or not such services were medically necessary, and to ascertain the cost of such services, as to whether they meet certain professional standards; they have authority to inspect in advance any elective admission to the hospital or to the care facility, or any other care service which consists of an extended or costly course of treatment.

Mr. President, I point the finger at no one, and make no criticism of our committee. We had too much work to do at one time. But I submit that this amendment, consisting of 39 pages, was never read in the committee, it was never read by a staff member to the committee, there was no time after it was printed that a staff member was turned to and asked to go over it section by section. It has language in it that the Congress knows who has power over to any organization, irrespective of what the proponents would like to have done.

Many of these abuses that are mentioned will be taken care of by Government audit. Many of them will be taken care of by the voluntary control that the medical association, and, given a little more time, we can write a better peer review.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska has expired.

The Senator from Utah has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I should like to read briefly from page 155 of the committee report:

Priority in designation as a PSRO would be given to organizations established at local levels representing substantial numbers of practicing physicians who are willing and believed capable of progressively assuming responsibility for overall continuing review of all professional standards and all services. Local sponsorship and operation should help engender confidence in the familiarity of the review group with norms of professional practice. It is also expected that they will use their knowledge of available health care resources and facilities. Furthermore, to the extent that review is employed today, it is usually at the local level. To be approved, a PSRO applicant must provide for the broadest possible involvement of representatives of the medical community in an area such as solo, group, hospital, medical school, and so forth.

Going back to the charge that it would prevent or interfere with elective admissions to hospitals, let me say again that the doctor has all the power in the world to take his patient to the hospital. The thing that must be reviewed is whether that patient is properly covered by Medicare, and whether Medicare will pay for the services. That is the name of the game. That is the problem that we face.

Mr. President, the following State medical societies have supported the committee's program: Georgia, Mississippi, Pennsylvania, Hawaii, and New Mexico. Many county societies also support it.

I think that the medical profession was disappointed that they did not get the right to conduct these reviews through their private State societies. They want the system. I hope the Senate will support it and give it to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. President. All time having expired, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURRIS). On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

medical care and medicare to be treated as a group. In other words, instead of that individual doctor-patient relationship, they can join an organization and, by contract with the Government, for a flat fee, they take care of all the group's medical needs. I want to be fair about this, that it does not force group practice of medicine on the people generally. I do not contend that. All I contend is that this is the beginning of a move toward group practice of medicine.

As I said a bit ago, when these programs were inaugurated we were told over and over again that they would always be administered so as not to interfere with the individual doctor-patient relationship.

Now the costs have gone up; part of it is due to inflation and part to other causes—60 percent to 70 percent of the cost of the problem is in labor—but in grasping for some way to cut down the costs of government medical programs the provision is advanced.

I have a fear that if we make this start in, let us say, 1972, it will be enlarged and, little by little, it will become compulsory and we will be sacrificing quality for price. Patients will be treated as groups; not as individuals.

We, Mr. President, I am concerned about the patients. I think that anyone who is ill, particularly those who do not have the resources to pay their own medical bills, should be treated as an individual. They should consult with a doctor, with a free exchange of questions and answers, and the doctor should advise the patient of the treatment, hospitalization, operation, or whatnot that he should have.

This will make it possible, however, to contract with groups and have a stated fee that will take care of all their ills.

Some Senators have information about companies and believe that it is a doctor provided by a railroad company, a mining company, or other company. It has never been as satisfactory as the individual selection of a doctor and the situation is that it is a group doctor-patient relationship. This beginning of the group practice is in here, not for the purpose of improving the health care of the people of the country, but it is here to lower the cost.

I am for lowering the cost anywhere it can reasonable be done, but never by sacrificing the quality of care.

I do not believe that if someone joins a group that organization contracts with the Government and, for a stated fee, everything is taken care of, that that is conducive to quality health care in the individual practice of medicine.

Again, Mr. President, I want to make it abundantly clear that I do not contend that this bill forces group practice on anyone. But it is the beginning.

Now there are other things we can do to cut down the cost. Personally, I never did favor medicare for the extremely wealthy, but that is water over the dam. Instead of dealing directly with costs, such as doing something that will bring more labor-saving devices into the hospitals, we are turning to a cheaper practice of medicine. We are laying the foundation which could well lead to a sacrifice of quality practice.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CURTIS. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, can the Senator give an example of the way this works?

Mr. CURTIS. An organization is created, which enters into a contract with a doctor or doctors. I don't know on what basis of the contract but they contract to take care of the ills of their members for a stated fee.

I have the feeling that it will result in a group practice that would be very much like being treated by a company doctor. We have heard much complaint about that. It is a beginning which I believe is a mistake.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the part of the bill that the Senator from Nebraska seeks to strike was enthusiastically recommended by President Nixon, which was approved by the House Ways and Means Committee, agreed to by the House of Representatives and which the Senate Finance Committee also agreed to.

Mr. President, this committee approved President Nixon's recommendation, with the exception that it did put on some necessary limitations to tighten it up to prevent abuse.

We are talking about people who could sign a contract with a group known as a health maintenance organization. We could name many such groups. The Kaiser Health Foundation on the west coast, for example, is a type of health maintenance plan. They could, for example, possibly sign some sort of an agreement with the Ochsner Foundation in New Orleans if the doctors want to provide such services. Or they could go to the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota if they wanted to form a health maintenance organization with doctors of all specialties capable of providing any medical service one might want. They would provide the medical services, and the Government would pay 95 percent of what it would cost on a per capita basis to provide that individual with his medical benefits using present payment mechanisms.

It is anticipated that these health maintenance organizations could save money. In some cases, they would find ways to be more efficient. In other cases, they might use fewer hospital days because they would be able to do better if the patient came for outpatient treatment rather than hospital treatment. By providing more efficient services, they would hope to save some money in their operation and to provide either more or better medical services to the people who are members of the health maintenance organization.

Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, is not the main thrust of this provision to keep people out of the hospital rather than to put them in $80- and $100-a-day hospital beds?

At the present time under medicare, an old person who is sick is almost forced to go to the hospital to get adequate attention. So we have them under those circumstances in a $75-a-day hospital bed.

Almost anyone subject to medicare has one or more chronic conditions like heart, arthritis, kidney, liver, stomach—something that he is going to have for the rest of his life. He needs maintenance. He needs attention. He needs this on a regular basis in order to keep out of the hospital and to keep him doing something to keep him active, to keep him in with people.

I believe the concept of this so that they can band together to get this attention without having to go to a hospital and without having to let this chronic condition develop to the point where it is serious.

This is an effort to try to have plans of the type that have been adopted and which, I am sure, the HEW is contracting for so that they can make a contract with the doctors. It is voluntary. They do not have to do it. They can say, "Will you give me something better than medicare?" And we need, not when I am sick, but when I am well so that you can keep me well and keep me out of that high-priced hospital bed.

I think it is a good thing. I am glad to see it included in the bill.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the bill is correct.

As the Senator from Ohio has pointed out, the health maintenance organization an opportunity to say to people who would be eligible for medicare, "We think we can offer you something better than medicare." If the Government agrees that this may be better for the patient and if they see no possibility of abuse in it, then they would pay 95 percent of what they would pay per capita at the present time to provide this service.

The administration thinks that this is a way to provide better care.

Obviously the people who have been working in this area believe they have something better to offer.

As the Senator mentions, there are several organizations already providing this care. The State of Ohio has a very fine organization in Cleveland that provides health care of this sort.

The administration feels that this type of thing will grow as people find ways to provide more efficient and hopefully better service on a voluntary basis, and at a savings for the most part, with the insurance industry providing better and more services to the people who participate in this organization.

If we are in error, then a lot of good people have made the same mistake. The House of Representatives thought this was wise. We have drawn our provision even tighter than theirs.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, the distinguished manager of the bill and the Senator from Ohio have already given the reasons for the committee provision which includes possibilities for in-increased emphasis and utilization of outpatient care and facilities.
I wonder if under the proposal in the bill as brought to the floor there is a strategic frankness for general approval of a program or programs.
Mr. LONG. Yes. There is provision in this bill requiring Federal approval. And the purpose, of course, is to be very careful to make sure the beneficiaries would need tough-quality care.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield me 2 minutes?
Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I rise to oppose the pending amendment. I support the statements made by the distinguished chairman of the committee.
One of the mistakes made when medicare and medicaid were originally enacted into law was that we thereby massively increased the demand for health care but did not concurrently increase the supply of health personnel and health facilities. Because of that massive increase in demand without a concurrent increase of supply, we virtually ruined the system.
That is one of the reasons why the costs of health care have continued to go up at a very alarming rate. There is presently a shortage of 50,000 doctors in America and a shortage of nurses that is greater than that.
We are, with the present financial difficulties of medical schools and health-related schools, see where the increased personnel will come from. We have to increase medical and paramedical personnel in this country. We must increase the facilities available. But we can also do much better with the present medical personnel and paramedical personnel, and we can do much better in the use of present facilities than we are doing. We must do both. We must not only increase the supply but we must also have more efficient use of present personnel and facilities. We cannot do that unless we have the right system. We must have prepaid and preventive medical care. The provision in this bill starts us in that direction. It is a good provision and I hope the pending amendment is rejected and that we will not require care. A doctor be paid on the basis of a fee, but that payment be on a per capita basis. Then, we can move toward prepayment and preventive medicine and toward encouraging group practice on a voluntary basis.
Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.
Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nebraska.
The amendment was rejected.
AMENDMENT NO. 1115
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1115 which is at the desk, and ask that it be stated.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.
The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, so ordered: and, without objection, the amendment will be printed in the RECORD.
The amendment, ordered to be printed in the RECORD, is as follows:
"The title of section 121 of the bill is amended by deleting the following and inserting in lieu thereof:
"(b) Title II of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:
""AUTOMATIC ADJUSTMENT OF THE CONTRIBU-TION AND BENEFIT BASE"
""Sec. 230. (a) On or before August 15 of 1972 and each year thereafter, the Secretary shall determine and publish in the Federal Register the contribution and benefit base (as defined in subsection (b)) for the first calendar year following the year in which the determination is made.
""(b) The contribution and benefit base for a particular calendar year shall be whichever of the following:
"1. The product of $5,000 and the ratio of
(A) the average taxable wages of all persons for whom taxable wages were reported to the Secretary for the first calendar quarter of the calendar year immediately preceding the year in which a determination under subsection (a) is made for such particular calendar year to (B) the average of the taxable wages of all persons for whom taxable wages were reported to the Secretary for the first calendar quarter of 1970, with such product, if not a multiple of $500, being rounded to the next higher multiple of $500 where such product is a multiple of $150 but not of $500 and to the nearest multiple of $500 in any other case; or
"2. The contribution and benefit base for the calendar year preceding such particular calendar year.
"The Secretary determining the provisions of subsection (a) and (b), the contribution and benefit base provided by such subsections with respect to a particular calendar year shall be effective as provided in such subsections—
"(1) if in the calendar year in which the determination (required by subsection (a)) is made a law has been enacted which provides for (I) a general increase in the primary insurance, or (ii) an increase in the taxable wage base and originization income under the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, or (iii) an increase in the benefit increase is effective.
"Sec. 3. Section 131 of the bill is further amended by adding at the end thereof the
following:
"(e) each year in which the Secretary determines—
"(1) under section 215(i) (2) (A) (a) of the Social Security Act, that a cost-of-living benefit increase is required, effective for the following January, of
"(2) unless a benefit increase, as produced in section 215(i) of such Act, is also to be effective for such year.
"Sec. 3. Section 131 of the bill is amended further by adding at the end thereof the following:
"(b) each year in which the Secretary determines—
"(1) under section 215(i) (3) of the Social Security Act, that a cost-of-living benefit increase is required, effective for
the following January, of
"(2) unless a benefit increase, as produced in section 215(i) of such Act, is also to be effective for such year.
The social security tax system is a regressive system and it gets tougher and tougher for working man. That is why in committee I supported an amendment which would begin now to shift a portion of increased social security benefits out of social security. But that امةment was not agreed to, but I think eventually it will be agreed to, and it will have to be agreed to because I think we must have a point in the social security tax rate. The burden has be-time to become a great burden for the working man. Feeling that way, I offered an amendment which would have ficial portion of income increase in the bill by raising the wage base to $12,000. Presently the taxable wage base under the committee bill would stop at $9,000. Anyone making more than $9,000 a year would not pay any more than those who make $9,000 a year and under.

Moreover, the social security tax rate is a regressive rate because it is a flat rate and not based on graduated income, even up to the committee $9,000 wage base figure.

Every time we can we should try to make that tax rate more progressive and make that burden more evenly distributed on the basis of ability to pay, as we envisioned generally the income tax system would do. That is what this amendment would do.

The amendment does not get into the question of whether social security should be financed from general revenues, and it does not get into the question of how to raise the taxable wage base. It does provide that when cost of living increases go into effect automatically under this bill, as they would do here under either the bill adopted by the Senate Finance Committee or the House, that increase which comes about by reason of the fact that wages have gone up and the cost of living has gone up, would be financed by raising the tax- able wage base. The Senator from Oklahoma has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I should point out that the Senator from Oklahoma in so many words has suggested that we do away with the fundamental concept of social security and social insurance, and make it into a welfare plan. This regressive feature of social security is something that has existed ever since social security went on the books, and properly. Regardless of income, people put in a certain amount of tax money each year, and the employer matches it each year. As a result, contributors can look forward to the day when they will receive there annuity type tables, a series of benefits.

If the Senate wants to do away with the concept of social insurance and make social security a welfare program, it might as well do away with all social security taxes and make everything subject to the general fund in the Treasury. That argument has been made through the Senate Committees by the House, and has been consistently rejected through the years.

The Committee on Finance was very much aware of this problem. We found, upon moving from the Commissioner of Social Security, that despite the fact that there is inflation which might increase the cost of living which would warrant increases in social security benefits, it did not necessarily mean that there would have to be an increase in either the wage base or the tax rates because in inflationary periods the general level of wages rises somewhat faster than prices and the revenue increases resulting from the increased wage rates might pay for the increased cost under the automatic increase provision.

The Finance Committee reached a compromise. The compromise reached was to let the financing come half from the increased wage rates and half from an increase in tax rates. A good argument could be made for having the entire amount come from wage rate increases.

The committee arrived at a reasonable solution. It was a compromise solution. I would like to see it stay the way it is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

This amendment does not involve anything more than trying to make the automatic cost-of-living increase reflect in its financing the increased bill. We would do, the inflation in wages and in other costs, simply by raising the taxable wage base, which, under the Senate version, would be $9,000, each time it was necessary to do so in order to pay for the cost-of-living increase.

The committee proposal would raise the social security tax rates even though that was unnecessary, and even though that would, as generally would be the case, overfinance the cost-of-living increases. Normally, as the Commissioner of Social Security would testify, the normal cost-of-living increase under the bill would be paid for by the same kind of increase in the taxable wage base. It would not be necessary to increase the tax rates, which are already regressive. The taxation is already too burdensome on the ordinary taxpayer. We would not have any saving in that. That would overfinance it by and large. All that would be necessary to pay the cost of living would be to increase the taxable wage base. That is what the House bill would do. That is what my amendment, if adopted, would do.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The Senator's amendment is based on the assumption that wages will rise twice as fast as the cost of living. That assumption might be correct, and then again it might not. If the assumption does not prove true, then the committee could not be adequate financing to carry these cost-of-living increases.

Furthermore, one could make the argument that under the social security program, there is at least the least we receive by far the most. For example, in the very bill we have before us, the minimum social security benefit would be $100 a month. Of course, it stands to reason that in the future we will further increase the minimum social security benefit even more than we raise the average benefit for others. So the person at the lower average income level does get a far better buy for the money than the person in the upper brackets.

The Senator's proposal provides that these increases would not mean any tax increase for anybody except those in the highest wage brackets. They would be paying all the taxes to pay for the automatic increases in benefit levels necessary because of increases in the cost of living.

If it could well be argued as being a case of bearing down altogether too hard on the relatively few who are paying at the top rate for social security for the benefit of those who are paying at the lowest rate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 2 minutes have expired.

Mr. LONG. I yield myself 1 minute more.

It was the view of the committee that we should not permit the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, without the consent of Congress, to use the surpluses that would otherwise flow into the fund; we did not wish him to have the leverage to change the social security provisions and provide additional benefits which might not be financed. It is our judgment that, under the Senator's amendment, that could happen and that is why the things we wish to protect ourselves against.

It was the judgment of the committee that we should have an increase in the income from the social security tax to finance exactly the increased benefits that would be paid out. For Congress to pass that right, if it chose to do so, to pass additional benefits, or further liberalize the program in other ways after the committee has had the opportunity to consider the problems presented and to have the House and Senate vote on its recommendations.

Just one additional word. It was the thought of those of us on the committee that, although there might have been a benefit increase as envisioned by the bill—and as we support it in our bill—we do not feel those should be all the answer or all the additional benefits that will be voted on. It is our thought that, in all probability for the foreseeable future, we may still wish to pass a social security bill at least once every Congress to take care of the various needs that arise in addition to taking care of the cost of living, and we may wish to consider the various problems, recommendations and suggestions that can be brought to our attention by Members in both parties.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. HARRIS. I yield myself 2 minutes. First of all, let me just say again that I think the entire set of provisions adopted by the Senate Finance Committee were generally good. I think the additions the committee made with respect to keeping within its own jurisdiction the question of whether the committee would want from time to time to go further than the automatic cost-of-living increases would go are good. But I do not believe the automatic method of fiinance the rise in wages. In order for the person receiving them to be here, My amendment would provide, on an automatic basis, what has been pretty much the ad hoc action of the Congress from time to time, raising the wage base with a big hike in 1951 of $3,600. That base has been raised from time to time, as wages have gone up and the cost of living has gone up, to $7,600, and under the present bill the taxable wage base would be raised to $9,000.

That is important not only to try to get more progressiveness in the social security tax system, which, as I said, is desperately needed, but raising the taxable wage base to reflect the rise in wages is important to keep from having a deterioration in the coverage.

Wages have gone up since the wage base was fixed at $3,600, and, as the Senate and the Congress from time to time have increased the wage base to $7,600, and now it is proposed to raise it up to $9,000. If the Social Security Administrator increases the base was fixed at $3,600, and, as the Senator from Oklahoma has 2 minutes remaining, how much time do I have left to yield? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes. Mr. MILLER. Will the Senator from Louisiana yield me a minute? Mr. LONG. I yield the Senator from Iowa 1 minute. Mr. MILLER. I still believe there is a basic difference of opinion here, and that is that the Senator from Oklahoma claims this is going to overfinanced and overtaxed, and I repeat that the Finance Committee had the clear understanding that it would not do so. As a matter of fact, this was a point I raised in the committee, because I did not want overfinancing and overtaxing.

Mr. Ball told the committee we ought to have a discretionary amount, and that if there was an increase in benefits, that would not necessarily mean an increase in tax rates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 1 minute has expired. Mr. MILLER. And the Social Security Administration can compute all of that out. So I think we are clear on that point. Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. HARRIS. I reserve that. Mr. LONG. How much time remains to the opponents? The PRESIDING OFFICER. Six minutes. Mr. LONG. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Delaware. Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I hope the committee position will be sustained and the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma rejected. The committee worked out what we considered to be a very fair method of raising taxes to provide for these future increases. The raising of taxes is never popular, but if we must have them—and we must have them here—we can only try to make the tax rates as low as is possible.

The committee felt it would be better to put half of this prospective increase on the wage base and half of it on the rates. I think that would be much fairer for all taxpayers concerned, and I certainly hope that the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, with all due respect to him, with which the President adopted it will create an inequity and put all the tax burden on one group of taxpayers rather than spreading it across the board.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, in September 1969 the President sent to the Congress in a message of social security proposing his recommendations for improvements in the program were an increase in social security benefits and automatic adjustment of the benefits thereafter to the rising cost of living. I certainly hope that the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, with all due respect to him, with which the President adopted it will create an inequity and put all the tax burden on one group of taxpayers rather than spreading it across the board.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Iowa yield me a minute?

Mr. LONG. I yield the Senator from Iowa 1 minute.

Mr. MILLER. I still believe there is a basic difference of opinion here, and that is that the Senator from Oklahoma claims this is going to overfinanced and overtaxed, and I repeat that the Finance Committee had the clear understanding that it would not do so. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma has 2 minutes remaining.

The committee worked out what we considered to be a very fair method of raising taxes to provide for these future increases. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, I would simply refer Senators to the social security Commissioner and the actuaries there. The facts are that if the taxable wage base is kept up to date with rising wage levels, there will be little if any need for an increase in the tax rate to cover the cost of the automatic cost-of-living increases. I believe that, therefore, the House provision is a fairer one, more equitable for the middle men and women of this country, and I hope my amendment will be agreed to.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, in September 1969 the President sent to the Congress in a message of social security proposing his recommendations for improvements in the program were an increase in social security benefits and automatic adjustment of the benefits thereafter to the rising cost of living. I certainly hope that the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, with all due respect to him, with which the President adopted it will create an inequity and put all the tax burden on one group of taxpayers rather than spreading it across the board.
matic benefit increases can be met from additional income that results from rising earnings levels without increasing the tax rates, provided the contribution and benefit base is increased from time to time as determined by the committee bill the social security system will be increasingly overfinanced as we move into the future. A responsible Congress could not permit a situation to continue under which the long-range surplus of the social security trust funds which develops from rising wage levels would grow larger each year and at the same time the contribution and benefit base and the tax rates would be increased by the Secretary to meet the cost of the automatic benefit increases that would occur over the years. The Congress unquestionably would act to take care of the surplus—either by stopping the increase in the taxable base, by lowering the tax rates, or by increasing benefit levels and or above the increase provided under the automatic provisions, or by otherwise improving the program. But to leave it to the surpluses. In fact, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare might well be promulgating a tax increase while the administration was recommending a cut in social security taxes, a ridiculous situation, as I am sure my colleagues will agree.

Second, the provision for automatic increases in the contribution and benefit base to take account of increases in wages as proposed by the administration would not delegate to the executive branch authority to levy taxes, as has been alleged. The increases in the base would be automatic and the determination of the amount of the increase would be routine on the basis of wages credited to social security wage records. The committee bill, on the other hand, would delegate authority to levy taxes. It requires that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determine the cost of each automatic benefit increase in order to determine what increase in the contribution and benefit base to take account of increases in wages. If that determination involved not only the short-range cost but also the long-range cost, many factors involving discretionary selection of assumptions would be required, including assumptions about future mortality rates, fertility rates, the proportion of total population in employment covered by social security, the size of taxable payroll, the size of the population insured for benefits under the program, the proportion of the population that is married, the proportion of eligible people being beneficiaries, the rate of labor force participation by women, administrative expenses, and interest rates. Under the committee provision, not only would the Secretary and his staff be making estimates involving judgment in each one of the areas mentioned, as must be done for the purpose of making cost estimates, but he would be setting the tax rates for the social security program based on these judgments. We would in effect be turning over to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare the tax-setting function of the Congress.

The provision for automatic increases in the contribution and benefit base recommended by the President and approved by the House would merely carry out automatically the policy which the Congress has been following on an ad hoc basis for the past 17 years. By periodically increasing the social security contribution and benefit base so as to cover the same proportion of total payroll as had been covered earlier, when wage levels were lower. As wages have risen, the $3,600 base that became effective in 1951 has been changed by the Congress, in steps, to $7,800—more or less as it would have been under the automatic provisions.

I should mention that the base must be increased to keep up to date with rising wages not only from the standpoint of the income of the program, but to prevent a deterioration in the earnings covered by the program. For example, a job which paid $3,600 in 1950 pays around $9,000 today. If the base had not been increased over the years the benefits payable to a man in such a job would provide a major proportion of wage replacement than was provided when social security benefits first became payable and there would have been a major deterioration in the protection afforded by the program.

In the past, average wages have increased about twice as fast as the consumer price index. If the base is kept up to date with rising wage levels, as in the administration's proposal, there is no need for any increase in the tax rates to cover the cost of the automatic cost-of-living increases.

I, therefore, wish to urge that amendment No. 1115, offered by Senator Harris, be adopted. This amendment would bring the committee bill back in line with the President's proposal for automatic adjustment of benefits and the contribution and benefit base. Under the Harris amendment, as under the administration's proposal, the contribution and benefit base would rise automatically as wages rise. In each year in which the Secretary finds that cost-of-living benefit increase or an increase in the contribution and benefit base is to be effective for the following year, the Secretary would be required to report to the Congress the amounts so determined. He would also indicate whether, according to the actuarial estimates published in the annual report of the board of trustees on the previous March 1, the proposed increase in the base would be sufficient, or more or less than sufficient, to cover the long-range cost of the automatic increase in the benefits. He would have no authority to promulgate any increase other than that dictated by the increase in wages.

The Harris amendment would not change the provision in the committee bill under which the automatic provisions would not take effect if, before the year in which the increases were to be effective a bill had been enacted that would either increase social security benefit levels or revise the schedule of income tax rates on the contribution and benefit base. The automatic adjustment provision, therefore, takes nothing from the power of the Congress. It does serve as a backup to assure that social security beneficiaries will be protected from the ravages of inflation. And with the notification by the Secretary being required by August 15, the Congress would have ample time to intervene if, for example, a promulgated increase in the base was higher than necessary to cover the cost-of-living increase in the benefits, or if the Congress wished to provide a benefit increase that was higher than that provided under the automatic provision. Under such a provision there would be no delegation of function from the Congress to the executive branch.

I urge all of you to join me in supporting this amendment, an amendment that the Senate from Alabama (Mr. Fullbright), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Gore), the Senator from Alaska (Mr. Gravel), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Hart), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hatfield), the Senator from Maine (Mr. Muskie), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Pastore), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Russell), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Symington), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Tydings) and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Young) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Pastore) would vote "nay."

Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Hfunctions) the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Inouye), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. McCarthy), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. McClellan), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Young), the Senator from California (Mr. Montoya), the Senator from Maine (Mr. Muskie), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Pastore), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Russell), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Symington), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Tydings) and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Young) are necessarily absent.

would vote "yea" and the Senator from Texas would vote "nay."

On this vote, the Senator from Oregon (Mr. Hatfield) is paired with the Senator from Texas, Mr. Tower.

Mr. PROUTY. Mr. President, on behalf of myself and the distinguished junior Senator from Ohio (Mr. Sail), I send to the desk an amendment and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Packwood). The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment. Mr. PROUTY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Packwood). Without objection, it is so ordered; and the amendment will be printed in the Record at this point.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

"At the end of the bill, insert the following new title:

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I would like to propose a unanimous consent amendment to table the fiscal year 1972 budget by subsection (a).
Mr. PROUTY. Mr. President, on June 18, 1968, I introduced S. 3654, a bill referred to the Senate Finance Committee, an early version of the Older Americans Income Assurance Act.
On March 6, 1970, I reintroduced the bill, S. 3554.
Briefly, the measure simply assures a minimum income to individuals age 65 or over of $150 per month for single individuals and $200 per month for married couples. Payment would be administered by the Social Security Administration and financed out of general revenues.
Mr. President, a 3-percent income tax surcharge is provided to raise the additional necessary revenue.
Under this proposal, more than $650 million would be gained in revenue for the States. So, in effect, this is a revenue-sharing plan as well as a guaranteed income plan for our older citizens.
Mr. President, I think it is significant that nearly every one of our 50 States is facing a serious financial crisis. President John F. Kennedy in 1961 proposed a revenue-sharing proposal over a year ago. That proposal was among the unfinished business of this Congress. It is interesting to note that adoption of my Older Americans Income Assurance Act would entail a revenue gain for each State so as to help meet the financial crisis affecting all States.
Mr. President, between 6½ and 7 million individuals over 65 years of age over would receive payments under this proposal. Upon enactment an immediate result would be that over 20 percent of those now living in poverty would be moved out of poverty and their income up to a nonpoverty level.
In addition, over 2.1 million older Americans receiving old-age assistance and welfare would in effect be taken off the welfare rolls and receive greater benefits under this proposal. For those 2.1 million senior citizens, the average individual cash gain would be $76.32 per month.
Mr. President, let me point out that an explanation of this amendment with various charts and tables has been distributed and is on the desks of all Senators at the present time.
I ask the Chair to have them reprinted in the Record following my remarks.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
Mr. PROUTY. The Older Americans Income Assurance Act will cost approximately $4½ billion a year. It is estimated that the 3 percent income tax surcharge will cover the cost of the amendment.
Mr. President, this proposal is a fair application of an income maintenance system administered by the Federal Government.
Both earned and unearned cash income received by an individual would be subtracted from $150 per month, or $1,800 per year, and the difference would be paid under the Older Americans Income Assurance Act.
Let me cite some examples:
An unmarried individual age 65 or over receives a minimum social security benefit of $64 a month. He also receives $10 a month interest on his savings in the bank. His total income is $80 a month.
Under the Older Americans Income Assurance Act he would also receive $70 a month to bring his income up to $150 a month or $1,800 a year.
Mr. President, let us examine the case of an aged couple who have a combined income of $100 a month from a private pension. That is their only income but they own a house.
Under the Older Americans Income Assurance Act, since the couple's home would not count as income because it is a nonincome producing asset, they would be entitled to receive in order to bring their annual income up to $2,400 a year.
Carrying that example one step further, suppose the couple sell their house in 1972 for $10,000. In such a situation they would be ineligible for benefits in 1972, but they could receive benefits in 1973 assuming that their income was less than $2,400.
In other words, the effect of my proposal would be to guarantee every older American a reasonable level of cash income.
I think this is extremely important. Mr. President, because for older Americans the solution to poverty is not job training or more education. The solution is simply cash income.
To date we have not solved the problem of poverty before us.
On December 16, the U.S. Department of Commerce released a report based on the recent census concerning consumer income. Among other things that report showed that in the past decade we have reduced the number living in poverty by nearly 15.2 million. However, Mr. President the reduction in the number of those under age 65 who are living in poverty came entirely from those under age 65.
For those over age 65 the number living in poverty has actually increased. Over 55 percent of the single individuals trapped by poverty are of age 65. In total, 6½ million and 7 million people age 65 or have cash incomes below the poverty threshold.
The Department of Commerce used a poverty threshold which took into account cash income from sources other than Social Security. If we use the same definition of poverty as the Department of Commerce, the number of people over age 65 to be taken from the poverty category is $1,749. For an aged couple the threshold income was $2,194.
Under my Older Americans Income Assurance Act single individuals age 65 or over would have their cash income brought up to $1,800 a year thereby removing all of them from the abject poverty category and aged couples would also be removed from poverty by bringing their income up to $2,400 a year.
On September 22, I testified before the Finance Committee urging adoption of a number of amendments. I am pleased to note that the committee saw fit to approve my amendment increasing the earnings limitation on the so-called Prouty payment. As you know, Mr. President, are approximately 640,000 individuals, now age 75 or older, receiving special benefits as a result of my amendment to the Social Security Act of 1966. That amendment provided a special payment of $35 per month for individuals not otherwise eligible for social security and who were age 72 by 1966. More than 1.5 million individuals have received that benefit which under present law is $46 per month. The other body gave the Prouty beneficiaries the same 5-percent benefit increase given regular social security recipients. Unfortunately the Finance Committee retained that 5-percent increase even though other social security recipients were given a 10-percent increase.
Mr. President, I do not want to now delay passage of this bill. I shall make equal treatment for Prouty payment beneficiaries my first task in the 92d Congress.
Finally, I am pleased to see that this bill liberalized the earnings limitation on the so-called retirement test. I had hoped that the Finance Committee would have gone along with my amendment No. 698 in fixing the earned limitation at $2,000. However, the committee's action increased this to $2,000 which is a step forward. I know that several colleagues have introduced amendments identical to my unanimous consent amendment I want to assure those Senators that I will give my full support to any amendment increasing the earnings limitation to $2,400 a year. After all this body has during the past few years passed amendments going to that figure.
Finally, I want to congratulate the committee on increasing widow's benefits from 62½ to 100 percent of the husband's death benefit for married women who were widowed before the 65th birthday of the deceased husband. This increase is simply to the benefit of nearly 6 million widows and is simply a commonsense proposal for nearly 10 years. Its adop-
EXPLANATION OF PROUTY AMENDMENT TO ASSURE A MINIMUM CASH INCOME FOR OLDER AMERICANS

BACKGROUND

On June 18, 1968, Senator Prouty introduced S. 3654, a bill referred to the Senate Finance Committee, an early version of the Older Americans Income Assurance Act.

On March 6, 1970, Prouty re-introduced his measure (S.3584).

PROVISIONS

The measure simply assures a minimum income to individuals age sixty-five or over of $150 per month ($200 for aged couples). Payments would be administered as part of the Social Security System and financed out of general revenues. A 3 percent income tax surcharge is included to raise the necessary additional revenue.

ADVANTAGES

More than $650 million would be gained revenue for the state. (See charts E and F). Between 6% and 7 million people age sixty-five or over would receive payments under the Prouty proposal.

Over 20% of those now living in poverty would be moved out of poverty as a result of payments under the Prouty Proposal.

Over 2.1 million older Americans would receive the greater benefits under the Prouty Proposal.

The measure simply assures a minimum income to individuals age sixty-five or over of $150 per month, or $1,800 per year. This effect be taken off the welfare rolls and receive the greater benefits under the Prouty Proposal.

On the average, the average individual cash gain for those now on welfare would be $78.33 per month. (See chart C).

HOW IT WORKS

Both earned and unearned cash income received by an individual would be subtracted from $150 per month, or $1,800 per year, and the difference would be paid under the Older Americans Income Assurance Act.

EXAMPLES

1. Mary Jones who is unmarried receives a minimum Social Security benefit of $80 a month. She also receives interest on her savings in the bank, $18 a month. Her total income is $98 a month.

Under the Prouty Proposal she would receive the difference between her income up to $150 a month or $1,800 a year.

2. John Smith and his wife, Mary, have a combined income of $100 a month from a private pension plan, which is their only income but they own their own house.

Under the Prouty Proposal Mr. and Mrs. Smith would be paid the difference since it is a non-income producing asset, however, they would be entitled to $100 a month under the Prouty Proposal in order to bring their annual income up to $2,400 a year.

3. If Mr. and Mrs. Smith sell their house in 1972 for $10,000 they would be ineligible for benefits that year but the next year they could receive benefits assuming that their income was less than $2,400 a year.

1 Indicates that "State share" includes some local government contributions.
Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, how much time was there?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There was 10 minutes. The Senator from Louisiana has control of the time.

Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield us 5 minutes?

Mr. SAXBE. Mr. President, the total amount involved is such that it would aid the States that are now in dire financial circumstances. It is for that reason that I joined in this amendment rather than offer the one that I have at the desk which I do not intend to call up, which would provide $155 a month to these people.

I feel that we have an obligation to see that those people who paid their social security get the insurance which they thought they were getting at the time social security became a law and before inflation took a great deal of it out from under them.

I admit that this is an advanced program, and one that I wish had more time for consideration.

I believe that it is an attempt to live up to our promises to these people and is a great help in the administration of the State's share of the great financial burdens they find themselves under which, under the original concept of social security, was never contemplated.

I believe that by adjusting this program to the other benefits which they have coming in, we will in the long run help to pay off our obligations and at the same time that money into those hands where it is not needed.

A $2,400 payment per couple today is a bare minimum for existence. I have been in the homes of those people who are trying to live on this money. Those people thought at one time that they were secure with a small amount of savings and perhaps a home that was paid for, feeling that social security would take care of them.

They now find it slipping away day by day, month by month, and year by year until they reach the point where they have no other means of support, and are public charges.
The amendment reads as follows: On page 46, line 10, strike out "$166.66%" and insert in lieu thereof "$200." On page 46, line 14, strike out "$166.66%" and insert in lieu thereof "$200." On page 46, line 21, strike out "$166.66%" and insert in lieu thereof "$200." On page 121, line 21, strike out "166.66%" and insert in lieu thereof "200%.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, would the Senator from Illinois be willing to have a time limitation on the amendment?

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I would be very happy to have 10 minutes to the side.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a time limitation of not to exceed 20 minutes, the time to be equally divided between the Senator from Illinois and the distinguished gentleman from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I should first like to commend the Finance Committee and its able chairman as well as the staff of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, who is familiar with the problem involved in people working while they are drawing social security and having a disincentive to continue to work because of an arbitrary limitation that has been placed on them.

I commend the committee on increasing the limitation. However, I think we must be realistic and say that the limitation is still much too low.

The amendment I have proposed would increase the current annual earnings limitation from $2,000, which is provided in the committee bill, to $2,400 and would do it substantially. The provision I had in my original amendment that I discussed with the committee and which I testified about would have increased substantially and would at the same time have phased it out over a period of 7 years.

I recognize that the cost involved in phasing out the earnings limitation might be exorbitant, though I think that we should do it sometime. I will continue to work toward this.

I hope that the committee will do likewise.

The amendment I originally offered was partially accepted by the House of Representatives and by the Senate Finance Committee, increasing the earnings limitation to $2,000, with a $1 for $2 reduction in earnings above $2,000, and by eliminating the former $1 for $1 reduction in earnings once a person begins making $2,880, the House and Senate committees moved in the right direction. I commend them for this. I feel we can and should go further, however, by eliminating the limitation to $2,400.

Since the social security program was originally devised to provide a floor of protection against the loss of earnings caused by a worker's retirement or disability, the so-called retirement test was established to assure that a worker had, in fact, retired. Since social security was also never intended to provide much more than a modest standard of living, an individual was expected to supplement his social security and individual savings or a private pension plan. A person is allowed to keep full social security benefits no matter how much he gets in dividends and interest from investments or savings, but he cannot keep all of his earnings once he makes more than $1,680.

All this is well and good, except that even if a person does as he should and invests as much as he can either in savings or in individual retirement plans, he cannot keep all of his earnings once he makes more than $1,680. What does a person do if all his savings have been eaten away by inflation and his retirement test is based on a plan or otherwise failed to provide his needs? All he can do is try to supplement his income by working, yet under present law, he is penalized for doing so.

I now propose in this amendment to increase the earnings limitation immediately to $2,400. While I would like to see a total elimination of the retirement test, I think we must be realistic in recognizing that this would be extremely costly if done now. It is my understanding that an immediate elimination of the "test" would cost between $2.25 and $2.50 billion in the first year, which we all recognize we could not afford.

The idea of removing the earnings limitation completely—which I feel has considerable merit—should be studied further by the Committee on Finance in 1971.

I now propose in this amendment to increase the earnings limitation immediately to $2,400. The cost of my amendment above the committee bill would be $280 million in the first year, and the "level-cost" would be $88 million at the end of the first year.

But because my amendment might also preclude the necessity for some aged persons to go on welfare, its additional cost is well worth the saving if we do it now. I think we can and should go further, and that the committee should move in this direction. I ask that we move a new amendment.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PERCY. I yield.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I commend the Senator from Illinois. This is a step forward that needs to be taken. I have an amendment at the desk which would provide for a complete elimination of the earnings limitation. Even though we did increase the amount to $2,000, we did accept an amendment which I put before the committee to eliminate the provision for keeping 50 cents of each dollar, which is currently limited to $2,700.

I commend the Senator from Illinois and hope the Senate agrees to the amendment.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me briefly?

Mr. PERCY. I yield.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that John Scales, of the staff of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, who is familiar with child care matters, be permitted in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time of the Senator from Illinois has expired.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that John Scales, of the staff of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, who is familiar with child care matters, be permitted in the Chamber.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a number of other meritorious proposals were considered by the committee. It was felt that rather than have a number of modifications of the law, each of which would cost a substantial amount, but not as much as the measure voted in committee, it would be best to vote for an across-the-board 10-percent increase. Something that could benefit every social security beneficiary. In addition, we voted for an across-the-board 10-percent increase. This is the greatest inducement in the world.

As the Senator has stated, the cost of his amendment would be $280 million in the first year, but the people involved will be encouraged to work which may well cancel out what it will cost strictly on an actuarial basis in social security benefits.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague. Not only will the Government get more money back in taxes, but the Federal Government and State and local governments will benefit by not having some of these people go on welfare, and it is much more divested to receive increases in social security and to receive adjusted earnings, rather than have the humiliating experience of accepting welfare, which, many times, is beyond the control of the recipient. I think we can and should have adequate money to meet the needs. I do not think this is a costly amendment. I think it is a humanitarian amendment.

I commend the committee for moving in this direction. I ask that we move a little further by raising the earnings limitation to $2,400. If a person received the maximum social security and earned the minimum amount, he would still be at the poverty level.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PERCY. I yield.

increase that the Senate voted earlier this year.

There are matters that I would like to vote for as I did for a number of other popular suggestions. The only problem is they all cost a lot of money and we must choose which ones would be the best way to benefit the most people involved. All factors considered, it is the judgment of the committee that the 10-percent across-the-board increase and the $100 minimum would be more meaningful to more people than the increase in earnings base that would be permissible without any reduction in social security benefits.

I regret I cannot support the proposal. The committee went about as far as we could in this area. The committee raised the limitation to $2,000 and eliminated the $1,200 limit on the $1 for $2 reduction, so that the person loses $1 for every $2 he earns until he phases out his benefit.

But he would never get to the point where he loses $1 for $1 earnings. Furthermore, the bill provides for an automatic increase in the $2,000 exemption, so that the person loses $1 for every $2 he earns until he phases out his benefit.

Furthur, the bill provides for an automatic increase in the $2,000 exemption limitation to $2,000.

There is a limitation as to how far we can go without additional financing. For that reason I hope the committee position will be sustained and that this amendment will be rejected. Perhaps it can be considered at a later time when we have more money. Right now we would have to have a substantial increase in the tax rate over and above what the bill now provides.

Mr. LONG. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. PERCY. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been yielded back, the question is on an amendment offered by Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY). On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON) and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. BURDICK), the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CHURCH), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. MCINTYRE), and the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. MONTOYA), the Senator from Maine (Mr. MUSKIE), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PASTORE), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. RUSSELL), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. SYMINGTON), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. TYdings), the Senator from Texas (Mr. YARBAUGH), and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. YOUNG) are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. DOMINICK) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDY) are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona (Mr. Goldwater) is absent on official business.

The Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. SAXE), and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. YOUNG) are necessarily absent.

If present and voting, the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. FONG), the Senator from New York (Mr. GOODSELL), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD), the Senator from California (Mr. PHILPETH), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNDY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) would each vote "aye."

[No. 449 Leg.]
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to a time limitation of 5 minutes for each side? Mr. JAVITS, Mr. President, reserving the right to object. Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. President, I withdraw the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is withdrawn.

Mr. JAVITS. No, Mr. President, I wish to accept it.

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is all right, but we have to get on, and I do not want to argue, so I withdraw the request.

Mr. JAVITS. May I suggest to the leader that I yield to the Senator from Illinois without losing my right to the floor, which I will be glad to do.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may yield to the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Percy) without losing my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from New York asked that he be recognized after the amendments of the Senator from Illinois. Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, does this cover both amendments?

Mr. JAVITS. Yes; that is satisfactory.

Mr. PERCY. Five minutes a side on each amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I object. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senate will be in order. The pending business is the amendment of the Senator from Illinois. The Senator from New York yields to the Senator from Illinois to offer his amendment and that amendment has been read. There was objection to the unanimous consent request. The Senator from Illinois may withdraw his amendment, but it is the pending business.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois yield to me for a question?

Mr. PERCY. I am happy to yield.

Mr. LONG. I would like to ask if the Senator is offering his amendment that has to do with relative responsibility for blind persons, because if it does, we are willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. PERCY. Yes; that is the first amendment, and I am gratified at the indication that the committee chairman is accepting it.

RELATIVE RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. President, I would like to call up my amendment No. 1151 to H. R. 17590 which removes discriminatory provisions of the Social Security Act applying to blind and permanently and totally disabled persons.

At present, title XIX of the Social Security Act—medicaid—in determining eligibility for the extent of medical assistance payments to individuals, states that "the financial responsibility of any individual for any applicant or recipient of assistance under the act should not be considered unless such applicant or recipient is such individual's spouse or such individual's child who is under age 21; or is blind or permanently disabled.

The amendments made by the preceding section of this section shall take effect on January 1, 1971.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to a time limitation of 5 minutes for each side?

Mr. JAVITS. May I suggest to the leader that I yield to the Senator from Illinois without losing my right to the floor, which I will be glad to do.

Mr. PERCY. Yes, that is the first amendment, and I am gratified at the indication that the committee chairman is accepting it.

RELATIVE RESPONSIBILITY

Mr. President, I would like to call up my amendment No. 1151 to H. R. 17590 which removes discriminatory provisions of the Social Security Act applying to blind and permanently and totally disabled persons.

At present, title XIX of the Social Security Act—medicaid—in determining eligibility for the extent of medical assistance payments to individuals, states that "the financial responsibility of any individual for any applicant or recipient of assistance under the act should not be considered unless such applicant or recipient is such individual's spouse or such individual's child who is under age 21; or is blind or permanently disabled.

Titles 2 and XV—grants to States for Aid to the Blind; and Grants to States for Aid to Disabled, Blind or Disabled Blind Individuals—also have the effect of allowing States the latitude to set up "relative responsibility" regulations. In other words, blind or permanently and totally disabled persons must, in many cases, undergo the humiliating, degrading experience of proving to the State that their parents lack the financial means, or the willingness, to meet their medical—or other—needs.

Nondisabled, needy adults are not subjected to this humiliating experience. Only the blind and otherwise disabled—of whom there are about 82,000 and 600,000, respectively, in the United States—are expected to provide for their parents.

In most cases, when the parents or relatives of adult blind or disabled children are able to offer assistance, they do so willingly. When the parents are not in a position to offer assistance, what is the point of allowing States to say to a blind or disabled individual: 'Your parents are responsible for your needs, but since they will not provide them, we will not either.' This makes no sense at all in my opinion.

When one considers the hardships caused by blindness, and other disabilities, and the courage and self-confidence necessary to overcome handicaps so as to function in a dynamic society, it seems even more unfortunate that we insist on these humiliating, painful, and unnecessary experiences before qualifying for assistance they might need. The sense of independence and self-respect that a blind adult can acquire by knowing he is no longer a burden to his family may make a significant impact on his level of aspiration and ability to move forward into real independence, the ability to perform successfully and to be a contributing member of society is a necessary foundation for the self-respect of a young blind or disabled adult. As he becomes no longer a burden to his family, the essential love and the more wholesome relationship between him and his parents can be expected to result in increased support and encouragement from them. We thus will have provided the conditions under which a seriously handicapped person can aspire to freedom and achievement and can move forward into real independence.

I, therefore, urge support for this amendment so that we can do away with this glaring inequity and discrimination against blind and disabled citizens within our society.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment (No. 1151) of the Senator from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1166.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. PERCY. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.
security law, some children who are dependent on their grandparents cannot obtain benefits based on the grandparents' earnings unless the child is adopted. If an unadopted child living with and supported by his grandparents is as deserving of social security benefits as a child who is dependent on his parents—perhaps even more deserving as grandparents very possibly would have less income and the payment of these benefits should be based on the realities of the situation.

I, therefore, urge favorable action on my amendment to permit the payment of social security benefits to the dependent grandchildren of disabled, retired, or deceased workers when it can be shown that the child is actually dependent for support upon the grandparents.

The term "child" so that benefits would be provided for a grandchild if, at the time the grandparents died or became entitled to benefits, he had been living with the grandparents for at least one-half of the full year in the case of death or disability of the grandparent, within the same year as the loss of support from the parents. In addition, it would have to be shown that the grandparent actually furnished at least one-half of the child's support during this time.

Adoption of this measure would correct an anomaly in the social security program, which would make actual dependency the criterion for payments to a grandchild.

Although this is not a major change when measured in terms of the number of people affected, it is nonetheless a major change when measured by the effect it will have on the incomes of those individuals who will qualify for benefits. According to the Social Security actuaries inform me that because only a relatively few people could be expected to qualify for benefits, adoption of the proposal would have no significant effect on the total cost of the social security program. The "level-cost" would be .01 percent of the taxable payroll. Passage of the bill would eliminate the need for taking action on about 300 private bills annually.

Mr. Chairman, if the Senator will yield, the Senator referred to an amendment of which this was a part, and we agreed to part of his amendment. Apparently the Senator feels that a problem exists between the Social Security and the pending Social Security Act.

As far as I am concerned, I am willing to take the amendment to conference, and if the conference will accept it, we are willing to agree to it.

Mr. PERSY. I am deeply gratified at this indication by the committee chairman.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment (No. 1169) of the Senator from Illinois. "Amendment no. 1169 is as follows:

PRIVATE PENSION BENEFITS THAT DECREASE BECAUSE OF SOCIAL SECURITY INCREASES"

SEC. 614. (a) Section 409 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to deductions for contributions of an employer to an employee's trust or annuity plan, etc.) is amended by adding to the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Pension, etc. Plans Correlated With Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Benefits.—If contributions are paid by an employer to a stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing or annuity plan designed to provide benefits upon retirement, and, the amount of the benefit payment or payments to an individual who is entitled to such benefits is increased under the plan from any period after December 31, 1970, is reduced, in whole or in part, by reason of an increase in the amount of the Social Security Act, then the total amount deductible under this section with respect to contribution made by the employer to the plan for the taxable year in which the period described in this section shall, under regulations of the Secretary or his delegate, be reduced, by an amount (which shall not be in excess of the total of the amount otherwise deductible) equal to the net decrease in payments to all individuals under the plan, by reason of such increase during such taxable year."

(b) The amendment made by this section shall apply with respect to taxable years of employers contributing to such stock bonus, pension, profit-sharing or annuity plans beginning on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert the following in the Record:

"Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I wish to inform the majority leader that I would be willing to debate this amendment for, say, 20 minutes."

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a time limitation of 40 minutes on the pending amendment, the time to be equally divided between the Senator from New York and the manager of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I can dispose of this amendment quite quickly.

The purpose of this amendment is to prevent private pension plans which are correlated with social security benefits, from charging the beneficiaries with the increased social security benefit which they are going to receive in this and in succeeding increases by water down the private pension benefits which they are.

Last week, I had word from the Treasury Department by letter dated December 16, which I read to the Senate, that it appreciated the equity of this amendment, and that under the Social Security Act it was going to do exactly what this amendment calls for. They end their letter, which is in the Record of December 22, and signed by John S. Nolan, a Deputy Assistant Secretary, with this statement:

"In light of the foregoing, I believe that the amendment you have proposed to the pending Social Security bill is unnecessary. As you may have been informed, we have submitted to the Office of Management and Budget, a proposed report opposing the amendment.

Moreover, they stated in this letter that they have changed their position from the position taken on this matter on April 28, 1967, in a letter which they addressed to Senator Randkly, who was then chairman of the Subcommittee on Employment and Retirement Income of the Senate Special Committee on the Aged.

This was the record until late last week, when I read from the press that in a statement made to a newspaper reporter, they qualified their position by saying they were going to defer the application of their ruling until December 31, 1971.

We checked back with the Treasury Department and found that what appeared in the newspaper article was so, that they really had made that representation, although they had written me about a week before that my amendment was unnecessary because they were going to do this themselves.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Treasury Department letter of December 16 and the newspaper article I had referred to, be inserted in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the letter and article were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Hon. Jacob J. Javits, D.C., Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Javits: This is in reply to the request of Mr. Gordon of your office for the present position of the Treasury Department concerning the effect of increases in

December 28, 1970

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
Social Security benefits upon benefits paid to retired employees under so-called offset plans.

Revenue Rulings 69-4 and 69-5, copies of which are attached to this Social Security report, provide specific rules for determining whether a pension, annuity, profit-sharing or stock bonus plan is properly integrated with Social Security benefits. Section 21256 of the Social Security Act (as revised by Revenue Ruling 69-4) provides that an offset plan (i.e., a plan under which an employee's retirement benefit is reduced by a stated percentage of his Social Security benefit) is properly integrated only if the rate at which the offset is computed does not exceed (1) $3\frac{1}{2}$ percent, if the offset is computed on the basis of the benefit which the employee is or would upon application be entitled under the Social Security Act as in effect at the time at which the offset is first applied. Thus, increases in Social Security benefits cannot result in an increase of the amount of the Social Security offset. This represents a change from the position in former Assistant Secretary Sulzer's letter of April 28, 1967, to the Honorable Jennings Randolph, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee on Education and Retirement Incomes of the Senate Special Committee on Aging.

But Javits took to the floor yesterday to introduce an amendment to the pending Social Security bill to stop the practice. He said the bill was troubled by complaints after last year's substantial Social Security increases that private pension plan benefits were being watered down as a result.

So I think that the fair thing to do, under the circumstances, the chairman could see his way clear to take the amendment to conference and unravel it there. The best we have been able to get from the Treasury Department is the regulations had been revised to limit such offsets to amounts based on 1968 Social Security rates or those in effect at the time the reduction is first applied.

"This represents a change from the position in former Assistant Secretary Sulzer's letter of April 28, 1967, to the Honorable Jennings Randolph, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee on Education and Retirement Incomes of the Senate Special Committee on Aging."

Mr. JAVITS. This indicates that we cannot rely upon the Treasury Department's regulations or its interpretations of its regulations; but if we wish to act on this matter—and they, themselves, have admitted its equity—we have to act on it by legislation.

It seems to me, in all honesty and under the conditions we face, that we are in this situation: I am compelled, by the fact that we are driving through to the conclusion of this bill, to bring up this amendment even though I have not been able to get an answer in writing from the Treasury Department as to the reasons for this change in the position they previously took; that the amendment is not adequately expressed their view or that they have not found something in their regulations that causes them to change their view.

There is no question about the equity involved—that, insofar as the pensioner is concerned, if an increase in social security will leave him no better off, because his private pension income will be correspondingly reduced. We give it to him with one hand, and sucker-punch pension plans take it away with the other.

The Treasury Department has the ability, under the tax law, to deal with this, because they determine what is deductible income tax purposes so far as pension contributions are concerned.

So I think that the fair thing to do would be to take this amendment to conference and unravel the situation. The Treasury said on December 16, 1970, that it is the right thing to do, that they are going to do it, and that my amendment is unnecessary. Within a week, they backtrack to reduce the force of their letter, or to reduce the fine-quarter-tick. That is our own estimate. That is what it results in.

I believe, therefore, that since this is a very equitable matter—as they, themselves, have recognized—we should, at least long, enact into law the substance of the Treasury Department position as originally expressed, and have our own conferees—who I am sure will feel as solicitous as I do about retirees who have both forms of coverage, both private and public, so that we can—work it out in a way which would be equitable and fair, especially in view of the fact that the Treasury Department itself has conceded the main point.

Mr. LONG. I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. President, if the amendment is such that the Treasury Department was willing to agree to, but then retracted it after the Senate withdrew its amendment, it presents some problems. Unfortunately for those of us on the committee, we were aware of the fact that the Senator had offered the proposal and also that he had withdrawn it, and therefore our staff, being busy with other matters involving this bill, simply studied it no further.

If the Senate wishes to do so, it would be all right with the Senator from Louisiana to take the matter to conference. I am frank to tell the Senator that this may prove to be one of those complicated areas in which the clock will run out on us if we backtrack to reduce the force of our amendment and therefore our staff, being busy with other matters involving this bill, simply studied it no further.

that understanding I would agree to take it to conference, but I do not want the Senator to think we are accepting this amendment and that it can be worked out that easily.

Mr. JAVITS. If the Senator will check back on my presentation of the matter first, which I did on December 1, in putting the amendment into the committee, I made it very clear that not many plans were involved. See Congressional Record, December 1, 1970, at S19078. We have the hearings of the Subcommittee on Fiscal Policy of the Joint Economic Committee on that subject. So it is not a very dense problem in terms of the number of plans involved. The other point, which is critically important, is this: Nobody has a right, in any pension plan, to figure on social security increases to the retiree.

Mr. COOK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. COOK. For the life of me, I cannot see why this should be very difficult, even in conference. I do not see how in the world a corporation can build into a pension plan the actuarial science of contemplating what social security increases will be in the future and say to an employee who pays into a pension program for 30 years, "You will receive $200 a month based on the fact that you get x number of dollars in the pension plan, to figure on social security increases to the retiree."

Mr. JAVITS. It is nothing but a windfall proposition. The Treasury recognizes that, but first they told us it was being figured as the employer and payments being made by the employee. The employee receives $200 a month, and therefore he believes he is entitled to $200 a month. That is all I argue.

Mr. JAVITS. The Railroad Retirement Act is not a Government program like social security. I am dealing only with a private pension fund and not at all with the Railroad Retirement Act. It will have no effect on railroad retirement.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Except that the railroad retirement is not a Government insurance plan; the Government is only the trustee. The plan is financed in its entirety by millions of railroad workers, with the railroad paying as the employer and payments being made by the employee. The employee gets x number of dollars in the pension, of which social security is a part. That is the theory of the Railroad Retirement Act.

Mr. JAVITS. The distinguished Senator must know that it does not qualify under the terms of my amendment as a private pension plan. That is all I am arguing. I do not want to get it confused with railroad retirement to which my amendment does not apply. That is admitted, the fact that my amendment covers only private pension plans and does not affect railroad retirement at all. That is all I argue.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. The precedent we establish would apply to the Railroad Retirement Act. I have heretofore argued this position from the point of view of the Railroad Retirement Act, unsuccessfully. I might say, in the committee, but I know that when we open this up we will be opening up Pandora's box, with a great many problems involving numerous private pension plans.

Mr. JAVITS. The Senator is stretching the rubber band a long way when he says it will be a precedent. I am confirming this amendment to private pension plans. Private pension planners should not have the benefit of this windfall. That is all I argue.

Mr. COOK. Is it conceivable, if social security goes high enough, that an individual could pay into a private pension plan for the entire years of his employment and conceivably receive nothing out of it, if in fact this type of downward escalation were to continue to prevail?

Mr. JAVITS. Without any question, that is exactly what could happen; and that is exactly what we are trying to forestall.

Mr. President, I know that a rollo call vote could be had on this amendment, but I am sure of the good faith on the part of the chairman and the conferees as to what will happen and so I am willing to have the amendment subjected to a voice vote.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. JAVITS. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. Packwood). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1155

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1155 and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and the amendment will be printed in the Record at this point.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

Mr. LONG. The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that time on the pending amendment be limited to one-half hour to be equally divided between the author of the amendment and the manager of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HARTKE. Mr. President, I rise in support of H.R. 17550. I support wholeheartedly the many much-needed improvements contained in this bill—in particular, the $100 minimum benefit and the provision calling for automatic increases in social security benefits as the cost of living goes up. The provision to adjust social security benefits automatically will make certain that retired workers, disabled workers, and their dependents and survivors will never again bear the brunt of inflation. But adjusting benefits automatically to take account of increases in the cost of living is small comfort to the people dependent on social security if benefits are inadequate to start with. The provision in the bill that would increase benefit amounts for 1971 by 10 percent is a step in the right direction—but only a step. A 10-percent increase is not enough. We must do more.

We have an obligation to make benefit amounts provide true economic security for all beneficiaries.

I, therefore, propose that we revise the bill so as to increase social security cash benefits, not by 10 percent, but by 20 percent.

The need to substantially raise the general level of social security benefits becomes very clear to anyone who looks at the benefits that would be provided under the committee bill and considers the fact that most social security beneficiaries have very little in the way of continuing income other than their social security. For almost all beneficiaries, social security is the main source of continuing income and for about half the beneficiaries social security is virtually the only source of continuing income.

Monthly benefits for retired workers now on the social security rolls who began to draw benefits at age 65 or later average $118; with the 10-percent increase, together with the other benefit improvements provided in the bill, the average would be $136—$4.50 per day. With a 20-percent benefit increase alone—taking no account of the other improvements—the average monthly benefit for retired workers would be raised to $141.60. With a 20-percent benefit increase, the benefit amount payable to workers with average monthly earnings of $650, the highest possible under present law, would be increased from $250.70 to $300.90. For a survivor family consisting of a widow and two or more children getting benefits on the basis of $650 of average monthly earnings, total monthly benefits of $526.60 would be payable instead of the $434.40 payable under present law.

With the 10-percent increase and the $100 minimum recommended by the committee, 12 million people would be moved out of poverty. With the 20-percent increase and $100 minimum that I am recommending, this number would increase to 1.6 million. Thus the increase in benefits provided by my amendment will increase the number of people lifted above the poverty level of $400. Surely a 20-percent benefit increase is the least we can do.

Frankly, we can do this, and the record shows that I at least am one Senator who pointed this out in 1967 when we made such a gross error as to overcharge the people $500 million on an annual level sufficient to provide for a 10-percent increase the next year without an additional penny to pay for that.

And we can do it without any additional financing in the next several years beyond what the bill now provides. All too often in the past when the Congress has made benefit improvements it has also increased the near-term social security tax rates in order to finance those benefit improvements. In my judgment it is preferable to increase the tax rates 10 or 15 years from now rather than to increase the near-term rates. Because the near-term rates have been increased by congressional action, the assets of the social security cash benefit trust funds now amount to $38 billion and under...
I think that there should continue to be un-substantially in future years. I do not believe that there should continued to be an additional increase on the assumption of work periods during the years. I am recom-Recommended. I think we can and should through a regressive tax that is not present law, the assets will increase by of a 10-percent increase on the assumption that the cost of the social security assumption to figure social security cost of the social security program. This rate of inflation. The imposition of taxes which rates imposes 'an additional tax date at the same rate that is that is used to meet the cost of operating the Gov-ternment to include provision for additional funds is unfair and unjust and unnec-ary. The imposition of taxes which serve to increase the size of trust funds is unfair and unjust and unnec-ary.
I am basing my conviction that additional financing is needed for a 20-percent-benefit increase instead of providing for a 20 percent-benefit increas suggested that wages will continue to rise in the future as they have in the past. I it is only realistic and reasonable to assume so. It is my belief that we have seriously burdened our citizens with high social security taxes in order to build up large trust funds simply because we have used a level-wage assumption to figure social security costs expressed as a percent of payroll.
If, however, my distinguished fellow colleagues cannot be convinced to move away from this extremely conservative tactic, I will remain in favor of the idea of the Government's sharing in the cost of the social security program. This idea has been advanced many times before. For example, was advanced by the Committee on Economic Security in 1935, when the social security program was being conceived. And it was again advanced both by 1938 and 1946 Advisory Councils on Social Security. A majority of foreign social security programs have provisions for Government contributions to their social insurance programs. The United States has delayed too long in financing its social security program in ways which reflect the social characteristics of this country and make it great.
The Congress has already provided for general revenue financing of certain special aspects of the program. I am reerring to hospital insurance for unin-Sure people already over age 65 in the eyears of the program and to the special payments that the Congress has provided for people age 72 and over who are not eligible for regular cash benefits.
General revenue sharing of part of the cost of the social security program would make an improved program possible without increases in the social security tax burden of those who can afford it the least. The program would continue to be contributory, with benefits related to earnings and conditioned on a specific period of past work under the system.
Yet, with provision for a general revenue sharing, the contribution base of the program could be more equitably distributed.
I do not anticipate the need for a Government contribution until further improvements in the social security program are proposed in the future. But if it is the opinion of the Senate that additional financing is needed for my pro-based increase I strongly prefer a general revenue contribution to any other method of additional financing.
I am conceding on this matter of financing because I am so strongly convinced that a 10-percent increase in benefits is totally inadequate. Because I am not willing to sacrifice a 20-percent increase on a fi-ancial point, I will modify my amendment to include provision for additional financing from general revenues.
If I can secure approval of my proposal for a 20-percent increase in pay rates rather than to provide additional financing, and if we cannot agree to allocate general revenues for that purpose, then I suggest we raise the contribution base to $12,000.
My point is that when the social security system was originally enacted, the base was $3,000, which covered 90 percent of the working force. To achieve the same percent-agewage, the program would not want for a limitation of $9,000 or $12,000, but $17,000.
As I have indicated, raising the base increases social security contributions at a slower rate than this tax is a less regressive alternative. I am told that adequate financing on the same basis that we have used in the past would be forth-along line with a combination of the base and a combined employee-employer contribution rate for cash benefits of 2 percent for 1971-74, 11 percent for 1975-79, and 12.5 percent for 1980 and thereafter.
It is my view that the cost of than they would be under present law until 1975.
In conclusion, I want to repeat my conviction that this is a good bill, and one that deserves the support of all of us.
With my amendment, however, it could be a truly significant bill—one that would have a substantial impact on the lives of 26 million Americans. I trust that we will not fail our social security benefici-caries when they need our help.
Mr. President, I ask unanimous content to have printed in the Record is a letter endorsing this proposal from the Ameri-ican Association of Retired Persons, Naional Retired Teachers Association, the National Council of Senior Citizens, Inc.
There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the Recdard, 1970.
Hon. VANCE HARTKE
Washington, D.C.
Finance Committee recommended in its report to the Senate that this benefit raise be increased by an additional 5 percent, providing for a 10 percent overall increase in benefit levels. However, this benefit raise did not take ef-fact until some months after January, 1971, and with our rapidly rising cost-of-living even the 10 percent raise would be too little, too late.
This period of spiraling inflation, at an assuming rate of 6 percent annually, has a greater and more profound effect on persions living on limited fixed incomes. It is our older and retired citizens who bear the largest share of the burden during such a period of rapid inflation.
The plain truth is that nearly one-third of more than one-fifth of our people aged 65 years of age are now living at or below the poverty level. An even more fact is that 40 percent of these people
did not become poor until they became old.
While possession of monetary resources does not necessarily guarantee happiness, the ab-ence of such resources to these millions of people, at any age level, from leading a life of dig-ity, happiness and usefulness.
We feel that fundamentally, to creating a meaningful life in old age is surpassing sufficient economic resources to these millions of old and retired workers who helped build this country and make it great.
Your Amendment to provide a 20 percent across-the-boards increase in Social Security benefits, effective January, 1971, would do much to prevent elderly persons from losing this desperate race with inflation and assure them that their financial situation will, at least,
remain relative to today's economy.
Sincerely yours,
CYRIL F. BRICKFIELD, Legislative Representative.
NATIONAL FARMERS UNION.
December 17, 1970.
Hon. VANCE HARTKE,
Chairman, Committee on Finance.
Washington, D.C.
Dear Senator Hartke: I wish to express our appreciation for your amendment to improving social security benefits. Your Amendment, providing for a 20 percent increase in Social Security benefits effective January, 1971, recognizes the immediate financial needs of millions of older and retired citizens.
While we welcome the action taken by the House of Representatives in the area of Social Security reform, the 5 percent across-the-board increase authorized by the House is far from adequate.
We were pleased to note that the Senate Finance Committee recommended in its report to the Senate that the benefit increase be increased by an additional 5 percent, providing for a 10 percent overall increase in benefit levels. However, this benefit increase did not take ef-fact until some months after January, 1971, and with our rapidly rising cost-of-living even the 10 percent raise would be too little, too late.

est share of the burden during such a period of rapid inflation.

below the poverty level. An even more fact is that 40 percent of these people
did not become poor until they became old.

We feel that fundamentally, to creating a

cient economic resources to these millions of old and retired workers who helped build this country and make it great.
Your Amendment to provide a 20 percent
across-the-

January, 1971, would do much to prevent elderly persons from losing this desperate race with inflation and assure them
that their financial situation will, at least,
remain relative to today's economy.
Sincerely yours,
The National Farmers Union is strongly in favor of increased payments under social security. We urge full support for your efforts to achieve this through a Senate floor amendment. Thank you for your important initiative.

Sincerely,

Dr. Weldon V. Barton, Assistant Director of Legislative Services.

Hon. Vance Hartke, Old Senate Office Building, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR HARTKE: We are informed that you are planning to introduce from the floor of the Senate an amendment to H.R. 17550 (Social Security Amendments of 1970) which would provide an additional ten percent across-the-board increase in the cash benefits of the Social Security program.

We are in the National Council of Senior Citizens are delighted that you are considering such an amendment and we urge you to go forward with your plans. In my letter of December 7, 1970, I quoted some of the well-known facts about the desperate plight of the great majority of elderly citizens in this country who depend, for the most part, on Social Security benefits for their livelihood. As I indicated then, the ten percent increase in benefits contemplated in the Finance Committee bill would not anywhere nearly meet the needs of these older people, nor, indeed, of the widows and other survivors in families whose breadwinners have died. Obviously the five percent increase—without any additional increase in the minimum benefit level for widows—in the House-passed bill, would fall even shorter as would any compromise between the two figures which might emerge from conference if the Senate approves only the proposed ten percent increase.

It is our understanding also that you are developing proposals for financing these increases in benefits that would maintain the actuarial integrity of the Social Security System. We believe this is a responsible position and we support you in these efforts. We in the National Council believe strongly that the most equitable way of financing such improved benefits is to make sure that any increase in the contribution and benefit base. Financing by this method avoids placing the additional burden on the younger workers in the lower and middle-wage brackets and places it where it ought to be, on those receiving the highest incomes. The Social Security tax is less regressive and more progressive. In this connection, it is interesting to recall that when the Social Security Act was first passed, the tax base of $3,000 covered the entire wage income of about 96% of all workers. To keep pace with the many other things that have been done done in the bill to help the poor, that the committee has done about as much as we could afford to do at this time. I do not think we can care to vote the large tax increases inherent in this amendment.

Does any Senator wish to yield to me?

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, I join the Senator from Louisiana in expressing the hope the Senate rejects the amendment. This could be the amendment that would sink the ship.

Congress raised social security benefits 15% in 1970. The House bill provided for a 5% percent increase, and this bill as reported by the committee carries a 10% percent increase with a $100 minimum. If that amount is doubled again we could end up with no bill at all.

I hope the amendment is rejected.

Mr. Hartke. Mr. President, I yield myself an additional 10 minutes.

I would like to point out that this same argument was made in 1967. At that time I thought we would accumulate $3 billion. It was $7 billion. We will spend more money, but even if we did not change the base, by 1975 we will accumulate $4,000,700,000 in the trust fund, which will take us to a $30 billion surplus in 1976.

If Senators have really been in the field as I have been, talking to the poor people and understanding their problems, they know that two million poor people are eligible for welfare and they do not know how to apply for welfare, and they are not getting social security.

If Senators wish to eliminate welfare they should put it on a social security basis. This is about one-fifth of the poor people of America.

I agree with the Senator from Louisiana that if we are going to concede to the House before we start to fight, I imagine we will not do very well. If we put in the 20-percent increase we will be in a better position to hold something in conference than if we started at 10 percent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. LONG. I yield back the remainder of my time.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE PROVISIONS FOR NAVAJO AND HOPI INDIANS: PUBLIC LAW 474

On April 15, President Truman approved Public Law 474, providing for the rehabilitation of Navajo and Hopi Indians. Section 9 of this law provides for increasing the Federal share of public assistance payments for needy Indians of these tribes who reside on reservations or on allotted or trust lands and who are unable to pay for old age assistance, aid to dependent children, or aid to the blind. The new law becomes effective July 1, 1950. It also provides for increased Federal assistance payments for these Indians the Federal Government will pay, in addition to its regular share under titles I, IV, and X of the Social Security Act, an additional 20 percent of the $20 payment. The Conference Report also explains the justification for the 20-percent formula: Less than 20 percent of the Navajo and Hopi Indian population speak English. The States have indicated that 10 percent of the population is non-English-speaking and would be entitled to full assistance payments. The Conference Report also explains the justification for the 20-percent formula: Less than 20 percent of the Navajo and Hopi Indian population speak English.

The accompanying table illustrates the effect of section 9 on public assistance payments to Navajo and Hopi Indians.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY

The first form (S. 1947) of the legislation providing for the Public Law 474 was introduced on March 25, 1949. Senator Hayden, Chavez, McFarland, and Anderson. Companion bills, H.R. 3476 and H.R. 3468, were introduced in the House of Representatives.

On July 7, 1949, with amendments, and passed the Senate, with some further amendments on July 14, 1949. In the Conference Committee a new provision dealing with increased Federal grants to the States for public assistance to Navajo and Hopi Indians was included in section 9. The Conference Report was accepted in both the Senate and the Senate on October 10, 1949, with amendments, and passed the House. Amendments were made in the Senate on October 10, 1949.

The Senate deleted the provisions of the bill to which the President objected and passed the bill on October 29, 1949, with amendments, on October 30, 1949, and after the veto was received. Immediate consideration of the bill in the House on October 10, 1949. The House passed the bill on February 21, 1950, with amendments, and passed the bill to which the President objected and passed the bill on October 29, 1949, with amendments, and passed the bill to which the President objected and passed the bill on October 29, 1949, with amendments.

The Conference Committee, therefore, deleted certain language from the amended section 9 and thus made the entire public assistance provision inoperative.

the Arizona State Department of Public Welfare also took a position that it would not make payments to reservation Indians. The Social Security Administration discussed the subject with the State agencies in an effort to resolve the conflict between the position they had assumed and the requirement of the Social Security Act that states must cooperate to allocate Federal assistance to all persons within the State. Discussions continued over a period of time, and the States were informed that the continued receipt of Federal funds for their public assistance programs was dependent on whether the State programs were operating in conformity with the Social Security Act. Final decisions in these hearings were made, the arrangements described in the quotations from the Report of the Senate and House of Representatives of the 64th Congress (64 Stat. 470) were used to provide for reservation Indians in these two States. It was the purpose of Pub. Law 247 to develop a plan for the citizens of New Mexico, on April 28 and 29, 1949, and assistance was provided for reservation Indians in the two States. It was the purpose of Pub. Law 187, as a model. Nevertheless, pending the implementation of the provisions of H.R. 1631 on July 1, 1971, the Department would be committed to action on the interim period for permanent effect if H.R. 1631 fails of enactment.

Cost Estimates: Senator Metcalfe's Proposal

Method for estimating number of Indian recipients and additional federal cost.

1. Number of Indian recipients

2. Estimated rate for Indians as of December 1970 by keeping the same relationships between the recipient rates for Indians and AFDC recipients.

3. Costs for Medicaid.

5. The enactment of this legislation and the social service funds.

2. The above figures and those in the table are used only as general illustrations of the assumptions for the estimates of Federal participation. Costs were based on theoretical payments. Unless there were a failure by New Mexico and Arizona to operate their plans in accordance with the provisions of the Social Security Act, a hearing was held on February 8, 1949, and assistance was provided for reservation Indians in these two States. Hopi Indians, such as the Rocky Boy Reservation Indians in Montana and the other Indians on reservations in the Montana area. Any consideration you could give to change the law to extend this aid to the Montana Indians and to increase it to include all categories of Welfare Assistance would be sincerely appreciated.

With kindest regards,

Yours very truly,

THOMAS H. MAHAN,
Claims Attorney for the State Department of Public Welfare.

Mr. MONDALE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. METCALF. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. MONDALE. I was privileged to join with the Senator from Montana in cosponsoring this proposal.

Is it not a fact that many of the same counties in which Indian reservations and large Indian populations are found, are very often, as a result of the real estate status of the land owned by the Indians, in a trust status, and therefore not taxable either for State or county purposes.

Second, if we adopt this amendment, we will recognize that we have a Federal responsibility for the Indians, and, therefore, the State responsibility will be taken over.

Some of the discrimination among Indians have arisen because of the fact that the reservation areas are not all the same. There is no Federal Government picked up the costs for two tribes, but the others.

Mr. METCALF. The Senator is correct. The fact is that in many counties a substantial amount of the land owned by Indians is in a trust status, and therefore not taxable either for State or county purposes.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I wonder if the Senator could enlighten the Senator as to how many beneficiaries would be affected, as of now, the Senator's amendment were adopted.

Mr. METCALF. I have talked about Indians. The Interior Committee's definition of an Indian is a person with one-fourth Indian blood. I do not know how many Indians in that category there are in America. In Montana there are 27,000 Indians in that category, but only about 4,000 of those 27,000 are eligible to have relief of any kind.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I mean, does the Department of the Interior or Health, Education, and Welfare know at the present time how many Indians are covered? Because, if the Federal Government picks up 80 percent of the cost, they must know what the numbers are.

Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDENT. The Senator for the District of Columbia, the entire cost, the cost to the State of Connecticut or the District of Columbia, the entire cost, 100 percent.

Mr. RIBICOFF. If the Senator is correct—

Mr. FANNIN. No; I understand. But the Senator does understand. I appreciate that.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes. I appreciate that.

Mr. METCALF. The only reservations covered are the Navajo and the Hopi reservations. They get payment of their welfare costs from the Federal Government.

Mr. RIBICOFF. If so, then the amendment would provide that the costs for all of the Indians in all of the reservations all over the United States would be paid, 100 percent.

Mr. RIBICOFF. If the Senator is correct—

Mr. FANNIN. I was just trying to help the Senator understand.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes. I appreciate that much, because I think we have a basic problem. I appreciate what the Senator is trying to do, but I think we should have the facts before us. However, we do not have the facts. Between the Interior Department and HEW, we ought to have some facts available. I think the Senator's amendment, as I understand it, covers all Indians all over the United States, regardless of whether or not they are on reservations.

Mr. METCALF. That is correct. If they are Indians and on welfare, they are going to be compensated 100 percent.

Mr. RIBICOFF. If so, that is an Indian in Washington, or in the State of Connecticut, and could be so identified, then the cost to the State of Connecticut or the District of Columbia, the entire cost, would be chargeable to the Federal Government?

Mr. METCALF. That is correct.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I think it is unfortunate that we do not have the figures. I am very sympathetic with what the Senator is trying to do, but I hope it will be adopted.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. METCALF. I am glad to yield.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I am very pleased to be a cosponsor of the amendment now offered by the distinguished Senator from Montana. He has done a great service in suggesting this amendment. I think that the problem which, as has been rightly pointed out, is a tremendous problem, and one which the Senate ought to meet. I hope the amendment will be adopted.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I yield. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. METCALF. I yield.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I wonder if the Senator could enlighten the Senate as to how the beneficiaries would be affected, as of now, the Senator's amendment were adopted.

Mr. METCALF. I have talked about Indians. The Interior Committee's definition of an Indian is a person with one-fourth Indian blood. I do not know how many Indians in that category there are in America. Mr. BYRD of West Virginia. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDENT. The Senator for the District of Columbia, the entire cost, 100 percent.

Mr. RIBICOFF. If the Senator is correct—

Mr. FANNIN. I was just trying to help the Senator understand.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Yes. I appreciate that much, because I think we have a basic problem. I appreciate what the Senator is trying to do, but I think we should have the facts before us. However, we do not have the facts. Between the Interior Department and HEW, we ought to have some facts available. Mr. METCALF. That is correct.

Mr. RIBICOFF. I think it is unfortunate that we do not have the figures. I am very sympathetic with what the Senator is trying to do, but I hope it will be adopted.
Mr. RIBICOFF. But if an Indian lives in the State of Connecticut and receives welfare—

Mr. METCALF. And is on welfare.

Mr. RIBICOFF. He would be receiving welfare on the same basis as any other resident of the State of Connecticut would, and the State of Connecticut would contribute its 50 percent and the Federal Government its 50 percent. What happens in the State of Montana? Do not the State of Montana, the State of Arizona, the State of Washington, and the State of Utah treat the Indians the same as they do every other person who may be indigent and on welfare in their respective States?

Mr. METCALF. Except for the Navahos and the Hopis.

Mr. FANNIN. If the Senator will yield, I am very concerned about the welfare of the Indian and would like to clarify this difference between these programs. From the standpoint of the reservation Indian, we have a different program than we have as far as the nonreservation Indian is concerned. I am going to do that, and a whole generation has gone by, we have failed to take care of the welfare of these Indians that have moved to Los Angeles, or the State of Illinois take care of those Indians that we have moved to Chicago, when we have a responsibility to take care of these welfare Indians, on the reservation or off the reservation?

I can remember a generation ago, in 1937, when I was in the Legislature of the State of Montana, we had the Indian coming down to us from so-called Hill 57, asking for welfare. They asked for appropriations and they asked for help. We gave it to them. And that, and a whole generation has gone by. We have failed to take care of the welfare and we have failed to provide opportunities for these Indians. So the same problem continues, a generation later.

This is what I am trying to do: I am trying to say that the Federal Government should assume its responsibility for its wards, and that if they are on welfare, wherever they are, we will pay the welfare.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. METCALF. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. May I say, in support of the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague, of which I am a cosponsor, that when he used the word "ward," I think he told the whole story. The Indian is a ward, and a ward is a very special position in American society. They are a minority group about which we have forgotten a great deal, from whom we have taken a great deal, who are the subjects of dire poverty in their reservations as well as in the large cities.

I think that this is doing no more than what is just for these people, from whom we took this country, who have received so little consideration, and who should be given a good deal more in the way of compensation than they have received up to this time. I think we can forget the sympathy and the figures and the numbers and recognize a reality and face up to it.

Mr. RIBICOFF. There is no question that what the majority leader says is true, that all of the minority groups, the Indians are lowest in the scale, whether it is welfare, social security—

Mr. METCALF. Income.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Lower than the blacks, the Mexicans, the Spanish-speaking, any group in American society that we can name. That is the direct responsibility of the Federal Government.

Mr. LONG. As the Senators have pointed out, a program of discrimination is involved here, and I would be willing to agree to the amendment and ask whether we can work it out with the House in conference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, this amendment is very simple. It is one that I had printed and ready to offer prior to the submission of amendment No. 1150 by Senator Percy. I had the amendment adopted by an overwhelming vote of 52 to 9. Senator Percy's amendment proposed a work exemption of $2,400 prior to the loss of social security benefits. My amendment No. 1150 proposes an exemption of $2,500 prior to loss of benefits under the social security provisions.

I am sure that in view of the overwhelming vote of 52 to 9 that occurred on the Percy amendment—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair interrupts the Senator to state that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. CANNON. The amendment is not in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is not in order.

Mr. CANNON. I was going to withdraw it, anyway, in view of the fact that the amendment had been adopted. But I did say that I would have a certain measure of sympathy. I am sorry that the time limitation on the previous amendment had not been used up, and this amendment therefore occurred at an earlier time than was intended. Otherwise, I would have proposed mine as a substitute.

However, I am sure that the Senate would not want to begrudge the recipients of social security the opportunity to earn another $100 per year before losing their social security benefits. I regret that it is not possible to give them the opportunity to earn $2,500 per year before losing the social security benefits, in view of the high cost of living and the increasing cost, due to the inflation that has been taking place in this country during the past 2 years.

Mr. COOK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARTKE). The Senator will state it.

Mr. COOK. If the Senator were to submit this amendment as an amendment to another section of the bill, other than the section which has already been amended, would the amendment then be in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the amendment amends a part of the bill which has not previously been amended, then the amendment would be in order.

Mr. COOK. I thank the Chair.

Mr. CANNON. I thank the Senator. I will see if I can find a spot it.

AMENDMENT NO. 1130

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1130.

The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and, without objection, the amendment will be printed in the Record.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 46, line 10, strike out "$166.66" and insert in lieu thereof "$208.33″.

On page 46, line 14, strike out "$166.66″ and insert in lieu thereof "$208.33″.

On page 46, line 21, strike out "$166.66″ and insert in lieu thereof "$208.33″.

On page 46, line 21, strike out "$166.66″ and insert in lieu thereof "$208.33″.

The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and, without object, the amendment will be printed in the Record.

The amendment is as follows:

"(c) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 2(a)(10), 1002(a)(8), 1402(a)(8), and 1602(a)(13) and (14) of the Social Security Act, in determining the need for aid or assistance under a State plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI of such Act, shall disregard (and the plan shall be required to disregard) any social security payments when social security payments are increased. Over a period of time we hope that the relatively small number of our aged who are now required to seek public assistance will be reduced, because our social security program is intended ultimately to eliminate that need.

The committee bill we have here has more or less split the difference. The committee did not try to say that the various Social Security Administration amendments would provide enough social security increases so that if a person receives a social security increase, let us say, of $15 or $20, he would be able to keep most of it, although there may be some reduction in his welfare payments.

The Senator would try to see that there would be no reduction in the welfare payments. If we are going to do that, it would result in the situation that, because the welfare payments would never be taken people off the welfare rolls. They would just stay there receiving the same amount of welfare, no matter how much we raised social security payments.

In that regard, I think the amendment would create an even greater problem, because we would be committed in the future to the proposition that when we voted for social security increases the welfare payments people were receiving would not be reduced.

To do so would mean that even if we would provide enough social security benefits so that recipients really did not need welfare any further, we would still be paying it.

I think the Senator's amendment goes too far. The committee has gone about as far as it could towards achieving the objective the Senator has in mind, and, therefore, I would hope that the amendment would not be agreed to.

However, I applaud the Senator for his interest in these people.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I believe that the increases in social security benefits being proposed by the Senate are not intended to take people off welfare. They are intended to help get people in a position to maintain a standard of living that they cannot maintain today under the present social security benefits. It is indeed, unfortunate that many people on welfare are those who are drawing a minimum of the amount of social security benefits who, unfortunately, in the past, have received some small increases and, in turn, have had that taken away by the States.

In this case, here we are providing some social security increases. Some of the recipients that are entitled to those increases, even though they may be entitled to a subsistence amount from the welfare system of the State, because of the inadequate amount they are now receiving to maintain a standard of living and that, therefore, these people should not be penalized simply because they are drawing welfare compared to other people who are drawing social security.

I hope that the Senate will support this amendment and be prepared to vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. HARKHE. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 1129 and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered; and the amendment will be printed in the Record at this point.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

CHANGE IN TAX ON NON-TURBINE-POWERED AIRCRAFT

SEC. 614. (a) Section 4901(a) (2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to tax on excess poundage over two thousand five hundred pounds) is amended by striking out clause (A) and inserting in lieu thereof "(A) In the case of an aircraft (other than a turbine-engine-powered aircraft), 2 cents a pound of each pound of the maximum certificated takeoff weight in excess of 2,500 pounds, or -- (B) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall take effect July 1, 1971."

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, earlier in the year, when Congress adopted a comprehensive Airport and Airways Act, there was a provision for the licensing of aircraft which provided that there would be a registration fee of $25 per aircraft, on general aviation type aircraft, on aircraft weighing 2,500 pounds or less, and on aircraft over and above that weight there would be a poundage fee, which was paid in addition to the registration fee and was applied on a cents per pound basis.

Congress passed the act, and in implementing the provisions of the act it developed that a person who had an aircraft which weighed more than 2,500 pounds, would pay the initial $25 registration fee and then would pay the poundage fee on the entire 2,600 pounds, not on the excess poundage over and above 2,500 pounds weight.

All this made a very inequitable situation to the many general aviation aircraft owners throughout the country who, indeed, having a difficult time of it today, because there were added in the aviation fuel tax to pay for the airport and airways bill. So that we hit them with the added fuel tax on the excess poundage, and then paid the poundage fee on the other. But, in addition, we doubled the application of the registration fee for those general aviation aircraft owners who had aircraft that weighed more than 2,500 pounds.

I submit that this is clearly an inequitable situation, that it was not the intent of Congress at the time—it was certainly not in my mind when I voted on the conference committee. It certainly was not my intention that these aircraft owners be taxed twice on the weight of their aircraft.

Therefore, the amendment I have proposed today says that a man would pay a $25 registration fee on an aircraft weighing less than 2,500 pounds, and would pay the poundage on the aircraft weight only on the weight in excess of 2,500 pounds, and would not be paying twice on that weight from zero up to 2,500 pounds.

I hope that the Senate will help to correct this inequity.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. President, will my colleague from Nevada yield?

Mr. CANNON. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The category of aircraft operations for which the able Senator speaks is, of course, general aviation. In these days general aviation is not an operation using the single-engine aircraft of 20 years ago. General aviation now includes many sophisticated twin-engine planes. These newer aircraft have brought increased safety and greater comfort for passengers who are flying. It is necessary, I believe, to promote and support air taxi in the United States—services which connect with local carriers throughout the country. These operators, persons often with little financial strength, are giving real service to the mobility of the American people. They need the aid which I am proposing that this amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

I remember very well working with him at the time we were active in the Federal airports and airways bill in reference to a better break for general aviation in the taxes he pays. If agreeable with him, I would like to ask that he include me as a cosponsor of his amendment.

Mr. CANNON. I am delighted to have the Senator's support as a cosponsor of my amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, would the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. CANNON. I yield.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I wonder if he does not have any other revenue provisions on this bill that are not related to the problems of the aged or to medicare and I would, therefore, hope that the Senator might offer his amendment on some other revenue measure. For example, we have this excise tax bill which will have to be passed before we are through.

We have a number of other measures that have been brought to us in the last day or so. I have no strong objection to the Senator's amendment. However, I hope that he would not open the door to amendments that are completely non-germane to social security, public welfare, and retirement income, because to do that opens the door to Senators going to the desk and picking up bills that come over here by the dozens these days from the House, for example, that ought to be a section considered and have the benefit of a committee recommendation.

I would hope that the Senator would be willing to offer the amendment on some other revenue bill such as excise tax bill or some other bill that we will have an occasion to consider between now and the time we adjourn.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a time for the Senator to be willing to consider a time limitation of 15 minutes.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I suggest 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER: Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized for 5 minutes.

CONNECTED WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION AND SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY PAYMENTS MUST BE RAISED TO 100 PERCENT TO AVOID FAMILY HARDSHIP.

The disabled worker and family breadwinner finds that the social security benefit payments that he and his family are reduced by the amount, if any, that the total monthly benefits payable under the two programs exceed 80 percent of his average current earnings before he became disabled. This provision has created injustice among those several thousand disabled workers who know that the social security insurance they have contributed to over the years has been cut, because of receipt of workmen's compensation benefits to which they are entitled. There are innumerable individual hardships created by this arbitrary law.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in the Record a memorandum which I was privileged to present to the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and the members of that committee in connection with my prior legislative effort to amend title II of the Social Security Act to eliminate the reduction in disability insurance benefits which is presently required in the case of an individual receiving workmen's compensation.

Under present law, when a disabled worker under the age of 62 qualifies for both workmen's compensation periodic payments and social security disability benefits, the social security benefits payable to the disabled worker are reduced. The reduction is calculated on the basis that total payments under the two programs exceed 80 percent of the worker's "average current earnings" before he became disabled.

The net result is that the combined benefits equaling 80 percent of a disabled worker's average earnings are usually less than 80 percent of his level of earnings achieved at the time of disability (average about 72 percent) even though his normal expenses continue at the pre-disability level in addition to income reductions covered by workmen's compensation. The unfairness of this provision is further compounded by its application only to those persons who become eligible for disability insurance benefits after December 31, 1969. It does not apply to those who were already receiving these benefits.

An example: Father of four, age 35, disabled on the job in 1967, received a lump sum compensation of $8,700. He paid off debts, made down payment on small home. His claim for social security disability insurance benefits was denied, but he was later on appeal accepted by district court. His social security payments were drastically reduced because the five-year disablity determination was not done until 1971. As a result, the father who previously had earned $328 monthly average before disability had to apply for public welfare. As a result, the family whose income of $151.60 (from workmen's compensation) amounted to 52 percent of his pre-disability earnings during the year prior to his disabling injury.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I thank the junior Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.
Amendments of 1965. At that time, the Senate Committee on Finance reported: "It is desirable as a matter of sound principle to prevent the payment of excessive combined benefits.

Although most persons generally would agree with that statement, its application to disabled persons and families creates severe hardships and inequities in our system of laws. Very often legislative action favors certain classes or areas. But it is my belief that full payment of combined benefits to the disabled workers and their families must not be challenged on this basis. Particularly important justification for repealing Sec. 224 is the concept of the programs involved—workmen's compensation is private insurance, while social security is compulsory public insurance.

The Social Security Administration states that the total number of disabled beneficiaries (workers and dependents) whose benefits were withheld or reduced was about 61,100—out of a total of 2.5 million on the rolls. That is 2.5 percent of the total of social security beneficiaries. The higher proportion of disabled beneficiaries affected results from a change of law that any necessary reduction be applied first to dependents' benefits.

S. 21270 would eliminate the economic inequities created by Sec. 224 by allowing payment of combined benefits to a disabled worker and his family. If the change is enacted, 55,000 beneficiaries would have their social security benefits increased and 5,000 persons who presently receive no benefits would receive some benefits at once. It is my genuine hope that S. 1781 will be included in the Social Security Act Amendments of 1970.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, we have had discussions in various committees—for example, the Subcommittee on Labor of the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare—that seldom do disabled workers receive the full benefit of compensation awards. In Charleston, W. Va., recently, the Subcommittee on Labor heard witnesses testify that, although compensation cases nominally do not require the services of an attorney, in actuality those appealing such cases must share their compensation awards with lawyers.

Under the social security offset provision, a worker's average current earnings and the establishment of earnings credits are computed on the basis of: First, the average monthly earnings used for computing his social security benefits, or second, his average monthly earnings in employment or self-employment covered by social security during the 5 consecutive years of highest covered earnings after 1950, computed without regard to the worker's physical condition. Many cases in which a worker would have the combined benefits increased and 5,000 persons who presently receive no benefits would receive some benefits at once.

Mr. President, the objective of these provisions is to avoid the payment of combined social security benefits and workmen's compensation payments that would be excessive in comparison to the beneficiary's earnings before he became disabled.

I think that the matter of a sum of money is not the total consideration here. The man who has an injured spine or the man who has twisted limbs for all intents and purposes is permanently disabled. It should not be necessary for me to explain to the Members of the Senate the financial hardship to a worker and his family when the worker's combined social security disability benefits and workmen's compensation payments amount to less than he earned at the time he became disabled.

We must recognize, however, that workmen's compensation is not solely a replacement of lost earnings but is, in part, compensation for the physical loss of function for which the disabled worker might otherwise secure recompense through legal action against his employers. The present provisions are unduly restrictive on amounts and hardships for disabled workers and their families.

A worker's total disability will usually give rise to substantial expenses in addition to the family's continuing regular expenses, particularly in health care and medical expenses. Limiting the combined benefits that are payable to 80 percent of the average current earnings has in many instances caused a significant reduction in the family's living standard. The family's long-term commitments, such as mortgages and time purchases, cannot be reduced accordingly, and in some cases, long-time plans for college education, for example, are jeopardized.

A worker's average current earnings are calculated for purposes of the existing provision on the basis of his earnings over a protracted period, rather than his earnings just before disablement. There are documented cases in which a worker received substantial increases in wages or earnings in the year prior to his disability, which increased his standard of living. A worker can suffer a sharp drop in income upon disablement of the breadwinner which is significantly below 80 percent of the worker's latest earnings.

To correct these inequities, the House decided that the allowable amount of combined workmen's compensation and social security disability benefits would be increased. The House amendment would raise the combined payments allowable to 100 percent of the worker's average current earnings.

This provision was deleted by the Senate Finance Committee in consideration of the social security bill because, as stated, members of the committee felt the combined benefits to which the disabled worker is entitled might be an excessive reward for his disablement or, might somehow discourage him from entering a rehabilitation program.

Mr. President, I believe there is no certain sum of money that can adequately compensate for a broken spine, twisted or missing limbs. I believe that no workman who is a productive member of our society, regardless of the place with his disabled brother who is unable to work, with his family, must face the future with something less than pride of achievement and promising outlook.

The human spirit, I submit, can be as sorely wounded as the human body.

I strongly support our amendment which would provide that, in a case in which workmen's compensation is payable, social security disability benefits will be reduced only by the amount by which the combined payments exceed 100 percent of the worker's average current earnings just before disablement. I remind Senators—and I emphasize this point—that such a formula will not necessarily bring a worker up to his level of earnings just prior to disability. I urge my colleagues in the Senate to join in assuring that disabled workers receive fair and equitable treatment under the laws governing disability payments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, in this bill we have liberalized the eligibility for disability for welfare purposes to provide that the person is regarded as disabled if he is unable to work at gainful employment for one year of illness or disability. In other words, we have extended the eligibility for first-time workers, in the case of workmen's compensation, to include any person who is unable to work at the time he became disabled.

The Senator pointed to a situation where the person is truly totally disabled. Let us assume the person had a back injury and is never able to work again. If we extended the definition of disability, we would do that which the Senator seeks to provide assistance to disabled persons. I joined as a cosponsor of the amendment in the Senate to provide people under social security with disability. But we have two kinds of situations that develop. We have situations where people are disabled for 1 year or a year and half and after a while they overcome their disability and they are able to go to work, and we hope they do go to work.

If they are to receive as much money in disability plus workmen's compensation as they would if they went back to work, where is the incentive to go to work? They would lose those benefits if they went back to work, so the incentive would be not to go to work because the person would get as much money by not working as he would for working. In that case it would make good logic, as in the Senate provision, and as the committee sought to do, that he get only 80 percent as much in social security and disability insurance and say that the person under workmen's compensation as 80 percent of what his pay would be, hoping that the other 20-percent advantage would entice him to go to work.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. CURTIS. Will the distinguished Chairman tell me what the tax consequences are of disability benefits and workmen's compensation?

Mr. LONG. It is tax exempt; so as a practical matter, this amendment would mean, when taxes are not taken into consideration, the person who is disabled
Mr. CURTIS. What would be the situation with reference to expenses which a man would incur going to and from employment, lunch away from home, and that sort of thing? Those would be expenses that would fall on the individual who was employed, would they not?

Mr. LONG. Well, presumably, it costs him money to go to work. Those are expenses a man would incur going to work so that would come out of his wages. He had not made that argument but if that were taken into consideration, he would be worse off if he goes back to work.

If one were to take taxes into consideration and expenses in going to work, a person would be better off to continue to draw social security benefits and workmen's compensation benefits than to go to work, so if there is to be any incentive to get him back to work, the Senate will have to do at least part of what the Committee on Finance did, in trying to place the emphasis on work, hoping the person would go to work and make more than his usual wage to do a better job rather than draw the social security and disability insurance, and decline to go to work.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield my 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I think the colloquy we just heard between the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Louisiana, with all due respect, does not take into account the reality of what Social Security benefits are to be paid because he is totally disabled and is receiving what he paid for. That is the insurance he paid for. This is not some welfare program we are giving him out of the goodness of our hearts. He paid for that and he is entitled to it.

Furthermore, it leaves out the consideration that a man who has been injured and has been adjudged to be entitled to workers' compensation, but because of the fact he has been injured is not better off if he gets the same amount of money. That argument does not take into account that the man has been injured. He had pain and suffering in addition to the loss of his wages. Therefore, it is not correct to say just because he gets what is coming to him, he pays no taxes on the Social Security System, and just because he is receiving what he is entitled to under the law—workmen's compensation, not for the loss of wages but pain and suffering—that he should be held to 80 percent of what he made before. That does not make him whole. He is entitled to 100 percent, and that is what the Senator said in their bill.

Mr. President, this amendment would restore the House-passed provision relating to the reduction of social security benefits when workmen's compensation is also payable.

Under present law, social security benefits are required to be reduced when workmen's compensation is also payable and when the combined payments exceed 80 percent of average current earnings before disablement.

The House amended this provision. The House bill called for a reduction in benefits by the amount by which the combined payments under both programs exceed 100 percent of average current earnings before disability.

This amendment applies to only about 60,000 persons and would cost only about $7 million annually.

I believe a strong case can be made to restore the House language. A compelling argument—the House provision is made in the report of the Committee on Ways and Means, wherein it is stated:

Workmen's compensation is not solely a replacement of lost earnings but, in part, compensation for pain and loss of function for which the disabled worker might otherwise secure recompense through legal action against his employer. Therefore, not to be necessary to limit a worker's combined social security disability benefits and workmen's compensation payments to less than he earned before becoming disabled. Limiting the combined benefits that are payable to 80 percent of current earnings has in many instances caused a significant reduction in the family's standard of living in comparison with the level attained by the worker at the time of disablement.

The argument is sometimes made that raising the ceiling for combined workmen's compensation and social security disability benefits to 100 percent of the worker's average earnings—during the 5 years of highest earnings—may in some cases result in combined benefits that are larger than the worker's earnings before his disablement.

However, we know that as a rule a worker's wage increases year by year, and over a 5-year period the earnings at the end of the 5-year period are almost always higher than the average for the 5 years.

The argument is also made that since current earnings of a worker are taxable, and social security benefits and workmen's compensation benefits are not, that a 100-percent ceiling on combined benefits could exceed the worker's pre-disability take-home pay and thereby reduce the incentive of the worker to attempt to become rehabilitated for gainful employment.

There is no merit in this argument. Most of the workers affected by this amendment are workers in the lower income brackets who should be also already paying a relatively small. But, more importantly, a disabled worker's motivation for vocational rehabilitation is strong and would not be influenced by a small amount of additional money that might be received by a worker by reason of not having to pay taxes.

As a matter of basic fairness, a disabled worker should be entitled to 100 percent of average earnings before social security benefits to such worker also receiving workmen's compensation would be reduced.

I yield 1 minute to the Senator from West Virginia.
Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. COTTON), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. FONG), the Senator from New York (Mr. GOODELL), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD), the Senator from California (Mr. MURPHY), the Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWER) are necessarily absent.

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. DOMINICK) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNSON) are absent because of illness.

The Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDWATER) is absent on official business.

The Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. SAXBE) and the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. YOUNG) are detained on official business.

On this vote, the Senator from New York (Mr. GOODELL) is paired with the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. MUNSON). If present and voting, the Senator from New York would vote "yea" and the Senator from South Dakota would vote "nay."

On this vote, the Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD) is paired with the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. TOWER). If present and voting, the Senator from Oregon would vote "yea" and the Senator from Texas would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 20, as follows:

To the Senate, just what has been done by this last rollcall vote, Congress has just made it possible for a man who is drawing social security and unemployment combined to equal 100 percent of what he would make if he were working full time, his total wages. That sounds nice; but the fact is that if he works his earnings are taxable, and the social security and the unemployment insurance are not taxable. The net effect of what we have just done here is that a man who does not work gets about 30 percent more than if he goes back on the payroll. So we would be paying him a 30 percent premium not to go back on the payroll.

Unfortunately, this is not in conference; this is now in both bills. I just cannot understand the Senate's taking this position.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

AMENDMENT NO. 1114

such great importance that I do not see how now, at 15 minutes until 11, we could get into that, or that we could agree to a time limitation.

Mr. HARRIS. As far as I am concerned, on the first two amendments which I have listed, I would be glad to agree to a 30-minute time limitation, 15 minutes to a side. But I would prefer—it seems to me that would not hold the Senate up unduly—that they be the first order of business tomorrow, rather than go on late tonight. As I have said, there are only 66 Senators here, and I think it would be better to start on this tomorrow. I would agree to a total of an hour on both amendments, equally divided. Then we could go to the child care amendments and perhaps agree tonight that they would be the last amendments to-morrow prior to third reading.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would the Senator agree on a 30-minute limitation on the two amendments tonight? The Senator has mentioned the number 66 several times. The highest number of Senators we have had has been 69. So that indicates to me that Senators are sticking around pretty closely.

I would suggest most respectfully to the Senator from Oklahoma that as long as we have gone this far, we ought to at least go up the next two amendments and then see whether we can come to an agreement on the other two for tomorrow, if not tonight.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I want to be as agreeable as possible, and I think I have been agreeable today with respect to the other amendments that have been involved. Many amendments are not being offered by myself and others because of the press of time, although they are almost of equal importance to those which have been offered.

Perhaps we could make it part of one total agreement that we would finish up these two amendments tonight with 30 equally divided minutes to a side. But I would hope that we would not use all that time; then the only remaining time would be the time left on the child care amendments, which could be taken up tomorrow prior to third reading. Perhaps we could make that one package and thereby shorten the work of the Senate.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would the Senator agree—as I assume he will—that there be a 30-minute limitation, the time to be equally divided, under the usual procedure, that the conclusion, with no time limitation interspersed on the two remaining amendments, the Senate go to third reading on the bills, and that at that time there be an hour on the bill itself?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, let us understand this. I do not quite get it. Could we have the unanimous-consent request repeated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The understanding is that the unanimous-consent request is that on the two amendments tonight, there be 30 minutes equally divided between the proponents and the opponents; that two amendments would be offered tomorrow upon which no time limit would apply; and that there would be 1 hour after the third reading of the bill, a one-hour limit on the debate, to be equally divided.

Mr. MANSFIELD. The distinguished Senator from New York indicated that he would have a great deal of explaining to do because it covers such a wide and extensive area.

Mr. SCOTT. Let us fix the time.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield.

Mr. HOLLAND. In the proposed unanimous-consent request, is there also wording limiting the remaining amendments to the four about which we are talking?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes, indeed.

Mr. HOLLAND. I did not hear that statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unanimous-consent request is that no further amendments other than the four amendments, two to be disposed of tonight, and two to be disposed of tomorrow.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object?

Mr. MILLER. Mr. President, may I understand the Senator? I feel confident that I know what he is trying to do. Can we agree that the two amendments that are taken up for tomorrow be the amendments relating to the child care provisions in the bill?

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is my understanding.

Mr. HARRIS. That is correct.

Mr. LONG. Further, can we agree that this does not bar technical amendments which must be offered on behalf of the President?

Mr. MANSFIELD. That is perfectly acceptable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Technical amendments will be excluded.

Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, would the distinguished majority leader amend his unanimous request to include one amendment which has been printed, which I have offered?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would the Senator agree to a time limitation?

Mr. MATHIAS. Yes.

Mr. MANSFIELD. How much?

Mr. MATHIAS. Half an hour.

Mr. MANSFIELD. And a half hour on the amendment to be offered by the distinguished Senator from Maryland (Mr. Mathias).

Mr. MATHIAS. This is the amendment which involves the State taxation of interstate commerce.

Mr. MANSFIELD. The time to be equally divided, under the usual procedure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The agreement would also include one amendment to be offered by the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Mathias); a time limitation of one-half hour, 15 minutes to each side.

Mr. HARRIS. Reserving the right to object, would that amendment come up tonight?
Mr. MANSFIELD. We hope so.

Mr. GRIFFIN. Mr. President, further reserving the right to object, can we have the two amendments on which there is no time allotted identified by number?

Mr. HARRIS. Not at the present time, but I can show them to the Senator. We are in the process of getting the exact language on one. Both relate to child care, and they will be offered jointly by the distinguished Senator from New York and myself. We can give the Senator a copy of it in just a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection to the Chair hearing the Senator a copy of it in just a moment.

The unanimous consent agreement later prepared in statement form reads as follows:

Ordered, That, effective on Tuesday, December 29, 1970, during the further consideration of H.R. 17550, an Act to amend the Social Security Act, etc., the only amendments accepted technical amendments to be offered by the manager of the bill (Mr. Long), that will be in order will be two amendments on child-care to be offered jointly by the Senators from Oklahoma and New York (Mr. Harris and Mr. Javits).

Third reading of the bill will immediately follow any technical amendments and the two child-care amendments.

Ordered further, That on the question of the passage of the said bill, debate shall be limited to one hour, to be equally divided and controlled, respectively, by the majority and minority leaders, or their designees.

Mr. YARBOROUGH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. HARTKE. The Senator will state it.

Mr. YARBOROUGH. If we take the two or three amendments tomorrow, whichever it is, with the time limitation for debate on the bill, at what hour would the final vote on the bill take place?

Mr. MANSFIELD. It is difficult to say, because we do not know how much time will be consumed on the two child care amendments.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I shall not offer any objection, understand the amendment of the Senator from Maryland. Is his amendment germane to the social security bill?

Mr. MATHIAS. The amendment is to add a new section dealing with limiting the State taxation of interstate commerce.

Mr. HOLLAND. Mr. President, I thought the Senate had committed itself to consideration only of social security matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time is now under control, under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Who yields time?

Mr. HARRIS. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, the amendment which is presently before the Senate has to do with the financing of the social security benefits which, in effect, are now a part of the bill which will be adopted. Under the present provision, the increased social security benefits—that is, primarily the increase of 10 percent in social security benefits and the $100 minimum and the other improved benefits in the bill—would be financed by raising the taxable wage base to $9,000 and then by making certain increases in the tax rate itself. The amendment I offer would raise the taxable wage base to $12,000 instead of the $9,000 which the committee recommen-der ended.

It would make certain adjustments in the tax rate over time, but it has this one other counter cyclical economic aspect:

There is presently a tax rate increase written into the law. Whether this bill is passed or not, which would go into effect on January 1, 1971, raising the tax rate by 0.4 percent. The amendment I offer would increase the taxable wage base to $12,000 and then raise the tax rate by 0.4 percent tax rate increase now in the law, and then it would make certain other adjustments in the tax rate over time.

Mr. President, I think it is important to do this for two very basic reasons. One, as I have indicated earlier, I am firmly convinced that the social security tax rate represents presently a regressive tax system. It is a flat rate. It is not graduated on the basis of income. Furthermore, it is limited in the total amount of salary upon which the tax is levied.

Under the Senate bill, that would be $9,000, and therefore the average lower income worker is overburdened, and overtaxed, paying more than his fair share of social security taxes as, unfortunately, is also true under our present income tax system.

The wage base in 1951, as I said earlier, today in connection with another amendment, was $3,600. From time to time, Congress has increased that wage base until its present level is $7,900. That is $13,300, which is an adjustment for increases in wages and increases in the cost of living since the original wage base was set.

To raise the taxable wage base not only makes the social security tax system more progressive; that is, based more on the ability to pay, but also widens the coverage so that those who would receive benefits under the social security system would more nearly receive benefits, of which are in accordance with the wages they had received while earning wages.

Second, the amendment which I offer would have another important aspect and that is the economic effect of avoiding too immediate increase in the tax rate, deferring for 1 year the effective date of present law, raising tax rates by four-tenths of 1 percent.

Mr. President, this country is in a serious recession. There are millions of people who are needlessly out of work, who are needlessly out of work because of the mistaken and misguided fiscal and monetary policies which have consciously been made effective during this administration by its policies.

What we need to do now is to stimulate the private economy of the country; otherwise, I sadly fear that unemployment which now stands at 5.8 percent is going to get worse, and we will continue with a needlessly slack economy, with jobless recovery needlessly long. If on the 1st of January, at a time when we are in a recession, when the economy is down and unemployment is up, we put into effect an increase in the social security tax rate, taking out of the private economy additional millions of dollars, we will add to the recession and the slump in the economy. What we should be doing is spurring counter cyclical economic activity.

Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield me 2 minutes?

Mr. LONG. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. MILLER. The argument advanced by the Senator from Oklahoma on his pending amendment is about the same as those advanced by him in connection with an earlier amendment, which was substantially defeated by the Senate. He keeps insisting that social security taxes are regressive.

As I said earlier, everyone knows that. It has always been that way. As long as the social security system has existed, it always will be that way.

Now, if the Senator from Oklahoma does not want to have regressive taxation, he does not want to have social insurance, he wants to have welfare.

We might as well throw out the whole social security tax system, legislate the benefits, and take it all out of the general fund of the Treasury; and we can make an argument for that, too.

Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa believes that, in connection with benefits relating to the $100 minimum, there will be hundreds of millions of dollars of unfunded liability connected with such a provision. Many of these recipients will receive $100 minimum even though they have only paid a fraction in taxes necessary to support that $100 minimum. So that, if we do not take the money needed to pay for it out of the general fund of the Treasury, we will take it out of the hides of the workers and especially the ones I am concerned about, the lower paid workers trying to maintain their families and getting caught with social security taxes needed to underwrite this $100 minimum. That, to me, is not fair.

I think the way to handle this would be to take the money out of the general fund of the Treasury into which taxes are generally paid according to relative ability to pay.

If the Senator from Oklahoma was to take the money out of the general fund, I would join him in that; but that only. Because it relates to benefits that have not been funded by the social security taxes paid by the recipients.

That is a unique aspect of social security which is not social insurance. It is welfare. But if we are going to adhere to the concept of social security as being social insurance, then I think we had better understand that we are going to have an additional year the benefits each of us will be entitled to.

This is a regressive approach, but it is the necessary approach if we are going to stick with the concept of social insurance.

People do not go out and buy insurance policies and pay different premiums according to their relative income. Relative income is beside the point. This is a way to pay for insurance. I think that we should be pretty chary about changing the concept of social insurance. And that is what we will be doing if the Senator from Oklahoma's amendment is adopted.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield me 2 minutes?

Mr. LONG. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, I too rise to express my opposition to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The amendment would revise the financing of the committee bill by increasing the tax base—$7,800 under present law and $9,000 under the committee bill—$12,000 a year and by revising the schedule of taxes.

Under the committee bill, employer and employee taxes are each scheduled to be 5.2 percent and rising in a number of steps until they reach 7.6 percent for 1986 and after.

Under the committee bill, employer and employee taxes are each scheduled to be 5.2 percent next year—and this is also the rate under present law—5.5 percent in 1972 and rising in a number of steps until they reach 7.5 percent for 1985 and after.

Under this schedule, a person earning $9,000 or more will pay social security taxes of $495 in 1972 and $684 in 1986 and after.

Under Amendment No. 1114, the tax rate under the committee bill would be reduced so that in 1972 the rate would be 5.2 percent and rising in a number of steps to 7.25 percent in 1985 and after.

I would point out that the amendment in part 4.8 to 5.2 percent—which is otherwise scheduled to go into effect in January 1971, under present law. Instead of the increase in the wage base from $7,800 to $9,000, the amendment would increase the wage base to $12,000.

The amendment provides for actuarial soundness, with less of an increase in the tax rate over a period of years than recommended by the Senate committee.

The amendment is important because the committee bill and the House bill do not properly take into account the economic impact of the financing provisions. The amendment also does not take into account the presently regressive nature of the social security tax system.

Unless the rate increase is postponed, it will have a seriously dampering effect on the economy at a time when the economy is much too sluggish and unemployment too high. Stimulation of consumer demand through postponement of the presently scheduled tax rate increase and thus less need of aid from other sources would not be inflationary in my view and in the view of eminent economists such as Arthur Okun. Chairman of the Economic Advisers, and others, by serving to cause expanded production and income, allowing some reduction in unit cost.

By increasing the wage base, rather than the tax rate, the social security tax system would be made more progressive. Mr. President. I am prepared to yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma.

YEAS—24

So Mr. HARRIS' amendment No. 1114 was rejected.

* * * * *
December 28, 1970

S 21281

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, this is the last amendment for the night, as I understand it. I yield myself 5 minutes.

I refer Senators to the separate views which I filed with committee report on this bill. Under present law States are required to maintain their present financial efforts in support of medicaid and are required to build toward comprehensive medicaid programs by 1977.

The State of Missouri asked the Senate Finance Committee to pass legislation giving it a special one-time exemption from the maintenance of effort requirement under medicaid. The committee granted that special request, and my amendment would not have anything to do with that special request of the State of Missouri for the one-time provision exempting Missouri from the maintenance of effort requirement; that special provision would still remain in the bill.

But the Senate Finance Committee went far beyond the special request of the State of Missouri and simply repealed the maintenance of effort provision altogether.

The committee recommended repeal of the entire section 1902(d) of the present law, under which States are required to maintain their financial efforts under medicaid. The House of Representatives had previously stricken section 1903(e), which requires States to enact comprehensive medicaid programs by 1977.

The recommended repeal of these two provisions will become law unless the amendment which I have now offered is adopted. That would be most unfortunate. The poor people who are covered by medicaid are entitled to better medical attention and care—not less.

What we would do, unless the amendment is adopted, is to say to the States, "You do not have to build up a better and more comprehensive medicaid program by 1977, as the present law requires; you do not even have to maintain your present efforts, as the present law requires. Those requirements are stricken from the law."

What we ought to be doing here is providing better medical attention for poor people, not less. We ought not to be reducing the requirements.

If we do that, it seems to me there will be less demand for a comprehensive national health insurance program, which we should have, and for a massive increase in funds for health personnel and facilities which is desperately needed. We are going to allow health care, which is provided for in the law and is already inadequate to deteriorate further.

It just seems a shame that a matter as serious as this should come up at 11:30 at night, with not the amount of time that ought to be provided for its consideration. This is a backward step so far as health care is concerned, and I hope the Senate will not agree to it.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The Senate Committee on Finance considered this measure before, in 1969, and we recommended that something be done about the fantastic increase and enormous waste in the medicaid program. This was a program which was originally estimated to cost about $230 million more than existing expenditure levels when put into effect. It is costing about 10 times that much. Some of us have been complaining that, in the first year experience under medicare, it cost twice as much as estimated. This one is costing 10 times as much. Why is it costing so much?

We in Louisiana had the most liberal, free medical program in the United States prior to medicare. With that program we provided for all who needed medical care. On the most liberal basis, we provided medical aid to those who needed it.

Then the Federal Government provided 70 percent of the matching funds, so the Federal Government would put up $7 out of every $10, meaning that we would be required to provide 200 percent of the needs in Louisiana. The Governor of Louisiana pleaded to be permitted to save some money. Every time the State would save $1, the Federal Government would save $3. He could not do it, because it was being required to provide far more medical care than anybody could justify. He wanted to do that to save the State money. Every time the State would save $1, the Federal Government would save $3. He could not do it, because it would be against the law to save 5 cents under the program.

I helped write the law, and I apologize for it. Listen to what it says:

"Section 1903(e) of the Medicaid statute requires that each State make "a satisfactory showing that it is making efforts in the direction of broadening the scope of the care and services made available under the plan or plans in the direction of liberalizing the eligibility requirements for medical assistance."

What does that mean? Even if a State meets all the medical requirements of all the poor people of that State, it is still required to go upward and onward, broader and greater, just up and out, just keep moving to make it bigger and more expensive, and it cannot save anything.

So here comes the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Eagleton), former Lieutenant Governor of his State, to plead for Missouri, which, together with other economies, was trying to get cutbacks to save the State from fiscal disaster. He said "Will you please let us make reductions in this program to meet a very desperate situation in the fiscal affairs of the State of Missouri?" The State passed a constitutional amendment to try to raise taxes to pay for this program, but the people voted it down.

So the State is saving money, it will save money for the Federal Government. Here is California with the same problem. Texas has a parallel problem. There are problems to a lesser degree in other States.

Does it make sense to say that we have all the wisdom here in Washington? If the States are doing as much as they can and in so doing the program costs 10 times what it was estimated to cost, and they would like to make some reductions, should not the Governors be able to do so, since they have to account to their people? Should not the State Representatives, who have to run even often for U.S. Senators, be able to fix the requirements for the services? There are six basic services involved—in-patient hospital services, out-patient hospital services, skilled-nursing facility services, skilled home nursing services and others, also visits whether secured in office or hospital and home health visits.

So they have to furnish all those basic services. It is saving money, they have to account to their people.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the State does not have to provide any particular level, but just some.

Mr. LONG. I agree. Admittedly, it would be conceivable that a State could drastically reduce what it is doing to provide medical care for its aged or poor people in the State. Admittedly, that could happen.

The committee proceeded on the assumption that the State should have some power to make a mistake toward economy rather than the other way. What is the alternative offered by the Senator from Oklahoma? Ever upward and outward. Ever onward. Ever more expensive, even though there is being spoken of the fact that it was easier to cut cost, and in some respects it is virtually impossible for the States to meet their budgetary requirements.

Why should not a State be permitted to have some discretion about this matter? Why not let the States use a little of their discretion, and see if they can find where some money could be saved? Mr. President, I do not know of any reason for a requirement that they should be required to spend every, ever upward, for ever broader services. The House of Representatives has tried to provide relief in this bill, and the Senate has tried to provide relief. It seems to me that at least at some point, we ought to respect the States and those who represent the people, and let them be accountable to their people.

One more minute.

Mr. President, I was the original sponsor of these maintenance-of-effort proposals. I used to sponsor those proposals at times when I was personally offering amendments to try to get Grandpa $5 or $10 extra in his welfare check, and some Governor or some legislature would not pass it through, or would delay it a year or so, and cut it in half, and then say, "Look what we did for you." I wanted to see if, by increasing it, maybe the people would get a little extra in their checks.

But at some point, we ought to let the States have some responsibility in this area. Mr. President, in this medicare and medicaid program, we have worked mightily, and so has the House of Representatives, to try to reduce waste and eliminate a lot of extravagant expenses and costs. But I know of no way in which economy could be more effectively achieved than to stop implementing a law requiring the States to continue to broaden the programs and continue to spend more money, even though they, in their best judgments, are spending all they think they ought to spend on this.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. President, this is no way to legislate. The President of the United States has stated that he will recommend to Congress next year a reduction of health insurance program. I support another. All Senators are aware of the tremendous cost of the medicaid program and the welfare programs that States have to bear. It is not a burden we ought to bear. That is precisely what the Senate will go into next year, when we bring up the President's welfare reform bill and related amendments.

All Senators are aware of the alarmingly increasing costs of medical care. That is precisely what we will go into next year, Mr. President, in considering the President's proposals on national health insurance, and other health insurance proposals which are pending before the Senate.

But this is no way to legislate. We are taking care, in this bill, of the special care of the aged. There is a one-time basis. That is the only State that came before us and made a special presentation for relief. Mr. President, I do not think we have handled that exactly right, but it is in the bill, and I do not now quarrel with it, and I would not try to take it out or amend it out now. But, Mr. President, next year we can take up these other things.

The Senator's position and the committee position asks us to do is some- thing like that. It says, "Do away with the medicaid program. But with the adoption of the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, there would be no reduction whatsoever in these costs. The only chance that we can achieve a reduction is by maintaining the committee position. As the Senator from Louisiana points out, the medicaid program is costing now perhaps about 10 times what we were told it would cost. Let us either vote for economy or else stop talking about our concern.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 1 additional minute.

Mr. President, we would not have any cost at all under medicaid if we just did away with it altogether. What the committee position as an alternative to what we are doing is to have some discretion about this matter. Mr. President, that does not get at the rising costs of medicaid. It does not get at the need for better and increased care for old people and other covered by medicaid. All it does is to back away from the problem, saying it is costing too much, rather than doing something about such problems as the need for additional medical personnel and the shortage of medical facilities in the country now. It provides that we will say to the States, "Reduce, if you want to, what you spend for medicaid, and that will cut down the costs." That is not the way to go about the matter now, when all these matters will be before us again this very next month.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, how much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has 7 minutes.

Mr. LONG. I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. President, the Senator from Oklahoma has completed what the amendment would do. He says this amendment tells the States they not to take this backward step to reduce the quality of medical care, which is already insufficient, at this late date in this session of Congress.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield the Senator from Delaware 2 minutes.

Mr. WILLIAMS of Delaware. Mr. President, the Senator from Oklahoma points out that all Senators are concerned about the rising costs of medicaid.

I say to Senators that if you are concerned and want to do anything about these rising costs, you should accept the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, because if his amendment carries, there will be no reduction whatsoever in the medicaid program for this year, next year, or thereafter.

Under the law, we would then be in a position where whatever a State was spending last year would be a plateau. They would not be able to do anything, and they could do would be increase expenditures each year thereafter.

The committee went into this matter in detail and held hearings for several months. The reason it came here was from the House. We have done a lot of work on the rising cost of the medicaid program. But with the adoption of the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma, there would be no reduction whatsoever in these costs. The only chance that we can achieve a reduction is by maintaining the committee position. As the Senator from Louisiana points out, the medicaid program is costing now perhaps about 10 times what we were told it would cost. Let us either vote for economy or else stop talking about our concern.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 1 additional minute.

Mr. President, we would not have any cost at all under medicaid if we just did away with it altogether. What the committee position as an alternative to what we are doing is to have some discretion about this matter. Mr. President, that does not get at the rising costs of medicaid. It does not get at the need for better and increased care for old people and other covered by medicaid. All it does is to back away from the problem, saying it is costing too much, rather than doing something about such problems as the need for additional medical personnel and the shortage of medical facilities in the country now. It provides that we will say to the States, "Reduce, if you want to, what you spend for medicaid, and that will cut down the costs." That is not the way to go about the matter now, when all these matters will be before us again this very next month.
must cut. It does not tell them anything of the sort.

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator will yield, I do not believe I said that. I said that it does not tell them of the sort of ways that are being suggested to reduce expenditures, by the States reducing what they are doing.

Mr. LONG. I understood the Senator to say that this amendment tells the States they ought to cut their programs. It does not say what, but what the amendment that. Mr. HARRIS. Well, I do not believe I said that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. Mr. LONG. What the amendment does, Mr. President, is to permit the States either to spend more or spend less. The way the law reads now, the States has only one choice—to spend more, more, more. Frankly. In Georgia, the Federal Government puts up 75 cents every time Louisiana puts up 30 cents, may be required to provide somewhere between 250 percent and 300 percent of the Federal share of those people who are not indigent. You still have to broaden more. Where are you going to broaden to? Just tax your imagination. That is the way existing law reads. How they got in there I cannot imagine, because I was manager of that bill. That was the language that came to us in the House bill. I do not think the House Ways and Means Committee could have put that foolish; that provision had to be drafted by the Department and sent up here.

It says no matter how much you are doing, that is not enough; next year you have to spend more and next year you have to spend still more, and that no matter how broad your program is, next year it must be broader, ad infinitum.

So the Senate states Louisiana, in which the Federal Government puts up 75 cents every time Louisiana puts up 30 cents, may be required to provide somewhere between 250 percent and 300 percent of the Federal share of those people who are not indigent. You still have to broaden more. Where are you going to broaden to? Just tax your imagination. That is the way existing law reads. How they got in there I cannot imagine, because I was manager of that bill. That was the language that came to us in the House bill. I do not think the House Ways and Means Committee could have put that foolish; that provision had to be drafted by the Department and sent up here.

The answer to that is easy: We have made it against the law. So Louisiana could get up to $7 million, and the Federal Government would have to match that with $7 million more. That is still permissible; and if any State wants to spend more, they will get at least $7 million more. But if a State decides, "If we do that, we are already spending more than we ought to spend, to buy our savings on the program?" that is, against present law.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. TALMADGE. Does the Senator feel that the Senate has greater knowledge about the needs of the States than the combined wisdom of the 50 State legislative bodies and the 50 Governors of those States? Mr. LONG. I do not think so, and I would not think anyone to go out and tell his State legislature that—and we are often called upon to add our legislatures—that we have all knowledge here. I am sure that if we did, but matter how wise, they might be, they just do not have enough legislative wisdom to match the legislative wisdom of this body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. LONG. I yield myself 1 additional minute.

Mr. TALMADGE. Does the Senator feel that this Senate should put the combined legislatures of 50 States and 50 Governors in a straitjacket as to how they shall levy and spend their tax money?

Mr. LONG. I do not think we should.

Mr. President, there may be Senators here—I am one of the former Governors—who know more about the problems in the States and the relative demands upon the States budget than do the Governors and the legislatures of their States. But having done this kind of thing to the point of being ridiculous and having a program that exceeds estimates by 10 to 1, I would think that some area a State would be permitted to have some discretion, and I hope that would be true in this instance. This is not the first time the committee felt something should be done about this matter. We tried to do something about it last year, but we did not go far enough. We ought to at least give the States this small amount of discretion.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. HARRIS. I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. President, there are very obvious ways by which we can and should relieve the States of their increasing and difficult burdens with regard to welfare and medical care. Some, including the President of the United States, have said we should do it through revenue sharing. Some, including the President of the United States, have said that we should do it through welfare reform which takes part of the welfare burden off the States. I agree with that principle. There are ways we can ease that burden about the health care. Some, including the President of the United States, have said we ought to have some kind of national health insurance program. I agree with that, but I do not think his plan goes far enough.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. HARRIS. I yield myself 1 additional minute.

All these things are going to be before the Senate Finance Committee, and the Senate will have before it such matters as increasing medical personnel and getting at other shortages which have helped to make costs of medical care sky rocket.

The question before us is, will we, in those ways, in a reasonable manner, deliberately go about trying to solve these problems, or will we simply say, "Reduce the cost of medical care," permitting the reduction in medical services for those who need it most'? That is the question.

Several Senators: Vote! Vote!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Do the Senators yield back their time?
HARRIS’ amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT NO. 1181

Mr. PROUTY (for himself and Mr. SAXBE) proposed an amendment to the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes, which was ordered to be printed.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS
OF 1970

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Cannon). The Chair now lays before the Senate the pending business, which the clerk will state.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to its consideration.

Mr. Kennedy. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, I send to the desk on behalf of myself and Senators Javits, Mondale, and Bayh, an amendment and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 418 strike lines 20 through 24, and strike all of pages 419 through 448, and on page 449, strike lines 1 through 10.

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, the pending amendment is the first of two child care amendments which were covered by the agreement entered into last night. It would strike that section of the bill which would create a Federal Child Care Corporation. At this time, I should like to set forth, in brief, an explanation of the amendment that is before us at this time. It will be adopted by the Senate. Then I should like to yield to one of the co-sponsors of the amendment, the distinguished Senator from Indiana (Mr. Bayh), for a statement on it. There will be other Senators who will want to speak on this amendment. I shall reserve my argument-in-chief until other Senators have spoken.

Mr. President, the Federal Child Care Corporation which would be created under this bill, and which would be stricken by the pending amendment, should be stricken, in my view, and in the view of the co-sponsors of the amendment, because this is a major piece of legislation dealing with the children of the country and it has not been adequately heard. In the press of other business in the consideration of what came to be known as the Nixon program, where issues such as trade legislation, welfare reform, and social security benefits and increases and other major issues took up the major attention of Senators and members of the Finance Committee. There has not been a sufficient effort to coordinate this piece of legislation and the creation of this new Federal Child Care Corporation with the major pieces of Federal programs which also deal with or touch upon child care or day care services.

Under the provision of the bill which is sought to be stricken by the pending amendment, there would be created a Federal Child Care Corporation to be governed by a board of directors appointed by the President and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The Federal Child Care Corporation would undertake to provide child care services under contract with States and localities, and others for children of families receiving welfare assistance and others.

It is deficient, it seems to me, in several respects but, first of all, because it is such a massive piece of legislation, it should have, I have said, far more careful and deliberate consideration.

I point out that there is no need to rush here, at this late date in this session of Congress, to pass this kind of major national legislation, as a matter of fact, as has already been made clear on the floor of the Senate, during the early days of the next session of Congress. Very next month, the new Senate will take up welfare reform legislation as recommended by President Nixon and by others. In connection with that bill that we will have to consider, child care and day care services are two basic reasons why I hope in appropriate time for us to consider what we are about.

Second, this provision which is sought to be stricken from this bill contains important mental requirements which I think any system of child care services should meet. Those are parental involvement and community control — if there is to be a successful program of child care and child development.

Third, the standards set up in the bill are not adequate. They are not adequate in regard to child-staff ratios, nor adequate in regard to staff qualifications, and they are not adequate in regard to facility standards. This bill would supercede State and local standards. Last, but most important, those standards are not adequate in regard to child development concepts.

Will this be mere custodial care? Will there be an educational component?

What sort of standards will have to be met?

What kind of concepts will be instituted under this massive new major child care program?

I think it is well known that a child's early years are extremely important in intellectual development. I think that we had better do something when we have set up a new program which will be very much like and of equal importance to the public school programs in this country, that we had better do something about what will be included in it, and what its effect will be upon millions and millions of young schoolchildren in this country.

A good many organizations vitally interested and concerned in this matter, and very knowledgeable in regard to it, have submitted comments in opposition to that provision in the bill in its present form.

These include the Child Welfare League and the National Association for Black Child Development. May I say, Mr. President, that I think the day has long since passed, when poor people or black people or other minorities will sit idly by while outsiders come in, as can be done under this provision in the bill — and it could be a private enterprise franchisee — coming and control the further development of the children of that community.

The Day Care and Child Development Council of America, Inc., is also one of the organizations, together with those I have previously mentioned, which are not in agreement with this provision in the bill in its present form.

The same is true of the American Academy of Pediatrics. I invite attention to the letter of Dr. Robert G. Frazier, M.D., executive director, which was written on December 18, 1970, to the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Hatley), in which it is stated in part:

The Academy is gravely concerned with that section of this bill which established Federal child care standards. The minimum standards prescribed in this legislation will result in mere custodial care programs, and will severely neglect intellectual, social, and emotional developmental needs of children.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the entire letter written by Robert G. Frazier, M.D., executive director, printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

HOL. RUSSELL B. LONG, Chairman, Finance Committee, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Long: The American Academy of Pediatrics, the national organization of board certified pediatricians, express its concern with S. 4101, establishing a Federal Child Care Corporation. This bill, one of the amendments to the Social Security Act reported out by the Senate Finance Committee, would create Title XX of the Social Security Act.

The Academy is gravely concerned with that section of this bill which establishes federal child care standards. The minimal standards prescribed in this legislation will result in mere custodial care programs and will severely neglect intellectual, social, and emotional developmental needs of children. Because S. 4101 further provides that state and local licensing and similar requirements would be superceded, much of the constructive and planning done at state and local levels to enhance the quality of child care programs would be negated. Federal services are an integral part of child care and provisions for an adequate health program are essential.

This bill attempts to overcome financial barriers associated with the establishment of child care centers. However, there is a need for such funding, the primary intent of this proposal is to help mothers find gainful employment. It is our opinion that this objective may be achieved more satisfactorily by programs designed to assist mothers in their efforts to care for their child. Consequently, the Academy urges that the provisions of S. 4101 be deleted from the Social Security Amendments this year.

Sincerely yours,

ROBERT G. FRAZIER, M.D.
Executive Director.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I pay deserved tribute to the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) for his great and laudable concern for the need to expand and improve child care services available in this country. I believe that mothers receiving welfare assistance are entitled to high quality child care available to them.

I believe, however, that we should not stop there. I think that the other mothers in this country, not just those receiving welfare assistance, are entitled to that kind of child care service.

I believe it is terribly important that we not stigmatize child care or day care as being merely a welfare program. I believe it is to be a universal program which extends far more broadly than the present provision would allow it to do.

Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is most well intentioned. But I believe that if we can lay aside this provision in the pending bill and take it up again in a deliberate and fashion after the first of the year, we will be able to make some important steps forward in providing adequate child care services in this country.

I believe that important that we do that and take it up again at the first of the year, as we will do if this provision is stricken.
from the bill. As I said earlier, there are so many programs, programs under the Commissioner of Education at HEW, under the Office of Economic Opportunity, under Headstart, under HUD to some degree, in regard to facilities, and under the OEO that have already been provided to those receiving welfare assistance.

It seems to me that we must make some kind of uniform system out of all this hodgepodge we have at present. We will have to do that if we agree to the motion to strike the present provision and go into all of this matter in the kind of detail and with the kind of care it deserves.

That is what I am pleased at this time to yield the floor to one of the distinguished cosponsors of the amendment, the distinguished Senator from Indiana. Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the discussion which has been initiated by my friend, the Senator from Oklahoma. I find myself in a rather unique position, and I believe the Senator from Louisiana, in joining in a motion such as that presented by my colleague, the Senator from Oklahoma, which would strike the provision for day care from the pending legislation.

I say this because for over a year, and a half now, the Senator from Indiana and his wife, who is his No. 1 adviser in this matter, have been donating considerable sums to day care. Together we have examined day care facilities in the United States, in our home State of Indiana, and in the Nation's Capital. We have had the good fortune to compare facilities here with those available in other countries, such as the Soviet Union, Great Britain, the Hague, Japan, and Israel, just to name a few.

In the course of this study, the Senator from Indiana has become convinced that one of the most critical problems confronting us today is the lack of significant child care and child development facilities here and abroad.

Thus I find myself joining in a motion to strike the child care corporation provision of the distinguished Chairman of the Committee on Finance from the bill. Before proceeding further, I would like to echo the words of the Senator from Oklahoma in paying tribute to the Senator from Louisiana for recognizing the need that something be done. I do not think that we should take lightly the suggestion that is made by the Senator from Louisiana, because this is a start. This is an idea which could be, and should be, examined in an overall study of the problem of child care and development in this country.

If this problem as significant as the Senator from Indiana feels it is, I do not feel that we should start with a small crumb, but rather that we should give this problem the study in committee and in debate on the floor that it so richly deserves.

Mr. President, we are all aware of some of the very difficult and perplexing problems confronting us today.

There is the problem of law and order, the problem of juvenile delinquency, the problem of high school dropouts, the problem of welfare, the problem of the low capability wage earner, and the impact that he has on our economy as a whole, the problem of the obscurity so far as individual employee skills are concerned, the housing conditions, which produce the ghettos and urban blight. These are just a few of the problems that are tearing at the very foundation of our society today.

There is not a Senator who is not aware of these problems. I think it is fair to say, or at least that is the judgment of the Senator from Indiana, that there is not a Senator who is not concerned with these problems.

As I have looked over them, particularly over the last year, and as I have studied the potential impact of adequate child care and development programs, it is my judgment that no one program, if it is approached in the right manner, in a comprehensive manner, could do more to alleviate the multitude of problems confronting us than adequate child care and development centers.

These problems are not going to be whisked away with one speech on the Senate floor or with the acceptance or rejection of one Senate amendment. It will not be done in 1 day, 1 month, 1 year, or in 10 years.

The problems are the result of general conditions of neglect and they will not disappear overnight. The Senator from Indiana thinks that with comprehensive planning of adequate child care and development programs in our lifetime we can hope to reverse the pathways in those areas of our country which today lead only to despair.

So I rise to support the proposed amendment to delete the child care corporation, not because the Senator from Indiana does not believe that this particular proposal might not some day be part of a comprehensive proposal, and certainly not because he finds fault with the desirability, for example, of the Senator from Louisiana to bring some legislative input to the problem, but because the Senator from Indiana believes that this is a day late and a dollar short approach to the question.

It is my judgment that the problem is going to be an easy one to solve and that providing adequate day care and child development centers is going to be inexpensive. It is not. In my judgment, to do the job adequately will cost much more money than most people realize.

I cannot think of a better investment. And I firmly suggest that we will get something for nothing. We have had too much of this already in this country.

If we are going to give our attention to the children of America, the Senator from Indiana has become convinced that there is no better place to invest our money.

I think it is to the credit of the Senator from Louisiana that his original bill authorized $500 million for the Federal Child Care Corporation, That would be a good start. However, when the present measure was reported, it contained only $50 million.

It is rather difficult for the Senator from Indiana to talk about only $50 million. We are talking about an expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars, indeed billions of dollars, if we are going to provide adequate child care and child development programs for the younger people of this country.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I am glad to yield to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator has introduced a measure to expand child development. His bill would start out by spending $2 billion a year and go out to spend about $80 billion a year. It seems to me that what we are seeking is that a magnitude is necessary and that it should become law some day. But what we are trying to do in the committee bill is to provide at least enough child care to see to it that mothers who want to work to supplement the income of their families are not denied the opportunity to do so.

I would like to have had a larger program than the Committee on Finance could agree to, but I would submit that something is better than nothing. The best I can make of the Senator's argument and the argument of the Senator from Oklahoma is that nothing is better than nothing. It seems to me that this straightforward attempt to make child care available where it is not available now.

If one can go forward with a program for complete child development as the Senator advocates, more power to him. But I cannot see why the Senator would take the position that nothing is better than something. If in my opinion the committee bill will go a long way towards solving the problem, Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I appreciate the comment of the Senator from Louisiana. As I mentioned earlier, while he was in conference, I think he is to be complimented and admired the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. He has serve in this body for many more years than the Senator from Indiana, and is the author of many more
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Indiana yield?
Mr. BAYH. I yield.
Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I wish to respond to the distinguished chairman of the committee on Finance. I said earlier I thought there had been inadequate hearings. I was careful to say why. There was certainly no reflection on the distinguished chairman of the committee on Finance. I made clear and I reiterate now that there were inadequate hearings on this problem. The proposal we are talking about is a new concept of welfare reform, which President Nixon advocated and many of us supported in principle, and concerning which many of us had ideas of our own; and there was the social security bill, with its financing, benefits increases, the catastrophic illness plan that the Senator from Louisiana presented—all of these matters were together before the committee.

We had hearings on most of these provisions, then started executive sessions, then came back for 2 more days on trade, then the committee went back to executive session and there were just too many riders on one horse; too many things were involved in one bill.

I presided all one afternoon in the Committee on Finance. The Senator from Louisiana was busy consulting with his staff when I started my remarks on the proposal we are talking about. He did so with complete fairness and consideration with other needed consideration with the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, which encompassed the most important revisions in trade law since the Trade Expansion Act of 1962, a new concept of welfare reform, which President Nixon advocated and many of us supported in principle, and concerning which many of us had ideas of our own; and there was the social security bill, with its financing, benefits increases, the catastrophic illness plan that the Senator from Louisiana presented—all of these matters were together before the committee.

The surface of the problem of child care and development has not even been scratched. We must really get into this matter this year and next year.

There is certainly no reflection on the way the chairman conducted the committee. He did so with complete fairness and complete notice, but I say that Senators were so burdened down with all of the other provisions of the bill that they did not have time fully to consider this major new proposal of the Senator from Louisiana.

That is what I meant by saying there have been inadequate hearings on this provision and insufficient effort to try to coordinate this provision with all of the many other Federal programs which relate to it.

Several Senators addressed the Chair. Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I believe I have the floor; I would like to make one further remark, then I would be glad to yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

I want the Record to show that the Senator from Louisiana has had the Committee on Finance at the same time as they testify or submit their views on it. So many of them have been looking into this matter; it should be readily apparent even on a casual study of this matter, how complicated it is if we are really trying to solve the total problem.

The Senator from Louisiana has had so many burdens to carry. I do not know how he carries them all. That is why I said earlier I hoped the distinguished and constructive criticism that we are involved in today is taken in proper perspective by our friend from Louisiana.

He mentioned a moment ago that he finds it difficult to know how the Senator from Indiana or other Senators could suggest that no solution is better than a partial solution. I think when we are starting out with a complicated, multifaceted problem in providing help for child care and development. If we are to be totally responsible in our efforts to reach a final consideration, the proposal of the Senator from Louisiana has to be taken into consideration. If any other legislation is passed, I think there is no better use for the money than to have the Senate give that kind of legislation to that kind of consideration.

Mr. BAYH. I yield.
Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to raise a couple of questions?
Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to raise a couple of questions?
Mr. BAYH. He has great familiarity with this particular bill. Suppose the parents of a given community feel one thing should be done,
Mr. BAYH. The standards, the program, the type or lack of comprehensive care available at any facility is not determined by the parents involved, but the vehicle for governing it established under the corporation is that not accurate?

Mr. BAYH. The Corporation would make a contract with the provider of child care services. If it is a group of parents who wish to establish a child care facility, then the Corporation would make the contract with those parents and they would proceed to establish a day care center. But the Corporation might also contract with a day care center already run by a city, or one run by a non-profit organization. But that is the point I want to make to the Senator is that it is the mother who would have the choice as to whether she wanted to send her child to this child care center or that child care center. It is whether she would then join with other parents in organizing a new child care center instead. In the first and last analysis, the choice rests with the parents of the child.

I also want to say that the bill does not require that the States use the services of this Corporation at all. If the State thinks it can do a better job, then it can do so. Frankly, the fact is that the States are now doing a pitiful, miserable job in arranging for child care. They are not even using 50 cents on the dollar of Federal funds appropriated for this purpose. In fact, we are saying to the States, "If you cannot get the job done, we will put someone in business who will do it for you." Let me take a moment to document what I have said about the States' failure to do the job for themselves. We do know that there is a crying need for child care for mothers who would like to work, to provide additional family income, to put meat on the table and milk in their children's mouths. Now the question is, what has happened in fiscal year 1969? The Federal Government appropriated $23 million for child care, but what did the States use? Only $4 million. In fiscal year 1970, we appropriated $52 million for child care, and how much of this were the States able to use? Only $18 million out of the $52 million.

To the committee bill, we change the ratio from 75 percent Federal matching to 90 percent, and we also have a stipulation that the States must continue to spend a minimum of 10 percent of the Federal funds on that part of the program that is established under the Corporation; is the Corporation, and the Corporation can then proceed to arrange for child care in the way that we think, on a nationwide basis, it should be done. The Corporation will be accountable to the Congress to explain what they have or have not done, just as I would like to have Mr. Richardson explain what his department has failed to do. I would like to ask him, "Now, when we gave you money to meet this crying need for child care, why did you not spend it and get the job done?"

Now that we are proposing to give someone else the job, Mr. Richardson and I would do the same thing we want to do. We will regard those who do not want to shake up our bureaucracy. We would prefer to do business as usual."

Our reaction to this is: If you cannot get this job done, Mr. Richardson, then you should not do it. If you think the States can get this job done. The Corporation will be headed by a three-man board, with 3-year terms, one member's term expiring every year. We will want that board to be responsible only for the Corporation's activities to provide for the care of children.

If a member of that board fails to perform the function we intend, we will not reappoint him. As far as I am concerned, the Committee on Finance will not confirm any of those people for reappointment unless they show us they are doing what we are trying to do: namely, provide these mothers with adequate child care for their children.

Mr. Harris and Mr. BAYH addressed the Chair. Mr. Harris, Mr. President, I want to answer a question about what has happened up to now. Mr. BAYH. Well, suppose the Senator proceeds first.

Mr. HARRIS. As the Senator from Louisiana knows, there is a great difference between the present situation and what the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare recommends. Under present law, there is a requirement that the States put up 25 percent of the costs. The States are hard pressed, as the Senator knows, and have not been able to come up with their portion of the money necessary to perform the job about which we are talking, and the Secretary recommends.

What the Secretary recommends and I support is that we increase that Federal matching, and then we will see greater and more prompt action. I believe it is clear that the principal reason why they have not had the necessary support from the States in getting these programs underway is that it requires too much in the way of new contributions from the States.

What the Senator would do, instead, would be to set up a totally parallel system, parallel to HEW and related administrative offices and employees, which, goodness knows, seem to be quite a few already. We would set up a totally new corporation, parallel to existing agencies. They would have their own regional offices and some local offices, I presume, and some national offices and employees. If the Senator thinks it seems to me, would be a terribly duplicative and inefficient use of funds.

Mr. BAYH. The Senator from Oklahoma pointed to one aspect on which the Senator from Indiana wanted to touch. I think what the Senator from Oklahoma has been able to ascertain from the results of his study—and I would suppose from what the Senator from Oklahoma has said and from what the Senator from Minnesota said earlier—little question has been raised about the expertise of the individuals who are now running the Office of Child Development. The question is how we give them the flexibility, how we give them the freedom to take the resources and say, "All right, get the job done."

I think that establishing a separate entity and a new element of the bureaucracy would be to set up a totally parallel system, the States are going to be able to do any better than the other administrative agencies have been doing is begging the question.

Mr. BAYH. If I may, touch on the size of the job about which we are talking, and then we can talk about some of the details of how we are going about doing it. This problem is of critical proportions everywhere. Unfortunately, we have not had such a thing as an awareness of the average citizen who hears us discuss it on the floor of the Senate or who reads about a proposal in the newspaper or hears about it via the electronic media.

Today, in our country, we have 14 million children with working mothers. If we are going to set up rigid standards for qualification under a given bill, it seems to me that we have to recognize that a small percentage of this 14 million total are going to be able to qualify. Of these 14 million children, we need to recognize that 2.8 million working mothers today are the sole support of their family.

I, for one, do not for a moment suggest that it is other than laudatory for a mother to work if she feels that she should work and has the opportunity to do so. I do not think she need be whipped over the back, if she has small children at home, to go out and work. Perhaps she is needed in the home to provide love, kindness, and guidance for those children. But if it is her desire and if it is possible for her to find gainful employment, I think this is fine.

I think that what we are arguing about here is the kind of help that is available for her. In the past, almost all attention—particularly official attention, unfortunately—has been directed at custodial care. But what we are saying is, solving the problems that confront us today, it has to be more than custodial care. It has to be child care and development—not just care.

Let us take a step back and look at the present figure of 2.8 million working mothers and recognize the trend that has occurred. In 1940, 10 percent of the working mothers had preschool children. In the 1960's, it was 40 percent. The trend indicates that by 1974 the percentage will increase as high as 70 percent. If we think the problem is great now, it is going to be even greater, and we want to start with a program that can ultimately cope with the gigantic size of the problem.

This is why the Senator from Indiana is that we need to make this a comprehensive care program, not just custodial. It needs to deal with the problems of health, nutrition, environment, and all the other aspects that lead to the development of an adolescent and, hopefully, an adult who can go out in society and fend for himself and shake off the shackles of neglect that may have been on the shoulders of his parents.

Also, I want to emphasize again that when we are talking about $50 million, I think we almost, by definition—if not specifically—by administration, are going to confine that to the most desperate need dollarwise. Today, one of the unique characteristics of child care and development is that it is not needed just by the poor and by those who live in the ghettos of our inner cities, but by large numbers of middle-income families have mothers who are now working. As the cost of living goes up, there has to be a second wage earner in more and more homes to foot all the bills and many of those mothers going to work, and there is no place at all to care for their children.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record an abbreviated section-by-section analysis of the proposal to which I alluded earlier, which was the subject of a floor statement, of a bill I intend to introduce next year. This is not for discussion at this time, but so that anyone who is following the debate might have some idea of what the Senator from Indiana is talking about when he talks about comprehensive care.

Without objection, the section-by-section analysis was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SEC. 19—DEFINITIONS

Defines the terms used in the Act to insure accurate interpretation of its intent.
Mr. BAYH. I think the Senator from Louisiana was accurate when he pointed out that some of these children are not going to need babysitters. Some of them are going to need a playground, a warm room. Too many children today rush home with the key around their neck, with nobody there but perhaps the rats that scurry around the tenement. So I salute the Senator from Louisiana for his minimum flexibility. I am concerned however that really we are not going to have maximum flexibility under his bill, the way it is written.

I do not criticize the Senator from Louisiana for this, but I think we need to recognize that if we accept as a beginning this type of minimal program, we are providing a sedative to deal with a problem that requires a comprehensive approach. I want an efficient program. I want $1.10 worth of delivery for every dollar we spend, if that is possible. But let us not deceive ourselves. This is going to cost a lot of dollars. As I said, I think of a better place to invest our dollars.

One of the significant aspects of this bill about which I still am concerned despite the very thoughtful discussion by the Senator from Louisiana in answer to a question I posed is that it does not provide for the type of local control we need. We have in this bill approximately five pages of standards which, as I understand them will have to be applied universally. One of the things we need to recognize is that the problems that exist today in poverty and in urban blight are not solely problems that can be solved in the classroom. We have to get people involved—mothers involved, fathers involved. We have to make this a family operation. The more we can get local people involved in deciding what their children need, the more chance we have of tackling these problems and moving forward with a total program. That is why in the proposal of the Senator from Indiana and in the proposal of some others, we provide for direct involvement of mothers and fathers in planning and administration of programs.

I note that the National Advisory Council on Child Care, established by the well-intentioned proposal of the Senator from Louisiana points out—and I read from page 441 of my bill:

And the remaining appointed members shall be one individual who is a representative of consumers of child care (but not including more than one individual who is a recipient of public assistance or a representative of any organization which is composed of or represents recipients of such assistance).

I wonder whether this really gives us the opportunity to have on that advisory council enough individuals who really are directly affected by the problems of poverty and neglect which unfortunately confront too many of our communities today.

Mr. President, I do not want to belabor this matter any more and I would hope that the Senator from Louisiana would take this criticism of the Senator from Indiana in the light in which it is given. As I said earlier, perhaps there is a place for such a corporation, but it should be determined after comprehensive hearings and analysis. I think this is a tough discussion by this body. Then let us come forward with a full-fledged bill and a comprehensive program that can realize that children are individuals and what we are trying to do is to say that every individual born in this country has equal access to the American dream, which we talk about but unfortunately, large numbers of our children never have that opportunity.

I might make one closing reference to the White House conference, because the White House conference came along after the introduction of several bills and the proposal of the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Indiana. It brought under one roof, I suppose, more experts both at the national and grassroots level, experts concerned about and familiar with the problems of children, than I think have come together before. They wrestled with problems we are wrestling with now.

A fair consensus of their suggestions would be that they feel only a comprehensive program can solve the problems we are facing.

I hope we will not be satisfied with just a crumb. We have been satisfied with crumbs for too long as far as our children are concerned. We speak in laudatory terms about the ten percent of our children, along with the need for motherhood, God, and the American flag. The time has come to stop talking and start making some significant investments in this area.

Unfortunately, the investment that was originally intended by the Senator from Louisiana has now been cut to one-tenth of its original proposal and, in the judgment of the Senator from Indiana, that is not sufficient for what we really need to have done.

I appreciate the courtesy of the Senator from Louisiana, and to learn from discussion with him, his interest in this problem.

I am hopeful that out of this debate will come not just a temporary solution, or a beginning but, indeed, the foundation on which we can build an ultimate solution to the problems that confront our children.

I notice that Carl Rowan, an outstanding columnist, in his column, wrote a stimulating and perceptive column not long ago about the problems of poverty, the poverty change, and that cycle. He said that we are never really going to be able to break the poverty cycle of "Poor home, poor education, poor job. Poor home, poor education, poor job. Poor home, poor education, poor job." We are not able to harness the system of public education to achieve that end.

Many of us who have studied the problems that confront young Americans today, teenagers, pre-teenagers, who unfortunately carry with them to their dying days, have to recognize, that the traditional definition of school, as given in the admonition by Carl Rowan, cannot be accepted today, if we are going to solve these problems. All too often, we provide a first-class educational opportunity for a first-grade, 6-year-old, only to find that because of the horrible environment to which that young, impressionable human being has been subjected during the first 6 years of his life, because of malnutrition, or undernourishment from the point of conception, this young human being may be mentally retarded, and unable to take full advantage of a first-class educational opportunity.

The Head Start program, which was one of the most innovative devices we have developed to recognize the need to start early, if we are to deal with these problems, has not been totally successful because we learned that we cannot take a young 5-year-old or 4-year-old out of its horrible environment in the summer, or during the year, and then subject them to that same horrible environment for the rest of their young lives and expect not to have almost total regression.

What we need is a program to start early, as soon as a mother wants to leave her child in a day care development center, she should have the opportunity to do so. If the mother wants to work, fine. We should have a total, comprehensive program that will provide for that development, as well as custodty, and with medical, nutritional, and environmental problems. They should be administered during out of school and after school hours. We should have a person who works from midnight to 8 a.m. or from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. These are comprehensive problems. We cannot just scratch the surface of the problems and expect to get any results.

So it is with this thrust in mind that we should have a program that truly starts with the child, its needs for services, and the family needs for services, and the parent needs for services. We should have young teens, if necessary, until we finally get that child on its own two feet, so that he or she can hold its head high, have pride and dignity, and the capacity to move out on its own for himself or herself a meaningful life.

I know that the Senator from Louisiana wants to accomplish this goal. I am just concerned that it has not been totally successful because we learned that we cannot take a young 5-year-old or 4-year-old out of its horrible environment in the summer, or during the year, and then subject them to that same horrible environment for the rest of their young lives and expect not to have almost total regression.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the problems existing here, I find, strongly parallel the problems of providing public service employment to the needy.

The Finance Committee, in looking at the welfare problem, felt that one way to help would be to provide Jobs in the public sector. So it was suggested by the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Talmage) and the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Harris) that as part of our work, we should provide some public service jobs, about 30,000, at least, to provide opportunities for people to do something that would benefit the community.

The bill that the administration did not particularly enthusiastically about it, but they went along with it. I believe the motion agreed to was made by the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Talmadge), but the committee generally found that worthy purpose. The Senators agreed that we would do what we could to gain as much acceptance as we thought we could get for public service employment, to put people to work who otherwise would be on welfare.

There are many kinds of public service jobs that need to be done, from helping to clean up neighborhoods, to serving as policemen, teachers, or nursing aides. This year we undertook, in my mind, we succeeded in providing about 30,000 public service jobs in the Committee bill.

Meanwhile, the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare had a much more ambitious plan. They reported a bill, which I voted for, starting out in 1972 with 400,000 public service jobs, more than 10 times as many as we have in our bill, and in 1973, 500,000 public service jobs.

But the President of the United States vetoed that bill. I voted to override the President's veto. I would be happy to have 560,000 public service jobs made available, but the provision that the private sector, public service employment is better than having a person living on the dole.

The devil finds works for idle hands. It is certainly better to put these people to work than to have them sitting around doing nothing. We should put them to work doing something useful. That is what I would like to do.

Let us now look at the problem that exists in the child care area. In the 1967 amendments we tried to provide an opportunity for everybody on welfare to have an opportunity to be training and to get a job, a subsidized job, if need be. We realized that to provide this kind of opportunity for mothers, child care would have to be available.

This year we undertook to try to find out why it was that the Labor Department was such a miserable failure at making the program work. We found that under this plan, the order of the day, we could not obtain child care for our children.

Twenty-five million dollars was appropriated to HEW in fiscal 1969 to provide child care for children whose mothers wished to work. What did the Department do? It used only $4 million of the $25 million which we appropriated. We provided six times as much money as was used to provide child care.

This year, we appropriated more money to provide adequate child care so that those mothers who wished to work. We provided $52 million. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare supports it.

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Long. I yield.

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, will the Senator say on what matching basis the expenditure was made? And what was the matching basis that is that the Secretary of HEW now recommends that funds be provided.

Mr. Long. It is on a 75-per cent basis today. In the committee bill, we raise the matching to 90 percent.

We would like to increase the child care expenditures well beyond $52 million. Going in the direction desired by the Senator, we think we need a bigger child-care program. But we also find that there is a need to give the responsibility for providing this care to someone who knows how to do the job.

The Senator talked about States not having adequate funds. But they have not used the funds that we have already provided. The man in the administration who is an expert in this area, Mr. Sigler, in describing the problems in expanding child care, said:

'I think it is probably true that there have been so many demands placed on both profit and non-profit groups that in certain instances it is becoming ridiculous because there is overlapping responsibility on the part of local people, State people, and so forth. I think if we are serious about setting up a worthwhile social institution such as day care for working mothers we may have to operate in a national way. That is why we would have some nationwide application. It would be a standard process because now it is too difficult and it is too rigid, and I am very much afraid the professionals have overdone themselves here.'

Mr. Harris. Mr. President, does it not do one other thing? Does it not set up another overlapping and duplicating agency? The Senator talks about the other problems.

Mr. Long. It takes the Secretary of HEW, who has failed completely in providing child care, and the Secretary of Labor, who has also failed completely in this effort, to work with the exclusive providers of child care services.

Mr. Harris. I believe that a Senator said earlier that the States are confused over whether to proceed under the present system or under the new system. It would not take them out of the picture. It would add one other factor.

Mr. Long. Mr. President, the bill would create a corporation composed of people who know something about child care.

Mr. Bayh. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Long. I yield.

Mr. Bayh. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana does not want to leave the impression that the present director of the Office of Child Development does not know something about child care.

Mr. Long. On the contrary. He is a good man. He would be a fine man to serve as chairman of the board of the Corporation. But I would like to put this in context for the exclusive providers of child care who has the ability to get this job done. If the board does not get the job done, we can do something about it.

Secretary Richardson has 50,000 other worries, not the least of which is trying to get the family assistance plan passed in this Congress.

We would put this responsibility on the Corporation. There would be three members of the Corporation's board. The term of one member would expire each year. If the members of the board do not get the job done, then we will ask them when they come up for reappointment why they failed.

We have also found that there are all sorts of problems concerning overly rigid State and local standards required of child care providers.

I think that anyone who has been a Governor or a mayor knows how some of these things happen. Someone has some kind of material, and he thinks it would be a great thing if there was a requirement that his type of material be used in public buildings. This is then made part of the building code.

There is a lot of space in good, modern, church buildings that could be made available for child care centers. The space is used for Sunday schools, but it is not made available for child care purposes because of restrictive building codes.

We say that there should be Federal standards for day-care centers. For minimum safety standards, we would use the life safety code of the National Fire Protection Association. That is a nationally recognized safety standard. If a building meets that standard, it will be adequate for a child care center.

The bill also provides $50 million in initial operating capital for this corporation to train people to work in child-care centers and to sign contracts with groups to help them provide child care. Subsequently, the corporation would be authorized to borrow $50 million annually to help construct additional facilities. That authorization would go into effect 2 years in the future, and would probably be used sparingly.

With the provisions in the Committee bill, there ought to be at least three times as much money available for child care as is available in the past.

And, together with more money for child care, we want an organization in the child-care business that knows something about providing it. Let us not forget that more than 90 percent of the children whose mothers are working are either receiving no child care or are receiving it in child-care centers that could not meet any standards whatever.

We provided standards in the Committee bill that we thought would be adequate. There are health standards. There are nutritional standards, and standards to assure adequate indoor and outdoor space.

We provide that the purposes to promote the well-being of all children by assuring that the child care services provided will be appropriate for the particular needs of the individual receiving such services. The proposal is centered on the good of the child.

Mr. Pastore. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Long. I yield.
Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, what is the corporation the Senator mentions? Is it a national corporation?

Mr. LONG. It is a national corporation, called the Federal Child Care Corporation.

Mr. PASTORE. It would be appointed by whom?

Mr. LONG. The Board of Directors, consisting of three members, would be appointed by the President. There would also be an advisory council committee of 15 members, the majority consumers of child-care services.

Mr. PASTORE. How far would that jurisdiction extend? Would it preempt the jurisdiction of the State?

Mr. LONG. It would not. The State could contract with this Corporation to provide for child care if it so wished, but it would not be required to do so. It could make it available with the money for the Corporation. Frankly, as the situation exists today, most States are doing little in the child-care area. Under the proposal, the State could contract with the Corporation to provide the capability of providing the child-care services, if the State wishes them to do so.

Mr. PASTORE. Could they not do that without the Corporation?

Mr. LONG. They could not contract with a Federal corporation that does not exist. Of course, without a corporation the State could contract with some group that could help them in providing child care.

Mr. PASTORE. If we give them this 90 percent the Senator talks about, they put up their 10 percent. Why could not the States wish to do so?

Mr. PASTORE. Could they not do that without the Corporation?

Mr. LONG. They could not contract with a Federal corporation that does not exist. Of course, without a corporation the State could contract with some group that could help them in providing child care.

Mr. PASTORE. If we give them this 90 percent the Senator talks about, they put up their 10 percent. Why could not the States wish to do so?

Mr. PASTORE. Could they not do that without the Corporation?

Mr. LONG. They could. The problem is that it is not being done now.

Mr. PASTORE. What guarantee do we have that we will be able to work with the Corporation?

Mr. LONG. The Corporation would be exclusively interested in and involved with making child-care services available.

Mr. PASTORE. Does the Senator mean the Federal Government is not?

Mr. LONG. The Federal Government is interested to the extent of providing money for child care, but we are not getting results. We have a crying need for child-care services, but Federal funds go unused for lack of a mechanism to actually assure that child-care services are made available.

Mr. PASTORE. Maybe we did not get results because the matching was 25 percent against the 10 percent now. Maybe they did not have the money.

Mr. LONG. That is what one Senator said, but testimony before the Finance Committee has shown that there are other reasons. Here is what Mr. Zieller, head of the Office of Child Development, said about this problem.

He said that overly rigid local ordinances designed to protect the physical welfare of the children have been enacted in most States. The psychological well-being of the children and that accordingly does not find himself in sympathy with some of the things now being done to protect field.

He meant that some States pass laws with regard to child care which may be too restrictive. The committee bill simply sets Federal standards and says that if a facility meets these standards, then it complies with whatever requirements may be necessary for a child-care center. Why is there a big argument against what we are doing here? The Corporation would set up an organization in the child-care business that is exclusively interested in child care, a corporation that would succeed in accomplishing what we have been unable to achieve thus far.

One problem is that the President held a White House conference where some people came up with some elaborate, albeit worthy ideas about child care. It was said that there are perhaps six million children who could benefit from an overall program to develop them educationally and culturally. It would cost at least $2,000 each to provide these children with the kind of care they would like to see; $2,000 multiplied by 5 million children is $10 billion.

Most of the people attending that conference said, "If that is all it takes, $10 billion, then that is what we should have." That does not seem to be in the way of child development and nothing less than that.

The Senator from New York has a proposal providing for about $3 billion in child development funds. The Senator from Indiana has a bill based on the same philosophy which would cost about $6 billion. The Senator from Minnesota has a bill that could cost more than $6 billion. It would pass, it would go to the President, and it is all right with me if they do. I will applaud them if they come about.

But in our immediate efforts under the bill we are trying to effectively spend about $300 million to provide child care for mothers who want to work. We do not have to provide $2,000 a child for all these children. Seventy-five percent of the children are under the age of three, that is adequate. They do not need further education in any extensive manner after school hours. Let us provide supervised recreation for them, or whatever would be appropriate for more constructive activity for children. That would not cost $2,000 per child. The chances are that $500 a child would be enough, and that would provide for 75 percent of the children.

The objection has been made that we must guarantee participation of the mother in all child-care programs. I would like the mothers to participate. Under the bill, if the mothers wish to organize and form a child care center as long as it would meet minimum standards. We would be happy to have such a child-care center sign a contract with the Corporation, and the State welfare agency could sign a contract to pay for the child-care services provided. Parent groups that cannot set up child-care centers will be able to do so thanks to the Corporation.

In short, here is a mechanism that would make available good care for children during the time the mother is not able to look after them. It may be this one of these days the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare will come out with a bill for a comprehensive program costing $3 billion, $6 billion, or $10 billion a year. The way matters have been going with some of these highly motivated programs which the Committee on Labor and Public Welfare has reported, such a bill is long overdue. A $10 billion child care bill will probably be vetoed and we will try to override the veto and fail. In the meantime, why should we fail to enact this modest provision for child care?

At the present time adequate child care is largely unavailable. Take, for instance, the highly motivated mother who wants better housing and better health for her family. She cannot provide it because there is no safe place she can leave her child and have the child properly cared for. We want somebody to provide for that care. If the States think they can provide it, that is good; but if they do not wish to, at least they would have someone to help them, and this will result in better child care.

Furthermore, many States would like to have the Federal Government take over all of their welfare programs. If this is to happen some day, it would be better to have someone in the Federal hierarchy with experience.

Mr. PASTORE. Could they not do that without the Corporation?

Mr. LONG. It would not. The State pays the Child Care Corporation. The Corporation then proceeds to pay whoever they contract with to provide child care. That would be a publicly owned corporation, it could be a nonprofit corporation, it simply could be a woman who makes her home available for child care, or it could be provided in a facility run directly by the Corporation.

Mr. PASTORE. I realize that, but, in fact, are we not saying to the States that they have to put up 10 percent, how do they put up 10 percent, and how is that 10 percent will be spent will be decided by the corporation that is created in Washington?

Mr. LONG. There is no requirement whatever that the State utilize the services of the Corporation. The State will be given 90 percent Federal matching for child care, but they have to put up 10 percent, but they would not be required to spend anyway the money through the Corporation.

Mr. PASTORE. They would be on their own?

Mr. LONG. Yes. It is the same as if an individual wanted to build a house with FHA. They are there to help him with financing if he would like for them to do it. The same is true in respect to the services of the Corporation.

Mr. PASTORE. Would they still get the 90 percent?

Mr. LONG. Yes; whether or not they used the Corporation, they would have the same Federal matching for child care.

Mr. PASTORE. I want to stress the as essential, as it is to provide the additional money, it is equally necessary to provide an organization that is competent and qualified to do the job. I was presented on the floor today with a letter which indicated Mr. Elliot Richardson does not support the committee amendment. That is something which I could have been made aware of earlier, since when we discussed this matter in executive session, the Department took the position that if Congress wants to provide child care in this way, that is acceptable to HEW.

The fact is that now, with the responsibility resting with Mr. Richardson, we cannot get the job done. I certainly think we need to put the responsibility definitely on a particular organization that is doing nothing but providing child care. What we are trying to do is to remedy this one big lack, the lack of adequate child care for mothers who want to work.

I want to point out that it is not intended that the use of the Corporation be limited to people who are receiving welfare. It is intended that any limited to people who are receiving we-

Mr. President, I am able to say authoritatively—and a copy of the letter is on the White House desk—that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare believes that this particular provision should be stricken from this bill. I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Secretary Elliot Richardson to that effect be printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE
WASHINGTON, D.C.

HON. JACOB K. JAVITS,
U.S. SENATE,
WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR JAVITS: I very much appreciate the interest you have shown in the Department regarding the amendment you have co-sponsored with Senator Harris to strike Title XXI authority in H.R. 17550 to establish a Federal Child Care Corporation. This title is, as you know, almost identical to S. 4101 which was introduced by Senator Long on July 20, 1970.

The Administration, as you well know, is committed to improving the quality of life for American families. It is not unusual to find a vital first five years during which so much of a child’s cognitive ability is formed. To consolidate the effort within the Department the President has established the Office of Child Development and appointed Dr. Edward Zigler, formerly a professor at Yale University, as its Director.

The Administration agrees with the purposes of this amendment, but does not favor enactment of this title at this time. We think that insufficient time has passed to evaluate the success of the special responsibility for the care of handicapped children and programs which have been on the order of the administration to move toward day care facilities. We also put our attention to the vital importance of the child care component of the Family Assistance Plan. We believe that we should move forward carefully to enable these programs to prove their worth and effectiveness before a new government corporation is formed to meet the needs of this nation for child care services. We do not believe that this corporation would be the most effective way to handle that program when it becomes law.

Mr. President, to summarize my views:

First, I agree with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare that we should not abort the child care provisions of the family assistance plan, which we have not even considered, before we consider it, by prejudging what shall be the administrative apparatus that will be used for the purpose.

Second, Mr. President, we are asked by the sponsors of the proposed Federal Child Care Corporation to come to a conclusion on this matter before the Senate has had the opportunity to complete its consideration of the important issue of this matter, and that is to centralize Federal responsibility in this Corporation.

I point out the fact that the law that is being considered as H.R. 17550 has four key provisions: (a) to establish a new Federal Child Care Corporation; (b) to centralize responsibility; (c) to provide child care services at Federal level; and (d) to provide child care services for day care facilities.

Now, Mr. President, if ever I saw an example of putting the cart before the horse, it is in that particular provision since it led to a law of the United States which I hope will be in effect by the 92d Congress. We do not believe that this corporation would be the most effective way to handle that program when it becomes law.

Mr. President, juxtapose those financial vertebrae to the need and to the reality. Right now, we are spending in round figures about $450 million a year for day care. And, Mr. President, under S. 4101, and S. 4101, the President, with respect to this matter, is to the 92d Congress. We do not believe that this corporation would be the most effective way to handle that program when it becomes law.

There are four basic alternatives, and this corporation proposal would have us choose one now, even before we decide what shall be our basic program that we wish to carry out.

The alternative alternatives are as follows:

First, a State plan with Federal administration. That is, incidentally, contemplated by a very extraordinary bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Braedenas, with the sponsorship of a number of Members. That is known as Comprehensive Preschool Education and Child Day Care Act of 1969.

Second, there is a State plan with Federal administration, and that is the proposal that is before the Senate now. It is introduced in the Senate by Mr. Proctor, Mr. President.

Finally, Mr. President, there are various aspects of the community planning, which is a step further up the grass roots upward, and that plan is contained in my own bill, which I introduced about a month ago. It is also contained in the bill of the distinguished present occupant of the chair (Mr. Mondale), his bill being known as the Universal Child Care and Development Act of 1971.

So there are four basic plans: community, State plan with Federal administration, the Administration, and the Federal Child Care Corporation, the plan of Senator Long.

We also ought to take a look at the orders of magnitude here. Senator Mondale, in his corporation, he says would be a $100 million a year corporation. The responsibility and the capability of meeting this Nation’s child care needs—this one organization, supposedly, to deal with all the needs for child care, is to have a $50 million capital, and, when it gets rolling, it is to have the ability or the authority to issue $250 million in revenue bonds, not guaranteed by the United States—may I have a copy of that?

It is the committee’s view that we need a new mechanism in facing this problem, a single organization which has both the responsibility and the capability of meeting this Nation’s child care needs. It must be an organization which has the welfare of families and children at the forefront, an organization which, though national in scope, will be able to respond to individual needs and deliver coordinated care, and must be an organization which will be able to make use of the child care resources which are now existing, to promote the creation of new resources. It must be able to utilize the efforts of governmental agencies, private voluntary organizations, and private enterprise.

The new Federal Child Care Corporation, which would be created under the committee bill is intended to be such an organization.

Mr. President, if ever I saw an example of putting the cart before the horse, it is in that particular provision since it led to a law of the United States which I hope will be in effect by the 92d Congress.
an effort to so materially reduce the whole size of the day care operation in the President's family assistance plan—such as one which ties in the day care to a very critical reform of welfare or the White House Conference's plan or any of our plans in Congress—all of them being probably in scope than would be contemplated by this corporation. So all this corporation would do is try to fit a big foot into a very small shoe. When that is added to the fact that it is the problem watershed of the President's family assistance plan and that it would commit us to one course of administration when we have an aggregate of four before we even know what our plan is going to be about child care, it seems to me to be highly improvident.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PERCY. Before making a comment on the motion to strike, I should like to repeat what I said to the Senate Finance Committee when I testified before that committee last week on the problem of child care, and I am certain proposed legislation that I had introduced to provide for their construction.

I believe that the Senator from Louisiam (Mr. Long), the chairman of the committee, is devoted to finding an answer to the day-care problem, and I commend him for his initiative. I intend to keep a deep and a continuing interest in this problem of child care. I believe it is one of the most critical problems we are going to have to face in the near future. However, despite this interest and despite the fact that I have introduced a measure in this area as it relates to the President's family as-stance plan, I wish to support the motion to strike this section from the pending bill.

Mr. President, my prime reason for adopting this position lies in the fact that I believe that the proposal contained in the bill has resulted from less considered thinking on the part of some members of the committee. The committee included the proposal in the bill without benefit of the recom-mandations of the White House Conference on Children and, in fact, without benefit of any specific hearings whatsoever.

As a result, there was no opportunity to explore the proposals on this subject made by other Senators, including those of the distinguished Senator from New York (Mr. JAVITS), who has given a tremendous amount of attention to this field and is extremely knowledgeable in it. I believe his proposed legislation should be taken seriously and that we should adopt a position of support and ask for the inclusion of the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. Mondale) and the Senator from Indiana (Mr. Bayh) have made proposals that have not been considered thoroughly.

There was no opportunity to consider the question of how deeply an individual community should be involved in planning to meet the community's child care needs. There was no real opportunity to adequately consider the adequacy of the structure of the Corporation, including the relationship between the Corporation and the Office of Child Development and the Office of Economic Opportunity. Finally, there was no opportunity to consider the adequacy of the level of authorization contained in the bill.

I should like to point out that the distinguished Senator from New York, from his vast experience in establishing enterprises of this type, whether, rather than coming from the top down, projects involving the people who are going to participate in them or burn them down, or are we going to do something constructive in day care?

Mr. PERCY. I think we would be ill
goaded to go to this corporation and establish this corporation until we actually know more than we do now. I really cannot tell the Senator what the reaction of the leadership of the various ghetto areas in Chi-

RIS knew and what all of us knew—that we are with the same kind of proposition, which we are asked to swallow the very moment that we have rejected a number of other propositions, which we are seeing in the same kind because we just cannot give it the considersation we know they should have. I

Mr. JAVITS. There is no question about that. I should like to make two points before I conclude.

One is that we are not even arguing for that. We are saying, yes, we feel that projects should come from the ground up. We are not asking the Senator to forego his work. But much better than asking the Senator not to foreclose it by taking a project which proceeds from the top down.

I should like to ask the Senator this question because he has the city of Chicago in his State, and the Senator knows I have New York: What does the Senator think will be the reception of the Federal Child Care Corporation when it comes to the number of children in the Chicago ghettos to set up day care centers? Are we going to have a new set of militants who are going to ride them out on a rail or throw them out or picket their projects or refuse to participate in them or burn them down, or are we going to do something constructive in day care?

Mr. PERCY. I think we would be ill
goaded to go to this corporation and establish this corporation until we actually know more than we do now. I really cannot tell the Senator what the reaction of the leader-

Mr. President, I think that the chairman, Senator Long, is a statesman, and I think he is struggling with this problem, and I think he is trying to do the best he can and to work out a compromise. I think the chairman of the Finance Committee when I testified before him, the chairman, Senator Long, insisted on.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, may the President have the floor?

Mr. President, I think under the provisions of the Act, the President is to be the best possible, after a consideration of alternatives, and after—we have had many arguments on these proposals, and I think the President is to be the best possible, after a consider-

I should like to point out that this is the single organization that is going to have the job of meeting of the Nation's child care needs in its hands. For example, on page 420:

The corporation should have the responsibility and authority to meet the Nation's needs for adequate child care services.

Mr. President, that may have the reponsibility and authority, but they are not going to have the resources or the organization. So it is left to me to be a most improvident provision.

I point out to the Senator that it is not wants very much to see it stricken from the bill.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, there is one further point I might make lest we believe that it will alleviate some aspects of the situation until, early in the next Congress, we have had an opportunity to adopt a comprehensive solution.

Thus, Mr. President, I shall vote for the amendment to strike which will serve as temporary funding for a solution to this problem by increasing Federal participation in the financing of day care facilities. The bill provides a temporary operation other than the kind we want.

Mr. JAVITS. I would say, looking at it from the point of view of the chairman of the Finance Committee, that they would immediately have to go into the day care business for the relatively upper income families, in order to make the program viable financially. So, all our purposes here would be defeated at one fell swoop, because we are setting conditions which obviously they cannot meet, and still have $250 million. It has to have $250 million worth of assets or more.

How is it ever really going to be able to accomplish that?

Mr. JAVITS. I yield.

Mr. MONDALE. The comments just made by the Senator from Kentucky are very useful. I had not realized what he stated. We have had hearings before the Subcommittee on this proposal, which I introduced along with about 20 others, which we call the Headstart Childhood Development Act of 1970. It is a number of nationally recognized early childhood specialists in the country. I am pleased to say that the President was wise in appointing one of our witnesses, Dr. Zigler, as the Director of Headstart Childhood Development. Dr. Zigler is recognized as one of the best experts in the field.

I came away from the hearings appalled by the way we treat our preschool children. I felt increasing concern that as the Nation moves in the direction of dealing with the problems of the first 5 years of life, particularly for the most disadvantaged, we make sure that we do so in a way that will make a difference. A child—especially a young child—is a sensitive and highly destructible entity.

Middle-class American parents do everything they can for their children, with decent housing, the best nutrition and health assistance in the world, with all the love and affection they can provide, and when it all over they hope and pray that, somehow, their children will make it. But, under this proposal, we would take a different approach. When a child in its early formative years, the emphasis is on letting the child stay at home and rear the house to work. In the interim we take the child—like a commodity—and stack him like cordwood in

On page 434 of the bill, it states that the Corporation will receive $50 million, and starting in 1975 they must pay it back at the rate of $2 million a year. This is $2 million a year out of its revenues from day care centers. However, to borrow the $250 million from the public, it says on page 436 of the bill:

Any such bonds may be secured by assets of the Corporation, including, but not limited to, fees, rentals, or other charges which the Corporation receives for the use of any facility for child care which the Corporation has an interest.

In order to borrow the $250 million, what kind of assets is it going to be able to build in the meantime?

It has a $50 million debt which it has to start paying back in 1975 at the rate of $2 million a year. It cannot borrow $250 million. It has to have $250 million worth of assets or more.

How is it ever really going to be able to accomplish that?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimously that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter which was received this morning be printed in the Record.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

POSITION PAPER—FEDERAL CHILD CARE CORPORATION Act of 1970—An Amendment to the Family Assistance Plan

While the basic purposes of the bill are valid, there are a number of significant objections which the National Association for Black Child Development raises to the Family Assistance Act. Child care services will be paid in whole or part by the Federal government, and the lack of approval by that organization will set a poor precedent for the evaluation of our child care services. It is currently written, 'the lack of approval by that organization for the proposed child care services, designated as outlined in 'Standards for Child Care,' Section 2006 (b), is monopoly focusing on child care services that do not meet the needs of the nation for child care services. We also call attention to the very important child care component of the Family Assistance Plan which will receive considerable consideration by the 92d Congress. We do not believe that the Corporation would be in a position to handle that program when it becomes law.

That is the case as I see it for the amendment. I hope very much that the Senate will agree to the amendment and for the present— that is all we ask— strike a balance between the two propositions of the amendment. We think both proposals are right and should be put into the bill.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I would like to ask if we might agree to a limitation on debate so that we could vote at some time early this afternoon on this amendment.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate vote on this matter in 20 minutes, the time to be equally divided between the opponents and the proponents of the amendment.

Mr. HARRIS. That is satisfactory with me.
December 29, 1970

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 21329

Components of the bill that are objectionable:

1. Lack of appropriate representation on the Corporate Board and Advisory Council of Black and other minority people;

2. Lack of assurance of quality programs via the proposed ratios as outlined in the Act;

3. Lack of a certification process for individual child care workers in the care of children in the various proposed child care programs;

4. Lack of an objective evaluation process of the proposed Corporate Board.

The Act does not reflect a process of accountability as exemplified in the revolving fund concept, that is, the ability to return to Congress every two years. It appears that the Advisory Council who have been appointed by the Corporate Board will be the evaluative mechanism. This suggests a self-evaluation process, to which we are opposed;

5. Black and minority group firms will find it difficult to receive contracts for providing child care programs;

6. The possibility that the proposed Corporation will perpetuate custodial programs is growing due to the lack of specific program criteria. There is no mentioning in the present Act of the ages of children and the different ratios of children in relationship to this factor.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, reference was made earlier to the Child Welfare League. I have here comments on the Federal Child Care Corporation provisions prepared by the Child Welfare League. I call attention to excerpts from these comments in which it was said, for example:

In fact, the many implications of S. 4101 are so far reaching and of such importance that we believe there needs to be a very careful examination and analysis of the impact of the bill's provisions by this Committee and by a wide variety of Government and non-Government witnesses. Assessment of S. 4101, alone, might well require many weeks. Because of the press of business already before this Committee, we respectfully suggest that substantive discussion of this important legislation take place within the context of a full Committee hearing, arranged for the earliest possible date. The League would be pleased to assist the Committee in any possible way to prepare for these hearings. We believe that the Committee should fully utilize the many resources and pledge our cooperation.

I certainly support that statement.

Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record other excerpts from these comments made by the Child Welfare League.

There being no objection, the excerpts were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

There have been several other bills introduced in both the House and the Senate dealing with various kinds of children's services, including "Head Start" type programs, child development services, early childhood education and day care. A common feature has been a concern for the children of mothers who are employed and for the proposed programs of the Federal Child Care Corporation. It charges for the services it is providing.

What types of programs should be authorized, and how will they be funded? What is the so-called "needs" of children be considered separately from the educational and developmental needs, or should these programs be combined?

Are the programs needed for the children of working parents essentially different from those required for children from disadvantaged and so-called "culturally-defrived" families?

What are the criteria by which the Corporation will judge the quality of any child care program? If it is to provide adequately for a child's developmental and educational needs, who is the child's mother? Is the child employed and absent from home?

We believe that the Committee should consider the following questions before concluding that the so-called "quasi-governmental body such as the Federal Child Care Corporation is advisable.

Is it advisable to authorize all child care services to any one agency—whether that agency is governmental, like the Office of Child Development, or quasi-governmental, like the proposed Federal Child Care Corporation?

Is it possible to utilize the administrative skill and the trained personnel at various levels within the government agencies to design programs and deliver programs through an existing government agency?

Several Committees have recommended fuller utilization of Head Start programs to date, but they are currently half-time care facilities. Is it desirable to have one agency, such as the relatively new Office of Child Development, administer the large Head Start program of another Federal agency to administer all other child care services?

HEW had virtually no funding to finance remodeling, or construction of new child care facilities. Does this factor make it difficult to assess the Department's ability to assume the responsibility of meeting the Nation's needs for adequate child care services?

What would be the relationship between the Office of Child Development, with its highly-trained and skilled Director, and the Federal Child Care Corporation?

Skilled, capable personnel in the field of child development, special work, psychology, and education are in very short supply. But some of these scarce and skilled professionals are capable of administering and developing the standards necessary for such . . . .

Mr. COOK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Kentucky.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. COOK. Mr. President, I would like to direct these remarks to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, because, for the life of me, I cannot figure out how financially this Corporation will be able to come into existence. If it borrows its maximum of $250 million, floats a non-Government-guaranteed bond, and if they are fortunate enough on that basis to sell a public bond at 7 percent interest the first year alone would be $17.5 million. Then, by the bonds maturing after 25 years, it is conceivable their first principal payment in the first year would be $10 million. Then they have an automatic payback of their $50 million be-Here, too, the Corporation will charge for services provided in the facilities it constructs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 2 additional minutes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, one of the great crying needs in this entire child welfare area is the need for adequate child-care services for working mothers. There are two major problems involved. One problem is that the States need fiscal help. We took care of that by liberalizing the matching formula. No one complains about that. Second, we need to have someone who has the ability and will to provide child-care services.

Most State welfare agencies are, apparently, not well equipped to do this now, and this is evidenced by the fact that they are not now using even half of the Federal funds we have made available.

How do we handle this problem? We set up a Federal Child Care Corporation, start it out with a $50 million loan from the Treasury to get it into operation, and then have the Corporation make child care services to as many mothers as possible who would like to have child care provided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired. Does the Senator yield himself additional time?

Mr. LONG. Not at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield myself 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a memorandum in support of this amendment be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

MEMO IN SUPPORT OF HARRIS-JAYTS-MONDAL AMENDMENT TO STRIKE THE FEDERAL CHILD CARE CORPORATION PROVISIONS FROM HR. 17650

1. There have been inadequate hearings on this far-reaching piece of legislation and insufficient effort to coordinate it with other Federal programs which touch on day care services. Many parts of this provision could be improved by thoughtful amendment, but there is simply not time to handle this whole matter at this late date in the session.

2. The whole question of child care will come up again anyway early in the next session in connection with welfare reform. There is no need to rush into this major new program now.

3. There is a great need to expand child care services, but two fundamental requirements must be met: parental involvement and community control. These requirements are not properly safeguarded in the provision as it now stands.

4. Standards set up by the bill are inadequate in regard to child-staff ratio, staff qualifications, facility standards (this bill would exempt the Corporation from all standards), and, most importantly, in regard to child development concepts.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I think the case has been made adequately. It comes down to whether we are aborting all other plans and opting for a plan that is much too small for the situation and a plan that is not financially viable. I believe the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Coors) put his finger on the problem in the Corporation with $300 million to operate, and with this kind of income from welfare agencies it cannot be financially viable. Hence it will have trouble selling bonds. We will put ourselves in a box.

Let us not abort other plans and improvidently opt for a plan which has not been designed or developed to meet the situation because we will not know the plan for child care for the country until we finally deal with FAP.

For all those reasons I believe that the amendment is an appropriate vehicle for the Senate to get out of the situation which we have in this Corporation and with the other difficulties we have gotten into.

There has been inadequate inquiry into this matter and there are many flaws in the proposal. It aborts the situation long before we are ready for it and coming at this time in this session it is most imprudent.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, throughout the consideration of this bill I have found myself in sharp disagreement with the chairman of my committee over certain provisions. But that does not mean every position he advances is wrong. In this instance the Senator from Louisiana has a good idea and it has my support.

We must realize that in this country we have need for day-care facilities for some 7 million children. We only have facilities for about 100,000 children. Consequently, throughout this Nation, in small towns and big cities, we are unsuccessful in many of our social programs because there are insufficient facilities to assist mothers with young children.

The WIN program, the work incentive program, adopted in the Senate in fiscal 1969, appropriated $25 million and has used only $4 million. If we appropriated $52 million and used only $18 million.

The reason why such small percentages were used was due to lack of facilities in the United States to take care of the children involved. What has been proposed here is not an exclusive program; and here is where I think the Senator from Oklahoma and the Senator from New York misread the purpose of the particular Corporation sought to be brought into existence. In the family assistance plan, which failed, there was provision that some $300 million go for day care. In this bill there is some $250 million for day care.

That does not mean the proposals the Senators from Indiana or New York or Oklahoma have in mind would be immediately put out of existence because of the proposal. What the Senator from Louisiana is saying in this bill is this: We have been unsuccessful over the past decades in providing child care services.

The old methods just are not working and we must find a mechanism that is right for today, and not a mechanism that has failed in the past.

We are saying here that the Federal Corporation would be the coordinating corporation to supply in-service training and day-care facilities involving diversity and imagination. In some areas a church could be used. In some areas a school could be used. In some areas an apartment house could be used. In some areas an existing day-care center could be used. In other areas of the country where there are no day-care facilities, it might become necessary to build such facilities. So there is a great variety.

The Senator from Louisiana is bringing forth a new concept where the old facilities supplied by the Welfare bureaucracy that exists through American life is just as strong in the entire social welfare field and there is a reluctance to try out new concepts and new ideas.

The ideas that are advanced by the Senator from Louisiana deserve our attention and cooperation. Three men will be appointed by the President of the United States with the advice and consent of the Senate to run the Corporation. It will have an advisory committee to advise the Directors.

The bill would permit the Child Care Corporation to make available a wide variety of child-care services where they are not available today. Such services would include educational, recreational, and home-care services.

No welfare agency, no community, no individual has any obligation to use the facilities supplied by the Child Care Corporation. They can use any facilities in existence or to come into existence. This is not mandatory. It just is a mechanism to allow day care to become a reality. The goal of the Corporation is to arrange to make child care services available where they are needed. Its first priority will be to provide service to welfare recipients who need child care to undertake employment.

I have been intimately connected for many years with this great movement, and there is no group more dedicated to the improvement of social service laws than the day-care-center movement. Yet they have had great difficulty getting the movement off the ground, and, consequently, we find ourselves as a nation with only 10 percent of our children receiving any kind of child care.

I commend the Senator from Louisiana for realizing that there is a new method, a new concept, to take care of the problems of tomorrow. I would hope the Senate would give attention to a new idea which the proposal is worth trying because past methods and past ideas have failed.
In addition, Mr. President, two other specific provisions of the pending social security legislation, S. R. 17550, deserve special consideration and support by the Senate.

Since the original medicare program was enacted in 1965, over 20 million Americans have been enrolled and are eligible for its benefits. However, many Americans have not been permitted to share in this program. In particular, public employees in a number of States, including Connecticut, are not eligible for medicare because they have not been part of the national social security program.

Several years ago, I introduced legislation to permit these employees to enroll in medicare. I introduced similar legislation again during this Congress. I am pleased to report that both the House of Representatives and the Senate Finance Committee have approved this concept. Section 202 of the present bill would permit employees who are not part of the social security system to Part B of the medicare insurance program of people reaching age 65 who are not part of the social security system. The cost of this medicare insurance is estimated at $27 a month. State and public organizations, by agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will be permitted to purchase this needed protection for their members on a group basis.

Some type of hospital insurance, of course, has been available to these people through only limited coverage is offered. Private insurers make available comprehensive hospital insurance to the aged. Eligibility for medicare will assure these citizens of adequate health protection.

Mr. President, I am also pleased to note that this legislation makes an urgently needed and long-overdue increase in the retirement income tax credit available to taxpayers 65 years of age or over who have retired under a public retirement system.

Since social security benefits are not taxed, it is only a matter of equity to provide an offsetting tax credit for retirees who are not eligible for social security but have contributed to a retirement plan other than social security.

The retirement income tax credit was first enacted into law in 1952. In 1962, the credit for an individual was increased and a corresponding increase for married couples was passed in 1964. Since that time, social security benefits have been increased substantially: by 7 percent in 1965, 13 percent in 1967, 15 percent in 1969, and an additional 10 percent in the Senate version of H.R. 17550.

Regrettably, the retirement income tax credit has not kept pace.

On September 29, 1969, I introduced legislation to restore an element of tax equity to many of our older citizens by increasing the base amount on which the retirement credit is computed from $1,524 to $1,872 for individuals and from $2,386 to $2,805 for couples. This would increase the credit from $228.60 to $280.80 for individuals and from $342.90 to $421.20 for couples. I am pleased to report that the Committee and the Senate Finance Committee have adopted this provision and I hope the full Senate will support it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana has 1 minute remaining. Does the Senator yield back his time?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Less than 1 minute now.

Mr. LONG. Just to summarize, Mr. President, we have heard the opposition to doing something to provide child care by Senators who themselves have introduced measures in this area. The measures of the Senator from New York would cost about $3 billion. The Senator from Indiana has a bill that would cost $6 billion. The Senator from Minnesota has a bill that might cost more than $8 billion.

In the committee bill, we are simply trying to provide $50 million to get a Corporation started in order to try to see that child care is provided. That is the best that we have been able to work out in committee. In the past, we have not been able to get the job done by just providing money, so this time we provide both money and a mechanism to get the job done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the Harris-Javits amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. KENNEDY. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Anderson), the Senator from North Dakota (Mr. Burdick), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Dodd), the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Eagleton), the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Eastland), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Gore), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Hart), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings), the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Inouye), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. McCarthy), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Montoya), the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Russell), and the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Stevenson) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Stevenson) would vote "nay." I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Hart) would vote "yea."

Mr. GRIFFIN. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. Goldwater) is absent on official business.

The Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Fong), the Senator from Oregon (Mr. Hatfield), the Senator from Texas (Mr. Tower), and the Senator from Delaware (Mr. Williams) are necessarily absent.
SOCIAL SECURITY AMENDMENTS OF 1970

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill (H.R. 17550) to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes.

Mr. HARRIS. Mr. President, following conversations I have had with the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG), concerning possible hearings next year in regard to the entire subject of day care, I am willing now to go to third reading. On behalf of myself and the distinguished Senator from New York (Mr. JAVI茨), we are willing to forego offering the second amendment in regard to child care which was referred to in last night's agreement. We are willing to do that if the bill can go now directly to third reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BELL-MON). Under the agreement of last evening, the technical amendments may now be offered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have a number of technical amendments which I send to the desk. They are technical, clerical, perfecting, and conforming amendments, and I ask that they be considered and approved en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the reading of the technical amendments will be dispensed with and they will be printed in the Record at this point.

(B) Section 444 (d) of such Act is amended by striking out “work the Senator has done in the committee, as well as here on the Senate floor, in regard to matters in which he was interested. I also believe it is well to point out that the committee, the Senator from Georgia (Mr. TALMADGE), the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RIOCE), and others, all made major contributions to the bill that stands before us. Although there is, of course, a great deal of room for revision and debate on the controversial items, I think the Senate has come forth with an extremely significant bill and one which I believe will do the Senate credit.

Mr. JAVITS. Mr. President, I join other Senators in congratulating the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. It could almost be said in saying that this could not be done. The Senator from Louisiana, in a rare example of subordinating his own feelings and his own deep convictions, got it done. I think it is entitled to all the credit we can give him. Even on the Child Care Corporation on which we differ, I have never said and I do not say now that it is not an ingenuously fresh idea, but I feel that the Senator, for himself, that I will dig into this matter very carefully. For all I know, we may well up with exactly that. So that I think the Senator has not done the Senate, and I would like to join my colleagues in paying tribute to the Senator from Louisiana.

I also join with my colleagues in praise of those members of both the executive and legislative branches who worked so hard on the family assistance plan, and particularly of Mitchell Ginsburg, former head of the Human Resources Administration and now dean of Columbia School of Racial Work, who so tirelessly made every effort... to obtain passage this year. It is my hope that early and favorable consideration next year will make this year’s effort a fulfilled one both for the individual worker and for the poor.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, I wish to join my colleagues, the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS), and the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. CARTHY), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. RIBICOFF), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. HARRIS), the Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER), the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. HANSEN), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Gore), the Senator from Connecticut, and Senator from Louisiana and the Senate will adopt the House version.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any discussion?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, in paying tribute to our ranking minority member, Senator Williams of Delaware, who has made great contributions. The Senator from Connecticut (Mr. RISICOFF), the Senator from California (Mr. HANSEN), the Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER), the Senator from Arizona (Mr. FANNIN), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. HARRIS), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. GORE), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. MCCARTHY), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. HARTRE), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. FULBRIGHT), the Senator from Virginia (Mr. BROWN), the Senator from Utah (Mr. BENNETT), the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. CURTIS), and the Senator from Idaho (Mr. JORDAN) on both sides of the aisle made major contributions to this mammoth piece of legislation.

I think it is a landmark in the history of the Senate.

I congratulate my distinguished chairman and all the members of the Finance Committee who made such valiant contributions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the acting President has expired.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for 5 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, the legislation that we are about to pass has much in it that is worthwhile.

I must repeat, however, my disappointment that the family assistance program did not come to a vote. I believe the Senate should have been given the opportunity to vote on the merits of this proposal.

I, too, have the highest praise for the chairman and the other members of the Finance Committee for their hard work.

I pay tribute to Mr. Mitchell Ginsberg of New York, now dean of the University of Columbia School of Social Work, who really literally worked himself sick in trying to work out the compromises necessary to resolve the many differences which arose in drafting a workable family assistance program. Mitchell Ginsberg deserves the things of everyone’s concern with alleviating the blight of poverty in the United States. I think the people will also have been one most responsible for developing the foundations necessary for the eventual passage of family assistance.

Special tribute should also be paid to the staff of the Department of HEW, Under Secretary Jack Veneman, Deputy Under Secretary Bob Patricelli, Special Assistant to the Undersecretary Tom Joe, and Deputy Assistant Secretary Howard Cohen.

I am confident that early next year the Senate will have an opportunity to completely consider and debate the family assistance program, and I predict that this family assistance program will be adopted next year. The men I have named must be credited with a large part of this success.

I also point out that, while on the floor today I cast a narrow vote, the chairman’s proposal for a child care corporation was stricken from the bill, it is my personal opinion that this is one of the most imaginative proposals to have come forth in the entire field of social welfare. Once it is understood that we are breaking out of the bureaucratic and treating social problems, I believe that next year the Senate will have a better opportunity to understand the proposal of the Senator from Louisiana and the Senate will adopt it.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, will the Senate yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. PASTORE. Mr. President, I join my colleagues in paying tribute to the following members of the Economic Opportunity Act—part E, section 161, a portion of the congressional finding with respect to the Operation Mainstream and New Careers programs. The Congress found that:

These two programs, providing jobs for the unemployed and low-income persons leading to broader career opportunities are uniquely effective; that, in addition to providing persons assisting with the key to their economic independence, these programs are of advantage to the community at large in that they contribute to community beautification and betterment and the improvement of health, education, welfare, public safety, and other public services; and.

Am I correct in my assumption that such programs will be included in the concept of public service employment envisaged by the bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the acting Senator has expired.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may have such time as I require.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator is entirely correct. He will find the committee report emphasizes and underlines particularly to the chairman of the committee who marshalled this bill through to a successful enactment. The Senate bill provides for a 3-year continuation of programs on social welfare, as against a 5-year extension by the House.

I would hope that the same kind of ingenuity, the same kind of acumen and energy will be exerted in the conference to have the House go along with the Senate on a 10-percent increase rather than 5 percent.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I join in paying tribute to the committee for the remarkable work he and the committee have done.

Let me say first to the chairman that his fairness, tolerance, patience, skill, good humor all throughout the consideration of this measure have been tremendous. He has won for himself the unifying respect of many Senators for his performance on this measure.

I ask the distinguished chairman a question about section 520 of the pending measure?

In title V of the bill—the so-called WIN amendment—the words “special work projects” are stricken and the words “public service employment” are inserted.

Also, there are a number of other references in section 520 to “public service employment.”

I worked very closely with the chairman on this measure and with Senator TALMADGE who offered it in Committee, and Senator RUSCOFF, who also has a distinguished record in this matter and had prepared a parallel amendment. I understand that “Operation Mainstream” and “New Careers”—programs authorized in part E of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964—would be included within the public service employment intended by the pending measure.

I would like to read very briefly from the Economic Opportunity Act, part E, section 161, a portion of the congressional finding with respect to the Operation Mainstream and New Careers programs.

The Congress found that:

These two programs, providing jobs for the unemployed and low-income persons leading to broader career opportunities are uniquely effective; that, in addition to providing persons assisting with the key to their economic independence, these programs are of advantage to the community at large in that they contribute to community beautification and betterment and the improvement of health, education, welfare, public safety, and other public services;

PART E—SPECIAL WORK AND CAREER DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

SEC. 161. The Congress finds that the "Mainstream" program, designed to provide the chronically unemployed and the "New Careers" program providing jobs for the unemployed and low-income persons leading to broader career opportunities are uniquely effective; that, in addition to providing persons assisted with jobs, the key to their economic independence, these programs are of advantage to the community at large in that they are directed at community beautification and betterment and the improvement of health, education, welfare, public safety, and other public services; and that, while these programs are important and necessary components of comprehensive work and training programs, there is a need to encourage imaginative and innovative use of these programs, to enlarge the authority to operate them and to increase the resources available for them.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

SEC. 162. (a) The Director is authorized to provide financial assistance to public or private nonprofit organizations to stimulate and support efforts to provide the unemployed with jobs and the low-income worker with greater career opportunity. Programs authorized under this section shall include the following:

1. A special program to be known as "Maintaining Services" which serves work activities directed to the needs of those chronically unemployed poor who have poor employment prospects and are unable, because of age, physical condition, obsolete or inadequate skills, declining economic conditions, other causes of a lack of employment opportunity, or other disabilities, to secure appropriate work-training and education, and other components of comprehensive work and training assistance under other programs, and which, in addition to other services provided, will enable such persons to participate in projects for the betterment or beautification of the community or area served by the program, including without limitation activities which will contribute to the management conservation, or development of natural resources, recreational areas, Federal, State, and local government, and other relevant facilities, the rehabilitation of housing, the improvement of public facilities, and the improvement and expansion of health, education, day care, and recreation services;

2. A special program to be known as "New Careers" which will provide unemployed or low-income persons with jobs leading to career opportunities, including new types of careers, in programs designed to improve the physical conditions, or the cultural condition of the community or area served by the program, including without limitation activities which will contribute to the management conservation, or development of natural resources, recreational areas, Federal, State, and local government, and other relevant facilities, the rehabilitation of housing, the improvement of public facilities, and the improvement and expansion of health, education, day care, and recreation services;

3. A special program to be known as "Mainstream" which involves work activities directed to the needs of employment, will be appropriate and reasonable; and the substitution of Federal for other funds is necessary to promote the effective use of funds.

SPECIAL CONDITIONS

SEC. 164. (a) The Director shall not provide financial assistance for any program under this part which includes activities, in accordance with such regulations as he may prescribe, that:

1. No participant will be employed on projects involving political parties, or the construction, operation, or maintenance of so much of any facility as is used or to be used for sectarian instruction or as a place for religious worship;

2. The program will not result in the displacement of employed workers or impede existing contracts for services, or result in the substitution of Federal for other funds in connection with the work that would otherwise be performed without Federal assistance; or

3. The rates of pay for time spent in work-training and education, and other conditions of employment will be appropriate and reasonable; and the substitution of Federal for other funds is necessary to promote the effective use of funds.

PROGRAM PARTICIPANTS

SEC. 165. (a) Participants in programs under this part must be unemployed or low-income persons. The Director, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security, shall establish criteria for low income, taking into consideration family size, urban-rural, and farm-nonfarm differences, and other relevant factors. Any individual shall be deemed to be low-income if the family receives cash welfare payments.

(b) Participants must be permanent residents of the Territory of the Pacific Islands.

(c) Participants shall not be deemed Federal employees and shall not be subject to the provisions relating to Federal employment, including those relating to hours of work, rates of compensation, leave, unemployment insurance, and Federal employment benefits.

EQUITABLE DISTRIBUTION OF ASSISTANCE

SEC. 166. The Director shall establish criteria designed to achieve equitable distribution of assistance along the States. In developing these criteria, he shall consider, among other factors, the relative contributions of the States in terms of unemployment and underemployment, and other relevant factors. Any individual shall be deemed to be low-income if the family receives cash welfare payments.

SEC. 167. Programs assisted under this part shall be subject to the provisions of section 131 of this Act.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia and the Senator from Connecticut led the fight on this particular amendment. The Senator is correct in his interpretation of that section.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, the amendment was based primarily upon the Auerbach report which was financed with Federal funds. They made a report and neither the Department of HEW nor the Labor Department put their recommendations into effect. It was the opinion of the Committee on Finance that they ought to be put into effect.

I had offered an amendment making 10 important changes in the work incentive program. The distinguished Senator from Connecticut had offered some amendments along parallel lines. In committee, the Senator from Connecticut very gallantly said:

I think that Senator Talmadge's amendment are better than mine. I think his amendments should be adopted.

That is what the committee did. We are hopeful that these amendments will bring some order out of chaos in the WIN program which was adopted by the Senate 3 years ago and never fully implemented.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my speech of July 20, introducing my amendment, be printed in the Record at this point in my remarks.

Mr. President, the Committee of which I am a member, after consideration of considerable amendments along parallel lines, in committee, the Senator from Connecticut very gallantly said:

I think that Senator Talmadge's amendment are better than mine. I think his amendments should be adopted.

Mr. President, I asked unanimous consent that my speech of July 20, introducing my amendment, be printed in the Record at this point in my remarks.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, on several previous occasions I have spoken out against certain aspects of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act passed by the House. However, when the Finance Committee rejected the Family Assistance Plan, I offered my proposal as an amendment to H.R. 17550, the Social Security Amendments of 1970.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SUBMISSION OF AMENDMENT TO H.R. 16311

THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE ACT

AMENDMENT NO. 786

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, on several previous occasions I have spoken out against certain aspects of H.R. 16311, the administration's Family Assistance Act.

I have expressed doubts about the cost figures given by the administration.

I have expressed grave reservations about the work incentive aspects of the bill. I have shown the weaknesses of the evidence produced by the "New Jersey experiment," which in my opinion the administration has presented to show that its family assistance plan will work.

On May 14, I introduced an amendment to change the name of H.R. 16311 from "The Family Assistance Act of 1970" to "The Welfare Expansion Act of 1970." This was done to emphasize the fact that the Finance Committee's consideration of this legislation.

Although the administration's bill has been widely heralded as welfare reform, the chief characteristic of the bill which passed the House of Representatives is not welfare reform, but welfare expansion. The most noticeable feature of this legislation is to extend welfare benefits to 15 million additional Americans.

I had hoped that the revised version of H.R. 16311, which the administration recently sent back to the Finance Committee, would make meaningful improvements which would add substance to administration rhetoric. Unfortunately, the proposal has been disappointed.

The purpose of the amendment which I will introduce today is to strengthen the work incentive, job training, and job placement features of the administration's legislation. The administration slogan about "workfare rather than welfare" will have an element of truth.

I first introduced a similar amendment in August 1969 that he would seek major welfare legislation, he selected as his major theme his intention to "turn welfare into work," by transferring to the kind of public service employment. Given to the President's proposals, you would get the impression that Congress had never been to help with a work incentive program. In fact, I first announced in August 1969 that by 1971 the Department is still working on the answers to the questions we raised at the end of April about the bill. For example, present law has since July 1969 barred a greater portion of earnings in determining need for welfare as a work incentive.

I asked of the Administration on April 29 how many welfare recipients have benefited from these earned income disregard provisions, and to what extent welfare recipients have increased as a result of the provision. This seemed to me a very basic question in view of the fact the Department was recommending that there be no substantive change in the income exemption. I found to my surprise that they had no idea of the answer of this question. To this date, they have not submitted the answer to my question of 2½ months ago, and this is but one of many examples.

Mr. President, in a way I am sorry we did not have the chance to interrogate the Secretary of Labor before the hearings were held in May. For if we had questioned him, I am sure that the Department of Labor would have taken more seriously the committee's corrective and substantive things which to provide a meaningful work incentive program.

In looking through the administration's revised bill, I feel that they have made no substantive change of note in the work incentive provisions.

Mr. President, the Labor Department last year conducted an Auerbach Corp. to review and evaluate operations under the work incentive program. That firm conducted on-the-job training within the program there in depth. The report of the Auerbach Corp. states:

"The basic idea is workable—though some aspects of the legislation require modification."

Unfortunately, the administration has largely ignored the conclusions of the Auerbach report and has gone off in another direction in the revision it has incorporated in both the original welfare bill and in the administration revision.

Today, Mr. President, I am submitting an amendment to the bill designed to improve the present work incentive program along the lines that experience has shown are necessary. I would like to outline here what my amendment would do.

First, it would mandate coordination between the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare on the national, regional and local levels. Today, certain regulations of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare run counter to work incentive program conflict with regulations of the Department of Labor. My amendment would require that all regulations on the work incentive program be coordinated jointly by both agencies, and that they be issued within 6 months of enactment of the bill.

Second, it would require that a joint H.E.W.-Labor Joint Committee be set up to review program forms, reports, and other matters are handled consistently between the two departments. It is imperative that the work incentive program be operated under one set of guidelines, policies, and administrative procedures.

Third, it would require the welfare agency is supposed to prepare an employability plan for each appropriate case and make referrals to the Department of Labor.
vated businessman to undertake this responsibility without some compensation. My amendment would simplify the process of securing adequate public service employment under the work incentive program by providing 100 percent Federal funding for the period of time that Federal sharing of the costs in subsequent years.

Seventh, my amendment would establish clear priority among persons registering for employment and training, although they could volunteer to upgrade their skills if they wished. Under my amendment, no mother who would be required to undergo work and training; wishes, and in training; would be required to undergo work and training; wished. Under my amendment, no mother wishing to upgrade her skills would be given priority over those who are unable to care for themselves—the aged, blind, disabled, and the very young.

Fifth, all other persons. My amendment would not require persons working full time to register for employment and training, although they could volunteer to upgrade their skills if they wished. Under my amendment, no mother who would be required to undergo work and training; wishes, and in training; would be required to undergo work and training; wished. Under my amendment, no mother wishing to upgrade her skills would be given priority over those who are unable to care for themselves—the aged, blind, disabled, and the very young.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia has been very helpful and tremendously cooperative on this important aspect of the bill. I am most grateful to him.

Mr. TALMADGE. Mr. President, all members of the committee deserve praise in this case. My amendments were adopted unanimously. The staff of the Finance Committee as well as my own staff have worked diligently for months on this matter. I offered these amendments hoping to bring some order out of chaos. The Committee on Finance adopted them unanimously without any change whatever.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I confirm the comments of the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Georgia. We were disturbed in the Finance Committee over the fact that the WIN program was not successful and was not being utilized. The estimates of the Department of Labor were much lower than would have been the case. The provisions in the bill provide that at least 40 percent of the funds be spent for public service jobs or on job training with some meaning of the interpretation of the definition read by the Senator from California with respect to the concept of public service jobs.

We would hope the Labor Department would really become interested and become involved in public service jobs and on-the-job training so there would be meaningful reason to move people out of welfare, and not into dead end jobs.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I wish to express my thanks to the Senator from Connecticut for his leadership in this area and open-mindedness and courtesy throughout.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. President, I join Senators in paying tribute to our distinguished chairman, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long). He has been very courteous and fair with all. As I pointed out on the floor previously, this means that the relatively low-income wage earners who are trying to maintain their families are going to be paying social security taxes to make up for the lack of taxes paid by so many of these recipients of the $100 minimum.

There is no question that many of those $100 minimum recipients need the money, but that money should come from the general fund of the treasury and not out of the hides of the low-income people who are paying taxes. That causes a very serious minus in the bill which we do not like.

To me one of the most serious defects in the bill is the fact that the $100 minimum social security is to be funded out of the social security trust fund.

I am also disappointed that the bill does not contain something covering catastrophic illness, disease, and injury. The Senator from Louisiana offered what I thought was a reasonable approach to this serious problem, one we should have faced up to and taken action on even before action on Medicare and Medicaid.

As I said in the debate on Medicare, I could cite more than 700 individuals over 35 years of age who are taken with multiple sclerosis than with someone who happens to be over 65 who may be a wealthy individual. The Senate has not faced up to that serious problem.

The Senator from Louisiana did his best to meet that situation. I compliment him on his statesmanship in being willing to delete this very important provision in order to move on with the job of the social security bill.

But Mr. President, the most unprecended and most important feature of the bill is the automatic increase in social security benefits to keep pace with increases in the cost of living.
The Senate will recall that in 1982, we took such action with respect to civil service retirees. That is what gave me the idea to introduce, and I believe it was for the first time, a proposal in 1963 to provide automatic increases in social security benefits to keep pace with increases in the cost of living. I said at the time I introduced this proposal that if we did that in 1963, for civil service retirees, we should do it for all social security beneficiaries. I introduced that proposal again in 1965, in 1967, and in 1969.

Thanks to the attention and the hard work on the part of some of my colleagues and a number of the senior citizens’ organizations around the country, this proposal has been increasing in its bipartisan support. Last year President Nixon was the first President in the history of this country to recommend such a proposal to Congress. I think it is a great thing that we now have this pretty well locked into law because the House bill does contain the basic elements of the automatic increase proposals.

There are a few differences over the financing, but I am sure those can be handled in conference. So, Mr. President, in the history of this country to recommend such a proposal to Congress, I think it is a great thing that we now have this pretty well locked into law because the House bill does contain the basic elements of the automatic increase proposals.

There is a few differences over the financing, but I am sure those can be handled in conference. So, Mr. President, in the history of this country to recommend such a proposal to Congress, I think it is a great thing that we now have this pretty well locked into law because the House bill does contain the basic elements of the automatic increase proposals.

Second, the increase in the minimum social security benefits from the present $84 per month to $100 per month at an annual cost of $1.5 billion to the social security trust fund is inequitable. Acting impulsively on the simplistic plea that “no one can live on sixty four dollars a month”, the Senate last December adopted such an amendment to the Tax Reform Act of 1971. This was quite properly disposed of by the House Conference during the conference on the bill who noted that a large number of those recipients of the social security minimum already receive benefits from one or two other pensions—civil service retirement, state and local retirement, or private corporation retirement; and that state old age assistance payments prevent anyone from having to live on $84 per month. Instead of applying a 10 percent increase in social security benefits across the boards to include the present minimum, which would mean an increase from $64 to $70.40 per month at an annual cost of $930 million, it is proposed to raise the minimum to $100—regardless of need—at a cost to the taxpayers of $1.5 billion per year.

Worse yet, this $1.5 billion plus the amount needed to cover a 10 percent increase in the minimum would be paid for by those paying social security taxes into the social security trust fund. Inasmuch as those who receive the “minimum” have not paid taxes sufficient to cover their benefits, the load is thrown on those who are already paying taxes sufficient to cover their benefits. In short, most of the minimum social security benefits provided by the bill represents welfare—not tax paid insurance. It should, therefore, be paid out of the general fund of the Treasury. Moreover, as welfare, the payments should be made on the basis of need, taking into account other resources of the recipient.

The bill makes no attempt to order our priorities. Instead, it contains all major social security proposals—the 10 percent increase in the minimum, and coverage of catastrophic illnesses and disease. It would seem that the single most urgent action to be taken—one that should have been taken long ago, before Medicare and medicaid—is coverage of catastrophic illness and disease. Also, it is only fair to bring social security benefits into line with increases in the cost of living which have occurred since benefits were last increased. It would appear that this would fall somewhere between the 5 percent increase provided by the House and the 10 percent increase provided by the Senate Finance Committee. The increase in the “minimum”—particularly the $1.5 billion needed to go beyond a cost-of-living increase—is inequitable and excessive.

Those who would be paying the bill should know what lies in store for them. The tax base would be raised from $7,800 to $9,000, with the following rate changes:

1. Additional costs of cash benefits are borne by employer-employee tax revenue because 7 percent limitation on tax for unwrapping cash benefits was not sufficient to finance medicare and catastrophic coverage. Although I believe that most people will be willing to pay increased taxes to assure cost-of-living increases in social security benefits, a reasonable degree of medicare coverage, and coverage under the catastrophic illness and disease program, we have reached the point of a taxpayers' revolt which is not necessary, unnecessary, or inequitable social security benefits.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the committee.

I think it would be redundant to repeat what has been so beautifully said already about the great job that has been done by our chairman and by the staff.

I do want to take this occasion to note the great contribution that has been made by the distinguished Senator from Delaware, who is retiring by his own choice from the Senate and this committee, and in this time.

I suspect that I share the feelings that everyone else in the country does over the failure of this Congress to get into welfare reform, but I am not certain at all that some of the proposals that were made would have achieved the objectives that were spelled out by the President of the United States—objectives to which I suspect we could all subscribe.

In this regard, I think the contribution that has been made by our great and loved friend from Delaware (Mr. Williams) may be significant as the years roll along.

I am especially appreciative of the great job our chairman has done in hearing this matter, in seeing that everyone who had a contribution to make was given an opportunity to have his say.

I hope that as we approach the coming session we will be able to examine more closely and to know better beforehand what would result from some proposals we have had before us before they become the law of the land.

I remember what the distinguished Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Russell) said some time ago, when he said he knew then what he now knows, he would never have recommended the Medicare and Medicaid programs that this country now has without their first having been tried out. I do so ought to endorse his same approach with family assistance.

I thank the distinguished Senator for yielding to me.

Mr. LONG. I thank the distinguished Senator, Mr. President, for his remarks. In support of what the Senator has said, I speak of the distinguished Senator from Delaware brought to the attention of the committee, and also of the Senate, a great number of problems that he has shown, and when the bill passed the House of Representatives, I am positive that when set on a more comprehensive welfare reform, the deep insight that was evidenced by the Senator from Delaware will reflect itself in our final decision. As he pointed out, while the plan sent to us looked pretty good on paper if one considered only the cash assistance program, if you looked at the whole picture welfare program, food stamps, public housing, medical, and child care—in terms of a welfare recipient's incentive to work, then a plan had seemed on its face to make good sense. But when I turned in another dimension of the problem, that was contribution from the Senator from Delaware which I think will eventually result in a better bill.

I would like to mention also the arduous and often thankless job in behalf of the distinguished Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON), whose time spent in the committee room I believe was exceeded only by that of the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. Darr. He is perhaps that of a chairman. Senator ANDERSON put in a fantastic number of hours working on this bill, and I am sure all the members of the committee appreciate his contributions to it. He is not present at this moment, but I certainly want to mention the fine contributions he made.

I yield to the distinguished Senator from New Mexico (Mr. ANDERSON).

Mr. FANNIN, Mr. President, I join in the tributes being paid to our distinguished chairman for his fairness, equity, and patience. I concur in the accolades that have been given him. I especially want to extend my thanks to him for the consideration he gave me and the many proposals I made, especially on the conservation of jobs in this Nation of ours, his ability to relate to those problems, with the long experience he has had on the committee.

I certainly commend him on the way he handles the committee, keeping everything moving along, being firm, but and still stern in his desire and demand that we accomplish our objectives. I, too, commend him for the team work he has displayed with the distinguished senior Senator from Delaware, who will now be leaving us, which will be a great loss. A very fine person will be taking his place on the committee, and I am very happy that the distinguished Senator from Vermont, Mr. Darr, is now a member. We have had the complete cooperation of the Senator from Utah (Mr. Darr) throughout the years he has served on the committee.

We have a tremendous task ahead, and our chairman recognizes that. I know he has agreed to have hearings on several subjects in which I am involved and which I think are very important to the future of the Nation. His recognition of the problems has been of great help to us.

Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on passage.

The Senate divided.

Mr. GOODELL. Mr. President, will the Senate yield me a few minutes?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. GOODELL. Mr. President, the fiction of the honorable Senator from South Carolina, Seab Cooley, well summed up in one of Allen Drury's works the problems which we have had with the family assistance plan and social security. He said that—

What worries me about that office is that a man can get to balancing so many things against so many other things that resulted in our failure to balance. He never does really move forward; he's too busy balancing, worrying about what this one's going to do or is going to think. Sometimes you have to go straight ahead and say damn them all.

Indeed, we have balanced. We have balanced so judiciously, so prudently, so well that we have balanced ourselves—although we have not taken the point—right out of the opportunity to pass the most crucial domestic legislation which the President has proposed. In so procrastinating, in so postponing once again the end to the welfare dead end, we have confirmed their notion that they are, in Ralph Ellison's term, the "invisible men" of this Nation—those whose needs it is all too easy and costless to consign to the limbo of the next Congress, or to oblivion.

There is, Mr. President, a dangerous new phenomenon in this country, a phenomenon which is perpetuated and augmented by our failure to balance, the family assistance plan this session. As there was in ancient Rome at the beginnings of its decline, there is here an underclass, a class that is not just the poor, but an underclass without hope.

Our existing welfare system has failed us. It discriminates among the poor, sideing some and ignoring others in a wholly arbitrary fashion. It provides incentives only for idleness, dependence and family breakup. Designed to save money instead of saving people, it tragically ends by doing neither.

The present welfare structure leaves the amount of welfare benefits wholly to the discretion of the States and localities. This has created a crazy patchwork, in which benefit levels range from a high of $70 per month per child in New York City to the shockingly low figure of $10 per month per child in South Carolina. Those States and localities that take their responsibilities seriously are penalized by high welfare costs and growing welfare rolls. Those States and localities that do not, are rewarded by low welfare costs and succeed in exporting their poor.

The principal existing Federal welfare program—known as aid to families with dependent children—is designed only to keep the unemployed mother and children as a family. It penalizes families that are intact. It ignores the working poor—those eight million men, women and children who work all year round, but do not earn a livable income. These are the families that have accepted American middle-class values, that have tried to make it. They're viciously self-fulfilling prophecy—that he will grow up to be a second-class, the child who believes in a past which he wishes only to repress, a future he has no motivation to affect, or a present that is only poverty and passivity all his life. It is a beginning toward a transformation of that underclass into members of society.

It is, then, essential that the next Congress make up its collective mind, for good and all, that we cannot in conscience allow hunger in this land, that we cannot live a day longer as we do now in the ghettos of Harlem and the hollows of Appalachia. We are too close to attend miserable standards in clothes so tattered as to leave us exposed to the cold of the elements and the derision of the world. It is essential that the next Congress, or to oblivion.

There is, Mr. President, a dangerous new phenomenon in this country, a phenomenon which is perpetuated and aug-

the main burden of welfare aid—that States and localities simply lack the resources to provide for their poor.

The President's plan is designed to aid intact families and families of the working poor. It makes a family's need the criterion of assistance. Instead of penalizing that work, it creates new work incentives.

These are far-reaching reforms. They are reforms of which the President can be truly proud. I am, however, more concerned with those that will not be done if we are to create a welfare system that is workable and fair. Welfare reform must build upon the President's proposals; it must, however, go beyond them to create a true system of national income maintenance.

The administration proposal sets the Federal minimum welfare payment at $1,600 per year for a family of four. This is inadequate. It is less than all but five of the poorest States are providing under the present State-operated welfare system. It is less than half of the amount the Social Security Administration estimates as the "poverty level"—which is just under $3,800 per year for a family of four.

This $3,755 "poverty level" figure constitutes the barest minimum needed for subsistence. It is calculated on the basis of the Department of Agriculture's economy food plan which according to the Department, is designed only for temporary emergency use, and is not a reasonable estimate of the basic money needs for a good diet.

The respected Bureau of Labor Statistics has calculated a substantially higher poverty line figure—a little over $7,183 per year for a family of four. This is a more realistic estimate of the amount actually needed for subsistence.

I believe we can do no less than to set the Federal minimum welfare payment at the $3,744 line. That is not a generous figure. It is barely an adequate one. By going below it, there is clear danger of consigning welfare families to malnutrition, inadequate clothing, slum housing—in short, to the most serious poverty and want.

The administration plan covers only families with minor children. Childless couples and single individuals are excluded. Still more incongruous, a couple with a 17-year-old child would lose their benefits the day the child turns 18.

There is no justification for such discrimination among the poor. All persons below the poverty line should be eligible for assistance, regardless of their marital or family status.

The Federal Government should assume the administration of the welfare system and operate it on the pattern of the social security system—with written applications, automatic mailing of payments, and credit card checks for enforcement purposes. State welfare agencies should be relieved of their role as welfare policemen, and allowed to perform a function of counseling and assisting needy individuals.

The administration bill requires all welfare recipients, save those specifically exempt, to accept "suitable" work when available, as determined by the Labor Department. This is as impractical as it is offensive. A similar work requirement has been in existence under the work incentive program—WIN—of 1967, and it has been a spectacular failure. Of 600,000 welfare recipients under this program by last year, only 100,000 were referred for mandatory work or training—and only 30,000, or 5 percent, actually found jobs or training programs.

In a time of rising unemployment, the prospects of success of a mandatory work requirement are still more remote. Laws cannot force people to take jobs, if jobs are not available. A work requirement is demeaning. If job openings are perceived as being worthwhile in terms of the income and the personal satisfactions they provide, they will be filled voluntarily. If not, we should be changing the nature of the openings available. Dead-end jobs inevitably result in high turnover, and no legal compulsion can change that fact.

Above all, a work requirement punishes children. A child is not the wage earner's parents. It means that if the mother refuses to work, the child will receive no aid, will be brought up in the direst poverty, and will ultimately become incapable of working himself.

In January 1968, President Johnson appointed a distinguished President's Commission on Income Maintenance, under the chairmanship of Ben Heineman, president of Richardson-Northwest Industries. That Commission, with the aid of an outstanding staff, reported to President Nixon in November 1968. Its report was heralded in the New York Times, and hailed by virtually every academic expert in the field. Unfortunately, the report appeared after the administration plan had already been made public. As a result, it was shelved by the administration and never introduced in the Congress.

The plan proposed by the Heineman Commission seeks the administration's objectives while meeting the shortcomings of the administration plan. The Heineman plan moves toward a minimum income maintenance standard based on the poverty level. It eliminates the categorical structure of the present system, and provides universal coverage of all impoverished persons. It federalizes the welfare system and abandons the discredited inquisitorial concept of welfare. It provides a work incentive by allowing recipients to retain a part of their earned income, without imposing a harsh and unrealistic work requirement.

The Heineman proposal provides for an annual adjustment of income maintenance levels, designed to reflect the changes in the cost of living. It eliminates the food stamp program—with its demeaning separate food lines at grocery stores—and the cash which the family is forced to buy food. It provides emergency relief for individuals struck by personal disasters and makes special provisions for those who earn seasonally erratic incomes. None of these features are found in the administration bill.

The Heineman Commission recommended that the Federal minimum welfare payment initially set at $2,400 per year for a family of four. This is somewhat less than halfway between the administration's clearly inadequate payment of $1,600 per year and the Social Security Administration's poverty line figure of just below $3,800 per year.

The $2,400 figure is an arbitrary one, arrived by the Commission in recognition of budgetary constraints. The Commission recommended that the Federal minimum payment be increased to the poverty level by 1975.

It is my belief that any income supplement plan passed should provide an immediate maintenance level at the poverty line, and should establish as a national objective income maintenance at the Bureau of Labor Statistics' low-cost subsistence line.

It should, moreover, include cost-of-living escalator based upon the annual movement of this country's national median family income. That median family income is currently calculated by the Bureau of the Census. In accordance with the proposal of the distinguished Senator from Iowa (Mr. MILLER), it should incorporate variations permitted to regional cost-of-living conditions, which can be ascertained by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

It should, finally, incorporate authorization for payments to family units to meet special needs of a non-temporary or non-recurring nature, which needs are caused by temporary or unusual circumstances that render the unit unable to attain or maintain a decent living standard from the basic allowance. Those needs should include but not be limited to the cost of clothing and furniture needed to bring the unit up to a decent standard at the time that any member thereof first becomes eligible for payments, the costs of replacing losses caused by fire, flood, or other natural disaster, and the costs of meeting special medical, nutritional, or instructional needs which are not provided for under title XIX of the Social Security Act.

In accordance with the incentive suggested by both the Heineman Commission and the President, a family assistance plan, a work incentive to be provided by a negatively graduated marginal tax rate for all those whose income is below the BLS low-cost level. If such a work incentive is sufficiently negatively graduated—if the tax rate concentrates upon providing a 50 percent incentive to those below the poverty line and provides a steeply decreasing incentive to those above that line by relatively small increments, then the cost of an income supplement plan similar to that of the Heineman Commission comes out approximately equal to that of the family assistance plan.

It is essential, moreover, that any income maintenance plan passed provide sufficient day care services so that those parents who choose to work or to train for a job are not faced with the constraint of a child left alone in the home. That day care should not be simply custodial, of no benefit to the child, but should mandatorily include an educational component pursuant to the minimum standard of the Federal Interagency day care requirements.
Karl Jaspers has said that, "There exists between human beings—because they are human beings—a solidarity through which everyone shares the responsibility for every injustice that is not proper in the world. If I do not do all I can to prevent it, I share the guilt."

The decision which we as a Nation will have to make in the next 2 years is whether, under the guise of budgetary constraints, we accept either income maintenance legislation at all, or an administration bill that is admittedly inadequate to sustain living human beings, or whether we will shoot for the ideal that we have become afraid, in this country, to really care, because to really care has become unfashionable and rather laughable; and also, of course, because to really care would impose upon us the necessity of acting in support of the things we really care for. It is incumbent upon us, nonetheless, to refuse to step back, to be cool, to accept the argument that there is just so much we can do. It is our responsibility, indeed, to care and to act for the ideal, if only that sacred obligation of which Jaspers speaks.

Despite the interest group conflicts, notwithstanding the political implications of passage or nonpassage of the family assistance plan, the fact is that there is an underclass of the impoverished in this country, and that we have the possibility not only as legislators, but also as human beings, to do something about it. Let me conclude with the very opposite feelings of a fictional presidential candidate in Eugene Burdick's "The 480":

"We are told constantly, endlessly until we sicken of it, that "things are complicated." Of course things are complicated. We can, if we wish, infatuate ourselves with complexity. We can fondle it in our hands, dazzle ourselves with it. But, in the end, every attention can be reduced to a simple decision: Do we act or not? If yes, in what ways?

I trust that in the coming Congress we will get to work early. I commend all those who worked on this complicated legislation, but I am confident that now there will be established the principle of income maintenance, the principle that we are going to take care of the wretched and the poor in this country. I commend to my colleagues that task, because I know they all desire this. It is going to be difficult.

I hope next year my colleagues will not find the same legislation to deal with it in December. If they deal with it in January, by December they should have a final product.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Baker) such time as he may desire.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I shall not unduly delay the Senate. I have a series of questions I would like to put to the distinguished chairman. If I must not be the chairman, if I must not be a member of the Finance Committee. I have followed the debate and the colloquy with interest during the several days that this bill has been under consideration.

I might say, as a preliminary to the first question, that I approve the thrust and the design of the bill, especially as it relates to the automatic benefit increase section. A matter of parenthetical interest to the junior Senator from Tennessee is that this is an item that I have long favored, and in fact espoused 4 years ago when the chairman of the Senate Committee on the Banking and Currency Committee had as his mission to improve this bill. I put this question to the distinguished chairman: It has been said that the automatic benefit increase provided for in the social security bill could be financed without increasing the contribution rates, provided the benefit and contribution base is increased as wages rise. Why then does the Senate bill provide for increasing both the base and the contribution rate, that each increase would meet one-half of the cost?

Mr. LONG. The committee felt that since this would be a benefit increase to be shared by all categories of beneficiaries, whether of low, middle, or high income levels, it would be fair to have the so-called regressive nature of certain other taxes, more often than not reflecting the fixed rate tax applicable to social security.

I would point out that the social security tax is progressive in a sense, in that as the rate goes up, there is a tendency to shift the burden to higher income taxpayers, while, in the alternative, if we left the rate at the lower level, it would tend to fix the burden on another group of taxpayers.

So it would appear to me that the combination approach that the committee adopted, and which the chairman has now explained, has all of the attributes of a tax of a progressive nature, rather than a regressive one. I am happy to hear it explained in that way.

A further question: Would not the Senate provision for financing the automatic increases to a greater extent than the provision passed by the House, delegate authority to the Secretary of HEW, in effect, to levy taxes?

Mr. LONG. The provision the Finance Committee adopted would place upon the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare a purely ministerial function. All discretion would be left to Congress. If an increase in benefits was triggered when the cost of living went up by more than 3 percent, we would simply do the arithmetic necessary to calculate the amount that taxes would have to be increased just enough to pay for the full cost of the increased benefits, no more and no less.

Mr. BAKER. May I then reassure the proposition that the most able staff of the Finance Committee is not only aware of, but is interested in, the views of the chairman, that it must be, that there is no abrogation of the taxing authority of Congress implied in this discretion given to the HEW Secretary?

Mr. LONG. That is right. All we have done here is give him the responsibility of doing the arithmetic necessary to arrive at the amount of the tax increase.

Mr. BAKER. I ask the Senator further while I have expressed my wholehearted agreement with the concept of cost-of-living increases as the cost of living goes up, which we hope will not continue indefinitely, might it not also be said that there is no fair way to have cost-of-living increases except by this route?

Mr. LONG. The committee so felt, and that is why this is what the committee recommended.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, is not the effect of the bill now pending before the Senate to obligate future Congresses to either reduce taxes or raise benefits more than the cost of living?

Mr. LONG. No more so than under the present law. The committee bill recognizes that Congress may very well stay ahead of the cost of living by passing increases which would make it unnecessary for the automatic increases to go into effect. If the Congress fails to act on benefit increases, then automatic increases would go into effect.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the next question, and the last one, I might add, that I shall put to the distinguished chairman, if he will grant me the additional time and attention, would be this: Under this bill as now presented to the Senate, how high will the rates and the base be in some future year in the median distant future, say, at the end of the next century, in 2000, when today's young workers will be in their mid-twenties and beyond? Can the Senator give some speculation on that aspect of the bill's impact?

Mr. LONG. I would have to respond that there is no real way of knowing, because basic and fundamental to the committee provision is the principle that it will be Congress that will continue to determine how much in the way of increases in social security would be justified under a given set of circumstances.

In other words, it would be anti-logical and contrary to the purpose of the future, the Congress would want to continue to increase social security benefits.

If that is the case, we would expect that Congress would vote to pay for the higher benefits. I know it is certainly the desire of the members of the Senate at this time, and I would hope future Congresses would take the same attitude, that with respect to the basic social security program, we would always pay for the program with taxes that would be levied. But I cannot say how much benefits will be increased in the future. Whether the benefits or, in some form or other, will be increased or whether the rates or the base or both will be increased, that will be determined by future Congresses, and the design of the bill will merely be speculation.
Mr. BAKER. I recall a colloquy the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Finance had on this floor about a year ago, in which he pointed out, and I agree with him, that the large social security program can easily be financed out of social security taxes on the base as fixed from time to time, but the real question is whether Congress will use social security as a vehicle by which other social services are delivered, whereupon we may be faced with the problem of deciding whether other sources than the social security tax should be used to further the cost of their delivery. Is that basically correct?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I think the committee has done an excellent job on a difficult problem, providing a bill that moves forward in the field of automatic increases in response to requirements of the economy. The need is not predictable for the year 2000, or the year 2100, but it may be needed for that matter, but I think it is worthy of the favorable consideration of the Senate, and I wish, in these closing moments of the debate, to commend the committee and the staff for having done a good job.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator.

It was my judgment, Mr. President, that the Senate would pass as much of this committee bill as the Senate felt it could agree with, and could bring it to a vote, and that is what we have done. The committee recommended a $10 billion bill, and the Senate is passing a $7.5 billion bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me?

Mr. MANSFIELD. The Senator has control of the time on that side.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the minority leader yielded me such time as I needed. And, with the Senator's kind permission, I would like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. Under the bill as approved by the Senate, what will be the excess of income over outgo for the social security program as a whole over the next 5 years?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the proposed amendment printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the proposed amendment was ordered to be printed in the Record as follows:

Insert on page 499, between lines 17 and 18, the following:

"DISABLED INDIVIDUALS UNDER AGE 18 ELIGIBLE FOR AID UNDER TITLES XIV AND XVI"

"Sec. 571. (a) (1) Title XIV of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out, wherever it appears, the phrase 'eighteen years of age and older'.

"(2) Section 1403 (a) (8) of such Act is amended by striking out 'and' at the end of clause (A), before the words 'the cause of' and inserting in lieu thereof ', and, and by adding at the end of clause (D), as so amended, the following:

"(C) if such Individual is under 18 years of age and is disabled, the State agency shall also take into consideration the income and resources of such Individual's parents, guardian, or other person legally responsible for the support of such Individual;"

""(b) (1) Title XVI of such Act is amended by striking out, wherever it appears, the phrase 'are 18 years of age or over'.

"(2) Section 1403 (a) (14) of such Act is amended by striking out 'and' at the end of subparagraph (C), striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting in lieu thereof, and, and by adding after subparagraph (D) the following new subparagraph:

""(E) if such Individual is under 18 years of age and is blind but is disabled, the State agency shall take into consideration the income and resources of such Individual's parents, guardian, or other person legally responsible for the support of such Individual;"

""(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective July 1, 1971."

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, another change that has been called to my attention has to do with terminology. As Senators may know, last year the President appointed a task force on the physical handicapped. On that task force were many outstanding Americans, and they made many excellent recommendations. I have reviewed the recommendations made by the President's task force on the physically handicapped, and one of the recommendations made by the task force would amend title 5 of the Social Security Act by replacing the term "crippled children" with "handicapped children." According to the study of the task force, the term "crippled child" or "crippled children" as traditionally used in governmental terminology is too limited in its meaning and has undesirable connotations, and present-day services to crippled children should include far more impairment categories than ever before.

I was advised by HEW that although this amendment might appear to be desirable, they would oppose it if it were offered. Therefore, I chose not to offer the amendment. According to HEW officials, this would require changes by many States in State laws and would perhaps cause some undue hardship at the outset. But it has been studied carefully, and it is the understanding of the Senator from Kansas that it will be given serious consideration at a future time.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the proposed amendment printed at this point in the Record. There being no objection, the proposed amendment was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

On page 540, after line 7 insert the following:

"CRIPPLED CHILDREN'S PROGRAM—REDESIGNED HANDICAPPED CHILDREN'S PROGRAM"

"Sec. 614. Title V of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out the word "crippled", wherever it appears and substituting in lieu thereof "handicapped".

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the committee a question. Under the bill as approved by the Senate, what will be the excess of income over outgo for the social security program as a whole over the next 5 years?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I say to the Senator that I regret that I do not have it at this moment, but I can refer him to page 45 of our committee prints, of my opening statement, which contained a chart which shows that there will be a surplus of nearly $5 billion over the first 2 years under the original committee bill, but I regret that I do not have that chart available for 5 years. But the surplus will be correspondingly increased for the next 2 years.

Mr. DOLE. Then, the second part of that question: How much would the trust funds have increased at the end of 5 years as compared with increases under the present law?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have submitted this chart elsewhere—it compares income and outgo for 1971, 1972, and 1973 under both bills—but I ask unanimous consent that the chart I hold in my hand be printed at this point in the Record.

There being no objection, the chart was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Progress of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Catastrophic Insurance Trust Funds, Combined, Under Present Law and Under Finance Committee Bill, 1971-73 (Cash basis; in billions of dollars)
Mr. LONG. The chart shows that, under present law, the trust fund in fiscal year 1972 would rise to $51 billion, and under the original committee bill it would rise $44.9 billion. In calendar 1971, under the present law, $46 billion; under the committee bill, $42.3 billion. In calendar 1972, under present law, $52 billion; under the committee bill, $44.2 billion. In calendar 1973, under present law, $52.2 billion; under the committee bill, $47 billion. Of course, there have been certain modifications during floor consideration of the committee bill which would change those figures to some degree.

It was the judgment of the majority on the committee that present law did not adequately balance income and outgo in the next few years—too much money would come in for the benefits being paid—and we thought of this as a surplus, which we regarded to some degree as constituting overfinancing that could be used to pay for further benefits.

But then, in the event that there were automatic benefit increases, 3 percent each year over the next 5 years, there still would be some surplus in the trust fund.

Mr. LONG. The figures I have placed in the record assume no increase in the cost of living. If the cost of living goes up, and benefits go up, the tax that is collected goes up. When the cost of living goes up more than 3 percent, the triggered increases go into effect, and the tax rates go up, as well as the tax base, so that there is just enough additional income to pay for all that. Thus, the amount being accumulated in the fund should remain about the same even if there should be a cost-of-living benefit increase.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the chairman of the committee, and I thank the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. YARBOROUGH. Mr. President, after a lengthy and thorough debate on the omnibus Social Security Act, H.R. 17550, I am very pleased that we were able to adopt provisions to the bill that will directly benefit the lives of countless numbers of senior citizens who depend on social security and medicare to survive.

The ever-increasing cost of living hits hardest those people in our society who must depend on a fixed income, such as social security, to live. These people, who are trapped by rising prices, are forced to sit helplessly by and watch the purchasing power of their small monthly income dwindle away under the crush of rising prices and inflation. These older citizens have no one but Congress to turn to for help in these troubled times. The bill that the Senate has been able to agree to shows that we are not going to let these citizens sit helplessly by and watch the purchasing power of their small monthly income dwindle away under the crush of rising prices and inflation.

The most significant features of this bill are:

First. The 10-percent increase in social security benefits. Under the Senate version of the bill, over 26 million beneficiaries of social security will receive a 10-percent increase in benefits. This increase will be effective as of January 1971 and will be paid to the people in April. The bill also sets a new minimum benefit that can be paid of $100. The original House version of H.R. 17550 would have increased social security benefits by only 5 percent and provided a minimum benefit of $67.20. The Senate version of this bill is a much superior measure and I hope the House will agree to the Senate's amendments.

Second. The increase in the amount a social security beneficiary can earn and still receive his full benefits. The present law sets a ceiling of $1,680 a year on the amount that a retired person can earn and still draw full social security benefits. This unreasonable work limitation has forced many productive and creative citizens into a state of forced idleness. Furthermore, this limitation, which is far below the poverty line, locks many of our older citizens into the low-income bracket with no way of escape. Under this bill, Congress is taking the first step toward remedying this situation by increasing the income limitation from $1,680 to $2,000. I supported an increase to $2,200; however, this has been more reasonable. However, this increase included in H.R. 17550 does offer a small measure of relief to our senior citizens who wish to work beyond the age of 65.

Mr. President, I also commend the Senate Finance Committee for including in the bill my amendment to authorize the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make exceptions in cases involving small rural hospitals, the requirement that a hospital furnish 24-hour registered professional nursing services in order to participate in the medicare and medicaid programs.

Under the present law, a hospital will not be qualified to provide medicare services if it does not maintain a registered professional nurse on duty around the clock 24 hours a day. This requirement has imposed extreme hardships on the small rural hospitals and clinics and the people they serve. Many rural hospitals have been unable to find enough registered nurses to tell them to the rural areas to meet this 24-hour requirement. As a result, many small hospitals and clinics have been forced to close, leaving many of our citizens without the needed medical care that is available to them.

In short, this limitation in the medicare law is having the unfortunate effect of denying many of the citizens of rural America hospital care. My amendment is designed to rectify this unjust situation without lowering the standards for health care.

Under my amendment, a rural hospital could obtain a waiver of the 24-hour registered nurse requirement:

First, the hospital has made, and is continuing to make, a good faith effort to meet the registered nurse requirement, but cannot because of nursing personnel shortage.

Second, the hospital is located in an area where hospital facilities are in short supply, and.

Third, the denial of medicare services at such a hospital will seriously limit the availability of hospital care to the people of the area. This amendment is a carefully drawn measure which will provide relief only in cases of true hard-

"(2) (A) If the Secretary determines that a base quarter in a calendar year is also a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall, effective for January of the next calendar year, increase the benefit amount of each individual who for such month is entitled to benefits under section 227 or 228, and the primary insurance amount of each other individual as specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, by an amount derived by multiplying such amount (including each such individual’s primary insurance amount or benefit amount under section 227 or 228 as previously increased under this subparagraph) by the same percentage (rounded to the next higher one-tenth of 1 percent if such percentage is an odd multiple of .05 of 1 percent and to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent in any other case) as the percentage by which the monthly average of the Consumer Price Index for such cost-of-living computation quarter exceeds the monthly average of such Index for the base quarter determined after the application of clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1)-(B).

"(B) The increase provided by subparagraph (A) with respect to a particular cost-of-living computation quarter shall apply in the case of monthly benefits under this title for months after December of the calendar year in which occurred such cost-of-living computation quarter, based on the wages and self-employment income of an individual who became entitled to monthly benefits under section 202, 223, 227, or 228 (without regard to section 202(j)(1) or section 223(b)), or who died in or before December of such calendar year.

"(C) If the Secretary determines that a base quarter in a calendar year is also a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall publish in the Federal Register on or before December 1 of such calendar year a determination that a benefit increase is resultantly required and the percentage thereof. He shall also publish in the Federal Register at that time (along with the increased benefit amounts which shall be deemed to be the amounts appearing in sections 227 and 228) a revision of the table of benefits contained in subsection (a) of this section (as it may have been revised previously pursuant to this paragraph); and such revised table shall be deemed to be the table appearing in such subsection (a). Such revision shall be determined as follows:

"(i) The headings of the table shall be the same as the headings in the table immediately prior to its revision, except that the parenthetical phrase at the beginning of column II shall show the effective date of the primary insurance amounts set forth in column IV of the table immediately prior to its revision.

"(ii) The amounts on each line of column I, and the amounts on each line of column III except as otherwise provided by clause (v) of this subparagraph, shall be the same as the amounts appearing in such column in the table immediately prior to its revision.

"(iii) The amount on each line of column II shall be changed to the amount shown on the corresponding line of column IV of the table immediately prior to its revision.

"(iv) The amount of each line of column IV shall be increased from the amount shown in the table immediately prior to its revision by increasing such amount by the percentage specified in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (2), raising each such increased amount, if not a multiple of $0.10, to the next higher multiple of $0.10.

"(v) If the contribution and benefit base (as defined in section 230(b) for the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised is lower than such base for the following calendar year; columns III, IV and V shall be extended. The amount in the first additional line in column IV shall be the amount in the last line of such column as determined under clause (iv), plus $1.00, rounding such increased amount (if not a multiple of $1.00) to the next higher multiple of $1.00 where such increased amount is an odd multiple of $0.50 and to the nearest multiple of $1.00 in any other case. The amount on each succeeding line of column IV shall be the amount on the preceding line increased by $1.00, until the amount on the last line of such column is equal to the larger of (I) one thirty-sixth of the contribution and benefit base for the calendar year following the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised or (II) the last line of such column as determined under clause (iv) plus 20 percent of one-twelfth of the excess of the contribution and benefit base for the calendar year following the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised over such base for the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised, rounding such amount (if not a multiple of $1.00) to the next higher multiple of $1.00 where such amount is an odd multiple of $0.50 and to the nearest multiple of $1.00 in any other case.
The amount in each additional line of column III shall be determined so that the second figure in the last line of column III is one-twelfth of the contribution and benefits base for the calendar year following the calendar year in which the table of benefits is revised, and the remaining figures in column III shall be determined in consistent mathematical intervals from column IV. The second figure in the last line of column III before the extension of the column shall be increased to a figure mathematically consistent with the figures determined in accordance with the preceding sentence. The amount on each line of column V shall be increased, to the extent necessary, so that each such amount is equal to 40 percent of the second figure in the same line of column III, plus 40 percent of the smaller of (I) such second figure or (II) the larger of $450 or 50 per centum of the largest figure in column III.

"(vi) The amount on each line of column V shall be increased, if necessary, so that such amount is at least equal to one and one-half times the amount shown on the corresponding line in column IV. Any such increased amount that is not a multiple of $0.10 shall be increased to the next higher multiple of $0.10.”

(b) Section 203-(a) of such Act (as amended by section 101-(b) of this Act) is amended—
(1) by striking out the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting in lieu thereof "or", and inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

basis of an application filed in or after the month in which this Act is enacted:

(59)(j)(1) The amendments made by this section (except subsection (i) and subsection (g) as it relates to the amendment to section 209(i) of the Social Security Act) shall apply in the case of a man who attains (or would attain) age 62 after December 1972. The amendment made by subsection (g) as it relates to the amendment to section 209(i) of the Social Security Act and by subsection (i) shall apply only with respect to payments after 1972.

(2) In the case of a man who attains age 62 prior to 1973, the number of his elapsed years for purposes of section 215(b)(3) of the Social Security Act shall be equal to the number (A) determined under such section, as in effect on January 1, 1970, or (B) if less, determined as though he attained age 65 in 1973, except that monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months prior to 1971 payable on the basis of his wages and self-employment income shall be determined as though this section had not been enacted.

(60) Election to receive actuarially reduced benefits in one category not to be applicable to certain benefits in other categories

Sec. 106. (a)(1) Section 202(q)(3)(A) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out all that follows clause (ii) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"then (subject to the succeeding paragraphs of this subsection) such wife's, husband's, widow's, or widower's insurance benefit for each month shall be reduced as provided in subparagraph (B), (C), or (D) of this paragraph, in lieu of any reduction under paragraph (1), if the amount of the reduction in such benefit under this paragraph is less than the amount of the reduction in such benefit would be under paragraph (1)."

(2) Section 202(q)(3) of such Act is further amended by striking out subparagraphs (E), (F), and (G).

(b) Section 202(q) of such Act is repealed.

(c)(1)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), subsection (a) of this section and the amendments made thereby shall apply with respect to benefits for months commencing with the sixth month after the month in which this Act is enacted.

-(B) Subsection (a) of this section and the amendments made thereby shall apply in the case of an individual whose entitlement to benefits under section 202 of the Social Security Act began (without regard to sections 202(j)-(1) and 223(b) of such Act) before the sixth month after the month in which this Act is enacted only if such individual files with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, in such manner and form as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe, a written request that such subsection and such amendments apply. In the case of such an individual who is described in paragraph 2(A)-(i) of this subsection; the request for a redetermination under paragraph (2) shall constitute the request required by this subparagraph, and subsection (a) of this section and the amendments made thereby shall apply pursuant to such request with respect to such individual's benefits as redetermined in accordance with paragraph (2)(B)-(i) (but only if he does not refuse to accept such redetermination). In the case of any individual with respect to whose benefits subsection (a) of this section and the amendments made thereby may apply only pursuant to a request made under this subparagraph, such subsection and such amendments shall be effective (subject to paragraph (2)(D)) with respect to benefits for months commencing with the sixth month after the month in which this Act is enacted or, if the request required by this subpara-graph is not filed before the end of such sixth month, with the second month following the month in which the request is filed:

(C) Subsection (b) of this section shall apply with respect to benefits payable pursuant to applications filed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) (A) In any case where an individual—

(i) is entitled, for the fifth month following the month in which this Act is enacted, to a monthly insurance benefit under section 202 of the Social Security Act (I) which was reduced under subsection (a)(3) of such section, and (II) the application for which was deemed (or, except for the fact that an application had been filed, would have been deemed) to have been filed by such individual under subsection (r) (1) or (2) of such section, and

(ii) files a written request for a redetermination under this subsection, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act and in such manner and form as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall by regulations prescribe;

the Secretary shall redetermine the amount of such benefit, and the amount of the other benefit (reduced under subsection (q) (1) or (2) of such section) which was taken into account in computing the reduction in such benefit under such subsection (q) (3); in the manner provided in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph.

(B) Upon receiving a written request for the redetermination under this paragraph of a benefit which was reduced under subsection (q) (3) of section 202 of the Social Security Act and of the other benefit which was taken into account in computing such reduction, filed by an individual as provided in subparagraph (A) of this paragraph; the Secretary shall—

(i) determine the highest monthly benefit amount which such individual could receive under the subsections of such section 202 which are involved (or under section 223 of such Act and the subsection of such section 202 which is involved) for the month with which the redetermination is to be effective under subparagraph (D) of this subsection (without regard to sections 202 (k), 203 (a), and 203 (b) through (l)) if—

(I) such individual's application for one of such two benefits had been filed in the month in which it was actually filed or was deemed under subsection (r) of such section 202 to have been filed, and his application for the other such benefit had been filed in a later month; and

(II) the amendments made by this section had been in effect at the time each such application was filed; and

(ii) determine whether the amounts which were actually received by such individual in the form of such two benefits during the period prior to the month with which the redetermination under this paragraph is to be effective were in excess of the amounts which would have been received during such period if the applications for such benefits had actually been filed at the times fixed under clause (i)-(I) of this subparagraph, and, if so, the total amount by which benefits otherwise payable to such individual under such section 202 (and section 223) would have to be reduced in order to compensate the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund (and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund) for such excess.

(C) The Secretary shall then notify such individual of the amount of each such benefit as computed in accordance with the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) of this section and as redetermined in accordance with subparagraph (B)-(i) of this paragraph, specifying (i) the amount (if any) of the excess determined under subpara-graph (B) (ii) of this paragraph; and (ii) the period during which payment of any increase in such individual's benefits resulting from the application of the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) of this section would under designated circumstances have to be withheld in order to effect the reduction described in subparagraph (B) (ii). Such individual may at any time within thirty days after such notification is mailed to him refuse (in such manner and form as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe) to accept the redetermination under this paragraph.

(D) Unless the last sentence of subparagraph (C) applies, a redetermination under this paragraph shall be effective (but subject to the reduction described in subpara-graph (B) (ii) over the period specified pursuant to claus-(ii) of the first sentence of subparagraph (C)) beginning with the sixth month following the month in which this Act is enacted; or, if the request for such redetermination is not filed before the end of such sixth month, with the second month following the month in which the request for such redetermination is filed.

(E) The Secretary, by withholding amounts from benefits otherwise payable to an individual under title II of the Social Security Act as specified in clause (ii) of the first sentence of subparagraph (C) (and in no other manner), shall recover the amounts necessary to compensate the Federal

H.R. 17550—4
Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund (and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund) for the excess (described in subparagraph (B)-(ii)) attributable to benefits which were paid such individual and to which a redetermination under this subsection applies.

(d) Where—

(1) two or more persons are entitled on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of an individual (without the application of sections 202(j)-(1) and 223(b) of the Social Security Act) to monthly benefits under section 202 of such Act for the month preceding the month with which (A) a redetermination under subsection (c) of this section becomes effective with respect to the benefits of any one of them and (B) such benefits are accordingly increased by reason of the amendments made by subsections (a) and (b) of this section; and

referred to in paragraph (1), other than the person with respect to whose benefits such redetermination and increase is applicable, is entitled for months beginning with the month with which such redetermination and increase becomes effective shall be adjusted, after the application of such section 203(a), to an amount no less than the amount it would have been if such redetermination and increase had not become effective.

“(2) (A) If the Secretary determines that a base quarter in a calendar year is also a cost-of-living computation quarter, he shall, effective for January of the next calendar year, increase the benefit amount of each individual who for such month is entitled to benefits under section 227 or 228, and the primary insurance amount of each other individual as specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, by an amount derived by multiplying such amount (including each such individual’s primary insurance amount or benefit amount under section 227 or 228 as previously increased under this subparagraph) by the same percentage (rounded to the next higher one-tenth of 1 percent if such percentage is an odd multiple of .05 of 1 percent and to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent in any other case) as the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index for such cost-of-living computation quarter exceeds such Index for the base quarter determined after the application of paragraph (1)(B).

"(B) The increase provided by subparagraph (A) with respect to a particular cost-of-living computation quarter shall apply in the case of monthly benefits under this title for months after December of the calendar year in which occurred such cost-of-living computation quarter, based on the wages and self-employment income of an individual who became entitled to monthly benefits under section 202, 223, 227, or 228 (without regard to section 202(j)(1) or section 223(b)), or who died, in or before December of such calendar year.

"(C) Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (A) and (B), the increase provided by subparagraph (A) with respect to a particular cost-of-living computation quarter shall not be effective as provided in such subparagraph (A) if in the calendar year in which such cost-of-living computation quarter occurs a law has been enacted which provides for (i) a general increase in the primary insurance amounts of all individuals entitled to benefits under this title, or (ii) a change in the rate of tax on wages and self-employ-

Part B—Improvements in the Operating Effectiveness of the Medicare, Medicaid, and Maternal and Child Health Programs

 Limitation on Federal Participation for Capital Expenditures

Sec. 221. (a) Title XI of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:
"LIMITATION ON FEDERAL PARTICIPATION FOR CAPITAL EXPENDITURES

"Sec. 1122. (a) The purpose of this section is to assure that Federal funds appropriated under titles V, XVIII, and XIX are not used to support unnecessary capital expenditures made by or on behalf of health care facilities (177) or health maintenance organizations which are reimbursed under any of such titles and that, to the extent possible, reimbursement under such titles shall support planning activities with respect to health services and facilities in the various States.

"(b) The Secretary, after consultation with the Governor (or other chief executive officer) and with appropriate local public officials, shall make an agreement with any State which is able and willing to do so under which a designated planning agency (which shall be an agency described in clause (ii) of subsection (d) (1) (B) that has a governing body or advisory body at least half of whose members represent consumer interests) will—

"(1) make, and submit to the Secretary together with such supporting materials as he may find necessary, findings and recommendations with respect to capital expenditures proposed by or on behalf of any health care facility (178) or health maintenance organization in such State within the field of its responsibilities, (179) and “(2) receive from other agencies described in clause (ii) of subsection (d) (1) (B), and submit to the Secretary together with such supporting material as he may find necessary, the findings and recommendations of such other agencies with respect to capital expenditures proposed by or on behalf of health care facilities or health maintenance organizations in such State within the fields of their respective responsibilities, and (3) establish and maintain procedures pursuant to which a person proposing any such capital expenditure may appeal a recommendation by the designated agency and will be granted an opportunity for a fair hearing by such agency or person other than the designated agency as the Governor (or other chief executive officer) may designate to hold such hearings, whenever and to the extent that the findings of such designated agency or any such other agency indicate that any such expenditure is not consistent with the standards, criteria, or plans developed pursuant to the Public Health Service Act (or the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Mental Health Centers Construction Act of 1963) to meet the need for adequate health care facilities in the area covered by the plan or plans so developed.

“(c) The Secretary shall pay any such State from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, in advance or by way of reimbursement as may be provided in the agreement with it (and may make adjustments in such payments on account of overpayments or underpayments previously made), for the reasonable cost of performing the functions specified in subsection (b).

“(d) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), if the Secretary determines that—

“(A) neither the planning agency designated in the agreement described in subsection (b) nor an agency described in clause (ii) of subparagraph (B) of this paragraph had been given notice of any proposed capital expenditure (in accordance with such procedure or in such detail as may be required by such agency) at least 60 days prior to such expenditure; or

“(B) (i) the planning agency so designated or an agency so described had received such timely notice of the intention to make such capital expenditure and had, within a reasonable period after receiving such notice and prior to such expenditure, notified the person proposing such expenditure that the expenditure would not be in conformity with the standards, criteria, or plans developed by such agency or any other agency described in clause (ii) for adequate health care facilities in such State or in the area for which such other agency has responsibility, and “(ii) the planning agency so designated had, prior to submitting to the Secretary the findings referred to in subsection (b), consulted with, and taken into consideration the findings and recommendations of, the State planning agencies established pursuant to sections 314 (a) and 604 (a) of the Public Health Service Act (to the extent that either such agency is not the agency so designated) as well as the public or nonprofit private agency or organization responsible for the comprehensive regional, metropolitan area, or other local area plan or plans referred to in section 314 (b) of the Public Health Service Act and covering the area in which the health care facility or health maintenance organization proposing such capital expenditure is located (where such agency is not the agency designated in the agreement) or, if there is no such agency, such other public or nonprofit private agency or organization (if any) as performs, as determined in accordance with criteria included in regulations, similar functions; functions, and (II) granted to the person proposing such capital expenditure an opportunity for a fair hearing with respect to such findings;

then, for such period as he finds necessary in any case to effectuate the purpose of this section, he shall, in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX with respect to services furnished in the health care facility for which such capital expenditure is made, not include any amount which is attributable to depreciation, interest on borrowed funds, a return on equity capital (in the case of proprietary facilities), or other expenses related to such capital expenditure. (186) With respect to any organization which is reimbursed on a per capita basis, in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX, the Secretary shall exclude an amount which in his judgment is a reasonable equivalent to the amount which would otherwise be excluded under this subsection if payment were to be made on other than a per capita basis.

"(2) If the Secretary, after submitting the matters involved to the advisory council established or designated under subsection (i), determines that an exclusion of expenses related to any capital expenditure of any health care facility (187) or health maintenance organization would not be consistent with the effective organization and delivery of health services or the effective administration of title V, XVIII, or XIX, he shall not exclude such expenses pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(e) Where a person obtains under lease or comparable arrangement any facility or part thereof, or equipment for a facility, which would have been subject to an exclusion under subsection (d) if the person had acquired it by purchase, the Secretary shall (1) in computing such person's rental expense in determining the Federal payments to be made under titles V, XVIII, and XIX with respect to services furnished in such facility, deduct the amount which in his judgment is a reasonable equivalent of the amount that would have been excluded if the person had acquired such facility or such equipment by purchase, and (2) in computing such person's return on equity capital deduct any amount deposited under the terms of the lease or comparable arrangement.

"(f) Any person dissatisfied with a determination by the Secretary under this section may within six months following notification of such determination request the Secretary to reconsider such determination. A determination by the Secretary under this section shall not be subject to administrative or judicial review.

"(g) For the purposes of this section, a 'capital expenditure' is an expenditure which, under generally accepted accounting principles, is not properly chargeable as an expense of operation and maintenance and which (1) exceeds $100,000, (2) changes the bed capacity of the facility with respect to which such expenditure is made, or (3) substantially changes the services of the facility with respect to which such expenditure is made. For purposes of clause
(1) of the preceding sentence, the cost of the studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, and other activities essential to the acquisition, improvement, expansion, or replacement of the plant and equipment with respect to which such expenditure is made shall be included in determining whether such expenditure exceeds $100,000.

(h) The provisions of this section shall not apply to Christian Science sanatoriums operated, or listed and certified, by the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Massachusetts.

(i) (1) The Secretary shall establish a national advisory council, or designate an appropriate existing national advisory council, to advise and assist him in the preparation of general regulations to carry out the purposes of this section and on policy matters arising in the administration of this section, including the coordination of activities under this section with those under other parts of this Act or under other Federal or federally assisted health programs.

(2) The Secretary shall make appropriate provision for consultation between and coordination of the work of the advisory council established or designated under paragraph (1) and the Federal Hospital Council, the National Advisory Health Council, the Health Insurance Benefits Advisory Council, the Medical Assistance Advisory Council, and other appropriate national advisory councils with respect to matters bearing on the purposes and administration of this section and the coordination of activities under this section with related Federal health programs.

"(3) If an advisory council is established by the Secretary under paragraph (1), it shall be composed of members who are not otherwise in the regular full-time employ of the United States, and who shall be appointed by the Secretary without regard to the civil service laws from among leaders in the fields of the fundamental sciences, the medical sciences, and the organization, delivery, and financing of health care, and persons who are State or local officials or are active in community affairs or public or civic affairs or who are representative of minority groups. Members of such advisory council, while attending meetings of the council or otherwise serving on business of the council, shall be entitled to receive compensation at rates fixed by the Secretary, but not exceeding the maximum rate specified at the time of such service for grade GS–18 in section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, including traveltime, and while away from their homes or regular places of business they may also be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 5703(b) of such title 5 for persons in the Government service employed intermittently.”

(b) The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply only with respect to a capital expenditure the obligation for which is incurred by or on behalf of a health care facility (or health maintenance organization) subsequent to whichever of the following is earlier: (A) June 30, 1971, or
(B) with respect to any State or any part thereof specified by such State, the last day of the calendar quarter in which the State requests that the amendment made by subsection
(a) of this section apply in such State or such part thereof.

(c) (1) Section 505(a)(6) of such Act (as amended by section 229(b) of this Act) is further amended by in-serting “, consistent with section 1122,” after “standards” where it first appears.

(2) Section 506 of such Act (as amended by sections 224(c), 227(d), 230(d), and 235(b) of this Act) is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

“(g) For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122.”

(3) Clause (2) of the second sentence of section 509 (a) of such Act is amended by inserting “, consistent with section 1122,” after “standards”.

(4) Section 1861 (v) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(5) For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122.”

(5) Section 1902 (a) (13) (D) of such Act (as amended by section 229 (a) of this Act) is further amended by inserting “, consistent with section 1122,” after “standards” where it first appears.

(6) Section 1903 (b) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

(189)(d) In the case of a health care facility providing health care services as of December 18, 1970, which on such date is committed to a formal plan of expansion or replacement, the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this section shall not apply with respect to such expenditures as may be made or obligations incurred for capital items included in such plan where preliminary expenditures toward the plan of expansion or replacement (including payments for studies, surveys, designs, plans, working drawings, specifications, and site acquisition, essential to the acquisition, improvement, expansion, or replacement of the health care facility or equipment concerned) of $100,000 or more, had been made during the three-year period ended December 17, 1970.

REPORT ON PLAN FOR PROSPECTIVE REIMBURSEMENT; EXPERIMENTS AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS TO DEVELOP INCENTIVES FOR ECONOMY IN THE PROVISION OF HEALTH SERVICES

Sec. 222. (a) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, directly or through contracts with public or private agencies or organizations, shall develop and carry out experiments and demonstration projects designed to determine the relative advantages and disadvantages of various alternative methods of making payment on a prospective basis to hospitals, extended care facilities, and other providers of services for care and services provided by them under title XVIII of the Social Security Act and under State plans approved under titles XIX and V of such Act, including alternative methods for classifying providers, for establishing prospective rates of payment, and for implementing on a gradual, selective, or other basis the establishment of a prospective payment system, in order to stimulate such providers through positive financial incentives to use their facilities and personnel more efficiently and thereby to reduce the total costs of the health programs involved without adversely affecting the quality of services by containing or lowering the rate of increase in provider costs that has been and is being experienced under the existing system of retroactive cost reimbursement.

(2) The experiments and demonstration projects developed under paragraph (1) shall be of sufficient scope and shall be carried out on a wide enough scale to permit a thorough evaluation of the alternative methods of prospective payment under consideration while giving assurance that the results derived from the experiments and projects will obtain generally in the operation of the programs involved (without committing such programs to the adoption of any prospective payment system either locally or nationally).

(3) In the case of any experiment or demonstration project under paragraph (1), the Secretary may waive compliance with the requirements of titles XVIII, XIX, and V of the Social Security Act insofar as such requirements relate to methods of payment for services provided; and costs incurred in such experiment or project in excess of those which would otherwise be reimbursed or paid under such titles may be reimbursed or paid to the extent that such waiver applies to them (with such excess being borne by the Secretary).

No experiment or demonstration project shall be developed or carried out under paragraph (1) until the Secretary obtains the advice and recommendations of specialists who are competent to evaluate the proposed experiment or project as to the soundness of its objectives, the possibilities of securing productive results, the adequacy of resources to conduct it, and its relationship to other similar experiments or projects already completed or in process; and no such experiment or project shall be actually placed in operation until a written report containing a full and complete description thereof has been transmitted to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

(4) Grants, payments under contracts, and other expenditures made for experiments and demonstration projects under this subsection shall be made in appropriate part from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1817 of the Social Security Act) and the Federal
1 Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1841 of the Social Security Act). Grants and payments under contracts may be made either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be determined by the Secretary, and shall be made in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary to carry out the purpose of this subsection. With respect to any such grant, payment, or other expenditure, the amount to be paid from each of such trust funds shall be determined by the Secretary, giving due regard to the purposes of the experiment or project involved.

(5) The Secretary shall submit to the Congress no later than July 1, 1972, January 1, 1973, a full report on the experiments and demonstration projects carried out under this subsection and on the experience of other programs with respect to prospective reimbursement together with any related data and materials which he may consider appropriate. Such report shall include detailed recommendations with respect to the specific methods which could be used in the full implementation of a system of prospective payment to providers of services under the programs involved.

(6) Section 1875(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting “and the experiments and demonstration projects authorized by section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1970” after “1967”.

(b) (1) Section 402 (a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 is amended to read as follows:

"(a) (1) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized, either directly or through grants to public or nonprofit private agencies, institutions, and organizations or contracts with public or private agencies, institutions, and organizations, to develop and engage in experiments and demonstration projects for the following purposes:

"(A) to determine whether, and if so which, changes in methods of payment or reimbursement (other than those dealt with in section 222 (a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1970) for health care and services under health programs established by the Social Security Act, including a change to methods based on negotiated rates, would have the effect of increasing the efficiency and economy of health services under such programs through the creation of additional incentives to these ends without adversely affecting the quality of such services;

(192)"(B) to determine whether payments to organizations and institutions which have the capability of providing comprehensive health care service or services other than those for which payment may be made under such programs (and which are incidental to services for which payment may be made under such programs)
I would, in the judgment of the Secretary, result in more economical provision and more effective utilization of services for which payment may be made under such programs;

"(B) to determine whether payments for services other than those for which payment may be made under such programs (and which are incidental to services for which payment may be made under such programs) would, in the judgment of the Secretary, result in more economical provision and more effective utilization of services for which payment may be made under such program, where such services are furnished by organizations and institutions which have the capability of providing—

"(i) comprehensive health care services, or

"(ii) mental health care services (as defined by section 401(c) of the Mental Retardation Facilities and Community Health Centers Construction Act of 1963), or

"(iii) ambulatory health care services, but only where the Secretary determines, after appropriate study, that payment for such health care services would result in a more economical provision of such services.

"(C) to determine whether the rates of payment or reimbursement for health care services, approved by a State for purposes of the administration of one or more of its laws, when utilized to determine the amount to be paid for services furnished in such State under the health programs established by the Social Security Act, would have the effect of reducing the costs of such programs without adversely affecting the quality of such services; “(D) to determine whether payments under such programs based on a single combined rate of reimbursement or charge for the teaching activities and patient care which residents, interns, and supervising physicians render in connection with a graduate medical education program in a patient facility would result in more equitable and economical patient care arrangements without adversely affecting the quality of such care; and “(E) to determine whether utilization review and medical review mechanisms established on an areawide or communitywide basis would have the effect of providing more effective controls under such programs over excessive utilization of services.

For purposes of this subsection, ‘health programs established by the Social Security Act’ means the program established by title XVIII of such Act, a program established by a plan of a State approved under title XIX of such Act, and a program established by a plan of a State approved under title V of such Act.

"(2) Grants, payments under contracts, and other expenditures made for experiments and demonstration projects under paragraph (1) shall be made in appropriate part from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1817 of the Social Security Act) and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund (established by section 1841 of the Social Security Act). Grants and payments under contracts may be made either in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be determined by the Secretary, and shall be made in such installments and on such conditions as the Secretary finds necessary to carry out the purpose of this section. With respect to any such grant, payment, or other expenditure, the amount to be paid from each of such trust funds shall be determined by the Secretary, giving due regard to the purposes of the experiment or project involved."

(2) Section 402 (b) of such Amendments is amended—

(A) by striking out "experiment" each time it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "experiment or demonstration project";

(B) by striking out "experiments" and inserting in lieu thereof "experiments and projects";

(C) by striking out "reasonable charge" and inserting in lieu thereof "reasonable charge, or to reimburse ment or payment only for such services or items as may be specified in the experiment"; and

(D) by inserting before the period at the end thereof the following: "; and no such experiment or project shall be actually placed in operation until a written report containing a full and complete description thereof has been transmitted to the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Finance of the Senate".

(3) Section 1875 (b) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out "experimentation" and inserting in lieu thereof "experiments and demonstration projects".

LIMITATIONS ON COVERAGE OF COSTS UNDER MEDICARE PROGRAM

SEC. 223. (a) The first sentence of section 1861 (v) (1) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting immediately before "determined" where it first appears the following: "the cost actually incurred, excluding therefrom any part of incurred cost found to be unnecessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services, and shall be".

(b) The third sentence of section 1861 (v) (1) of such Act is amended by striking out the comma after "services" where it last appears and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "may provide for the establishment of limits on the direct or indirect overall incurred costs or incurred costs of specific items or services or groups of items or services to be recognized as reasonable based on estimates of the costs necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services to individuals covered by the insurance programs established under this title."

(c) The fourth sentence of section 1861 (v) (1) of such Act is amended by inserting after "services" where it first appears the following: "(excluding therefrom any such costs, including standby costs, which are determined in accordance with regulations to be unnecessary in the efficient delivery of services covered by the insurance programs established under this title)".

(d) The fourth sentence of section 1861 (v) (1) of such Act is further amended by striking out "costs with respect" where they first appear and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "necessary costs of efficiently delivering covered services".

(e) Section 1866 (a) (2) (B) of such Act is amended
(1) by inserting "(i)" after "(B)" and (2) by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:
"(ii) Where a provider of services customarily furnishes an individual items or services which are more expensive than the items or services determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services under this title and which have not been requested by such individual, such provider may also charge such individual or other person for such more expensive items or services to the extent that the costs of (or, if less, the customary charges for) such more expensive items or services experienced by such provider in the second fiscal period immediately preceding the fiscal period in which such charges are imposed exceed the cost of such items or services determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services, but only if—

"(I) the Secretary has provided notice to the public of any charges being imposed on individuals entitled to benefits under this title on account of costs in excess of the costs determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services under this title by particular providers of services in the area in which such items or services are furnished, and

"(II) the provider of services has identified such charges to such individual or other person, in such manner as the Secretary may prescribe, as charges to meet costs in excess of the cost determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services under this title.”

(f) Section 1861 (v) of such Act (as amended by section 221 (c) (4) of this Act) is further amended by redesignating paragraphs (4) and (5) as paragraphs (5) and (6), respectively, and by inserting after paragraph (3) the following new paragraph:

“(4) If a provider of services furnishes items or services to an individual which are (194) grossly in excess of or more expensive than the items or services determined to be necessary in the efficient delivery of needed health services and charges are imposed for such more expensive items or services under the authority granted in section 1866 (a) (2) (B) (ii), the amount of payment with respect to such items or services otherwise due such provider in any fiscal period shall be reduced to the extent that such payment plus such charges exceed the cost actually incurred for such items or services in the fiscal period in which such charges are imposed.”

(g) Section 1866 (a) (2) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:
“(D) Where a provider of services customarily furnishes items or services which are (195) grossly in excess of or more expensive than the items or services with respect to which payment may be made under this title, such provider, notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this paragraph, may not, under the authority of section 1866 (a) (2) (B) (ii), charge any individual or other person any amount for such items or services in excess of the amount of the payment which may otherwise be made for such items or services under this title if the admitting physician has a direct or indirect financial interest in such provider."

(h) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to accounting periods beginning after the date of the enactment of this Act June 30, 1971.

LIMITS ON PREVAILING CHARGE LEVELS

Sec. 224. (a) Section 1842 (b) (3) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sentences: "No charge may be determined to be reasonable in the case of bills submitted or requests for payments made under this part for services rendered after June 30, 1970, the date of enactment of this Act and before July 1, 1971, if it exceeds the higher of (i) the prevailing charge recognized by the carrier for similar services in the same locality in administering this part on June 30, 1970, or (i) the prevailing charge level that, on the basis of statistical data and methodology acceptable to the Secretary, would cover 75 percent of the customary charges made for similar services in the same locality during the calendar year 1969. With respect to services rendered bills submitted or requests for payment made under this part after June 30, 1971, the charges recognized as prevailing within a locality may be increased in any fiscal year only to the extent found necessary, on the basis of statistical data and methodology acceptable to the Secretary, to cover 75 percent of the customary charges made for similar services in the same locality during the last preceding elapsed calendar year but may not be increased (in the aggregate) beyond the levels described in clause (ii) of the preceding sentence except to the extent that the Secretary finds on the basis of appropriate economic index data, that such adjustments are justified by economic changes. In the case of medical services, supplies, and equipment (including equipment servicing) that, in the judgment of the Secretary, do not generally vary significantly in quality from one supplier to another, the charges incurred after June 30, 1970, the date of enactment of this Act determined to be reasonable may not exceed the lowest lower charge levels at which such services, supplies, and equipment are widely and consistently available in a locality only except to the extent and under the circumstances specified by the Secretary.

(b) Section 1903 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) Payment under the preceding provisions of this section shall not be made with respect to any amount paid for items or services furnished under the plan after the date of enactment of this Act to the extent that such amount exceeds the charge which would be determined to be reasonable for such items or services under the third, fourth, and fifth sentences of section 1942 (b) (3)."

(c) Section 506 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f) Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this section, no payment shall be made to any State thereunder with respect to any amount paid for items or services furnished under the plan after June 30, 1970, the date of enactment of this Act to the extent that such amount exceeds the charge which would be determined to be reasonable for such items or services under the third, fourth, and fifth sentences of section 1842 (b) (3)."

(209) Establishment of Incentives for States to Emphasize Outpatient Care Under Medicaid Programs

Sec. 225. (a) Section 1903 of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 228 of this Act) is further amended by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

"(e) The amount determined under subsection (a) (1) for any State shall be adjusted as follows:

"(1) With respect to the following services furnished under the State plan after December 31, 1970, the Federal medical assistance percentage shall be increased by 25 per centum thereof, except that the Federal medical assistance percentage as so increased may not exceed 95 per centum:

"(A)" outpatient hospital services and clinic services (other than physical therapy services); and

"(B)" home health care services (other than physical therapy services); and

"(2)" with respect to the following services furnished under the State plan after December 31, 1970; the Federal medical assistance percentage shall be decreased as follows:

"(A)" after an individual has received inpatient hospital services (including services furnished in an institution for tuberculosis) on sixty days (whether or not such days are consecutive) during any calendar year (which for purposes of this section means the four calendar quarters ending with June 30); the Federal medical assistance percentage with respect to any such services furnished thereafter to such individual in the same calendar year shall be decreased by 33 1/3 per centum thereof;

"(B)" after an individual has received care as an inpatient in a skilled nursing home on ninety days (whether or not such days are consecutive) during any calendar year, the Federal medical assistance percentage with respect to any such care furnished thereafter to such individual in the same calendar year shall be decreased by $33\frac{1}{3}$ per centum thereof; and

"(C) after an individual has received inpatient services in a hospital for mental diseases on ninety days occurring after December 31, 1970 (whether or not such days are consecutive), the Federal medical assistance percentage with respect to any such services furnished to such individual on an additional two hundred and seventy-five days (whether or not such days are consecutive) shall be decreased by $33\frac{1}{3}$ per centum thereof and no payment may be made under this title for any such services furnished to such individual on any day after such two hundred and seventy-five days.

In determining the number of days on which an individual has received services described in this subsection, there shall not be counted any days with respect to which such individual is entitled to have payments made (in whole or in part) on his behalf under section 1812."

(2) Section 1903(a)-(1) of such Act is amended by inserting "subject to subsection (c) of this section" after "section 1905(b)".
(b)-(1) Section 1121 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(f)-(1) If the Secretary determines for any calendar quarter beginning after December 31, 1970, with respect to any State that there does not exist a reasonable cost differential between the cost of skilled nursing home services and the cost of intermediate care facility services in such State, the Secretary may reduce the amount which would otherwise be considered as expenditures for which payment may be made under subsection (e) by an amount which in his judgment is a reasonable equivalent of the difference between the amount of the expenditures by such State for intermediate care facility services and the amount that would have been expended by such State for such services if there had been a reasonable cost differential between the cost of skilled nursing home services and the cost of intermediate care facility services.

"(2) In determining whether any such cost differential in any State is reasonable the Secretary shall take into consideration the range of such cost differentials in all States.

"(A) inpatient services in hospitals, skilled nursing homes, and other institutional health care facilities (including intermediate care facilities) will be provided to an individual only when, and to the extent, that the health care needs of such individual cannot, consistent with the provision of appropriate medical care, be effectively provided on an outpatient basis or more economically in an inpatient health care facility of a different type;

such State plan, such utilization review, independent medical and professional audit and other procedures as are adequate to meet the criteria set forth in such clauses (A), (B), and (C).

"(3) Any reduction in the Federal medical assistance percentage of any State under this subsection shall be of such per centum as the Secretary determines will assure, insofar as possible, that the amount of Federal funds payable to such State under this title during the period that the reduction is in effect will be equal to the amount of such funds which would have been payable to such State under this title for such period, if, for such period, there was no failure on the part of such State, in the administration of the State plan approved under this title, to have in effect such utilization review, independent medical and professional audit and other procedures as are adequate to meet the criteria set forth in clauses (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1).

"(4) No reduction under this subsection in the Federal medical assistance percentage of any State shall become effective prior to the first calendar quarter which commences more than 90 days after the date the Secretary notifies the State agency of such State that such a reduction will be made.
and by inserting before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: "and (C) with respect to expenses incurred for services which are furnished to a patient of a hospital by a physician and for which payment may be made under this part, the amounts paid shall be equal to 100 percent of the reasonable cost, to the hospital or other medical service organization incurring such cost, of such services if (i) such services are furnished under circumstances comparable to the circumstances under which similar services are furnished to all persons, or all members of a class of persons, who are patients in such hospital and who are not covered by the insurance program established by this part (and not covered under a State plan approved under title XIX); and (II) none of such persons, or members of such class of persons, are required to pay the reasonable charges for such similar services even when they have private insurance covering such similar services (or are otherwise able to pay reasonable charges for all such similar services as determined in accordance with regulations); or (ii) (I) none of the patients in such hospital who are covered by such program are required to pay any charges for services furnished by physicians, or (II) such patients are required to pay reasonable charges for such services but payment of the deductible and coinsurance applicable to such services is not obtained from or on behalf of some or all of them; in addition to the portion of such charges payable as insurance benefits under such services (or are otherwise able to pay reasonable charges for all such services as determined in accordance with regulations) ".

(i) payment for such services as furnished under such arrangement would be made under part A to the hospital if such services were furnished by the hospital; and

(ii) such hospital pays to the medical school the reasonable cost of such services to the medical school.”

(c)(1) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to bills submitted and requests for payment made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

"PAYMENTS TO HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS

Sec. 1876. (a)(1) In lieu of amounts which would otherwise be payable pursuant to sections 1814(b) and 1833 (a), the Secretary is authorized to determine, as provided in this section, with respect to any health maintenance organization, a prospective per capita rate of payment—

"(A) for services provided under parts A and B for individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e) who are entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A and enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B, and

"(B) for services provided under part B for individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e) who are not entitled to benefits under part
A but who are enrolled for benefits under part B.

"(2)(A) Each such rate of payment shall be deter-the difference in utilization of resources between its members who are under age 65 and its members who are age 65 or over) and such other pertinent factors as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations, and shall be designed to provide payment at a level not to exceed the lesser of—

"(i) The portion of such organization's net premium with respect to its members who are under age 65 which such premium which represents such organization’s average per capita cost of providing services to such members and its administrative expenses, or “(II) If less, 150 per centum of the dollar amount by which such organization’s weighted average premium rate with respect to members who are under age 65 exceeds the portion of such premium rate which represents such organization’s average per capita cost of providing services to them and its administrative expenses, or “(ii) Ninety-five per centum of the amount which the Secretary estimates (with appropriate adjustment to assure actuarial equivalence) would otherwise be pay-administrative expenses) if they were furnished by other than health maintenance organizations.

“(B) In addition to the amount determined pursuant to subparagraph (A), there shall be payable to a health maintenance organization a reasonable allowance for its administrative costs which are not normally incurred by providers of services (as defined in regulations). Such allowance shall, however, in no case exceed 95 per centum of the national average (determined on a per capita basis) of administrative costs incurred by organizations described in sections 1816 and 1842, as determined by the Secretary on the basis of recent reliable data.

"(D) Payment at the rate specified in subparagraph (C) may be made to a health maintenance organization only if such organization provides the Secretary with satisfactory assurance that any amounts attributable to the difference between payment at such rate and payment at the rate specified in subparagraph (A) will be used in full by such organization for providing its enrollees under this section benefits in addition to those specified in subsection (c) or reducing the premium rates charged to such enrollees pursuant to subsection (g).
“(3) The payments to health maintenance organizations under this subsection for each month shall be made from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund, as follows: The amount payable to such an organization for such a month from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund shall be equal to 200 percent of the product of (A) the number of individuals enrolled under subsection (e) with such organization for such month, and (B) the monthly premium for supplementary medical insurance applicable for such month under section 1839(b)(2). The remainder of such payment for such month to such organization shall be paid by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund. For limitation on Federal participation for capital expenditures which are out of conformity with a comprehensive plan of a State or areawide planning agency, see section 1122.

“(1) provides, either directly or through arrangements with others, health services to individuals enrolled with such organization under subsection (e) on a per capita prepayment basis;

“(2) provides, to the extent applicable in subsection (e) (through institutions, entities, and persons meeting... the applicable requirements of section 1861), all of the services and benefits covered under parts A and B of this title;

“(3) provides physicians' services (A) directly through physicians who are either employees or partners of such organization, or (B) under arrangements with one or more groups of physicians (organized on a group practice or individual practice basis) under which each such group is reimbursed for its services primarily on the basis of an aggregate fixed sum or on a per capita basis, regardless of whether the individual physician members of any such group are paid on a fee-for-service or other basis;

“(4) demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary proof of financial responsibility and proof of capability to provide comprehensive health care services, including institutional services, efficiently, effectively, and economically;

“(5) except as provided in subsections (h) and (i) has enrolled members at least half of whom are individuals under age 65;

“(6) has arrangements for assuring that the health services required by its members are received promptly and appropriately and that the services which are received meet standards of quality which it establishes in accordance with regulations;
“(7) has an open enrollment period at least every year under which it accepts up to the limits of its capacity and without restrictions, except as may be authorized in regulations, individuals who are eligible to enroll under subsection (d) in the order in which they apply for enrollment (unless to do so would result in failure to meet the requirement of paragraph (5)); and

“(8)(A) has an enrollment of not less than 10,000 members, or (as determined by the Secretary) is expected to have such enrollment within 3 years from the date such determination is made and (B) is expected to maintain such enrollment.

“(c) The benefits provided under this section shall consist of—

“(1) in the case of an individual who is entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A and enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B—

“(A) entitlement to have payment made on his behalf for all services described in section 1812 and section 1832 which are furnished to him by the health maintenance organization with which he is enrolled pursuant to subsection (e) of this section; and

“(B) entitlement to have payment made by such health maintenance organization to him or on his behalf for such emergency services and prescribed maintenance therapy (as defined in regulations) as may be furnished to him by a physician, supplier, or provider of services, other than the health maintenance organization with which he is enrolled;

“(2) in the case of an individual who is not entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A but who is enrolled for medical insurance benefits under part B, entitlement to have payment made for services described in paragraph (1), but only to the extent that such services are also described in section 1832.

“(d) Subject to the provisions of subsection (e), every individual described in subsection (c) shall be eligible to enroll with a health maintenance organization (as defined in subsection (b)) which serves the geographic area in which such individual resides.

“(e) An individual may enroll with a health maintenance organization under this section, and may terminate such enrollment, as may be prescribed by regulations.

“(f) Any individual enrolled with a health maintenance organization under this section who is dissatisfied by reason of his failure to receive without additional cost to him any health service to which he believes he is entitled shall, if the amount in controversy is $100 or more, be entitled to a hearing before the Secretary to the same extent as is provided in section 205 (b). In any such hearing the Secretary shall make such health maintenance organization a party thereto. If the amount in controversy is $1,000 or more, such individual or health maintenance organization shall be entitled to judicial review of the Secretary's final decision after such hearing as provided in section 205(g).

“(g)(1) If the health maintenance organization provided its enrollees under this section only the services described in subsection (c), its premium rate for such enrollees shall not exceed the actuarial value of the deductible and coinsurance which would otherwise be applicable to such enrollees under part A and part B, if they were not enrolled under this section.

“(2) A health maintenance organization may provide additional services for which premium charges may be made, but such charges must be reasonable as determined by the Secretary in accordance with regulations. If the health maintenance organization provides to its enrollees under this section services in addition to those described in subsection (c), it shall furnish such enrollees with information on the portion of its premium rate applicable to such additional services and the portion applicable to the services described in subsection (c). Such portion applicable to the services described in subsection (c) may not exceed the actuarial value of the deductible and coinsurance which would otherwise be applicable to such enrollees under part A and part B if they were not enrolled under this section.
“(h) The provisions of paragraph (5) of subsection (b) shall not apply with respect to any health maintenance organization for such period not to exceed five years from the date such organization enters into an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to subsection (j), as the Secretary may permit, but only so long as such organization demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary by the submission of its plans for each year that it is making continuous efforts and progress toward achieving compliance with the provisions of such paragraph (5) within such five year period.

“(i) The Secretary may waive the requirements of paragraph (5) of subsection (b) with respect to any health maintenance organization if he finds that such organization has made reasonable efforts to achieve compliance with such paragraph and, that because of its geographic location or other circumstances beyond its control, such organization would be unable to achieve compliance with such paragraph except through a reduction of enrollment under this section.

“(j)(1) The Secretary is authorized to enter into a contract with any health maintenance organization which undertakes to provide, on a per capita prepayment basis, the services described in section 1832 (and section 1812, in the case of individuals who are entitled to hospital insurance benefits under part A) to individuals enrolled with such organization pursuant to subsection (e).
"(2) Each contract under this section shall be for a term at least one year, as determined by the Secretary, and may be made automatically renewable from term to term in the absence of notice by either party of intention to terminate at the end of the current term; except that the Secretary may terminate any such contract at any time (after such reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the health maintenance organization involved as he may provide in regulations) if he finds that the health maintenance organization has failed substantially to carry out the contract or is carrying out the contract in a manner inconsistent with the efficient and effective administration of this section.

"(3) The effective date of any contract executed pursuant to this subsection shall be specified in such contract pursuant to regulations.

"(4) Payment for services provided by any health maintenance organization to eligible enrollees under the contract shall be made pursuant to subsection (a)(2) except that if the Secretary determines within a three year period following the termination of any accounting period of any such organization that the estimates made pursuant to subsection (a)(2) were substantially incorrect, because they were based upon erroneous data or because actuarial assumptions were materially different from the actual experience with the result that such organization received substantially more or less than it should have received pursuant to subsection (a)(2), the Secretary is authorized to make appropriate retroactive adjustments in such payments.

"(5) Each contract under this section—

"(A) shall provide that the Secretary, or any person or organization designated by him—

"(i) shall have the right to inspect or otherwise evaluate the quality, appropriateness, and timeliness of services performed under such contract; and

"(ii) shall have the right to audit and inspect any books and records of such health maintenance organization which pertain to services performed under such contract; and

"(B) shall contain such other terms and conditions not inconsistent with this section as the Secretary may find necessary."

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 1814 and section 1833 of the Social Security Act, any health maintenance organization which has entered into an agreement with the Secretary pursuant to section 1876 of such Act shall, for the duration of such agreement, be entitled to reimbursement only as provided in section 1876 of such Act for individuals who are members of such organization; except that with respect to individuals who were members of such organization prior to July 1, 1971, and who, although eligible to have payment made pursuant to section 1876 of such Act for services rendered to them, chose (in accordance with regulations) not to have such payment made pursuant to such section, the Secretary shall, for a period not to exceed three years commencing on July 1, 1971, pay such organization on the basis of prospective per capita rates, determined in accordance with the provisions of section 1876(a) of such Act, with appropriate actuarial adjustments to reflect the difference in utilization of out-of-plan services between such individuals and individuals who are enrolled with such organization pursuant to section 1876 of such Act.

(c)(1) Section 1814(a) of such Act, as amended by section 226(b) of this Act, is further amended by striking out "Except as provided in subsections (d) and (g)," and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Except as provided in subsections (d) and (g) and in section 1876, ".

(2) Section 1833(a) of such Act is amended by striking out "Subject to" and inserting in lieu thereof the following:
"Except as provided in section 1876 and subject to ".

(d) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to services provided on or after July 1, 1971.

"UNIFORM HEALTH, SAFETY, ENVIRONMENTAL, AND STAFFING STANDARDS FOR EXTENDED CARE FACILITIES AND SKILLED NURSING HOMES

"Sec. 1123. (a) If any State has a State plan approved under title XIX which imposes (as a condition for payment of skilled nursing services under the plan) on nursing homes in such State standards with respect to health, safety, environmental quality, or staffing which are higher than the standards (relating to health, safety, environmental quality, or staffing) which are imposed under title XVIII with respect to extended care facilities, the Secretary shall impose, on the extended care facilities in such State, like standards as a condition of payment under title XVIII for extended care services provided by such facilities.

"(b) In addition to the requirements imposed by law as a condition of approval of any State plan under title XIX, there is hereby imposed the requirement (and the plan shall be deemed to require) that, as a condition of payment under the plan for skilled nursing home services provided by facilities in such State, such facilities must meet the standards (relating to health, safety, environmental quality, and staffing) applicable to facilities providing extended care services for which payment may be made under title XVIII, if, and to the extent that, such standards are higher than the standards (relating to health, safety, environmental quality, and staffing) which are otherwise imposed under the plan as a condition of payment thereunder for skilled nursing home services."

(b) The amendments made by subsection (a) shall be applicable with respect to skilled nursing home services provided after June 30, 1971, under a State plan approved under title XIX of the Social Security and extended care services provided after such date under title XVIII of such Act.

Simplified Reimbursement of Extended Care Facilities

Sec. 241. (a) Section 1861(v)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by—

(a) inserting "(A)" after "(v)(1)";

(b) inserting "(B)" immediately before "Such" the first time it appears in the second paragraph thereof; and

(c) adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(C) Such regulations may, in the case of extended care facilities in any State, provide for the use of rates, developed by the State in which such facilities are located, for the payment of the cost of skilled nursing home services furnished under the State's plan approved under title XIX (and such rates may be increased by the Secretary on a class or size of institution or on a geographical basis by a percentage factor not in excess of 10 percent to take into account determinable items or services or other requirement under this title not otherwise included in the computation of such State rates), if the Secretary finds that such rates are reasonably related to (but not necessarily limited to) analyses undertaken by such State of costs of care in comparable facilities in such State; except that the foregoing provisions of this subparagraph shall not apply to any extended care facility in such State if—

“(i) such facility is a distinct part of or directly operated by a hospital, or “(ii) such facility operates in a close, formal satellite relationship (as defined in regulations of the Secretary) with a participating hospital or hospitals.

Notwithstanding the previous provisions of this paragraph, in the case of an extended care facility specified in clause (ii) of this subparagraph, the reasonable cost of any services furnished by such facility as determined by the Secretary under this subsection

"(A) such institution is located in a rural area and the supply of hospital services in such area is not sufficient to meet the needs of individuals residing therein, and

"(B) the failure of such institution to qualify as a hospital would seriously reduce the availability of such services to beneficiaries in such area; and

"(C) such institution has made and continues to make a good faith effort to comply with this paragraph, but such compliance is impeded by the lack of qualified nursing personnel in such area; and

"(D) the requirements of such clause (i) were met for a regular daytime shift."

"PART B—PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW"

"DECLARATION OF PURPOSE"

"Sec. 1151. In order to promote the effective, efficient, and economical delivery of health care services for which payment may be made (in whole or in part) under title XVIII, or under State plans approved under title XIX, and in recognition of the interests of patients and the public in improved health care services, it is the purpose of this part to assure, through the application of suitable procedures of professional standards review, that the services for which payment may be made under the Social Security Act will conform to appropriate professional standards for the provision of health care and that payment for such services will be made—

"(1) only when, and to the extent, medically necessary, as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion; and

"(2) in the case of services provided by a hospital or other health care facility on an inpatient basis, only when and for such period as such services cannot, consistent with professionally recognized health care standards, effectively be provided on an outpatient basis or more economically in an inpatient health care facility of a different type, as determined in the exercise of reasonable limits of professional discretion.

"DESIGNATION OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"Sec. 1152. (a) The Secretary shall (1) not later than January 1, 1972, establish throughout the United States appropriate areas with respect to which Professional Standards Review Organizations may be designated, and (2) at the earliest practicable date thereafter enter into an agreement with a qualified organization whereby such an organization shall be designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area.

"(b) For purposes of subsection (a), the term ‘qualified organization’ means—

"(1) when used in connection with any area—

"(A) a nonprofit professional association (i) (or a component organization thereof) which is composed of physicians engaged in the practice of medicine or surgery in such area, (ii) the membership of which includes a substantial proportion of all such physicians in such area, and (iii) which has available professional competence to review health care services of the types and kinds with respect to which Professional Standards Review Organizations have review responsibilities under this part, or

"(B) such other public, nonprofit private, or other agency or organization, which the Secretary determines, in accordance with criteria prescribed by him in regulations, to be of professional competence and otherwise suitable; and

"(2) which the Secretary, on the basis of his exami-inition and evaluation of a formal plan submitted to him by the association, agency, or organization (as well as on the basis of other relevant data and information), finds to be willing to perform and capable of performing, in an effective and timely manner and at reasonable cost, the duties, functions, and activities of a Professional Standards Review Organization required by or pursuant to this part.

"(c)(1) The Secretary shall not enter into any agreement under this part under which there is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area any organization other than an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) unless, in such area, there is no organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) which meets the conditions specified in subsection (b)(2).

"(2) Whenever the Secretary shall have entered into an agreement under this part under which there is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area any organization other than an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A), he shall not renew such agreement with such organization if he determines that—

"(A) there is in such area an organization referred to in subsection (b)(1)(A) which (i) has not been (nor has its predecessor been) previously designated as a Professional Standards Review Organization, and (ii) is willing to enter into an agreement under this part under which such organization would be designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area;

“(B) such organization meets the conditions specified in subsection (b)(2); and

“(C) the designation of such organization as the Professional Standards Review Organization for such area will result in an improvement in the performance in such area of the duties and functions required of such Organizations under this part.

“(d)(1) An agreement entered into under this part between the Secretary and any organization under which such organization is designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area shall provide that such organization will—

“(A) perform such duties and functions and assume such responsibilities and comply with such other requirements as may be required by this part or under regulations of the Secretary promulgated to carry out the provisions of this part; and

“(B) collect such data relevant to its function and such information and keep and maintain such records as the Secretary may require to carry out the purposes of this part and to permit access to and use of any such records as the Secretary may require for such purposes.

"(2) Any such agreement with an organization under this part shall provide that the Secretary make payments to such organization equal to the amount of expenses reasonably and necessarily incurred, as determined by the Secretary, by such organization in carrying out or preparing to carry out the duties and functions required by such agreement.

"(3) Any such agreement under this part with an organization shall be for a term of twelve months; except that, prior to the expiration of such term, such agreement may be terminated—

"(A) by the organization at such time and upon such notice to the Secretary as may be prescribed in regulations (except that notice of more than three months may not be required); or

"(B) by the Secretary at such time and upon such reasonable notice to the organization as may be prescribed in regulations, but only after the Secretary has determined (after providing such organization with an opportunity for a formal hearing on the matter) that such organization is not substantially complying with or effectively carrying out the provisions of such agreement.

"(e) No Professional Standards Review Organization shall utilize the services of any individual who is not a physician to make final determinations with respect to the professional conduct of any physician, or any act performed by any physician in the exercise of his profession.

"REVIEW PENDING DESIGNATION OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATION

"Sec. 1153. Pending the assumption by a Professional Standards Review Organization for any area, of full review responsibility, and pending a demonstration of capacity for improved review effort with respect to matters involving the provision of health care services in such area for which payment (in whole or in part) may be made, under title XVIII, or under State plans approved under title XIX, any review with respect to such services which has not been designated by the Secretary as the responsibility of such organization, shall be reviewed in the manner otherwise provided for under law.

"TRIAL PERIOD FOR PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATION

"Sec. 1154. (a) The Secretary shall initially designate an organization as a Professional Standards Review Organization for any area on a conditional basis with a view to determining the capacity of such organization to perform the duties and functions imposed under this part on Professional Standards Review Organizations. Such designation may not be made prior to receipt from such organization and approval by the Secretary of a formal plan for the orderly assumption and implementation of the responsibilities of the Professional Standards Review Organization under this part.

"(b) During any such trial period (which may not exceed twenty-four months), the Secretary may require a Professional Standards Review Organization to perform only such of the duties and functions required under this part of Professional Standards Review Organizations as he determines such organization to be capable of performing.
The number and type of such duties shall, during the trial period, be progressively increased as the organization becomes capable of added responsibility so that, by the end of such period, such organization shall be considered a qualified organization only if the Secretary finds that it is substantially carrying out the activities and functions required of Professional Standards Review Organizations under this part with respect to the review of health care services provided by physicians and other practitioners and institutional health care facilities. Any of such duties and functions not performed by such organization during such period shall be performed in the manner and to the extent otherwise provided for under law.
"(c) Any agreement under which any organization is conditionally designated as the Professional Standards Review Organization for any area may be terminated by such organization upon ninety days notice to the Secretary or by the Secretary upon ninety days notice to such organization.

"(d) In order to avoid duplication of functions and unnecessary review and control activities, the Secretary is authorized to waive any or all of the review or similar activities otherwise required under or pursuant to any provision of this Act (other than this part) where he finds, on the basis of substantial evidence of the effective performance of review and control activities by Professional Standards Review Organizations, that the review and similar activities otherwise so required, are not needed for the provision of adequate review and control.

"DUTIES AND FUNCTIONS OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

"Sec. 1155. (a)(1) It shall be the duty and function of each Professional Standards Review Organization for any area to assume, at the earliest date practicable, responsibility for the review of the professional activities in such area of physicians and other health care practitioners and institutional providers of health care services in the provision of health care services for which payment may be made (in whole or in part) under title XVIII, or under State plans approved under title XIX, for the purpose of determining whether—

"(A) such services are or were medically necessary;

"(B) the quality of such services meets professionally recognized standards of health care; and

"(C) in case such services are proposed to be provided in a hospital or other health care facility on an in-patient basis, such services could, consistent with the provision of appropriate medical care, be effectively provided on an out-patient basis or more economically in an in-patient health care facility of a different type.

"(2) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall have the authority to determine, in advance, in the case of—

"(A) any elective admission to a hospital, or other health care facility, or

"(B) any other health care service which will consist of extended or costly courses of treatment, whether such service, if provided, or if provided by a particular health care practitioner or by a particular hospital or other health care facility, would meet the criteria specified in clauses (A) and (C) of paragraph (1).

"(3) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, determine and publish, from time to time, the types and kinds of cases (whether by type of health care or diagnosis involved, or whether in terms of other relevant criteria relating to the provision of health care services) with respect to which such Organization will, in order most effectively to carry out the purposes of this part, exercise the authority conferred upon it under paragraph (2).

“(4) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall be responsible for the regular review of profiles of care and services received and provided with respect to patients, utilizing to the greatest extent practicable in such patient profiles, methods of coding which will provide maximum confidentiality as to patient identity and assure objective evaluation consistent with the purposes of this part. Profiles shall also be regularly reviewed on an ongoing basis with respect to each health care practitioner and provider to determine whether the care and services ordered or rendered are consistent with the criteria specified in clauses (A), (B), and (C) of paragraph (1).

“(5) Physicians assigned responsibility for the review of hospital care may be only those having active hospital staff privileges in at least one of the participating hospitals in the area served by the Professional Standards Review Organization.

“(6) No physician shall be permitted to review—

“(A) health care services provided to a patient if he was directly or indirectly involved in providing such services, or

"(B) health care services provided in or by an institution, if he or any member of his family has, directly or indirectly, any financial interest in such institution. For purposes of this paragraph, a physician’s family includes only his spouse (other than a spouse who is legally separated from him under a decree of divorce or separate maintenance), children (including legally adopted children), grandchildren, parents, and grandparents.

"(b) To the extent necessary or appropriate for the proper performance of its duties and functions, the Professional Standards Review Organization serving any area is authorized to—

"(1) make arrangements to utilize the services of persons who are practitioners of or specialists in the various areas of medicine (including dentistry), or other types of health care, which persons shall, to the maximum extent practicable, be individuals engaged in the practice of their profession within the area served by such organization;

"(2) undertake such professional inquiry either before or after, or both before and after, the provision of services with respect to which such organization has a responsibility for review under subsection (a)(1);

"(3) examine the pertinent records of any practitioner or provider of health care services providing services with respect to which such organization has a responsibility for review under subsection (a)(1); and

"(4) inspect the physical facilities in which care is rendered or services provided (which are located in such area) of any practitioner or provider.

"(c) In order to familiarize physicians with the review functions and activities of Professional Standards Review Organizations and to promote acceptance of such functions and activities by physicians, patients, and other persons, each Professional Standards Review Organization, in carrying out its review responsibilities, shall (to the maximum extent consistent with the effective and timely performance of its duties and functions)—

"(1) encourage all physicians practicing their profusion in the area served by such Organization to participate in the review activities of such Organization;

"(2) provide rotating physician membership of review committees on an extensive and continuing basis;

"(3) assure that membership on review committees have the broadest representation feasible in terms of the various types of practice in which physicians engage in the area served by such Organization; and
"(4) utilize, whenever feasible, medical periodicals and similar publications to publicize the functions and activities of Professional Standards Review Organizations.

"(d)(1) Each Professional Standards Review Organization is authorized to utilize the services of, and accept the findings of, the review committees of hospitals located in the area served by such Organization, but only when and only to the extent that such committees have demonstrated to the satisfaction of such Organization their capacity effectively and in timely fashion to review activities in such hospitals (including the medical necessity of admissions, services ordered, and lengths of stay) so as to aid in accomplishing the purposes and responsibilities described in subsection (a)(1).

"(2) Each Professional Standards Review Organization is authorized to utilize the services of medical societies and similar organizations to assist such Organization in performing one or more of its professional review activities, but only when and only to the extent that such societies or other organizations have demonstrated to the satisfaction of such Organization their capacity effectively and in timely fashion to perform such activities so as to aid in accomplishing the purposes described in subsection (a)(1).

"(3) The Secretary may prescribe regulations to carry out the provisions of this subsection.
"NORMS OF HEALTH CARE SERVICES FOR VARIOUS ILLNESSES OR HEALTH CONDITIONS"

"Sec. 1156. (a) Each Professional Standards Review Organization shall apply professionally developed norms of care and treatment based upon typical patterns of practice in their region (including typical lengths-of-stay for institutional care by age and diagnosis) as principal points of evaluation and review. The National Professional Standards Review Council and the Secretary shall provide such technical assistance to the organization as will be helpful in utilizing and applying such norms of care and treatment. Where the actual norms of care and treatment in a Professional Standards Review Organization area are significantly different from professionally developed regional norms of care and treatment approved for comparable conditions, the Professional Standards Review Organization concerned shall be so informed, and in the event that appropriate consultation and discussion indicate reasonable basis for usage of such unusual norms in the area concerned, the Professional Standards Review Organization may apply such actual norms in such area as are approved by the National Professional Standards Review Council.

"(b) Any such norm with respect to treatment for any particular illness or health condition shall include (in accordance with regulations of the Secretary)—
“(1) the types and extent of the health care services which, taking into account differing, but acceptable, modes of treatment, are considered within the range of appropriate treatment of such illness or health condition, consistent with professionally recognized and accepted patterns of care;

“(2) the type of health care facility which is considered, consistent with such standards, to be the type in which health care services which are medically appropriate for such illness or condition can most economically be provided.

“(c)(1) The National Professional Standards Review Council shall provide for the preparation and distribution, to each Professional Standards Review Organization and to each other agency or person performing review functions with respect to the provision of health care services under title XVIII, or under State plans approved under title XIX, of appropriate materials indicating the regional norms to be utilized pursuant to this part. Such data concerning norms shall be reviewed and revised from time to time. "(B) will be of a quality which meets professionally recognized standards of health care; and it shall be the obligation of any health care practitioner, in ordering, authorizing, directing, or arranging for the provision by any other person (including a hospital or other health care facility) of health care services for any patient of such practitioner, to exercise his professional responsibility with a view to assuring (to the extent of his influence or control over such patient, such person, or the provision of such services) that such services will be provided—

"(C) only when, and to the extent, medically necessary; and “(D) will be of a quality which meets professionally recognized standards of health care.

“(2) Each health care practitioner, and each hospital or other provider of health care services, shall have an obligation, within reasonable limits of professional discretion, not to take any action, in the exercise of his profession (in the case of any health care practitioner), or in the conduct of its business (in the case of any hospital or other such provider), which would authorize any individual to be admitted as an in-patient in or to continue as an in-patient in any hospital or other health care facility unless—

“(A) in-patient care is determined by such practitioner and by such hospital or other provider, consistent with professionally recognized health care standards, to be medically necessary for the proper care of such individual; and

“(B)(i) the in-patient care required by such individual cannot, consistent with such standards, be provided more economically in a health care facility of a different type; or practitioner or provider pay to the United States, in case such acts or conduct involved the provision by such prac-medically improper or unnecessary, an amount not in exor unnecessary services so provided, or (if less) $5,000.

Such amount may be deducted from any sums owing by the United States (or any instrumentality thereof) to the person from whom such amount is claimed.

"(4) Any person furnishing services described in paragraph (1) who is dissatisfied with a determination made by the Secretary under this subsection shall be entitled to reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing thereon by the Secretary to the same extent as is provided in section 205(b), and to judicial review of the Secretary's final decision after such hearing as is provided in section 205(g).

For purposes of this paragraph, any tax imposed for the taxable year by section 531 (relating to accumulated earnings tax), section 541 (relating to personal holding compmt tax), or section 1378 (relating to tax on certain capital gains of subchapter S corporations), and any additional tax imposed for the taxable year by section 1351(d)(1) (relating to recoveries of foreign expropriation losses), shall not be considered tax imposed by this chapter for such year.

"(4) MARRIED INDIVIDUALS. In the case of a husband or wife who files a separate return, the amount specified under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (2) shall be $12,500 in lieu of $25,000. "(5) CONTROLLED GROUPS.—In the case of a controlled group, the $25,000 amount specified under paragraph (2) shall be reduced for each component member of such group by apportioning $25,000 among the component members of such group in such manner as the Secretary or his delegate shall by regulations prescribe. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term 'controlled group' has the meaning assigned to such term by section 1563(a).

"(b) CARRYBACK AND CARRYOVER OF UNUSED CREDIT.—
"(1) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—If the amount of the credit determined under subsection (a)(1) for any taxable year exceeds the limitation provided by subsection (a)(2) for such taxable year (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as 'unused credit year'), such excess shall be—

"(A) a work incentive program credit carry-back to each of the 3 taxable years preceding the unused credit year, and

"(B) a work incentive program credit carry-over to each of the 7 taxable years following the unused credit year, and shall be added to the amount allowable as a credit by section 40 for such years, except that such excess may be a carryback only to a taxable year beginning after December 31, 1970. The entire amount of the unused credit for an unused credit year shall be carried to the earliest of the 10 taxable years to which (by reason of subparagraphs (A) and (B)) such credit may be carried, and then to each of the other 9 taxable years to the extent that, because of the limitation contained in paragraph (2), such unused credit may not be added for a prior taxable year to which such unused credit may be carried.

"(2) LIMITATION.—The amount of the unused credit which may be added under paragraph (1) for any preceding or succeeding taxable year shall not exceed the amount by which the limitation provided by subsection (a)(2) for such taxable year exceeds the sum of—

“(A) the credit allowable under subsection (a) (1) for such taxable year, and

“(B) the amounts which, by reason of this subsection, are added to the amount allowable for such taxable year and attributable to taxable years preceding the unused credit year.

taxable year in which such employment is terminated shall be increased by an amount (determined under such regulations) equal to the credits allowed under section 40 for such taxable year and all prior taxable years attributable to work incentive program expenses paid or incurred with respect to such employee.

"(B) Carrybacks and Carryovers Adjusted.—In the case of any termination of employment to which subparagraph (A) applies, the carrybacks and carryovers under subsection (b) shall be properly adjusted.

"(2) Subsection Not to Apply in Certain Cases.—

"(A) In General.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to—

"(i) a termination of employment of an employee who voluntarily leaves the employment of the taxpayer, or

"(ii) a termination of employment of an individual who, before the close of the period referred to in paragraph (1) (A), becomes disabled to perform the services of such employment, unless such disability is removed before the close of such period and the taxpayer fails to offer reemployment to such individual.

"(B) Change in Form of Business, etc.—

For purposes of paragraph (1), the employment relationship between the taxpayer and an employee shall not be treated as terminated—

"(i) by a transaction to which section 381 (c) applies, if the employee continues to be employed by the acquiring corporation, or

"(ii) by reason of a mere change in the form of conducting the trade or business of the taxpayer, if the employee continues to be employed in such trade or business and the taxpayer retains a substantial interest in such trade or business.

"(3) Special Rule.—Any increase in tax under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as tax imposed by this chapter for purposes of determining the amount of any credit allowable under subpart A.

"Sec. 50a. Definitions; Special Rules.

"(a) Work Incentive Program Expenses.—For purposes of this subpart, the term ‘work incentive program expenses’ means the wages and salaries of employees who are certified by the Secretary of Labor as having been placed in employment under a work incentive program established

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) TRADE OR BUSINESS EXPENSES.—No item shall be taken into account under subsection (a) unless such item is allowable as a deduction under section 162 (relating to trade or business expenses).

"(2) REIMBURSED EXPENSES.—No item shall be taken into account under subsection (a) to the extent that the taxpayer is reimbursed for such item.

"(3) GEOGRAPHICAL LIMITATION.—No item shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to any expense paid or incurred by the taxpayer for training conducted outside of the territory of the United States.

"(5) INELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.—No item shall be taken into account under subsection (a) with respect to an individual who—
"(A) bears any of the relationships described in paragraphs (1) through (8) of section 152(a) to the taxpayer, or, if the taxpayer is a corporation, to an individual who owns, directly or indirectly, more than 50 percent in value of the outstanding stock of the corporation (determined with the application of section 267(c)), or

"(B) if the taxpayer is an estate or trust, is a grantor, beneficiary, or a fiduciary of the estate or trust, or is an individual who bears any of the relationships described in paragraphs (1) through (8) of section 152(a) to a grantor, beneficiary, or fiduciary of the estate or trust.

"(1) the work incentive program expenses for each taxable year shall be apportioned pro rata among the persons who are shareholders of such corporation on the last day of such taxable year, and

"(2) any person to whom any expenses have been apportioned under paragraph (1) shall be treated (for purposes of this subpart) as the taxpayer with respect to such expenses."

“(2) any beneficiary to whom any expenses have been apportioned under paragraph (1) shall be treated (for purposes of this subpart) as the taxpayer with respect to such expenses, and

“(3) the $25,000 amount specified under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 50(a)(2) applicable to such estate or trust shall be reduced to an amount which bears the same ratio to $25,000 as the amount of the expenses allocated to the trust under paragraph (1) bears to the entire amount of such expenses.

“(e) Limitations With Respect to Certain Persons.—In the case of—

“(1) an organization to which section 593 applies,

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES
DECEMBER 29 (legislative day, December 28), 1970
Ordered to be printed with the amendments of the Senate numbered
The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H.R. 17550) entitled "An act to amend the Social Security Act to provide increases in benefits, to improve computation methods, and to raise the earnings base under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance system, to make improvements in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with emphasis upon improvements in the operating effectiveness of such programs, and for other purposes." requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. Long, Mr. Talmadge, Mr. Ribicoff, Mr. Williams of Delaware and Mr. Bennett to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.
PETITIONING CHAIRMAN OF WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE IN REGARD TO SENATE AMENDMENTS TO SOCIAL SECURITY BILL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. VANIK) is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, I have a petition signed by 100 Members of the House of Representatives urging the Honorable Wilbur Mills, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee to take the Senate amendments to the social security bill from the Speaker's desk to conference and accept those which: First, increase social security benefits by 10 percent; second, increase the social security minimum to $100; third, increase the retirement earnings test to $2,400; and fourth, increase the monthly minimum allowance for the aged, disabled, and blind on welfare to $130 a person or $200 per couple.

I can very well understand to act on this bill while it languished in the other body for over 7 months. I also understand the frustrations of Members who properly explained about the attempts to attach nonrelated legislation to the social security bill.

These considerations, however, should be put aside because of the need to adopt this legislation. A new bill next year is not likely to provide a 10 percent increase in benefits, nor is it likely to increase the minimum benefit to $100—nor is it likely to include an increase in the allowable retirement income to $2,400 per year; nor is it likely to increase the monthly minimum allowance for the aged, disabled, and blind on welfare to acceptable levels. Furthermore, if a new bill passes the Congress by April 1, increased benefit payments will not be received by 26 million recipients until after July 1.

The experience of this year indicates the manner in which the social security legislation is used as a delivery system for legislation which could not make it through this Congress on its own power. This abuse of the legislative system could be avoided if we pass out a social security bill this session.

Following is the petition signed by 100 Members of this body urging action before the adjournment of this Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object if I shall object, of course, but I would think it would be the gentlemanly thing to do, and I am sure those who signed the petition would want done, and that is to accord the privilege to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means the opportunity to have the original copy of it and not just to read the signatures into the Congressional Record.

Therefore, I hope my friend from Ohio will provide that opportunity to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. VANIK. I have for the chairman the original. I got the 100th name just a couple of minutes ago and it is on my desk. I have a mimeographed copy of it.

Mr. MILLS. I appreciate the gentleman at least letting me have the original copy.

Mr. VANIK. I shall be glad to do so.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The petition referred to follows:

P E T I T I O N

We, the undersigned Members of the House of Representatives, hereby urge the Honorable Wilbur Mills, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, to take the Senate Amendments to the Social Security Bill from the Speaker's Desk to Conference and accept those which would: (1) increase social security benefits by 10 percent; (2) increase the social security minimum to $100; (3) increase the retirement earnings test to $2,400; (4) increase the monthly minimum allowance for the Aged, Disabled, and Blind on welfare to $130 a person or $200 per couple.

Also attached is a Library of Congress memorandum relating to the financing of the OASDI system under the Senate version of the bill as compared with the House version:

MEMORANDUM

December 29, 1970.

From: Francisco Bayo.

Subject: Comparison of the Financing of the OASDI System Under the Senate Version and the House Version of HR. 17550

The attached Table I compares the financing adopted for the Senate version and the House version of the OASDI system under H.R. 17550. This comparison is made on the basis of level earnings assumptions and does not take into account the effect of the automatic benefit increase provisions or of their corresponding financing. The House version of these provisions is estimated to yield enough revenues, over the long-range future, to finance all the automatic increases in Amendments. However, under the Senate version of the automatic provisions the system would slowly accumulate actuarial surpluses, unless the Congress acts in the future to either increase the benefits further or reduce the taxes.

On the basis of the level earnings assumptions and disregarding automatic provisions, the House bill has an actuarial imbalance for the OASDI system of —0.15 percent of taxable payroll which is close to the permissible variation of 0 percent of taxable payroll. This was also the case under the Ways and Means Committee bill, which had an actuarial balance of —0.12 percent of taxable payroll, and which was increased on the House floor to —0.10 percent of taxable payroll by a liberalization in the retirement test. However, this is not the case for the Senate bill which has an actuarial imbalance of —0.25 percent of taxable payroll and is beyond the acceptable limits of variation. It should be indicated that the bill reported by the Senate Finance Committee had an actuarial balance of —0.15 percent of taxable payroll, and that the liberalization adopted on the Senate floor with respect to the earnings test and to children's benefits increased the imbalance by 0.10 percent to a total of —0.25 percent of taxable payroll.

The major differences between the two versions of the bill as presented in Table II, also indicate: (1) the increased long range cost effect. The level-cost of the OASDI system under present law and under both versions of the bill are presented in Table III.

Actuarial balance under bill. —75.75
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentle-Man from Arkansas (Mr. Mills) is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. Mills. Mr. Speaker, I want to take time first to thank my friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Vanik), for all of his valuable assistance in helping to work out this problem. Along with other Members who have been on the conference committee, these many knotty problems that we would have if we went to conference. His assistance is appreciated. And I assure you if we were in conference and could be in communication with the gentleman with respect to each of the 295 amendments that the Senate adopted to the bill, raising the size of the bill from 158 pages to even 400 pages, that we could get some very valuable direction from the gentleman in making decisions as to what the House conferences should expect to do on each of these amendments.

How long this would take, however, insofar as receiving that consultation and advice and then making a decision on the part of all of us who were in the conference, I do not know. But I think the gentleman has been in the Congress long enough, I think he has been on the Committee on Ways and Means long enough, and we may have had enough conferences to know—that it is humanly impossible within a short period of time to go to conference, hand pick four or five things out of a bill that the other body wants us to have come back with those four or five things, and turn down the remainder in the conference and get the other side to agree. You know, a conference is a compromise. One of this body and of the other body. I have never known of a time when the other body just capitulated on the basis of suggestions that the gentleman from Wisconsin has made, and I, and other House conferences would say what we wanted on the House side, because invariably they tell us that Senator So-and-So has a major amendment in mind, and we just could not go back to the Senate without Senator So-and-so's amendment adopted in the conference for fear that he would engage in what is termed in Congress as 'guillotine', where there is 'secret discussion' on the weaknesses of the conference report without 'my provision in it.'

That has happened invariably with respect to every one of these so-called Christmas tree bills that the House has been presented with over the years, usually before Christmas, you understand, Mr. Speaker, but this one did not pass the Committee on Ways and Means when they were being discussed. He has not attended enough conferences to know—that it is humanly impossible within a short period of time to go to conference, hand pick four or five things out of a bill that the Senate wants us to have come back with those four or five things, and turn down the remainder in the conference and get the other side to agree.

reconvene a bill which will provide social security benefit increases across-the-board retroactive to January 1. The benefits in this bill would go into effect then. It would be my intention that the bill would provide for those things that the House needs to do under the social security measure insofar as outside earnings are concerned. We cannot go to the $2,400, without making our bill as actually unsound as the Senate bill is, except that we should increase taxes—and I do not know whether we want to do that or not—but what I would like to do is to report back a bill without a whole lot of discussion and a whole lot of divisiveness on the part of the committee, as quickly as we can. In my opinion, hearing is necessary, I am sure my friend would agree. I think if we do that and make such adjustments as we want to with respect to the percentage across-the-board increase in the social security, the House know that the bill that it voted on last year is similar to the bill that we are asking it to vote on next year without these exceptions that we will describe. I will go through by unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. FOLEY.) The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired. (By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin, Mr. MILLS was allowed to proceed for 5 additional minutes.)

Mr. MILLS. I thank the gentleman. The bill could pass by unanimous consent, in all probability. There is no reason why we cannot do it by Lincoln's Birthday, if we get the House organized. I would like to repeat: if we get the House organized in time, of course, I do not know whether we can do it. I do not know what the caucus is going to impose upon us in that respect. They may make it impossible for us, but we like to, to organize the House in a short period of time. It may take us the month of February. But if it does not, we, as the Ways and Means Committee, meet and sort this bill out, in my opinion, in a short time at the most and have it passed.

So I say I am far more optimistic than many of my colleagues from Ohio is. I am surprised that he is so pessimistic, and I hope he will not go home and go to bed tonight without that degree of optimism about this that I have.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I think there are others who share the chairman's optimism, and certainly there are people who are as concerned about the welfare of these people as is the gentleman from Ohio, the gentleman from Arkansas and the National Council of Senior Citizens, Inc.

If the chairman would permit, I would like to call to the attention of the gentleman from Ohio a letter that they sent to the chairman of the committee and also to myself as the ranking member, and this was done some time ago, acknowledging the impracticality of going to a conference.

Certainly, if the proposition the gentleman suggested yesterday had been presented, they would have been equally shocked—the idea that we should just accept the Senate amendments en bloc. I could not help but be breathless at the thought of the gentleman's proposition in abdicating the responsibilities of the House and the responsibilities of the Ways and Means Committee.

Now today the gentleman presents us with a new proposition, and that is to follow this very selective method.

But let me read what the National Council of Senior Citizens wrote to the chairman and myself with respect to the matter at hand:

"The Chairman of the Senate Ways and Means Committee wrote to the chairman and myself with respect to the matter at hand:"

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. BYRNES from Arkansas has expired."

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say I never intended to imply that what the other body prepared for us was a perfect bill. We have had many imperfect bills sent to us from the other body. There has been the trade bill, that included oil quotas and everything else under the sun that could be hooked onto it, that I know nothing whatever about but the distinguished Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, or the distinguished ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee can tell me and assure this House that the social security bill will not again be used as a delivery system for the kind of conglomerated legislation that could not pass this House on its own.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has expired.

(On request of Mr. VANIK, and by unanimous consent, Mr. MILLS was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say I have always supported the integrity of this fund. As a matter of fact, I opposed the language of the House bill, and I cannot tell the gentleman right now whether it is in the Senate bill, the language reducing the tax rate or suspending the increase that was already provided in the law to take effect January 1.

And by that very provision they have diverted over $40 billion out of the trust fund during the next 10 years. I opposed that, and I opposed the House bill, as the gentleman knows.

I just want to say in closing on this point that it is not my patience that is at issue, and it is not the patience of our distinguished Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee that is at issue, but it is the patience of the 26 million people plus the great body of other people that have been affected by the other provisions of what the Senate has suggested in the four proposals I have made.

I certainly hope, with every hope that I can muster, that we do next year keep the promises that we were able to make and accomplishments that is suggested by the four proposals I have asked the House Ways and Means Committee to accept.

Mr. MILLS. If I have a minute or two left, I will say to the gentleman I do not like his fourth proposal either, because the House proposal of providing $220 to every couple as a minimum payment is far better to me than the Senate's providing $300 per couple, but the gentleman will have a chance to vote further in the committees on it if he wants. I will not vote for it. I will vote for the more liberal provision the House will provide. I hope my friend from Ohio, on more reflection, will also.

But what I want to get my friend to understand—and I had thought the gentleman had been in Congress long enough never to accept a proposal from the other body with respect to a bill this big, to understand that never should anybody take such a package, and never recommend to one's colleagues again that the amendments should be taken on bloc until the gentleman himself has had a chance to study them and read them. Never in my years of dealing with the Senate have I ever known that body to produce anything and send it here, never have I ever had to go to conference with them on something that I have taken en bloc, that I have never done it. I will ask the gentleman from Wisconsin if he has ever known of a major project coming from that body which we have had to meet on the floor today in bloc.

This is what I want to caution my friend about, because I do not want him to make a mistake again if he stays here—and I think he will, because he is a valuable and able Member—but I caution my friend about, because I do not want him to make a mistake again if he stays here. That is the reason why the language of the amendment that the gentleman is asking the House to take. That is all I ask. He should not have sent out the letter on the basis of the bill having been sent to the House; that is not the case. I do not know whether in the future he will be optimistic about it, I say to my friend, because I do not want to see a bill that they vote on that no Member of this House had access to that volume prepared by the other body unless he went to that desk. I believe the rules ought to be changed.

Mr. MILLS. What I am trying to tell the gentleman is that the engrossed copy arrived today—I repeat, today—at the Speaker's desk, and I could not get a copy of this until today, which represents the bill as amended by the Senate, and the ink is not even dry on it now. No one could get a copy because it was not in print.

Mr. VANIK. I want to point out to my distinguished chairman, I thought the report would be delivered the day before. They personally told me in the other body it would be delivered the day before, I want to go along with his recommendations that I do something or not, because I just will not know how far into the subject he has gone. That is what worries me. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MILLS was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. I just want to say I certainly hope that the distinguished chairman will take all that they vote on that is reported out of a conference. I have to go to the Speaker's desk to read the amendments, because under the archaic procedure under which we operate today a conference report coming over from the other body is almost secret to most of the Members of the House. They have no way of knowing totally what is going on in the legislative process, not only at this stage of the legislative session but also at any stage of a legislative session.

Mr. MILLS. Would my friend yield to me?

Mr. VANIK. Certainly.

Mr. MILLS. Now, do not castigate us any more about conference reports and things like that.

I have never brought up a conference report during the time I have been chairman of the committee which has not been printed and available to every Member of the House who wanted to get it before it was ever considered. All a Member has to do is ask for it and read it.

The gentleman asked me, though, yesterday, to take a bill that was not even over here, which had not even been printed by the Government Printing Office, and to accept all the amendments on bloc. It did not become available to anyone until today. But the gentleman sent his letter out yesterday.

If the gentleman wants to criticize us about conference reports, do not do that any more, please.

Mr. VANIK. I want to point out that no Member of this House had access to that volume prepared by the other body unless he went to that desk. I believe the rules ought to be changed.

Mr. MILLS. It was not there. What I am trying to tell the gentleman is that the engrossed copy arrived today—I repeat, today—at the Speaker's desk, and I could not get a copy of this until today, which represents the bill as amended by the Senate, and the ink is not even dry on it now. No one could get a copy because it was not in print.

Mr. VANIK. I want to point out to my distinguished chairman, I thought the report would be delivered the day before. They personally told me in the other body it would be delivered the day before, I want to go along with his recommendations that I do something or not, because I just will not know how far into the subject he has gone. That is what worries me. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. MILLS was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. I just want to point out to the distinguished chairman that no Member of this House had access to this bill at all until it was brought to the Speaker's desk. In my letter I assumed it was going to be brought over yesterday. That is the reason why the language was in the letter. But that is only a small part of the controversy I raise today.

Mr. MILLS. Pardon me, but there is no controversy between the gentleman and me. We are both trying to do the same thing, to help the old people.

Mr. VANIK. I just want to say, in concluding my remarks, I certainly hope and trust that the goals we both aspire for and aim for with respect to our social security program will be adopted in time next session to make it a realistic and early payout to the 26 million people who are living by the time before April 1.

Mr. MILLS. I just want the gentleman to be optimistic, to be in the committee, like he is, and to see to it that it is done. But be optimistic about it, I say to my friend.

Mr. CORMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. CORMAN. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I notice in the proposal of the gentleman from Ohio that he is dealing with two subject matters, although both deal with the old people. One is the social security benefit and the other is public assistance.

I understand from the chairman that we must move rapidly, and do so with this whole file. It is my own feeling that when we talk about public assistance, people who are poor and may be hungry, we are talking about people who are too old to work, too sick to work, and too young to work. Am I to anticipate we will take care of all those people at the same time, since there are little resources in the States to pay their portion of the cost of this?

It seems we must not exclude any portion of the poor when we finally decide what the Federal Government wants to do and what we will attempt to get the States to do.

Mr. MILLS. I will state to the gentleman that if I had not already made that observation, I should have done so. We do not want just a social security bill. Why should we work with the States in the manner in which we now do, and the States have their money, and the States do what they want to do. Only the Federal Government contribution, it causes in two forms. One form is general funds and the other form is from social security. We are always tempted to raise it to a rather high level, the minimum of social security, depending upon public assistance, but in truth if you do that you then cut back on the amount of money you have to give as benefits to social security recipients who have paid a substantial amount of money over a long period of time. So, in truth you rob the workers to obtain the expenditures for social security benefits you might otherwise not have.

Mr. MILLS. I think the gentleman from California is eminently correct.

Mr. Speaker, let me say this in conclusion, I am ready to conclude along with the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES), because of the time...
elements involved, that it would be an idle gesture and that it would be impossible for us to accomplish anything by going to conference. Therefore, you have to conclude that it would have been inadvisable to take the bill from the Speaker's table and engage in an idle gesture of asking unanimous consent for it to go to conference and die in the conference. I would rather that we not go through any such idle gesture here but recognize, all of us, just because we may at this particular session of the 91st Congress have lost a battle, it does not mean we have lost the war. I have received letters and telegrams from a number of organizations representing our older citizens commending us on our decision on this matter. There will be another Congress either on January 4 or January 21 or sometime next year—the beginning of the 92d Congress—and I can assure all of my colleagues, as I have said to my friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Vanik), with reference to the timing of this bill, it is my intention to move the bill as quickly as is possible and I have no thought of letting anything that might develop interfere with the carrying out of that purpose insofar as I can control it. Now, certainly, I know that my friend has confidence in me, as I have in him, and I know I can join him and I know he joins me in wishing a very happy New Year to all of those who are here as well as our colleagues who are not here, but certainly to those who have remained here long enough to hear the gentleman from Ohio and the gentleman from Arkansas settle this matter.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Arkansas has again expired.

FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

Sec. 2. (a) The Congress hereby finds and declares that—

(1) the present federally assisted welfare program provides benefits which vary widely throughout the country and which are unconscionably low in many States;

(2) the program for needy families with children is often administered in ways which are costly, inefficient, and degrading to personal dignity, and is characterized by intolerable incentives for family breakup, by inadequate encouragements to and opportunities for those on the welfare rolls to enter job training and employment so that they may become self-supporting, and by the inequitable exclusion from assistance of working families in poverty, especially families headed by a male:
(3) the growth of the welfare rolls threatens the fiscal stability of the States and the Federal-State partnership; and

(4) in the light of the harm to individual and family development and well-being caused by lack of income adequate to sustain a decent level of life, and the consequent damage to the human resources of the entire Nation, the Federal Government has a positive interest and responsibility in assuring the correction of these problems.

(b) It is therefore the purpose of this Act to fulfill the responsibility of the Federal Government to expand the training and employment incentives and opportunities, including necessary child care services, for those public assistance recipients who are members of needy families with children and who can become self-supporting; to provide a more adequate level and quality of living through income support and services for dependent persons and families who, through no fault of their own, require public assistance; to provide this financial assistance in a manner designed to strengthen family life and to establish more nearly uniform national standards of eligibility and aid; and to move to greater assumption by the Federal Government of the financial burden of these activities.
TITLE I—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

ESTABLISHMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

Sec. 101. Title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601, et seq.) is amended by adding after part C the following new parts:

"PART D—FAMILY ASSISTANCE Plan

"APPROPRIATIONS

"Sec. 441. For the purposes of providing a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children, in a manner which will strengthen family life, encourage work training and self-support, and enhance personal dignity, there is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year a sum sufficient to carry out this part.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

"ELIGIBILITY

"Sec. 442. (a) Each family, as defined in section 445—

"(1) whose income, other than income which is excluded pursuant to section 443, is less than $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family plus $300 per year for each additional member, and “(2) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 444, are less than $1,500, shall, in accordance with and subject to the other provisions of this title, be paid a family assistance benefit.

“AMOUNT

“(b) The family assistance benefit for a family shall be payable at the rate of $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family plus $300 per year for each additional member thereof, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 443, of the members of the family.

“PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

“(c) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 464.

“PERIOD FOR DETERMINATION OF BENEFITS

“(d) (1) A family's eligibility for and its amount of family assistance benefits shall be determined for each quarter of a calendar year. Such determination shall be made on the basis of the Secretary's estimate of the family's income for such quarter, after taking into account income for a preceding period and any modifications in income which are likely to occur on the basis of changes in conditions or circumstances. Eligibility for and the amount of benefits of a family for any quarter shall be redetermined at such time or times as may be provided by the Secretary, such redeter-mination to be effective prospectively.

"(2) The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe the cases in which and extent to which the amount of a family assistance benefit for any quarter shall be reduced by reason of the time elapsing since the beginning of such quarter and before the date of filing of the application for the benefit.

"(3) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which income received in one period (or expenses incurred in one period in earning income) shall, for purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits, be considered as received (or incurred) in another period or periods.

"SPECIAL LIMITS ON GROSS INCOME

"(e) The Secretary may, in accordance with regul-tions, prescribe the circumstances under which the gross income from a trade or business (including farming), will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits.

"INCOME

"EXCLUSIONS FROM INCOME

"Sec. 443. (a) In determining the income of a family
there shall be excluded—
“(1) subject to limitations (as to amount or otherwise) prescribed by the Secretary, the earned income of each child in the family who is, as determined by the Secretary under regulations, a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment;

“(2) (A) the total unearned income of all members of a family which is, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, too inconsequential, or received too infrequently or irregularly, to be included, and (B) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary any earned income which, as determined in accordance with such criteria, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included;

“(3) an amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to all, or such part (and according to such schedule) as the Secretary may prescribe, of the cost incurred by such member for child care which the Secretary deems necessary to securing or continuing in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

“(4) the first $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of the total of
earned income (not excluded by the preceding clauses of this section) of all members of the family plus one-half of the remainder thereof;

"(5) food stamps or any other assistance which is based on need and furnished by any State or political subdivision of a State or any Federal agency or by any private charitable agency or organization (as determined by the Secretary);

"(6) allowances under section 432 (a);

"(7) any portion of a scholarship or fellowship received for use in paying the cost of tuition and fees at any educational (including technical or vocational education) institution;

"(8) home produce of a member of the family utilized by the household for its own consumption; and

"(9) one-half of all unearned income (not excluded by the preceding clauses of this subsection) of all members of the family.

The preceding provisions of this subsection shall not apply to veterans' pensions or to payments to farmers for price support, diversion, or conservation. For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, see section 464.
"MEANING OF EARNED AND UNEARNED INCOME

(b) For purposes of this part—

(1) earned income shall include only—

(A) remuneration for employment, other than remuneration to which section 209 (b), (c), (d), (f), or (k) applies;

(B) net earnings from self-employment, as defined in section 211 other than the second and third sentences following clause (C) of subsection (a) (9) and other than clauses (A), (C), and (E) of paragraph (2) and paragraphs (4), (5), and (6), of subsection (e);

(2) unearned income shall include among other things—

(A) any payments received as an annuity, pension, retirement, or disability benefit, including veteran’s or workmen’s compensation and old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, railroad retirement, and unemployment benefits;

(B) prizes and awards;

(C) the proceeds of any life insurance policy;

(D) gifts (cash or otherwise), support and alimony payments, and inheritances; and
"(E) rents, dividends, interest, and royalties.

"RESOURCES

"EXCLUSIONS FROM RESOURCES

"SEC. 444. (a) In determining the resources of a family there shall be excluded:

"(1) the home, household goods, and personal effects; and

"(2) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion.

"DISPOSITION OF RESOURCES

"(b) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits. Any portion of the family's benefits paid for such period or periods shall be conditioned on such disposal.

"MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD

"COMPOSITION OF FAMILY

"SEC. 445. (a) Two or more individuals—

"(1) who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption,
"(2) who are living in a place of residence maintained by one or more of them as his or her own home,
"(3) who are residents of the United States, and
"(4) at least one of whom is a child who is not married to another of such individuals, shall be regarded as a family for purposes of this part and parts A, C, and E.

"DEFINITION OF CHILD
"(b) For purposes of this part and parts C and E, the term 'child' means an individual who is (1) under the age of eighteen or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary under regulations) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES
"(c) If an individual is in the Armed Forces of the United States, then, for purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits under this part, (1) he shall not be regarded as a member of a family, and (2) the spouse and children of such individual, and such other individuals living in the same place of residence as such spouse and children as may be specified in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, shall not be considered members of a family.

"DETERMINATION OF FAMILY RELATIONSHIPS"

"(d) In determining whether an individual is related by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law, as determined in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, shall be applied.

"INCOME AND RESOURCES OF NONCONTRIBUTING ADULT"

"(e) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits for any family there shall be excluded the income and resources of any individual, other than a child or a parent of a child (or a spouse of a child or parent), which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is not available to other members of the family; and for such purposes, any such individual shall not be considered a member of such family.

"RECIPIENTS OF AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED INELIGIBLE"

"(f) If an individual is receiving aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under a State plan approved under title XVI, or if his needs are taken into account in determining the need of another person receiving such aid, then, for the period for which such aid is received, such individual shall not be regarded as a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the family assistance benefits of the family.
"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"PAYMENTS OF BENEFITS

"Sec. 446. (a) (1) Family assistance benefits shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of this title.

"(2) Payment of the family assistance benefit of any family may be made to any one or more members of the family.

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of family assistance benefit shall apply.

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of family assistance benefits has been paid with respect to any family, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the family or by recovery from or payment to any one or more of the individuals who are or were members thereof. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to a family with a view to avoiding penalizing members of the family who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this part, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this part.

"HEARINGS AND REVIEW"

"(e) (1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be a member of a family and is dissatisfied with any determination under this part with respect to eligibility of the family for family assistance benefits, the number of memers of the family, or the amount of the benefits.

"(2) Final determination of the Secretary after such hearings shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205 (g) to the same extent as the Secretary’s final determinations under section 205.

"PROCEDURES; PROHIBITION OF ASSIGNMENTS"

"(d) The provisions of sections 206 and 207 and sub-sections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"APPLICATIONS AND FURNISHING OF INFORMATION BY FAMILIES"

"(e) (1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to families or members thereof with respect to the filing of applications, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

"(2) In order to encourage prompt reporting of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, and more accurate estimates of expected income or expenses by members of families for purposes of such eligibility and amount of benefits, the Secretary may prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which—

"(A) failure to so report or delay in so reporting, or

"(B) inaccuracy of information which is furnished by the members and on which the estimates of income or expenses for such purposes are based,

will result in treatment as overpayments of all or any portion of payments of such benefits for the period involved.

"FURNISHING OF INFORMATION BY OTHER AGENCIES

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto. The Secretary may from time to time pay to the head of such agency, in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be agreed upon, the cost of providing such information.

S. 2986—3
"REGISTRATION AND REFERRAL OF FAMILY MEMBERS FOR MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT

"Sec. 447. (a) Every individual who is a member of a family which is found to be eligible for family assistance benefits, other than a member to whom the Secretary finds clause (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of subsection (b) applies, shall register for manpower services, training, and employment with the local public employment office of the State as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor.

If and for so long as any such individual is found by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to have failed (after a reasonable period of time), without good cause as determined by the Secretary of Labor, to so register, he shall not be regarded as a member of a family but his income which would otherwise be counted under this part as income of a family shall be so counted; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member for purposes of determination of the family’s eligibility for family assistance benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for purposes of determination of the amount of such benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(b) An individual shall not be required to register pursuant to subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that such individual is:

"(1) ill, incapacitated, or of an advanced age;

"(2) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for such child;

"(3) the mother, or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and not excluded by clauses (1), (2), (4), or (5) of this subsection;

"(4) a child;

"(5) one whose presence in the home on a substantially continuous basis is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household;

"(6) working full time, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary of Labor.

An individual who would, but for the preceding sentence, be required to register pursuant to part A, may, if he wishes, register as provided in such subsection.

"(c) The Secretary shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services in such cases and for so long as he deems appropriate in the case of individuals registered pursuant to subsection (a) who are, pursuant to such register-tation, participating in manpower services, training, or employment.

“(d) In the case of any member of a family receiving family assistance benefits who is not required to register pursuant to subsection (a) because of such member’s disability or handicap, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such member to the appropriate State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

“DENIAL OF BENEFITS IN CASE OF REFUSAL OF MANPOWER
SERVICES, TRAINING, OR EMPLOYMENT

“Sec. 448. For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits under this part, an individual who has registered as required under section 447
(a) shall not be regarded as a member of a family, but his income which would otherwise be counted as income of the family under this part shall be so counted, if and for so long as he has been found by the Secretary of Labor, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing, to have refused without good cause to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment, or to have refused without good cause to accept suitable employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined by the Secretary of Labor, after notification by such employer or otherwise, to be a bona fide offer of employment; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for the purposes of determination of the amount of its benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"TRANSFER OF FUNDS FOR ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS"

"Sec. 449. The Secretary shall, pursuant to and to the extent provided by agreement with the Secretary of Labor, pay to the Secretary of Labor amounts which he estimates would be paid as family assistance benefits under this part to individuals participating in public or private employer compensated on-the-job training under a program of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating in such training."
Such amounts shall be available to pay the costs of such programs.

"PART E—STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS"

"PAYMENTS UNDER TITLES IV, V, XVI, AND XIX CONDITIONED ON SUPPLEMENTATION"

"Sec. 451. In order for a State to be eligible for payments pursuant to title V, XVI, or XIX or, part A or B of this title, with respect to expenditures for any quarter beginning on or after the date this part becomes effective with respect to such State, it must have in effect an agreement with the Secretary under which it will make supplementary payments, as provided in this part, to any family other than a family in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed."

"AMOUNT OF SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS"

"Sec. 452. (a) Eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments under the agreement with any State under this part shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be determined by application of the provisions of, and rules and regulations under, sections 442 (a) (2) and (d), 443, 444, 445, 446 (to the extent the Secretary deems appropriate), 447, and 448, and by application of the standard for determining need under the plan of such State as in effect for July 1969 and complying with the requirements for approval under part A as in effect on such date (but subject to such maximums and percentage reductions as were imposed under such plan on the amount of aid paid and, then, with the resulting amount of the supplementary payment to any individual further reduced by the family assistance benefit payable under part D with respect to him).

(b) In applying the provisions of section 443 for purposes of supplementary payments pursuant to an agreement under this part—

"(1) in the case of earned income to which clause (4) of subsection (a) of such section 443 applies, the amount to be disregarded shall be $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods), plus—

"(A) one-third of the portion of the remainder of earnings which does not exceed twice the amount of the family assistance benefits that would be payable to the family if it had no income (thereby resulting in reduction of the supplementary payment by one-sixth of that portion of such remainder of the earnings), plus

"(B) one-fifth (or more if the Secretary by regulation so prescribes) of the balance of the earnings (thereby resulting in further reduction of the supplementary payment by four-fifths, or proportionately less if the Secretary has prescribed such a regulation, of that balance of the earnings); and

“(2) in the case of income to which clause (9) of subsection (a) of such section 443 applies, the amount to be disregarded shall be—

“(A) one-third of such income which does not exceed twice the amount of the family assistance benefits that would be payable to the family if it had no income (thereby resulting in reduction of the supplementary payment by one-sixth of that portion of such income), plus

“(B) one-fifth (or more if the Secretary by regulation so prescribes) of the balance of such income (thereby resulting in further reduction of the supplementary payment by four-fifths, or proportionately less if the Secretary has prescribed such a regulation, of that balance of the income); and

(3) the family assistance benefit of a family payable under part D shall not be counted to any extent.

For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 464.

“(c) The agreement with a State under this part shall—

“(1) provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State;
(2) provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to carry out or supervise the carrying out of the agreement in the State;

“(4) provide (A) such methods of administration (including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods) as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the agreement in the State, and (B) for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full- or part-time employment of recipients of supplementary payments and other persons of low income, as community services aides, in carrying out the agreement and for the use of nonpaid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

"(5) provide that the State agency carrying out the agreement will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

"(6) provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments to purposes directly connected with the administration of this title; and

"(7) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for supplementary payments shall have opportunity to do so, and that supplementary payments shall be furnished with reasonable promptness to all eligible individuals.

"PAYMENTS TO STATES

"Sec. 453. (a) (1) The Secretary shall pay to any State which has in effect an agreement under this part for any fiscal year in the period ending with the close of the fifth full fiscal year for which this part is effective with respect to such State the excess of—

"(A) (i) the total of its payments for such year pursuant to its agreement under this part which are required under section 452, plus (ii) the difference between (I) the total of the expenditures for such fiscal year under its plan approved under title XVI as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which would have been included as aid to the aged, blind, or disabled under the plan approved thereunder and in effect for July 1969, plus so much of the rest of such expenditures as are required (as determined by the Secretary) by reason of the amendments to such title made by the Family Assistance Act of 1969 and (II) the total of the amounts determined under section 1604 for such State with respect to such expenditures for such year, over

"(B) 90 per centum of the difference between (i) the total of the expenditures which would have been made as aid or assistance (excluding emergency assistance specified in section 406(e)(1)(A), foster care under section 408, expenditures for institutional services in intermediate care facilities referred to in section 1121, expenditures for repairs to homes referred to in section 1119, and aid or assistance in the form of medical care or any other type of remedial care) for such year under the plans of such State approved under titles I, IV (part A), X, XIV, and XVI and in effect in the month prior to the enactment of this part if they had continued in effect during such year and if they had included (if they did not already do so) payments to dependent children of unemployed fathers authorized by section 407 (as in effect on July 1, 1969), and (ii) the total of the amounts which would have been determined under sections 3, 403, 1003, 1403, and 1603, or under section 1118, of such State with respect to such expenditures for such year.

The Secretary may prescribe methods for determining the amounts referred to in clause (B) on the basis of estimates and trends in expenditures and other experience of the State for prior years.

"(2) The Secretary shall also pay to each such State an amount equal to 50 per centum of its administrative costs found necessary by the Secretary for carrying out its agreement.

"(b) Payments under subsection (a) shall be made at such time or times, in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments as the Secretary may determine;
and shall be made on such conditions as may be necessary to assure the carrying out of the purposes of this title.

"(c) In the case of any State with respect to which the amount determined under clause (A) of subsection (a) (1) for any year is less than 50 per centum of the difference referred to in clause (B) of such subsection for such year, such State shall pay to the Secretary, at such time or times and in such installments as he may prescribe, the sum by which such amount determined under clause (A) of subsection (a) (1) is less than such 50 per centum. If such State does not pay any part of such amount at the time or times prescribed, the Secretary shall withhold such part from sums to which the State is entitled under part A or B of this title or under title V, XVI, or XIX; but the amounts so withheld shall be deemed to have been paid to the State under such part or title. The withholding of amounts pursuant to the preceding sentence shall be effected at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary may deem appropriate.

"FAILURE BY STATE TO COMPLY WITH AGREEMENT"

"SEC. 454. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a State with which he has an agreement under this part, finds that such State is failing to comply therewith, he shall withhold all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of the payments to which such State is otherwise entitled under part A or B of this title or under title V, XVI, or XIX; but the amounts so withheld shall be deemed to have been paid to the State under such part or title. Such withholding shall be effected at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary may deem appropriate."
"PART F—ADMINISTRATION

"AGREEMENTS WITH STATES

"Sec. 461. (a) The Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State under which the Secretary will make, on behalf of the State, the supplementary payments provided for pursuant to part E or will perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon. In any such case, the agreement shall also provide for payment by the State to the Secretary of an amount equal to the supplementary payments the State would otherwise make under part E, less any payments which would be made to the State under section 453 (a), together with one-half of the additional cost of the Secretary involved in carry-out such agreement, other than the cost of making the payments.

"(b) The Secretary may also enter into an agreement with any State under which such State will make, on behalf of the Secretary, the family assistance benefit payments provided for under part D with respect to all or specified families in the State who are eligible for such benefits or will perform such other functions in connection with the administration of part D as may be agreed upon. The cost of carrying out any such agreement shall be paid to the State in advance or by way of reimbursement and in such installments as may be agreed upon.
"PENALTIES FOR FRAUD

"Sec. 462. The provisions of section 208, other than paragraph (a), shall apply with respect to benefits under part D and allowances under part C, of this title, to the same extent as they apply to payments under title II.

AND TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

"Sec. 463. (a) The Secretary shall make an annual report to the President and the Congress on the operation and administration of parts D and E, including an evaluation thereof in carrying out the purposes of such parts and recommendations with respect thereto. The Secretary is authorized to conduct evaluations directly or by grants or contracts of the programs authorized by such parts.

"(b) The Secretary is authorized to conduct, directly or by grants or contracts, research into or demonstrations of ways of better providing financial assistance to needy persons or of better carrying out the purposes of part D, and in so doing to waive any requirements or limitations in such part with respect to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits for such family, members of families, or groups thereof as he deems appropriate.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized to provide such technical assistance to States, and to provide, directly or through grants or contracts, for such training of personnel of States, as he deems appropriate to assist them in more efficiently and effectively carrying out their agreements under this part and part E.

“(d) In addition to funds otherwise available therefor, such portion of any appropriation to carry out part D or E as the Secretary may determine, but not in excess of one-half of 1 per centum thereof, shall be available to him to carry out this section.

“SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

“Sec. 464. (a) In applying the provisions of sections 442 (a) and (b), 443 (a) (4), 452 (b) (1), 1603 (a) (1) and (b) (1), and 1604 (1) and (2) with respect to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, the amounts to be used shall (instead of the $500, $300, and $1,500 in such section 442 (a) and (b) and section 1603 (a) (1), the $720 in section 443 (a) (4) and section 452 (b) (1), the $90 in sec-of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, respectively, bear to the per capita income of that one of the fifty States which has the lowest per capita income; except that in no case may the amounts so used exceed such $500, $300, $1,500, $720, $90, $65, and $50.

"(b) (1) The amounts to be used under such sections in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam shall be promulgated by the Secretary between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average per capita income of each State and of the United States for the most recent calendar year for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce. Such promulgation shall be conclusive for fiscal year beginning July 1 next succeeding such promulgation: Provided, That the Secretary shall promulgate such amounts as soon as possible after the enactment of this part, which promulgation shall be conclusive for 6 calendar quarters in the period beginning with the January 1 following the fiscal year in which this part is enacted, and ending with the close of the second June 30 thereafter.

"(2) The term 'United States', for purposes of paragraph (1) only, means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

"(c) If the amounts which would otherwise be promulgated for any year for any of the three States referred to in subsection (a) would be lower than the amounts promulgated for such State for the immediately preceding period, the amounts for such fiscal year shall be increased to the extent of the difference; and the amounts so increased shall be the amounts promulgated for such year.”

MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, AND CHILD CARE PROGRAMS

Sec. 102. Part C of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 630 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART C—MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, AND DAY CARE PROGRAMS FOR RECIPIENTS OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE OR SUPPLEMENTARY BENEFITS"

"PURPOSE"

"Sec. 430. The purpose of this part is to authorize provision, for individuals who are members of a family receiving benefits under part D or supplementary payments pursuant to part E, of manpower services, training, employment, and child care and related services necessary to train such individuals, prepare them for employment, and otherwise assist them in securing and retaining regular employment and having the opportunity for advancement in employment, to the end that needy families with children will be restored to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in their communities."
"SEC. 431. (a) The Secretary of Labor (hereinafter in this part referred to as the 'Secretary') shall, for each person registered pursuant to part D, in accordance with priorities prescribed by him, develop or assure the development of an employability plan describing the manpower services, training, and employment which the Secretary determines each person needs in order to enable him to become self-supporting and secure and retain employment and opportunities for advancement.

(b) The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provisions of this part, establish and assure the provision of manpower services, training, and employment programs in each State for persons registered pursuant to part D or receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E. The Secretary shall, through such programs, provide or assure the provision of manpower services, training, and employment and opportunities necessary to prepare such persons for and place them in regular employment, including such services and opportunities which the Secretary is authorized to provide under any other Act, and including counseling, testing, institutional and on-the-job training, work experience, upgrading, program orientation, relocation assistance (including grants, loans, and the furnishing of such services as will aid an involuntarily unemployed individual to relocate in an area where he may obtain suitable employment), incentives to public or private employers to hire and train these persons (including reimbursement for a limited period when an employee may not be fully productive), special work projects, job development, coaching, job placement and follow up services required to assist in securing and retaining employment and opportunities for advancement.

"ALLOWANCES FOR INDIVIDUALS UNDERGOING TRAINING"

"Sec. 432. (a) (1) The Secretary shall pay to each individual who is a member of a family and is participating in manpower training under this part an incentive allowance of $30 per month. If such member or members of a family would (but for the receipt of payments pursuant to this title) be eligible in such month, under any other statute providing for manpower training, for allowances which in total would be in excess of the sum of the family assistance benefit and supplementary payments pursuant to part E payable with respect to such month to the family, the total of the incentive allowances per month under this section for such members shall be equal to such excess, or to $30 for each such member, whichever is greater.

"(2) The Secretary shall, in accordance with regulations, also pay, to any member of a family participating in manpower training under this part, allowances for transportation and other costs to him directly related to his participation in training.

"(3) The Secretary shall by regulation provide for such smaller allowances under this subsection as he deems appropriate for individuals in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

"(b) Such allowances shall be in lieu of allowances provided for participants in manpower training programs under any other Act.

"(c) Subsection (a) shall not apply to any member of a family who is participating in a program of the Secretary providing public or private employer compensated on-the-job training.

"DENIAL OF ALLOWANCES FOR REFUSAL TO UNDERGO TRAINING"

"Sec. 433. (a) If and for so long as the Secretary determines that an individual who is a member of a family and has been required to register under part D for manpower training or employment has, without good cause, ceased to participate in manpower training under this part, no allowance under this part shall be payable to such individual.

"(b) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to any individual with respect to whom such a determination has been made.

"(c) Final determinations of the Secretary after such hearings shall be subject to judicial review as provided by section 205 (g) for final determinations under title II, and the provisions of sections 205 (a), (d), (e), and (f), 206, and 207 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply to title II.

"UTILIZATION OF OTHER PROGRAMS

"Sec. 434. In providing the manpower training and employment services and opportunities required by this part the Secretary, to the maximum extent feasible, shall assure that such services and opportunities are provided in such manner, through such means, and using all authority available to him under any other Act (and subject to all duties and responsibilities thereunder) as will further the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive manpower training program involving all sectors of the economy and all levels of government and as will make maximum use of existing manpower and manpower related programs and agencies. To such end the Secretary may use the funds appropriated to him under this part to provide the programs required by this part through such other Act, to the same extent and under the same conditions as if appropriated under such other Act and in making use of the programs of other Federal,
State, or local agencies, public or private, the Secretary may reimburse such agencies for services rendered to persons under this part to the extent such services and opportunities are not otherwise available on a nonreimbursable basis.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS"

"Sec. 435. The Secretary may issue such rules and regulations as he finds necessary to carry out the purposes of this part: Provided, That in developing policies and programs for manpower services, training, and employment, the Secretary shall first obtain the concurrence of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with regard to such policies and programs which are under the usual and traditional authority of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (including basic education, institutional training, health, child care and other supportive services, new careers and job restructuring in the health, education, and welfare professions, and work-study programs), and shall consult with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with regard to all such other policies and programs.

"APPROPRIATIONS"

"Sec. 436. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary for each fiscal year a sum sufficient for carrying out the purposes of this part (other than section 437), including payment of not to exceed (except in such cases as the Secretary may determine) 90 per centum of the cost of 40 manpower services, training, and employment and opportunities provided for individuals registered pursuant to section 447. The Secretary of Labor shall establish criteria to achieve an equitable apportionment among the States of Federal expenditures for carrying out the programs authorized by section 431. In developing these criteria the Secretary shall consider the number of registrations under section 447 and other relevant factors.

"CHILD CARE AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

"Sec. 437. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organiization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organization, for not to exceed (except in such cases as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may determine) 90 per centum of the cost of projects for the provision of child care and related services, including necessary alteration, remodeling, and renovation of facilities, which may be necessary or appropriate in order to better enable an individual who has been registered pursuant to part D or is receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part or to enable a member of a family, which is or has been (within such period of time as the Secretary may prescribe) eligible for benefits under such part D or payments pursuant to such part E, to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part; or, with respect to the period prior to the date when part D becomes effective for a State, to better enable an individual receiving aid to families with dependent children, or whose needs are taken into account in determining the need of any one claiming or receiving such aid, to participate in manpower training or employment.

"(b) Such sums shall also be available to enable the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organiization for evaluation, training of personnel, technical assistance or research or demonstration projects to determine more effective methods or providing any such care and other services.

"(c) To the extent permitted by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, the non-Federal share of the cost of any such project may be provided in the form of services or facilities.

"(d) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may provide, in any case in which a family is able to pay for part or all of the cost of day care or other services provided under a project assisted under this section, for payment by the family of such fees for the care or services as may be reasonable in the light of such ability.

"ADVANCE FUNDING

"Sec. 438. (a) For the purpose of affording adequate notice of funding available under this part, appropriations for grants, contracts, or other payments with respect to individuals registered pursuant to section 447 are authorized to be included in the appropriation Act for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which they are available for obligation.

"(b) In order to effect a transition to the advance funding method of timing appropriation action, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply notwithstanding that its initial application will result in enactment in the same year (whether in the same appropriation Act or otherwise) of two separate appropriations, one for the then current fiscal year and one for the succeeding fiscal year.

"EVALUATION AND RESEARCH; REPORT TO CONGRESS

"Sec. 439. (a) The Secretary shall (jointly with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare) provide for the continuing evaluation of the manpower training and employment programs provided under this part, including their effectiveness in achieving stated goals and their impact on other related programs. The Secretary may conduct research regarding, and demonstrations of, ways to improve the effectiveness of the manpower training and employment programs so provided and may also conduct demonstrations of improved training techniques for upgrading the skills of the working poor. The Secretary may, for these purposes, contract for independent evaluations of and research regarding such programs or individual projects under such programs, and establish a data collection, processing, and retrieval system.

"(b) The Secretary shall report to the Congress on or before the end of each fiscal year (with the first such report being made on or before the July 1 following the first full year after the date on which part D becomes effective with respect to any States) on the manpower training and employment programs provided under this part."

"APPROPRIATIONS

"Sec. 1601. For the purpose of enabling each State to furnish financial assistance to needy individuals who are sixty-five years of age or over, blind, or disabled and for the purpose of encouraging each State to furnish rehabilitation and other services to help such individuals attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, there are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year sums sufficient to carry out these purposes. The sums made available under this section shall be used for making payments to States having State plans approved under section 1602.

"STATE PLANS FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICE TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED"

"Sec. 1602. (a) A State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled must—

"(1) provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to administer or supervise the administration of the State plan;

"(2) provide such methods of administration as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis (but the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of individuals employed in accordance with such methods);

"(3) provide for the training and effective use of social service personnel in the administration of the plan, for the furnishing of technical assistance to units of State government and of political subdivisions which are furnishing financial assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled, and for the development through research or demonstration projects of new or improved methods of furnishing assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled;

"(4) provide for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff (with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of recipients and other persons of low income as community service aides) in the administration of the plan and for the use of non-paid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants and recipients and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

"(5) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for aid under the plan shall have opportunity to do so and that such aid shall be furnished with reasonable promptness with respect to all eligible individuals;

"(6) provide for the use of a simplified statement, conforming to standards prescribed by the Secretary, to establish eligibility, and for adequate and effective methods of verification of eligibility of applicants and recipients through the use, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, of sampling and other scientific techniques;
“(7) provide that, except to the extent permitted by the Secretary with respect to services, the State plan shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and, if administered by them, be mandatory upon them;

“(8) provide for financial participation by the State;

“(9) provide that, in determining whether an individual is blind, there shall be an examination by a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual may select;

“(10) provide for granting an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency to any individual whose claim for aid under the plan is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness;

“(11) provide for periodic evaluation of the operations of the State plan, not less often than annually, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary, and the furnishing of annual reports of such evaluations to the Secretary together with any necessary modifications of the State plan resulting from such evaluations;

“(12) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

“(13) provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants and recipients to purposes directly connected with the administration of the plan (consistent with section 618 of the Revenue Act of 1951);

“(14) provide, if the plan includes aid to or on behalf of individuals in private or public institutions, for the establishment or designation of a State authority or authorities which shall be responsible for establishing and maintaining standards for such institutions;

“(15) provide a description of the services which the State makes available to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain self-support or self-care, including a description of the steps taken to assure, in the provision of such services, maximum utilization of all available services that are similar or related;

“(16) provide for periodic evaluation of the operation of the plan by persons interested in or expert in matters related to assistance and services to the aged, blind, and disabled, including persons who are recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled; and “(17) assure that, in administering the State plan and providing services thereunder, the State will observe priorities established by the Secretary and comply with such performance standards as the Secretary may, from time to time, establish.

Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if on January 1, 1962, and on the date on which a State submits (or submitted) its plan for approval under this title, the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title X was different from the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title I and the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title XIV, then the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of such plan approved under title X may be designated to administer or supervise the administration of the portion of the State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which relates to blind individuals and a separate State agency may be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of the rest of such plan; and in such case the part of the plan which each such agency administers, or the administration of which each such agency supervises, shall be regarded as a separate plan for purposes of this title.
“(b) The Secretary shall approve any plan which fulfills the conditions specified in subsection (a) and in section 1603, except that he shall not approve any plan which imposes, as a condition of eligibility for aid under the plan—

“(1) an age requirement of more than sixty-five years;

“(2) any residency requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State;

“(3) any citizen requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States;

“(4) any disability or age requirement which excludes any persons under a severe disability, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, who are eighteen years of age or older; or

In the case of any State to which the provisions of section 344 of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1950 were applicable on January 1, 1962, and to which the sentence of section 1002 (b) following paragraph (2) thereof is applicable on the date on which its State plan was or is submitted for approval under this title, the Secretary shall approve the plan of such State for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled for purposes of this title, even though it does not meet the requirements of section 1603 (a) if it meets all other requirements of this title for an approved plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled; but payments to the State under this title shall be made, in the case of any such plan, only with respect to expenditures thereunder which would be included as expenditures for the purposes of this title under a plan approved under this section without regard to the provisions of this sentence.

"DETERMINATION OF NEED"

"Sec. 1603. (a) A State plan must provide that, in determining the need for aid under the plan, the State agency shall take into consideration any other income or resources of the individual claiming such aid as well as any expenses reasonably attributable to the earning of any such income;
except that, in making such determination with respect to any individual—

"(1) the State agency shall not consider as resources (A) the home, household goods, and personal effects of the individual, (B) other personal or real property, the total value of which does not exceed $1,500, or (C) other property which as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion, but shall apply the provisions of section 442 (e) and regulations thereunder;
“(2) the State agency shall not consider the financial responsibility of any individual for any applicant or recipient unless the applicant or recipient is the individual’s spouse, or the individual’s child who is under the age of twenty-one or is blind or severely disabled;

“(3) if such individual is blind, the State agency
(A) shall disregard the first $85 per month of earned income plus one-half of earned income in excess of $85 per month, and (B) shall, for a period not in excess of twelve months, and may, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, disregard such additional amounts of other income and resources, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of such plan;

“(4) if the individual is not blind but is severely disabled, the State agency may disregard (A) not more than the first $20 of the first $80 per month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder thereof and (B) such additional amounts of other income and resources, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of the plan, but only with respect to the part or parts of such period during substantially all of which he is undergoing vocational rehabilitation;

"(5) if such individual has attained age sixty-five and is neither blind nor severely disabled, the State agency may disregard not more than the first $20 of the first $80 per month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder thereof.

"(b) A State plan must also provide that—

"(1) each eligible individual, other than one who is a patient in a medical institution or is receiving institutional service in an intermediate care facility to which section 1121 applies, shall receive financial assistance in such amount as, when added to his income which is not disregarded pursuant to subsection (a), will provide a minimum of $90 per month.

"(2) the standard of need applied for determining eligibility for and amount of aid for the aged, blind, and disabled shall not be lower than (A) the standard applied for this purpose under the State plan (approved under this title) as in effect on the date of enactment of part D of title IV of this Act, or (B) if there was no such plan in effect for such State on such date, the standard of need which was applicable under—

"(i) the State plan which was in effect on such date and was approved under title I, in the case of any individual who is sixty-five years of age or older,

"(ii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title X, in the case of an individual who is blind, or

except that if two or more of clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) are applicable to an individual, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than the higher (or highest) of the standards under the applicable plans, and except that if none of such clauses is applicable to individuals, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than higher of the standards under the State plans approved under title I, X, or XIV, which was in effect on such date, and

"(3) no aid will be furnished to any individual under the State plan for any period with respect to which he is considered a member of a family receiving family assistance benefits under part D of title IV or training allowances under part C thereof for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits or allowances (but this paragraph shall not prevent payments with respect to other members of his family pursuant to title IV of this Act).

"(4) no lien will be imposed against the property of any individual or his estate on account of aid paid to him under the plan (except pursuant to the judgment of a court on account of benefits incorrectly paid to such individual), and that there will be no adjustment or any recovery of aid correctly paid to him under the plan.

"(c) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 464.

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

"SEC. 1604. From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall pay to each State which has a plan approved under this title, for each calendar quarter, an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each month of such quarter as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the State plan—

"(1) 100 per centum of such expenditures, not counting so much of any expenditures as exceeds the product of $50 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus

"(2) 50 per centum of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under paragraph (1), not counting so much of any expenditures with respect to such month as exceeds the product of $65 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus

"(3) 25 per centum of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under paragraph (2), not counting so much of any expenditures with respect to such month as exceeds the product of the amount which, as determined by the Secretary, is the maximum permissible level of assistance per person in which the Federal Government will participate financially, multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month.

In the case of any individual in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, the maximum permissible level of assistance under paragraph (3) may be lower than in the case of individuals in the other States. See also, section 464 for other special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

"ALTERNATE PROVISION FOR DIRECT FEDERAL PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS

"Sec. 1605. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with a State under which he will, on behalf of the State, pay aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State under the State's plan approved under this title and perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon. In such case payments shall not be made as provided in section 1604 and the agreement shall also provide for payment to the Secretary by the State of its share of such aid, together with one-half of the additional cost to the Secretary involved in carrying out the agreement, other than the cost of making the payments.

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS"

"Sec. 1606. Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of payment has been made to any person as a direct Federal payment pursuant to section 1605, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the overpaid individual or by recovery from him or his estate or payment to him. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with a view to avoiding penalizing individuals who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration."
"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS"

"Sec. 1607. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under this title, finds—

"(1) that the plan no longer complies with the provisions of sections 1602 and 1603; or

"(2) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision; the Secretary shall notify such State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State or individuals within the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no such further payments to the State or individuals in the State under this title (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure).

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION"

"Sec. 1608. (a) If the State plan of a State approved under section 1602 provides that the State agency will make available to applicants for or recipients of aid to the aged,
blind, and disabled under the State plan at least those services to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care which are prescribed by the Secretary, such State shall qualify for payments for services under subsection (b)
of this section.

"(b) In the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 1602 meets the requirements of subsection (a), the Secretary shall pay to the State from the sums appropriated therefor an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each quarter, as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

"(1) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(A) services which are prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) and are provided (in accordance with subsection (c) ) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, or

"(B) other services, specified by the Secretary
as likely to prevent or reduce dependency, so provided to the applicants or recipients of aid, or

"(C) any of the services prescribed pursuant to subsection (a), and any of the services specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, which the Secretary may specify as appropriate for individuals who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe, have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, if such services are requested by the individuals and are provided to them in accordance with subsection (c), or

"(D) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision; plus

"(2) one-half of so much of such expenditures (not included under paragraph (1)) as are for services provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, and to individuals requesting such services who (within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe) have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of such aid; plus

"(3) one-half of the remainder of such expenditures.

"(c) The services referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall, except to the extent specified by the Secretary, include only—

"(1) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision (but no funds authorized under this title shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (A) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under that Act, or (B) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under that Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under paragraph (2), if provided by such staff), and

“(2) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of that State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies).

Services described in clause (B) of paragraph (1) may be provided only pursuant to agreement with the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

“(d) The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which paragraph (1) of subsection (b) applies and the portion thereof to which paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary.

“(e) In the case of any State whose plan approved under section 1602 does not meet the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, there shall be paid to the State, in lieu of the amount provided for under subsection (b), an amount equal to one-half the total of the sums expended during each quarter as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, including services referred to in subsections (b) and (c) and provided in accordance with the provisions of those subsections.

“(f) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of subsection
(a), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan, that—

"(1) the provision no longer complies with the requirements of subsection (a), or

(2) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such provision,

the Secretary shall notify the State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State under subsection (b) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied, no such further payments with respect to the administration of and services under the State plan shall be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under subsection (e) instead of subsection (b).

"COMPUTATION OF PAYMENTS TO STATES

"Sec. 1609. (a) (1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under subsections 1604 and 1608 for that quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in that quarter in accordance with the provisions of sections 1604 and 1608, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in that quarter, and, if such amount is less than the State's proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, and (B) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then pay in such installments as he may determine, the amount so estimated, reduced or increased to the extent of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made under this section to the State for any prior quarter and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under this subsection.

"(b) The pro rata share to which the United States is equitably entitled, as determined by the Secretary, of the net amount recovered during any quarter by a State or political subdivision thereof with respect to aid furnished under the State plan, but excluding any amount of such aid recovered from the estate of a deceased recipient which is not in excess of the amount expended by the State or any political subdivision thereof for the funeral expenses of the deceased, shall be considered an overpayment to be adjusted under subsection (a) (2).

"(c) Upon the making of any estimate by the Secretary under this subsection, any appropriations available for payments under this section shall be deemed obligated.

"DEFINITION

"SEC. 1610. For purposes of this title, the term ‘aid to the aged, blind, and disabled’ means money payments to needy individuals who are 65 years of age or older, are blind, or are severely disabled, but such term does not include—

"(1) any such payments to any individual who is an inmate of a public institution (except as a patient in a medical institution); or

"(2) any such payments to any individual who has not attained sixty-five years of age and who is a patient in an institution for tuberculosis or mental diseases.

Such term also includes payments which are not included within the meaning of such term under the preceding sentence, but which would be so included except that they are made on behalf of such a needy individual to another individual who (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such needy individual, but only with respect to a State whose State plan approved under section 1602 includes provision for—

"(A) determination by the State agency that the needy individual has, by reason of his physical or mental condition, such inability to manage funds that making payments to him would be contrary to his welfare and, therefore, it is necessary to provide such aid through payments described in this sentence;

"(B) making such payments only in cases in which the payment will, under the rules otherwise applicable under the State plan for determining need and the amount of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled to be paid (and in conjunction with other income and resources), meet all the need of the individuals with respect to whom such payments are made;

"(C) undertaking and continuing special efforts to protect the welfare of such individuals and to improve, to the extent possible, his capacity of self-care and to manage funds;

"(D) periodic review by the State agency of the determination under clause (A) to ascertain whether conditions justifying such determination still exist, with provision for termination of the payments if they do not and for seeking judicial appointment of a guardian, or other legal representative, as described in section 1111, if and when it appears that such action will best serve the interests of the needy individual; and

"(E) opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency on the determination referred to in clause (A) for any individual with respect to whom it is made."
Whether an individual is blind or severely disabled, shall be determined for purposes of this title in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary."

In the case of any State which has a State plan approved under title I, X, XIV, or XVI of the Social Security Act as in effect prior to the enactment of this section, any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made to such State under section 3, 1003, 1403, or 1603 of such Act with respect to a period before the approval of a plan under title XVI as amended by this Act, and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under subsection (b) of such section 3, 1003, 1403, or 1603, shall, for purposes of section 1609 (a) of such Act as herein amended be considered an overpayment or underpayment (as the case may be) made under title XVI of such Act as herein amended.
TRANSITION PROVISION RELATING TO DEFINITIONS OF BLINDNESS AND DISABILITY

a plan of aid to the blind under title X, aid to the permanently in effect prior to the enactment of this Act, the State plan of such State submitted under title XVI of such Act as amended by this Act shall not be denied approval thereunder, with respect to the period ending with the first July 1 which follows the close of the first regular session of the legislature of such State which begins after the enactment of this Act, by reason of its failure to include therein a test of disability or blindness different from that included in the State's plan (approved under such title X, XIV or XVI of such Act) as in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S. 2986—INTRODUCTION OF THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1969

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. President, I introduce on behalf of myself, and other Senators, "The Family Assistance Act of 1969," comprehensive legislation addressed to one of our most serious domestic problems. This bill constitutes one of the most important domestic initiatives which the Nixon administration will undertake. It embodies the administration's proposals for a complete overhaul of our present, highly unsatisfactory welfare system. President Nixon did not overstate the case when he termed the welfare system a colossal failure and a huge monster. No one is happy with welfare system. President Nixon did not overstate the case when he termed the welfare system a colossal failure and a huge monster. No one is happy with welfare system.

Most of the problems in the existing system center around the program known as AFDC—aid to families with dependent children. In a period of increasing prosperity, and decreasing unemployment, this program has grown steadily. Since 1960, its cost has tripled, and the number of recipients has more than doubled. This program is now responsible for payments to 6,500,000 persons. Yet this program is basically unfair. It is unfair to men who work hard for low wages. It is unfair to families that stay together, instead of breaking up. It is unfair to people who live in different states, some of whom receive a payment of $39 a month, and others of whom receive as much as $163 a month.

After a great deal of study, the administration has concluded that the best way to remedy these problems is to establish a uniform Federal payment—a family assistance payment—to families with children and with comparable amounts of income. This is not a guaranteed income program. Persons who do not accept work or training opportunities will not be eligible for payments. It is a program that guarantees that help will be available for any family, with children, where the breadwinner uses his best efforts. It is designed as a program to encourage people to help themselves. The incentives to have earnings, and to increase earnings, are large.

Under this plan, the basic benefit for a family with no income would be $500 for each of the first two persons in the family, and $300 for each additional one. Thus, in the case of a family of four without income, payments of $1,600 annually would be available. The first $720—based on $60 a month—of annual earnings, would not result in any reduction in the basic family assistance benefit. This would ordinarily cover the expenses of employment so that an individual would not be disadvantaged by going to work. Above this level, a dollar of earnings would result in only a 50-cent reduction in benefits. For each dollar of unearned income, there would be only a 50-cent reduction, thus providing a monetary incentive for child support, and for more stable work effort by individuals so that higher unemployment compensation benefits would be available.

The food stamp program which was proposed by the President, and for which legislation has now been passed by this body, will enhance the benefits available. The comprehensive manpower and training bill will make more available training opportunities in relation to local labor markets, and the opportunity for placement of welfare recipients in the type of training program most likely to fit them for available jobs. This bill will complement both programs. With regard to the latter, this bill provides funds to help defray training costs, and it vastly expands—compared with present programs—the authority for day care. Any unemployed person who is able to work or take training will be required to register with the State employment services. An exception is made in the case of mothers of children under 6 whose acceptance of training or employment is voluntary.

Under the existing system there is, as I pointed out, a very wide variation in payments. It would be unfair to significantly reduce the amount of assistance being received by individual families today. This bill, accordingly, contains provisions for State supplementation so that persons will not lose under the new arrangement. Obviously, the intact working families who are eligible for nothing today will gain, and greater equity will result.

In the program for the aged, blind, and disabled, Federal matching is materially improved. The Federal Government would provide 100 percent of the first $50 of payment per individual, 50 percent for the next $15, and 25 percent of the amount above $65. Of vital importance is the principle of a minimum income floor that would be established for the first time. As a condition for receiving Federal grants, the States would have to assure that each aged, blind or disabled individual would have at least $90 from his assistance payment and other income each month.

The bill has been designed to assure some fiscal relief under the welfare programs as compared with existing law. It includes provisions that the Federal Government will reimburse the States for any required non-Federal expenditures that exceed 90 percent of what their expenditures would be under existing law. At the same time, other provisions assure that States will expend at least one-half as much as they are spending at present. These provisions, coupled with the revenue-sharing proposals of this administration, will aid hard-pressed State treasuries.

Out of new expenditures of approximately $5 billion—$4 billion under the bill that I have introduced and $1 billion of direct revenue sharing—the savings to State treasuries is estimated at $1.7 billion, one-third of the total. The remaining expenditures will go primarily to the recipients of family assistance payments, for training costs and day care and for administration and other items.

The bill makes minimal changes in the existing provisions for social services to families. This, I understand, will be the subject of later proposals. Similarly, the follows:

Mr. President, the welfare proposals contained in this bill are designed to correct four basic evils in the present wel-tem—evils which provide strong incentives for abuse. It corrects the evil inequities between male and female-headed families which today provide an incentive for families to leave home. It corrects the inequities today between the idle and the working poor which pre-ently provide an incentive for idleness. It requires recipients to accept available work or training and provides expanded training in day care services to make this possible.

Mr. President, this bill is long; it is complex. Not all may agree with the details of every provision. Certain refinements may be suggested in committee, and on the floor. Yet, overall, I believe these proposals constitute a major improvement in the way in which we deal with one of our most troublesome problems. I have given this matter full and careful consideration by all of us, leading to enactment.

For the first time since the 1930's the emphasis in Federal programs has shifted from the merely custodial to the remedial. President Nixon recognizes that the Federal role is demeaning to human dignity, and only encourages a cycle of dependence from one generation to the next. This bill, I believe, is vitally essential to the successful implementation of his stated goal to "assist millions of Americans out of poverty and into productivity.

I am pleased to have joining me as co-spokesmen in this effort the following dis-inguished Senators: Mr. GARRIN of Michigan, Mr. BROOKE of Massachusetts, Mr. DOMINICK of Colorado, Mr. HANSEN of Wyoming, Mr. FORSYTH of Vermont, Mr. SCRUMS of Kansas, Mr. PORTMAN of Ohio, Mr. SKOWRONSKI of Pennsylvania,
Mr. SMOKEY of Alaska, Mr. JAVITS of New York, and Mr. PRASY of Illinois.

Mr. President, I ask that an explanation be printed in the Record, in Health, Education, and Welfare Secretary Robert H. Finch, and a section-by-section analysis of the Family Assistance Act of 1969 be printed at this point in the Record.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be received and approciated and referred; and, without objection, the explanatory statement and section-by-section analysis will be printed in the Record.

The bill (S. 2886), to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs, and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes, introduced by Mr. SCOTT (for himself and other Senators), was read twice, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The material furnished by Mr. SCOTT follows:

STATEMENT OF SECRETARY OF HEALTH, EDUCA-TION, AND WELFARE, ROBERT H. FINCH, IN EXPLANATION OF THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1969.

The Family Assistance Plan is a revolutionary effort to reform a welfare system in crisis. With this program and the Administration's proposed Food Stamp plan, the Federal Government is launching a strategy—an income strategy—to deal with our most critical domestic problems. For those among the poor who can benefit from self-supporting work or training and this strategy offers an avenue to greater income through expanded work incentives, training, and employment opportunities. For those who are not suited to working, there is a more adequate level of Federal support.

I. THE FAILURES OF WELFARE

On August 8, 1969, the President addressed the nation and called the present welfare system a failure. He said:

"Whether measured by the anguish of the poor themselves or by the drastically mounting burden on the taxpayer, the present welfare system has to be judged a colossal failure.

"What began on a small scale in the depression 30's has become a huge monster in the prosperous 60's. And the tragedy is not only that it is bringing States and cities to the brink of financial disaster, but also that it is failing to meet the elementary human, social and financial needs of the poor."

The failure of the system is most evident in the recent increases in welfare costs and overall Federal expenditures. In the three years since the present AFDC program was authorized, the number of families on the rolls has doubled—from 39 children per 1,000 to about 60 per 1,000 at present.

The Aid for Families with Dependent Children program (AFDC), costs have more than tripled since 1960 (to about $4 billion in 1968). The average number of recipients has more than doubled (to some 6.2 million persons). Even more disturbing is the fact that the proportion of persons on AFDC is growing. In the 15 years since 1955, the proportion of children receiving assistance has doubled—from 30 children per 1,000
to about 60 per 1,000 at present.

Prospects for the future show no likelihood for relief from this frightening upward spiral.
By conservative estimates, AFDC costs will double again by Fiscal Year 1975, and caseloads will increase by 50 to 60 percent. Yet, our best efforts of many different people in the past decade have accomplished only a Truce. This is a real war on poverty and not just a skirmish.

II. THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

This Administration began its formal innovation welfare and poverty programs upon the inauguration. From the report of the Transition Task Force on Welfare to the present time, a number of reform proposals have been considered. The final result reflects the best efforts of many different people in and in government and in different Federal agencies.

This analysis led us to the conclusion that revolutionary structural reform in the system is required. The first priority of the Family Assistance Plan has been to remove, or at least minimize the inequities of present welfare policies. It is designed to strengthen family life and incentives for employment. This strategy may not pay off immediately, but unless this investment is made, fundamental weaknesses will remain even more expensive in the future.

The Family Assistance Plan provides fiscal relief for the hard pressed States and at the same time raises benefit inequities in these areas where they are lowest. Of the $2.9 billion made available in new funds under the plan for fiscal year 1969, 1/3 goes to those States which have the lowest per capita income. It is estimated that $700 million will have the effect of providing fiscal relief for the States and about $300 million will be for benefit increases for present recipients. But these goals, it must be said, cannot be our first priority at the present time. There are others who would invest more of our available resources in the future to increase benefit levels.
in many cases eliminates the inequity of treatment between those who work and those who do not. Second, by making it possible for a family to earn $60 per month without any loss of benefits, a regional employment service office so that training and job opportunities can be efficiently communicated to unemployed and may elect to stay at home with their children without any loss in benefits.

Second, the Family Assistance Plan treats male and female members of families equally. A family with children, whether headed by a male or female, will receive benefits if family income and resources are below the national eligibility levels. From this structural change in the program in terms of family stability, there should be an encouragement for the father to leave home to work. No longer would an unemployed person, the program is not a guaranteed annual income. It does not guarantee benefits to persons regardless of their attitudes; its support is reserved to those who are willing to support themselves. The work requirement is made effective by a new obligation of work registration. In order to be eligible for benefits, applicants must first register with their employment service office so that training and job opportunities can be efficiently communicated to unemployed persons.

Third, the program establishes a national minimum payment level and national eligibility standards and methods of administration. For a dependent family at four, the Federal benefit floor will be $1600 per year. When benefits under the President's Food Stamp program are added to the new family assistance package for such a family is about $2350 per year, or more than two-thirds of the poverty line as it has been most recently revised. Of course, a family amount to sustain an adequate level of life for those who have no other income; it is, nevertheless, substantial improvement and can be made more adequate as budget conditions permit. As a result of the establish-...

S11725

Definition of family and child

To qualify for Family Assistance Plan benefits a family must consist of two or more related individuals living in their own home and residing in the United States and one member of the family must be an adult child (i.e., under the age of 18, or under the age of 21 and regularly attending school).

Payment of benefits

Payment may be made to any one or more members of the family. The State or the local family assistance office would prescribe regulations regarding the filing of applications and supplying of data. The applications would include the need, the amounts for which the family is eligible. Beneficiaries would be required to report events or changes of circumstances affecting eligibility or the amount of benefits.

When reports by beneficiaries are delayed too long or are too inaccurate, part or all of the resulting benefit payments could be treated as recoverable overpayments.

Registration for work and referral for training

Eligible adult family members would be required to register with public employment offices and to be available for training or employment unless they belong to specified excepted groups. However, a person in an excepted group may register if he wishes.

The exceptions are: (1) ill, incapacitated, or aged persons; (2) the caretaker relative (usually the mother) of a child under 6; (3) the parent of an adult child if the child is an unmarried child (i.e., under the age of 18) or aged persons; (4) the caretaker for an ill household member; and (5) full-time workers.

Where the individual is disabled, referral for rehabilitation services would be made. Provision would be made for child care services to the extent the Secretary finds necessary in case of participation in manpower services, training, or employment.

Denial of benefits

Family Assistance benefits would be denied with respect to any member of a family who refuses without good cause to register or to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment. If the member is the only adult, he would be included as a family member only for purposes of determining eligibility for family assistance. In appropriate cases, the remaining portion of the Family Assistance benefit would be paid to an interested person outside the family.

On-the-job training

The Secretary would transfer to the Department of Labor a portion of the Family Assistance Plan benefits (new part E) for employer-compensated on-the-job training if they were not participating. These funds would be available to pay the training costs involved.

STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE

Required supplementation

The Individual States would have to agree to supplement the family assistance benefits under the new part E of the Social Security Act wherever the family assistance benefit level is below the previously existing Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) payment level. This supplementation is a condition which the State must meet in order to continue to receive Federal family assistance benefits. The States would thus be required to supplement the family assistance benefits paid under the AFDC-UP provisions; they would not have to supplement in case of the working poor.

Amount of supplementation

Except as provided below, except for use of the State standard of need and payment maximums, eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments would be determined by the rules applicable for Family Assistance benefits.

In applying the family assistance rules to the discretionary payments under the supplementary payment program—

(1) In the case of earned income of the family, the State would first disregard income at a rate of $720 per year, and would then be required to reduce its supplementary payment by 16 2/3 cents for every dollar of earnings over the range of earnings between $720 per year and the cutoff point for family assistance (i.e., $3,920 for a family of four), and could further reduce its supplementary payments by an amount equal to not more than 80 cents for every dollar of earnings beyond that family assistance cutoff point. In the case of unearned income, these same percentage reductions would apply, although the initial $720 exclusion would not apply.

Requirements for agreements

Some of the State plan requirements now applicable in the case of Aid and Services to Needy Families (AFDC) would be made applicable to the agreement. These include the requirements relating to:

(1) State-wideness;
(2) Administration by a single State agency;
(3) Fair hearing to dissatisfied claimants;
(4) Methods of administration needed for proper and efficient operation, including personnel standards, training, and effective use of subprofessional staff;
(5) Reporting to Secretary as required;
(6) Confidentiality of information relating to applicants and recipients;
(7) Opportunity to apply for and prompt furnishing of supplementary payments.

Payments to States

A State agreeing to make the supplementary payments agreed upon or any increase in payments which would be in lieu of allowances under other programs participating or attaining advancement in employment.

Allowances

The Secretary of Labor would pay an incentive training allowance of $30 per month to each member of a family participating in manpower training. Where training allowances for a family under another program would be larger than their benefits under the Family Assistance Plan, the incentive allowances for the family would equal the difference, or $30 per month, whichever is larger. Allowances for transportation and other expenses would also be authorized.

The incentive training allowances would be in lieu of allowances under other manpower training programs. Allowances would not be payable to individuals participating in employer-compensated on-the-job training.

Dental allowances

Allowances would not be payable to individuals who refuse dental care training without good cause. The individual would receive reasonable notice and have an opportunity for a hearing if dissatisfied with the denial.

Special provisions for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

There are special provisions for these areas under which the amount of family assistance benefits, the $720 of earned income to be disregarded, and several other provisions are made applicable to the Family Assistance Plan and the new title XVI of the Social Security Act (aid to the aged, blind, and disabled) would be reduced to the extent that the family benefit in these areas is below that of the 50 States which had the lowest per capita income.

TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, AND DAY CARE PROGRAMS

Section 102 of the Administration bill would replace part C of title IV of the Social Security Act in its entirety:

Purpose

The purpose of the revised part C is to provide manpower services, training, and employment to families with dependent children to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in the community.

Operation

The Secretary of Labor is required to develop an employability plan for each individual required to register under the new part C who is over 16 years of age and not employed. The plan would describe the manpower services, training, and employment to be provided and needed to enable the individual to become self-supporting or attain advancement in employment.

Allowances

The Secretary of Labor would pay an incentive training allowance of $30 per month to each member of a family participating in manpower training. Where training allowances for a family under another program would be larger than theirs benefits under the Family Assistance Plan, the incentive allowances for the family would equal the difference, or $30 per month, whichever is larger. Allowances for transportation and other expenses would also be authorized.

The incentive training allowances would be in lieu of allowances under other manpower training programs. Allowances would not be payable to individuals participating in employer-compensated on-the-job training.

Dental allowances

Allowances would not be payable to individuals who refuse dental care training without good cause. The individual would receive reasonable notice and have an opportunity for a hearing if dissatisfied with the denial.

Sufficient latitude is provided to deal with the individual administrative characteristics of the States. Provision is made under which the Secretary can agree to administer and dispose the supplementary payments on behalf of the States. Similarly the States can agree to administer the family assistance plan on behalf of the Secretary, with respect to all or specified families in the State.
Utilization of other programs

In order to avoid the creation of duplicative programs, maximum use of authorities under other acts could be made by the Secretary of Labor in providing the services and functions provided under the revised part C, subject to all duties and responsibilities under such other programs. The definitions of ‘dependent child’ and ‘aid families with children’ have not been substantially changed.

Definitions

The definitions of ‘dependent child’, aid to families with dependent children’, and ‘foster care and emergency assistance’ remain virtually the same as under existing law.

Other new requirements relate to provision for the training and effective use of social service personnel, provision of technical assistance to State agencies and local subvisions furnishing assistance or services, and provision for the development, through research or demonstrations, of new or improved methods or techniques of administration. Also added is a requirement for use of a simplified statement for establishing eligibility and for admission to aid under the new program, and for obtaining priorities and performance standards set by the Secretary in the administration of the State plan and in providing services thereunder.

The present provisions against any age requirement of more than 65 years and against any citizenship requirement, including U.S. citizens, would be continued.

In place of the present provisions on residency, there is a new one which prohibits any residency requirement excluding any resident of the State. Also there would be new prohibitions against any disability or age requirement which excludes an individual aged 18 or older, and any blindness or age requirement which excludes any citizens of the United States (as determined under criteria by the Secretary).

Payments

In place of the present provision on the refusal or withdrawal of authority under the approved State plan there is a new formula which provides for payment as follows with respect to expenditures under State plans for the aged, blind, and disabled approved under the new title XVI or (in case the State had not had such a plan) the appropriate one of the standards of the provisions under the plans approved under titles I, X, and XIV.
With respect to cash assistance, the Federal Government will pay (1) 100 per cent of the first $50 per recipient, plus (2) 50 per cent of the next $15 per recipient, plus (3) 25 per cent of the balance of the payment per recipient which does not exceed the maximum permissible level of assistance per person set by the Secretary (which may be lower in the case of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam than for other jurisdictions).

With respect to services for which expenditures are made under the approved State plan, the Federal Government would pay the same percentages as are provided under existing law, that is, 75 per cent in the case of certain specified services and training of personnel and 50 per cent in the case of the remainder of the cost of administration of the State plan.

Payment by Federal Government to individuals

The revised title XVI includes authority for the Secretary to enter into agreements with any State under which the Secretary will make the payments of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State who are eligible therefor. In that case, the State would reimburse the Federal Government for the State's share of those payments and for 1/3 the additional cost to the Secretary of carrying out the agreement, other than the cost of making the payments themselves.

Definition

The new title XVI defines aid to the aged, blind, and disabled as money payments to needy individuals who are 65 or older or are blind or are severely disabled.

Transitional and related provisions

Titles I, X, and XIV of the Social Security Act would be repealed.

Provision is made for making adjustments under the new title XVI on account of overpayments and underpayments under the existing public assistance titles.

Provision is also made for according States a grace period during which they can be eligible to participate in the new title XVI without changing their tests of disability or blindness. The grace period would end for any State with the June 30 following the close of the first regular session of its State legislature beginning after enactment of the bill.

Conforming amendments

The bill also contains a number of conforming amendments in other provisions of the Social Security Act in order to take account of the substantive changes made by the bill. Thus, the changes in the medicaid program (title XIX of the Social Security Act) would require the States to cover individuals eligible for supplementary State payments pursuant to the new part E of title IV or who would be eligible for cash assistance under an existing State plan for aid to families with dependent children if it continued in effect and included dependent children of unemployed fathers.

Effective date

The amendments made by the bill would become effective on the first January 1 following the fiscal year in which the bill is enacted. However, if a State is prevented by statute from making supplementary payments provided for under the new part E of title IV of the Social Security Act, the amendments would not apply to individuals in that State until the first July 1 which follows the end of the State's first regular session of its legislature beginning after the enactment of the bill—unless the State certified before this date that it is no longer prevented by State statute from making the payments. In the latter case the amendments would become effective at the beginning of the first calendar quarter following the certification.

Also, in the case of a State which is prevented by statute from meeting the require-
A BILL

To authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

FINDINGS AND DECLARATION OF PURPOSE

Sec. 2. (a) The Congress hereby finds and declares that—

(1) the present federally assisted welfare program provides benefits which vary widely throughout the country and which are unconscionably low in many States;

(2) the program for needy families with children is often administered in ways which are costly, inefficient, and degrading to personal dignity, and is characterized by intolerable incentives for family breakup, by inadequate encouragements to and opportunities for those on the welfare rolls to enter job training and employment so that they may become self-supporting, and by the inequitable exclusion from assistance of working families in poverty, especially families headed by a male;
(3) the growth of the welfare rolls threatens the fiscal stability of the States and the Federal-State partnership; and

(4) in the light of the harm to individual and family development and well-being caused by lack of income adequate to sustain a decent level of life, and the consequent damage to the human resources of the entire Nation, the Federal Government has a positive interest and responsibility in assuring the correction of these problems.

(b) It is therefore the purpose of this Act to fulfill the responsibility of the Federal Government to expand the training and employment incentives and opportunities, including necessary child care services, for those public assistance recipients who are members of needy families with children and who can become self-supporting; to provide a more adequate level and quality of living through income support and services for dependent persons and families who, through no fault of their own, require public assistance; to provide this financial assistance in a manner designed to strengthen family life and to establish more nearly uniform national standards of eligibility and aid; and to move to greater assumption by the Federal Government of the financial burden of these activities.
TITLE I—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

ESTABLISHMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

Sec. 101. Title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601, et seq.) is amended by adding after part C the following new parts:

"PART D—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

"APPROPRIATIONS

"Sec. 441. For the purposes of providing a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children, in a manner which will strengthen family life, encourage work training and self-support, and enhance personal dignity, there is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year a sum sufficient to carry out this part.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

"ELIGIBILITY

"Sec. 442. (a) Each family, as defined in section 445—

"(1) whose income, other than income which is excluded pursuant to section 443, is less than $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family plus $300 per year for each additional member, and “(2) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 444, are less than $1,500, shall, in accordance with and subject to the other provisions of this title, be paid a family assistance benefit.

“AMOUNT

“(b) The family assistance benefit for a family shall be payable at the rate of $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family plus $300 per year for each additional member thereof, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 443, of the members of the family.

“PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

“(c) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 464.

“PERIOD FOR DETERMINATION OF BENEFITS

“(d) (1) A family’s eligibility for and its amount of family assistance benefits shall be determined for each quarter of a calendar year. Such determination shall be made on the basis of the Secretary’s estimate of the family’s income for such quarter, after taking into account income for a preceeding period and any modifications in income which are likely to occur on the basis of changes in conditions or circumstances. Eligibility for and the amount of benefits of a family for any quarter shall be redetermined at such time or times as may be provided by the Secretary, such redeter-mination to be effective prospectively.

"(2) The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe the cases in which and extent to which the amount of a family assistance benefit for any quarter shall be reduced by reason of the time elapsing since the beginning of such quarter and before the date of filing of the application for the benefit.

"(3) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which income received in one period (or expenses incurred in one period in earning income) shall, for purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits, be considered as received (or incurred) in another period or periods.

"SPECIAL LIMITS ON GROSS INCOME

"(e) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the circumstances under which the gross income from a trade or business (including farming), will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits.

"INCOME

"EXCLUSIONS FROM INCOME

"Sec. 443. (a) In determining the income of a family
there shall be excluded—
“(1) subject to limitations (as to amount or otherwise) prescribed by the Secretary, the earned income of each child in the family who is, as determined by the Secretary under regulations, a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment;

“(2) (A) the total unearned income of all members of a family which is, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, too inconsequential, or received too infrequently or irregularly, to be included, and (B) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary any earned income which, as determined in accordance with such criteria, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included;

“(3) an amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to all, or such part (and according to such schedule) as the Secretary may prescribe, of the cost incurred by such member for child care which the Secretary deems necessary to securing or continuing in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

“(4) the first $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of the total of
earned income (not excluded by the preceding clauses of this section) of all members of the family plus one-half of the remainder thereof;

"(5) food stamps or any other assistance which is based on need and furnished by any State or political subdivision of a State or any Federal agency or by any private charitable agency or organization (as determined by the Secretary);

"(6) allowances under section 432 (a);

"(7) any portion of a scholarship or fellowship received for use in paying the cost of tuition and fees at any educational (including technical or vocational education) institution;

"(8) home produce of a member of the family utilized by the household for its own consumption; and

"(9) one-half of all unearned income (not excluded by the preceding clauses of this subsection) of all members of the family.

The preceding provisions of this subsection shall not apply to veterans' pensions or to payments to farmers for price support, diversion, or conservation. For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, see section 464.
“MEANING OF EARNED AND UNEARNED INCOME

“(b) For purposes of this part—

“(1) earned income shall include only—

“(A) remuneration for employment, other than remuneration to which section 209 (b), (c), (d), (f), or (k) applies;

“(B) net earnings from self-employment, as defined in section 211 other than the second and third sentences following clause (C) of subsection (a) (9) and other than clauses (A), (C), and (E) of paragraph (2) and paragraphs (4), (5), and (6), of subsection (c);

“(2) unearned income shall include among other things—

“(A) any payments received as an annuity, pension, retirement, or disability benefit, including veteran’s or workmen’s compensation and old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, railroad retirement, and unemployment benefits;

“(B) prizes and awards;

“(C) the proceeds of any life insurance policy;

“(D) gifts (cash or otherwise), support and alimony payments, and inheritances; and
(E) rents, dividends, interest, and royalties.

"RESOURCES"

"EXCLUSIONS FROM RESOURCES"

"SEC. 444. (a) In determining the resources of a family there shall be excluded:

"(1) the home, household goods, and personal effects; and

"(2) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion.

"DISPOSITION OF RESOURCES"

"(b) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits. Any portion of the family's benefits paid for such period or periods shall be conditioned on such disposal.

"MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD"

"COMPOSITION OF FAMILY"

"SEC. 445. (a) Two or more individuals—

"(1) who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption,
“(2) who are living in a place of residence maintained by one or more of them as his or her own home,
“(3) who are residents of the United States, and
“(4) at least one of whom is a child who is not married to another of such individuals, shall be regarded as a family for purposes of this part and parts A, C, and E.

“DEFINITION OF CHILD
“(b) For purposes of this part and parts C and E, the term ‘child’ means an individual who is (1) under the age of eighteen or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary under regulations) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

“MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES
“(c) If an individual is in the Armed Forces of the United States, then, for purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits under this part, (1) he shall not be regarded as a member of a family, and (2) the spouse and children of such individual, and such other individuals living in the same place of residence as such spouse and children as may be specified in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, shall not be considered members of a family.

"DETERMINATION OF FAMILY RELATIONSHIPS"

"(d) In determining whether an individual is related by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law, as determined in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, shall be applied.

"INCOME AND RESOURCES OF NONCONTRIBUTING ADULT"

"(e) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits for any family there shall be excluded the income and resources of any individual, other than a child or a parent of a child (or a spouse of a child or parent), which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is not available to other members of the family; and for such purposes, any such individual shall not be considered a member of such family.

"RECIPIENTS OF AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED INELIGIBLE"

"(f) If an individual is receiving aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under a State plan approved under title XVI, or if his needs are taken into account in determining the need of another person receiving such aid, then, for the period for which such aid is received, such individual shall not be regarded as a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the family assistance benefits of the family."
"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"PAYMENTS OF BENEFITS

"Sec. 446. (a) (1) Family assistance benefits shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of this title.

"(2) Payment of the family assistance benefit of any family may be made to any one or more members of the family.

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of family assistance benefit shall apply.

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of family assistance benefits has been paid with respect to any family, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the family or by recovery from or payment to any one or more of the individuals who are or were members thereof. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to a family with a view to avoiding penalizing members of the family who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this part, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this part.

"HEARINGS AND REVIEW"

"(c) (1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be a member of a family and is dissatisfied with any determination under this part with respect to eligibility of the family for family assistance benefits, the number of members of the family, or the amount of the benefits.

"(2) Final determination of the Secretary after such hearings shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205 (g) to the same extent as the Secretary’s final determinations under section 205.

"PROCEDURES; PROHIBITION OF ASSIGNMENTS"

"(d) The provisions of sections 206 and 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"APPLICATIONS AND FURNISHING OF INFORMATION BY FAMILIES"

"(e) (1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to families or members thereof with respect to the filing of applications, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

"(2) In order to encourage prompt reporting of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, and more accurate estimates of expected income or expenses by members of families for purposes of such eligibility and amount of benefits, the Secretary may prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which—

"(A) failure to so report or delay in so reporting, or

"(B) inaccuracy of information which is furnished by the members and on which the estimates of income or expenses for such purposes are based,

will result in treatment as overpayments of all or any portion of payments of such benefits for the period involved.

"FURNISHING OF INFORMATION BY OTHER AGENCIES

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto. The Secretary may from time to time pay to the head of such agency, in advance or by way of reimbursement, as may be agreed upon, the cost of providing such information.
“REGISTRATION AND REFERRAL OF FAMILY MEMBERS FOR MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT

“Sec. 447. (a) Every individual who is a member of a family which is found to be eligible for family assistance benefits, other than a member to whom the Secretary finds clause (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), or (6) of subsection (b) applies, shall register for manpower services, training, and employment with the local public employment office of the State as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor. If and for so long as any such individual is found by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to have failed (after a reasonable period of time), without good cause as determined by the Secretary of Labor, to so register, he shall not be regarded as a member of a family but his income which would otherwise be counted under this part as income of a family shall be so counted; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for purposes of determination of the amount of such benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

“(b) An individual shall not be required to register pursuant to subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that such individual is:

“(1) ill, incapacitated, or of an advanced age;

“(2) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for such child;

“(3) the mother, or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and not excluded by clauses (1), (2), (4), or (5) of this subsection;

“(4) a child;

“(5) one whose presence in the home on a substantially continuous basis is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household;

“(6) working full time, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary of Labor.

An individual who would, but for the preceding sentence, be required to register pursuant to part A, may, if he wishes, register as provided in such subsection.

“(c) The Secretary shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services in such cases and for so long as he deems appropriate in the case of individuals registered pursuant to subsection (a) who are, pursuant to such registration, participating in manpower services, training, or employment.

"(d) In the case of any member of a family receiving family assistance benefits who is not required to register pursuant to subsection (a) because of such member's disability or handicap, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such member to the appropriate State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

"DENIAL OF BENEFITS IN CASE OF REFUSAL OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, OR EMPLOYMENT

"SEC. 448. For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits under this part, an individual who has registered as required under section 447 (a) shall not be regarded as a member of a family, but his income which would otherwise be counted as income of the family under this part shall be so counted, if and for so long as he has been found by the Secretary of Labor, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing, to have refused without good cause to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment, or to have refused without good cause to accept suitable employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined by the Secretary of Labor, after notification by such employer or otherwise, to be a bona fide offer of employment; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for the purposes of determination of the amount of its benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"TRANSFER OF FUNDS FOR ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS"

"Sec. 449. The Secretary shall, pursuant to and to the extent provided by agreement with the Secretary of Labor, pay to the Secretary of Labor amounts which he estimates would be paid as family assistance benefits under this part to individuals participating in public or private employer compensated on-the-job training under a program of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating in such training."
Such amounts shall be available to pay the costs of such programs.

"PART E—STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

"PAYMENTS UNDER TITLES IV, V, XVI, AND XIX CONDITIONED ON SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 451. In order for a State to be eligible for payments pursuant to title V, XVI, or XIX or, part A or B of this title, with respect to expenditures for any quarter beginning on or after the date this part becomes effective with respect to such State, it must have in effect an agreement with the Secretary under which it will make supplementary payments, as provided in this part, to any family other than a family in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed.

"AMOUNT OF SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

"SEC. 452. (a) Eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments under the agreement with any State under this part shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be determined by application of the provisions of, and rules and regulations under, sections 442 (a) (2) and (d), 443, 444, 445, 446 (to the extent the Secretary deems appropriate), 447, and 448, and by application of the standard for determining need under the plan of such State as in effect for July 1969 and complying with the requirements for approval under part A as in effect on such date (but subject to such maximums and percentage reductions as were imposed under such plan on the amount of aid paid and, then, with the resulting amount of the supplementary payment to any individual further reduced by the family assistance benefit payable under part D with respect to him).

"(b) In applying the provisions of section 443 for purposes of supplementary payments pursuant to an agreement under this part—

tween (I) the total of the expenditures for such fiscal year under its plan approved under title XVI as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which would have been in-

plan approved thereunder and in effect for July 1969,
plus so much of the rest of such expenditures as are required (as determined by the Secretary) by reason of the amendments to such title made by the Family Assi stance Act of 1969 and (II) the total of the amounts determined under section 1604 for such State with re-

in intermediate care facilities referred to in section 1121, expenditures for repairs to homes referred to in section

the plans of such State approved under titles I, IV (part

to the enactment of this part if they had continued in effect during such year and if they had included (if they did not already do so) payments to dependent children of unemployed fathers authorized by section 407 (as in effect on July 1, 1969), and (ii) the total of the amounts which would have been determined under sections 3, 403, 1003, 1403, and 1603, or under section 1118, of such State with respect to such expenditures for such year.

The Secretary may prescribe methods for determining the amounts referred to in clause (B) on the basis of estimates and trends in expenditures and other experience of the State for prior years.

In any such case, the agreement shall also provide for payment by the State to the Secretary of an amount equal to the supplementary payments the State would otherwise make under part E, less any payments which would be made to the State under section 453 (a), together with one-half of the additional cost of the Secretary involved in carry-out such agreement, other than the cost of making the payments.

"(b) The Secretary may also enter into an agreement with any State under which such State will make, on behalf of the Secretary, the family assistance benefit payments provided for under part D with respect to all or specified families in the State who are eligible for such benefits or will perform such other functions in connection with the administration of part D as may be agreed upon. "PURPOSE"

"Sec. 430. The purpose of this part is to authorize provision, for individuals who are members of a family receiving benefits under part D or supplementary payments pursuant to part E, of manpower services, training, employment, and child care and related services necessary to train such individuals, prepare them for employment, and otherwise assist them in securing and retaining regular employment and having the opportunity for advancement in employment, to the end that needy families with children will be restored to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in their communities."
"OPERATION OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMS

"Sec. 431. (a) The Secretary of Labor (hereinafter in this part referred to as the ‘Secretary’) shall, for each person registered pursuant to part D, in accordance with priorities prescribed by him, develop or assure the development of an advancement.

"(b) The Secretary shall, in accordance with the provi-

State for persons registered pursuant to part D or receiving

"ALLOWANCES FOR INDIVIDUALS UNDERGOING TRAINING"

"SEC. 432. (a) (1) The Secretary shall pay to each individual who is a member of a family and is participating in manpower training under this part an incentive allowance of $30 per month. "(2) The Secretary shall, in accordance with regulations, also pay, to any member of a family participating in manpower training under this part, allowances for transportation and other costs to him directly related to his participa-

"(b) Such allowances shall be in lieu of allowances provided for participants in manpower training programs under any other Act.

"(c) Subsection (a) shall not apply to any member of a family who is participating in a program of the Secretary providing public or private employer compensated on-the-job training.

"DENIAL OF ALLOWANCES FOR REFUSAL TO UNDERGO determines that an individual who is a member of a family and has been required to register under part D for manpowe:

training or employment has, without good cause, ceased to participate in manpower training under this part, no allow-

"(b) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to any individual with respect to whom such a determination has been made.

"(c) Final determinations of the Secretary after such hearings shall be subject to judicial review as provided by section 205(g) for final determinations under title II, and the provisions of sections 205(a), (d), (e), and (f), 206, and 207 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply to title II.

"UPTILIZATION OF OTHER PROGRAMS

"Sec. 434. In providing the manpower training and employment services and opportunities required by this part the Secretary, to the maximum extent feasible, shall assure that such services and opportunities are provided in such manner, through such means, and using all authority available to him under any other Act (and subject to all duties and responsibilities thereunder) as will further the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive manpower training program involving all sectors of the economy and all levels of government and as will make maximum use of existing manpower and manpower related programs and agencies. To such end the Secretary may use the funds appropriated to him under this part to provide the programs required by this part through such other Act, to the same extent and under the same conditions as if appropriated under such other Act and in making use of the programs of other Federal,
State, or local agencies, public or private, the Secretary may reimburse such agencies for services rendered to persons under this part to the extent such services and opportunities are not otherwise available on a nonreimbursable basis.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS"

"Sec. 435. The Secretary may issue such rules and regulations as he finds necessary to carry out the purposes of this part: Provided, That in developing policies and programs for manpower services, training, and employment, the Secretary shall first obtain the concurrence of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with regard to such policies and programs which are under the usual and traditional authority of the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (including basic education, institutional training, health, child care and other supportive services, new careers and job restructuring in the health, education, and welfare professions, and work-study programs), and shall consult with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare with regard to all such other policies and programs.

"APPROPRIATIONS"

"Sec. 436. There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary for each fiscal year a sum sufficient for carrying out the purposes of this part (other than section 437), including payment of not to exceed (except in such cases as the Secretary may determine) 90 per centum of the cost of manpower services, training, and employment and opportunities provided for individuals registered pursuant to section 447. The Secretary of Labor shall establish criteria to achieve an equitable apportionment among the States of Federal expenditures for carrying out the programs authorized by section 431. In developing these criteria the Secretary shall consider the number of registrations under section 447 and other relevant factors.

"CHILD CARE AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES"

"Sec. 437. (a) There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organization, for not to exceed (except in such cases as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may determine) 90 per centum of the cost of projects for the provision of child care and related services, including necessary alteration, remodeling, and renovation of facilities, which may be necessary or appropriate in order to better enable an individual who has been registered pursuant to part D or is receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part or to enable a member of a family, which is or has been (within such period of time as the Secretary may prescribe) eligible for benefits under such part D or payments pursuant to such part E, to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part; or, with respect to the period prior to the date when part D becomes effective for a State, to better enable an individual receiving aid to families with dependent children, or whose needs are taken into account in determining the need of any one claiming or receiving such aid, to participate in manpower training or employment.

"(b) Such sums shall also be available to enable the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organization for evaluation, training of personnel, technical assistance or research or demonstration projects to determine more effective methods or providing any such care and other services.

"(c) To the extent permitted by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, the non-Federal share of the cost of any such project may be provided in the form of services or facilities.

"(d) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may provide, in any case in which a family is able to pay for part or all of the cost of day care or other services provided under a project assisted under this section, for payment by the family of such fees for the care or services as may be reasonable in the light of such ability.

"ADVANCE FUNDING

"SEC. 438. (a) For the purpose of affording adequate notice of funding available under this part, appropriations for grants, contracts, or other payments with respect to individuals registered pursuant to section 447 are authorized to be included in the appropriation Act for the fiscal year preceeding the fiscal year for which they are available for obligation.

"(b) In order to effect a transition to the advance funding method of timing appropriation action, the amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply notwithstanding that its initial application will result in enactment in the same year (whether in the same appropriation Act or otherwise) of two separate appropriations, one for the then current fiscal year and one for the succeeding fiscal year.

"EVALUATION AND RESEARCH; REPORT TO CONGRESS

"SEC. 439. (a) The Secretary shall (jointly with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare) provide for the continuing evaluation of the manpower training and em-effectiveness in achieving stated goals and their impact on other related programs. The Secretary may conduct research regarding, and demonstrations of, ways to improve the efficiency of the manpower training and employment programs so provided and may also conduct demonstrations of improved training techniques for upgrading the skills of the working poor. The Secretary may, for these purposes, contract for independent evaluations of and research regarding such programs or individual projects under such programs, and establish a data collection, processing, and retrieval system.

"(b) The Secretary shall report to the Congress on or before the end of each fiscal year (with the first such report being made on or before the July 1 following the first full year after the date on which part D becomes effective with respect to any States) on the manpower training and employment programs provided under this part."

and other services to help such individuals attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, there are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year sums sufficient to carry out these purposes. The sums made available under this section shall be used for making payments to States having State plans approved under section 1602.

"STATE PLANS FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICE TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED"

"Sec. 1602. (a) A State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled must—

“(2) provide such methods of administration as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis (but the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of individuals employed in accordance with such methods);

“(3) provide for the training and effective use of social service personnel in the administration of the plan, for the furnishing of technical assistance to units of State government and of political subdivisions which are fur-
finishing financial assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled, and for the development through research or demonstration projects of new or improved methods of furnishing assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled;

“(4) provide for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff (with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of recipients and other persons of low income as community service aides) in the administration of the plan and for the use of non-paid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants and recipients and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

“(5) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for aid under the plan shall have opportunity to do so and that such aid shall be furnished with reasonable promptness with respect to all eligible individuals;

“(6) provide for the use of a simplified statement, conforming to standards prescribed by the Secretary, to establish eligibility, and for adequate and effective methods of verification of eligibility of applicants and recipients through the use, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, of sampling and other scientific techniques;
“(7) provide that, except to the extent permitted by the Secretary with respect to services, the State plan shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and, if administered by them, be mandatory upon them;

“(8) provide for financial participation by the State;

“(9) provide that, in determining whether an individual is blind, there shall be an examination by a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual may select;

“(10) provide for granting an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency to any individual whose claim for aid under the plan is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness;

“(11) provide for periodic evaluation of the operations of the State plan, not less often than annually, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary, and the furnishing of annual reports of such evaluations to the Secretary together with any necessary modifications of the State plan resulting from such evaluations;

“(12) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

“(13) provide safeguards which restrict the use or the State makes available to applicants for or recipients utilization of all available services that are similar or related;

“(16) provide for periodic evaluation of the operation of the plan by persons interested in or expert in matters related to assistance and services to the aged, blind, and disabled, including persons who are recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled; and “(17) assure that, in administering the State plan and providing services thereunder, the State will observe priorities established by the Secretary and comply with such performance standards as the Secretary may, from time to time, establish.

Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if on January 1, 1962, and on the date on which a State submits (or submitted) its plan for approval under this title, the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title X was different from the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title I and the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title XIV, then the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of such plan approved under title X may be designated to administer or supervise the administration of the portion of the State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which relates to blind individuals and a separate State agency may be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of the rest of such plan; and in such case the part of the plan which each such agency administers, or the administration of which each such agency supervises, shall be regarded as a separate plan for purposes of this title.
“(b) The Secretary shall approve any plan which fulfills the conditions specified in subsection (a) and in section 1603, except that he shall not approve any plan which imposes, as a condition of eligibility for aid under the plan—

“(1) an age requirement of more than sixty-five years;

“(2) any residency requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State;

“(3) any citizen requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States;

“(4) any disability or age requirement which excludes any persons under a severe disability, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, who are eighteen years of age or older; or

In the case of any State to which the provisions of section 344 of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1950 were applicable on January 1, 1962, and to which the sentence of section 1002 (b) following paragraph (2) thereof is applicable on the date on which its State plan was or is submitted for approval under this title, the Secretary shall approve the plan of such State for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled for purposes of this title, even though it does not meet the requirements of section 1603 (a) if it meets all other requirements of this title for an approved plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled; but payments to the State under this title shall be made, in the case of any such plan, only with respect to expenditures thereunder which would be included as expenditures for the purposes of this title under a plan approved under this section without regard to the provisions of this sentence.

"DETERMINATION OF NEED"

"Sec. 1603. (a) A State plan must provide that, in determining the need for aid under the plan, the State agency shall take into consideration any other income or resources of the individual claiming such aid as well as any expenses reasonably attributable to the earning of any such income; except that, in making such determination with respect to any individual—

"(1) the State agency shall not consider as resources (A) the home, household goods, and personal effects of the individual, (B) other personal or real property, the total value of which does not exceed $1,500, or (C) other property which as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion, but shall apply the provisions of section 442 (e) and regulations thereunder;
"(2) the State agency shall not consider the financial responsibility of any individual for any applicant or recipient unless the applicant or recipient is the individual's spouse, or the individual's child who is under the age of twenty-one or is blind or severely disabled;

"(3) if such individual is blind, the State agency (A) shall disregard the first $85 per month of earned income plus one-half of earned income in excess of $85 per month, and (B) shall, for a period not in excess of twelve months, and may, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, disregard such additional amounts of other income and resources, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of such plan;

"(4) if the individual is not blind but is severely disabled, the State agency may disregard (A) not more than the first $20 of the first $80 per month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder thereof and (B) such additional amounts of other income and resources, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of the plan, but only with respect to the part or parts of such period during substantially all of which he is undergoing vocational rehabilitation;

“(5) if such individual has attained age sixty-five and is neither blind nor severely disabled, the State agency may disregard not more than the first $20 of the first $80 per month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder thereof.

“(b) A State plan must also provide that—

“(1) each eligible individual, other than one who is a patient in a medical institution or is receiving institutional service in an intermediate care facility to which section 1121 applies, shall receive financial assistance in such amount as, when added to his income which is not disregarded pursuant to subsection (a), will provide a minimum of $90 per month.

“(2) the standard of need applied for determining eligibility for and amount of aid for the aged, blind, and disabled shall not be lower than (A) the standard applied for this purpose under the State plan (approved under this title) as in effect on the date of enactment of part D of title IV of this Act, or (B) if there was no such plan in effect for such State on such date, the standard of need which was applicable under—

“(i) the State plan which was in effect on such
date and was approved under title I, in the case of any individual who is sixty-five years of age or older,

"(ii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title X, in the case of an individual who is blind, or

except that if two or more of clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) are applicable to an individual, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than the higher (or highest) of the standards under the applicable plans, and except that if none of such clauses is applicable to individuals, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than higher of the standards under the State plans approved under title I, X, or XIV, which was in effect on such date, and

"(3) no aid will be furnished to any individual under the State plan for any period with respect to which he is considered a member of a family receiving family assistance benefits under part D of title IV or training allowances under part C thereof for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits or allowances (but this paragraph shall not prevent payments with respect to other members of his family pursuant to title IV of this Act).

“(4) no lien will be imposed against the property of any individual or his estate on account of aid paid to him under the plan (except pursuant to the judgment of a court on account of benefits incorrectly paid to such individual), and that there will be no adjustment or any recovery of aid correctly paid to him under the plan.

“(c) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 464.

“PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

“SEC. 1604. From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall pay to each State which has a plan approved under this title, for each calendar quarter, an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each month of such quarter as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the State plan—

“(1) 100 per centum of such expenditures, not counting so much of any expenditures as exceeds the product of $50 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus

“(2) 50 per centum of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under paragraph (1), not counting so much of any
expenditures with respect to such month as exceeds the product of $65 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus

“(3) 25 per centum of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under paragraph (2), not counting so much of any expenditures with respect to such month as exceeds the product of the amount which, as determined by the Secretary, is the maximum permissible level of assistance per person in which the Federal Government will participate financially, multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month.

In the case of any individual in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, the maximum permissible level of assistance under paragraph (3) may be lower than in the case of individuals in the other States. See also, section 464 for other special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

"ALTERNATE PROVISION FOR DIRECT FEDERAL PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS"

"SEC. 1605. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with a State under which he will, on behalf of the State, pay aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State under the State’s plan approved under this title"
and perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon. In such case payments shall not be made as provided in section 1604 and the agreement shall also provide for payment to the Secretary by the State of its share of such aid, together with one-half of the additional cost to the Secretary involved in carrying out the agreement, other than the cost of making the payments.

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS"

"Sec. 1606. Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of payment has been made to any person as a direct Federal payment pursuant to section 1605, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the overpaid individual or by recovery from him or his estate or payment to him. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with a view to avoiding penalizing individuals who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration."
"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS"

"Sec. 1607. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under this title, finds—

"(2) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision; the Secretary shall notify such State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State or individuals within the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no such further payments to the State or individuals in the State under this title (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure).

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION"

"Sec. 1608. (a) If the State plan of a State approved under section 1602 provides that the State agency will make available to applicants for or recipients of aid to the aged,
blind, and disabled under the State plan at least those services to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care which are prescribed by the Secretary, such State shall qualify for payments for services under subsection (b)
of this section.

"(b) In the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 1602 meets the requirements of subsection (a), the Secretary shall pay to the State from the sums appropriated therefor an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each quarter, as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

"(1) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(A) services which are prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) and are provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients
of aid under the plan to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, or

"(B) other services, specified by the Secretary
as likely to prevent or reduce dependency, so provided to the applicants or recipients of aid, or

"(C) any of the services prescribed pursuant to subsection (a), and any of the services specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, which the Secretary may specify as appropriate for individuals who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe, have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, if such services are requested by the individuals and are provided to them in accordance with subsection (c), or

"(D) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision; plus

"(2) one-half of so much of such expenditures (not included under paragraph (1)) as are for services provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, and to individuals requesting such services who (within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe) have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of such aid; plus

"(3) one-half of the remainder of such expenditures.

'(c) The services referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall, except to the extent specified by the Secretary, include only—

"(1) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision (but no funds authorized under this title shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (A) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under that Act, or (B) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under that Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under paragraph (2), if provided by such staff), and

"(2) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of that State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies).

Services described in clause (B) of paragraph (1) may be provided only pursuant to agreement with the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

"(d) The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which paragraph (1) of subsection (b) applies and the portion thereof to which paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary.

"(e) In the case of any State whose plan approved under section 1602 does not meet the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, there shall be paid to the State, in lieu of the amount provided for under subsection (b), an amount equal to one-half the total of the sums expended during each quarter as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, including services referred to in subsections (b) and (c) and provided in accordance with the provisions of those subsections.

"(f) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of subsection
(a), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan, that—

"(1) the provision no longer complies with the requirements of subsection (a), or

(2) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such provision, the Secretary shall notify the State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State under subsection (b) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied, no such further payments with respect to the administration of and services under the State plan shall be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under subsection (e) instead of subsection (b).

"Sec. 1609. (a) (1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under subsections 1604 and 1608 for that quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in that quarter in accordance with the provisions of sections 1604 and 1608, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in that quarter, and, if such amount is less than the State's proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, and (B) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then pay in such installments as he may determine, the amount so estimated, reduced or increased to the extent of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made under this section to the State for any prior quarter and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under this subsection.

"(b) The pro rata share to which the United States is equitably entitled, as determined by the Secretary, of the net amount recovered during any quarter by a State or political subdivision thereof with respect to aid furnished under the State plan, but excluding any amount of such aid recovered from the estate of a deceased recipient which is not in excess of the amount expended by the State or any political subdivision thereof for the funeral expenses of the deceased, shall be considered an overpayment to be adjusted under subsection (a) (2).

"(c) Upon the making of any estimate by the Secretary under this subsection, any appropriations available for payments under this section shall be deemed obligated.

"DEFINITION"

"Sec. 1610. For purposes of this title, the term 'aid to the aged, blind, and disabled' means money payments to needy individuals who are 65 years of age or older, are blind, or are severely disabled, but such term does not include—

"(1) any such payments to any individual who is an inmate of a public institution (except as a patient in a medical institution) ; or

Such term also includes payments which are not included within the meaning of such term under the preceding sentence, but which would be so included except that they are made on behalf of such a needy individual to another individual who (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such needy individual, but only with respect to a State whose State plan approved under section 1602 includes provision for—

"(A) determination by the State agency that the needy individual has, by reason of his physical or mental condition, such inability to manage funds that making payments to him would be contrary to his welfare and, therefore, it is necessary to provide such aid through payments described in this sentence;

"(B) making such payments only in cases in which the payment will, under the rules otherwise applicable under the State plan for determining need and the amount of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled to be paid (and in conjunction with other income and resources), meet all the need of the individuals with respect to whom such payments are made;

"(C) undertaking and continuing special efforts to protect the welfare of such individuals and to improve, to the extent possible, his capacity of self-care and to manage funds;

"(D) periodic review by the State agency of the determination under clause (A) to ascertain whether conditions justifying such determination still exist, with provision for termination of the payments if they do not and for seeking judicial appointment of a guardian, or other legal representative, as described in section 1111, if and when it appears that such action will best serve the interests of the needy individual; and

"(E) opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency on the determination referred to in clause (A) for any individual with respect to whom it is made.
Whether an individual is blind or severely disabled, shall be determined for purposes of this title in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary."

by this Act shall not be denied approval thereunder, with respect to the period ending with the first July 1 which

A BILL

To authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes.

By Mr. Byrnes of Wisconsin, Mr. Gerald R. Ford, Mr. Arends, Mr. Anderson of Illinois, Mr. Cramer, Mr. Poff, Mr. Rhodes, Mr. Taft, Mr. Bob Wilson, Mr. Smith of California, Mr. Utte, Mr. Schnorell, Mr. Byrd of Virginia, Mr. Bush, Mr. Morton, and Mr. Chamberlain

OCTOBER 3, 1969
Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means
FAMILY ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1969

[Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.]

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I have today introduced H.R. 14173—the Family Assistance Act of 1969—which incorporates the administration's recommendations for comprehensive reform of our welfare laws. I will read at the end of my remarks an analysis of the bill.

Our present welfare system is a failure—marked by inequities and abuses, encouraging family breakups, and perpetuating dependence on welfare payments. The President's proposal constitutes the first major attempt to overhaul our Federal-State welfare system during the 30-year history of the program. The need to find workable solutions to the problems we face in this field must be given a high priority.

The growing costs of this welfare system to our society—both human and financial—require that new initiatives be developed to insure that all citizens have the opportunity and responsibility to participate in our economy. The President's proposal embraces new programs that are intended to break the cyclical heritage of poverty and dependency that has become an all too prevalent characteristic of our Federal-State-local welfare system.

The new approach incorporated in this bill is deserving of the most careful consideration by the Ways and Means Committee in connection with the hearings on welfare that will begin in the latter part of October.

The analysis of the bill follows:

Section 101 of the bill adds new parts D, E, and F to title IV of the Social Security Act, establishing a new Family Assistance Plan providing for payment of family assistance benefits to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and supplementary payments by the States.

Eligibility and amount

The new part D of title IV of the Social Security Act authorizes benefits to families with children payable at the rate of $500 per year for each of the first two members of a family plus $300 for each additional member.

The family assistance benefit would be reduced by non-excludable income, so that families with more non-excludable income than their benefit ($1,050 for a family of four) would not be eligible for any benefits. A family with more than $1,500 in resources, other than the home, would not be eligible.

In determining income the following would be excluded (subject, in some cases, to limitations by the Secretary): (1) All income of a student; (2) Inconsequential or infrequent or irregular income; (3) Income needed to offset necessary child care costs while in training or working; (4) Earned income of the family at the rate of $720 per year plus ½ the remainder; (5) Food stamps and other public assistance or private charity; (6) Special training incentives and allowances; (7) The tuition portion of scholarships and fellowships; (8) Home produced and consumed produce; (9) One half of other unearned income.

Veterans pensions, farm price supports, and soil bank payments would not be excludable income to the extent and would, therefore, result in reduction of benefits on a dollar for dollar basis.

Eligibility for and amount of benefits would be determined quarterly on the basis of estimates of income for the quarter, made in the light of the preceding period's income as modified by changes in circumstances and conditions.

Definition of family and child

To qualify for Family Assistance Plan benefits a family must consist of two or more related individuals living in their own home and residing in the United States and one of them must be an unmarried child (i.e., under the age of 18, or under the age of 21 and regularly attending school).

Payment of benefits

Payment may be made to any one or more members of the family. The Secretary would prescribe regulations regarding the filing of applications and supplying of data to determine eligibility of a family and the amounts for which the family is eligible. Beneficiaries would be required to report events or changes of circumstances affecting eligibility or the amount of benefits. When reports by beneficiaries are delayed too long or are too inaccurate, part or all of the received benefit payments could be treated as recoverable overpayments.

Registration for work and referral for training

Eligible adult family members would be required to register with public employment officers for manpower services and training or employment unless they belong to specified exempted groups. However, a person in an exempted group may register if he wishes.

The exceptions are: (1) ill, incapacitated, or aged persons; (2) the caretaker relative (usually the mother) of a child under 6; (3) the mother or other female caretaker of the child if an adult male (usually the father) who has been reported as the caretaker for an ill household member; and (4) full-time workers.

Where the individual is disabled, referral for rehabilitation services would be made.

Denial of benefits

Family Assistance benefits would be denied with respect to any member of a family who refuses without good cause to register or to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment. In case of participation in manpower services, training, or employment, an adult member in the only adult, he would be included as a family member but only for purposes of determining the remaining portion of the Family Assistance benefit would be paid to an interested person outside the family.

The Secretary would transfer to the Department of Labor funds which would otherwise be paid to families participating in employment-compensated training for suitable manpower services if they were not participating. These funds would be available to pay the training costs involved.

STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

Required supplementation

The individual States would have to agree to supplement the family assistance benefits under the new part E of title IV of the Social Security Act wherever the family assistance benefit level is below the previously existing Aid to Families With Dependent Children payment level. The supplementation is a condition which the State must meet in order to continue to receive Federal payments with respect to health and crippled children's services (title V), and with respect to their State plans for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled (title XVI), medical assistance (title XIX), and services to needy families with children (part of title IV). State "supplementation" would be required to families eligible for family assistance benefits other than families where parents are present, neither is incapacitated, or the father is not employed. The States would thus be required to supplement in the case of individuals eligible under the old AFDC and AFDC-UP provisions; they would not have to supplement in case of the working poor.

Amount of supplementation

Except as indicated below and, except for use of the State standard of need and payment, eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments would be determined by the State and approved by the Secretary.

In applying the family assistance rules to the determination of eligibility under the supplementary payment program—

1. The case of earned income of the family to the extent that the earnings are below the disregard amount and the disregarding of income under the supplemental payment program—

   (1) In the case of earned income of the family to the extent that the earnings are below the disregard amount, the family would be permitted to reduce its supplementary payment by 16% cents for every dollar of earnings over the range of earnings between $720 per year and the cutoff point for family assistance (i.e., $3,920 for a family of four), and would further make an additional payment by an amount equal to not more than 80 cents for every dollar of earnings beyond the Family Assistance income level. This supplement would not be paid if the family refuses without good cause to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment.

Requirements for agreements

Some of the State plan requirements now applicable in the case of Aid to Families with Children would be made applicable to the agreement. These include the requirements pertaining to:

1. Statewideness;
2. Administration by a single State agency;
3. Fair hearing to dissatisfied claimants;
4. Methods of administration needed for proper and efficient operation, including provisions necessary to meet in order to continue to receive Federal payments with respect to health and crippled children's services (title V), and with respect to their State plans for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled (title XVI), medical assistance (title XIX), and services to needy families with children (part of title IV). State "supplementation" would be required to families eligible for family assistance benefits other than families where parents are present, neither is incapacitated, or the father is not employed. The States would thus be required to supplement in the case of individuals eligible under the old AFDC and AFDC-UP provisions; they would not have to supplement in case of the working poor.

2. In the case of unearned income, the same percentage reductions would apply, although the initial $720 exclusion would not apply.

Requirements for agreements

Some of the State plan requirements now applicable in the case of Aid to Families with Children would be made applicable to the agreement. These include the requirements pertaining to:

1. Statewideness;
2. Administration by a single State agency;
3. Fair hearing to dissatisfied claimants;
4. Methods of administration needed for proper and efficient operation, including provisions necessary to meet in order to continue to receive Federal payments with respect to health and crippled children's services (title V), and with respect to their State plans for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled (title XVI), medical assistance (title XIX), and services to needy families with children (part of title IV). State "supplementation" would be required to families eligible for family assistance benefits other than families where parents are present, neither is incapacitated, or the father is not employed. The States would thus be required to supplement in the case of individuals eligible under the old AFDC and AFDC-UP provisions; they would not have to supplement in case of the working poor.

Reporting to Secretary as required;
(6) Confidentiality of information relating to applicants and recipients;
(7) Opportunity to apply for and prompt furnishing of supplementary payments.

Payments to States

A State agrees that the supplementary payments would be guaranteed that its expenditures for the first five full fiscal years after enactment would be no more than 90 per cent of the amount of expenditures for the new Family Assistance Plan and amendments not been enacted. This would be accomplished by Federal payment to each State, for each year, of the excess of—

(1) The total of its supplementary payment for the year plus the State share of its expenditures for under its existing State plan approved under title XVI plus the additional expenditures required by the new title VI.

(2) Ninety percent of the State share of what its expenditures would have been in the form of maintenance payments for such year if the State's approved plan under titles I, IV, A, X, XIV, and XVI had continued in effect (assuming in the case of the payment for transportation allowances, the per capita income of these areas is below that of a fifteen percent of the per capita income of the State);

On the other hand, any State spending less than the amounts set forth in clause (2) in supplementary payments and its title XVI plan would be required to pay the amount of the deficiency to the Secretary. A State would also receive $1 of its cost of administration under its agreement.

ADMINISTRATION

Appointments of Title IV

Sufficient latitude is provided to deal with the individual administrative characteristics of the States. Provision is made under which the States may accept or reject the maintenance and disbursement of the supplementary payments on behalf of the Secretary. Similarly the States are authorized to administer portions of the family assistance plan on behalf of the Secretary, with respect to all or specified families in the State.

Evaluation, research, training

The Secretary would make an annual report to Congress on the new Family Assistance Plan, including an evaluation of its operation. The States also have authority to make periodic evaluations and disburse the supplementary payments on behalf of the Secretary. Similarly the States can agree to administer portions of the family assistance plan on behalf of the Secretary, with respect to all or specified families in the State.

Research into and demonstrations of better ways of carrying out the purposes of the new Plan, as well as technical assistance to the States in training of their personnel for the purposes of this Act, in which States who are involved in training supplementary payments, would also be authorized.

Special provisions for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

There are special provisions for these areas under which the amount of family assistance benefits, the $720 of earned income to be disregarded, and several other amounts under the Family Assistance Plan and the new title XVI of the Social Security Act (add to the State share of the per capita income) would be reduced to the extent that the per capita income of these areas is below that of that one of the 50 States which had the lowest per capita income.

TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, AND DAY CARE PROGRAMS

Section 102 of the Administration bill would replace part C of title IV of the Social Security Act in its entirety.

Purpose

The purpose of revised part C is to provide manpower services, training, and employment, and child care and related services for those persons who are in need of the new Family Assistance Plan benefits, and in part C approved State supplementary payments (new part E) to them secure or retain employment or advancement in employment.

The intent is to do this in a manner which will restore families, children, and adults to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in the community.

Operation

The Secretary of Labor is required to develop an employment program for each individual required to register under the new part D or receiving supplementary payments pursuant to sections 421 and 422.

The plan would to the extent required to provide the manpower services, training, and employment to be provided and needed to enable the individual to become self-supporting or attain advancement in employment.

Allowances

The Secretary of Labor would pay an incentive training allowance of $30 per month to each member of a family participating in manpower training. Where training allowances for a family under another program would be larger than their benefits under the Family Assistance Plan and supplementary payments, the incentive allowances for the family would be reduced to the difference, or $30 per member, whichever is larger.

Allowances for transportation and other expenses would also be authorized.

These incentive and other allowances would be in lieu of allowances under other manpower training programs. Allowances would not be payable to individuals participating in employer compensated on-the-job training.

Disburse the supplementary payments.

Allowances would not be payable to an individual who refuses to accept manpower training, without good cause. The individual would receive reasonable notice and have an opportunity for a hearing if dissatisfied with the denial.

Utilization of other programs

In order to avoid the creation of duplicative programs of authorities under other acts be made by the Secretary of Labor in providing the manpower training and related services under the revised part C, but subject to all duties and responsibilities under such other programs. Part C appropriations could be used to pay the cost of services provided by other programs and to reimburse other public agencies for services they provide to persons under part C. The emphasis is on an integrated and comprehensive manpower training program involving all sectors of the economy and beginning at early levels of education, as appropriate in the light of the elimination of the cash assistance programs.

Appropriations and administration

Appropriations to the Secretary of Labor would be authorized for carrying out the revised part C, including payment of up to 90 percent of the cost of training and employment services provided individuals registered under the Family Assistance Plan. The Secretary would seek to achieve equitable geographical distribution of these services.

In developing policies and programs for manpower services, training and employment and child care and related services for persons registered under the Family Assistance Plan, the Secretary of Labor would be required to give due consideration to programs provided under the National Health Act, and Welfare with regard to all programs under the usual and traditional authority of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Child care and support services

Sect. 402 of the Social Security Act which provides, except as specified in the Act, any public or private agency or organization.

The provisions on payments to States for experimental child care programs under part C are virtually the same as existing law, with the exception of the providing the cash assistance services, included under existing law, are also continued.

Requirements for State plans

The revised part A provides for continuation of the present program of services for needy families. Foster care for children and emergency assistance included under existing law, are also continued.

The definitions of "family services" and "emergency assistance to needy families with children" have not been substantially changed.

The definitions of "dependent child," "aid to families with dependent children," and "relative with whom any dependent child is living," have been replaced (as no longer applicable by definition) of

(1) "child"—which refers to the definition in the new part D, establishing the Family Assistance Plan, the new part D substitutes a requirement that the child is a member of a family (as defined in the new part D) and living together, with particular attention to the kinds of services involved.

(2) "needy families with children"—this being defined as families receiving the cash assistance benefits under the new part D, if they are also receiving State supplementary payments (new part E) to them secure or retain employment or advancement in employment. The cost of these services could include alteration, remodeling, and renovation of facilities.

These provisions (unlike other provisions of the bill) would become effective on enactment of the bill.

Advance funding

To afford adequate notice of available funds, appropriations for one year to pay the cost of the program during the next year would be authorized.

Evaluation and research

A continuing evaluation of the program under part C and research for improving it are authorized.

Annual report and advisory council

The Secretary of Labor is required to report annually to Congress on the manpower training and related services.

ELIMINATION OF PRESENT PROVISIONS ON CASH ASSISTANCE FOR FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

Section 103 of the bill revises part A of title IV of the Social Security Act which provides for grants and contracts for up to 90 percent of the cost of services for needy families with children. The new part A is called Services to Needy Families with Children, reflecting the elimination of the provisions on cash assistance. The new cash assistance is no longer necessary because of the Family Assistance Plan in the new part D of title IV.

The revised part A provides for continuation of the present program of services for needy families. Foster care for children and emergency assistance included under existing law, are also continued.

The provisions on payments to States for experimental child care programs under part C are virtually the same as existing law, with the exception of the providing the cash assistance services, included under existing law, are also continued.
Assistance by Internal Revenue Service in locating parents

The provision on this subject remains the same as that of the much for the Internal Revenue Service to locate missing parents in certain cases.

TITLE II—ASSISTANCE TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

This title revises the current title XVI of the Social Security Act and sets forth the revised title XVI in its entirety. One of the major changes is the removal of the provisions relating to medical assistance for the aged, which, under existing law, would terminate at the end of calendar 1969. All medical assistance for which the Federal government shares the costs will now be provided under approved title XIX State plans.

Requirements for State plans

Few changes are made in this section (sec. 1652), aside from the provisions relating to medical assistance for the aged. The section retains, without substantial change, the requirements relating to:

(1) Certification by a single State agency (except where a separate agency is permitted for the blind as under existing law);
(2) Financial participation by the State;
(3) Statewideness;
(4) Opportunity for fair hearing; and
(5) Methods of administration, including personnel standards, training, and effective use of subprofessional staff;

The provision relating to the Secretary as required;

(7) Confidentiality of information relating to recipients;

The provision relating to application and furnishing of assistance with reasonable promptness;

Establishment and maintenance by the State of standards for institutions in which there are individuals receiving aid;

(10) Description of services provided for self-care, by the Secretary as required;

(11) Determination of blindness by an ophthalmologist or an optometrist.

The provision on inclusion of reasonable standards for determining eligibility and amount of assistance which must be replaced by one requiring a minimum benefit of $90 per month, less any other income, and by another requiring that the standard of need not be lower than the standard applied under the State plan approved under the existing title XVIII of the Social Security Act, which provided for assistance under title XVIII of the Social Security Act, that is, $30 per month.

The provision that the Secretary to the extent possible, shall develop a system of verification thereof. Finally, there are new requirements for periodic evaluation of the State plan at least annually, with reports being submitted to the Secretary by the States together with any necessary modifications of the State plan; for establishment of advisory councils; for the submission of State plans for certification and for observing priorities and performance standards set by the Secretary in the administration of the State plan and in providing services thereunder.

The present prohibitions against any age requirement of more than 65 years and against any citizenship requirement excluding U.S. citizens would be continued.

In place of the present provision on residency, there is a new one which prohibits any residency requirement excluding any resident of the State. There would be a new prohibition against any disability or age requirement which would require the presence of an able bodied individual aged 18 or older, or any blindness or age requirement which excludes any person who is blind (determined under criteria by the Secretary of health, education, and welfare).

PAYMENTS

In place of the present provision on the Federal share of expenditures under the approved State plan there is a new formula which provides for payment as follows with respect to expenditures under State plans for all persons in receipt of assistance approved under the new title XVI:

With respect to cash assistance, the Federal Government will pay (1) 100 per cent of the first $250 of each payment, plus (2) 50 per cent of the next $15 per recipient, plus (3) 25 per cent of the balance of the payment per recipient which does not exceed the maximum permissible level of assistance per person by the Secretary (which may be lower in the case of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam than for other jurisdictions).

With respect to services for which expenditures are made under the approved State plan, the Federal Government would pay the same percentages as are provided under existing law, that is, 75 per cent in the case of certain specified services and training of persons in the State which are not covered by the remainder of the cost of administration of the State plan.

Payment by Federal Government to individuals

The revised title XVI includes authority for the Secretary to enter into agreements with any State under which the Secretary will make the payments of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State who are eligible therefor. In that case the State would reimburse the Federal Government for the State's share of these payments and for 1/2 the additional cost to the Secretary of carrying out the agreements other than the cost of making the payments themselves.

Definition

The new title XVI defines aid to the aged, blind, and disabled as money payments to needy individuals who are 65 or older or are blind or are severely disabled.

Transitional and related provisions

Title I, X, and XIV of the Social Security Act would be repealed.

Provision is made for making adjustments under the new title XVI on account of overpayments and underpayments under the existing provisions.

Provision is also made for extending the grace period during which they can be eligible for aid under title XVI without changing their tests of disability or blindness. The grace period would end for any State with the June 30 following the close of the first year of the fiscal year in which the State legislature begins after enactment of the bill.

FAMILY ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1970

MARCH 11, 1970.—Committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union and ordered to be printed

Mr. Mills, from the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following REPORT together with ADDITIONAL AND DISSenting VIEWS

[To accompany H.R. 16311]

The Committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred the bill (H.R. 16311) to amend the Social Security Act to provide a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training of members of such families, to improve the adult assistance programs, and to make other changes to improve the public assistance programs, having considered the same, report favorably thereon without amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

I. PRINCIPAL PURPOSES AND SCOPE OF THE BILL

President Nixon, in transmitting his recommendations on welfare reform to the Congress in October of 1969, declared—

The present welfare system has failed us—it has fostered family breakup, has provided very little help in many States and has even deepened dependency by all too often making it more attractive to go on welfare than to go to work.

I propose a new approach that will make it more attractive to go to work than to go on welfare, and will establish a nationwide minimum payment to dependent families with children.

The President listed the following effects of his proposal:

For the first time, all dependent families with children in America, regardless of where they live, would be assured of minimum standard payments based upon uniform and single eligibility standards.
For the first time, the more than 2 million families who make up the "working poor" would be helped toward self-sufficiency and away from future welfare dependency. For the first time, training and work opportunity with effective incentives would be given millions of families who would otherwise be locked into a welfare system for generations. For the first time, the Federal Government would make a strong contribution toward relieving the financial burden of welfare payments from State governments. For the first time, every dependent family in America would be encouraged to stay together, free from economic pressure to split apart.

The provisions of H.R. 16311, as reported by your committee are, with certain exceptions described in this report, essentially patterned after the proposals of the President.

The bill is intended to convert the existing program from one which results in people remaining in dependency to one which will encourage people to become independent and self-supporting through incentives to take training and enter employment.

Your committee's bill would make major improvements and reforms in the provisions of the Social Security Act relating to the programs which aid needy families with children, including coverage of the working poor; the programs which aid the aged, blind, and disabled; and the programs which provide manpower services, training, employment, and child care to welfare recipients.

FAMILY ASSISTANCE

First, the bill would make basic reforms in the program which furnishes assistance to needy families with children, remove inequities in treatment of the working poor and the nonworking poor, emphasize work incentives and work requirements, and improve and simplify administration of such public assistance, by providing—

1. A new basic Federal family assistance plan, with federally assisted State supplementation, for poor families with children in place of the present program of aid to families with dependent children, but including for the first time coverage of poor families regardless of the work status of the father (the States would not be required to supplement payments to the working poor);

2. Requirements that, as a prerequisite to receipt of benefits, every adult in the assisted families (including the adult already working) register at the employment office for work or training (except mothers with preschool children and persons who are ill or of advanced age), or sign up for vocational rehabilitation if handicapped.

3. Uniform, nation-wide, eligibility requirements and payment procedures, both for the basic Federal family assistance plan and the State supplementary payments;

4. Incentives for the States to make agreements with the Federal Government to administer supplementary payments programs; and

5. New provisions holding deserting parents responsible for Federal payments made to their families under the family assistance or State supplementary plans.
WORK AND TRAINING

Second, the bill improves the program of employment and training services and of other services (including child care) needed by recipients who are registered at employment offices by providing—

(1) A new program of manpower, training, and employment services to be administered by the Secretary of Labor through the State employment offices;

(2) A Federal program of full-cost grants and contracts for child care services to enable mothers who are required to register for training and employment (as well as those who register on a voluntary basis) to participate in work or training;

(3) A new system of providing services to support training or employment through agreements between the Federal Government and the States; and

(4) A more equitable, uniform, and effective system of incentive allowances and reimbursement of work expenses.

ADULT ASSISTANCE

Third, the bill would substantially improve the effectiveness of the adult assistance programs under the Social Security Act by providing—

(1) For combining the present categories for assistance to the aged, blind and disabled into one combined adult assistance program and for uniform requirements for such eligibility factors as the level and type of resources allowed and degree of disability or blindness;

(2) That the States assure that each aged, blind, or disabled adult will receive assistance sufficient to bring his total income up to $110 a month;

(3) Incentives for the States to enter into agreements for Federal administration of the combined program; and

(4) A simplified Federal matching formula which will result in generally more favorable Federal participation in the cost of the payments.

II. SUMMARY OF PRINCIPAL PROVISIONS

FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS

Each family with children whose nonexcludable income (for definition of excluded income see below) is less than the family benefit level—computed as $500 each for the first two members of the family and $300 for each additional member—would be eligible for a payment under the family assistance plan after meeting the registration for work or training and other requirements. The amount of the benefit would be the difference between these amounts and the non-excluded income. For example, a family of four with no income would be eligible for a family assistance payment of $1,600. Every needy family, both those now eligible under aid for families with dependent children (including those in families with unemployed fathers who are not covered because they are in a State which has not exercised the option to cover this group) and those not eligible because the father is working (the working poor) would be eligible.

In determining income for the purpose of establishing eligibility for and the amount of the family assistance payment, the following types and amounts of income would be excluded:

(1) All earnings of a child if regularly attending school;
(2) Infrequently or irregularly received amounts of earned or unearned income, but not more than $30 a quarter for each type;
(3) Earnings needed to pay for necessary child care;
(4) All earned income of adult members of the family at the rate of $720 per year plus one-half of the remainder;
(5) Food stamps and other public or private charity (not including veterans' pensions);
(6) The training allowance for those in training;
(7) The tuition part of scholarships and fellowships; and
(8) Homegrown and used produce.

A family with more than $1,500 in resources, other than the home, household goods, personal effects and property essential to the family's means of self-support would not be eligible for family assistance payments.

Eligibility would be computed on a quarterly basis; payments would generally be made on a monthly basis.

Parents who desert or abandon their families would be liable to the Federal Government for any Federal payments to their families under the family assistance plan and the Federal portion of the State supplementary payments (described later) or for the amount of a court support order if less. Such sums are to be collected directly or by withholding them from payments due the parents under any Federal program.

DEFINITIONS OF FAMILY AND CHILD

An eligible family must consist of two or more persons (related by blood, marriage, or adoption), living together in the United States, at least one of whom is a child who is not married to another family member and who is in the care of or dependent upon another member of the family. Appropriate State law would be applied in determining relationships. A parent or spouse of a parent who is temporarily absent from the place of residence, seeking or engaging in employment (including military service), would be considered as living in the place of residence. A "child" is an individual who is under age 18, or a full-time student under age 21.

REGISTRATION WITH PUBLIC EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

Each member of a family would be required to register for employment or training with a public employment office unless he or she is—
(1) unable to engage in work or training because of illness, disability, or age;
(2) a mother caring for a child under 6;
(3) the mother in cases in which the father registers;
(4) caring for an ill member of the household; or
(5) a child under 16 or under 21 if in school.

Any person who falls into one of these exempt categories could voluntarily register at the employment office.
Those who are unable to participate in work or training because of disability would be referred for vocational rehabilitation services.

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is required to provide (for as long as he deems appropriate) child care services where an individual is registered and participating in training and employment.

If an individual required to register refuses to do so without good cause, or refuses vocational rehabilitation services without good cause, he would not be taken into account (but his income would be counted) in determining the family benefit. In such a case, the family benefit may be paid to a person outside the family under a protective payment arrangement.

State Supplementation of Family Assistance Payment

Requirements for State Supplementation

Each State whose AFDC payment level in January 1970 is higher than the family assistance level must agree to supplement the family assistance payment (under the conditions specified in the bill) up to that level (except where otherwise provided by the bill) or up to the poverty level if that is lower, in order to be eligible for Federal funds under Medicaid and other welfare programs. Federal matching would be available, except for the working poor, at a rate of 30 percent. The matching maximum would be the poverty level now in effect, but brought up to date annually by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to reflect increased living costs.

The States would not have to supplement payments to the working poor. However, in addition to being required to supplement cases which would be eligible under their present programs as in effect in January 1970 the States would have to supplement those cases which would be eligible if the program had the same resources limitations as the family assistance plan ($1,500 except for home, household goods, and personal effects), the same definition of family and child, and the same excludable income provisions (other than those which disregard proportions of earned income). The States also would be required to supplement the incomes of families where the father is unemployed (which is now on an optional basis), or where the child is between age 18 and 21 and regularly attending school (now also on an optional basis).

Amount of Supplementary Payments

The States would be required to follow the rules that apply under the family assistance plan in computing payments except that special rules would apply in disregarding earned income for purposes of the supplementary payments.

The States would have to exclude the first $720 a year ($60 a month) of earned income, plus (1) one-third of the earnings between $720 and twice the amount of the family assistance payment which would be payable if the family had no income, plus (2) one-fifth of any earnings above that amount. The effect of the combined earnings exemptions under the State supplementation and under the family assistance plan is roughly the equivalent of present law which provides for excluding work expenses and disregarding the first $30 of monthly earnings plus one-third of earnings over that amount. For example, if the adults in a family of four had $1,200 in annual earned income the basic $1,600 family assistance payment would be reduced by one-half of the $480 remaining after $720 is deducted from $1,200. Thus, the family assistance payment would be reduced to $1,360 ($1,600 - $240). If the family lived in a State where the State payment (to a family of four with no income) in January 1970 was $2,400, the required States supplement payment would be figured as follows:

The family assistance payment—$1,360—plus the earned income not disregarded—two-thirds of the $480, or $320—is subtracted from the $2,400 figure. This results in a supplementary payment of $720. The total income of such a family would consist of $1,320 in family assistance payment, $720 in the State supplementary payment and $1,200 in earnings, for a total annual income of $3,280.

ADMINISTRATION

ADMINISTRATIVE ARRANGEMENTS

The bill provides for three alternative administrative arrangements. First, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare could make an arrangement with a State for the Federal Government to administer both the family assistance plan and the State supplementary program. Under this arrangement the Federal Government would pay all administrative costs. Second, the Secretary could make an agreement with a State under which the State would administer family assistance payments and State supplementary payments. Third, if the Secretary makes no agreement with a State the State will administer the supplementary payments and the Federal Government will administer the family assistance payments. Under the second and third arrangements, the Federal Government would pay all the cost of administering the family assistance plan and the Federal Government and the States would share equally in the administrative costs of making the State supplementary payments.

APPEALS PROCEDURE

Persons who disagree with determinations relating to eligibility for or amounts of family assistance plan payments may obtain a hearing. For persons on the rolls payments would continue until there is a decision based on the hearing, which must be rendered within 90 days of a request for hearing. If the decision based on the hearing is adverse, the money paid out in the interim by the Federal Government would have to be returned. Final determinations are to be subject to judicial review in Federal district courts but the Secretary's decisions as to any fact would be conclusive and not subject to review by the court.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR PUERTO RICO, GUAM, AND THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

The family assistance plan applies to Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, but all of the dollar figures in both the family assistance plan and the revised program of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled (except for the $720 of earnings disregarded under the family assistance plan) program are to be modified (but only downward) by the same proportion that the per capita income of each bears to the per capita income of the lowest per capita-income State.

WORK AND TRAINING PROGRAMS

EXISTING PROGRAM REPEALED

The existing work incentive program (which went into effect in all the States on July 1, 1969) would be repealed and a new program would be established to take its place.

OPERATION OF PROGRAM

The Secretary of Labor would, under his own priorities for the selection of participants, assure the development of an employability plan for each individual registered with the employment office under the program. The training and employment potentials of the working poor who are registered will be closely examined toward the end of lessening, or completely eliminating, their dependency on cash benefits under the program. Mothers with pre-school children who volunteer would be given the same consideration for participation as those who are referred on a mandatory basis.

The individuals would then receive the services and training called for under the plan (including grants to relocate a family to find employment). The training and services would be similar to those currently provided under the WIN program, including special work projects for the performance of work in the public interest through contracts with governmental agencies and nonprofit organizations. The Secretary of Labor would be required to use other manpower programs to the maximum extent feasible. The State welfare departments would be required to provide health and other supportive services to facilitate the participation of individuals in the training program.

Appropriations are authorized to meet up to 90 percent of the cost of the training program. The non-Federal contribution could be made in cash or in kind. If the required non-Federal matching of 10 percent was not met in any State, a portion of its Federal share of medicaid and other welfare program expenditures would be withheld until the deficit was made up. Authorization is also made for advance funding. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may transfer to the Secretary of Labor the amount of money that family assistance recipients would have received if they were not being paid wages under a Labor Department on-the-job training program. These funds are to be available to support such programs.

TRAINING ALLOWANCES

Each person participating in the training program would receive an allowance of $30 a month. Larger incentive payments may be available for participants in institutional programs where MDTA allowances are payable. The Secretary of Labor would also provide allowances to cover the transportation and other costs directly associated with the training.
REFUSAL TO ACCEPT TRAINING OR EMPLOYMENT

An individual who, without good cause, refuses to accept suitable training or employment would receive the same treatment as a person who refuses to register.

CHILD CARE

The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare both directly (by contract or grant to public or private agencies) and through a system of prime grantees is required to provide necessary child care services for individuals participating in training or employment under the manpower program. The Secretary is authorized to make grants for up to 100 percent of the costs of child care projects to public or non-profit private agencies which, in a particular geographic area, will assure that day care is provided to manpower training participants. Such prime grantees would be designated by the appropriate elected or appointed official or officials in such area and would have to demonstrate a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency. Where appropriate, group or institutional care for children attending school would be provided through arrangements with a local educational agency. Child care would be provided in the light of the different circumstances and needs of the children involved, and where a family is able to pay for care the Secretary could charge a fee reasonably related to that ability. Appropriations (no dollar amount specified) and advance funding are authorized.

EVALUATION AND ANNUAL REPORT

The Secretaries of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to provide continual evaluation of the manpower and employment program. The Secretary of Labor may contract for independent evaluation, and he may establish a data collection, processing, and retrieval system. The Secretary of Labor would file an annual report with the Congress on the operation of the training program, and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would report similarly on the child care and supportive services provided under the bill. The first of such reports would be due on or before September 1, 1972. An authorization of $15 million a year is provided for research and evaluation activities relating to work and training.

SOCIAL SERVICES FOR FAMILIES WITH DEPENDENT CHILDREN

The present program of aid to families with dependent children would be changed by removing all cash assistance provisions. The provisions of present law under which the costs of social services, certain foster care, and emergency assistance are subject to 50-75 percent Federal matching would be retained.

AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

FEDERAL STANDARDS AND REQUIREMENTS

The present provisions for programs for aid to the needy aged, blind, and disabled are repealed and a new combined Federal-State program is established to cover essentially the same people.
Under the new program, the States could not have (1) any duration of residence requirement, (2) any citizenship requirement which includes any U.S. citizen, or (3) a requirement which would exclude aliens lawfully admitted for permanent residence who have resided in the United States continuously for 5 years immediately prior to application, or (4) relative responsibility provisions other than for spouses or parents of recipients.

The States would be required to (1) provide a payment sufficient to bring an individual's total income up to at least $110 a month, or, if higher, the standard in effect on the date of enactment, (2) follow the Secretary's definitions of blindness and disability, (3) make applicable to the disabled the mandatory disregard of the first $85 a month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder, now applicable to the blind, (4) make applicable to the aged on an optional basis the same earnings exemption ($60 a month plus one-half of additional earnings) applicable to the family assistance plan, and (5) use the Federal definition of allowable resources applicable to the family assistance plan ($1,500 plus home, personal effects, and income-producing property essential to the person's support). The provision in the Social Security Amendments of 1969 requiring the States to pass along to adult assistance recipients $4 of the social security benefit increase, which as enacted applies only to the months of April, May, and June 1970, would be continued indefinitely.

FEDERAL MATCHING PROVISIONS

The Federal Government would pay 90 percent of the first $65 of average payments made to eligible adult assistance recipients, and 25 percent of the remainder up to a limit to be set by the Secretary. The Federal Government would also pay 50 percent of the administrative costs of the adult programs.

ADMINISTRATION

The States could continue to administer the adult programs, or the Secretary could enter into an agreement with a State under which the Federal Government would perform all or some of the functions involved in making payments under the program. In the latter case, the Federal Government would pay all administrative costs.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The provisions of the bill (except for authorization for money to support child care projects which would be effective upon enactment) would be effective on July 1, 1971, with special provisions for States with statutes that would prevent them from complying with the bill at that time.

III. GENERAL DISCUSSION OF THE BILL

A. ESTABLISHMENT OF A PLAN FOR ASSISTANCE TO FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN

Your committee is very concerned about the rapid growth in the number, as well as the increase in the proportion, of children receiving aid under AFDC programs. Since 1960, the number of recipients has increased from 2.4 million to about 6.7 million. Moreover, the proportion of children receiving assistance has been rapidly increasing-from 30 children per 1,000 in 1955 to about 60 children per 1,000 in 1970. In addition the costs of these programs have more than tripled during the last 10 years (to about $4 billion at present) and, according to estimates by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, could more than double again during the next 5 years unless action is taken now to deal with the underlying causes of this crushing increase in both costs and numbers of recipients.

The major part of the increase has resulted from the added number of families who receive aid because the father is absent from the home. These cases, including those in which the father has abandoned his family and cases in which the mother is not married to the father, now make up over three-fourths of the families on the AFDC rolls.

Your committee made a number of modifications in the family assistance provisions of the bill proposed by the administration which are designed to halt the trends that have existed in the growth of the number of families on the AFDC rolls. During its deliberations, the principal efforts of your committee were in the direction of strengthening the provisions of the legislation to assure the establishment of an effective work and training program, building upon the groundwork that has been laid in putting the existing work incentive program into operation. It is the clear intention of your committee, based upon assurances given by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Secretary of Labor, that the work and training program will provide a method of guaranteeing that all adult members of families receiving assistance under the family assistance plan will receive all available training and employment services and other supportive services, including child care, necessary to assist them in obtaining employment and ultimately attaining self-support.

Your committee wishes to emphasize its clear understanding that all adult family assistance recipients, except for those specifically exempted by the bill, must register for training or employment. Contrary to the administration's proposal, under the committee bill this requirement applies to the working poor as well as to those who are unemployed or working part time. The committee believes this is an essential difference and a material improvement in the bill. Under this modification the employment status of many of the working poor parents will be improved and upgraded.

Your committee also added to the bill provisions holding parents who abandon their families responsible for Federal assistance received by their families. This new approach plus greater emphasis by the Federal Government and the States in implementing the determination of paternity, the location of absent parents and the enforcement of support provisions of the 1967 Social Security Amendments should have some effect in reducing the growth of the assistance rolls.

Several times in the past your committee has attempted, within the framework of the existing AFDC programs, to provide measures through which families could be assisted in maintaining stability and achieving economic independence. In the course of the last decade, major legislation providing for a wide range of services to AFDC families and for strong emphasis on work and training for assistance recipients has been enacted. The legislation enacted in 1962 and 1967 attempted to reverse the increasing dependence of families on assistance. It has become obvious, however, that basic structural and administrative changes in the AFDC programs are necessary if the present trends of family instability and dependence on welfare are to be halted and reversed.

The major thrust of the bill is toward:

1. Equitable treatment of working poor families;
2. The reduction of variations in payment levels among the States through the introduction of a Federal floor for family assistance payments;
3. Assisting families in achieving economic independence through a national uniform requirement to register for employment and training and the establishment of a strengthened manpower training program.

The overall plan represents a new direction for family assistance and was designed to carry out the intent of your committee to reduce dependence on assistance and restore more families to employment and self-reliance, and thereby eventually reverse the present trend of spiraling cost and increasing dependence upon welfare.

1. THE FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

a. Eligibility for and amount of family assistance payments

(1) Eligibility.—Each family with children under 18 (or under 21 if attending school) whose income (other than that excluded) is less than $500 per year for each of the first two family members and $300 per year for each additional family member, and whose resources (other than those excluded—the home, the household goods, personal effects, etc.) are less than $1,500 would be eligible to receive a family assistance benefit.

Your committee believes that one inequity in the present AFDC program that should be remedied at this time is the exclusion of needy families where the father is in the home and fully employed. Your committee believes it is bad social policy to have families in like situations treated differently because of the employment status of the family head. The exclusion of families in which the father is working has acted as an incentive to fathers to become unemployed or leave home in order to qualify their families for assistance. The bill would, therefore, include working poor families under the program and provide a uniform earnings exemption which is equally applicable to families with male and female heads as well as those who are fully and partially employed. For purposes of Federal benefits under the family assistance plan, the first $60 a month in earnings would be disregarded plus one-half of the remainder, so that it would be possible, for example, to have a family of four receiving some benefits under the program up until its income exceeds $3,920.

Your committee’s bill would eliminate two other situations of lack of equal treatment. At present, AFDC benefits are available to families with unemployed fathers in some States, but not in others. Second, unemployment has been defined by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare as working for less than 30 hours a week, which may be an incentive for many families to restrict their work.
activities. These two distinctions would be eliminated as to Federal benefits under the new program.

The committee agrees with the administration that it is essential that we do not perpetuate the situation where working people see little or no economic advantage in continuing in employment and drop out of the work force to become totally dependent on the welfare system.

(2) Amount.—The family assistance benefit would consist of $500 per year for each of the first two family members, plus $300 per year for each additional family member, and would be reduced by nonexcluded income. In any family there are certain common expenses in housing, utilities, fuel, etc., which must be met. Since the smallest family that will be covered is one consisting of two persons, your committee believes that it is logical that the amount provided for each of the first two members of the family be larger than the amounts provided for each additional member of the family.

These payment rates establish a Federal income maintenance floor which in most States will be increased by required State supplementation for all families except the working poor. In the eight States whose AFDC payments are now lower than the basic Federal floor, the bill provides an increase in the level of aid to needy families with children. The amount of payments may be lower in the case of individuals in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam than in the States, but would be substantially higher than at present.

(3) Period for determination of benefits.—Your committee's bill provides that a family's eligibility for benefits, and the amount of its benefits would be determined for each calendar quarter on the basis of estimates of income for that quarter, made in the light of income received in previous quarters. The estimates could be modified in the light of changes in circumstances and conditions, and in accordance with regulations regarding applications filed late in a quarter, or in cases in which income and expenses in one period are to some extent attributed to another period. Provision is also made for rendering a family ineligible for benefits if its gross income from a trade or business is unduly large.

The bill would provide for use of a calendar-quarter accounting period rather than a shorter period, such as a month, or a longer period, such as a year. One important advantage of the quarterly accounting period is that it would facilitate verification of earnings through use of social security records, since social security earnings are reported on a quarterly basis. Records of monthly earnings are not available from either the Social Security Administration or the Internal Revenue Service.

Your committee's bill would allow the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to prescribe by regulation the circumstances under which and extent to which a family's payments will be reduced because the application for payments was filed some time after the beginning of a quarter. Many potential applicants would not know that they would lose payments by not filing when they were first eligible, and in addition, there would be many reasons why an application could not be filed as soon as the need arose—e.g. the only adult member of the family could be ill, or unaware of possible help, with the result that he would fail to file as early in the calendar quarter as he should.
Your committee has concluded that, in some cases, in order to prevent inequity it would not be appropriate to count as income for a quarter all income received in that quarter, a part of which should properly be distributed to prior or subsequent quarters. For example, a self-employed farmer often receives the bulk of his income in the fall when his crops are sold, and little or no income during the rest of the year. If such a person's income were counted in the quarter in which it is received, he could get no payments for that quarter. Conversely, the amount of income received in a single quarter might be sufficient to disqualify a family for any payments during the year. Your committee's bill provides, therefore, that, in determining eligibility and payment amounts, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may allocate income received in a given quarter to prior or subsequent quarters. In the case of self-employment income, your committee expects that the Secretary would ordinarily allocate the annual income evenly to each of the four quarters of the year, unless the nature and circumstances of the self-employment income were such as to make this allocation inappropriate. Payment amounts would be determined as though income were earned in the quarter to which the income is assigned.

(4) Special limits on gross income.—Your committee believes that the net earnings from farming and certain other businesses require special treatment. People in such businesses may have substantial gross incomes during a year but net earnings small enough to qualify themselves and their families for payments under the family assistance plan. The net earnings of a family whose income is derived from a business can fluctuate considerably from year to year. The net earnings may be high in one year and very low the next year. One reason for this is that a businessman has considerable control over the amount of his net earnings; he may choose the time to incur a number of business expenses in order to increase or decrease his net earnings in any given year.

Also the amount of net earnings depends to a large extent on business expenses, which are deductible for income tax purposes. Depreciation allowances and other income tax deductions, for example, reduce the net earnings of a businessman without actually reducing his spendable income.

In the opinion of your committee it would be inappropriate to permit people who have a large gross income to get family assistance payments when they have a substantial cash flow from which they live in moderate or better-than-moderate circumstances. For this reason, your committee's bill permits the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to consider ineligible a family that has substantial gross income from a trade or business.

b. Income

(1) Meaning of income.—Earned income is defined as remuneration from employment and net earnings from self-employment. Earned income from employment excludes certain items that are also excluded from covered wages under old-age, survivors, and disability insurance.

Net earnings from self-employment are defined in the bill by reference to the present definition applicable to old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, with the exception of certain provisions of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance definition which your committees believes inappropriate for the family assistance plan, such as the special provision under which a farmer's net income may be presumed to be a given percent of his gross income.

Under your committee's bill, certain items are specifically included in unearned income in order to avoid the necessity of deciding close questions as to whether they are to be treated as earned or unearned. Thus, annuities (which frequently result from past earnings) are counted as unearned income, as are prizes and the proceeds of life insurance.

(2) Exclusions from income.—

(a) Student income.—Your committee's bill would provide, subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, for exclusion of the earned income of a child who is regularly attending school. Existing law, in addition to excluding the earned income of a child who is a full-time student, also excludes the earned income of a part-time student with a less than full-time job.

Your committee continues to believe that special treatment of earnings of students is warranted so that these earnings may help to finance school attendance and offer tangible rewards that encourage work habits. The purpose of authorizing the Secretary to prescribe limitations on the earned income of a student that may be excluded is to make allowance for the fact that a few students may have exceptionally large earned incomes, at least some of which should go to reduce the family benefit.

(b) Irregular income of $30 or less a quarter.—In determining income under the family assistance plan, the Secretary is authorized to exclude unearned income of $30 or less a quarter and in addition earned income of $30 or less a quarter, provided that such earned and unearned income is received infrequently or irregularly. Your committee believes that the provision for exempting such income would facilitate administration since it would be possible to ignore very small amounts of income irregularly or infrequently received. A small cash gift, for example, could be excluded. Similarly, earnings within the $30 quarterly limits from occasional work, such as babysitting, performed on an irregular or infrequent basis, could be excluded.

(c) Child care expenses.—Your committee's bill would provide for the exclusion of an amount of earned income of a family equal to all or part (according to a schedule prescribed by the Secretary) of the cost of child care which was necessary for securing or continuing manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, or employment. Your committee believes that, since child care is frequently costly, failure to exclude the cost of this care from income in determining the amount of the family assistance payment might well create a disincentive, if not a total barrier, to employment on the part of some mothers. Under other provisions in the bill the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is required to assure that child care is available for mothers who are in training.

(d) First $720 of earnings a year plus one-half of the remainder.—Under present AFDC programs, a State is required to disregard student income, necessary expenses of employment, and the first $30 a month of the total of the family's earned income plus one-third of the remainder of such income. (In addition, a State may, but is not required to, disregard not more than $5 per month of additional income.) Your committee's bill provides for removing the present provisions and provides instead for exempting the first $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of earned income of the family in determining the amount of the family assistance payment. This exclusion is intended to take account of work-related expenses and to avoid any disincentive to employment that such expenses—for example, the cost of transportation, lunches, and employment taxes—might otherwise create. The bill would also exclude one-half of the family's earned income above the exempt amount. (As indicated above the earned income of a student would generally be excluded entirely). Your committee believes that this treatment of earned income would set a uniform standard and provide a strong incentive both to take employment or to increase employment activity.

(e) Other aid based on need.—Your committee's bill would provide that food stamps and other assistance (not including veterans' pensions) provided on a basis of need by a public or private agency would have no effect on the amount of the family assistance payment. Your committee believes that any other policy would tend to have a circular effect and would render the food stamps or other assistance largely meaningless. (See p. 30 for further discussion of the correlation of family assistance payments and food stamps.) Veterans' pensions based on a test of income, though, would be included in determining a family's income under the family assistance plan. Your committee believes that it is preferable to keep the long-established veterans' pension program intact by requiring that family assistance benefits be reduced dollar for dollar by the amount of any veterans' pension received by a family member.

(f) Training allowances.—The bill would exclude from income the allowances provided by the Secretary of Labor to individuals undergoing training. If the family assistance benefits were reduced on account of receipt of these allowances, their purpose, which is to provide an incentive for training, would be largely nullified. Training incentive allowances for individuals undergoing vocational rehabilitation are intended to be excluded.

(g) Scholarships and fellowships.—The bill would exclude from consideration as income any portion of a scholarship or fellowship received for use in paying the costs of tuition and fees at any educational institution. Any portion of such payments which are used for general living expenses, however, would be included as unearned income. Your committee believes that if the portions of any scholarship or fellowship which are earmarked for costs to the educational institution were treated as family income, the objective of the scholarship or grant might well be defeated.

(h) Home produce.—The bill would provide for the exclusion of home produce of a family used by the household for its own consumption. This provision is necessary to avoid the administrative difficulties in evaluating the value of such home produce, and is consistent with the results of studies which indicate that there is generally very little net financial gain from home produce consumed at home.

c. Resources

(1) Exclusions from resources.—Under present law there is a wide variation in the manner in which resources, such as a person's home, are treated by the State public assistance programs. Many States exclude the home as a resource while others consider the home only if its value exceeds a specified amount. Household goods, and personal effects are generally excluded under present programs. Your committee believes that a family's home, household goods, and personal property, as well as other property which is essential to a family's means of self-support, should not be considered resources and the bill so provides. Since one of the purposes of the bill is to help families take their place as productive members of society, it seems appropriate to remove disincentives to homeownership and to the accumulation of other reasonable personal effects. The exclusion of resources essential to a family's means of self-support, such as an automobile needed for purposes of employment, the tools of a tradesman, or the machinery of a farmer, is, of course, also important from the standpoint of the objective of strengthening the family's capacity for self-support.

(2) Disposition of resources.—Under the bill, other types of property would be subject to a $1,500 limitation. Families with resources which are readily negotiable, such as stocks or bonds, can generally dispose of such resources and should be expected to dispose of resources above the $1,500 limitation before they are considered eligible for family assistance payments. Proceeds from the disposal of such resources would, of course, be expected to be used by the family for their support and would be counted as cash income, which would be considered in determining the family eligibility for assistance and the payment amount. The disposal of certain other types of assets, such as buildings or land, would often require some time. Your committee's bill, therefore, would authorize the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to prescribe time limits governing the disposition of various kinds of property and to make conditional family assistance payments during the time allotted for the disposal of the property in question. Income received from the disposition of resources would be expected to be used to support the family and would be considered to have been received during the period when the family was receiving conditional family assistance payments, and the family would be obliged to repay overpayments made to it subject to the conditions set forth in the provisions of the bill governing overpayments.

d. Meaning of family and child

(1) Composition of family.—Numerous witnesses who appeared before your committee expressed their deep concern over the effects of the present AFDC program and stated that it is characterized by incentives to family breakup and by the inequitable exclusion from assistance of poor families in which the father is employed. The definition of family in the bill would eliminate the eligibility requirements in existing law under which families with children are eligible for assistance only if the child is living with designated relatives and is dependent by reason of the death, continued absence, or incapacity of a parent or, on an optional basis with the States, the unemployment of a father. Under the bill, a father could remain with his family, and even if he were employed, he and his family could be eligible for benefits under the family assistance plan if the other eligibility conditions are met.

As indicated by the term "family assistance," the new program would be based upon the existence of a family unit. The presence of a child in the household would be the key to eligibility. When a family meets the income and resources tests, payments under the plan would be made for all members who were related by blood, marriage, or adoption, as long as they were living in the same residence and as long as at least one family member was under age 18, or under 21 if regularly attending school.

The bill would require that at least one child not be married to another family member and also that this same child be in the care of or dependent upon another family member in order to qualify the family for benefits. This would avoid making payments to a family consisting only of a husband and wife where the wife is under age 18 or a student. It would also avoid payment of benefits in situations where, for example, two brothers were living together and attending college on scholarships with neither being dependent upon nor supported by the other.

Although generally family members must be living in the same place of residence in order to qualify as a family for benefit purposes, the bill provides that a parent of a child living in the family residence, or the spouse of such a parent, who is temporarily away from home for the purpose of engaging in or seeking employment (including military service) or self-employment, would nevertheless be considered to be living in the home where such child resides. Your committee believes that it is clearly reasonable to consider such an individual as a family member and to consider any income he may have as income to the family.

If such a provision were not included, temporary absence from the home could disqualify the parent as a family member, with the result that the absent individual's income would not automatically be considered income to the family. Moreover, if the absent parent were the only parent in the family, a child who is temporarily left with a non-relative by this parent while he is away working or seeking work would be ineligible for benefits until the parent returned.

(2) Definition of child.—The bill defines a child as an individual who is under age 18 or under age 21 and a full-time student. There is no substantive difference between this definition and the definition in existing law.

(3) Determination of family relationships.—Your committee’s bill follows the most usual approach of programs that make payments based on relationship—namely, basing determinations of relationship on State law. Under public assistance, each State, of course, applies its own laws bearing on the determination of relationships. Determinations of relationships under the social security program and the veterans’ programs also are based on applicable State laws (those governing marriage and adoption as well as State intestacy laws). Under your committee’s bill, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would have the authority to determine which State’s law would be governing in particular cases and the Secretary could decide whether the law of the State in which the child was born or the law of the State in which the parents were married was to be used in determining whether a child was the child of another family member. The Secretary would also have the authority to determine, for example, which of two laws of the same State would be most appropriate in determining the relationships in a particular family.
(4) Income and resources of noncontributing adult.—Your committee's bill would exclude from consideration, in determining eligibility for, and the amount of, benefits under the family assistance plan the income and resources of any individual which are not available to the rest of the family. An individual whose income and resources are not so available would not be considered a family member and the benefit amount payable to the family would be computed without counting him. However, this rule would not apply to parents (or their spouses) since their income and resources should ordinarily be available to the family and since the exclusion of their income or resources might easily lead to abuses of the system.

(5) Recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled.—Your committee's bill continues the usual rule against payment of benefits under more than one of the Federal-State public assistance plans by excluding from benefits under the family assistance plan any individual who elects to receive aid under the title XVI plan (assistance for needy adults). (A similar prohibition in title XVI against duplication is continued from existing law.)

e. Payments and procedures

Under your committee's bill, payment would be made to one or more members of a qualified family, or to another interested person, at such times and in such installments as the Secretary determines. Appropriate adjustments in future payments, or recovery from or payment to the family, would be made to rectify overpayments and underpayments.

The Secretary would prescribe regulations regarding the filing of applications and supplying of data to determine eligibility of a family and the amounts for which the family is eligible. Beneficiaries would be required to report events or changes of circumstances affecting eligibility or the amount of benefits. When reports by beneficiaries are delayed too long or are too inaccurate, part or all of the resulting benefit payments could be treated as recoverable overpayments.

(1) Payment of benefits.—It is the intent of your committee that payments would ordinarily be made (after determination of eligibility and registration for manpower training, services, and employment) on a monthly basis to the head of the family. To take account of diverse family situations and to facilitate administration, however, a provision in the bill would allow the Secretary to make payments to other members of the family or to other interested persons, and also to make payments at such times and in such installments (e.g., semimonthly, quarterly, semiannually, or annually) as might be indicated by the circumstances. For example, a quarterly payment could be made to facilitate administration in situations where the family would, because of earnings, be eligible for only a small monthly payment.

To further facilitate administration, your committee's bill would permit establishment of ranges of income—that is, permit use of income brackets—within which a single benefit amount would apply.

(2) Overpayments and underpayments.—Your committee's bill would permit adjustments on account of overpayments or underpayments to be made by adjusting future benefits of the family or by recovery from any family member. The bill, however, would preclude recovery of overpayments where the family is without fault and recovery would either defeat the purpose of the family assistance plan or be against equity and good conscience or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration.

Your committee believes that, generally, determinations of "without fault" would be made on an individual basis, and in determining whether an individual is without fault, the Secretary could be expected to consider an individual's age, education, and physical and mental condition. An individual would not be found to be without fault if an incorrect payment which was made to him or on his behalf resulted from his statement which he knew or should have known to be incorrect or from his failure to furnish information which he knew or should have known to be material, or from his acceptance of payment which he either knew or could have been expected to know was incorrect.

(3) Hearings and review.—Your committee's bill requires that there be notice and opportunity for hearings to any individual who disagrees with any determination with respect to eligibility for payments, the number of members of the family, or the amount of the payments. The individual would have to request the hearing within 30 days. Decisions would be rendered within 90 days following a properly submitted request, and although families already receiving assistance payments would continue to do so while their hearing is pending, such payments would be considered overpayments if the Secretary's initial determination were sustained. Final determination of the Secretary would be subject to judicial review in Federal district court; however, determinations as to the facts which the Secretary makes after a hearing provided by him would not be subject to review by the court.

(4) Applications and furnishing of information by families.—To enable the Secretary to obtain the information needed to determine eligibility or payment amount, your committee's bill would authorize the Secretary to require that individuals file applications, furnish evidence, and report events and changes that might affect eligibility or payment amounts. Since it would be necessary, to a substantial extent, to rely on information supplied by recipients, it seems important to your committee to encourage accurate and prompt reporting. Therefore, your committee's bill would authorize the Secretary to prescribe those situations where failure to report or the filing of delayed or inaccurate reports would result in the treatment of payments to the family as overpayments and subject to full recovery. It is the committee's intention that the Secretary provide for tight administration of the processing of claims under the program and that to the extent feasible methods adopted be as detailed and effective as those that have been utilized to substantiate applications under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program.

(5) Furnishing of information by other agencies.—In determining eligibility and the amount of payments under your committee's bill, the Secretary would verify the information on income and other information given by the claimant. Several Federal agencies have information that may be useful for this purpose. Information on certain benefits and payments could be obtained from the Social Security Administration and from other Federal agencies such as the Railroad Retirement Board and the Veterans' Administration. The Social Security Administration has direct access to information about earnings from employment and self-employment covered by social security. If a recipient has income other than from earnings covered by social security, information from another source would be required in order to verify information given by the claimant. The Treasury Department would be able to furnish data from income tax returns. Your committee's bill would require the head of any Federal agency to provide information needed by the Secretary to verify information affecting eligibility or payment amount.

f. Registration and referral of family members for manpower services, training, and employment

Your committee believes that registration for work and training is a very essential part of the family assistance plan. While the present AFDC program contains a registration requirement, it has been implemented as was intended. This requirement is strengthened in the committee bill.

Present law has a general requirement that State welfare agencies refer those persons for registration whom they deem “appropriate” with several categories of persons specifically excluded. State agencies have taken varying attitudes toward who is appropriate for referral, with some taking an extremely restrictive approach and thus crippling the training effort.

Under the bill reported by your committee, the word “appropriate” is removed from the law, and only clearly specified groups are exempt from registration. This will strengthen the work requirement and at the same time provide for nationally uniform administration insuring that all persons appropriate for training and employment programs will be seen by the employment service offices.

Your committee believes that in the administration of the registration provisions, there should be enough flexibility to assure the efficient operation of the training and employment provisions of the bill. This means that short forms could be used for the initial registration. Employment service representatives should be stationed in the offices administering family assistance benefits to insure prompt registration at the time of application for payments.

It is the intention of the committee that employability plans be developed for registered recipients as promptly as possible. However, in order to assure orderly and effective administration of the manpower programs, the bill authorizes the Secretary of Labor to establish priorities for developing employability plans.

The committee recognizes that in the development of employability plans, there are factors over which the Secretary has no control, such as the condition of the labor market. In setting priorities for developing employability plans, the Secretary will need to take these factors into account, in addition to such considerations as family status and personal characteristics of the individual. Mothers who volunteer will be given the same consideration for participation as those who are referred on a mandatory basis.

Your committee specifically deleted a provision of the administration bill exempting the working poor from registering with the employment service. Requiring the working poor to register will provide assurance that every able-bodied individual in family assistance families will be registered for employment, except mothers with preschool children or persons who must care for a disabled individual in the home. In addition, registration will aid the employment service in assisting the working poor in upgrading their skills and income.
An individual required to register and who does not do so would not be counted as a member of the family for purposes of determining the amount of benefits, but any income that he has would be counted as a part of the family's income. An individual refusing to register would not be paid any part of the family assistance payment; the Secretary could, if he deemed it appropriate, pay the family's benefits to a person who is not a member of the family, but who is interested in, or concerned with, its welfare. These provisions closely follow those in present law.

Exclusions from the requirement to register would be made in the case of individuals who are so ill, incapacitated or of advanced age that they are unable to engage in gainful employment. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare could by regulation prescribe when the age of a particular person, taking into account the person's health, education, and former training and any other pertinent conditions, was so advanced as to make registration unnecessary. In the case of any individual who is not required to register because of incapacity, provision is made for referral to the vocational rehabilitation agency so that rehabilitation for employment can be initiated. All existing rehabilitation services available should be applied in order to enhance the individual's capacity for self-support. The primary objective of rehabilitation services should be economic self-sufficiency through gainful employment. The vocational rehabilitation agency will make initial determinations of incapacity which precludes the individual from gainful employment, in a manner similar to that followed under present law by the Social Security Administration where the vocational rehabilitation agency makes initial disability determinations under the social security law. Subsequent review of the individual's incapacity and continuing need for vocational rehabilitation services would be made as necessary by the State agency, or, in the case of an individual who is not totally and permanently disabled, at least once each quarter.

Your committee believes that the effectiveness of the training and employment programs in the bill will be materially enhanced by the provisions requiring that persons not referred to the Department of Labor because of incapacity be referred to the vocational rehabilitation program. This program has demonstrated that large numbers of persons with vocational handicaps can, with medical care, counseling, and training around their handicaps, be made wholly or largely economically independent. The requirements for referral are the same as for persons being sent directly to manpower agencies. Undoubtedly some of the individuals initially sent to manpower agencies will be found to need vocational rehabilitation services before other training and placement can be effective. Such referrals can and should be made under the authority in the bill. Penalties equal to those for failure to participate in other manpower programs are appropriate and the bill so provides.

Your committee's bill would also exclude from mandatory registration children who are under age 16 or under age 21 and regular students. The administration's bill would only have required the registration of individuals over age 18. However, your committee believes that the training aspects of the family assistance program could be of great use in preparing youths age 16 and 17 not attending school for employment.
A mother of a child under the age of 6 who is actually caring for the child is not required to register. As a practical matter, the committee expects a large percentage of these mothers to voluntarily register for employment and take advantage of child-care provisions and training incentives and opportunities. That has been the experience under the present WIN program.

An additional exclusion is provided for the mother or other female caretaker of a child if there is an adult male related to the child in the home who is required to register and does so register. These mothers will also be entitled to voluntarily register for training and employment. If the father in this situation refuses to register, the mother would have to register.

A person whose presence in the home is required on a substantially continuous basis in order to care for an ill or incapacitated member of the household would not be required to register. This type of illness or incapacity would likely be more severe than the types discussed above, since a regular caretaker would have to be found necessary.

The Secretary is required to furnish child care services for so long as he determines appropriate when the individuals, after having been required to register, are participating in manpower services, training, or employment. No mother would be required to undertake training or employment without the assurance of adequate and necessary child care.

g. Denial of benefits in case of refusal of manpower services, training, or employment

Since the intent of your committee's bill is to insure that individuals have every opportunity to increase their capacity for self-support, provision has been made in the bill to insure that individuals who register actually participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment. Your committee is proposing that a member of a family who, after registration and without good cause, refuses to participate or continue to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment would, after notice and opportunity for hearing, not be considered a family member for purposes of determining the family's benefit amount, except that his income would be counted. Good cause is determined by examining how a reasonable individual would act in the same circumstances. Thus, for example, employment or training opportunities could be refused if the individual were ill, or had an allergic reaction to materials with which he would be working in the course of employment or training. A woman might refuse such opportunities if the position offered were in a dangerous locality and at late hours. Similarly, a mother could refuse training or employment if adequate child care were not available.

In establishing standards of "suitability", your committee has relied heavily on the definition long in use under the State unemployment insurance laws, with modifications appropriate to the client group to be served.

The bill provides that in no event may employment be considered suitable if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute (including an organizational dispute); if the wages, hours, or other terms or conditions of employment are contrary to or less than those prescribed by Federal, State, or local law or are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality; or if, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization. It is your committee's intent that registrants should not be referred to positions where any of these conditions exist. These protections for the individual are based on similar provisions in the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. The suitable work provision operates both to protect the individual from unreasonable work requirements, and to assure that employment is required.

In those cases where exclusion from the family of such an individual would make a child ineligible for payments as in a two-member family, your committee's bill requires that such an individual should be considered a member of the family for eligibility but not for payment purposes. Furthermore, the bill requires that benefits for the other family members not be paid to the individual who refuses manpower services, training, or employment, but rather to another family member or to a person outside the family who is interested in, or concerned with, the welfare of the family.

The provisions governing hearings by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare are made applicable to hearings by the Secretary of Labor in cases of refusal of manpower services, training, or employment. While it is a Federal responsibility to provide these hearings, your committee contemplates that the Secretary of Labor will utilize the expertise of the State employment security agencies in meeting this responsibility. Your committee expects the Secretary of Labor to contract with these agencies to furnish the required hearings, but your committee wishes to make clear that the Secretary of Labor will bear the responsibility to insure that hearings are held within the required 90 days.

h. Transfer of funds for on-the-job training programs

Under your committee's bill, the estimated amount of family assistance benefits that would otherwise be paid to individuals participating in public or private employer-compensated on-the-job training programs of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating would be made available to the Secretary of Labor to help pay the costs of such programs. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Secretary of Labor shall provide by agreement the method of estimating the family assistance benefits and making the transfer of funds.

2. STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

Your committee recognizes that the new family assistance benefits, would generally not provide a level of support for families equal to that now provided in many States for AFDC recipients. The bill requires, therefore, that the benefits would be augmented by supplementary payments under State plans. The bill provides that each State that was making AFDC payments higher than the new family assistance benefit, would be required to maintain the levels of payments in effect as of January 1, 1970, or, if lower, a level corresponding to the poverty level as defined in the bill. The bill provides also for partial Federal financing of State supplementary payments in order to support the efforts of the States in making such payments. There would not be any Federal financing of any State supplementary payments to the working poor, nor is there any requirement that the States supplement payments to the working poor.

Your committee's bill would establish a formula for reimbursement of administrative expenses which would provide incentives for the States to contract with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare for Federal administration of both the family assistance plan and the State supplementary programs. Your committee feels strongly that needy people should not be shuttled from window to window or agency to agency and that a single point of contact for recipients is highly desirable if the committee's proposals are to be effective.

a. Payments to States for other welfare programs conditioned on supplementation

Your committee's bill would require that in order for a State to be eligible to continue to receive Federal payments under part A of title IV (services to needy families with children) and part B (child-welfare services), title V (maternal, child health, and crippled children's services), title XVI (aid to the aged, blind, and disabled), and title XIX (medical assistance), the State would have to agree to supplement the family assistance benefits so that present payment levels (or, if lower, the poverty level) would be maintained. This supplement would be required for all families eligible for family assistance benefits except those where both parents are present, neither is incapacitated; and the father is not unemployed. Generally, this would mean that the States would supplement family assistance benefits for all recipients who could have been eligible under present law and—whether or not the State previously covered them—families with an unemployed parent. Since families headed by a father working full time are not assisted under present law, the States would not be required to supplement the family assistance benefits of these families.

b. Eligibility for and amount of the supplementary payments

Your committee's bill would provide that eligibility for, and the amount of, the supplementary payments would be determined generally under the rules and regulations that apply to the family assistance plan. Your committee believes that not only is this an important step toward the establishment of needed nationwide uniform standards for assistance, but a necessary one to facilitate Federal administration of the program.

As stated previously the bill would require that the amount of State supplementation be sufficient to assure payment levels at least as high as those in effect in the State in January 1970, or the poverty level, if lower. Thus in determining the State supplementary payment amounts, the State standards of need and payment limitations in effect for January 1970 would be applied (or if lower, the poverty level) unless the State wishes to apply a higher standard of need. If a State plan in effect on January 1, 1970 provided for meeting less than 100 percent of its needs standards or for considering less than 100 percent of its requirement in determining need, the Secretary would, by regulations, prescribe standards for insuring that the January 1970 payment levels would be maintained.

The amount of the supplementary benefit of a family would be reduced as under the family assistance plan, except that with respect to earned income the State would be required to disregard (1) $720 of earned income per year plus (2) one-third of the earnings between $720 and twice the amount of the unreduced family assistant benefit (2 × $1,600 or $3,200 for a family of four), plus (3) one-fifth (or more, if the Secretary so prescribes by regulation) of any remaining income.

For example, assume that a family of four has earned income of $3,500 in a State which has a need standard of $3,000.

Your committee's bill would require that agreements with the State for making supplementary payments would generally follow the lines of those in existence under the present AFDC programs. Generally, the plan must—

1. Be in effect statewide;
2. Designate a single State agency to carry out or supervise the agreement in the State;
3. Provide opportunity for a fair hearing;
4. Provide proper and efficient methods of administration, as well as for effective use of a paid subprofessional staff;
5. Agree to make reports as required by the Secretary;
6. Provide safeguards that restrict the disclosure of information; and
7. Provide that all individuals who wish to apply for payments shall have an opportunity to do so.

c. Payments to States

In order to assist the States in making supplementary payments the bill provides that the Federal Government generally would pay a State 30 percent of the amount expended by the State in making such payments each fiscal year, not including any supplementary payments made to the working poor. However, there would be no Federal payment for that part of the supplementary payment which exceeds the difference between the applicable poverty level and the sum of the family assistance payment and any income of the family not disregarded in computing the supplementary payments. An example of how the Federal payment to a State would be figured for a family of four is as follows:

State supplement................................................. 1,353

Poverty level..................................................... 3,720

Less total income chargeable................. 1,647

Since the State supplementary payment ($1,353) does not exceed the difference ($2,073) between the poverty level ($3,720) and the family assistance benefit plus the earnings not disregarded ($1,647), the Secretary would pay to the State $405.90 (30 percent of the State supplementary payment of $1,353). This complete computation would not actually be necessary in the case of any State which has a standard below the poverty level. Your committee has been informed that only one State has a standard above the poverty level at the present time.

The bill makes provision for annual redetermination of the poverty level by the Secretary. The Secretary would, between July 1 and September 30 of each year, promulgate the poverty level for various sizes and types of family groups to be effective for the purpose of setting the ceiling on Federal participation during the fiscal year beginning on the July 1 following the year of promulgation.

For purposes of the promulgation, this base for determining the level will be the 1969 poverty level for a family group as set forth below:

Between July 1 and September 30 of each year beginning with 1970, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall review and increase, if necessary, the poverty level amounts for each size of family group by the percentage increase in the Consumer Price Index (published each month by the Bureau of Labor Statistics) for the second calendar quarter of each such year over the Consumer Price Index for 1969; such increases shall be effective with respect to Federal matching for the year beginning July 1 of the next succeeding year.
d. Failure by State to comply with agreement

Your committee's bill permits the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing, to withhold all or such portion as he deems appropriate of the payments otherwise due a State under titles IV (parts A, B, and E), V, XVI, and XIX if the Secretary finds that the State has failed to comply with its agreement.

Your committee is concerned by information that has been brought to its attention indicating that some States have not met effective dates promptly for some requirements of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 and that a few States have not met all of them even at this late date. It expects the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to take whatever steps may be necessary to assure full and prompt compliance with the requirements of Federal law.

3. Administration

It is the intent of your committee that a new agency would be established in the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to administer the family assistance plan. The new agency would be responsible for establishing and managing local family assistance plan offices and would carry out other necessary functions with the exception of those which it may find appropriate to contract with other agencies to carry out. The committee would expect that other agencies within the Department, as well as other governmental agencies outside the Department, would lend their support to the extent that doing so would be consistent with the performance of the duties required to carry out their own programs, to assist the new agency in carrying out the provisions of the plan. For example, while the administration of the family assistance plan would be completely separate and distinct from the social insurance programs, the committee would expect that the computer equipment and other capabilities of the Social Security Administration would be utilized in the administration of the family assistance plan to the extent it is economical and efficient to do so, taking into account the mission of the new agency. No part of the cost of rendering such service, however, would be chargeable to the Trust Funds administered by the Social Security Administration.

Because the full development of administrative policies, procedures, and methods to carry out the program will require considerable time, and since the time permitted between enactment and effective date is limited, the committee believes it would be desirable for the Department to request an advance appropriation to cover the costs of full-scale administrative planning for implementing the program.

a. Agreements with States

Your committee's bill, as previously indicated, calls for State supplementation of Federal family assistance payments. However, your committee felt some concern lest such a dual program arrangement lead to unnecessarily complicated and expensive dual administrative systems—a Federal system for part D benefits, and state systems for part E benefits. Therefore, in addition to requiring that State supplementary plans follow Federal uniform definitions of eligibility and treatment of income, your committee has included provisions to encourage unified administration of the family assistance plan and the State supplementary plans and it is the hope of the committee that the States will take advantage of these provisions. Under these provisions, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare can enter into an agreement with any State under which the Secretary can administer and make State supplementary benefit payments on behalf of the State. Conversely, the provisions permit agreements between the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and a State under which the State would administer and disburse the family assistance benefits provided for under part D as well as the State supplementary benefits.

If the Secretary entered into an agreement with a State to have the Federal Government administer the State's supplementary program, the Federal Government would then pay all administrative costs for the family assistance program and all administrative costs for the State's supplementary program, so that the State would realize substantial savings in administrative costs through such an arrangement. If a State chose to administer its own supplementary program, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would pay one-half of the State's administrative costs for its supplementary program. If the State agreed to administer the family assistance benefits provided for under part D, the Federal Government would reimburse the State for all of its administrative costs for part D and one-half the administrative costs of the State's supplementary program.

6. Penalties for fraud

Your committee strongly believes that every person attempting by unlawful means to obtain payments not due him under the plan, or otherwise violating any of the penal provisions of the Social Security Act, would represent a threat to an effective program. The threat goes beyond the potential drain on the funds appropriated for the program; a more important consideration is the impact such violations might have on public confidence in the integrity of the program. Under the Federal-State assistance programs, a State is required to make provisions for dealing with fraud committed by recipients. Federal regulations require that a State define fraud in accordance with State law, include criteria for identifying and investigating suspected fraud, and provide for the referral of appropriate cases to law enforcement officials. However, the procedures used in the States vary widely as to fraud in welfare cases. The criminal statutes of some States contain separate provisions for cases of welfare fraud; in other States, welfare fraud is prosecuted under the laws governing theft or one of any number of other crimes.

Your committee believes that for the family assistance plan the penalties for fraud should be the same as those provided under the social security program since the considerations that lead to provision of such penalties under social security would be equally relevant to the family assistance plan. These fraud provisions would apply only with respect to the basic family assistance program and not to the State supplementary programs.

c. Report, evaluation, research and demonstrations, and training and technical assistance

Your committee is very concerned about the need to improve the effectiveness of our national income maintenance programs. Accordingly, the bill would require a constant process of self-examination by the administrators of the family assistance program and regular reports to the Congress and the President. Evaluation by outside consultants is also authorized.

Authorization would be given to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to conduct research and demonstration projects. Since such experimentation may well involve approaches or other ideas which have no specific sanction in existing statutes or regulations, authority would also be provided for the Secretary to operate experiments (limited in scope) without regard to the eligibility and payment amounts provisions of the plan. As in the case of evaluations, the Secretary would be authorized to use contractors to conduct such research and demonstration projects.

The bill would also authorize the Secretary to provide technical assistance to States and to provide for such training of State personnel as the Secretary deems appropriate to assist the States in improving administration of assistance to people in need. Your committee believes that the additional funds available to carry out these provisions for evaluation activities, research and demonstrations, and technical assistance and training should be limited to no more than $20 million per fiscal year and the bill so provides.

d. Obligation of deserting parent

One of the major causes of instability among AFDC families is parental desertion. To discourage abandonment of families, your committee’s bill provides that an individual who has deserted or abandoned his spouse, child, or children shall owe a monetary obligation to the United States by the deserting parent equal to the total amount of family assistance benefits, plus the Federal share of any State supplementary payments, paid to the spouse or child during the period of desertion or abandonment. The liability of a deserting parent would be reduced by the amount of any payment he made to his family during the period of desertion.

In those cases where a court has issued an order for the support and maintenance of the deserted spouse or children, the obligations of the deserting parent would be limited to the amount specified by the court order.

To the extent these amounts are not collected directly from the individual involved, the amount due the United States under these provisions could be collected from any amounts otherwise due the deserting parent by any officer or agency of the United States or under any Federal program.

The terms desertion or abandonment are much broader than their meaning under State law. Physical absence from the home and a specific intention to desert need not be demonstrated, since a liability is created to the extent that an individual’s failure to use his income and resources to support his spouse, child, or children, require that family assistance payments (and supplementary payments where applicable) be made to support them.

The individual applicant for family assistance benefits must, of course, cooperate to the fullest extent possible in establishing eligibility. In this connection, an individual applicant will be expected to cooperate in every possible way in assisting the authorities to identify and locate a deserting parent.
Your committee feels very strongly about these provisions and expresses unequivocally its intent that all Federal and State enforcement machinery should cooperate to the fullest extent possible in implementing these provisions.

e. Treatment of family assistance benefits as income for food stamp purposes

The bill provides that family assistance benefits shall be taken into account in determining entitlement to, and the cost of, food stamps. Your committee feels that there is some merit in providing assistance to the needy both in the form of cash and in the form of food stamps. Doing so helps to assure that the family will spend a certain portion of its entire benefit for food. Your committee also feels that there is merit in providing assistance entirely in cash. The latter approach provides the recipient with more flexibility and is obviously more attractive from the standpoint of administration since a cash program is simpler to administer.

Your committee spent considerable time and effort attempting to work out a modification of the family assistance plan that would substitute additional cash payments for food stamps, but was unable to devise a satisfactory amendment. One possible change in the bill, to which the committee gave a great deal of attention, was that of combining the family assistance plan and the food stamp plan into a single, integrated cash-benefit program. Your committee finds that a program which provides all of its benefits in cash is substantially more expensive than one in which a portion of benefits are provided in cash and a portion in in-kind benefits, such as food stamps because the weighted structure of the food stamp benefit is such that the rate of participation declines as family income increases. Relatively few families are willing to tie up substantial portions of their cash in food stamps merely to obtain a small amount of additional food purchasing power. These same families would, of course, elect to take the value of their food stamp benefit if it were provided in cash. Your committee also notes that the food stamp plan provides a benefit to families who would not be covered by the family assistance plan. It also recognizes that present recipients now receiving payments larger than those provided under the family assistance plan would lose the privilege of purchasing food stamps without receiving a compensating amount of cash.

Your committee notes that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Secretary of Agriculture have both stated that cash assistance should eventually be substituted for food stamps in a way that would leave the individual at least as well off in total benefits. Your committee urges that the executive branch continue to explore the possibility and potential implication of combining food assistance programs and cash assistance programs into a single integrated system which meets all the maintenance requirements of needy families.

Your committee feels very strongly that a solution to this problem must be achieved and it is recommended that the Committee on Ways and Means and the Committee on Agriculture jointly work out legislation at the earliest opportunity that would provide for integration of the two programs under a unified administration.
4. MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, AND CHILD CARE PROGRAMS

Since the AFDC program is being repealed, the work incentive program for AFDC recipients is replaced by a broadened, strengthened program of manpower training and child care for recipients of the new family assistance program.

a. Operation of training and employment program

Your committee over the years has believed that a mechanism has to be developed which would make it possible for welfare recipients to develop into citizens who play a significant role as workers in the economy of the Nation. It is toward this end that your committee's bill includes provisions to train, prepare for employment, and otherwise assist recipients of family assistance and State supplementary payments in securing and retaining regular employment and having the opportunity for advancement in employment. It was also to this end that your committee first reported out legislation in 1962 which initiated the community work and training programs. These programs—and the title V programs of the Economic Opportunity Act which followed—were welfare agency administered work and training programs which often emphasized work at the expense of meaningful training that would lead to the family leaving the public assistance rolls. When Congress authorized the work incentive (WIN) program in 1967, it was with the belief that the growing experience of the Department of Labor and the State employment offices in providing manpower training for the disadvantaged made it logical that they administer the program.

This decision has been justified in many respects. One illustration of this is the innovative development of the manpower "team" staffing arrangement which makes available an assortment of specialists to the enrollees (including "coaches" often of the same ethnic background) as opposed to the more traditional approaches used in earlier manpower programs.

Your committee has just completed a survey of WIN projects in some 29 jurisdictions, and has heard the testimony of numerous WIN administrators and experts in the field, including the organization—the Auerbach Corporation—which has the prime contract for evaluation of the program. The performance of the WIN program to date has been mixed. In many jurisdictions it has performed well—the welfare agencies and the employment services cooperating in such a manner that the program is running relatively smoothly and with considerable promise of fulfilling the objectives outlined by Congress. In other jurisdictions—including, unfortunately, some of our largest metropolitan areas—the program has gotten off to a slow start. Often these programs have been characterized by minimal welfare and employment service cooperation and, in a few instances, the hostility of one agency toward the other has been openly expressed.

Moreover, the problem of competing bureaucracies has not been restricted to the State level. Secretary of Labor Shultz stated in his testimony before the committee:

Unfortunately, our two Departments [Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare] have not always worked together as smoothly as they should. The study made by the Legis-
The committee strongly supports Secretary Shultz's position that Health, Education, and Welfare and Labor should work with the maximum of coordination in the administration of family assistance. This is essential to the effective operation of the proposed program.

This situation just outlined, coupled with a slowly developing program of child care for WIN mothers, which will be discussed subsequently in this section, makes necessary, however, a number of legislative changes in the training program.

(1) Uniform referral system.—The system of welfare agency determination of "appropriateness" of recipients for participation in the program and the resulting wide disparity in referral policy between the States are eliminated by the bill. Specific definition of the persons who are expected to register with the employment service office will eliminate the situation where, according to Department of Health, Education, and Welfare statistics, over 96 percent of the welfare recipients assessed for WIN participation in West Virginia were referred, while less than 7 percent of those assessed were referred in New York. Under the system proposed by the committee bill, welfare administrators and workers will not be able to substitute their own ideas of who should be trained for work for the national policy laid down by Congress. As a result, administrators of the manpower programs should, in all areas, have an adequate supply of candidates for their manpower training slots.

(2) Supportive services and training expenses.—Lack of necessary health and other supportive services has been particularly damaging to the effective operation of the WIN program in a number of States. The lack of medical examinations, the lack of ability to remedy minor health problems, and the lack of counseling services which might solve serious family problems all lead to unnecessary and wasteful terminations of participation in training or employment. Some States have established units in their welfare agencies which have worked effectively in getting welfare recipients into the program and in working with the manpower team in keeping them in training and on the job when they do enter employment. Under an amendment added by the committee, the bill would require, under threat of loss of Federal matching, that welfare agencies provide those supportive services which the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determines to be necessary to support the work and training aspects of the program. The bill emphasizes the importance of such services by providing 90-percent Federal matching as opposed to the 75-percent matching for other social services which are not connected with the training program. Under the bill a State must have an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare under which it must provide health, vocational rehabilitation, counseling, social and other supporting services for persons who undertake or continue manpower training or employment.

Your committee wishes to emphasize its intention that employment service-type activities in the welfare agencies should not be financed through the existing regular social service provision, or through the supporting services provision which was added by your committee's bill.
Another related problem of existing law has been reimbursement for training expenses which must come from the welfare side of the program. This has often resulted in delayed payments, multiple checks, and general inconvenience to the trainee which have had an adverse effect on his attitude toward the program. Under your committee's bill, the employment service could reimburse the trainee for necessary expenses directly related to his participation in training, such as transportation, lunches, special clothes, and supplies needed for the training.

(3) Comprehensive manpower services.—The 1967 WIN legislation authorized a comprehensive array of manpower and employment services. Your committee's bill is equally comprehensive as to the services made available and gives sufficient authority to the Department of Labor and the State employment service offices so that they may develop individual employment plans to meet the needs of individuals who have serious vocational, social, and educational handicaps. The committee bill will also assure access to services and opportunities available under existing manpower programs such as MDTA, CEP, JOBS, and other training programs of nationwide applicability. Such services and opportunities would include counseling, testing, work experience, institutional and on-the-job training, upgrading, program orientation, job development, coaching, job placement, and followup services required to assist in securing and retaining employment and opportunities for advancement. It is not intended by your committee that these programs should provide assistance which would be supportive of firms or industries which have high rates of turnover of labor because of low wages, seasonality or other factors.

(a) On-the-job training.—Your committee has been disappointed in the implementation of a number of the components of the existing program. On-the-job training opportunities under the WIN program—which currently are running at about 500 slots—have not been commensurate with the importance that the Congress has placed on this type of training. Spokesmen of the Department of Labor before the committee indicated that they have the administrative authority to deal with some of those elements which have impeded the development of OJT, such as voluminous small-print contracts which frighten small employers away from the program. The committee expects the Labor Department and the State employment services to devote special attention to the goal of making OJT a meaningful part of the program.

To make certain that such training is adequately financed, your committee's bill includes a special provision to provide funds for OJT. As stated previously, the estimated amount of family assistance benefits that would otherwise be paid to individuals participating in public or private employer-compensated OJT programs of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating, would be made available to the Secretary of Labor to pay the costs of such programs.

It is not the intention of the committee, however, that the above provision will replace the regular authorized appropriations for OJT under this program, but will add to the overall effort.

(b) Special work projects.—The committee is also distressed that the special work project provision in WIN has only been implemented in a meaningful way in one State, despite the fact that the law required their implementation in all States. The bill renews and emphasizes the special work projects and eliminates the complex financing arrangements which the Department of Labor declares has inhibited their growth. Your committee fully expects wide implementation of special work projects. Your committee also believes that these projects may be of critical importance to the training and placement of welfare recipients if employment rates fall below existing levels.

The bill provides authority for special work projects which meet real public needs and which are conducted through grants and contracts with public or nonprofit private agencies or organizations. The employment records of participants in these projects shall be reviewed at least every 6 months for the purpose of determining whether it would be feasible to place such individuals in regular employment or in other kinds of training. The projects themselves should be selected for as much training value as possible so that they will improve the employability of the participants. It is not the intention of the committee that such projects be used for permanently subsidized employment, and measures should be taken to move participants into regular jobs.

The bill retains certain safeguards in present law with respect to special work projects. No wage rates provided under any special work project would be lower than the applicable minimum wage for the particular work concerned. In addition, appropriate workmen's compensation protections, and standards for the health, safety, and other conditions applicable to the performance of work and training would be established and maintained. Conditions of work, training, education, and employment should be reasonable in light of such factors as the type of work, geographical region, and proficiency of the participant.

(c) Relocation assistance.—Authority for relocation assistance is provided under the bill in situations where an individual volunteers to move from an area where the prospects for employment are poor to one that has a shortage of workers. Such assistance would be provided only when there is assurance, by the employment service office in the area to which the individual would be moved, that an actual full-time, full-year job is available. Further, such jobs must lead to wages sufficient to remove the family being assisted in the relocation from the family assistance rolls. The committee believes that such assistance should not be provided in the case of seasonal employment.

b. Allowances for individuals undergoing training

In some instances training incentive allowances have been unfair to WIN participants in that a person enrolled in a manpower development and training (MDTA) class might be sitting beside an MDTA enrollee who was receiving a substantially higher allowance. Your committee's bill would continue the WIN allowance of $30 per month for each individual who is a member of a family and is participating in manpower training, but if his allowance under the MDTA program would be more than $30 higher than family assistance payments (plus the State supplement), the incentive allowance to the family assistance trainee would be the difference between the two allowances.

Under the Manpower Development and Training Act, the basic allowance is computed on the basis of the average weekly gross unemployment compensation payment (including allowances for dependents) for a week of total unemployment in the State making such payments during the most recent four-calendar-quarter period for which such data are available. This amount may be increased by up to $10, and in addition $5 a week for each dependent over two up to a maximum of four additional dependents. There are special provisions to deal with the situation in which an individual's unemployment compensation benefits would exceed his training allowance.

Thus, in most cases the financial incentive to take training will be in excess of $30. In the case of North Dakota, for example, family assistance plus the State supplement would equal $188 a month for a family of four. However, since the Manpower Development and Training Act allowance in that State for the head of a family of four is $255, the incentive payment would be $67 per month—the difference between $188 and $255.

The bill would provide for smaller training allowances for recipients in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

c. Utilization of other programs

Your committee's bill would provide that the Secretary of Labor, in providing manpower training and employment services, would be authorized to use other existing programs and all sectors of the economy to the maximum extent feasible so that the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive program would result. The Secretary of Labor would be authorized to reimburse other public or private agencies, where necessary, for services rendered to persons under this part.

d. Appropriation and non-Federal share

Your committee's bill would authorize appropriation of funds sufficient to carry out the manpower provisions of the bill, including payment of up to 90 percent of the cost of training and employment and related supportive services for people registered under the family assistance plan. If the non-Federal matching requirement of 10 percent (which could be made in cash or in kind) was not met in any State, a portion of its Federal share of medicaid and other welfare expenditures would be withheld until the deficit was made up. The Secretary of Labor would apportion appropriated funds equitably among the States. In developing criteria for apportionment, the Secretary of labor shall consider the number of registrations and other relevant factors.

In addition to the training slots currently contemplated under the existing WIN program, the Administration has stated that training would be expanded to a total of 225,000 slots, including 75,000 for upgrading the skills of the working poor, in the first full year of the operation of the family assistance plan.

e. Child care

Your committee has been disturbed because necessary child care has not been available in many cases when it has been needed to enable a parent to participate in training and employment under the existing work incentive program. Lack of child care has, in fact, been one of the major drawbacks in the functioning of the program, as was shown by the committee's survey of WIN projects and by the evaluation study of the Auerbach Corp.

Your committee believes that a major effort is needed to remove lack of child care as a deterrent to training and employment. It also recognizes that the availability of necessary child care is crucial to the success of the family assistance plan. The child care provisions, therefore, are aimed at making available the appropriate kind of child care needed by families who are covered by the Family Assistance Act.

Your committee's bill requires the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, both directly (by contract or grant to public or private agencies) and through a system of prime grantees, to provide child care for individuals participating in training or employment under the manpower program. The Secretary is authorized to make grants for up to 100 percent of the costs of child care projects (including transportation, and the alteration, remodeling and renovation of facilities) to public or nonprofit private agencies which, in a particular geographic area, will assure that child care is provided to persons entitled to receive it under the Family Assistance Act. The organization or agency to serve as the prime grantee for a geographical area is to be designated by the appropriate elected or appointed official or officials in that area. The prime grantee will be required to demonstrate a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency. Where appropriate, group or institutional care for children attending school would be provided through local school systems arrangements with local educational agencies. Child care programs provided under the act would be of various kinds, providing for the kind of care needed in the light of different circumstances and needs of the children to be served. The Secretary is also authorized to charge a fee for part or all of the cost of child care if a family has the ability to make a payment.

Your committee believes that the child care provisions of the Family Assistance Act will help to overcome some of the obstacles which have inhibited the development and provision of child care services in the past. By providing for Federal initiative and responsibility and full Federal funding, your committee is making it possible for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to move expeditiously and quickly, without being required to wait for State or local organizations and agencies to provide matching programs and funding.

The committee also expects that the Department will use its grant and contract authority to make certain that the organizations and agencies involved will provide for a greater diversity in the kinds of child care than that which is currently available. For example, school age children could, in many cases, be most appropriately cared for in the school when care is needed in out-of-school hours. Parents should have the option, too, of using babysitters of their choice, if they do not care to use, or do not have available, group child care facilities which are appropriate for their children. The committee does not expect that day care centers will be used in cases where other kinds of care are more appropriate.

By requiring that the prime grantees demonstrate a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency, the committee believes that a greater degree of coordination of manpower and child care services can be achieved than has been the case in previous programs.

The committee bill will make it possible to use a wider variety of child care resources than has been possible in the past. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will be able to make grants and contracts according to his determination of how family assistance recipients can be served most effectively. He will be able to utilize public agencies, as well as private, nonprofit and profitmaking agencies and organizations. Thus, both the public and private sectors will be used in the provision of child care. The same authority will be available to prime grantees in entering into agreements within their areas of responsibility.

Your committee believes that well-designed child care programs, in addition to benefiting parents by freeing them for work, can also be of great benefit to the child and can help to break the cycle of poverty. Child care for the preschool child should not be merely custodial care, but should provide for child development, through the provision of health, educational, and other necessary services.

However, your committee is also concerned that unreasonable Federal, State, and local standards and licensing requirements have interfered with the provision of essential child care services, and may prove a barrier to the development and provision of the services essential to the success of the family assistance plan. Therefore, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is requested to furnish the committee by February 1, 1971, a report and recommendations based on a thorough review, in cooperation with State and local officials, of existing Federal standards as well as State and local licensing requirements, in order to determine those requirements which are essential both to protecting the child and assuring an appropriate program for him.

Your committee's bill also authorizes funds for grants to, and contracts with, any public or private agency or organization for part or all of the costs for evaluation, research, training of personnel, technical assistance or research or demonstration projects to determine more effective methods of providing child care services.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has told the committee that it intends to request budget authority of $386 million for child care purposes for the first full year of operation of the child care program. It estimates that it will provide services for 300,000 school age children at an estimated cost of $400 per child and for 150,000 preschool children at an estimated cost of $1,600 per child. A total of $26 million would be designated for alteration, remodeling and renovation of facilities and for staff training and research and demonstration projects.

In order to assure that child care resources will be developed as rapidly as possible, your committee has provided that the child care provisions will be effective as soon as the bill is enacted into law.

f. Advance funding

(1) In order to give adequate notice of available funding, under your committee's bill, appropriations for one year to pay the cost of the program during the next year would be authorized.

(2) In order to make the transition to advance funding, initial funding under your committee's bill would provide for the year of enactment of this bill and for the next following year.

g. Evaluation and research: Reports to Congress

(1) Your committee's bill would provide for continuing evaluation and research by the Secretaries of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare of the manpower training and employment programs provided under this act, including their effectiveness in achieving stated goals.
and their impact on other related programs. The Secretary of Labor may conduct research and demonstration projects to improve the effectiveness of the manpower training and employment programs. He may also conduct demonstrations of improved training techniques for upgrading the skills of the working poor. The Secretary of Labor may, for these purposes, contract for independent evaluations of and research regarding such programs or individual projects under such programs, and establish a data collection, processing, and retrieval system.

Sums not to exceed $15 million would be authorized for such research and evaluation in any fiscal year.

(2) The bill would require an annual report to the Congress from the Secretary of Labor on the programs for manpower training and employment services. The committee believes that an information and accounting system should be maintained so that the amount of money expended and services rendered under this program may be clearly distinguishable from those under other manpower programs. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare also is required to file an annual report on the programs for child care and supportive services.

5. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN

Your committee's bill would eliminate the provisions of the present AFDC program that relate to cash payments for families with dependent children, but would not substantially alter those provisions of title IV which provide services for families, foster care for children and emergency assistance. The requirement of the present AFDC program that the State plan of aid and services to families with children must be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State would be modified, as it would apply only to services. The bill would authorize the Secretary to permit certain exceptions to the "State-wideness" requirement.

B. CHANGES IN THE PROGRAM FOR THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

1. AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Your committee has a continuing deep concern for those of our citizens who are in financial need because of old age or because of blindness or other crippling disabilities. Your committee believes that it is important at this time to revise the programs aiding those people in order to improve the substance and operation of these programs.

2. GRANTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Your committee's bill amends the existing title XVI of the Social Security Act and sets forth the revised title XVI in its entirety. The existing title I (Old-age Assistance), title X (Aid to the Blind), and title XIV (Aid to the Permanently Disabled) would be repealed. Under the bill the new title represents the only federally aided public assistance program for needy aged, blind, or disabled individuals. In addition, Federal definitions would be substituted for those of the individual States. The more uniform requirements are necessary to facilitate Federal administration of the program. The changes in the individual sections of title XVI are set forth below.

a. Appropriations

The section of your committee's bill which authorizes appropriations for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under State plans, is amended to remove any reference to medical assistance, including medical assistance for the aged. This is because existing provisions of law preclude, as of January 1, 1970, Federal financial participation in medical assistance provided under any of the public assistance titles except title XIX (Medicaid).

b. State plans for financial assistance and services to the aged, blind, and disabled

Your committee's bill retains most of the existing State plan requirements relating to the programs of aid to the aged, blind and disabled, and adds several new requirements. Among new requirements is a periodic evaluation of the State plan at least annually, and an obligation on the part of the States to observe priorities and performance standards set by the Secretary in the administration of the State plan and in providing services thereunder.

The present prohibition against any age requirement of more than 65 years and against any citizenship requirement excluding U.S. citizens have been retained. Also, the bill requires that payments cannot be denied by a State, because of lack of citizenship, to an alien who has been residing in the United States for 5 years.

Your committee's bill prohibits any residency requirements that would exclude any resident of the State.

c. Determination of need

Your committee's great concern with the inadequacy and unevenness of assistance payments now being made to people in need because of old age, blindness, or disability, is reflected in the bill's provisions governing determination of need. The bill requires the States to pay cash assistance in an amount which, when added to nonexcluded income from other sources, guarantees income of at least $110 per month per recipient. The bill would also require that the standard of need not be lower than the standard applied on the date of enactment under the State plan approved under the existing title XVI or (in case the State had not had such a plan) the appropriate one of the standards of need applied under the plans approved under titles I, X, and XIV. (It is recognized that some individuals in nursing homes and institutions have a large part of their needs met under other programs and that any dollar minimum should not apply to them.)

The bill would require the States to use the same definition of allowable resources as provided for in the family assistance plan (see page 3).

Your committee's bill would also provide that the States could not impose any responsibility for a relative to support the individual; except that a State could require that a spouse support the recipient or that parents support a child who is under 21 or blind or severely disabled.

Under existing law, a State may (at its option) disregard the first $20 of earnings of an aged person and one-half of the next $60 per month. Your committee's bill changes the optional disregard provision to make it the same as that in the family assistance program—the first $85 per month plus one-half of the remainder.

Your committee also believes that the earnings exemption for the severely disabled should be liberalized and made mandatory on the States and the bill so provides. The bill makes it consistent with that which has been in effect for some years for the blind, i.e., a mandatory exemption of $85 per month plus one-half of the remainder, together with any additional amounts that are disregarded under an approved plan of vocational rehabilitation. Your committee believes this change will provide more meaningful encouragement for severely disabled persons to accept rehabilitation services and employment within their capacities and will assure equitable treatment as between blind individuals and individuals with other forms of severe disability.

The bill would retain the present mandatory disregard of the exemption of the first $85 of earnings per month in the case of the blind. Also, as under present law, $7.50 in any income for the aged, blind, or disabled, could be disregarded at the option of the States.

d. Payments to States for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled

Your committee's bill would establish the following new Federal matching formula with respect to expenditures for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under State plans approved under the new Title XVI. With respect to such assistance, the Federal Government would make the following Federal contribution: (1) 90 percent of the first $65 of average payment, plus (2) 25 percent of the balance up to a maximum set by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

e. Alternative provision for direct Federal payments to individuals

The bill contains new authority which would permit the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to enter into agreements with any State under which the Secretary would make the payments directly to the eligible individuals. Under such an agreement the Federal Government would pay all of the administrative costs. Your committee believes that this authority will make possible economies in operation that are generally associated with unified administration.

f. Overpayments and underpayments

Your committee's bill would require that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare make appropriate provision to avoid penalizing recipients for past overpayments if they were without fault and if adjustment or recovery would defeat the purposes of the program or be against equity or good conscience or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration.

g. Operation of State plans

The bill sets out conditions under which the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would withhold Federal funds in whole or in part when the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency, finds that the State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled no longer complies with the plan requirements.

h. Payments to States for services and administration

The bill provides, that, with respect to services for which expenditures are made under the approved State plan, the Federal Government would pay the same percentages of costs as under existing law—that is, 75 percent in the case of the training of personnel and certain specified services and 50 percent in the case of the other costs of administering the State plan. The bill also retains the provision under which 75-percent matching is available only when the State plan provides for the minimum services for self-support or self-care prescribed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.

i. Computation of payments to States

Your committee's bill authorizes the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to estimate before each quarter the amount a State is entitled to for aid, services, and administration for that quarter, and authorizes the Secretary to pay the estimated amount in installments adjusted by any overpayment or underpayment for any prior quarter. This continues the arrangement under present law.

j. Definition

Under existing law eligibility on account of disability is limited to those who are permanently and totally disabled, while your committee's bill would provide aid to those who are "severely" disabled. The bill would also specify that whether an individual is blind or severely disabled would be determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, whereas under present law there are no federally prescribed criteria for determining whether an individual is blind or totally disabled.

The committee expects that severely disabled will be interpreted to mean persons whose physical or mental conditions substantially preclude them from engaging in gainful employment or self-employment. It is also expected that the disability is one that has or can be expected to last for a period of 12 months or result in death. Thus, the definition of severely disabled would follow closely the definition now used for disability insurance benefits under title II.

Your committee understands that all but a very few States use essentially the same definition of blindness insofar as central visual acuity is concerned (i.e., less than 20/200 in the better eye with maximum correction). It accordingly believes that a uniform national definition is warranted at this time.

k. Repeal of titles I, X, and XIV of the Social Security Act

Your committee's bill would repeal titles I, X, and XIV, which are replaced by the provisions of the present bill.

C. Miscellaneous Conforming Amendments

Your committee's bill would make a number of necessary conforming changes in titles IV, XI, XVIII, XIX of the Social Security Act.

It would also amend the Social Security Amendments of 1969. Section 1007 of these amendments is a provision for passing along some of the social security benefit increase provided under those amendments to public assistance recipients. The provision requires each State to assure that every recipient in the adult categories of public assistance who receives a social security benefit will receive a $4 monthly increase in total income (either by disregarding that part of the social security benefit or by raising the State's standard of assistance for all recipients). This provision was made applicable only through June 1970.
Under your committee's bill the requirement would be made permanent.

D. General

1. Effective Date

The changes made in the bill, other than the child care provisions would be effective with July 1, 1971, except for those States which have statutes which prevent them from making the supplementary payments required by the new part E of title IV and whose legislatures have not met and adjourned by July 1, 1971. The committee has been informed that only a few States would be in this situation. The bill would be effective on July 1, 1972, or earlier if the State certifies that the statutory impediment no longer exists. The child care provisions would be effective upon enactment of the bill.

2. Saving Provision

Your committee's bill assures that for 2 fiscal years after the year in which the supplementary payment provisions become effective a State's expenditures for supplementary payments and payments under title XVI (from its own funds) would not by reason of the requirements of this act have to exceed its expenditures (non-Federal) under existing law for the same year. The bill provides that for these 2 fiscal years the Federal Government would meet the excess of non-Federal expenses made necessary by the bill over what the non-Federal expense would have been under present law. States and localities would thus be guaranteed no required increase in expenditures for assistance payments as compared with what would have been expended under existing law for the same period. Since most States would not be required to incur additional costs as a result of enactment of this bill, this provision would act as a saving provision for a few States that would incur relatively modest welfare costs under the bill.

3. Special Provisions for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

Your committee's bill includes special provisions for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam under which the amount of family assistance benefits, and all of the amounts used under the family assistance plan (other than the $720 amount of annual earnings to be disregarded) and the new title XVI of the Social Security Act (aid to the aged, blind, and disabled), would be adjusted (but only downward) as the per capita income of each is related to the per capita income of the lowest per capita income State.

IV. Financing the Family Assistance Act

The cost in calendar year 1968 terms to the Federal Government of your committee's bill is $4.4 billion above expenditures under present law, the same as the cost of the welfare recommendations submitted to the Congress by President Nixon in October 1969. This estimate is based upon information furnished to your committee by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The 1968 figures are the latest available and the reason they are used is explained in the discussion below under the heading Federal Control of Costs. However, the components of cost differ, as shown in the table below:

1 The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare was not able to furnish all of the cost information presented on the basis of the figures applying to the fiscal year 1972, the first full year under the proposed programs. The costs are expressed, therefore, in terms of what the programs would have cost had they been in operation in 1968 (but including the effects of the 15 percent general increase in social security benefits effective this year).

2 This item is the estimated cost of the family assistance plan payments to low-income families with children minus the cost of the Federal share of AFDC payments under existing law.

3 For the President's proposal, this item is the cost of the "50—90" rule (explained below). For the committee bill, it is the cost of the 30-percent Federal matching of State supplemental payments plus the cost of the saving provision described on page 4.

4 These figures are not in the bill; they are the figures the administration has indicated it will include in the 1972 budget for such purposes.

Several of the changes made by your committee affect the way in which the Federal Government will incur costs and the financial impact on individual States. Chief among the changes were:

1. Deletion of a provision which permitted one-half of unearned income to be disregarded in computing the family assistance benefits;
2. Deletion of a provision which assured the States a savings of 10 percent of their costs in the federally-assisted public assistance programs and which also required certain States to spend at least 50 percent of these costs (the "50—90" rule);
3. The inclusion of a new provision under which the Federal Government will pay 30 percent of a State's supplementary payment costs (up to the poverty level); and
4. Increasing the minimum income payment (to an individual with no other income) in the adult categories from $90 per recipient to $110 per month.

The deletion of the unearned income exemption resulted in lowered costs sufficient to finance your committee's changes. In addition, the recently enacted changes in social security benefits lowered costs of public assistance for both the Federal Government and the States. A summary of the cost impact of these changes is shown below.

The total fiscal savings afforded to the States by your committee's bill are about the same as those which the States would have achieved under the administration's proposal. The way in which the States share in this fiscal relief, however, is substantially changed. In general, States which have been making greater fiscal effort in their welfare programs achieve more savings than they would have under the President's proposed legislation. This results from the combined impact of the change to the 30 percent matching in State supplementary payment costs, which helps States with higher benefit levels, and the increased minimum income standards, which require States which have relatively low benefit levels in their adult category programs to increase their fiscal effort. A comparison of fiscal relief under the administration's initial proposals and under your committee's bill is shown below.

*These States have extensive General Assistance programs for the working poor. They will derive additional fiscal relief from the Family Assistance Plan beyond what is shown here.

The impact of the saving provision is shown in the combined program columns. States that would otherwise incur costs from the Committee Bill are shown as obtaining no fiscal relief. Federal costs are increased by the amount estimated as reimbursable to the State.

1 Estimates include impact of 15-percent social security increase and $4 "pass through" as well as effects of committee bill. Federal payments in family programs are the costs of FAP payments to current recipients (plus UF cases where States do not now have such programs) plus 20 percent of the estimated State supplements.
2 Does not include estimated payments to the working poor.
3 These payments are very crudely estimated on the basis of the distribution of poverty among the States in 1960.

ALTERNATIVE BENEFIT LEVELS CONSIDERED

Your committee also considered the basic elements affecting the cost and coverage of plans like the family assistance plan. These elements are: (1) the amount of benefit provided to a family with no other income (the basic benefit level); (2) the rate at which this benefit level is reduced by the presence of earnings (the disregard formula or marginal tax rate); and (3) the level of family income at which it is no longer eligible for any benefit (the breakeven point). Any two of these elements determine the third. They thus also determine the cost of the plan and the number of eligible families.

Raising the basic benefit level is consistent with the desire to provide more adequate support for those families who have no other means of support. Increasing it $100, however, and keeping other parts of the family assistance plan the same, raises the family breakeven point by $200, increases the cost by $500 million and the number of eligible families by 300 thousand. The cost of such increases in general gets progressively higher; i.e. each additional $100 in the basic benefit costs more than the preceding one. The costs and number of eligible families under plans otherwise identical to the family assistance plan, but with different basic benefit levels are shown below. The costs shown are gross costs and are not directly comparable to the net costs shown above.

1 Actually, the basic benefit level and the breakeven point jointly determine only the average tax rate; a variable marginal tax rate, low in certain ranges of income and high in others, can be designed to produce any necessary average.

1 Cost figures are for families with children only; i.e., they do not include costs of changes in adult categories. Administrative costs are not included.
2 The proportion of the $500 for the first two members to $300 for additional members in the $1,600 plan is maintained at the higher benefit levels.
3 Does not include fiscal relief from savings in general assistance programs.

Raising the marginal tax rate, thereby lowering the breakeven point, is consistent with the desire to reduce costs and prevent families with moderately higher incomes from becoming eligible for benefits. But it is inconsistent with the desire to provide positive financial incentives for work. For example, your committee's bill permits the first $60 per month of earned income to be completely disregarded in determining a family's benefit under the family assistance plan. Deleting this particular provision would reduce the cost of the bill by $840 million. Unfortunately, it would also produce many situations in which family heads would find themselves with less total disposable income when working than when not working. This is because expenses are incurred by going to work. In fact, the figure $60 was chosen because it represents the average amount of work related expenses as determined by studies of the Department of Labor. Your committee finds that providing this disregard is necessary if appropriate work incentives are to be maintained. It also finds that providing a flat amount is preferable to existing law, which places no ceiling on the allowable deductions for work related expenses which States may permit in their current AFDC programs. Providing incentives for work is one thing; encouraging workers to take jobs which, in the absence of a family assistance or AFDC program, would yield them very little additional net income is quite another.

Beyond the basic disregard of $60 a month, your committee's bill provides that family assistance benefits be reduced 50 cents for each additional dollar of earnings. State supplementary payments to families eligible for them will be reduced by 17 cents for each dollar of additional earnings, if the family is receiving family assistance benefits. The combined effect of the two reduction formulas is that families receiving both family assistance and State supplementary benefits will have their total benefits reduced by 67 cents for each dollar of earnings above $60. Families whose incomes are sufficiently high that they are no longer eligible for family assistance benefits but are still eligible for some State supplementary payment will have their benefits reduced 80 cents for each additional dollar of earnings above the family assistance break-even point.

EXTENSION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE TO SINGLE ADULTS AND CHILDLESS COUPLES

Your committee investigated the cost and coverage implications of extending the family assistance plan concept to couples and unrelated individuals. With a basic benefit level of $500 per year for a single individual and $1,000 for a couple, family assistance gross payments would increase by $1 billion and the number of persons covered by 4.5 million. Of course, net additional costs would be somewhat less, as the costs of the adult categories would decline. However, there would still have to be a substantial amount of Federal sharing of State supplementary payments within these categories, since the family assistance plan extended in this way would come nowhere near replacing the present Federal share of costs. (The present average annual Federal cost per OAA recipient is approximately $565; under an extended family assistance plan concept, the average direct Federal payment would be less than $300.) Further, every State would have to supplement the Federal payments to the aged, blind, and disabled because the maximum Federal payment to an individual with no other income would be $41.66 per month. Because of the cost, and because no substantial improvements in the adult categories would be derived, your committee does not believe it wise to extend the family assistance plan concept to childless couples and unrelated individuals.

FINANCING ADULT ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Your committee's bill does make several substantial improvements in the adult categories although it does not revise the basic nature of the program.

The administration had proposed a new Federal matching formula of 100 percent of the first $50, 50 percent of the next $15, and 25 percent thereafter (of the average payment per recipient). Your committee's bill proposes that the formula be 90 percent of the first $65 and 25 percent thereafter. This increases the Federal cost by about $30 million but prevents possible situations in which a State might make no contribution.

The administration had proposed a minimum income standard in the adult categories of $90 per month per recipient. (A minimum income standard requires the State to make payments to individuals, which in combination with the individual's other income, equals the minimum standard.) Your committee's bill has a minimum income standard of $110 a month per recipient.

It should be noted that the administration proposals were submitted prior to the recently enacted social security benefit increase. Since many of the recipients in the adult categories also receive social security benefit payments, changes in the latter program affect the Federal costs of public assistance. The savings due to the social security increase are estimated to be about $100 million. These savings, along with other changes in the administration proposal, offset the increased cost of raising the minimum income standard.
Your committee explored the cost implications of minimum income standards above $110 per month. It finds that they would require substantial additional Federal expenditures and require changes in the proposed Federal matching formula. The latter change would be necessary to protect the States from incurring costs that would not be offset by other provisions of your committee’s bill. The cost implications of higher minimum income standards are shown below.

FEDERAL CONTROL OF COSTS

Your committee has been concerned in recent years about the open-ended public assistance matching formula and the indications that the costs of the present welfare program, if the program is left unchanged, will continue to spiral upwards. The bill represents an effort to gain control over these ever-increasing costs. Under existing legislation, the Federal Government has virtually no control over welfare expenditures. This is especially true where States have elected to use the Federal matching formula provided by title XIX of the Social Security Act. Under that formula there is no limit on the extent to which the States can raise benefit levels or permit their caseloads to increase, and still receive 50 percent or higher Federal matching of their welfare costs. In contrast, substantial Federal control over welfare costs is achieved through three separate provisions of your committee’s bill: (1) the basic benefit levels in the family assistance plan can only be changed by congressional action; (2) the Federal Government will only share in the States’ supplementary payments that result from the use of a need standard at or below the poverty level; and (3) the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare can establish an upper limit to the Federal Government’s matching of State costs in the adult category programs.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has not provided detailed estimates of the costs of H.R. 1631 for periods later than calendar year 1968. (Procedures developed by the Department for estimating costs were devised during 1969 when the only available data was for 1968.) The Department has indicated that it will provide more current estimates as soon as possible. In the meantime, it is possible to indicate how the costs of public assistance might change under your committee’s bill over time.

1 The saving provision would, of course, protect the States. But at higher minimum income standards many more States would be eligible for reimbursement under this clause.
Under your committee's bill, the cost components of maintenance payments are different than under existing legislation. Family assistance gross payments are direct Federal payments to low-income families with children. In addition, there will be a 90-percent Federal matching of State supplementary payments. These two components constitute an approximate counterpart to the present Federal share of payments in the aid to families with dependent children program. Under your committee's bill, the Federal share of the adult category costs is more generous but otherwise unchanged.

Potential increases or decreases in these costs components are discussed below.

Total gross family assistance payments will be determined by the number of low-income families with children and their income other than assistance. With constant benefit levels, as population increases, costs increase; as incomes increase, costs decrease. If the earned income of the working poor continues to increase as it has in the past, the savings will more than offset the impact of increasing population. Preliminary studies of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare indicate that gross payment costs are likely to decline at the annual rate of about $70 to $100 million per year. These estimates do not allow for the impact of the training programs, disincentive effects, a change in the rate of family breakup, or changes in the rate of unemployment.

The cost of the 90 percent Federal matching of State supplemental payments is likely to increase over time—barring an abrupt reversal of recent trends in public assistance. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has indicated that, were these trends to continue, this cost component would increase about $120 to $150 million per year.

The rate of increase in the costs of the adult categories is unlikely to be affected by your committee's bill. However, that rate would now be applied to a larger Federal share. Based on recent trends, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare indicated that the Federal costs in the adult categories under your committee's bill are likely to increase about $210 million per year. (The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare could place a ceiling on Federal participation in the adult categories. Such a ceiling would only affect a few States with high payments.)

A summary of potential annual changes in Federal costs under your committee's bill is shown below.

Assumes that the basic benefit level of $500 for the first two family members and $300 for each additional member in the family assistance plan remains unchanged. For illustrative purposes only, estimates also assume that present trends in public assistance are not changed by the provisions of H.R. 16511.

Under the Department's assumptions that (1) the recent growth in caseload and costs will continue unabated, (2) that the levels of family assistance payments will remain unchanged, and (3) that if the present system were continued the States would be willing to pick up a larger share of these increased costs, the net additional costs of your committee's bill in 1975, as estimated by the Department, is shown in the following table:

* Assumes that, with constant benefit levels, family assistance gross payment decline slightly. Other cost items are assumed to increase at the same rate as they have during the last 3 years (see discussion in text above).

Your committee believes that the additional restraints on State expenditures, a decrease in family breakup, increased activities to obtain support from parents, and the impact of work and training programs provided for in the bill will materially affect the present rapidly increasing costs of public assistance, thereby reducing the actual net additional costs somewhat below those shown above.

V. SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS OF THE BILL

The first section contains the short title of the bill—the "Family Assistance Act of 1970"—and the table of contents.

TITLE I—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

SECTION 101. ESTABLISHMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

Section 101 of the bill amends title IV of the Social Security Act by adding parts D, E, and F to establish a new family assistance plan. Part D provides for the payment of family assistance benefits by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; part E provides for State supplementation of these benefits; and part F contains administrative provisions.

PART D—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

SECTION 441. APPROPRIATIONS

Section 441 authorizes the appropriation each year of a sum sufficient to carry out part D, for the purpose of providing a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children in a manner which will strengthen family life, encourage work training and self-support, and enhance personal dignity.
SECTION 442. ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

Eligibility

Section 442(a) provides that each family (as defined in section 445) whose income other than that excluded under section 443(b) is less than $500 per year for each of the first two family members plus $300 per year for each additional member, and whose resources other than those excluded under section 444 are less than $1,500, will be paid a family assistance benefit.

Amount

Section 442(b) provides that the amount of the family assistance benefit is $500 per year for each of the first two family members plus $300 per year for each additional member, reduced by the amount of the family's income not excluded under section 443(b).

Period for determination of benefits

Section 442(c)(1) provides that a family's eligibility for family assistance benefits, and the amount of such benefits, is to be determined for each calendar quarter by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare on the basis of his estimates of the family's income for such quarter, taking into account income for an earlier period and any likely changes in conditions which would affect the family's eligibility or the amount of the benefits. Redeterminations for any quarter are to be made at such times as the Secretary may prescribe, effective prospectively.

Section 442(c)(2) provides that the Secretary may reduce a family's assistance benefits for a quarter if the family files its application for such benefits after that quarter begins.

Section 442(c)(3) provides that the Secretary may, for purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits, consider income actually received in one period (or expenses incurred in earning income in one period) to have been received (or incurred) in another.

Special limits on gross income

Section 442(d) provides that the Secretary by regulation may prescribe circumstances under which gross income from a trade or business (including farming) is large enough to preclude eligibility for family assistance benefits.

Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

Section 442(e) is a cross-reference to section 1108(e) of the Act (as added by section 403 of the bill), which sets out the special method by which family assistance benefits are to be determined for families in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

SECTION 443. INCOME

Meaning of income

Section 443(a) provides that, for purposes of the family assistance benefit program, income means both earned and unearned income.

(1) Earned income is defined in paragraph (1) as—

(A) remuneration from employment (i.e., remuneration for services performed as an employee (as defined in section 210(j) of the Act)), but excluding—
(i) payments (described in section 209(b) of the Act) made to an employee or his family on account of retirement, sickness, or accident, medical or hospital expenses, or death, under a plan or system, and payments on an employee's behalf into such a system (with the payments being counted as unearned income when made to the employee or his family out of the plan or system, but not being counted as either earned or unearned income when made by the employer into the plan or system),

(ii) payments (described in section 209(c)) made to an employee on account of retirement but not under a plan or system,

(iii) payments (described in section 209(d)) made on account of sickness or accident disability, or medical or hospital expenses in connection with sickness or accident disability, not under a plan or system, after the six calendar months following the month in which the employee last worked (with payments during the first six months being counted as earned income),

(iv) payments (described in section 209(f)) made by an employer for unemployment compensation,

(v) payments (described in section 209(k)) made by an employer on account of moving expenses of an employee,

(vi) payments for certain services actually performed as an employee but treated as self-employment; and

(B) net earnings from self-employment as defined in section 211 of the Act (except for that part of section 211 which deals with the optional definition of net earnings from farming), including certain services performed by ministers, Christian Science practitioners, and members of religious orders, and by certain members of religious faiths who have received an exemption from coverage.

(2) Unearned income is defined in paragraph (2) as all income other than earned income (as defined in paragraph (1)), including specifically any payments received as annuity, pension, retirement, or disability benefits, veterans' or workmen's compensation, old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits, railroad retirement benefits, unemployment benefits, prizes, awards, life insurance policy proceeds, gifts (cash or otherwise), support and alimony payments, inheritances, rents, dividends, interest, and royalties.

Exclusions from income

Section 443(b) provides that the following are to be excluded in determining a family's income:

(1) Earned income of a child regularly attending school, subject to limitations (as to amount or otherwise) prescribed by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare;

(2) the total unearned income of the family in a calendar quarter which (as determined under criteria prescribed by the Secretary) is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such unearned income does not exceed $30 in the quarter, and the total earned income of the family in a calendar quarter which (as determined under such criteria) is received too irregularly or infrequently to be included, if such earned income does not exceed $30 in the quarter;
(3) part or all of any earned income which (under regulations prescribed by the Secretary) is necessary to pay the cost of child care so that the family member incurring such cost can participate in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

(4) the first $720 a year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of the total earned income (not previously excluded) of all family members plus one-half of the remainder;

(5) food stamps or other assistance (not including veterans' pensions) which is based on need and is furnished by a State or locality or a Federal agency, or by a private charitable organization (as determined by the Secretary);

(6) the training and other allowances provided under the new section 432(a) (discussed below);

(7) the tuition and fees portion of any scholarship or fellowship at an educational institution; and

(8) home produce produced and used by the family.

SECTION 444. RESOURCES

Exclusions from resources

Section 444(a) provides that, in determining a family's resources, its home, household goods, and personal property are to be excluded, along with any other property which the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determines by regulation is essential to the family's means of self-support.

Disposition of resources

Section 444(b) directs the Secretary, by regulation, to prescribe the period or periods within which, and the manner in which, a family's property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits. Any benefits paid during such a period are to be conditioned on such disposal and considered overpayments (and therefore recoverable) to the extent that they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which the benefits were paid.

SECTION 445. MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD

Composition of family

Section 445(a) defines a family (for purposes of parts A, C, and E as well as the family assistance benefit program) as two or more people who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption and who are residents of the United States living together in a place of residence maintained as a home by one or more of them. At least one of the family members must be a child who is not married to another family member and who is in the care of, or dependent upon, another family member. A parent (of a child living in the place of residence), or a spouse of such a parent, who is determined by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to be temporarily absent from the place of residence in order to engage in or seek employment or while he is in the military service is to be considered as living in the residence.

Definition of child

Section 445(b) defines a child (for purposes of parts C and E as well as the family assistance benefit program) as an individual who is under age 18, or is under age 21 and (as determined by the Secretary under regulations) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university or a course of training in preparation for employment.

_Determination of family relationships_

Section 445(c) provides that in determining whether two individuals are related by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law is to be applied.

_Income and resources of noncontributing individual_

Section 445(d) provides that the income and resources of an individual other than a parent or the spouse of a parent which (as determined under criteria prescribed by the Secretary) is not available to other members of the family is to be excluded in determining the family's eligibility for and amount of benefits, and an individual (other than such a parent or spouse) any of whose income and resources is not available to a family will not be considered a member of the family (except that if such individual is a child who would otherwise be considered a member of the family, he will be considered a member of the family for purposes of determining the family's eligibility (but not the amount of its benefit)).

_Recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled ineligible_

Section 445(e) provides that an individual who is receiving aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under a State plan approved under title XVI of the Act (as amended by section 201 of the bill), or whose needs are taken into account in determining the need of another individual receiving such aid, will not be considered a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the family's benefits.

SECTION 446. PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

_Payments of benefits_

Section 446(a)(1) provides that family assistance benefits are to be paid at such times and in such installments as the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determines.

Section 446(a)(2) provides that a family's benefits may be paid to any one or more family members, or (on behalf of the family, if the Secretary deems it appropriate) to another person who is interested in or concerned with the family's welfare.

Section 446(a)(3) allows the Secretary to prescribe regulations establishing ranges of incomes within which single amounts of family assistance benefits will apply.

_Overpayments and underpayments_

Section 446(b) provides that when more or less than the correct amount of family assistance benefits has been paid to a family the Secretary will make proper adjustments by increases or decreases future payments or by recovery from or payment to one or more individuals who are or were members of the family, with appropriate provision to avoid penalizing family members who were without fault if adjustment or recovery would defeat the purpose of the program, be against equity or good conscience, or impede efficient or effective administration.
Hearings and review

Section 446(c)(1) provides that the Secretary will furnish reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any person who is or claims to be a family member and is in disagreement with a determination on eligibility for family assistance benefits, the amount of the benefits, or the number of persons in the family, if a request for such hearing is made within thirty days after notice of the determination is received. If payments of benefits are already being made to the family, they will be continued until a determination is made on the basis of the hearing (or the claim is otherwise disposed of), but any benefits so paid will be considered overpayments (and therefore recoverable) if the determination is that they were incorrectly paid.

Section 446(c)(2) provides that a determination by the Secretary must be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing.

Section 446(c)(3) provides that a final determination by the Secretary after a hearing will be subject to judicial review as provided under section 205(g) of the Act except that all determinations of fact on the basis of such hearing will be conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

Procedures; prohibition of assignments

Section 446(d) provides that sections 206 and 207 of the Act, and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 of the Act, will apply with respect to family assistance benefits the same as they apply to OASDI benefits. Section 206 of the Act authorizes the Secretary to prescribe rules and regulations governing representation of claimants and to prescribe maximum fees which may be charged for services performed in connection with any claim. Section 207 of the Act provides that the right of any person to future payments will not be transferable or assignable or subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process. Subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 of the Act give the Secretary the authority to make rules and regulations concerning evidence and the submission thereof, and to issue subpoenas for the purpose of any hearing, investigation, or other procedure.

Applications and furnishing of information by families

Section 446(e)(1) provides that the Secretary is to prescribe regulations with respect to the filing of applications, the furnishing of information, and the reporting of events and circumstances, as necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

Section 446(e)(2) provides that in order to encourage prompt reporting of events and circumstances relevant to eligibility for and amount of benefits and more accurate estimates of expected income or expenses the Secretary may treat as overpayments all or part of any payments made for a period during which there was a failure or delay in reporting, or inaccurate reporting of information on which the estimates of income or expenses were based.

Furnishing of information by other agencies

Section 446(f) provides that the head of any Federal agency is to furnish the Secretary any information needed for determining eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits or for verifying other information.

SECTION 447. REGISTRATION AND REFERRAL OF FAMILY MEMBERS FOR MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT

Section 447(a) provides that every individual who is a member of an eligible family and who is not excepted by section 447(b) must register with the local State public employment office for manpower services, training, and employment as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor. If and for so long as any individual fails to register as required, he will not be considered a family member for purposes of determining his family's eligibility for or amount of benefits but his income will be counted as family income in the regular way; except that if he is the only family member other than a child he will be considered a family member for purposes of determining the family's eligibility for benefits (but not their amount). No part of any family assistance benefit may be paid to any individual who fails to register for manpower services, training, or employment as required; but the Secretary may, if he deems appropriate, pay the benefits due the family to any person, other than a member of the family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

Section 447(b) provides that an individual will not be required to register for manpower services, training, or employment if the Secretary determines that such individual is (1) unable to engage in work or training by reason of illness, incapacity, or advanced age, (2) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for such child, (3) the mother or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and is not otherwise exempted from the requirement of registration, so long as such father or other adult male relative has not refused to register or to participate in work or training, (4) a child under age 16 or in school, or (5) one whose presence in the home is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household. An individual who is not required to register for manpower services, training, or employment may nevertheless register if he so desires.

Section 447(c) directs the Secretary in all appropriate cases to make provision for furnishing child care services for individuals registered for or participating in manpower services, training, employment, or vocational rehabilitation under the program.

Section 447(d) provides that the Secretary will refer to the appropriate State agency for vocational rehabilitation services any individual who is a family member and who is not required to register for manpower services, training, or employment because of incapacity. Review of such individual's incapacity and need for rehabilitation services will be made as necessary (except for individuals determined to be permanently and totally disabled) but not less often than quarterly. If the individual refuses without good cause to accept rehabilitation services, he will be treated as though he were an individual who refused to register for manpower services, training, or employment when required to do so.
SECTION 448. DENIAL OF BENEFITS IN CASE OF REFUSAL OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, OR EMPLOYMENT

Section 448(a) provides that any individual who is a family member and has registered for manpower services, training, or employment pursuant to section 447 but who refuses without good cause (as determined after a hearing by the Secretary of Labor, whose decision is final and nonreviewable) to participate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment will not be considered a family member for purposes of determining his family's eligibility for or amount of benefits but his income will be counted as family income in the regular way; except that if he is the only family member other than a child he will be considered a family member for purposes of determining the family's eligibility for benefits (but not their amount). No part of any family assistance benefit may be paid to any individual during a period when he has without good cause refused manpower services, training, or suitable employment as required; but the Secretary may, if he deems appropriate, pay the benefits due the family to any person, other than a member of the family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

Section 448(b) provides that in determining whether employment is suitable for an individual (for purposes of part C (relating to manpower services, training, employment, etc.), as well as for purposes of section 448(a)), the Secretary of Labor will consider the degree of risk to the individual's health and safety, his physical fitness for the work, his prior training, experience, and earnings, the length of his unemployment, his prospects for obtaining work based upon his potential and the availability of training opportunities, and the distance of the available work from his residence. In addition, employment is not to be considered suitable for an individual (1) if the job offered is vacant due to a labor dispute, (2) if the wages, hours, or other conditions of the work offered are contrary to or less than those prescribed by law or substantially less favorable than those prevailing for similar work in the locality, or (3) if, as a condition of employment, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.

SECTION 449. TRANSFER OF FUNDS FOR ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS

Section 449 provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will to the extent provided by agreement with the Secretary of Labor pay to the Secretary of Labor such amounts as would be paid as family assistance benefits to individuals participating in public or private employer-compensated on-the-job training programs if such individuals were not participating in such training. Sums so paid to the Secretary of Labor will be available to pay the costs of such on-the-job training programs.

SECTION 451. PAYMENTS UNDER TITLES IV, V, XVI, AND XIX CONDITIONED ON SUPPLEMENTATION

Section 451 provides that a State must enter into an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to supplement the family assistance payments made under part D of title IV in order to become or remain eligible for Federal payments under part A (services to needy families with children) and part B (child-welfare services) of such title, or under title V (maternal and child health, and crippled children's services), title XVI (aid to the aged, blind, and disabled), or title XIX (medical assistance), except in the case of the working poor—i.e., except in the case of families where both parents are present, neither is incapacitated, and the father is not unemployed.

SECTION 452. ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

Section 452(a) provides that eligibility for and the amount of a State's supplementary payments will be determined generally under the rules and regulations applicable to the Federal family assistance payments and by applying the State's standard of need and payment limitations as in effect (and in compliance with the requirements of part A) in January 1970, unless the State chooses to apply a higher standard; except that supplementary payments are not required in any case above the applicable poverty level determined under section 453(c) (discussed below). The resulting amount is to be reduced by the family assistance payment (if any) and by any income not excluded under section 443(b) (except for the first $720 a year of the family's earned income and one-half of its remaining earned income) or under section 452(b). Any limitations imposed by the State on the amount of aid paid must not (in combination with the other plan provisions) be more stringent in result than those in effect in January 1970. If the State plan provides for meeting less than 100 percent of its need standard or for considering less than 100 percent of requirements in determining need, the Secretary will by regulation prescribe the method to be used to ensure that these results are achieved.

Section 452(b) provides that in computing the amount of a family's supplementary payments, a State will disregard (1) $720 of the family's earned income, plus (2) one-third of its earned income between $720 and twice the amount of its family assistance benefit prior to any reduction for income, plus (3) at least one-fifth of any remaining earned income.

Section 452(c) requires that a State agreement for payment of supplementary benefits must provide for—

(1) statewide application of the agreement,
(2) administration or supervision by a single State agency,
(3) an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency for any individual whose claim is denied or is not promptly acted upon,
(4) methods of administration necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the State agreement, and training and effective use of a paid subprofessional staff with emphasis on employment of recipients of supplementary payments,
(5) reporting to the Secretary as required,
(6) safeguards to protect the confidentiality of information, and
(7) an opportunity for all to apply for benefits, and payments with reasonable promptness.
SECTION 453. PAYMENTS TO STATES

Section 453(a)(1) provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will pay each State 30 percent of the amount expended by it each fiscal year for supplementary payments, not counting that part of such payment to any family which exceeds the difference between (A) the applicable poverty level (determined under section 453(c)) and (B) the family assistance benefit payable to the family plus any income of the family not disregarded in computing the supplementary payment.

Section 453(a)(2) provides that the Secretary will pay each State one-half of its administrative costs incurred in carrying out the agreement for supplementary payments.

Section 453(b) provides that payments to States under section 453(a) will be made at such times and in such installments as the Secretary determines.

Section 453(c)(1) provides that the "poverty level" for a family of any given size is the amount shown for a family of that size in the following table, adjusted as provided in section 453(c)(2):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Family size</th>
<th>Basic amount</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>One</td>
<td>1,920</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two</td>
<td>2,460</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Three</td>
<td>2,940</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Four</td>
<td>3,720</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Five</td>
<td>4,440</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Six</td>
<td>4,980</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Seven or more</td>
<td>6,120</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Section 453(c)(2) provides that between July 1 and September 30 of each year (beginning with 1970) the Secretary is to adjust the amount shown for each size of family in the table by increasing such amount by the percentage by which the average level of the price index for the second calendar quarter of such year exceeds the average level of the price index for months in 1969, and is to promulgate the adjusted amounts as the poverty levels for families of various sizes. The new amounts will apply for the fiscal year beginning July 1 after such promulgation.

Section 453(c)(3) defines the term "price index" to mean the Consumer Price Index (all items—United States city average) published monthly by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

SECTION 454. FAILURE BY STATE TO COMPLY WITH AGREEMENT

Section 454 provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may withhold all or an appropriate part of the payments he would otherwise make to a State if, after notice and opportunity for a hearing, he finds the State is failing to comply with its agreement.

SECTION 461. AGREEMENTS WITH STATES

Section 461(a) provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may enter into an agreement with any State to make the supplementary payments on its behalf, or perform functions related to the making of such payments, or both. The State would pay the Secretary the amount of the supplementary payments less the Federal share of such payments under section 453(a), and could request joint audit of such payments.

Section 461(b) provides that the Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State under which the State will make family assistance payments on behalf of the Secretary with respect to all or specified families in the State, or perform other functions as agreed upon. The State would be paid the cost of carrying out the agreement.

SECTION 462. PENALTIES FOR FRAUD

Section 462 provides penalties for fraud, with respect to family assistance benefits and supplementary payments, similar to those provided in section 208 of the Act with respect to OASDI benefits.

SECTION 463. REPORT, EVALUATION, RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATIONS, AND TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

Section 463(a) provides that the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is to make an annual report to the President and the Congress on the operation of the family assistance benefit and supplementary payment programs.

Section 463(b) authorizes the Secretary to conduct research and experiments to determine better ways of providing financial assistance to needy persons, waiving the requirements of the family assistance program to the extent he deems it appropriate.

Section 463(c) authorizes the Secretary to provide technical assistance to the States, and training for State personnel, to assist the States in carrying out their supplementary payment programs.

Section 463(d) places a limitation of $20 million per fiscal year (from amounts appropriated for the family assistance benefit and supplementary payment programs) on the funds which may be used in carrying out this section.

SECTION 464. OBLIGATION OF DESERTING PARENTS

Section 464 provides that receipt of family assistance benefits or State supplementary payments by the spouse or children of a deserting parent during his absence will result in a monetary obligation to the United States by the deserting parent equal to the total amount of the family assistance benefits received by the deserting parent's spouse and children plus any amount paid to the State under section 453. The deserting parent's obligation is reduced by any payments which he actually makes to his family during the period and which are excluded in computing the family assistance benefits paid to his spouse and children; and in no case would his obligation exceed the amount (if any) ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction for the support and maintenance of his spouse or children, less any payments made under such order. The amount due the United States is to be collected from any amounts otherwise due or becoming due the deserting parent from any officer or agency of the United States or under any Federal program. (Under the amendments made by section 103(b)(1)(K), (O), and (P) of the bill, the existing State-Federal arrangements for locating deserting parents and obtaining support for their families, under the program of services to needy families with children, are expanded to take account of deserted spouses as well as children.)
SECTION 465. TREATMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS AS INCOME FOR FOOD STAMP PURPOSES

Section 465 provides that family assistance benefits will be taken into consideration for purpose of determining any household's entitlement to, and the cost of, food stamps under the Food Stamp Act of 1964.

SECTION 102. MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, CHILD CARE, AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES PROGRAMS

Section 102 of the bill completely rewrites part C of title IV of the Social Security Act to provide new programs of manpower services, training, employment, child care, and related supportive services for members of families receiving family assistance benefits or supplementary payments under part D or part E of such title.

PART C—MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, CHILD CARE, AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES PROGRAMS FOR RECIPIENTS OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS OR SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

SECTION 430. PURPOSE

Section 430 sets forth the purpose of the revised part C—to provide programs and services for recipients of family assistance benefits or supplementary payments in order to train them, prepare them for employment, and otherwise assist them in securing and retaining regular employment with opportunity for advancement so that needy families with children will be restored to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in their communities.

SECTION 431. OPERATION OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMS

Section 431(a) provides that the Secretary of Labor is to develop an employability plan for each person registered under the family assistance benefits program (part D of title IV of the Act), in order to enable him to secure employment and remain self-supporting.

Section 431(b) provides that the Secretary of Labor is to establish and maintain manpower services, training, and employment programs in each State for persons registered under the family assistance benefits program and persons receiving State supplementary payments under part E of title IV.

Section 431(c) provides for the establishment of such manpower services, training, and employment programs as are necessary to carry out the purpose of part C, including (1) any services which the Secretary is authorized to provide under any other Act; (2) counseling, testing, training, work experience, and job placement; (3) relocation assistance to aid unemployed individuals in relocating in areas where there is assurance of suitable employment (offered through public employment offices) which will lead to self-support without public assistance; and (4) special work projects.

Section 431(d) defines a "special work project" as a project which consists of the performance of work in the public interest through grants to or contracts with public or nonprofit private agencies or organizations. Wage rates for special work projects cannot be lower than the applicable minimum wage for the particular work concerned; appropriate health and safety standards are to be maintained; the project must not displace employed workers; the conditions of work, training, education, and employment must be reasonable from the standpoint of the type of work, the geographic location, and the proficiency of the participant; workmen’s compensation protection must be provided; and the project must improve the employability of the participants. The Secretary of Labor must, at least every six months, review each participant’s employment record and any other pertinent information and determine whether it would be feasible to place him in regular employment or in training.

SECTION 432. ALLOWANCES FOR INDIVIDUALS UNDERGOING TRAINING

Section 432(a)(1) directs the Secretary of Labor to pay each participant in manpower training under the revised part C an incentive allowance of $30 per month or, if greater (in a case where the participant is eligible for a training allowance under section 203 of the Manpower Development and Training Act), the difference between the sum of the participant’s family assistance benefits and supplementary payments under parts D and E and the amount of such training allowance (or so much thereof as does not exceed the training allowance which would be payable under such section 203 as in effect on March 1, 1970).

Section 432(a)(2) provides that the Secretary of Labor is to pay, to any participant in manpower training under part C, allowances for transportation and other expenses necessary for and directly related to such training.

Section 432(a)(3) provides that the Secretary of Labor by regulation is to provide for such smaller allowances as he deems appropriate for participants in manpower training in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

Section 432(b) provides that allowances under section 432(a) are to be in lieu of allowances provided under any manpower training program under any other Act.

Section 432(c) provides that allowances under section 432(a) will not be payable to any person who is participating in a program sponsored by the Secretary of Labor providing public or private employer-compensated on-the-job training.

SECTION 433. UTILIZATION OF OTHER PROGRAMS

Section 433 authorizes the Secretary of Labor, using all authority granted to him under any other Act, to provide the manpower training and employment services required by the revised part C in such manner as will make maximum use of existing manpower programs and agencies and will further the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive manpower training program; and to use the funds appropriated under part C to provide the required programs through such other Acts and to reimburse public and private agencies for services rendered to persons under part C when such services are not otherwise available on a nonreimbursable basis.
SECTION 434. RULES AND REGULATIONS

Section 434 authorizes the Secretary of Labor to issue such rules and regulations as he finds necessary to carry out the purposes of the revised part C.

SECTION 435. APPROPRIATIONS; NONFEDERAL SHARE

Section 435(a) provides that funds sufficient to carry out the purposes of the revised part C (other than the funds required for child care and supportive services) are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor each year, including funds for payment of up to 90 percent of the cost of providing manpower services, training, and employment for persons registered under the family assistance program. The Secretary of Labor is to establish criteria to achieve equitable apportionment among the States of Federal expenditures for the programs of manpower services, training, and employment which are authorized under section 431.

Section 435(b) provides that if a State fails to contribute its 10-percent share of the cost of manpower services, training, and employment provided for individuals under the family assistance program who are registered under section 447, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may, after notice and opportunity for hearing, withhold payments which would otherwise be made to the State under sections 403(a) (services to needy families with children), 453 (State supplementary payments (discussed above)), 1604 (aid to the aged, blind or disabled (discussed below)), and 1903(a) (medical assistance) until the amount withheld, less any contribution made by the State, equals such 10-percent share. (Under the amendment made by section 103(b)(1)(M) of the bill, this 10-percent State contribution must be required by the State's plan for services for needy families with children under part A of title IV of the Act.)

SECTION 436. CHILD CARE

Section 436(a)(1) authorizes the appropriation each year to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare of sufficient funds to enable him to make grants to public and nonprofit private agencies and organizations and contracts with public and private agencies and organizations to cover part or all (100 percent) of the cost of projects for the provision of child care to permit individuals registered or referred for vocational rehabilitation under part D or receiving supplementary payments under part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under the revised part C, or to permit individuals who are or have been eligible for payments under part D or part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under the revised part C, or, with respect to the period prior to the date part D becomes effective, to permit individuals who are receiving aid to families with dependent children (or whose needs are taken into account in determining the need of persons claiming or receiving such aid) to participate in manpower training or employment.

Section 436(a)(2) provides that the grants or contracts made under section 436(a)(1) may be made directly or through grants to a public or nonprofit private agency, designated by the appropriate elected or appointed official or officials in the area, which will work with the local manpower agency. To the extent appropriate, the arrangements are to be made with the local educational agency to provide care for children attending school.

Section 436(a)(3) provides that various types of child care will be provided, based upon the needs and circumstances of the children involved.

Section 436(b) provides that the Secretary may use sums appropriated under section 436(a)(1) to make grants to any public or private nonprofit agency or organization, or contracts with any private or public agency or organization, for evaluation, training of personnel, technical assistance, or research and demonstration projects to determine more effective methods of providing child care.

Section 436(c) provides that the Secretary may establish reasonable fees for the child care provided for any family that is able to pay for part or all of the cost thereof.

SECTION 437. SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

Section 437(a) provides that no payments will be made to a State under title V (maternal and child health and crippled children's services), title XVI (aid to the aged, blind, and disabled), title XIX (med-cal assistance), or part A or B of title IV for expenditures for any calendar quarter beginning on or after the date the family assistance program becomes effective, unless such State has an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare under which it will provide health, counseling, social, vocational rehabilitation, and other supportive services which the Secretary determines are necessary to permit an individual registered under part D or receiving supplementary payments under part E to undertake or continue manpower training and employment.

Section 437(b) provides that the supportive services required under section 437(a) are to be furnished in cooperation with the manpower training and employment services provided under the revised part C.

Section 437(c) provides for payments to a State, at such times and in such installments as are deemed appropriate by the Secretary, of up to 90 percent of the cost of the supportive services provided by the State under its agreement under section 437(a).

SECTION 438. ADVANCE FUNDING

Section 438(a) provides that appropriations for grants, contracts, and other payments under the revised part C with respect to persons registered under part D may be included in the appropriation Act for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which they are to be used.

Section 438(b) provides that in order to effect a transition to the advance funding procedure two separate appropriations may initially be made in the same fiscal year, one for that year and one for the following fiscal year.

SECTION 439. EVALUATION AND RESEARCH: REPORTS TO CONGRESS

Section 439(a)(1) provides that the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will jointly make provision for continuing evaluation of manpower training and employment programs provided under the revised part C, and that the Secretary of Labor may conduct research and establish demonstration projects regarding ways to improve the effectiveness of manpower training and employment programs, contract for independent evaluations and research regarding such programs, and establish a system for collection, processing, and retrieval of data.

Section 439(a)(2) authorizes the appropriation, for the costs of the evaluation and research provided for in section 439(a)(1), of up to $15,000,000 for any fiscal year.

Section 439(b) provides that on or before September 1 following each fiscal year the Secretary of Labor is to report to the Congress on the manpower training and employment programs provided under the revised part C, and the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is to report to the Congress on the programs of child care and supportive services provided under such part.

SECTION 103. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS RELATING TO ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES WITH CHILDREN

Section 103 of the bill extensively amends part A of title IV of the Social Security Act—the present program of aid to families with dependent children—to eliminate all money payments; under the bill cash payments to needy families with children are to be made under the new family assistance program (part D) with State supplementation (part E), and the social and other services which are necessary or appropriate for such families are to be provided under State plans approved under part A.

Except for the changes which are necessary to conform the requirements and conditions of part A to those included in parts D and E (e.g., the definitions of applicable terms) and the changes referred to above in the discussion of sections 464 and 435(b), the provisions of this section are designed solely to make the amendments required to eliminate money payments from part A programs and the technical, clerical, and conforming changes necessitated by those amendments.

TITLE II—AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

SECTION 201. GRANTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Section 201 of the bill completely rewrites title XVI of the Social Security Act, which provides for grants to States for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled.

TITLE XVI—GRANTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

SECTION 1601. APPROPRIATIONS

Section 1601 authorizes appropriations for the purpose of enabling each State, under a State plan approved under section 1602, to furnish financial assistance to needy individuals who are 65 years of age or over, blind, or disabled and for the purpose of encouraging each State (under such plan) to furnish rehabilitation and other services to help such individuals attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care.

SECTION 1602. STATE PLANS FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Section 1602(a) provides that an approved State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled must provide for—

(1) a single State agency to administer (or supervise the administration of) the plan;
(2) administrative methods necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis;
(3) the training and effective use of social service personnel, technical assistance to units of State and local government which are furnishing financial assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled, and the development through research or demonstration projects of new and improved methods of furnishing such assistance or services;
(4) the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff (including recipients and others of low income), and the use of nonpaid or partially paid social service volunteers;
(5) opportunity to apply for aid and the assurance of its prompt payment;
(6) the use of a simplified statement, as prescribed by the Secretary, to establish eligibility, with effective methods for verifying eligibility through use of sampling and other scientific techniques;
(7) Statewide application of the plan, with the exception of services to the extent prescribed by the Secretary;
(8) financial participation by the State;
(9) the determination of blindness either by a physician skilled in diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual selects;
(10) an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency for individuals whose claims for aid under the plan are denied or are not acted upon with reasonable promptness;
(11) an evaluation (at least annually) of the operation of the plan, under standards prescribed by the Secretary, with reports to the Secretary including any planned modifications;
(12) reports to be made as the Secretary requires;
(13) safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants and recipients to purposes directly connected with the administration of the plan;
(14) the designation of a State authority to be responsible for standards for public or private institutions if the plan includes aid to or on behalf of individuals in such institutions;
(15) description of the services which the State makes available to applicants or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain self-support or self-care; and
(16) agreement by administering States to observe priorities established by the Secretary and comply with performance standards established by the Secretary.

Section 1602(a) permits a State (notwithstanding paragraph (1)) to designate the State agency which previously administered or supervised the administration of the State's plan for aid to the blind approved under title X as the agency to administer or supervise the administration of that portion of the State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which relates to blind individuals, if on January 1, 1962, and on the date in which such State submits its plan for approval under the revised title XVI, the State's title X agency was different from the State agency or agencies that administered or supervised the administration of the State plans approved under title I (old-age assistance) and title XIV (aid to the permanently and totally disabled). In such a case, the part of the plan which each agency administers or supervises is to be regarded as a separate plan.

Section 1602(b) directs the Secretary to approve any plan which fulfills the conditions in section 1602(a) and the provisions relating to determination of need in section 1603, except that the Secretary may not approve any plan which imposes as a condition of eligibility—

1. an age requirement of more than 65 years,
2. a residence requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State,
3. a citizenship requirement which excludes any United States citizen, or any lawfully admitted resident alien who has resided in the United States for at least 5 years,
4. a disability or age requirement which excludes any persons age 18 or older who are under a severe disability, as determined under criteria prescribed by the Secretary, or
5. a blindness or age requirement which excludes any persons who are blind, as determined under criteria prescribed by the Secretary.

Section 1602(b) provides a special exception for certain States providing aid for the blind without regard to need. As in the existing title XVI, the Federal sharing is limited to expenditures for those in need.

SECTION 1603. DETERMINATION OF NEED

Section 1603(a) provides that each State plan must require the State agency in determining need to take into account any income and resources of an individual claiming aid, along with necessary expenses incurred in earning such income, except that—

1. the State agency is not to take into account the home, household goods, or personal effects of the individual, or any other personal or real property which does not exceed $1,500 in value, or any other property necessary for the family's self-support (subject to any limitation on gross income which may be imposed as provided in section 442(d));
2. the State agency is not to consider the financial responsibility of any other individual for the applicant or recipient; except that the State agency may in its discretion, if it is so provided or permitted under State law, consider the financial responsibility of another individual for the applicant or recipient if the applicant or recipient is such individual's spouse, or is such individual’s child who is under the age of 21 or is blind or severely disabled;

(3) if the individual is blind or severely disabled, the State agency will disregard his earned income up to $85 per month plus one-half of his earned income above that figure, and will disregard additional amounts necessary for achieving self-support pursuant to a State plan for a twelve-month period which may be extended to as long as thirty-six months (except that such additional amounts will be disregarded in the case of an individual who is disabled (but not blind) only if he is undergoing vocational rehabilitation); and

Section 1603(a) also permits the State agency in determining an individual’s need (before disregarding any amounts under the preceding paragraphs) to disregard up to $7.50 of any income, and refers by cross reference to the additional $4 disregard which is required in the case of OASDI recipients by section 1007 of the Social Security Amendments of 1969 (discussed below under section 203 of the bill).

Section 1603(b) requires a State plan to provide also that—

(1) each eligible individual, other than an individual who is institutionalized, will receive financial assistance equal to at least $110 per month less any income which is not disregarded under section 1603(a);

(2) the standard of need applied for determining eligibility for and amount of aid will not be lower than (A) the standard applied for this purpose under the State’s title XVI plan as in effect on the date of the enactment of the family assistance program, or (B) if the State had no such plan on that date, the standard of need which was in effect and approved on such date under the State’s plan under title I, X, or XIV, whichever would apply to the individual (or the highest such standard which was or would have been applicable if the individual falls within two or more categories or does not fall within any of them); and

(3) no payments will be made under the plan to an individual who is considered a member of a family receiving family assistance benefits or supplementary payments under part D or E of title IV or training allowances under part C of such title (but the individual may in any case elect not to be considered a member of such a family).

Section 1603(c) contains a cross-reference to the special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam under section 1108(e) (as added by section 403 of the bill).

SECTION 1604. PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Section 1604 directs the Secretary to pay to each State which has a plan approved under the revised title XVI, for each calendar quarter, an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each month of such quarter as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the plan—
(1) 90 percent of such expenditures up to the product of $65 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus
(2) 25 percent of the amount by which such expenditures exceed those which may be counted under paragraph (1), but only up to the product of the maximum permissible level of assistance per person in which the Federal Government will participate financially, as determined by the Secretary, multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month.

Section 1604 further provides that in the case of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam the maximum permissible level of assistance under paragraph (2) may be lower than in the case of individuals in the other States.

SECTION 1605. ALTERNATE PROVISION FOR DIRECT FEDERAL PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS

Section 1605 provides that the Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State under which he will make the payments of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled provided for under the State plan directly to individuals in such State, and perform related State functions. The State would reimburse the Secretary for the State's share of such payments.

SECTION 1606. OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS

Section 1606 provides for adjustments of overpayments and underpayments where the Secretary makes direct payment to individuals in a State as provided in section 1605. In the case of overpayments, the Secretary is to avoid penalizing people who were without fault if adjustment or recovery would defeat the program's purposes, or be against equity and good conscience, or might, because of the small amounts involved, impede effective administration.

SECTION 1607. OPERATION OF STATE PLANS

Section 1607 provides that if the Secretary finds after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing that a State is not meeting the Federal requirements, he will withhold further payments under the State plan, or under the part of the plan affected, until the noncompliance is corrected.

SECTION 1608. PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION

Section 1608(a) provides that a State may qualify for increased Federal payments as provided in section 1608(b) for services made available to applicants for and recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled if the State plan provides at least those services which are prescribed by the Secretary to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care.

Section 1608(b) provides that the Secretary will pay to each State an amount equal to 75 percent of its expenditures for services to help applicants or recipients attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, other services likely to prevent or reduce dependency, and services directed toward the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment in the State or local agency administering the plan, plus an amount equal to one-half of its expenditures for other services furnished under the plan.

Section 1608(c) provides that the services are to be furnished by the State or local agency staff except as specified by the Secretary.

Section 1608(d) provides that the rate of the Federal payment with respect to amounts expended for administration are to be determined under methods and procedures permitted by the Secretary.

Section 1608(e) provides that the State may be paid for only one-half its expenditures for services in any quarter if its plan does not include the self-support or self-care services prescribed under or specified in section 1608(a) and (b).

Section 1608(f) provides that if the Secretary finds after notice and opportunity for hearing that a State's plan providing services prescribed under or specified in section 1608(a) and (b) is failing to comply with the requirements of such section, or that in the administration of such plan there is a failure to comply substantially with its provisions, he may make the payments for any or all of such services at the 50-percent rate (as in the case of a State to which section 1608(e) applies) instead of at the 75-percent rate otherwise applicable until such failure ceases.

SECTION 1609. COMPUTATION OF PAYMENTS TO STATES

Section 1609(a) authorizes the Secretary to estimate, before each quarter, the amount to which the State is entitled under its plan for aid, services, and administration, and to pay the estimated amounts in installments adjusted for any prior overpayments or underpayments.

Section 1609(b) provides that the pro rata share due the United States for recovery of any aid furnished is to be adjusted as described in section 1609(a).

Section 1609(c) provides that when the Secretary's estimate is made, available appropriations are deemed obligated.

SECTION 1610. DEFINITION

Section 1610 defines "aid to the aged, blind, and disabled" to mean money payments to needy individuals who are age 65 or older or are blind or severely disabled, other than inmates of a nonmedical public institution and patients under age 65 in a mental or tuberculosis institution. The term also means payments to another person on behalf of such a needy individual if the applicable State plan provides (1) for a determination of the individual's inability to manage funds where making direct payment would be contrary to his welfare, (2) for making payments to such other person only if the individual's needs will be met by doing so, (3) that special efforts will be made to improve the individual's capacity to manage funds, (4) for a periodic review of the determination to pay another person and for appointment of a legal guardian, if appropriate, and (5) an opportunity for a fair hearing.

The standards for determining blindness and severe disability are to be established by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare.
SECTION 202. REPEAL OF TITLES I, X, AND XIV OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Section 202 of the bill repeals title I of the Social Security Act (grants to States for old-age assistance and medical assistance for the aged), title X of the Act (grants to States for aid to the blind), and title XIV of the Act (grants to States for aid to the permanently and totally disabled). The aid under these three programs will be provided in the bill under one program—title XVI (as amended by section 201 of the bill).

SECTION 203. ADDITIONAL DISREGARDING OF INCOME OF OASDI RECIPIENTS IN DETERMINING NEED FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

Section 203 of the bill amends section 1007 of the Social Security Amendments of 1969 to make permanent the provision (now applicable only through June 1970) which requires a State to disregard up to $4 per month of an individual's benefit under the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance program in determining such individual's need for aid under the State's title XVI program if disregarding such amount is necessary to ensure that his total income under the two programs will reflect the 15-percent increase in benefits made by the 1969 Amendments.

SECTION 204. TRANSITION PROVISION RELATING TO OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS

Section 204 of the bill provides for adjustment under title XVI of the Act (as amended by section 201 of the bill) of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made to a State under the existing title I, X, or XIV of the Act (which are repealed by section 202 of the bill), or the existing title XVI of the Act (which is amended by section 201 of the bill).

SECTION 205. TRANSITION PROVISION RELATING TO DEFINITIONS OF BLINDNESS AND DISABILITY

Section 205 of the bill gives the States a grace period during which they can be eligible to participate under title XVI of the Act (as amended by section 201 of the bill) without changing their tests of disability or blindness. The grace period will end for any State with the July 1 which follows the close of the first regular session of its State legislature beginning after the enactment of the bill.

TITLE III—MISCELLANEOUS CONFORMING AMENDMENTS

Title III of the bill amends various provisions of the Social Security Act to reflect the programs established under titles I and II of the bill and to eliminate references to titles I, X, and XIV of the Act (which are repealed by section 202 of the bill).
SECTION 301. AMENDMENT TO SECTION 228(d)

Section 301 of the bill changes references in section 228(d)(1) of the Act, which precludes benefits under section 228 (benefits at age 72 for certain uninsured individuals) for individuals receiving cash benefits under the programs established by the bill.

SECTION 302. AMENDMENTS TO TITLE XI

Section 302 of the bill amends title XI of the Act (general provisions) by repealing section 1118 (alternative Federal payment with respect to public assistance expenditures) and by changing references in several other sections.

SECTION 303. AMENDMENTS TO TITLE XVIII

Section 303 of the bill amends title XVIII of the Act by changing references in section 1843 (State agreements for coverage of eligible individuals who are receiving money payments under public assistance programs or are eligible for medical assistance) and section 1863 (consultation with State agencies and other organizations to develop conditions of participation for providers of services).

SECTION 304. AMENDMENTS TO TITLE XIX

Section 304 of the bill changes references in various provisions of title XIX (grants to States for medical assistance programs), and requires the States to provide medical assistance for individuals who are eligible for State supplementary payments under part E of title IV of the Act (as added by section 101 of the bill) or who would be eligible for cash assistance under an existing State plan for aid to families with dependent children if it continued in effect and included dependent children of unemployed fathers.

TITLE IV—GENERAL

SECTION 401. EFFECTIVE DATE

Section 401 of the bill provides that the amendments made by the bill will become effective on July 1, 1971, except that—

(1) in the case of a State which (on that date) is prevented by statute from making supplementary payments under the new part E and the legislature of which does not meet in a regular session closing after the enactment of the bill and on or before that date, none of such amendments will apply until the first July 1 which follows the close of the first regular session of such legislature closing after that date (unless the State theretofore certifies that it is no longer prevented from making the payments, in which case the amendments become effective at the beginning of the first calendar quarter following the certification); and

(2) in the case of a State which (on that date) is prevented by statute from meeting the requirements contained in the revised section 1602 and the legislature of which does not meet in a regular session closing after the enactment of the bill and on or before that date, the amendments made by title II of the bill will not apply until the first July 1 which follows the close of the first regular session of such legislature closing after that date (unless the State theretofore submits a State plan meeting those requirements, in which case the amendments made by title II become effective on the date of submission of the plan).

The special 1950 rule relating to public assistance for Navajo and Hopi Indians is repealed, effective at the same time as the amendments made by the bill. An exception to the general effective date provision is made in the case of the new authorization (in the revised part C of title IV of the Act) for child care services for persons undergoing training or employment; this authorization is effective upon the enactment of the bill.

SECTION 402. SAVING PROVISION

Section 402(a) of the bill provides that for each quarter beginning after June 30, 1971, and prior to July 1, 1973, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare will reimburse any State making supplemental payments under the new part E of title IV and payments of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the revised title XVI, to the extent that 70 percent of the payments required under part E plus the State's share of expenditures under the revised title XVI exceeds the State's share of the expenditures which would have been incurred under title I (old-age assistance and medical assistance for the aged), part A of title IV (aid and services to needy families with children), title X (aid to the blind), title XIV (aid to permanently and totally disabled), and the existing title XVI had they continued in effect.

Section 402(b)(1) provides that the non-Federal (or State's) share of expenditures for a quarter subsequent to June 1971 under the revised title XVI of the Act means the difference between (1) of the total payments made under title XVI for such subsequent quarter which would have been included as aid to the aged, blind, or disabled under the plan in effect in June 1971, plus the additional expenditures required under such title as revised by the bill, and (2) the total amounts determined under section 1604 of the Act for such State with respect to the State's expenditures for such subsequent quarter.

Section 402(b)(2) provides that the non-Federal share of expenditures for a quarter subsequent to June 1971 which would have been made had titles I, IV, X, and XVI of the Act continued in effect means the difference between (1) the payments which would have been made under such titles as in effect in June 1971 if the plans under such titles as then in effect had continued in effect during such subsequent quarter and had included payments to dependent children of unemployed fathers, and (2) the amounts which would have been determined under sections 3, 403, 1003, 1403, and 1603, or under section 1118, of the Act with respect to expenditures for such quarter.

SECTION 403. SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

Section 403 of the bill adds to section 1108 of the Act a new subsection (e) to provide that in Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands—
(1) the eligibility level for and amount of family assistance benefits,
(2) the irregular income excluded,
(3) the resources limitations,
(4) the first cut-off point in the Federal reimbursement formula for payments to the aged, blind, and disabled, and
(5) the income floor for the aged, blind, and disabled will be reduced in proportion to the extent by which the per capita income of each is below that of the fifty States which has the lowest per capita income.

The new section 1108(e) also provides that the Secretary will promulgate between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year the amounts to be used for these purposes during the following 2-fiscal-year period in Puerto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands, and that in no case will the amounts determined for one period be lower than the amounts for the preceding period.

SECTION 404. MEANING OF SECRETARY AND FISCAL YEAR

Section 404 defines the term “Secretary” to mean the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare (unless the context otherwise requires), and defines the term “fiscal year” to mean a period beginning any July 1 and ending with the close of the following June 30.
VI. ADDITIONAL VIEWS OF CONGRESSMAN SAM M. GIBBONS ON H.R. 16311

I voted for the family assistance program in the Ways and Means Committee, and I plan to vote for it on final passage.

But unless we consider the existing food stamp program we are going to create a scrambled welfare mess.

Congress created the food stamp program in 1964 for the purpose of providing food for the needy.

It has failed to accomplish this basic goal—and at a great administrative expense. Only 40 percent of those who are eligible have ever been able to participate in it because of its high administrative expenses and because it has not been made available on a nationwide basis. The Federal administrative expenses of this program for fiscal 1969 were about 10 percent of the food stamp benefit. The local administrative expenses have been running about 5 percent of the food stamp benefit and the poor have ended up with something that many regard as "funny" money.

This indicates to me that there are serious flaws in the program, which in my opinion are incurable under any stamp system.

For these and other reasons, I have concluded that we should convert from food stamps to cash payments of the same bonus amount above and beyond the benefit paid under the family assistance program.

Under present law, the food stamp applicant must put up a relatively small sum of his own cash (from whatever source) and receive in return a larger amount in food stamps. The difference between what he pays in cash and what he can buy with the stamps is the free food stamp bonus.

I propose that the bonus now given in extra food stamps be given an equivalent amount of cash. Whether the recipient receives cash or food stamps his purchasing power will not be affected, but Federal and local governments will save administrative costs if the benefits are distributed in cash rather than in stamps.

Why have I come to the conclusion that we should abandon the food stamp program for cash payments?

There are several reasons, but basically two.

The first is that under the present food stamp bonus plan, there is excessively expensive and duplicative administration. These costs could be reduced to a minimum under a cash plan.

The second reason is that the present plan imposes such degrading and discouraging experiences that less than half of those who need and are entitled to food stamps get any help under the food stamp plan.

A third reason is that almost all the knowledgeable experts on this matter, including the President and his Secretaries of Health, Education, and Welfare, and Agriculture, agree that a cash bonus is better than stamps. Yet they have failed to put forward a solution. My opinion is that we should solve this problem now. Congress should not avoid this responsibility because others fail to lead.

I will expand on my reasons for proposing a change later in these remarks, but first I want to explain in detail how the cash plan I urge would work.

There are 20 million individuals eligible under the family assistance plan and about 3 million adults now receiving categorical assistance (blind, disabled, etc.). They would, under my proposal, be entitled to the cash equivalent of the bonus stamps which they would have received according to the food stamps issuing schedule now in effect.

In sum, the added cash payment to each family above and beyond the FAP payments would be the same as the food stamp bonus they would have received if enrolled in the food stamp program.

To illustrate, let us use a family of four, with no income except the minimum of $1,600 under the family assistance plan. Its monthly net income would be $133.33. For a payment of $34 in cash, this family would receive $106 in food stamps. The $72 difference between the cash paid and stamps received would equal its monthly food stamp bonus.

Under my proposal, this same $72 would be paid the family as a cash bonus, on top of its $133.33 in monthly FAP payment, thus yielding the family a cash total of $205.33 a month.

Under existing law, the family in the food stamp program would have to pay $34 of its $133.33 FAP cash assistance to get the extra stamps, leaving it $99.33 in cash and $106 in food stamps. However, monthly purchasing power would be the same, $205.33 in either case.

The proposal that I advocate is not new. In the President’s budget for this year (1971) on page 176 the following illustration is made, and the only difference between that illustration and with the one I have just given you is that it is given in annual terms, whereas, I have given you the figures on a monthly basis. The President’s proposal on page 176 is stated as follows:

Taken together, FAP and the improved food stamp program would provide significantly improved benefit levels for many poor families. A family of four with no other income would receive a total of $2,464 annually—$1,600 in cash from FAP, and $864 in the form of the food stamp bonus ($1,272 in stamps less a purchase price of $408).

The following table sets this out schematically for a family of four at the $1,600 level:

The above arithmetic, particularly for the $1,600 family, dramatically demonstrates part of my case for changing from bonus food stamps to bonus cash benefits.

What family in America, poor or otherwise, wants to be compelled to receive over half its total purchasing power in the form of script which can only be used for one of its needs—food—and this on penalty of receiving no family food assistance at all unless it submits to this compulsory budgeting?

What family wants even more than one-third of its purchasing power tied up in food, untouchable in emergency? The average American family spends only 16.5 percent of its disposable income on food. Granted the average family's income is higher than that of a typical poor family, but must the poor be locked into a forcible formula which makes them spend three times the average for food alone? I think not, and I want to detail some of my reasons as to why not.
As I have already noted, most of the experts, including the President, think cash payments are superior to stamp bonuses.

Let me quote administration sources first:

In his Welfare message to Congress on August 11, 1969, President Nixon himself said, in part:

"For dependent families there will be an orderly substitution of food stamps by the new direct monetary payments" (p. 106 of hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means, House of Representatives, pt. 1 of 7).

In this same speech, the President said:

This Administration, after a careful analysis of all the alternatives is committed to a new departure that will find a solution for the welfare problem. The time for denouncing the old is over; the time for devising the new is now (p. 104).

But apparently not right now!

The President went on to say that the "new system will lessen welfare redtape and provide administrative cost savings * * *" (p. 108). But this will not be true if the present food stamp program, which entails huge and disproportionate administrative costs is retained. (I detail these costs later in this statement.)

Again, earlier on May 6, 1969, the President gave it as his view that "the food stamp and direct (commodity) distribution programs * * * both programs are clearly in need of revision."

He then went on to urge a $1 billion increase in spending for the food stamp and other food programs.

On September 15, 1969, before the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, Secretary of Agriculture Hardin spoke in a similar vein.

He said, in part "* * * When the President delivered his message of May 6 (1969), he made it clear that it was time to go ahead and reshape the food stamp program and make it workable, available and attractive * * *"

My only difference with the President and Secretary Hardin is how and when we should start making the food stamp program all of those things.

My view is that the food can only be made fully available and the dispensing of it workable by substituting a cash bonus plan for stamps now.

Why wait? Why not realize these savings, administrative and otherwise, by converting food stamps into cash, with the payments administered by the same agency which will administer family assistance?

HEW Secretary Finch told this same Senate Committee on the same day that—"For several reasons, our ultimate goal over the years should be to move toward a wholly cash income support system and away from in-kind multiple programs * * * This Administration believes that over the years cash assistance would eventually be substituted for food stamp programs in a way which leaves the individual at least as well off in total benefits * * *" Why not now?

Secretary Finch further said that the "welfare and food stamp systems need to be viewed together as part of a single package and the Congress should consider reforms of those systems at the same time with an eye to their relationship to each other." Why not now?
Secretary Finch is also on the record as saying that "cash assistance provides the maximum flexibility and personal responsibility for the individual. Cash enables the recipient to substitute his own judgment of how best to meet his needs for the determination of a faraway government. The individual determines how he allocates his income and how much to spend on food."

Other knowledgeable experts, not so intimately associated with the Nixon administration, have endorsed a cash plan such as I proposed, and suggested it be immediately:

Dr. Harold Watts of the University of Wisconsin, who testified before the Ways and Means Committee, says that "food stamps are a bad bargain in comparison to general cash benefits."

The President's Commission on Income Maintenance Programs made a similar recommendation.

The latter group also notes the difficulty of policing an augmented food stamp program. Since many families will have more stamps than cash in hand, there will be a strong inducement to either buy ineligible items with stamps or else sell the stamps or food obtained with them for cash. Either way, there will be strong pressure to violate the law.

I have not dwelt on the personally degrading and harassing experiences which food stamp recipients must undergo to get their stamps such as waiting hours in long lines, going to outdoor windows of banks which issue the stamps, even in snow or rain, and how they become conspicuous at grocery counters where they must separate stamp eligible items in one stack and other purchases in another stack. I might add that such embarrassments and harassments, which this program inflicts on those who must use it or go hungry, is doing nothing to solve the already acute and explosive problems in our slum ghettoes where many of the food recipients live. It aggravates such problems.

But leaving aside the indignity and inconvenience of the stamp program, there is an overwhelmingly strong argument against it:

This is the expensive and duplicative administrative cost and procedures which could be reduced to a minimum under a combined food and FAP cash program.

Administrative costs of the present food stamp program are considerable. To disperse $228.8 million in stamp bonuses in fiscal 1969, the Government had to spend $22.2 million or 10 percent of the added bonuses in administrative costs. In fiscal 1971, with a projected $1.2 billion food stamp program, projected administrative costs are estimated at $50 million. That estimate is probably low. But even if correct, when the planned $2.5 billion food stamp program takes effect early in fiscal 1972, Federal administrative costs will run to a minimum of $100 million and perhaps as high as $250 million, given last year's operating experience.

There will be other administrative expenses as well. The Federal Government pays 62.5 percent of State costs for certifying nonpublic assistance households as eligible for food stamps. This will soar further when all individuals eligible for the existing program take advantage of it. With a cash plan in operation, there would be no necessity for this second certification.

Local costs of this program, which are not reimbursed by the Federal Government are also substantial. Some banks, for example, charge as much as 90 cents every time they sell a book of stamps to an eligible recipient. Should stamps be issued more than once a month in the future, this cost would go up still more. State and local government costs for issuance could run to $125 million, not counting the certification costs.

Under a cash plan, double certification, double staffs, double investigations and all the other duplicative administrative procedures could be eliminated.

With food stamps and family assistance programs merged into a single cash payment, there would be no added administrative cost for calculating the food stamp bonus and adding the cash equivalent to the FAP cash payment.

Indeed, overall, there would be less administrative cost. We could save most of the $150 million it will cost the Federal Government to administer the food stamp program by fiscal 1972, and the possible $175 million it will cost local and State governments for the same program.

To sum up, there is a simple and rational substitute for the "funny money," which we call food stamps and which now cost $2.20 for every $2 in stamps issued. It is to convert to cash payments and to abolish food stamps and to do it now. By so doing, we will simplify administration and liquidate excessive expenses which are inherent in any stamp plan.
VII. DISSENTING VIEWS OF HON. AL ULLMAN, HON. PHIL LANDRUM, AND HON. OMAR BURLESON ON H.R. 16311

We concur that the Federal welfare system should be renovated, and agree with portions of the bill that help attain that objective.

We do not concur, however, with provisions of the bill under which another 15 million Americans, the working poor, would be added to the welfare rolls. The aim of assisting low-income wage earners is frustrated by the very provisions of the bill.

The argument that the bill requires welfare recipients for the first time to register with public employment service agencies begs the issue. Neither the funding nor the administrative provisions of the bill are sufficient to cope with the massive increase in paperwork and job placement problems that would follow the addition of nearly 3 million new names to the work registration rolls. The increase in job-training slots and funding planned under the bill would, in our judgment, fall far short of meeting the needs of the present number of welfare recipients, much less those of millions more.

Virtually no improvement is offered for the administrative tangle that makes the existing welfare program so ineffective. The bill merely places a new Federal layer on top of a system that is already a bureaucratic quagmire.

For all the rhetoric about work incentives, the bill clearly puts cash payments first. It ultimately establishes the basis for a guaranteed annual income through a negative tax formula. We do not concur that the cash incentive approach to welfare is either proven or sound, or that it would ever attain its purported objective of reducing the welfare rolls. Research in this whole area is fragmentary and entirely inconclusive.

We fully concur that the Federal payments in the adult category—to the aged, the blind, and the disabled—be significantly increased as provided by the bill. We believe that the inflationary pressures of the economy today make it impossible for individuals in these welfare categories to exist on their present fixed incomes.

But we do not concur with the thrust of the bill in its family assistance provisions. It would permanently consign more than 10 percent of our population to welfare handouts. The bill would institutionalize poverty, not eliminate it.

We believe the need is for tighter Federal standards applied to the present system and aimed at more efficient and effective administration. Above all, the need is for greatly expanded funding of existing programs—the work incentive (WIN) program, special projects, JOBS and child care. We believe that these programs, properly funded well beyond the bill's limited provisions, can produce positive results.

In our judgment, the first step in welfare reform should be to make our present system effective for the 10 million Americans already on the welfare rolls, and offer them a real opportunity to lift themselves out of poverty. Only after we have successfully achieved a sound structure should we consider bringing millions more into the system.

1 TITLE I—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

2 ESTABLISHMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

3 Sec. 101. Title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 601 et seq.) is amended by adding after part C the following new parts:

"PART D—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

"APPROPRIATIONS

"Sec. 441. For the purpose of providing a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children, in a manner which will strengthen family life, encourage work training and self-support, and enhance personal dignity, there is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year a sum sufficient to carry out this part.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS"

"Eligibility"

"Sec. 442. (a) Each family (as defined in section 445)—

"(1) whose income, other than income excluded pursuant to section 443 (b), is less than—

"(A) $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

"(B) $300 per year for each additional member, and

"(2) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 444, are less than $1,500, shall, in accordance with and subject to the other provisions of this title, be paid a family assistance benefit.

"Amount"

"(b) The family assistance benefit for a family shall be payable at the rate of—
"(1) $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

"(2) $300 per year for each additional member, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 443(b), of the members of the family.

"Period for Determination of Benefits

"(c) (1) A family’s eligibility for and its amount of family assistance benefits shall be determined for each quarter of a calendar year. Such determination shall be made on the basis of the Secretary’s estimate of the family’s income for such quarter, after taking into account income for a preceding period and any modifications in income which are likely to occur on the basis of changes in conditions or circumstances. Eligibility for and the amount of benefits of a family for any quarter shall be redetermined at such time or times as may be provided by the Secretary, such redetermination to be effective prospectively.

"(2) The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe the cases in which and extent to which the amount of a family assistance benefit for any quarter shall be reduced by reason of the time elapsing since the beginning of such quarter and before the date of filing of the application for the benefit.

"(3) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which income received in one period (or expenses incurred in one period in earning income) shall, for purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits, be considered as received (or incurred) in another period or periods.

"Special Limits on Gross Income

"(d) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the circumstances under which the gross income from a trade or business (including farming) will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits.

"Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

"(e) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).

"INCOME

"Meaning of Income

"Sec. 443. (a) For purposes of this part, income means both earned income and unearned income; and—

"(1) earned income means only—

"(A) remuneration for services performed as an employee (as defined in section 210 (j)), other than remuneration to which section 209 (b), (c), (d), (f), or (k), or section 211, would apply; and

"(B) net earnings from self-employment, as defined in section 211 (without the application of the second and third sentences following clause (C) of subsection (a) (9)), including earnings for services described in paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (c); and

"(2) unearned income means all other income, including—

"(A) any payments received as an annuity, pension, retirement, or disability benefit, including veteran's or workmen's compensation and old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, railroad retirement, and unemployment benefits;

"(B) prizes and awards;

"(C) the proceeds of any life insurance policy;

"(D) gifts (cash or otherwise), support and alimony payments, and inheritances; and

"(E) rents, dividends, interest, and royalties.

"Exclusions From Income

"(b) In determining the income of a family there shall be excluded—

"(1) subject to limitations (as to amount or otherwise) prescribed by the Secretary, the earned income of each child in the family who is, as determined by the Secretary under regulations, a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment;

"(2) (A) the total unearned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which, as de-determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $30 in such quarter, and (B) the total earned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which,
as determined in accordance with such criteria, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $30 in such quarter;

"(3) an amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to all, or such part (and according to such schedule) as the Secretary may prescribe, of the cost incurred by such member for child care which the Secretary deems necessary to securing or continuing in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

"(4) the first $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods) of the total of earned income (not excluded by the preceding paragraphs of this subsection) of all members of the family plus one-half of the remainder thereof;

"(5) food stamps or any other assistance (except veterans' pensions) which is based on need and furnished by any State or political subdivision of a State or any Federal agency, or by any private charitable agency or organization (as determined by the Secretary);

"(6) allowances under section 432 (a);

"(7) any portion of a scholarship or fellowship received for use in paying the cost of tuition and fees at any educational (including technical or vocational education) institution; and

"(8) home produce of a member of the family utilized by the household for its own consumption.

"RESOURCES

"Exclusions From Resources

"Sec. 444. (a) In determining the resources of a family there shall be excluded—

"(1) the home, household goods, and personal effects; and

"(2) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family’s means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion.

“Disposition of Resources

“(b) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining a family’s eligibility for family assistance benefits. Any portion of the family’s benefits paid for any such period shall be conditioned upon such disposal; and any benefits so paid shall (at the time of the disposal) be considered over-payments to the extent they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which such benefits were paid.

“MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD

“Composition of Family

“Sec. 445. (a) Two or more individuals—

“(1) who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption,

“(2) who are living in a place of residence maintained by one or more of them as his or their own home,

“(3) who are residents of the United States, and

“(4) at least one of whom is a child who (A) is not married to another of such individuals and
(B) is in the care of or dependent upon another of such individuals, shall be regarded as a family for purposes of this part and parts A, C, and E. A parent (of a child living in a place of residence referred to in paragraph (2), or a spouse of such a parent, who is determined by the Secretary to be temporarily absent from such place of residence for the purpose of engaging in or seeking employment or self-employment (including military service) shall nevertheless be considered (for purposes of paragraph (2)) to be living in such place of residence.

“Definition of Child

“(b) For purposes of this part and parts C and E, the term ‘child’ means an individual who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary under regulations) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

“Determination of Family Relationships

“(c) In determining whether an individual is related to another individual by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law shall be applied.

“Income and Resources of Noncontributing Adult

“(d) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits for any family there shall be excluded the income and resources of any individual, other than a parent of a child (or a spouse of a parent), which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is not available to other members of the family; and for such purposes such individual—

“(1) in the case of a child, shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determining the family’s eligibility for such benefits but not for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits, and

“(2) in any other case, shall not be considered a member of the family for any purpose.

“Recipients of Aid to the Aged, Blind, and Disabled Ineligible

“(e) If an individual is receiving aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under a State plan approved under title XVI, or if his needs are taken into account in determining the need of another person receiving such aid, then, for the period for which such aid is received, such individual shall not be regarded as a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the family assistance benefits of the family.

“PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

“Payments of Benefits

“Sec. 446. (a) (1) Family assistance benefits shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of this title.

“(2) Payment of the family assistance benefit of any family may be made to any one or more members of the family, or, if the Secretary deems it appropriate, to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

“(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of family assistance benefit shall apply.

“Overpayments and Underpayments

“(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of family assistance benefits has been paid with respect to any family, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments to the family or by recovery from or payment to any one or more of the individuals who are or were members thereof. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to a family with a view to avoiding penalizing members of the family who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this part, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this part.

"Hearings and Review"

"(c) (1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be a member of a family and is in disagreement with any determination under this part with respect to eligibility of the family for family assistance benefits, the number of members of the family, or the amount of the benefits, if such individual requests a hearing on the matter in disagreement within thirty days after notice of such determination is received. Until a determination is made on the basis of such hearing or upon disposition of the matter through default, withdrawal of the request by the individual, or revision of the initial determination by the Secretary, any amounts which are payable (or would be payable but for the matter in disagreement) to any individual who has been determined to be a member of such family shall continue to be paid; but any amounts so paid for periods prior to such determination or disposition shall be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had such determination or disposition occurred at the same time as the Secretary's initial determination on the matter in disagreement.

"(2) Determination on the basis of such hearing shall be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing as provided in paragraph (1).

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determinations under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibition of Assignments

"(d) The provisions of sections 206 and 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"Applications and Furnishing of Information by Families

"(e) (1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to families or members thereof with respect to the filing of applications, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

"(2) In order to encourage prompt reporting of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, and more accurate estimates of expected income or expenses by members of families for purposes of such eligibility and amount of benefits, the Secretary may prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which—

"(A) failure to so report or delay in so reporting, or

"(B) inaccuracy of information which is furnished by the members and on which the estimates of income or expenses for such purposes are based, will result in treatment as overpayments of all or any portion of payments of such benefits for the period involved.

"Furnishing of Information by Other Agencies

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto.

"REGISTRATION AND REFERRAL OF FAMILY MEMBERS FOR MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT

"Sec. 447. (a) Every individual who is a member of a family which is found to be eligible for family assistance benefits, other than a member to whom the Secretary finds paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of subsection (b) applies, shall register for manpower services, training, and employment with the local public employment office of the State as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor. If and for so long as any such individual is found by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to have failed to so register, he shall not be regarded as a member of a family but his income which would otherwise be counted under this part as income of a family shall be so counted; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for purposes of determination of the amount of such benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(b) An individual shall not be required to register pursuant to subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that such individual is—

"(1) unable to engage in work or training by reason of illness, incapacity, or advanced age;

"(2) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for such child;

"(3) the mother or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and not excluded by paragraph (1), (2), (4), or (5) of this subsection (unless the second sentence of subsection (a), or section 448 (a), is applicable to him);
“(4) a child who is under the age of sixteen or meets the requirements of section 445 (b) (2); or “(5) one whose presence in the home on a substantially continuous basis is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household.
An individual who would, but for the preceding sentence,
be required to register pursuant to subsection (a), may, if he wishes, register as provided in such subsection.
“(a) The Secretary shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services in such cases and for so long as he deems appropriate in the case of (1) individuals registered pursuant to subsection (a) who are, pursuant to such registration, participating in manpower services, training, or employment, and (2) individuals referred pursuant to subsection (d) who are, pursuant to such referral, participating in vocational rehabilitation.
“(d) In the case of any member of a family receiving family assistance benefits who is not required to register pursuant to subsection (a) because of such member’s incapacity, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such member to the appropriate State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for voc-cational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases involving permanent incapacity as the Secretary may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such member's incapacity and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan. If and for so long as such member is found by the Secretary to have refused without good cause to accept rehabilitation services available to him under such plan, he shall be treated as an individual to whom subsection (a) is applicable by reason of refusal to accept or participate in employment or training.

"DENIAL OF BENEFITS IN CASE OF REFUSAL OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, OR EMPLOYMENT"

"SEC. 448. (a) For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits under this part, an individual who has registered as required under section 447 (a) shall not be regarded as a member of a family, but his income which would otherwise be counted as income of the family under this part shall be so counted, if and for so long as he has been found by the Secretary of Labor, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing (which shall be held in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as a hearing under section 446(c) (1) and (2)), to have refused without good cause to participate or continue to parparticipate in suitable manpower services, training, or employment, or to have refused without good cause to accept suitable employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined by the Secretary of Labor, after notification by such employer or otherwise, to be a bona fide offer of employment; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for the purposes of determination of the amount of its benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(b) (1) In determining whether any employment is suitable for an individual for purposes of subsection (a) and part C, the Secretary of Labor shall consider the degree of risk to such individual's health and safety, his physical fitness for the work, his prior training and experience, his prior earn ings, the length of his unemployment, his realistic prospects for obtaining work based on his potential and the availability of training opportunities, and the distance of the available work from his residence.

"(2) In no event shall any employment be considered suitable for an individual—

"(A) if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute;

"(B) if the wages, hours, or other terms or conditions of the work offered are contrary to or less than those prescribed by Federal, State, or local law or are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality; or

"(C) if, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.

"TRANSFER OF FUNDS FOR ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS

"Sec. 449. The Secretary shall, pursuant to and to the extent provided by agreement with the Secretary of Labor, pay to the Secretary of Labor amounts which he estimates would be paid as family assistance benefits under this part to individuals participating in public or private employer compensated on-the-job training under a program of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating in such training.

Such amounts shall be available to pay the costs of such programs.

"PART E—STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

"PAYMENTS UNDER TITLES IV, V, XVI, AND XIX CONDITIONED ON SUPPLEMENTATION

"Sec. 451. In order for a State to be eligible for payments pursuant to title V, XVI, or XIX, or part A or B of this title, with respect to expenditures for any quarter beginning on or after the date this part becomes effective with respect to such State, it must have in effect an agreement with the Secretary under which it will make supplementary payments, as provided in this part, to any family other than a family in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

"Sec. 452. (a) Eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments under the agreement with any State under this part shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be determined by application of the provisions of,
and rules and regulations under, sections 442(a)(2), (c), and (d), 443(a), 444, 445, 446 (to the extent the Secretary deems appropriate), 447, and 448, and by application of the standard for determining need under the plan of such State as in effect for January 1970 (which standard complies with the requirements for approval under part A as in effect for such month) or, if lower, a standard equal to the applicable poverty level determined pursuant to section 453(c) and in effect at the time of such payments, or such higher standard of need as the State may apply, with the resulting amount reduced by the family assistance benefit payable under part D and further reduced by any other income (earned or unearned) not excluded under section 443(b) (except paragraph (4) thereof) or under subsection (b) of this section;
but in making such determination the State may impose limitations on the amount of aid paid to the extent that such limitations (in combination with other provisions of the plan) are no more stringent in result than those imposed under the plan of such State as in effect for such month. In the case of any State which provides for meeting less than 100 per centum of its standard of need or provides for considering less than 100 per centum of requirements in determining need, the Secrettary shall prescribe by regulation the method or methods for achieving as nearly as possible the results provided for under the foregoing provisions of this subsection.
“(b) For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments to a family for any period pursuant to an agreement under this part, in the case of earned income to which paragraph (4) of section 443 (b) applies, there shall be disregarded $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods), plus—

(1) one-third of the portion of the remainder of earnings which does not exceed twice the amount of the family assistance benefits that would be payable to the family if it had no income, plus

(2) one-fifth (or more if the Secretary by regulation so prescribes) of the balance of the earnings.

For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).

“(c) The agreement with a State under this part shall—

“(1) provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State;

“(2) provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to carry out or supervise the carrying out of the agreement in the State;

“(4) provide (A) such methods of administration (including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods) as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the agreement in the State, and (B) for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full- or part-time employment of recipients of supplementary payments and other persons of low income, as community services aides, in carrying out the agreement and for the use of nonpaid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

“(5) provide that the State agency carrying out the agreement will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

“(6) provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments to purposes directly connected with the administration of this title; and

"(7) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for supplementary payments shall have opportunity to do so, and that supplementary payments shall be furnished with reasonable promptness to all eligible individuals.

"PAYMENTS TO STATES

"Sec. 453. (a) (1) The Secretary shall pay to any State which has in effect an agreement under this part, for each fiscal year, an amount equal to 30 per centum of the total amount expended during such year pursuant to its agreement as supplementary payments to families other than families in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed, not counting so much of the supplementary payment made to any family as exceeds the amount by which (with respect to the period involved) —

"(A) the family assistance benefit payable to such family under part D, plus any income of such family (earned or unearned) not disregarded in determining the amount of such supplementary payment, is less than “(B) the applicable poverty level as promulgated and in effect under subsection (c).

“(2) The Secretary shall also pay to each such State an amount equal to 50 per centum of its administrative costs found necessary by the Secretary for carrying out its agreement.

“(b) Payments under subsection (a) shall be made at such time or times, in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments as the Secretary may determine; and shall be made on such conditions as may be necessary to assure the carrying out of the purposes of this title.

“(c) (1) For purposes of this part, the 'poverty level' for a family group of any given size shall be the amount shown for a family group of such size in the following table, adjusted as provided in paragraph (2):

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>FAMILY SIZE:</th>
<th>BASIC AMOUNT</th>

“(2) Between July 1 and September 30 of each year, beginning with 1970, the Secretary (A) shall adjust the amount shown for each size of family group in the table in paragraph (1) by increasing such amount by the percentage by which the average level of the price index for the months in the calendar quarter beginning April 1 of such year exceeds the average level of the price index for months in 1969, and (B) shall thereupon promulgate the amounts so adjusted as the poverty levels for family groups of various sizes which shall be conclusive for purposes of this part for the fiscal year beginning July 1 next succeeding such promulgation.

“(3) As used in this subsection, the term ‘price index’ means the Consumer Price Index (all items—United States city average) published monthly by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

“FAILURE BY STATE TO COMPLY WITH AGREEMENT

“SEC. 454. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to a State with which he has an agreement under this part, finds that such State is failing to comply therewith, he shall withhold all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of the payments to which such State is otherwise entitled under this part or part A or B of this title or under title V, XVI, or XIX; but the amounts so withheld from payments under such part A or B or under title V, XVI, or XIX shall be deemed to have been paid to the State under such part or title. Such withholding shall be effected at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary may deem appropriate.
“Sec. 461. (a) The Secretary may enter into an agreement with any State under which the Secretary will make, on behalf of the State, the supplementary payments provided for under part E, or will perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon, or both. In any such case, the agreement shall also (1) provide for payment by the State to the Secretary of an amount equal to the supplementary payments the State would otherwise make pursuant to part E, less any payments which would be made to the State under section 453 (a), and (2) at the request of the State, provide for joint audit of payments under the agreement.

“(b) The Secretary may also enter into an agreement with any State under which such State will make, on behalf of the Secretary, the family assistance benefit payments provided for under part D with respect to all or specified families in the State who are eligible for such benefits or will perform such other functions in connection with the administration of part D as may be agreed upon. The cost of carrying out any such agreement shall be paid to the State by the Secretary in advance or by way of reimbursement and in such installments as may be agreed upon.
"PENALTIES FOR FRAUD"

"SEC. 462. The provisions of section 208, other than paragraph (a), shall apply with respect to benefits under part D and allowances under part C, of this title, to the same extent as they apply to payments under title II.

"REPORT, EVALUATION, RESEARCH AND DEMONSTRATIONS, AND TRAINING AND TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE"

"SEC. 463. (a) The Secretary shall make an annual report to the President and the Congress on the operation and administration of parts D and E, including an evaluation thereof in carrying out the purposes of such parts and recommendations with respect thereto. The Secretary is authorized to conduct evaluations directly or by grants or contracts of the programs authorized by such parts.

"(b) The Secretary is authorized to conduct, directly or by grants or contracts, research into or demonstrations of ways of better providing financial assistance to needy persons or of better carrying out the purposes of part D, and in so doing to waive any requirements or limitations in such part with respect to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits for such family, members of families, or groups thereof as he deems appropriate.

"(c) The Secretary is authorized to provide such technical assistance to States, and to provide, directly or through grants or contracts, for such training of personnel of States, as he deems appropriate to assist them in more efficiently and effectively carrying out their agreements under this part and part E.

"(d) In addition to funds otherwise available therefor, such portion of any appropriation to carry out part D or E as the Secretary may determine, but not in excess of $20,-000,000 in any fiscal year, shall be available to him to carry out this section.

"OBLIGATION OF DESERTING PARENTS

"Sec. 464. In any case where an individual has deserted or abandoned his spouse or his child or children and such spouse or any such child (during the period of such desertion or abandonment) is a member of a family receiving family assistance benefits under part D or supplementary payments under part E, such individual shall be obligated to the United States in an amount equal to—

"(1) the total amount of the family assistance benefits paid to such family during such period with respect to such spouse and child or children, plus the amount paid by the Secretary under section 453 on account of the supplementary payments made to such family during such period with respect to such spouse and child or children, reduced by

"(2) any amount actually paid by such individual to or for the support and maintenance of such spouse and child or children during such period, if and to the extent that such amount is excluded in determining the amount of such family assistance benefits; except that in any case where an order for the support and maintenance of such spouse or any such child has been issued by a court of competent jurisdiction, the obligation of such individual under this subsection (with respect to such spouse or child) for any period shall not exceed the amount specified in such order less any amount actually paid by such individual (to or for the support and maintenance of such spouse or child) during such period. The amount due the United States under such obligation shall be collected (to the extent that the claim of the United States therefor is otherwise satisfied), in such manner as may be specified by the Secretary, from any amounts otherwise due him or becoming due him at any time from any officer or agency of the United States or under any Federal program. Amounts collected under the preceding sentence shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

"TREATMENT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS AS INCOME FOR FOOD STAMP PURPOSES"

"Sec. 465. Family assistance benefits paid under this title shall be taken into consideration for the purpose of determining the entitlement of any household to purchase food stamps, and the cost thereof, under the food stamp program conducted under the Food Stamp Act of 1964."

MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, CHILD CARE, AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES PROGRAMS

Sec. 102. Part C of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 630 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

"PART C—MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, EMPLOYMENT, CHILD CARE, AND SUPPORTIVE SERVICES PROGRAMS FOR RECIPIENTS OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS OR SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

"PURPOSE

"Sec. 430. The purpose of this part is to authorize provision, for individuals who are members of a family receiving benefits under part D or supplementary payments pursuant to part E, of manpower services, training, employment, child care, and related supportive services necessary to train such individuals, prepare them for employment, and otherwise assist them in securing and retaining regular employment and having the opportunity for advancement in employment, to the end that needy families with children will be restored to self-supporting, independent, and useful roles in their communities."
"OPERATION OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT PROGRAMS

"SEC. 431. (a) The Secretary of Labor shall, for each person registered pursuant to part D, in accordance with priorities prescribed by him, develop or assure the development of an employability plan describing the manpower services, training, and employment which the Secretary of Labor determines each person needs in order to enable him to become self-supporting and secure and retain employment and opportunities for advancement.

"(b) The Secretary of Labor shall, in accordance with the provisions of this part, establish and assure the provision of manpower services, training, and employment programs in each State for persons registered pursuant to part D or receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E.

"(c) The Secretary of Labor shall, through such programs, provide or assure the provision of manpower services, training, and employment and opportunities necessary to prepare such persons for and place them in regular employment, including—

"(1) any of such services, training, employment, and opportunities which the Secretary of Labor is authorized to provide under any other Act;
“(2) counseling, testing, coaching, program orientation, institutional and on-the-job training, work experience, upgrading, job development, job placement, and follow up services required to assist in securing and retaining employment and opportunities for advancement;

“(3) relocation assistance (including grants, loans, and the furnishing of such services as will aid an involuntarily unemployed individual who desires to relocate to do so in an area where there is assurance of regular suitable employment, offered through the public employment offices of the State in such area, which will lead to the earning of income sufficient to make such individual and his family ineligible for benefits under part D and supplementary payments under part E); and

“(4) special work projects.

“(d) (1) For purposes of subsection (c) (4), a ‘special work project’ is a project (meeting the requirements of this subsection) which consists of the performance of work in the public interest through grants to or contracts with public or nonprofit private agencies or organizations.

“(2) No wage rates provided under any special work project shall be lower than the applicable minimum wage for the particular work concerned.

“(3) Before entering into any special work project under a program established as provided in subsection (b), the Secretary of Labor shall have reasonable assurances that—

"(A) appropriate standards for the health, safety, and other conditions applicable to the performance of work and training on such project are established and will be maintained,

"(B) such project will not result in the displacement of employed workers,

"(C) with respect to such project the conditions of work, training, education, and employment are reasonable in the light of such factors as the type of work, geographical region, and proficiency of the participant,

"(D) appropriate workmen’s compensation protection is provided to all participants, and

"(E) such project will improve the employability of the participants.

"(4) With respect to individuals who are participants in special work projects under programs established as provided in subsection (b), the Secretary of Labor shall periodically (at least once every six months) review the employment record of each such individual while on the special work project and on the basis of such record and such other information as he may acquire determine whether it would be feasible to place such individual in regular employment or in on-the-job, institutional, or other training.
"ALLOWANCES FOR INDIVIDUALS UNDERGOING TRAINING

"Sec. 432. (a) (1) The Secretary of Labor shall pay to each individual who is a member of a family and is participating in manpower training under this part an incentive allowance of $30 per month. If one or more members of a family are receiving training for which training allowances are payable under section 203 of the Manpower Development and Training Act and meet the other requirements under such section (except subsection (1) (1) thereof) for the receipt of allowances which would be in excess of the sum of the family assistance benefit under part D and supplementary payments pursuant to part E payable with respect to such month to the family, the total of the incentive allowances per month under this section for such members shall be equal to the greater of (1) the amount of such excess or, if lower, the amount of the excess of the training allowances which would be payable under such section 203 as in effect on March 1, 1970, over the sum of such family assistance benefit and such supplementary payments, and (2) $30 for each such member.

"(2) The Secretary of Labor shall, in accordance with regulations, also pay, to any member of a family participating in manpower training under this part, allowances for transportation and other costs to him which are necessary to and directly related to his participation in training.
“(3) The Secretary of Labor shall by regulation provide for such smaller allowances under this subsection as he deems appropriate for individuals in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam.

“(b) Allowances under this section shall be in lieu of allowances provided for participants in manpower training programs under any other Act.

“(c) Subsection (a) shall not apply to any member of a family who is participating in a program of the Secretary of Labor providing public or private employer compensated on-the-job training.

“UTILIZATION OF OTHER PROGRAMS

“SEC. 433. In providing the manpower training and employment services and opportunities required by this part the Secretary of Labor, to the maximum extent feasible, shall assure that such services and opportunities are provided in such manner, through such means, and using all authority available to him under any other Act (and subject to all duties and responsibilities thereunder) as will further the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive manpower training program involving all sectors of the economy and all levels of government and as will make maximum use of existing manpower and manpower related programs and agencies. To such end the Secretary of Labor may use the funds appropriated to him under this part to provide the programs required by this part through such other Act, to the same extent and under the same conditions as if appropriated under such other Act and in making use of the programs of other Federal, State, or local agencies, public or private, the Secretary may reimburse such agencies for services rendered to persons under this part to the extent such services and opportunities are not otherwise available on a nonreimbursable basis.

"RULES AND REGULATIONS"

"Sec. 434. The Secretary of Labor may issue such rules and regulations as he finds necessary to carry out his responsibilities under this part.

"APPROPRIATIONS; NONFEDERAL SHARE"

"Sec. 435. (a) There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of Labor for each fiscal year a sum sufficient for carrying out the purposes of this part (other than sections 436 and 437), including payment of not to exceed 90 per centum of the cost of manpower services, training, and employment and opportunities provided for individuals registered pursuant to section 447. The Secretary of Labor shall establish criteria to achieve an equitable apportionment among the States of Federal expenditures for carrying out the programs authorized by section 431. In developing these criteria the Secretary of Labor shall consider the number of registrations under section 447 and other relevant factors."
"(b) If a non-Federal contribution of 10 per centum of the cost specified in subsection (a) is not made in any State (as required by section 402(a) (13)), the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may withhold any action under section 404 on account thereof and if he does so he shall instead, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the appropriate State agency or agencies, withhold any payments to be made to the State under sections 403(a), 453, 1604, and 1903(a) until the amount so withheld (including any amounts contributed by the State pursuant to the requirement in section 402(a) (13)) equals 10 per centum of such costs. Such withholding shall remain in effect until such time as the Secretary of Labor has assurances from the State that such 10 per centum will be contributed as required by section 402(a) (13). Amounts so withheld shall be deemed to have been paid to the State under such sections and shall be paid by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to the Secretary of Labor.

"CHILD CARE

"SEC. 436. (a) (1) For the purpose of assuring that individuals receiving benefits under part D or supplementary payments pursuant to part E will not be prevented from participating in training or employment by the unavailability of appropriate child care, there are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to enable the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contracts with any public or private agency or organization, for part or all of the cost of projects for the provision of child care, including necessary transportation and alteration, remodeling, and renovation of facilities, which may be necessary or appropriate in order to better enable an individual who has been registered pursuant to part D or is receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part, or to enable an individual who has been referred pursuant to section 447 (d) to participate in vocational rehabilitation, or to enable a member of a family which is or has been (within such period of time as the Secretary may prescribe) eligible for benefits under such part D or payments pursuant to such part E to undertake or continue manpower training or employment under this part; or, with respect to the period prior to the date when part D becomes effective for a State, to better enable an individual who is receiving aid to families with dependent children, or whose needs are taken into account in determining the need of any one claiming or receiving such aid, to participate in manpower training or employment.

"(2) Such grants or contracts for the provision of child care in any area may be made directly, or through grants to any public or nonprofit private agency which is designated by the appropriate elected or appointed official or officials in such area and which demonstrates a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency in such area (including provision for the stationing of personnel with the manpower team in appropriate cases). To the extent appropriate, such care for children attending school which is provided on a group or institutional basis shall be provided through arrangements with the appropriate local educational agency.

"(3) Such projects shall provide for various types of child care needed in the light of the different circumstances and needs of the children involved.

Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to make grants
to any public or nonprofit private agency or organization, and contacts with any public or private agency or organization, for evaluation, training of personnel, technical assistance, or research or demonstration projects to determine more effective methods of providing any such care.

"(c) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare may provide, in any case in which a family is able to pay for part or all of the cost of child care provided under a project assisted under this section, for payment by the family of such fees for the care as may be reasonable in the light of such ability.

"SUPPORTIVE SERVICES

"Sec. 437. (a) No payments shall be made to any State under title V, XVI, or XIX, or part A or B of this title, with respect to expenditures for any calendar quarter beginning on or after the date part D becomes effective with respect to such State, unless it has in effect an agreement with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare under which it will provide health, vocational rehabilitation, counseling, social, and other supportive services which the Secretary under regulations determines to be necessary to permit an individual who has been registered pursuant to part D or is receiving supplementary payments pursuant to part E to undertake or continue manpower training and employment under this part.

"(b) Services under such an agreement shall be provided in close cooperation with manpower training and employment services provided under this part.

"(c) The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare shall from time to time, in such installments and on such conditions as he deems appropriate, pay to any State with which he has an agreement pursuant to subsection (a) up to 90 per centum of the cost of such State of carrying out such agreement. There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

"ADVANCE FUNDING"

"SEC. 438. (a) For the purpose of affording adequate notice of funding available under this part, appropriations for grants, contracts, or other payments with respect to individuals registered pursuant to section 447 are authorized to be included in the appropriation Act for the fiscal year preceding the fiscal year for which they are available for obligation.

"(b) In order to effect a transition to the advance funding method of timing appropriation action, subsection (a) shall apply notwithstanding that its initial application will result in enactment in the same year (whether in the same appropriation Act or otherwise) of two separate appropriations, one for the then current fiscal year and one for the succeeding fiscal year.

"EVALUATION AND RESEARCH; REPORTS TO CONGRESS"

"SEC. 439. (a) (1) The Secretary shall (jointly with the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare) provide for the continuing evaluation of the manpower training and employment programs provided under this part, including their effectiveness in achieving stated goals and their impact on other related programs. The Secretary may conduct research regarding, and demonstrations of, ways to improve the effectiveness of the manpower training and employment programs so provided and may also conduct demonstrations of improved training techniques for upgrading the skills of the working poor. The Secretary may, for these purposes, contract for independent evaluations of and research regarding such programs or individual projects under such programs, and establish a data collection, processing, and retrieval system.

"(2) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums, not exceeding $15,000,000 for any fiscal year, as may be necessary to carry out paragraph (1).

"(b) On or before September 1 following each fiscal year in which part D is effective with respect to any State—

"(1) the Secretary shall report to the Congress on under this title shall be made, in the case of any such plan, only with respect to expenditures thereunder which would

"(i) the State plan which was in effect on such date and was approved under title I, in the case of any individual who is sixty-five years of age or older,

"(ii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title X, in the case of an individual who is blind, or

"(iii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title XIV, in the case of an individual who is severely disabled,

"ALTERNATE PROVISION FOR DIRECT FEDERAL PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS

"SEC. 1605. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with a State under which he will, on behalf of the State, pay aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State under the State's plan approved under this title and perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon. In such case payments shall not be made as provided in section 1604 and the agreement shall also provide for payment to the Secretary by the State of its share of such aid (adjusted to reflect the State's share of any overpayments recovered under section 1606).

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS"

"Sec. 1606. Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of payment has been made to any person as a direct Federal payment pursuant to section 1605, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the overpaid individual or by recovery from him or his estate or payment to him. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with a view to avoiding penalizing individuals who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration.

"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS"

"Sec. 1607. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under this title, finds—
“(1) that the plan no longer complies with the provisions of sections 1602 and 1603; or
“(2) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision;
the Secretary shall notify such State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State or individuals within the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no such further payments to the State or individuals in the State under this title (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure).

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 1608. (a) If the State plan of a State approved under section 1602 provides that the State agency will make available to applicants for or recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the State plan at least those services to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care which are prescribed by the Secretary, such State shall qualify for payments for services under subsection (b) of this section.
“(b) In the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 1602 meets the requirements of subsection (a), the Secretary shall pay to the State from the sums appropriated therefor an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each quarter, as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

“(1) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

“(A) services which are prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) and are provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, or

“(B) other services, specified by the Secretary as likely to prevent or reduce dependency, so provided to the applicants for or recipients of aid, or

“(C) any of the services prescribed pursuant to subsection (a), and any of the services specified in subparagraph (B) of this paragraph, which the Secretary may specify as appropriate for individuals who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe, have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, if such services are requested by the individuals and are provided to them in accordance with subsection (c), or

"(D) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision; plus

"(2) one-half of so much of such expenditures (not included under paragraph (1)) as are for services provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, and to individuals requesting such services who (within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe) have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of such aid; plus

"(3) one-half of the remainder of such expenditures.

"(c) The services referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall, except to the extent specified by the Secretary, include only—

"(1) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision (but no funds authorized under this title shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (A) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under that Act, or (B) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under that Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under paragraph (2), if provided by such staff), and

"(2) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of that State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which
the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies).

Services described in clause (B) of paragraph (1) may be provided only pursuant to agreement with the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

"(d) The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which paragraph (1) of subsection (b) applies and the portion thereof to which paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary.

"(e) In the case of any State whose plan approved under section 1602 does not meet the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, there shall be paid to the State, in lieu of the amount provided for under subsection (b), an amount equal to one-half the total of the sums expended during each quarter as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, including services referred to in subsections (b) and (c) and provided in accordance with the provisions of those subsections.

"(f) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of subsection (a), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan, that—
“(1) the provision no longer complies with the requirements of subsection (a), or

the Secretary shall notify the State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State under subsection (b) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied, no such further payments with respect to the administration of and services under the State plan shall be made, but, instead, such payments shall be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under subsection (e).

“COMPUTATION OF PAYMENTS TO STATES

“SEC. 1609. (a) (1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under sections 1604 and 1608 for that quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in that quarter in accordance with the provisions of sections 1604 and 1608, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in that quarter, and, if such amount is less than the State’s proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, and (B) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then pay in such installments as he may determine, the amount so estimated, reduced or increased to the extent of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made under this section to the State for any prior quarter and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under this subsection.

"(b) The pro rata share to which the United States is equitably entitled, as determined by the Secretary, of the net amount recovered during any quarter by a State or political subdivision thereof with respect to aid furnished under the State plan, but excluding any amount of such aid recovered from the estate of a deceased recipient which is not in excess of the amount expended by the State or any political subdivision thereof for the funeral expenses of the deceased, shall be considered an overpayment to be adjusted under subsection (a) (2).

"(c) Upon the making of any estimate by the Secretary under this section, any appropriations available for payments under this title shall be deemed obligated.

H.R. 16311—6
"DEFINITION

"Sec. 1610. For purposes of this title, the term 'aid to the aged, blind, and disabled' means money payments to needy individuals who are 65 years of age or older, are blind, or are severely disabled, but such term does not include—

"(1) any such payments to any individual who is an inmate of a public institution (except as a patient in a medical institution); or

"(2) any such payments to any individual who has not attained 65 years of age and who is a patient in an institution for tuberculosis or mental diseases.

Such term also includes payments which are not included within the meaning of such term under the preceding sentence, but which would be so included except that they are made on behalf of such a needy individual to another individual who (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such needy individual, but only with respect to a State whose State plan approved under section 1602 includes provision for—

"(A) determination by the State agency that the needy individual has, by reason of his physical or mental condition, such inability to manage funds that making payments to him would be contrary to his welfare and, therefore, it is necessary to provide such aid through payments described in this sentence;
“(B) making such payments only in cases in which the payment will, under the rules otherwise applicable under the State plan for determining need and the amount of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled to be paid (and in conjunction with other income and resources), meet all the need of the individuals with respect to whom such payments are made;

“(D) periodic review by the State agency of the determination under clause (A) to ascertain whether conditions justifying such determination still exist, with provision for termination of the payments if they do not and for seeking judicial appointment of a guardian, or other legal representative, as described in section 1111, if and when it appears that such action will best serve the interests of the needy individual; and

Whether an individual is blind or severely disabled shall be determined for purposes of this title in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary.”

"(2) (A) The amounts to be used under such sections in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam shall be promulgated by the Secretary between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average per capita income of each State and of the United States for the most recent calendar year for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce. 4 "PART D—FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN

5 "APPROPRIATIONS

6 "Sec. 441. For the purpose of providing a basic level of financial assistance throughout the Nation to needy families with children, in a manner which will strengthen family life, encourage work training and self-support, and enhance personal dignity, there is authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year a sum sufficient to carry out this part.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE

BENEFITS

"Eligibility

"SEC. 442. (a) Each family (as defined in section 445)—

"(1) whose income, other than income excluded pursuant to section 443 (b), is less than—"(A) $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

"(B) $300 per year for each additional member, and

"(2) whose resources, other than resources excluded pursuant to section 444, are less than $1,500,
shall, in accordance with and subject to the other provisions of this title, be paid a family assistance benefit.

"Amount

"(b) The family assistance benefit for a family shall be payable at the rate of—
“(1) $500 per year for each of the first two members of the family, plus

“(2) $300 per year for each additional member, reduced by the amount of income, not excluded pursuant to section 443(b), of the members of the family.

“Period for Determination of Benefits

“(c) (1) A family’s eligibility for and its amount of family assistance benefits shall be determined for each quarter of a calendar year. Such determination shall be made on the basis of the Secretary’s estimate of the family’s income for such quarter, after taking into account income for a preceding period and any modifications in income which are likely to occur on the basis of changes in conditions or circumstances. Eligibility for and the amount of benefits of a family for any quarter shall be redetermined at such time or times as may be provided by the Secretary, such redetermination to be effective prospectively.

“(2) The Secretary shall by regulation prescribe the cases in which and extent to which the amount of a family assistance benefit for any quarter shall be reduced by reason of the time elapsing since the beginning of such quarter and before the date of filing of the application for the benefit.

“(3) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which income received in one period (or expenses incurred in one period in earning income) shall, for purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits, be considered as received (or incurred) in another period or periods.

"Special Limits on Gross Income

"(d) The Secretary may, in accordance with regulations, prescribe the circumstances under which the gross income from a trade or business (including farming) will be considered sufficiently large to make such family ineligible for such benefits.

"Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam

"(e) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).

"INCOME

" Meaning of Income

"Sec. 443. (a) For purposes of this part, income means both earned income and unearned income; and—

"(1) earned income means only—

"(A) remuneration for services performed as an employee (as defined in section 210 (j)), other than remuneration to which section 209 (b), (c), (d), (f), or (k), or section 211, would apply; and

"(B) net earnings from self-employment. as defined in section 211 (without the application of the second and third sentences following clause (C) of subsection (a) (9)), including earnings for services described in paragraphs (4), (5), and (6) of subsection (c); and tional or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment;

“(2) (A) the total unearned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $30 in such quarter, and (B) the total earned income of all members of a family in a calendar quarter which, as determined in accordance with such criteria, is received too infrequently or irregularly to be included, if such income so received does not exceed $30 in such quarter;

“(3) an amount of earned income of a member of the family equal to all, or such part (and according to such schedule) as the Secretary may prescribe, of the cost incurred by such member for child care which the Secretary deems necessary to securing or continuing in manpower training, vocational rehabilitation, employment, or self-employment;

"Sec. 444. (a) In determining the resources of a family there shall be excluded—

"(1) the home, household goods, and personal effects; and

"(2) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion.
"Disposition of Resources

(b) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to the period or periods of time within which, and the manner in which, various kinds of property must be disposed of in order not to be included in determining a family's eligibility for family assistance benefits. Any portion of the family's benefits paid for any such period shall be conditioned upon such disposal; and any benefits so paid shall (at the time of the disposal) be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had the disposal occurred at the beginning of the period for which such benefits were paid.

"MEANING OF FAMILY AND CHILD

"Composition of Family

"Sec. 445. (a) Two or more individuals—

"(1) who are related by blood, marriage, or adoption,

"(2) who are living in a place of residence maintained by one or more of them as his or their own home,

"(3) who are residents of the United States, and

"(4) at least one of whom is a child who (A) is not married to another of such individuals and
I. (B) is in the care of or dependent upon another of such individuals, shall be regarded as a family for purposes of this part and parts A, C, and E. A parent (of a child living in a place of residence referred to in paragraph (2)), or a spouse of such a parent, who is determined by the Secretary to be temporarily absent from such place of residence for the purpose of engaging in or seeking employment or self-employment (including military service) shall nevertheless be considered (for purposes of paragraph (2)) to be living in such place of residence.

"Definition of Child

"(b) For purposes of this part and parts C and E, the term 'child' means an individual who is (1) under the age of eighteen, or (2) under the age of twenty-one and (as determined by the Secretary under regulations) a student regularly attending a school, college, or university, or a course of vocational or technical training designed to prepare him for gainful employment.

"Determination of Family Relationships

"(c) In determining whether an individual is related to another individual by blood, marriage, or adoption, appropriate State law shall be applied.

"Income and Resources of Noncontributing Adult

"(d) For purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of family assistance benefits for any family there shall be excluded the income and resources of any individual, other than a parent of a child (or a spouse of a parent), which, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, is not available to other members of the family; and for such purposes such individual—

"(1) in the case of a child, shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determining the family’s eligibility for such benefits but not for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits, and

"(2) in any other case, shall not be considered a member of the family for any purpose.

"Recipients of Aid to the Aged, Blind, and Disabled Ineligible

"(e) If an individual is receiving aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under a State plan approved under title XVI, or if his needs are taken into account in determining the need of another person receiving such aid, then, for the period for which such aid is received, such individual shall not be regarded as a member of a family for purposes of determining the amount of the family assistance benefits of the family.

"PAYMENTS AND PROCEDURES

"Payments of Benefits

"Sec. 446. (a) (1) Family assistance benefits shall be paid at such time or times and in such installments as the Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of this title.

"(2) Payment of the family assistance benefit of any family may be made to any one or more members of the family, or, if the Secretary deems it appropriate, to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(3) The Secretary may by regulation establish ranges of incomes within which a single amount of family assistance benefit shall apply.

"Overpayments and Underpayments

"(b) Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of family assistance benefits has been paid with respect to any family, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this subsection, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments to the family or by recovery from or payment to any one or more of the individuals who are or were members thereof. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with respect to a family with a view to avoiding penalizing members of the family who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this part, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration of this part.

“Hearings and Review

“(c) (1) The Secretary shall provide reasonable notice and opportunity for a hearing to any individual who is or claims to be a member of a family and is in disagreement with any determination under this part with respect to eligibility of the family for family assistance benefits, the number of members of the family, or the amount of the benefits, if such individual requests a hearing on the matter in disagreement within thirty days after notice of such determination is received. Until a determination is made on the basis of such hearing or upon disposition of the matter through default, withdrawal of the request by the individual, or revision of the initial determination by the Secretary, any amounts which are payable (or would be payable but for the matter in disagreement) to any individual who has been determined to be a member of such family shall continue to be paid; but any amounts so paid for periods prior to such determination or disposition shall be considered overpayments to the extent they would not have been paid had such determination or disposition occurred at the same time as the Secretary’s initial determination on the matter in disagreement.

“(2) Determination on the basis of such hearing shall be made within ninety days after the individual requests the hearing as provided in paragraph (1).

"(3) The final determination of the Secretary after a hearing under paragraph (1) shall be subject to judicial review as provided in section 205(g) to the same extent as the Secretary's final determinations under section 205; except that the determination of the Secretary after such hearing as to any fact shall be final and conclusive and not subject to review by any court.

"Procedures; Prohibition of Assignments

"(d) The provisions of sections 206 and 207 and subsections (a), (d), (e), and (f) of section 205 shall apply with respect to this part to the same extent as they apply in the case of title II.

"Applications and Furnishing of Information by Families

"(e) (1) The Secretary shall prescribe regulations applicable to families or members thereof with respect to the filing of applications, the furnishing of other data and material, and the reporting of events and changes in circumstances, as may be necessary to determine eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits.

"(2) In order to encourage prompt reporting of events and changes in circumstances relevant to eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, and more accurate estimates of expected income or expenses by members of families for purposes of such eligibility and amount of benefits, the Secretary may prescribe the cases in which and the extent to which—

"(A) failure to so report or delay in so reporting, or

"(B) inaccuracy of information which is furnished by the members and on which the estimates of income or expenses for such purposes are based,

will result in treatment as overpayments of all or any portion of payments of such benefits for the period involved.

"Furnishing of Information by Other Agencies

"(f) The head of any Federal agency shall provide such information as the Secretary needs for purposes of determining eligibility for or amount of family assistance benefits, or verifying other information with respect thereto.

"REGISTRATION AND REFERRAL OF FAMILY MEMBERS FOR MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, AND EMPLOYMENT

"Sec. 447. (a) Every individual who is a member of a family which is found to be eligible for family assistance benefits, other than a member to whom the Secretary finds paragraph (1), (2), (3), (4), or (5) of subsection (b) applies, shall register for manpower services, training, and employment with the local public employment office of the State as provided by regulations of the Secretary of Labor. If and for so long as any such individual is found by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to have failed to so register, he shall not be regarded as a member of a family but his income which would otherwise be counted under this part as income of a family shall be so counted; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for family assistance benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for purposes of determination of the amount of such benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provide for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(b) An individual shall not be required to register pursuant to subsection (a) if the Secretary determines that such individual is—

"(1) unable to engage in work or training by reason of illness, incapacity, or advanced age;

"(2) a mother or other relative of a child under the age of six who is caring for such child;

"(3) the mother or other female caretaker of a child, if the father or another adult male relative is in the home and not excluded by paragraph (1), (2), (4), or (5) of this subsection (unless the second sentence of subsection (a), or section 448 (a), is applicable
to him);

"(4) a child who is under the age of sixteen or meets the requirements of section 445 (b) (2); or

"(5) one whose presence in the home on a substantially continuous basis is required because of the illness or incapacity of another member of the household.

An individual who would, but for the preceding sentence,
be required to register pursuant to subsection (a), may, if he wishes, register as provided in such subsection.

"(c) The Secretary shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services in such cases and for so long as he deems appropriate in the case of (1) individuals registered pursuant to subsection (a) who are, pursuant to such registration, participating in manpower services, training, or employment, and (2) individuals referred pursuant to subsection (d) who are, pursuant to such referral, participating in vocational rehabilitation.

"(d) In the case of any member of a family receiving family assistance benefits who is not required to register pursuant to subsection (a) because of such member's incapacity, the Secretary shall make provision for referral of such member to the appropriate State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act, and (except in such cases involving permanent incapacity as the Secretary may determine) for a review not less often than quarterly of such member's incapacity and his need for and utilization of the rehabilitation services made available to him under such plan. If and for so long as such member is found by the Secretary to have refused without good cause to accept rehabilitation services available to him under such plan, he shall be treated as an individual to whom subsection (a) is applicable by reason of refusal to accept or participate in employment or training.

"DENIAL OF BENEFITS IN CASE OF REFUSAL OF MANPOWER SERVICES, TRAINING, OR EMPLOYMENT"

"Sec. 448. (a) For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of family assistance benefits under this part, an individual who has registered as required under section 447 (a) shall not be regarded as a member of a family, but his income which would otherwise be counted as income of the family under this part shall be so counted, if and for so long as he has been found by the Secretary of Labor, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing (which shall be held in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as a hearing under section 446 (c) (1) and (2)), to have refused without good cause to participate or continue to participate in manpower services, training, or employment, or to have refused without good cause to accept employment in which he is able to engage which is offered through the public employment offices of the State, or is otherwise offered by an employer if the offer of such employer is determined by the Secretary of Labor, after notification by such employer or otherwise, to be a bona fide offer of employment; except that if such individual is the only member of the family other than a child, such individual shall be regarded as a member of the family for purposes of determination of the family's eligibility for benefits, but not (except for counting his income) for the purposes of determination of the amount of its benefits. No part of the family assistance benefits of any such family may be paid to such individual during the period for which the preceding sentence is applicable to him; and the Secretary may, if he deems it appropriate, provided for payment of such benefits during such period to any person, other than a member of such family, who is interested in or concerned with the welfare of the family.

"(b) No family shall be denied benefits under this part, or have its benefits under this part reduced, because an individual who is (or would, but for subsection (a), be) a member of such family refuses work under any of the following conditions:

"(1) if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute;

"(2) if the wages, hours, or other terms or conditions of the work offered are contrary to or less than those prescribed by Federal, State, or local law or are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality;

"(3) if, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization; or

"(4) if the individual has the demonstrated capacity, through other available training or employment opportunities, of securing work that would better enable him to achieve self-sufficiency.

"TRANSFER OF FUNDS FOR ON-THE-JOB TRAINING PROGRAMS

"Sec. 449. The Secretary shall, pursuant to and to the extent provided by agreement with the Secretary of Labor, pay to the Secretary of Labor amounts which he estimates would be paid as family assistance benefits under this part to individuals participating in public or private employer compensated on-the-job training under a program of the Secretary of Labor if they were not participating in such training.
Such amounts shall be available to pay the costs of such programs.

"PART E—STATE SUPPLEMENTATION OF FAMILY ASSISTANCE BENEFITS

"PAYMENTS UNDER TITLES IV, V, XVI, AND XIX CONDITIONED ON SUPPLEMENTATION

"SEC. 451. In order for a State to be eligible for payments pursuant to title V, XVI, or XIX, or part A or B of this title, with respect to expenditures for any quarter beginning on or after the date this part becomes effective with respect to such State, it must have in effect an agreement with the Secretary under which it will make supplementary payments, as provided in this part, to any family other than a family in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed.

"ELIGIBILITY FOR AND AMOUNT OF SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

"SEC. 452. (a) Eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments under the agreement with any State under this part shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be determined by application of the provisions of,
and rules and regulations under, sections 442 (a) (2), (c), and (d), 443 (a), 444, 445, 446 (to the extent the Secretary deems appropriate), 447, and 448, and by application of the standard for determining need under the plan of such State as in effect for January 1970 (which standard complies with the requirements for approval under part A as in effect for such month) or, if lower, a standard equal to the applicable poverty level determined pursuant to section 453 (c) and in effect at the time of such payments, or such higher standard of need as the State may apply, with the resulting amount reduced by the family assistance benefit payable under part
D and further reduced by any other income (earned or unearned) not excluded under section 443 (b) (except paragraph (4) thereof) or under subsection (b) of this section;
but in making such determination the State may impose limitations on the amount of aid paid to the extent that such limitations (in combination with other provisions of the plan) are no more stringent in result than those imposed under the plan of such State as in effect for such month. In the case of any State which provides for meeting less than 100 per centum of its standard of need or provides for considering less than 100 per centum of requirements in determining need, the Secretary shall prescribe by regulation the method or methods for achieving as nearly as possible the results provided for under the foregoing provisions of this subsection.
“(b) For purposes of determining eligibility for and amount of supplementary payments to a family for any period pursuant to an agreement under this part, in the case of earned income to which paragraph (4) of section 443 (b) applies, there shall be disregarded $720 per year (or proportionately smaller amounts for shorter periods), plus—

(1) one-third of the portion of the remainder of earnings which does not exceed twice the amount of the family assistance benefits that would be payable to the family if it had no income, plus

(2) one-fifth (or more if the Secretary by regulation so prescribes) of the balance of the earnings.

For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).

“(c) The agreement with a State under this part shall—

“(1) provide that it shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State;

“(2) provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to carry out or supervise the carrying out of the agreement in the State;

“(3) provide for granting an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency carrying out the agreement to any individual whose claim for supplementary payments is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness;
“(4) provide (A) such methods of administration (including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, except that the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of any individual employed in accordance with such methods) as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the agreement in the State, and (B) for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff, with particular emphasis on the full- or part-time employment of recipients of supplementary payments and other persons of low income, as community services aides, in carrying out the agreement and for the use of nonpaid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

“(5) provide that the State agency carrying out the agreement will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

“(6) provide safeguards which restrict the use or
disclosure of information concerning applicants for and recipients of supplementary payments to purposes directly connected with the administration of this title; and

“(7) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for supplementary payments shall have opportunity to do so, and that supplementary payments shall be furnished with reasonable promptness to all eligible individuals.

“PAYMENTS TO STATES

“Sec. 453. (a) (1) The Secretary shall pay to any State which has in effect an agreement under this part, for each fiscal year, an amount equal to 30 per centum of the total amount expended during such year pursuant to its agreement as supplementary payments to families other than families in which both parents of the child or children are present, neither parent is incapacitated, and the male parent is not unemployed, not counting so much of the supplementary payment made to any family as exceeds the amount by which (with respect to the period involved) —

“(A) the family assistance benefit payable to such family under part D, plus any income of such family (earned or unearned) not disregarded in determining the amount of such supplementary payment, is less than
“(B) the applicable poverty level as promulgated and in effect under subsection (c).

“(2) The Secretary shall also pay to each such State an amount equal to 50 per centum of its administrative costs found necessary by the Secretary for carrying out its agreement.

“(b) Payments under subsection (a) shall be made at such time or times, in advance or by way of reimbursement, and in such installments as the Secretary may determine; and shall be made on such conditions as may be necessary to assure the carrying out of the purposes of this title.

“(c) (1) For purposes of this part, the ‘poverty level’ for a family group of any given size shall be the amount shown for a family group of such size in the following table, adjusted as provided in paragraph (2):

furnish financial assistance to needy individuals who are sixty-five years of age or over, blind, or disabled and for the purpose of encouraging each State to furnish rehabilitation and other services to help such individuals attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, there are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year sums sufficient to carry out these purposes. The sums made available under this section shall be used for making payments to States having State plans approved under section 1602.

“STATE PLANS FOR FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AND SERVICES TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

“Sec. 1602. (a) A State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled must—

“(1) provide for the establishment or designation of a single State agency to administer or supervise the administration of the State plan;

“(2) provide such methods of administration as are found by the Secretary to be necessary for the proper and efficient operation of the plan, including methods relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis (but the Secretary shall exercise no authority with respect to the selection, tenure of office, and compensation of individuals employed in accordance with such methods);

"(3) provide for the training and effective use of social service personnel in the administration of the plan, for the furnishing of technical assistance to units of State government and of political subdivisions which are fur-ishing financial assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled, and for the development through research or demonstration projects of new or improved methods of furnishing assistance or services to the aged, blind, and disabled;

"(4) provide for the training and effective use of paid subprofessional staff (with particular emphasis on the full-time or part-time employment of recipients and other persons of low income as community service aides) in the administration of the plan and for the use of non-paid or partially paid volunteers in a social service volunteer program in providing services to applicants and recipients and in assisting any advisory committees established by the State agency;

"(5) provide that all individuals wishing to make application for aid under the plan shall have opportunity to do so and that such aid shall be furnished with reasonable promptness with respect to all eligible individuals;
“(6) provide for the use of a simplified statement, conforming to standards prescribed by the Secretary, to establish eligibility, and for adequate and effective methods of verification of eligibility of applicants and recipients through the use, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, of sampling and other scientific techniques;

“(7) provide that, except to the extent permitted by the Secretary with respect to services, the State plan shall be in effect in all political subdivisions of the State, and, if administered by them, be mandatory upon them;

“(8) provide for financial participation by the State;

“(9) provide that, in determining whether an individual is blind, there shall be an examination by a physician skilled in the diseases of the eye or by an optometrist, whichever the individual may select;

“(10) provide for granting an opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency to any individual whose claim for aid under the plan is denied or is not acted upon with reasonable promptness;

“(11) provide for periodic evaluation of the operations of the State plan, not less often than annually, in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary, and the furnishing of annual reports of such evaluations to the Secretary together with any necessary modifications of the State plan resulting from such evaluations;

“(12) provide that the State agency will make such reports, in such form and containing such information, as the Secretary may from time to time require, and comply with such provisions as the Secretary may from time to time find necessary to assure the correctness and verification of such reports;

“(13) provide safeguards which restrict the use or disclosure of information concerning applicants and recipients to purposes directly connected with the administration of the plan;

“(14) provide, if the plan includes aid to or on behalf of individuals in private or public institutions, for the establishment or designation of a State authority or authorities which shall be responsible for establishing and maintaining standards for such institutions;

“(15) provide a description of the services which the State makes available to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain self-support or self-care, including a description of the steps taken to assure, in the provision of such services, maximum utilization of all available services that are similar or related; and

“(16) assure that, in administering the State plan and providing services thereunder, the State will observe priorities established by the Secretary and comply with such performance standards as the Secretary may, from time to time, establish.

Notwithstanding paragraph (1), if on January 1, 1962, and on the date on which a State submits (or submitted) its plan for approval under this title, the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title X was different from the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title I and the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of the plan of such State approved under title XIV, then the State agency which administered or supervised the administration of such plan approved under title X may be designated to administer or supervise the administration of the portion of the State plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which relates to blind individuals and a separate State agency may be established or designated to administer or supervise the administration of the rest of such plan; and in such case the part of the plan which each such agency administers, or the administration of which each such agency supervises, shall be regarded as a separate plan for purposes of this title.
“(b) The Secretary shall approve any plan which fulfills the conditions specified in subsection (a) and in section 1603, except that he shall not approve any plan which imposes, as a condition of eligibility for aid under the plan—

“(1) an age requirement of more than sixty-five years;

“(2) any residency requirement which excludes any individual who resides in the State;

“(3) any citizenship requirement which excludes any citizen of the United States, or any alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence who has resided in the United States continuously during the five years immediately preceding his application for such aid;

“(4) any disability or age requirement which excludes any persons under a severe disability, as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary, who are eighteen years of age or older; or

“(5) any blindness or age requirement which excludes any persons who are blind as determined in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary.

In the case of any State to which the provisions of section 344 of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1950 were applicable on January 1, 1962, and to which the sentence of section 1002(b) following paragraph (2) thereof is applicable on the date on which its State plan was or is submitted for approval under this title, the Secretary shall approve the plan of such State for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled for purposes of this title, even though it does not meet the requirements of section 1603 (a), if it meets all other requirements of this title for an approved plan for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled; but payments to the State under this title shall be made, in the case of any such plan, only with respect to expenditures thereunder which would be included as expenditures for the purposes of this title
under a plan approved under this section without regard to the provisions of this sentence.

"DETERMINATION OF NEED

"Sec. 1603. (a) A State plan must provide that, in determining the need for aid under the plan, the State agency
shall take into consideration any other income or resources of the individual claiming such aid as well as any expenses reasonably attributable to the earning of any such income;
except that, in making such determination with respect to
any individual—

"(1) the State agency shall not consider as resources (A) the home, household goods, and personal effects of the individual, (B) other personal or real property, the total value of which does not exceed $1,500,
or (C) other property which, as determined in accordance with and subject to limitations in regulations of the Secretary, is so essential to the family's means of self-support as to warrant its exclusion, but shall apply the provisions of section 442 (d) and regulations thereunder;
"(2) the State agency may not consider the financial responsibility of any individual for any applicant or recipient unless the applicant or recipient is the individual's spouse, or the individual's child who is under the age of twenty-one or is blind or severely disabled;
"(3) if such individual is blind, the State agency
(A) shall disregard the first $85 per month of earned income plus one-half of earned income in excess of $85 per month, and (B) shall, for a period not in excess of twelve months, and may, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, disregard such additional amounts of other income and resources, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of such plan;
(4) if such individual is not blind but is severely disabled, the State agency (A) shall disregard the first $85 per month of earned income plus one-half of earned income in excess of $85 per month, and (B) shall, for a period not in excess of twelve months, and may, for a period not in excess of thirty-six months, disregard such additional amounts of other income and resources, in the case of any such individual who has a plan for achieving self-support approved by the State agency, as may be necessary for the fulfillment of the plan, but only with respect to the part or parts of such period during substantially all of which he is undergoing vocational rehabilitation;

"(5) if such individual has attained age sixty-five and is neither blind nor severely disabled, the State agency may disregard not more than the first $60 per month of earned income plus one-half of the remainder thereof; and

"(6) the State agency may, before disregarding any amounts under the preceding paragraphs of this subsection, disregard not more than $7.50 of any income.

For requirement of additional disregarding of income of OASDI recipients in determining need for aid under the plan, see section 1007 of the Social Security Amendments of 1969.

"(b) A State plan must also provide that—

"(1) each eligible individual, other than one who is a patient in a medical institution or is receiving instittutional services in an intermediate care facility to which section 1121 applies, shall receive financial assistance in such amount as, when added to his income which is not disregarded pursuant to subsection (a), will provide a minimum of $110 per month;

"(2) the standard of need applied for determining eligibility for and amount of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled shall not be lower than (A) the standard applied for this purpose under the State plan (approved under this title) as in effect on the date of enactment of part D of title IV of this Act, or (B) if there was no such plan in effect for such State on such date, the standard of need which was applicable under—

"(i) the State plan which was in effect on such date and was approved under title I, in the case of any individual who is sixty-five years of age or older,

"(ii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title X, in the case of an individual who is blind, or

"(iii) the State plan in effect on such date and approved under title XIV, in the case of an individual who is severely disabled,

except that if two or more of clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) are applicable to an individual, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than the higher (or highest) of the standards under the applicable plans, and except that if none of such clauses is applicable to an individual, the standard of need applied with respect to such individual may not be lower than the higher (or highest) of the standards under the State plans approved under titles I, X, and XIV which were in effect on such date; and

"(3) no aid will be furnished to any individual under the State plan for any period with respect to which he is considered a member of a family receiving family assistance benefits under part D of title IV or supplementary payments pursuant to part E thereof, or training allowances under part C thereof, for purposes of determining the amount of such benefits, payments, or allowances (but this paragraph shall not apply to any individual, otherwise considered a member of such a family, if he elects in such manner and form as the Secretary may prescribe not to be considered a member of such a family).

"(c) For special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).

"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR AID TO THE AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED

"Sec. 1604. From the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary shall pay to each State which has a plan approved under this title, for each calendar quarter, an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each month of such quarter as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the State plan—

"(1) 90 per centum of such expenditures, not counting so much of any expenditures as exceeds the product of $65 multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month; plus

"(2) 25 per centum of the amount by which such expenditures exceed the maximum which may be counted under paragraph (1), not counting so much of any expenditures with respect to such month as exceeds the product of the amount which, as determined by the Secretary, is the maximum permissible level of assistance per person in which the Federal Government will participate financially, multiplied by the total number of recipients of such aid for such month.

In the case of any individual in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, or Guam, the maximum permissible level of assistance under paragraph (2) may be lower than in the case of individuals in the other States. For other special provisions applicable to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, see section 1108 (e).
"ALTERNATE PROVISION FOR DIRECT FEDERAL PAYMENTS TO INDIVIDUALS"

"Sec. 1605. The Secretary may enter into an agreement with a State under which he will, on behalf of the State, pay aid to the aged, blind, and disabled directly to individuals in the State under the State's plan approved under this title and perform such other functions of the State in connection with such payments as may be agreed upon. In such case payments shall not be made as provided in section 1604 and the agreement shall also provide for payment to the Secretary by the State of its share of such aid (adjusted to reflect the State's share of any overpayments recovered under section 1606).

"OVERPAYMENTS AND UNDERPAYMENTS"

"Sec. 1606. Whenever the Secretary finds that more or less than the correct amount of payment has been made to any person as a direct Federal payment pursuant to section 1605, proper adjustment or recovery shall, subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, be made by appropriate adjustments in future payments of the overpaid individual or by recovery from him or his estate or payment to him. The Secretary shall make such provision as he finds appropriate in the case of payment of more than the correct amount of benefits with a view to avoiding penalizing individuals who were without fault in connection with the overpayment, if adjustment or recovery on account of such overpayment in such case would defeat the purposes of this title, or be against equity or good conscience, or (because of the small amount involved) impede efficient or effective administration.

"OPERATION OF STATE PLANS"

"SEC. 1607. If the Secretary, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under this title, finds—

"(1) that the plan no longer complies with the provisions of sections 1602 and 1603; or

"(2) that in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with any such provision; the Secretary shall notify such State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State or individuals within the State under this title (or, in his discretion, that payments will be limited to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure), until the Secretary is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until he is so satisfied he shall make no such further payments to the State or individuals in the State under this title (or shall limit payments to categories under or parts of the State plan not affected by such failure)."
"PAYMENTS TO STATES FOR SERVICES AND ADMINISTRATION

"SEC. 1608. (a) If the State plan of a State approved under section 1602 provides that the State agency will make available to applicants for or recipients of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled under the State plan at least those services to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care which are prescribed by the Secretary, such State shall qualify for payments for services under subsection (b) of this section.

"(b) In the case of any State whose State plan approved under section 1602 meets the requirements of subsection (a), the Secretary shall pay to the State from the sums appropriated therefor an amount equal to the sum of the following proportions of the total amounts expended during each quarter, as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan—

"(1) 75 per centum of so much of such expenditures as are for—

"(A) services which are prescribed pursuant to subsection (a) and are provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan to help them attain or retain capability for self-support or self-care, or

"(B) other services, specified by the Secretary
as likely to prevent or reduce dependency, so provided to the applicants for or recipients of aid, or

"(C) any of the services prescribed pursuant to subsection (a), and any of the services specified in paragraph (B) of this paragraph, which the Secretary may specify as appropriate for individuals who, within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe, have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, if such services are requested by the individuals and are provided to them in accordance with subsection (c), or

"(D) the training of personnel employed or preparing for employment by the State agency or by the local agency administering the plan in the political subdivision; plus

"(2) one-half of so much of such expenditures (not included under paragraph (1)) as are for services provided (in accordance with subsection (c)) to applicants for or recipients of aid under the plan, and to individuals requesting such services who (within such period or periods as the Secretary may prescribe) have been or are likely to become applicants for or recipients of such aid; plus

"(3) one-half of the remainder of such expenditures.
"(c) The services referred to in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (b) shall, except to the extent specified by the Secretary, include only—

"(1) services provided by the staff of the State agency, or the local agency administering the State plan in the political subdivision (but no funds authorized under this title shall be available for services defined as vocational rehabilitation services under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act (A) which are available to individuals in need of them under programs for their rehabilitation carried on under a State plan approved under that Act, or (B) which the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan approved under that Act are able and willing to provide if reimbursed for the cost thereof pursuant to agreement under paragraph (2), if provided by such staff), and

"(2) subject to limitations prescribed by the Secretary, services which in the judgment of the State agency cannot be as economically or as effectively provided by the staff of that State or local agency and are not otherwise reasonably available to individuals in need of them, and which are provided, pursuant to agreement with the State agency, by the State health authority or the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act or by any other State agency which the Secretary may determine to be appropriate (whether provided by its staff or by contract with public (local) or nonprofit private agencies).

Services described in clause (B) of paragraph (1) may be provided only pursuant to agreement with the State agency or agencies administering or supervising the administration of the State plan for vocational rehabilitation services approved under the Vocational Rehabilitation Act.

"(d) The portion of the amount expended for administration of the State plan to which paragraph (1) of subsection (b) applies and the portion thereof to which paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (b) apply shall be determined in accordance with such methods and procedures as may be permitted by the Secretary.

"(e) In the case of any State whose plan approved under section 1602 does not meet the requirements of subsection (a) of this section, there shall be paid to the State, in lieu of the amount provided for under subsection (b), an amount equal to one-half the total of the sums expended during each quarter as found necessary by the Secretary for the proper and efficient administration of the State plan, including services referred to in subsections (b) and (c) and provided in accordance with the provisions of those subsections.

“(f) In the case of any State whose State plan included a provision meeting the requirements of subsection (a), but with respect to which the Secretary finds, after reasonable notice and opportunity for hearing to the State agency administering or supervising the administration of the plan, that—

“(1) the provision no longer complies with the requirements of subsection (a), or

“(2) in the administration of the plan there is a failure to comply substantially with such provision, the Secretary shall notify the State agency that all, or such portion as he deems appropriate, of any further payments will not be made to the State under subsection (b) until he is satisfied that there will no longer be any such failure to comply. Until the Secretary is so satisfied, no such further payments with respect to the administration of and services under the State plan shall be made, but, instead, such payments shall be made, subject to the other provisions of this title, under subsection (e).

“COMPUTATION OF PAYMENTS TO STATES

“SEC. 1609. (a) (1) Prior to the beginning of each quarter, the Secretary shall estimate the amount to which a State will be entitled under sections 1604 and 1608 for that quarter, such estimates to be based on (A) a report filed by the State containing its estimate of the total sum to be expended in that quarter in accordance with the provisions of sections 1604 and 1608, and stating the amount appropriated or made available by the State and its political subdivisions for such expenditures in that quarter, and, if such amount is less than the State's proportionate share of the total sum of such estimated expenditures, the source or sources from which the difference is expected to be derived, and (B) such other investigation as the Secretary may find necessary.

"(2) The Secretary shall then pay in such installments as he may determine, the amount so estimated, reduced or increased to the extent of any overpayment or underpayment which the Secretary determines was made under this section to the State for any prior quarter and with respect to which adjustment has not already been made under this subsection.

"(b) The pro rata share to which the United States is equitably entitled, as determined by the Secretary, of the net amount recovered during any quarter by a State or political subdivision thereof with respect to aid furnished under the State plan, but excluding any amount of such aid recovered from the estate of a deceased recipient which is not in excess of the amount expended by the State or any political subdivision thereof for the funeral expenses of the deceased, shall be considered an overpayment to be adjusted under subsection (a) (2).

"(c) Upon the making of any estimate by the Secretary under this section, any appropriations available for payments under this title shall be deemed obligated.

"DEFINITION

"SEC. 1610. For purposes of this title, the term ‘aid to the aged, blind, and disabled’ means money payments to needy individuals who are 65 years of age or older, are blind, or are severely disabled, but such term does not include—

"(1) any such payments to any individual who is an inmate of a public institution (except as a patient in a medical institution) ; or

"(2) any such payments to any individual who has not attained 65 years of age and who is a patient in an institution for tuberculosis or mental diseases.

Such term also includes payments which are not included within the meaning of such term under the preceding sentence, but which would be so included except that they are made on behalf of such a needy individual to another individual who (as determined in accordance with standards prescribed by the Secretary) is interested in or concerned with the welfare of such needy individual, but only with respect to a State whose State plan approved under section 1602 includes provision for—

"(A) determination by the State agency that the needy individual has, by reason of his physical or mental condition, such inability to manage funds that making payments to him would be contrary to his welfare and, therefore, it is necessary to provide such aid through payments described in this sentence;

"(B) making such payments only in cases in which the payment will, under the rules otherwise applicable under the State plan for determining need and the amount of aid to the aged, blind, and disabled to be paid (and in conjunction with other income and resources), meet all the need of the individuals with respect to whom such payments are made;

"(C) undertaking and continuing special efforts to protect the welfare of such individuals and to improve, to the extent possible, his capacity for self-care and to manage funds;

"(D) periodic review by the State agency of the determination under clause (A) to ascertain whether conditions justifying such determination still exist, with provision for termination of the payments if they do not and for seeking judicial appointment of a guardian, or other legal representative, as described in section 1111, if and when it appears that such action will best serve the interests of the needy individual; and

"(E) opportunity for a fair hearing before the State agency on the determination referred to in clause (A) for any individual with respect to whom it is made.

Whether an individual is blind or severely disabled shall be determined for purposes of this title in accordance with criteria prescribed by the Secretary."

the legislature of which does not meet in a regular session which closes after the enactment of this Act and on the amendments made by title II of this Act shall become effective on the first July 1 which follows the close of the first regular session of the legislature of such State which closes after July 1, 1971, or (subject to paragraph (1) of this section) on the earlier date on which such State submits a plan meeting the requirements of such section 1602;

SAVING PROVISION

SEC. 402. (a) The Secretary shall pay to any State which has a State plan approved under title XVI of the Social Security Act, as amended by this Act, and has in effect an agreement under part E of title IV of such Act, for each quarter beginning after June 30, 1971, and prior to July 1, 1973, in addition to the amount payable to such State under such title and such agreement, an amount equal to the excess of—

(1) (A) 70 per centum of the total of those payments for such quarter pursuant to such agreement which are required under sections 451 and 452 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act), plus (B) the non-Federal share of expenditures for such quarter required under title XVI of the Social Security Act (as amended by this Act) as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled (as defined in subsection (b)(1) of this section), over

(2) the non-Federal share of expenditures which would have been made during such quarter as aid or assistance under the plans of the State approved under titles I, IV (part (A)), X, XIV, and XVI had they continued in effect (as defined in subsection (b)(2) of this section).

(b) For purposes of subsection (a)—

(1) the non-Federal share of expenditures for any quarter required under title XVI of the Social Security Act, referred to in clause (B) of subsection (a)(1), means the difference between (A) the total of the expenditures for such quarter under the plan approved under such title as aid to the aged, blind, and disabled which would have been included as aid to the aged, blind, or disabled under the plan approved under such title as in effect for June 1971 plus so much of the rest of such expenditures as is required (as determined by the Secretary) by reason of the amendments to such title made by this Act, and (B) the total amounts determined under section 1604 of the Social Security Act for such State with respect to such expenditures for such quarter; and

(2) the non-Federal share of expenditures which would have been made during any quarter under approved State plans, referred to in subsection (a) (2), means the difference between (A) the total of the expenditures which would have been made as aid or assistance (excluding emergency assistance specified in section 406 (e) (1) (A) of the Social Security Act and foster care under section 408 thereof) for such quarter under the plans of such State approved under title I, IV (part A), X, XIV, and XVI of such Act and in effect in the month prior to the enactment of this Act if they had continued in effect during such quarter and if they had included (if they did not already do so) payments to dependent children of unemployed fathers authorized by section 407 of the Social Security Act (as in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act), and (B) the total of the amounts which would have been determined under sections 3, 403, 1003, 1403, and 1603, or under section 1118, of the Social Security Act for such State with respect to such expenditures for such quarter.

SPECIAL PROVISIONS FOR PUERTO RICO, THE VIRGIN ISLANDS, AND GUAM

or Guam, the amounts to be used shall (instead of the $500, $300, and $1,500 in such section 442 (a), the $500 and

(B) of such section 443 (b) (2), the $1,500 in such section 1603 (a) (1), the $110 in such section 1603 (b) (1), and

$500, $300, $1,500, $500, $300, $30, $1,500, $110, and $65 as the per capita incomes of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam, respectively, bear to the per capita income of that one of the fifty States which has the lowest per capita income; except that in no case may the amounts so used exceed such $500, $300, $1,500, $500, $300, $30, $1,500, $110, and $65.

“(2) (A) The amounts to be used under such sections in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Guam shall be promulgated by the Secretary between July 1 and September 30 of each even-numbered year, on the basis of the average per capita income of each State and of the United States for the most recent calendar year for which satisfactory data are available from the Department of Commerce. Such promulgation shall be effective for each of the two fiscal years in the period beginning July 1 next succeeding such promulgation.

“(B) The term ‘United States’, for purposes of sub-paragraph (A) only, means the fifty States and the District of Columbia.

"(3) If the amounts which would otherwise be promulgated for any fiscal year for any of the three States referred to in paragraph (1) would be lower than the amounts promulgated for such State for the immediately preceding period, the amounts for such fiscal year shall be increased to the extent of the difference; and the amounts so increased shall be the amounts promulgated for such year."

Sec. 404. As used in this Act and in the amendments made by this Act, the term "Secretary" means, unless the context otherwise requires, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare; and the term "fiscal year" means a period beginning with any July 1 and ending with the close of the following June 30.

Passed the House of Representatives April 16, 1970.

Attest: W. PAT JENNINGS, Clerk.
AN ACT

To authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes.

APRIL 21, 1970

Under the order of April 20, 1970, received, considered as having been read twice, and referred to the Committee on Finance
Mr. SISK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 916 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. Res. 916

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 16311) to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes, and any point of order against said bill pursuant to clause 3, Rule XIII, is hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed six hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the bill shall be considered as having been read for amendment. No amendment shall be in order to said bill except amendments offered by direction of the Committee on Ways and Means, and said amendments shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding. Amendments offered by direction of the Committee on Ways and Means may be offered to any section of the bill at the conclusion of the general debate, but said amendments shall not be subject to amendment. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SISK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Smirnoff), pending which I yield myself 7 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this begins the consideration of one of the most important pieces of legislation which this House will consider during the 91st Congress, because it very specifically represents what I believe to be the breaking of new ground in the field of social legislation, particularly as it pertains to welfare and to those who fall in the category of the poor.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 916 provides a closed rule with 6 hours of general debate for consideration of H.R. 16311, to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs, and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes. The resolution also waives any point of order against the bill pursuant to clause 3, rule XIII—which, of course, is the Ramseyer rule.

The bill, H.R. 16311, is designed to amend the Social Security Act to provide incentives for employment and training of certain members of needy families, to improve the adult assistance programs and to improve the public assistance programs.

Assistance for more than 2 million families who make up the "working poor" is included in this legislation with the idea of helping them achieve self-sufficiency rather than dependency upon welfare in the future. Training and work opportunities are provided as incentives to millions of families who would otherwise be locked into the welfare system for generations and the Federal Government, under this legislation, would make a contribution toward relieving the financial burden of welfare payments by State governments.
So, Mr. Speaker, there are two main objectives of H.R. 16311. The first is to encourage every dependent family in America to stay together, free from the economic pressures which might split them apart. Second, the bill is intended to convert the existing programs, which in too many situations have encouraged dependency, to an integrated program which will encourage people to become independent and self-supporting through incentives to take training and enter employment.

The Committee on Ways and Means, which reported this legislation, testified that this measure would make major improvements and reforms in the provisions of the Social Security Act relating to the programs which aid needy families with children, including coverage of the working poor; the programs which aid the aged, blind, and disabled; and the improvements and reforms in the provisions to what the States will spend.

It is estimated that in the first year of operation, it will cost the Federal Government $4 billion-plus above the costs required by the various welfare programs now in existence.

In fiscal year 1972, the cost is estimated to be something over $12 billion in addition to what the States will spend.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very controversial and complicated piece of legislation with which some claim will change the philosophy of our family assistance program, but it is a bill which has been endorsed by the overwhelming majority of the members of one of the greatest committees in the House. So on that basis, Mr. Speaker, I urge the adoption of the resolution in order that the Committee on Ways and Means may be permitted to debate this issue and to explain the debate of the bill.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Arkansas yield?

Mr. SISK. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Arkansas for any comment he might wish to make.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Arkansas for any comment he might wish to make.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Arkansas yield?

Mr. SISK. I yield further to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. The gentleman does not even talk in terms of a modified closed rule to limit it to the subject matter of the bill, to the titles or sections or anything else.

Is it just simply fashionable? Is it a fashion that cannot be broken? Even mini skirts, apparently, are going to stay on the floor during the 6 hours of debate, because I think it could be very beneficial. There will be people here raising very important questions on this matter. If I could just make certain that the work incentive is here, I know in all sincerity my friend, Mr. Mills, feels it is in it, then I will support the bill, but I do have grave reservations about it. I am concerned that there is not sufficient incentive in this bill to do that. I want to listen, and I hope and urge Members to stay on the floor during the 6 hours of debate, because I think it could be very beneficial. There will be people here raising very important questions on this matter. If I could just make certain that the work incentive is in it, I know in all sincerity my friend, Mr. Mills, feels it is in it, then I will support the bill, but I do have grave reservations about it. I am concerned that there is not sufficient incentive in this bill to do that. I want to listen, and I hope and urge Members to stay on the floor during the 6 hours of debate, because I think it could be very beneficial. There will be people here raising very important questions on this matter.
Mr. GONZALEZ. Will the gentleman explain to me why?

Mr. SISK. I would rather permit the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Braxton) to explain that. This was a request by the Committee on Ways and Means, and the Committee on Rules, after considerable discussion and after several other proposals had been offered, finally voted, in its wisdom, to a 3-hour closed rule. It might not have been the proper thing to do, but that is what was done.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, I do not mean to push the gentleman as an individual on the spot. This is a very pertinent question. I think every conscientious Member of the House asks himself is there a special attribute that surrounds the Ways and Means Committee, since I am sure other committees would like to get closed rules?

Mr. SISK. No. Let me say, generally I do not think that is true. The facts are that the subject matter with which the Committee on Ways and Means deals covers taxes and a variety which are extremely complicated matters. This does not mean that every Member of the House cannot be knowledgeable. But the facts are that it does deal with matters of balance of a minor amendment or what appeared to be a minor amendment in connection with either social security payments or tax law could throw the whole program out of balance. I think it has been generally considered a very difficult situation to attempt to amend or change tax laws or social security laws. These are, of course, the primary subjects with which the Committee on Ways and Means deals. They are not covered by this blanket rule.

Let me say that legislation coming from the Committee on Ways and Means is privileged legislation and I am sure that my friend from Texas would not agree that they do not need a rule in order to bring a bill to the floor of the House for consideration. They can bring a bill to the floor any time they are ready, whether the Rules Committee agrees or not because it is privileged. But the point is that they come to us for a closed rule.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISK. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, there are 478 pages in the compilation of the social security laws alone. I do not know what the total is. I am from Texas. I am sure they have not agreed that they do not need a rule in order to bring a bill to the floor of the House for consideration. They can bring a bill to the floor any time they are ready, whether the Rules Committee agrees or not because it is privileged. But the point is that they come to us for a closed rule. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. GONZALEZ. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, there are 478 pages in the compilation of the social security laws alone. I do not know what the total is. I am from Texas. I am sure they have not agreed that they do not need a rule in order to bring a bill to the floor of the House for consideration. They can bring a bill to the floor any time they are ready, whether the Rules Committee agrees or not because it is privileged. But the point is that they come to us for a closed rule.

The purpose of the Committee on Ways and Means in asking for a closed rule, historically the Ways and Means and social security matters, is to be as best we can provide for an orderly procedure for the consideration of the legislation presented before the House so that it might open up the entire Revenue Code.

The gentleman from California, Mr. Speaker, would not agree that they do not need a rule in order to bring a bill to the floor of the House for consideration. They can bring a bill to the floor any time they are ready, whether the Rules Committee agrees or not because it is privileged. But the point is that they come to us for a closed rule. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, there are 478 pages in the compilation of the social security laws alone. I do not know what the total is. I am from Texas. I am sure they have not agreed that they do not need a rule in order to bring a bill to the floor of the House for consideration. They can bring a bill to the floor any time they are ready, whether the Rules Committee agrees or not because it is privileged. But the point is that they come to us for a closed rule.

The purpose of the Committee on Ways and Means in asking for a closed rule, historically the Ways and Means and social security matters, is to be as best we can provide for an orderly procedure for the consideration of the legislation presented before the House so that it might open up the entire Revenue Code.

unnal income payments, that they would probably be increased on the floor of the House. One Member testified before the Committee on Rules that he would like to have the rule open so that the amount could be increased, and one individual who was a visitor in the committee room the first day during the entire day's session—and who was on television that night—stated that she thought it was a good program, but she thought it was not enough—that they want $5,500 and any needy family.

So apparently there is some feeling to increase the amount over and above the $1,600 for a family of four. I believe that after the bill is passed it will start growing a year or two, and then from the sky will be the limit.

As to the bill itself, according to what the report states, the purpose of H.R. 16311 is to repeal the current jumble of federally assisted welfare programs, and to replace it with a unified program of aid to the Nation's poor.

This new program will provide financial assistance based upon a formula to be applied nationwide.

It provides for a program of work training for those who require it, and child care, day-care centers to enable mothers to work.

Since 1960 the number of recipients within the welfare system has increased from $2.4 million to about $6.7 million and minor children make up most of this increase.

In this same period costs of the program have tripled to about $7.8 billion.

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare estimates that the costs could double in the next 5 years under the present system.

This bill restructures that entire system. It places increased stress on work-training programs and the development of child day-care centers. It requires all of the adult recipients to register at employment offices or at work centers, and sets a nationwide scale of assistance payments to all eligible families.

Each family with children whose income is less than the family benefit level, or $400, will be eligible to receive a payment. To qualify to receive such assistance, members of the family must meet the registration for work or training requirements. The amount of payment each family receives will be based on the difference between the benefit level and the income received by the family.

For example, the family of four with no income would be entitled to receive $1,600. The family of five with $500 in income would receive $1,100.

Every needy family in the Nation would be eligible to receive assistance, but a family with $1,500 or more in resources, excluding its home and household goods, would be not eligible for any assistance. Certain types of income would be excluded in determining the total Federal benefit level. Excludable income includes:

- Income payments, that they would be received by the family, for items that the family would have to pay, such as rent, utilities, insurance, and other such expenses.
- The first $720 per year of each adult member of the family, plus one-half of the remainder.
- Second, food stamps and other public or private charity, including veterans' pensions.
- Third, all earnings of a child in school.
- Each family member would be required to register for work training and to work, if possible, at a public employment office. Acceptable work is training for those who require it, and income for the family.
- The several States will have to supplement the family assistance payments up to the level of the aid for dependent children programs or the poverty level—whichever is lower.
- Seventy-five percent of the costs of the new training program can be paid by Federal funds, and other welfare programs.
- The several States will have to supplement Federal payments to the working poor.
- An appeals procedure is provided. Any person who disagrees with any decision relating to his eligibility or, for the amount of family assistance payments may obtain a hearing. Any final determination can be reviewed by the local district court, where factual determinations previously made by the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be conclusive.

The bill terminates the present work incentive program and creates a new one operated by the Secretary of Labor. Training would be provided for all registrants who need it. Concurrently, State welfare agencies would be required to provide health and other benefits to facilitate the participation of individuals in the training program. Federal authorizations are authorized to cover up to 90 percent of the costs of the new training program with the State responsible for the remaining 10 percent. If a State fails to provide its 10 percent, Federal assistance to other welfare programs within such State would be reduced by the amount of the State's deficit. Each person in the training program will receive an allowance of $30 per month for incident and travel expenses. Funds to cover such costs as transportation and other costs directly connected with the training program will also be paid out by the Secretary of Labor.

Day-care centers for minor children are to be provided. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare is authorized to make grants covering up to 100 percent of the costs of the training program to the Secretary for the remaining 10 percent. If a State fails to provide its 10 percent, Federal assistance to other welfare programs within such State would be reduced by the amount of the State's deficit. Each person in the training program will receive an allowance of $30 per month for incident and travel expenses. Funds to cover such costs as transportation and other costs directly connected with the training program will also be paid out by the Secretary of Labor.

The effective date is July 1, 1971, with special provisions for States with staffing levels which prevent them from complying by that date.

The cost of the bill to the Federal Government in its first year of operation is approximately $4.4 billion above the costs required by the present welfare programs. The total Federal outlay in fiscal 1972, the first year of the new program, is estimated to be approximately $12.2 billion with the States expending another $5.5 billion. The cost of the bill is about the same as that proposed by President Nixon. The major change is that the reported bill treats the States differently, and in so doing, it reduces the overall outlay by some $587,600,000. This results from a change in State matching supplemental payments which help States with higher benefit levels, and the increase in minimum income standards, which require States with low support levels to increase their fiscal effort.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Burleson), introduced H.R. 16800 on March 23 as a substitute. The House Committee did not approve that bill in order as a substitute, so the provisions of that bill will not be before the House. It contains much of the language of the present bill, with the exception of certain guaranteed income payments.

It seems to me the idea that is presented in H.R. 16311 has been around here for a number of years. It has been dusted off a little bit and some frosting put on it. It has been introduced as a welfare reform, but I do not think it turned out to be welfare reform. In my opinion, it is more of a welfare expansion program.

It has been estimated that the bill would add approximately 15 million people to the welfare rolls of the United States. The California State Department of Social Welfare has not been able to estimate the cost to the State of the welfare program.

Now, some of the problems: I refer you to pages 21 and 22 of the bill, where the conditions are set forth and the exceptions are set forth, and I particularly refer to the question of what is suitable employment. The person has to take suitable employment. What is suitable employment? Who is going to determine what suitable employment is?

Suppose an individual is trained and he is told to take a 1 job mile away. There... is no transportation, public or private. He must travel 1 mile each way. He says,
I have two plants in my area, two corporations which a year or 2 ago sent in proposals saying that they were willing to train 200 people. This is not on-the-job training. They will have facilities, counselors, and teachers and all that is necessary to determine what work the people can do. They guaranteed that they would train 200 people per year and guaranteed them jobs if the Government would bear all or part of the cost of the expenses. I could not get a nickle downtown in the last administration or in this one. Yet the two corporations were perfectly willing to spend their own money to do it.

I think we have some problems from that standpoint, and I thought those two fine companies would have interesting pilot programs. They were interested in doing it.

I was talking to some executives the last time I was home, in a plant which is a subsidiary in my district, and they said they are scared to death because there are so many imports coming in they do not know how they can keep going unless conditions get better.

Now, what about the professional poor? There are a million or a million and a half of them. We will not let them starve. We do not believe in that. If so they were not worth and cannot take the program and they register once, what are we then going to do about that?

I only mention these things because it seems to me the bill ought to be more clear. The proponents claim this will create incentives to work and keep families together. I certainly hope so, but I doubt it very much. None of us has a crystal ball. We cannot look into the future. They say, "Let us try the program." But we must keep in mind that we have other programs which are spending money in education, in clean air, water pollution, environmental control, veteran programs, Vietnam, and on and on. This program is going to cost more and more money.

Will we have to increase the debt before June 30? Will we have to have an total nationalization? I do not feel now that they are being taxed to death. If we keep on, they are liable to say, "Throw all the rascals out in Washington and replace the whole Congress." This starts a Federal means test for the first time. I do not know whether that is good or bad. The facts will be placed into a computer. The answer come out, and some other plan does not make

Take the engineers. Some have lost their jobs because of the shortage of contracts. They want jobs but there are not any. What do we do about those people? It seems to me we have to have some jobs available for these engineers who are out of work.

I have talked to brokerage firms in New York. I talked to the heads of two of them yesterday. They told me that at the time they are just barely able to keep their heads above water. They said, "Allen, why don't you solve a crisis in Washington?" I said, "What crisis do you have in mind?" They said, "Well, you've been so successful in Vietnam or something similar, why cause we cannot keep going as we are."

I think the administration is trying to solve Vietnam, but it is not as easy as that.

I have two plants in my area, two corporations which a year or 2 ago sent capped. They cannot get anybody to take the job. The State employment agency does not have anybody. No private employment agencies have. We have tried to get a woman in from Mexico who was willing to come up here. They cannot get certification from the Labor Department. They say, "Put a box that says there are plenty of available people. People apparently do not want to be domestic workers."

Are we going to train them for that? Will that be considered suitable employment, if they do not want that employment?

school—whose nonexcludable Income Is less than $500 per year for each of the first two family members and $300 per year for each additional family member, and whose resources—other than those excluded—are less excluded—the home, household goods, personal effects, and so forth, are less than $1,500 would be eligible to receive a family assistance benefit.

Unlike present law, the family assistance plan contained in the bill includes need not be in the home and fully employed. The bill provides a uniform earnings exemption which is equally applicable to families with male and female heads and as those who are fully and partially employed.

For purposes of Federal benefits under the family assistance plan, the first $60 a month in earnings would be disregarded plus one-half of the remainder. A family would therefore be able to receive some benefits under the program until its income reaches $3,920.

Under the program, a family without other income will receive $500 per year for each of the first two family members plus $300 per year for each additional family member. These payment rates establish a Federal income maintenance floor which in most States will be increased by required State supplementation for all families except the working poor. The bill provides that each State that was making AFDC payments higher than the new family assistance benefit, would be required to maintain the level of payments in effect as of January 1, 1970, or, if it is lower, a level corresponding to the poverty level as defined in the bill.

In order to assist the States in making supplementary payments, H.R. 16311 provides that the Federal Government generally would pay a State 30 percent of the amount expended by the State in making such payments each fiscal year, not exceeding supplementary payments made to the working poor. However, there would be no Federal payment for that part of the supplementary payment which exceeds the difference between the applicable poverty level and the sum of the family assistance payment and any income of the family not disregarded in computing the supplementary payments. H.R. 16311 also provides much needed assistance to the States in meeting the costs of their public assistance programs. Under present law, in Illinois the costs of assistance for the aged, blind, and disabled were $158.1 million in 1968. The Federal Government bore $78.9 million of this cost, and the State paid $79.2 million. Under H.R. 16311, for 1968, these total costs would have been $173.6 million. The Federal Government's share would have been $127.4 million and the State's share, $46.2 million. H.R. 16311 would provide a total increase in assistance to families in Illinois of $15.5 million while decreasing the costs of the program to the State by $15 million.

I am pleased that the Committee on Ways and Means included in H.R. 16311 significant improvements in the programs which assist the aged, blind, and disabled. The bill provides for combining the present categories for assistance to these groups into one combined adult assistance program and for uniform requirements for all States for eligibility and for the level and type of resources allowed and degree of disability or blindness.

More importantly, under H.R. 16311, States must assure that each aged, blind, or disabled adult will receive assistance sufficient to bring his total income up to $110 a month. In addition, incentives are provided for the States to enter into agreements for Federal administration of the combined program and a simplified federal payments in which would result in generally more favorable Federal participation in the cost of the payments. For instance, in my home State of Illinois, the difference between existing law and H.R. 16311 for the year 1968 would result in a savings of $6.7 million for Illinois and an increase in expenditures by the Federal Government of $11.5 million. The increase in payments of assistance under the program in Illinois would be $4.8 million.

In summary, Mr. Chairman, I would like to state my strong support of this bill and urge the House to take prompt action on its approval. In general, the bill provides equitable treatment of working poor families; reduction in financial incentives for family breakup; reduction of variations in payment levels among the States through the establishment of a Federal floor for family assistance payments; establishment of a strengthened manpower training program; and improvements in the level of help and effectiveness of the adult assistance program.

Mr. SISK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Lanham).

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, I find myself today in a most awkward position, yet awkward as it is I am not uncomfortable.

It is awkward for me to find myself in opposition to the distinguished chairman of my committee, and one of the most distinguished men of the Congress.

It is likewise awkward to find myself opposing the distinguished minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Bryan).

But, as I said, it is not uncomfortable. If such an incongruity as that statement implies appears to be impossible of acceptance, then allow me to ask the Members carefully during the next 6 hours of debate and discussion on this floor the incongruities in this piece of legislation, and what I just said will seem as compatible as a newly married couple.

In reflecting upon the provisions of this legislation and what I see in it for the future of this country, if the legislation becomes law, there comes to my mind the opening lines of Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities." I hope the Members will indulge me if I recall those opening lines.

It was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had all been going direct to heaven, we were all going direct the other way—in short, the period was so far advanced that very small matters might prevail, and it was not really reform but revolutionary change that ought to be subjected to amendments which this rule precludes.

Now, in this bill we have some of the very best things. No Member of this Committee on Ways and Means who hears the testimony, can disagree with the fact that we need reform in all of our welfare programs and in our welfare legislation. But, in being neither really reform but revolutionary change that ought to be subjected to amendments which this rule precludes.

And, when you study carefully the innovations in this bill to bring about that reform, I think we must, of necessity, come to the conclusion that some of the worst things ever proposed to this Congress are contained in it, and one of them is a guaranteed annual income.

Make no mistake about it—no mistake about it—you vote this legislation into law and you go down the road of no return, because you have guaranteed an income out of public funds for people unemployed and for those who are not really unemployed. To me that is not the age of wisdom; that is the age of foolishness; that is the age of recklessness.

I think that I must confront such a proposition with my responsibility as a Member of this body and report to my constituents that I am foreclosed from offering an amendment in the House of Representatives to give this body a chance to vote on it, I have to say, as Dickens said, "This is the age of despair." That is because I cannot offer an amendment here under this rule to take out this one feature of the guaranteed income. I have to swallow it if I want to vote for the improvements that are in this bill for aid to dependent children, for the aged, for the blind, and for the disabled. I have to swallow it for the sake of the country. So I despair to have to come here today and admit to myself that we are foreclosed by the leadership of this House and the leadership of the Committee by the demand for a closed rule.

Incidentally, I was not a part of that request for a closed rule. I voiced my objections to it, as the chairman will recall, when the request was made in the committee.

The leadership of this House says, bring this on under a closed rule. Now, what is wrong with a representative, a representative from Illinois, to an amendment that affects the course of welfare legislation of this country and changes the fundamental structure of our Nation? I in no way have any single piece of legislation in the 18 years that I have been a Member of Congress?

What does a guaranteed income program imply? It implies that we take two wage earners, working side by side, with equal skills, drawing the same identical wage. We will just use $2 an hour as an example. One, being rather prolific him, and perhaps the other has a larger family, let us say five or six.
And the other, not being so inclined or so constructed, has probably one or two. Yet, the one with the large family will draw from the Federal Government, just like the employees of the Federal Government, a check every month to supplement his income to bring him up to the level of income in his family of a quality he should have. And, mind you, it will come from the wages of the man working alongside him—simply because the man working alongside him has the advantage of family of smaller proportions and does not receive from his Government a subsidy payment. But he pays his tax.

You cannot deny that, gentlemen. The leadership of this House cannot deny it, if they have studied this bill. My distinguished friends in the Committee of Ways and Means with their great capacity as legislators and as statesmen cannot deny it because they know it is here. Moreover, Mr. Speaker, I cannot offer an amendment designed to stop provisions in the bill which will add literally thousands of thousands of employees to the employment rolls of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Mr. Speaker, we now have about 2 million people on the welfare rolls as I understand it—perhaps a little less—but we are with this bill about to add 15 million to that estimate—telling a maximum estimate in my judgment between 25 million and 30 million. And to administer the law for all these new welfare recipients literally thousands of new employees will be required. We are going to be saying in law as the distinguished gentleman from California said awhile ago, "Listen, fellow, your daddy is working; your daddy has got five children; you have got four brothers and sisters; your daddy has got a wife and there; your family is seven in your family." In other words, he is working and he is making $6,120. To my way of thinking that fellow has a pretty substantial pride in his place relationship and in his accomplishments. He is not going to be able to furnish each of those children five pairs of shoes all the time, the best cuts of meat all the time, and he is not going to ride in Cadillacs, even though it might be a "welfare Cadillac." But his children have pride in the fact that their father is making them a living. You are coming in here on page 28 of this bill and saying to that man because he makes less than $6,120 and has that many children, he is in poverty. And, we are saying to the other fellow, your daddy is in poverty. Your Government is going to keep you up.

Mr. Speaker, by doing this we will destroy the motivation of that child, we will destroy the motivation of that man to improve his skill. Further, we are proposing a statute, that does something we have never done before by telling a worker that the same man says a man working that because you make less than so much you are in poverty and the Government is going to take public money and pay you a subsidy. That is sums of money. New revenue must be found. Surtaxes will be added and increased—not reduced or eliminated as now planned. Budget deficits will grow—not decline and all because we take the tragic step proposed in this bill of guaranteeing to a man—whether or not he is a worker—annual income equal to a figure the Government decides he should have.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Georgia has expired.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, this bill puts the benefits in this order: Cash, food, and work. So long as we keep the priorities in that order, gentlemen, we are going to be saying to the welfare recipient saying: "No; I am not going to work because I have already got that cash and I have also got my food."

Now, if you turn it around the other way and put work first and cash last, then we will get along the road that seems to me more American.

Mr. Speaker, I am perfectly willing to tax every man and woman in this country for what is necessary to take care of the aged, the indigent, and the unfortunate in our society and to take care of those who cannot take care of themselves. But I am unwilling to levy a single copper of tax in America to take care of any person who simply will not work, and that exactly what you are doing with this bill.

Mr. Speaker, if I had the opportunity to amend it, I would take that out and vote for the other, but not having that chance to, I must say to my distinguished chairman and my distinguished friend from Wisconsin and my friends in the House, despite my concern for the training programs that are provided for in this bill, as well as other fine programs, I will have to oppose this bill because in my view we are going down the road of no return.

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield briefly to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. LANDGREBE).

Mr. LANDGREBE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. LANDGREBE. Mr. Speaker, there has been no discussion at all on how the Supreme Court's March 23 ruling on welfare is going to affect this program. Briefly stating the High Court ruled that it is unconstitutional for States and cities to stop welfare payments until they give recipients a chance to defend their rights to the benefit. The Court ruled that a welfare recipient is entitled to a hearing before his payments are cut off and the hearing must include these four features:

1. First, the recipient must be heard in person. A written statement on his behalf is no longer good enough.
2. Second, the recipient must be allowed the opportunity to be face to face and to question any witnesses who say that he is ineligible.
3. Third, if the recipient wishes, he may have a lawyer at the hearing but this is not required.
4. Fourth, the official deciding eligibility must write out the reasons why he made his decision and cite evidence he relied upon.

Now, what does this ruling have to do with FAP? The answer is: No one is sure.

We do know that under the family assistance program, a person receiving payments has his allotment scaled down as he makes more money. As for the question of taking poor, the same is true with a definite cutoff point and a certain level beyond which no more FAP money is given the recipient. What the Supreme Court ruling has at least made a possibility is that FAP recipients can now demand a full evidentiary hearing if the Government either fails to offer or scales down their welfare payment.

Chief Justice Warren Burger alluded to this possibility in his dissent in the case when he said:

A view from the administrative morass which today's decision could well create, the Court should also be cognizant of the legal prece- dent it may be setting. The majority holding raises intriguing possibilities concerning the right to a hearing at other stages in the welfare process which affect the total sum of assistance, even though the action taken might fall short of complete termination. For example, does the Court's holding embrace welfare reductions or the denial of increases as well? As a term used to describe initial applications or requests of special assistance. The Court supplies to disting- guishable considerations and leaves these crucial questions unanswered.

But the outlook is not good.

Ohio State Welfare Director Denver White says the Court ruling is, quote, "terrible."

It is going to cause a taxpayers revolt. Now we must have more scrutiny of anyone applying for welfare. Last month, we closed 3,000 cases...now we would have to have hearings all of these...and that's 98,000 cases a year.

The New York Post the day after the Court ruling, reported that because of it New York State welfare officials may face the possibility of a huge administrative logjam because up until now they have given welfare recipients only a chance to reply in writing to contest their payment termination.

An additional danger of this Court ruling is that it will give welfare rights militants such as George Wiley, head of the National Welfare Rights Organization, a powerful new legal tool to combat New York State and Federal efforts to enforce welfare work requirements.

With FAP adding some 15 million additional individuals to the welfare rolls, the possibility of a huge administrative logjam because up until now they have given welfare recipients only a chance to reply in writing to contest their payment termination.

And there should be no doubt as to the way these groups feel about welfare work requirements. George Wiley was quoted recently in the Philadelphia Inquirer as saying:

We're going to fight against forcing people to work in order to get welfare. We're pre-
The goal of the welfare militants, Mr. Chairman, has always been to break down the welfare system and substitute in its place a guaranteed annual income. As long ago as June 1966, Joseph Loftus reported in the New York Times:

Activists who are impelled with the Johnson poverty campaign are firing up a campaign of their own. The objective, simply stated, is a guaranteed, federally financed annual income. The strategy of the activists is to pin the war veterans, to bring against the politicians an army of Vietnam veterans for quality . . . to double the welfare rolls, and impel the politicians to accept a guaranteed income as a solution.

The present welfare system has failed us—and that is the point at this point, because really what it is is synergistic—I think that is the word—in its effect: That is, the sum total of this legislation, the impact that it can have on this country, is much greater than simply the sum total of the various parts.

That is precisely why the Committee on Rules gave a closed rule; not merely because of precedent, because there is ample precedent to do that, not simply because of the legislation with which we deal, although it is complex, but because I think we ought to take the bit between our teeth and vote this bill up or down one way or another. If we accept the premise that I do, that it can lead to real reform in this country, to the basic institutions in our country, then we ought to be proud to cast our vote for this legislation.

With respect to what my distinguished friend and colleague, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. George Reid), said, "We are going to be levying a tax, we are going to load the already overburdened taxpayer of this country still more, and tax him for those who simply want not work." Well, if I can understand the very clear and concise English with which the chairman and the ranking minority Member spoke, that is just not so; because if a man wants to qualify for this program, under this legislation he is going to be registered, he is going to be willing to work, he is going to be willing to take training, and he is going to be willing to do all of those things to qualify for a single penny, and I would submit we are not taxing.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman if I have time.

Let me suggest in the very few minutes remaining that I have that it would be utterly illusory this afternoon to assume that our work is done when we pass this legislation.

I would again salut the members of the Committee on Ways and Means for their complete candor in discussing this legislation with us when they said they could not give us any guarantee that it is going to work perfectly. I would indeed suppose that we will have to come back many times with amendments to this legislation perhaps in the light of experience and in the light of what we are able to do under this bill, and provide more training slots, make it easier for people to get the kind of training that will qualify them for the job market.

But it is a beginning. It is more than just a small beginning. It is a very large step in the direction that we want to go.

I talked to the Illinois director of public aid the other day when he was in Washington, and he said that next year in his State they are going to spend $658 million just on public aid, an increase of $116 million. And he said more than half of the 18 percent increase in the public assistance rolls of Illinois is more than half of the people who were going to be added to those rolls, are going to be fathers who have deserted their families. And if there is one thing—

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, can the gentleman yield me additional time?

Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker I yield 30 additional seconds to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. ANDERSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, if there is one thing that impresses me about this bill it is the fact that the basic problem is that the family together, to keep the father from deserting his wife and children, and to preserve the very basic unit of American society.

For that reason alone—for that reason alone I think we will make history, and the right kind of history, if we adopt this legislation today.

I strongly feel that the administration's policy is the only sensible alternative to the colossal welfare mess which now exists. I do not think there is any one in this Chamber who would defend the existing welfare system; there is general agreement among people of all political and ideological persuasions that it has been an enormous failure and that it is in drastic need of a complete overhaul.

If anything is done to change the present welfare system, it must be done in a way which can be termed genuine and effective welfare; it is institutionalized poverty. President Nixon described this monumental mess best in his August 11, 1969, welfare message:

The present welfare system has failed us—it has fostered family breakup, has provided very little help in many States and has even deepened their dependence. And if they are to become anything more than a treadmill, and to become more attractive to go on welfare than to go to work.

The bill before us today provides for a comprehensive reform of the welfare system and goes to the very heart of the glaring deficiencies and failures of present programs. President Nixon has characterized the family as the "basic unit of society," and he has called for a "new approach that will make it more attractive to go to work than to go on welfare, and will establish a nationwide commitment to payment to dependent families with children." Again, to quote the President:

This would be total welfare reform—the transformation of a system frozen in failure.
and frustration into a system that would work and would encourage people to work.

Let me explain briefly how the family assistance plan would work and how it would encourage people to work.

First, it would establish a basic income for all parents who cannot adequately support their families. For example, the Federal payment to a family of four would be $1,600. This would be uniform throughout the Nation and thus eliminate the gross disparities and inequities which exist in different States under present programs. As a family's income increases, it would continue to receive Federal income supplements in reduced amounts until the family has climbed above the poverty line. For example, that same family of four with an annual income of $2,000 would receive a supplementary payment of $960.

Another provision in FAP would require States having AFDC payment levels—as of January, 1970—which are higher than the Federal payment levels to the State supplement the family assistance level up to that level or the poverty level, whichever is lower, in order to continue eligibility under medical aid and other welfare programs. Federal matching funds for the State supplement would be available at a rate of 30 percent, except for the working poor. The State would not be required to supplement payments to the working poor.

For example, in my own State of Illinois, current AFDC payments to a family of four—one parent and three children—are $3,228. Under the FAP formula, a family of four with $2,000 annual income would receive a $960 Federal supplement and a $1,415 State supplement provided that the family is classified as nonworking poor, that is, a family in which no member worked over 30 hours a week. This supplemental income of that family would be $4,375 per year.

So, to those who claim that the $1,600 Federal floor is too low a minimum benefit, I point out that welfare recipients in 42 of our 50 States will also be receiving these State supplementary payments; and, in addition, families will also be eligible for Federal food stamps. So, our family of four having no income would not only receive a $1,600 annual Federal payment, and in most cases a State supplement, but $864 per year in food stamps as well.

Now let me move on to what I consider to be the real heart of this welfare reform proposal, the work requirements and the work incentives. As I pointed out previously, under the present welfare system, there is little or no incentive for a welfare family to become a workfare family. In my own State of Illinois a survey indicates that while the percentage of the mothers on welfare would like to work and would much prefer to work, they are disinclined to do so because of the incentives, I mean a deal financially on welfare than they would in taking a job and thereby fulfilling welfare benefits.

The family assistance plan contains a requirement to register for work and strong incentives to accept training and work. As you are to register for work, he will not receive the benefits; and if he refuses a suitable job or training, his benefits will be canceled. Only carefully defined groups would be exempted from the registration requirement. I know that some critics of FAP claim that the work incentive approach will not work and they cite the WIN program as an example. I think it is important at this point to say why certain locking WIN programs have been successful and to show how the FAP approach will avoid these pitfalls. Under the WIN program, a great deal of discretionary power was put in the hands of State social workers to define who was appropriate for referral to manpower training programs and employment. In the words of Jerome M. Rosow, the Assistant Secretary of Labor for policy:

Many state welfare agencies circumvented the intent of the law by refusing to refer clients to the manpower program, or referred such small numbers as to seriously hamper training efforts to reduce the welfare rolls.

Because of the wide latitude in discretionary powers left to State welfare agencies, we find great disparities in the percentage of AFDC adults deemed appropriate for referral from State to State. For example, New York and California, this point is borne out. In New York, where there were 703,000 potentially eligible people on AFDC, only 5.9 percent were deemed appropriate for referral. In California, on the other hand, where there were 200,000 potentially eligible people on AFDC, 35.8 percent were deemed appropriate for referral. And looking at one of our smaller States, Nebraska, there were 52 potentially eligible people on AFDC, 100 percent were deemed appropriate for referral to manpower training.

The family assistance plan would strengthen the work requirement now in effect under WIN by completely eliminating these wide discretionary powers of referral. Instead, a new Federal agency would determine who is to register, and the guidelines on exemption would be explicit rather than discretionary and would be strictly enforced. This is an appropriate way to reverse the present policy of penalizing work and rewarding non-work. No longer will a man have to quit his job or leave his family in order for his family to receive welfare. Rather, we offer a boost to the man who is already trying to climb toward ultimate independence and self-reliance.

Mr. Speaker, earlier I pointed out that one of the two criteria of an effective and successful welfare program is the extent to which we help those who are able to help themselves climb out of poverty. By assisting the working poor we would be rewarding rather than penalizing work and providing a ladder to enable the working poor to climb out of poverty.

Finally reject the argument that including the working poor under family assistance will create a new and permanent breed of welfare recipient. To quote again from Jerome M. Rosow:

In general you have to bear in mind about the working poor is that they are not likely to become long-term recipients of assistance payments but, in fact, to be in the program for a limited time and then to take full advantage of the benefits and opportunities available to the working poor.

Finally, in connection with the workfare approach, let me address myself to Second, States would be required under Federal law to disregard earnings in counting benefits. The present system operating in 23 States disregards the earnings of employed fathers still taxes 100 percent of income. Under FAP the incentive to work would not be choked off by this procedure since fathers would receive the same treatment on reduction of earnings as mothers now on welfare.

Third, two new factors would increase the incentive to enter training programs. First, the amount of extra training bonus that has been raised; and secondly, the manpower agency would reimburse trainees for the cost of attending training programs, such as transportation, clothes, and supplies.

Fourth, the family assistance plan provides for child care which will make training and employment possible for a large number of mothers. An additional 450,000 child care opportunities would be available in the first year.

And finally, the family assistance plan provides for additional training slots for welfare recipients—an additional 250,000 slots in the first year.

One turn now to a controversial feature of the family assistance plan, the inclusion of the working poor. I realize that there are some who object to this on the grounds that we would be adding another 10 million people to the welfare rolls. But yet, it is this very point that I think it is real key to the success of FAP. By providing help for the first time to fathers who work full time but for poverty wages, we reverse the present policy of penalizing work and rewarding non-work.

Now let me address myself to the man who is already trying to climb toward ultimate independence and self-reliance.

The family assistance plan provides for child care which will make training and employment possible for a large number of mothers. An additional 450,000 child care opportunities would be available in the first year. An additional 250,000 slots in the first year.

what some critics call the myth of employability among the welfare population. These critics contend that very few welfare recipients are either capable or willing to earn a living wage. All too often these critics use the employment record as a basis for judging the welfare system. These critics criticize the welfare system as an unmotivating welfare system. They argue that very few recipients have made the transition to employment. These critics argue that the welfare system fails to provide the recipients with the motivation and the skills necessary to become self-supporting. They argue that the welfare system is a failure because it fails to provide the recipients with the motivation and the skills necessary to become self-supporting.

Members of this House should have the same opportunity to amend this bill as Members of the Senate will have when the matter is considered on the Senate floor. They will not be debating this bill under a closed rule and we should not be doing so in the House.

Mr. Speaker, there is a way left which will give us an opportunity to amend it on the floor. Vote down the previous question and then the issue will be opened up giving us an opportunity to amend this bill. I would urge that this be done.

Let me say, we have heard a lot on our side of the aisle that this is an administrative bill. I do not take a back seat to anyone in my support of the President of the United States. I am one of those who supported him long before Miami, and I will support him long after Miami.

Let me say, this guaranteed income idea was not conceived in this administration. It has been kicked around by the ADA for many years. The only real difference is that they want to start at a much higher figure.

Back in 1966, if you please, a Presidential commission under President Johnson recommended a $3,000 guaranteed annual income. It got exactly nowhere.

So what do we have here today? We have a guaranteed annual income being presented to us under a different name— the family assistance plan. You are going to have to register for work and for training. This is a joke when one reads the section dealing with employment and then looks at the past record on retraining.

It was pointed out before the Committee on Rules, that it had only $1,000 in training or retraining last year—a mere drop in the ocean of need. If you please.

Let us not kid ourselves. Let us not kid the American people that Government is going to train or retrain the millions of people who will come under this program. Also, let us not kid ourselves or the American people that you are going to get these people all working under the terms of this bill because you have seven—mark this—seven escape hatches on page 21.

If you will turn with me to page 21, let me read them to you. They do not have to go to work unless it is suitable employment. Look for a minute at this matter of suitability, on line 21 of page 21:

In determining whether any employment is suitable for an individual for purposes of subsection (a) and part C, the Secretary of Labor shall consider—

1. The degree of risk to such individual's health and safety resulting from his employment.
2. His physical fitness for the work.
3. His prior training and experience.
4. His prior earnings.
5. The length of his unemployment.

(6) His realist prospects for obtaining work based on his potential and the availability of training opportunities.

(7) The distance of the available work from his residence.

If that is not enough—let us look at subsection (2), if you please, which says: In no event shall an individual be considered suitable for an individual—

"(A) if the position offered is vacant due to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute.

"(B) if the wages, hours, or other terms or conditions of the work offered are contrary to or less than those prescribed by Federal, State, or local law or are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality; or

And I stress "company union"—it says nothing about joining an international union. Why require a person to join an international union as a matter of law? What about our right-to-work States, if you please? What does this language do to our right-to-work States? A man in a bona fide way is referred for work in a plant having an international union and says, "I haven't ever joined a union. It is against my conscience," should he be forced to register for benefits by such language?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. SISK. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. LATTA. I appreciate my friends yielding me this time.

Let me say there are many provisions in this bill which will require more than 6 hours debate time to explain. We have heard about the goodies in this bill for the benefit of those not working. We have not heard anything about the burdens the taxpayers of this Nation—the little people that Mr. Johnson talked about—are going to have to carry to pay the cost of such a program. We have not heard—nor will we hear at present—anything about the taxes which will have to be collected to support the 15 million additional people this bill will put on welfare.

We have a lot of proud people, hard-working people, in the Fifth Congressional District of Ohio who will never—never ask for a dime under this bill, but are earning less than $6,000 a year, with the requisite number of people in the poverty classification under this bill. Nevertheless, these individuals will have to dig deeper into their pockets to pay this bill.

In conclusion, let me say that as I listened to the testimony before the Rules Committee and heard all about the goodies in this bill and what the Government ought to do. I could not help but place reminded of a statement by the late President John F. Kennedy:

Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country.

I fear not only what this bill could do to the country but what it could do to the incentive of a great many people to better their economic status in life on their own initiative and through their own labors.
Mr. SMITH of California. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 1/2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Dennis) the remainder of my time.

Mr. DIJKSTRA. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. DENNIS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. DENNIS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. I do it reluctantly, but I do it because I believe with the poet that "to sit in silence then is to aid and abet cowards out of men," and this is such an occasion. We are being asked here today, Mr. Speaker, to adopt one of the most far-reaching measures we have ever been asked to adopt in this House. It is a measure which provides a direct subsidy out of the Federal Treasury for every poor family in the nation. It is a measure which extends Federal relief for the first time to the working poor. It is a measure which abandons the philosophy of welfare as an emergency relief, and enshrines it as a fundamental American right.

It is a measure which starts welfare reform by doubling the welfare rolls, and it is a measure which, to a large extent, if not completely, adopts the principle of the guaranteed annual income.

Now, I am not prepared to adopt a measure as sweeping as this without a lot more public consideration and debate than it has yet had, and I am not prepared to do it without a fair opportunity to debate it and amend it in this body. We are being asked to adopt a measure of this sweeping and fundamental character under a closed rule, with no possibility of being usefully heard or of changing a single thing on the floor. In my short time here I have conceived a great respect for the House and its Members and its procedures; but I tell you, we like to say we are the greatest deliberative body in the world, but when we come to consider a measure of this kind without any meaningful deliberation and without the opportunity to engage in debate which will lead to any significant action, we do not deserve the name of a deliberative body. To treat us like this is to denigrate the office of U.S. Representative. The procedure offends me.

It makes a rubberstamp out of Representatives. What are we here for if we cannot usefully debate a measure of this magnitude and importance and its meaning but just have to take it as it is and vote it up or down?

I submit to the Members, in all good conscience, that they take up a measure of this character and of this importance under a closed rule is practically to treat the Members of this honorable body as the idiot children of the whole political process. I think this is what we ought to do. I think we ought to debate this here with some chance to take some action if we want to. Maybe—maybe if we did that, some body could persuade me that this measure was entitled to my support. They cannot do it under this procedure. I intend to vote no. I hope Members will vote down the rule.

Mr. SCHADEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I am totally opposed to a closed rule on H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970. It is my firm opinion that any legislation as far reaching as this bill is, if passed or rejected, must reflect the will of the majority of the Members of the House and not merely the majority of one of its constituted committees.

Unless the House of Representatives is given the opportunity to clarify certain language in the bill; unless we can be assured that there are no other alternatives which might call for an investigation of the inconsistencies and failures of the present welfare system than this massive program which would add 15 million Americans to the present welfare load; and unless we have the opportunity to make constructive amendments that could prevent this Nation from galloping down the road to a guaranteed annual income, I cannot either in conscience, or in the best interests of my hard working, tax paying constituents, vote for the final passage of a bill which would change the fundamental character of the American welfare system.

Mr. Speaker, I was a cosponsor of the original family assistance legislation. On two separate occasions I requested the assistance of my entire constituency in correspondence with members of the Ways and Means Committee, could the House of Representatives, as a Member of the House of Representatives, could represent these views in open debate on welfare reform legislation.

The closed rule on the Family Assistance Act of 1970 will preclude me from reaching out to those of my constituents who have sent me three hundred informative letters. I made special efforts to meet with groups and organizations, both private and governmental, in order to give them the opportunity to make recommendations which would strengthen the bill and work out the problem areas in welfare programs.

I corresponded and met with members of the Ways and Means Committee in order to find out how various proposals would affect the State's programs and the State's financial obligations. I have been looking forward to the opportunity when I, as a Member of the House of Representatives, could represent these views in open debate on welfare reform legislation.

The closed rule on the Family Assistance Act of 1970 will preclude me from reaching out to those of my constituents. I have contacted many people I have contacted, whose expressions have been made on the assumption that they could be brought to the House to be incorporated into Federal legislation. Instead of an open rule, under which I, and other Members of the House not on the Ways and Means Committee, could express the will of the people of the Nation, who will be required to pay for and comply with welfare reform proposals. The closed rule insures that the will of a majority of a committee must either be accepted or rejected.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I intend to oppose the adoption of the resolution which would provide a closed rule with 6 hours of debate to consider the Family Assistance Act of 1970.

Mr. SCHADEBERG. Mr. Speaker, I support the rule which sets the time and terms of debate for bills to be considered on the floor of the House. The reason is, I believe every Member should have the opportunity for open and adequate debate. However, it should be clearly recalled nearly all of the rules or resolutions which are presented for our approval or rejection by the Rules Committee, or by agreement with the majority of Members of the House, under which the opportunity exists to offer multiple amendments which in many instances make good legislation after amendment. Even a closed rule to such a rule as closed is too respectful and is being overgenerous. Such a rule should be labeled according to its true description and referred to as a gag rule. Because it is exactly what it is. Unfortunately, it seems that we Members of the House have visited against us these kind of gag rules only at the request of the Committee on Ways and Means.

For some reasons the members of this

[Roll No. 77]
Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 16311) to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to determine the amount of such benefits; for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill H.R. 16311, with Mr. DINGELL in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills) will be recognized for 3 hours, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Byrnes) will be recognized for 3 hours.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 16311 is one of the most important bills this Congress will consider.

I recognize there is probably a great deal of feeling about the bill outside of the Congress. I also believe there is a great deal of misunderstanding about the bill outside of the Congress. One organization, for example, took a position opposed to the bill 2 weeks before the committee reported it, not knowing, of course, what amendments had been adopted in the committee or what the language was, and then evidently expects Members to follow its recommendations on that kind of a basis. It is beyond me how they can do so.

Mr. Chairman, let me talk first about our committee consideration of the matter, the present situation, and what we are trying to do.

The committee conducted 4 weeks of hearings on social security legislation, principally in the area of welfare reform, last October and November. Commencing on January 19, the day Congress reconvened, the committee met regularly in executive session over a period of 7 full weeks, looking into this legislation, and in studying the administration and the operation of the programs providing cash assistance for the needy, and the existing work-training and day-care programs. During its deliberations, the committee had the benefit of hearing from a number of State and local officials engaged in running the welfare and training programs, and others who have studied particular areas of those programs. Through this process, we gained many valuable insights into the problems that exist and what can be done to correct them.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is essentially patterned after the bill presented by the administration but with some major changes, tightening, sharpening and improving many of the provisions.

The committee also added some provisions of its own. Some of these changes are very important, as I will delineate later.

At the present time we have categories of assistance known as the old-age assistance program, the program for aid to families with dependent children and unemployed fathers, the disability program, and the programs for the blind.

The program of old-age assistance, the program for the disabled, and the program for the blind have not in recent years presented any serious problems to the Ways and Means Committee or to the Congress. The number of people on the old-age assistance program has declined. It could have been expected it would be reduced as more and more of our people became eligible for social security benefits.

The program we added, allowing a social security cash payment to those who had become disabled and who had a work record, has naturally reduced the number who go on AFDC to support and want the welfare program known as the disability program, or the program for the blind.

Also it is significant to note that in the case of a wife whose husband has died and left her with minor children, the numbers who go on AFDC from that category do not rise, because of the survivorship benefits of the social security program.

The number of children in male-headed families has not risen over the years, and has remained essentially static for some 25 years, in fact.

Mr. Chairman, the program that has risen most, however, of all of these programs is that part of AFDC that has to do with children in female-headed families, where the father for some reason is absent from the home, or, as a matter of fact, where there has never been a marriage with respect to that home.

Now let me talk to you a little bit about the runaway growth in case loads, and costs under AFDC. In 1955 the original act was passed. By 1950 there was a total cost in the program of some $500 million. In 1959, for the fiscal year, which is the last year I have figures on, the number of families—and this is families—who were on AFDC has risen to 1.7 million and the total cost of providing for this program was approximately $4.45 billion. This program has doubled in 3 years. That is a fact. If you project down the road this present cost on the basis of the way it has been rising in recent years, by the year 1975 it will be well over $20 billion. Imagine some people within the Department think it could be as much as $12 billion.

The proportion of children in this country dependent on welfare has doubled over the last 15 years. Today, six children in every twenty are AFDC, and the rate is still increasing. In some States the rate is almost double the national rate.

Now, that is the existing program we have. The level of spending is not determined by the Federal Government; it is determined by the State governments. Under existing law, we match the State of New York or any other State less than 50 percent of the cost of this program regardless of where they fix the level. If you want an example of an open-ended proposition where we are not properly helping out, and restraints, controls, or limitations on it or making any improvements to it, it is in this present program.

Mr. Chairman, this program worries me greatly, not as much as the cost is concerned, but there is another matter of concern to me. The AFDC program encourages family breakup. Do not think for 1 minute that it has not made a contribution to many, many fathers leaving their families in order that the family could exist and have clothing to wear. Yes, take my word for it. The present AFDC program puts a premium and an incentive on the breakup of a home.

First, the Federal Government and the taxpayers in your State are paying the amounts provided under these various State formulas whether they pay the same amount in that particular State or not. There is one State that pays in the record—zero for 1 month for a family of four under AFDC.

Mr. Chairman, there are two States that pay as much as $250 to $299. Some of these States actually pay a family of four on AFDC what is by law subject to any tax, more money than a man working at a job can make at the minimum wage, working practically full time, all year long.

Not only is there the incentive to break up the family, this incentive in many States now for the person who is working to quit his job and go on AFDC—and do not think for a minute that does not happen. The Director of the program in the city of New York said that women quit jobs at department stores as salesladies and went immediately on welfare because they had minor children—single parents—and could earn more than they could earn while engaged in that type of employment in the city of New York.

But what else does the present program do? The present AFDC program is a tremendous disincentive for anyone to work. I shall try to give you some facts about this situation.

Many of you feel like there ought to be a reform, but when a reform comes down the road there are questions about it. Did you know that there was not one solitary substantive alternative offered by the Committee on Ways and Means during the course of the public hearings and in the executive sessions—and we were in executive sessions for days and weeks on end on this program—no one of substance was offered by anyone in substitution? The proposals on which President Nixon hopes to breathe life into. His administration has tried to breathe some life into this welfare program we have.

Mr. Chairman, the Members of the House know I have not been satisfied with the present program. We passed amendments in 1962 in the direction of trying to provide some inducement for people on welfare to get off it. Why? Because, as I said before, 60 out of every 1,000 of our child population nationwide and no one is trained. It becomes the job of the States to see to it that these unfortunate people who had no training or who had no jobs would be given an opportunity for such training if they were qualified to absorb the training, and then be given a job in keeping with that training. Some of the States did it fair. The State of California has done one of the best jobs of all the States. The State of California has not tried to stand the program in a substantial way until a very few months ago. Whereas California has referred about 30 percent of the people on AFDC for training, New York has referred 7 percent, and we do not even have an unemployment rate of 3 percent. Why? It is because certain people did not think it appropriate for any of these people to be assigned.

Why do I feel so strongly about this? After a woman gets her youngest child to the age of 18 and she is on welfare, what is left for her? In most States she may be 45 years of age at that time. She has no training. Of course, she knows how to clean and make beds, but she has never had the training in the industrial world or anything to help her get a job and no work habits. She is past the age where people want to employ a person for the first time. I think that is one of the greatest tragedies that perhaps exists on the domestic scene in the United States today—that we have not tried to do something to help that person to help herself, to learn some occupation before it becomes time for her to lose all opportunity for work and for training.

So what happens? She has to move into the home of one of her daughters who has minor children, and she is on welfare. This is why it is that in some States where a welfare program was initiated before the Federal program was enacted that you have as many as four generations, one after the other, four generations on welfare. Since the adoption of the welfare program in many States there is a percentage—yes, it is small, but it is a percentage—that lives in the welfare world.

What do we do with the AFDC program? We repeal it completely, and we drastically change the approach and the concept. Why? Because many of the States found it impossible to even agree to the mandate of the Federal law on occasion, or even to avail themselves of the opportunity to try to help these unfortunate people when we gave them that opportunity in 1962.

On July 1st, 1971, there will be a new Federal program replacing the States program known as AFDC.

This new Federal program will be called the family assistance plan. Yes, we will adopt Federal standards of eligibility; we changed it from top to bottom, because the Federal Government will pay the first $65 of benefits under that program, in all of the States, in cases of one, two, three, and four families presently on AFDC, there have been two million people already on welfare and that number will go to six million by 1975.

In essence they were saying to me: "I think it is asking too much of me to work, I am a disabled person, I want to, if you do not want to vote for me, let me have the work and give me something, or pay me something to help my children and pay my taxes." And some of my taxes go to keep those unfortunate people on welfare, including those unfortunate aged, blind, and disabled individuals.

wanted to do so, because I used to debate and all of us who did had to be able to debate both sides of the question. I could make a better argument against this bill than any argument I have yet heard made by any of you, I believe, because the thoughts I heard expressed went through my head to debate against it. I think I could do it. Certainly I could make a plausible argument against it.

Those of you who say that you are never going to vote for a guaranteed annual income, let me talk to you a minute. I have said the same thing, and I will say the same thing, and when I vote for this bill I am not voting for a guaranteed annual income. What I am voting for is an amount, call it whatever you want to—subsidy, relief, income, whatever you want to call it—I am voting for a supplement to the income of the individual who is working and not making enough to supply his family with the ordinary needs of life, but who is not now receiving welfare. But they are the ones who suffer. They have had nothing whatsoever to do with the ability of their father and mother to earn, or the willingness of their father or mother to go on their disability. Let them prescribe a course of training for you that they think you have the ability to absorb, that will enlarge your capacities and make it possible for you to earn a proper income.

But, second, I will pay this supplement and get this man to the employment office because I am convinced that within that man's lifetime, if something is not done, he will be one of the additional millions that will be added to the AFDC program.

Oh, you say, "They will not accept it in my district." I am not talking to my southern friends. I said this in the Rules Committee. Who are the working poor? What are they like? Over 50 percent of the working poor families covered under the bill live in the United States, in the Northeast. A high proportion of such families live in rural areas and on small farms. Seventy percent of them are white; 30 percent are nonwhite.

I have said to chambers of commerce and every group I could talk to in my own congressional district and in my own State that I am willing to pay any realistic amount to help in a position, to help him to improve so that he can better help his family.

What do I think about most in this whole thing? I think about the sad plight of many of these children. They have had nothing to do with the ability of their father and mother to earn, or the willingness of their father or mother to take on their disability. Let them prescribe a course of training for you that you think you have the ability to absorb, that will enlarge your capacities and make it possible for you to earn a proper income.

But, second, I will pay this supplement and get this man to the employment office because I am convinced that within that man's lifetime, if something is not done, he will be one of the additional millions that will be added to the AFDC program.

I believe that the present Win operation can be very easily adapted to the provisions of this bill, and I fully expect early and encouraging results. I also expect that the Committee on Ways and Means will be kept informed as to the progress that is made in the work and training programs. The nature and scope of the information the committee has received concerning the Win program has not been sufficient for it to do the oversight job it deems necessary, and the committee expects that an improvement in the Win information systems will be forthcoming.

Mr. Chairman, another significant contribution of the committee in developing the legislation was the addition of a provision holding parents responsible for Federal assistance received by their families. This provision was added to the bill to act as a brake upon parental desertion and births out of wedlock, two of the major social problems that plague the present AFDC program. This new approach plus greater emphasis by the Federal Government and the States in implementing the determination of paternity, the location of absent parents, and the enforcement of support provisions of the 1967 Social Security Amendments should have some effect in reducing the growth of the assistance rolls.

I think it well to remind that we did enact such provisions that were approved just a little over 2 years ago on January 2, 1965. In a sense, this legislation is building upon the welfare reforms we started at that time. These provisions have just recently been put into operation in most States and their effects are just starting to be felt. The committee, working closely at their operation aid expects to express my appreciation for the attention, cooperation, and assistance given us in the committee by every member of the committee, on both sides, in the development of the provisions of the bill.

This bill makes amendments in those programs of the Social Security Act that provide for cash public assistance payments to needy individuals and families. Specifically, it provides major amendments in the public assistance programs under titles I, IV, X, XIV, and XVI of the Social Security Act; most significantly, in the program of aid to families with dependent children.

The bill consists, as Members can see from reading it, of four titles. Title I revises and improves the assistance program for needy families—part A of title IV of the Social Security Act, or "AFDC." This part of the bill replaces the existing AFDC program with the basic Federal family assistance plan for all needy families, including the working poor. It also includes provisions relating to family assistance or State supplementary payments. This title includes new and expanded work incentives and requirements and an expanded and improved program for child care and support services. It also includes provisions which will result in general and conforming provisions and certain general provisions.

Title II provides for a minimum payment of $110 a month for each recipient under the federally assisted adult public assistance program; a new Federal matching formula with respect to adult assistance which is more favorable to the States; and other improvements in the public assistance programs for the aged, blind, and disabled, consolidating titles I, X, and XIV in a revised title XVI.

Titles III and VI contain miscellaneous and conforming provisions and certain general provisions.

Family Assistance

The bill also contains a number of miscellaneous and conforming amendments that are necessary in order for the family assistance plan to work in smoothly with the provisions of present law. While there are certain differences to the Medicaid program and to the parts of the law dealing with services for needy families, the committee is not making any substantive amendments to these programs at this time.
The new welfare proposal does ease the costs of welfare to most of the States, shifting a greater burden to the Federal Government. Overall, according to estimates from the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, the bill developed by the committee shows slightly greater fiscal relief to the States than the bill that was originally introduced by the President. In general, the effect of the committee changes in the administration bill is to give more savings to those States which have been making greater fiscal effort in their welfare programs.

It is estimated that the combined impact of the family assistance plan and the program for adults will be a net reduction in State expenditures for cash assistance in all but about nine States. With regard to the States whose expenditures would be increased, there is a special savings provision in the bill which provides that, for the first 2 fiscal years under the program, the Federal Government will meet any additional State costs that result from the enactment of the family assistance plan or the proposed new title XVI for the needy aged, blind and disabled.

Conclusion

Mr. Chairman, this bill deals with a most controversial subject. It will not please everybody; it would be impossible to do so. Some will say that by providing benefits to working poor families, we would be starting down the road to a guaranteed income program. I do not agree, because the bill also requires the employable adults in these poor families—working or otherwise—to register for training or employment services, thus bringing them under a program that will assist them in improving their skills and increasing their income. My understanding of a guaranteed income system is one that gives an individual a choice of not working and settling at a certain income and living standard, the standard that is guaranteed. This the bill certainly does not do. It offers no such choice. It says to the employable adult-members of assisted families: "You must accept suitable employment, or find another source of your welfare payment, and if need be have the payments to your family made to someone outside the family." There is a great difference between this legislation and a guaranteed annual income.

It cannot be expected that this welfare reform proposal can solve all of our country's previous social problems. But I do think that it will be a highly significant step forward. It is designed to promote individual integrity and efforts toward self-help. It is designed to help to stabilize poor families. It is one of the most important goals, and if we start to attain these, we will have made a valuable contribution toward improving the lives of the needy people of this country.

Mr. ASHBROOK. On that point, will the gentleman not agree, regardless of what form he has another set of figures or what the case might be, there is one point which I believe would help to clarify this at this time.

First I should like to thank the gentlemen from the Ways and Means Committee speaking as a member of the House of Representatives, for the valuable and helpful remarks made in this debate. It is my purpose to clear up some points.

I note that the gentleman in his remarks mentioned the situation under the present law where a family on welfare could get more than a family working full time at the minimum wage or near minimum wage, referred to.

I am sure the gentleman would not want to leave the impression this early in the debate that his bill would completely alleviate that situation.

Mr. MILLS. It may not in some States. Mr. ASHBROOK. It would narrow the situation, rather than bring about a situation where there is some absolute work incentive in every case.

Mr. MILLS. It would not cover all cases.

The gentleman very kindly gave me a copy of his figures. What he is doing in his figures is including many things that are not within this bill.

There is a reference to medicaid. The medicaid program may be available both under the welfare program and for the working poor, depending entirely on the State law.

The food stamp program may or may not be utilized by these people. It is not utilized by all of them. If it were it would cost several more billion a year, someone one told me, and we do not appropriate anything like that amount for it now. What I am talking about is what the individuals have in cash as a result of being on welfare, working and receiving this supplemental payment under the family benefit program.

Mr. ASHBROOK. On that point, will the gentleman not agree, regardless of whether or not he has another set of figures or what the case might be, even if this bill were to be fully implemented it would not totally alleviate the situation he referred to, where there is in some cases the ability to get as much...
Mr. MILLS. There is no question about the total.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Even if the bill passes, it could not be said we had alleviated the situation, where there would not be a situation where a nonworking welfare family would receive more.

Mr. MILLS. That is true. We are only helping them up to the poverty level, and it is my recollection that at least one State has had no assistance under AFDC which is quite a bit above the poverty level and some of the other States have payments, depending on the size of the family in those States, that would exceed the poverty level. So we are not going to help the States under this with levels above the poverty level. We help them up to that poverty level.

Mr. ASHBROOK. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. ICHORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ICHORD. I want to thank the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas for his usually excellent presentation.

First of all, I want to state that I do not think there has ever been a bill in the last 2 years previous.

Mr. MILLS. Those years.

Mr. ICHORD. There are now 1.7 million families drawing AFDC.

Mr. MILLS. That is approximately 10 million individuals all together on all welfare programs.

Mr. ICHORD. The gentleman did not break that 1.7 million families down into those where the father, the male, had left the home for some reason or where there had been a miscarriage in the family. Would the gentleman advise me as to what part of this 1.7 million families fall in that latter category?

Mr. MILLS. About 75 percent where the father is not in the home. About 75 percent of the total number are in that category and about 25 percent in the remaining part.

Mr. ICHORD. One more question I would like to have the gentleman answer. The gentleman in his presentation has only spoken as to income requirements. Are there any asset requirements for eligibility under this?

Mr. MILLS. Oh, yes. We have asset requirements.

Mr. ICHORD. What are those?

Mr. MILLS. We disregard assets up to $1,500. A home or personal effects do not count against the $1,500 limitation. That is true in many States, anyway, under present law.

Mr. ICHORD. You mean the home would be exempt and not counted as part of the $1,500?

Mr. MILLS. That is right.
The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 additional minutes.

Mr. MAHON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MILLS. Let me carry on just briefly, because I have not answered the gentleman fully.

You must also compare this new program, and what is capable of being done under it through proper attention and proper administration, with what will occur under existing programs, which, as I said, some people within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare predicted for aid to families with dependent children and other elements of cash welfare, that it will cost around $12 billion just 4 fiscal years from now. This new program altogether will be a material amount of money. It will cost somewhere in the neighborhood of $8 billion by fiscal year 1975, all added together. But I think the program under present law is entitled to a very high priority.

Mr. MAHON. Let us assume that this has very little impact in fiscal 1971—

Mr. MILLS. It does not have any.

Mr. MAHON. But there are many other programs not related to this.

Mr. MILLS. I think this program Is entitled to a very high priority. It is not going to be any revision of the tax structure, nor is it going to be any revision of the surtax. Mr. Landrum, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. MILLS. No, no.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman, in response to a question propounded by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon) has not, in my judgment, answered the question that ought to be stated here. It seems to me that the answer ought to be, "Yes, we are going to have to raise more money."

Mr. MILLS. No; I am not going to say that. If it becomes necessary, I will say I will be out on the House floor supporting it.

Mr. LANDRUM. Will the gentleman permit me to say one sentence further?

Mr. MILLS. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANDRUM. Immediately following the disclosures last summer by President Nixon on television of his welfare reform proposal, there came on the screen a panel of folks in this field of welfare and among them was former Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Mr. Wilbur Cohen, and Mr. Moynihan of the White House—and Mr. Moynihan did call it, as we had all during our committee hearings, that this bill would cost no more than $4½ billion or $5 billion additional money.

Mr. Cohen, who supports this program and is a part of its genesis—

Mr. MILLS. No, no.

Mr. LANDRUM. I am not talking about the bill—I am talking about the program and I am talking about the $1 billion amendment that he just voted for.

Mr. MILLS. Oh, yes.

Mr. LANDRUM. He is a part of its genesis and we know that. We may as well admit that he is a brilliant man in his field. He said, "No, not $4½ billion or $5 billion, but it is much closer to $12 billion or $15 billion." I am talking of the fiscal year 1971. I am talking about this program that is on the way and there is not going to be any revision of the surtax.

Mr. MILLS. My friend, the gentleman from Georgia, has I think been misled by a lot of statements made by a lot of people. If Wilbur Cohen said that, he does not know what he is talking about. He does not know what he is talking about in some of these programs with respect to the costs—and he is a great man in his field. Just do not be misled by that—do not be misled, I mean, by following just everything that Wilbur says. I just never could follow everything he said. But you ask him if he would not go further with this program and I will guarantee that he will say—yes. Maybe what he wanted was a program which cost $4½ billion or $5 billion.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. MILLS. If they do not meet a local building code you do not think the Secretary would qualify them, do you? If they cannot meet the present State standards, they can't meet them. But if the State does not have any standards, then, of course, he can make up his own mind whether the program is operated in a healthy and safe manner.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. VANIK. I appreciate the gentleman's thorough explanation of the bill, and I support the bill. I would like to inquire whether a fully trained unemployed worker covered by unemployment benefits with three dependents, who exhausted his unemployment compensation benefits for prolonged unemployment, for better than a year, whether such a person would be permitted to participate in the program without disposing of his equity in his home or his equity in his automobile.

Mr. MILLS. He could. That is also true in the States that disregard the ownership of a home and take care of the family with an unemployed father. The gentleman in the next month or a little over, could reverse 50 percent of them that now.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CAREY. I wish to commend the gentleman in the well, the Chairman, for the way in which he has exonerated himself from the old AFDC program, the 1967 amendments that you brought forth. At that time I had a colloquy with the distinguished chairman and I predicted that with the rate of increase of beneficiaries coming on the rolls in New York City, the cost of the program would triple. I wish I had not been so accurate.

Mr. MILLS. I wish I had merely tripled. It is not that I thought.

Mr. CAREY. We could foresee that.

Mr. MILLS. We did not offer enough incentive, I guess, for the city to refer welfare recipients to work and training programs.

Mr. CAREY. Let me indicate why I think we are on the right track on this bill.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CAREY. Mr. Chairman, aside from the experiment the chairman referred to, in New York City, acting on our own initiative, faced with a wave of 20,000 new cases a month coming on the rolls, we undertook some experiments in allowing the workers to keep certain income from the welfare benefit, coupled with an incentive, and the requirement to take upgrading training. We found the flow of cases to the welfare rolls was beginning to decrease from 20,000 to 100 a month. We have seen movement off the rolls for the first time.

So much of what the gentleman is describing has been experimented with favorably in New York City. Therefore I think it deserves a chance.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, let us see where we would be if we decided not to pass this legislation in the House, and I will leave it in the hands of Members and their good judgment. We will be without any change in the present welfare system, because we have not addressed those on the outside, in looking at this whole matter, have been unable to come up with any other changes that we could make that would offer any hope of curtailing the rising costs of some of these programs. This is all we could think of.

We could not possibly get back to the floor any time this year with something new unless somebody who has not talked about it in the past could come forward with something new.

I think we ought to give them a chance to have this program. I think it can work. As I said to those in the administration, I hope they will give it the amount of attention required. They must see to it that the employment offices give to it the amount of attention needed in counseling these people and in diagnosing them and in training them and in giving them a job.

But, as we told the departments, let us not train these people for employment that does not exist. Let us not train them for jobs that have disappeared. Let us train them for the business community. Let us find out where jobs are and let us find out what jobs within an area are going begging—and they are going begging, my friend. Let us find out what they are. Let us train people for those jobs. The worst thing we can do from the point of view of the morale of these people is to spend 6 months training them only to have them find, when they walk up and down the streets, that the job does not exist. Let us not have that happen. If we do not let it happen, then the program can succeed.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, let us see where we could go from the welfare programs of aid to families with dependent children, AFDC that was designed to assist families with children who have been deprived of parental support by death, incapacity, or continued absence from the home and who do not have sufficient income or resources to keep body and soul together, to provide food, clothing, and shelter. But we know that this AFDC program is a mess, is a can of worms.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 minutes. Mr. Chairman, I know of no more complex, face than the problems that require solution, than the problem of dealing with our present Federal-State-local welfare program.

If we could find the perfect solution by waving a magic wand to insure that no families with children remain below the poverty level, we would all feel much happier. But that is not the situation we face. Instead, we have the existing program of aid to families with dependent children—AFDC—that was designed to assist families with children who have been deprived of parental support by death, incapacity, or continued absence from the home and who do not have sufficient income or resources to keep body and soul together, to provide food, clothing, and shelter. But we know that this AFDC program is a mess, is a can of worms.

This program is out of hand. It is accomplishing little while experiencing dramatic increases in the number of recipients and the costs incurred by the Federal, States, and local governments.

I would repeat what the chairman has said. I do not believe there is a single individual in this House who would defend the continuation of the program as it is... now constituted. I do not believe there is a soul who would defend the status quo.

Those who oppose this bill certainly are not doing so on the theory that what we have is sound, that we need not be concerned about the present program, that we should not adopt this legislation because what we have is appropriate, also let us recognize that we are going to be able to find questions and to be concerned about any new approach. I was concerned from the beginning. I am still concerned about the need to make this program work.

But my first concern prescinds from my knowledge that the present system will not work, because it does not reflect the philosophy that people should be transferred from the welfare rolls to the employment rolls and that individual efforts to achieve self-sufficiency should be a prerequisite to assistance.

What is the underlying philosophy of the present welfare system? It is simply a guaranteed annual income. The States simply establish need levels for various family sizes and pay each family a cash payment equal to all or part of the family's needs. The daily range from a low of $328 to a high of $4,164 annually for a family of four, are made with little or no regard for the efforts of the adult family members to achieve self-sufficiency through work or training.

This, Mr. Chairman, is a guaranteed annual income. The amount of the guarantee varies from State to State in accordance with the standards they have established. Let me give you some examples to illustrate the level of the present income we are guaranteeing. A family of four presently receives a guaranteed annual income of $2,270 in Alaska, $2,124 in Arizona, $2,322 in Colorado, $3,694 in Massachusetts, $3,476 in Minnesota, and $2,376 in my own State of Wisconsin. We have all of the States listed, and this is available to the Members. That is the level of guaranteed income that is available to the Members. That is the objective of this bill. He said:

It is essential that we recognize that occupational rehabilitation is the only correct solution to the problem of able-bodied, needy American adults with a work potential, and that the conclusion is: only a program leading to a job and self-sufficiency can succeed in reducing the welfare burden.

Mr. Chairman, that is the objective of this bill. That is where this legislation differs from the programs we have today.

Mr. Chairman, I interviewed with the Members some of my reasoning in becoming convinced that the present system is unworkable. The present system simply keeps people on the welfare treadmill—everyone who checks in the second and third generations. In my view the worst thing in the world for a child to grow up in a household where no one gets up and goes to work in the morning, just goes down to a welfare office and picks up a check once a week. That is the poorest example you can establish. The best individual and family stability in the world for these children is to imbue them with the American philosophy that there is a correlation between individual effort and economic rewards.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 10 additional minutes.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I became convinced that the concept of work is a fundamental ingredient in welfare reform. The present system rewards idleness and penalizes work. If you are in a nonworking poor family, if you do not work, if you do not have a job, you are eligible for assistance in these States—but half of them—that cover the unemployed parent.

But if the family head is working, then the family is not eligible for benefits in any jurisdiction, even though the family income is below the standard established for welfare in the State.

How can you encourage unemployed people, to whom you are paying assistance, to go to work if you are going to penalize them by making them ineligible for assistance when they go to work?

If you want to move people from the nonworking poor into employment, you have to provide them with assistance or your attempts will be futile.

This present program keeps an individual and his family welfare as long as they are unemployed. But if they get up in the morning, go through the extra expense of working and come home tired and fed up, they are still eligible for welfare assistance. They are no longer nonworking poor individuals, they are earning something, and the present law says we are not going to take care of them.

Failing to cover the working poor results in two inherent defects of the present system. The first defect is the incentive for family break-up, the father leaving the home, if he was the breadwinner there, because his family would be economically better off if he deserted them and qualified them for assistance as an AADC family. The second defect is the disincentive to contact families where the father is unemployed—the problem I discussed earlier.

Let me just ask why a poor family with minor children should be ineligible for assistance when the father is working? Why should that automatically make a family ineligible for any assistance, even though the income is less than the need standard the State has established for AADC families, to enable them to keep body and soul together.

Why should work make you ineligible for assistance when meeting your needs? We cannot give an answer to that. No one can give an answer to that.

That is why we covered the working poor. That is why I became convinced of the need to cover the working poor, to discourage family disintegration, to foster family stability, and to encourage work.

Let me take a simple illustrative case, using figures from a conservative and moderate State, the State of Wisconsin. The figures in States like New Jersey would provide a more compelling cure, because their welfare payments are higher, but I am selecting a moderate State to illustrate my point.

Take a family in the State of Wisconsin, with the male in the home working

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE H 3089
Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Yes, or it increases his incentive to become unemployed, if he is working.

Mr. DENNIS. Yes, but it is not a fact that under the provisions of the bill where the allotment for food stamps and so forth is affected and is reduced by the amount he is allowed to keep, that as a matter of fact, we talk about 50 percent, we are keeping him from retaining substantially more than that?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. That is why I responded that there are those who suggest that the total incentive may be insufficient. But the incentives provided in the disregard included in this bill are an improvement over existing law, so that the bill cannot be challenged because we have not gone far enough in taking care of the working poor.

Mr. DENNIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DENNIS. Is it correct, according to the people in this field, that we have to take away from him much more than 50 percent and retain any substantial incentive?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Let me be honest with the gentleman. I do not know that we can say with any certainty that there is anything magic about the 50 percent. In my judgment, the disregard, is correct. You take away more than half of what he earns in addition, this reduces his incentive to work. We have to agree on that.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Yes, or it increases his incentive to become unemployed, if he is working.

Mr. DENNIS. Yes, but it is not a fact that under the provisions of the bill where the allotment for food stamps and so forth is affected and is reduced by the amount he is allowed to keep, that as a matter of fact, we talk about 50 percent, we are keeping him from retaining substantially more than that?

But the incentives provided in the disregard included in this bill are an improvement over existing law, so that the bill cannot be challenged because we have not gone far enough in taking care of the working poor.

Mr. DENNIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DENNIS. Is it correct, according to the people in this field, that we have to take away from him much more than 50 percent and retain any substantial incentive?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Yes, or it increases his incentive to become unemployed, if he is working.

Mr. DENNIS. Yes, but it is not a fact that under the provisions of the bill where the allotment for food stamps and so forth is affected and is reduced by the amount he is allowed to keep, that as a matter of fact, we talk about 50 percent, we are keeping him from retaining substantially more than that?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. That is why I responded that there are those who suggest that the total incentive may be insufficient. But the incentives provided in the disregard included in this bill are an improvement over existing law, so that the bill cannot be challenged because we have not gone far enough in taking care of the working poor.

Mr. DENNIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. TAFT. There are cases where the marginal rate is above 70 percent, but for most income levels it is substantially below that. We must compare the total disincentives found in present law.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I agree there are cases where the marginal rate is above 70 percent, but for most income levels it is substantially below that. We must compare the total disincentives found in present law.

Mr. DENNIS. But the gentleman is more than doubling the welfare rolls, to begin with. His hope of a future reduction—that is all it can be now, a hope—depends on this incentive. I am suggesting to the gentleman, if the incentive is in fact much less than we generally contend, the hope depends on the incentive.

I believe it is fair to point out that certain knowledgeable people, such as Professor Friedman, testified to that effect before the committee.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Professor Friedman did feel that we were taking away too much of the individual's earnings, but we had not come to the disregards high enough when we included food stamps and other factors.

What is done by this is to fault the bill on the basis that we are not spending enough money as is proposed under this bill, that we are not enlarging it beyond what the bill calls for, that we are not doing more for the working poor than what we have done in this bill. But some individuals are contending we should not
Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The gentleman yield?

Mr. CLEVELAND. Am I right that this was a New Jersey study under the auspices of the Office of Economic Opportunity?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin, The Office of Economic Opportunity participated in New Jersey and the overall contract was under their auspices.

Mr. CLEVELAND, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, am I correctly advised that the study has not been fully completed?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Oh, no, it has not been fully completed, but it has gone to the point that they were able to draw conclusions.

Mr. COLLIER, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. COLLIER. I would like to add something to that. The idea of providing an incentive to encourage people to work is not new. This is not a new program. For years out in my State where general welfare assistance and welfare programs were conducted by the various township supervisors and by the county general assistance, this was a common practice. I happened to have served in that capacity for 4 years in a township. It was unusual at all to help a lower income family by getting them a part-time job or by getting them training, whether it was to work in a local gas station or what not. It worked, I can tell you that. It worked in more than one town. This is not a new concept. It is just as basic as apple pie.

Mr. CLEVELAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Yes, I yield further to the gentleman.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I do not wish to get into a debate on this precise point. But I have had experiences with the earnings limitation on social security. I know about that and I hope to prove to the members of the Committee on Ways and Means that many people when they get up to the earnings limitation, they stop work even if they could still get $1 out of every $2 earned after that limitation.

Another question; what would be the chance of a college student who is married and, perhaps, has one or two children, with no earnings income or no assets? Would he or would he not qualify as one of the families under this program?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The individual, if my memory serves me correctly, and correct me if I am wrong here—would probably be eligible on the basis that he was the head of a household taking training.

Mr. CLEVELAND. And this would be so regardless of whether his father was working or not, or whether he or other workers do you go into the family background to see if there is sufficient income to take care of this particular situation? Do you stop right there with the new young family itself?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. We do not impose a father's responsibility for an adult child. But there are times when the child is dependent. In fact, there is a new provision in this bill. To the degree that the Federal Government is paying family assistance to any child or the wife of an individual, he now has a financial liability to the Federal Government for the amount that has been paid by the Federal Government to support his family. I assume this is an independent household, with, perhaps, a child. We would like to look into that individual's resources.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I am talking about the family case where the college student is married and has a couple of children and may be in need. He would not be in need because his family has been able to arrange for him to continue education, start a family, and stay out of the draft by providing postgraduate training. There he sits as an independent family. I am wondering whether he is entitled by provision in this bill to be supported.

Mr. MILLS, Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the distinguished Chairman.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, on the point raised by the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. CLEVELAND), first of all I would say to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES), that we must bear in mind that the individual was required to make himself available through the employment office, to call there for a job. Of course, he could not be in need of any training, and if they found a job for him he would have to take that job. If he could not earn enough to bring his income up to the standards of a self-contained family, the individual's resources would be disregarded, but the individual who is still an undergraduate might be, because he might be considered in training.

Mr. CLEVELAND. And would it be true for a technical or vocational school or about how about college or an engineering school?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. If it is, it is part of the appropriate training for this individual.

Mr. MILLS. That is right.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. For work.

Mr. CLEVELAND. That is why people want to go to college, and why we want everybody to go to college, to get an education and prepare for work.

Another question; how about a couple on parole for a technical or vocational school and they adopt a grandchild or even have had a child? Would they be eligible for relief under this?

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, in reply to the gentleman from New Hampshire, I think that they could be.

Mr. CLEVELAND. My reading of the bill is that it is somewhat cursory, leads me to believe they might be, because the father is in need, and that would be the adopted person or child I am referring to, they would be eligible.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I think the gentleman is correct. Of course, their social security income would reduce their family assistance benefit dollar for dollar. There is no income disregard applicable to unearned income. The registration and work requirements would also be applicable to this individual unless he was unable to engage in work for that reason of his advanced age.

Mr. MILLS, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, even though the individual may be in training he cannot prescribe his own type of training and then run down to the welfare office and say: I am in training, so send me a check.” He must undertake that course of training prescribed by the employment office. The employment office must say to the individual in the start of the training we think appropriate for him he is going to the vocational school. If he does not go, then he would not be eligible.

Mr. CLEVELAND. During the suggestion the chairman has given us, if we take this young married person, if he has two children and a wife, and he goes down to the employment office and he tells the employment office “I might be able to go to college if I can get a little help for the family,” are you telling me the employment office would not approve that, as going in to training?

Mr. MILLS. I do not know what they would do because it is not intended to supply money for those in school. Let us get that point clear. But it might be that the employment office would decide that in order to train a person who is already on AFDC that it would be necessary for them to at least complete another year of school, but this program is not intended to pay people going to college, whatsoever.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. The gentleman says this has no application to a person to go to college.

Mr. MILLS. That is right.

Mr. GROSS. No application whatever to the person under this program?

Mr. MILLS. They are not available for full-time work in the first place.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

My BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out in regard to the question raised by the gentleman from New Hampshire that you just cannot do it under the present law. There is not enough money in this whole project. We are talking about 80 cents a day to feed a child. You are not going to be able to feed one for that price unless you are willing to do something else to earn income. And we are only talking about for adults a little more than that per day. So the money in the whole program to do the kind of things the gentleman is pointing out even if it were legally possible.

Mr. LATTA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. LATTA. To me, the gentleman's argument on this bill is that he is attempting to keep the father in the home and keep the family together so that he does not have to absolve himself from the family in order for them to get some relief. Is that not one of the purposes of the bill?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. That is one of the problems encouraged by the present law and this bill attempts to correct it.

Mr. LATTA. Let me give you a hypothetical situation under this bill and see whether or not by splitting up a family of a husband and wife and four children, the way this bill is now written, you would not come under the provisions.

Take a family of a husband, wife, and four children. Under the terms of this bill, they would get $2,200. It would be easy to figure under the composition of a family set forth on page 11 and 12. If you are really looking out for dollars and cents, which you are trying to get away from the present system, under the provision of this bill the father could take two children and the mother could take two children and each set up a home and so get $3,600 as opposed to $2,200.

Mr. MILLS of Wisconsin. As a matter of economics, if you get down to the precise figures there are additional costs in setting up a completely separate household rather than staying in one household. I do not think you have a very good case when you consider the additional cost they are going to incur.

Mr. LATTA. That is the same argument, however, that the gentleman is making that the body of this bill is not going to do anything to help the family in this situation from happening when it goes to conference.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman from Ohio in the Committee on Rules raised the question about the language of the bill.

As I said in my opening remarks, I am certainly not going to contend that every word in this bill is perfect. But I do not think we have made every move in this bill, that is any excuse for killing the whole theory of the redirection of this program.

Actually, I do not think we have made all these mistakes. But, if we have, this legislation will be amended just as all other legislation is amended.

In the instance that the gentleman mentions where the father is in the household, he would have to register for work. Employment is the reason the father and the mother would have to do that.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Additionally, the father would have a liability to Uncle Sam for the amount of Federal funds paid to his wife and child as a result of the father leaving them. I doubt that he would find this would be a very advantageous situation.

Mr. LATTA. Is the gentleman inferring that there is no liability now?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. There is no Federal liability.

Mr. LATTA. I knew that. But how about State liability?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. There is to the extent the State enforces it. But now we make it a Federal responsibility. We do this to make sure that there is proper enforcement and also to start in the instance that occurs when a father absents himself from the State and it becomes difficult for the local authorities to trace him into another State. This is new under this legislation—a most imposing Federal responsibility.

Mr. LATTA. If the gentleman will yield for just one further question—as has been pointed out by the gentleman from Arkansas and the gentleman from Wisconsin—this only requires the husband to go out and seek employment but also puts the responsibility on the mother in the case where she has children under 6.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Right.

Mr. LATTA. As I pointed out before the Committee on Rules, as the gentleman remembers, I am very much opposed to this because I think a mother's place is in the home when they have children 6 and 7 years of age.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Well, you differ with the gentleman from Illinois who says this bill because it does not make the mother with children under 6 register. That shows the difficulty we have in trying to reach a happy medium.

Mr. LATTA. My friend, the gentleman from Illinois, does not cast my vote nor does he think for me.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I know that.

Mr. LATTA. But I am stressing the fact, and I am hoping your great committee, when you get this matter into conference will give a little thought about keeping the mother in the home, as well as the father.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I think it is most important to respond to that. First, if there are no children under 6 it means the children are in school during the daytime. The mother in this case does not have to be there during the daytime to take care of these children. Why should she not be at work. Second, it seems to me the greatest therapy for these kids is to have them see somebody get up in the morning and go to work and not just grow up in a family that has had to rely on a welfare check. So far as my particular viewpoint is concerned, I see nothing wrong at all in requiring mothers with children who are over 6 years old to register to take training and to take work. That is why I disagree with the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BROYHILL) such time as he may require.

Mr. BROYHILL of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 16311 because I believe it is a move in the right direction.

If there appears to be a suggestion of some hesitancy in my voice, there is. But the ensuing welfare mess we are now in is the fault of the present welfare system. While I do not have the confidence that the family assistance plan will lead us quickly from our dilemma, it is a new approach, and we have been caught in welfare and the poverty cycle to the greener pasture of self-sufficiency and off welfare rolls onto tax rolls.

For those who are concerned, as I am, about that group of people, the family assistance plan is not that. It adds to the current "guaranteed income," if you will, of present welfare handouts, the condition qualified able-bodied members of the family—men—willing to get to work or improve themselves for a better job. By contrast, the Heilman Commission report contains no such condition to its income maintenance payments.

I am convinced that too long we have heard the voice of the social theorists oversaturating poverty level persons that they have a right to live the life that the Almighty Government owes them a living whether they work or not. I am against force that destroys human dignity as much as the social theorists. But studies now being made of this codding attitude has been wrong all along. If we listen to the mothers on welfare and to the majority in the poverty cycle, we will find they want some help on child-care needs and training.

Even in this bill, mothers with children under age 6 are exempt from the registration requirement, though such persons may voluntarily register and enter a training program, utilizing day-care assistance.

How many of us know families in the middle income, and even affluent groups who have working parents, with children under age 6 at home or in special facilties? Why must we continue to force a codding attitude on those on welfare, when they prefer to respond to opportunity? A survey in New York City among welfare mothers showed that six out of 10, who had children under age 6, said they would rather to work if they had child-care help.

We need to get rid of the overkill approach to welfare. Even in the family assistance plan this is this lurking element in the day-care plan. Federal funds will provide 100 percent of the rehabilitation and renovation of the proposed day-care centers. The emphasis in meeting the day-care needs appears to be directed toward elaborate centers with specially qualified professional persons.

But it does not require a genius to take care of a child. One study showed that rear children reared by women with IQ of less than 80, became productive workers, while a controlled group of similarly retarded children left behind in the care of an institution never became productive in their lifetime.

Without denying the value and need of such day-care centers, it is my apprehension that the emphasis of the administrative professionals is to go bravely in this direction. This is despite the fact a majority of welfare and working mothers would prefer to make their own child-care arrangements, either with a relative or neighbor, rather than transgress their child to a more distant elaborate center. The working families who live in your neighborhood and my neighborhood do not have a day-care supervisor for their children with a master's degree.

What the poverty families want is not overkill. They are not demanding a Cadillac, but they could use a compact. They want basic help, opportunity for training, the task of providing training, and working. And I also am concerned that disappointment will occur in when it is realized that the task of providing training for jobs that exist cannot be met overnight for all those for whom this program is intended to serve. We are taking a big bite that will take us longer than we think to digest.

But I do like the more positive approach to this program. It has been shown that rising economic tide reduces gradually the number of persons in the poverty levels of income, yet our welfare rolls have increased with this burgeoning economy.

It is a program designed to help families stay together.

It establishes Federal standards to reduce the flow of welfare-oriented families to the urban areas.

It seeks to do something about holding onto working fathers and mothers financially responsible for their families.

It raises the level of adult assistance for the aged, blind, and disabled to $110 a month.

It brings a measure of financial relief to the States.

And, importantly, it places a lid on the ceilingless Federal payments that have been growing by leaps and bounds for aid to families of dependent children.

Mr. Chairman, I recommend the bill.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILBERT). (Mr. GILBERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)
Mr. Chairman, I rise in order to support the Family Assistance Act of 1970. As a member of the Committee on Ways and Means who helped formulate the bill before today, I commend my chairman and members of the Committee of Ways and Means for their hard work and the minority member, Mr. Byrnes. I believe the bill as it is before us today represents a substantial improvement in the proposal submitted by President Nixon to Congress last year.

The bill offers a meaningful step forward toward easing the burdens of welfare in this Nation, not only for those who desperately need assistance, but for those citizens who must pay the bill.

I commend the committee particularly for important improvements in categories relating to assistance to the aged, the ill, the handicapped, and the blind.

Mr. Chairman, my own city of New York has long carried out the most liberal of family assistance programs. And as the costs grew ever more awesome, attempts were made periodically to "weed out" the so-called welfare cheats. But, even though there have been some spectacular exceptions, the general conclusion of these investigations proved simply that a great many people had valid cause to be on welfare rolls.

The inescapable fact is that a great many of our citizens do need assistance if they are to survive. I believe it is the responsibility of Government to offer that assistance until such time as they can be helped to become self-supporting citizens once again.

If I may, Mr. Chairman, let me close with these simple thoughts. Our Nation is one of wealth and abundance. In less than 200 years we have fashioned the most progressive, forward-looking Nation ever to exist. We believe devoutly in fundamental freedoms, in justice, equality, and opportunity. We have shared our riches with many who have needed them. Indeed, we have often been more generous abroad than we have at home. Let us now use part of our resources to help our own people. I believe it is an investment this Nation will look back on with pride, for after all, it is an investment in our own future.

Mr. Mills, Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Ullman). Mr. Chairman, I yield to the distinguished chairman.

The chairman very eloquently pointed out the deficiencies of the present welfare system, and I think most of us would concur. But I would say you do not have to adopt this remedy to cure the deficiencies of the present system. For example, the problem of the family breakup. All it takes is to provide a Federal program that is so totally untried and so full of pitfalls that I will attempt to outline very briefly here today.

With respect to the problem of the WIN program referrals, all we would have to require here is the Federal standard that all persons be covered in all States. Obviously that would be better than the present system.

The chairman very eloquently pointed out the many mistakes I have made. Mr. Chairman, today we are considering one of the most far-reaching pieces of legislation to come before Congress in recent years.

Passage of this welfare reform bill would make a significant point in American social and economic history. The Federal Government would embrace the philosophy that American citizens are entitled to a guaranteed annual income. It is true, of course, that some of those with limited assets, those with families and those who register at the employment office. But within those limitations the taxpayers of the Nation will be charged with permanent income maintenance for all.

Because I disagree with this basic concept as well as many specific provisions of the bill, I oppose its passage. I am not, however, an opponent of welfare reform. In my judgment, the legislation I have fashioned is the most progressive, forward-looking Federal program that will bring meaningful help to the poor. It is not, however, possible through this bill. I have great compassion for the poor. I believe the bill has eliminated poverty and that should be one objective.

The action of this bill is to dispense cash. There is a great deal of talk about work incentives. But the bill offers little that is new in the employment area except a basic provision that everybody on welfare who is eligible to work must register to work. Once registered, the poor will face most of the same frustrations and disillusionments they now encounter under the present welfare-work system. Few improvements would be instituted. The significant difference is that 3 million more heads of families would be placed in the poverty class in frustration and disillusionment.

The administration indicates that it will provide for an increase in funding for job training and child care in the first full year of the family assistance program. But the increase is not enough to overcome the inadequacies of the existing programs, much less enough to meet the demands of a greatly expanded new program.

Mr. Chairman, I have before us a bill with imposing consequences and serious deficiencies. It deserves the full understanding and careful consideration of the Congress before action is taken. We cannot afford to say simply: "Anything is better than the present system." The stakes are too high.

I will vote for a straight recommittal of the committee and ask that the committee can produce a bill that is responsive to the need, yet preserves the integrity of the system.

I would like to take a few minutes to discuss some of the questions that have raised doubts during the 6 months it has been before the committee. In my judgment, these questions still need to be answered.

Before us is a complex bill that over- night would nearly triple the size of the Nation's welfare rolls to 25 million and double the Federal cost of welfare to more than $8 billion a year.

The cost of the family assistance program will be met by additional federal tax revenues. Administration says the first-year cost of the new program to the Federal Government will be an added $4.4 billion. The committee proposes legis- lation that on top of total coverage of the Federal floor, which would not only cover the cost of the Federal Government to pay 30 percent of the total cost, would raise taxes, up to the limits of the poverty level.

This, of course, is only a beginning. An extra $4 billion for Federal floor benefits in the early 1970's will easily become this extra $8 billion by the late 1970's. A 30 percent share in supplemental payments will undoubtedly be increased to 60 percent or higher within a few years. Congress will face annual pressure until the total cost of the welfare system is assumed by the Federal Government. The bill will go a long way toward federalizing the cost of the welfare system. The few steps remaining after its passage would merely be a matter of time.

The bill places a Federal floor under the existing system. There is no controversy. The increases in benefits that will result from the new floor are necessary to help those locked into a fixed income to meet the erosion of inflation on their benefit dollar. The system will continue to be operated in a conventional manner by the States.

Beneficiaries in these adult categories comprise less than 30 percent of the total number of persons receiving welfare checks. Their number has remained relatively level in recent years. In the other major welfare category, family assistance, families are strictly defined. A minimum family requires two persons, an adult and a child under 18 or if he is a student, under 21. Single persons and couples without children are not eligible under the bill. This provision, incidentally, struck as one of the bill's most glaring anomalies. How can one accept the principle of guaranteed income for families and refuse to do it for single persons and couples?

Aid to families, of course, is the source of our mushrooming welfare costs, with the number of persons enrolled under the existing program having nearly tripled in the last decade. Later I will discuss how this total cost of mushrooming in the future. But cost alone is not a sufficient reason for opposition.

What does this program do? First and, of course, the most important significant thing that it does, and the thing that has most of the Members of the Congress greatly concerned, within certain limitations it does prescribe for the first time and in one of our programs a guaranteed family income program. I am going to cover that in a bit of detail later on. But we have never had this kind of family guaranteed income program to aid the circumstances in this country before.

Second—and I think this is very important—the United States under this program does directly assume the full responsibility for the welfare program, for determination of basic eligibility for all family welfare recipients.

That goes to the determination of income, to the determination of assets. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be responsible for the administration of the system.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman assures us that is not the case, that there are 3 million, 300 thousand of these people who either possess training or are capable of training and after training go to work. Would the gentleman like to see them working?

Mr. MILLS. No, we did not. We put the onus on the States to see to it that they had training.

The States decided that none of them were “appropriate for training.” They got out of it in practically every State.

Now we are taking over the program, and we will have Federal employees making that decision under the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare must assume the responsibility if the program is not administered properly.

Mr. ULLMAN. Mr. Chairman, let me proceed with an analysis very quickly of this work requirement. In my judgment this is the most overrated provision in this program.

The administration has sold the family assistance plan on the proposition that its work requirement. In my judgment this is the most overrated provision in this program.

The administration has sold the family assistance plan on the proposition that its program will achieve this goal. The administration, in fact, has raised the expectations of millions of Americans that new and better jobs will develop under FAP. But the program neither lays the foundation for these jobs nor provides adequate funding for training and child care to make working feasible.

This is the problem. It takes money to train people. There is not that kind of money in the President's budget, and even break the surface of the overall problem.

I have a chart here indicating 1969, 1970, 1971, and 1972, indicating what the findings of the deficiency of the budget, and at the break what the problem is. We are not even beginning to cope with the problem of training these people. It is an extremely expensive proposition.

When we say we are going to refer them to the Employment Bureau, the employment agencies will have a hard time just handling the paperwork of registering them. Insofar as the training and work placement are concerned, I see nothing in the bill that would implement these programs.

The key work program for welfare beneficiaries now is the work incentive program—WIN. Authorized in 1967 by Congress, WIN got off to a slow start but has gained momentum steadily in the past several months. Although there are many defects in the program, WIN has strong supporters. The director of California's WIN program, Aaron Levin, who is an administrator of four succeeding Federal manpower programs, told the committee that WIN is “to me the heart warming, the most comprehensive, flexible, and one welfare program I have ever seen for training and employment of welfare recipients.”

Levin observed that WIN brings together the three major systems required for a successful program—education, labor, and welfare. It is tailored at the State and local level to meet the special needs of local and regional problems. It employs a small staff to solve individual cases, including coaching by other welfare beneficiaries already enrolled in the program.

An important deficiency in WIN has been the lack of adequate funding for the program.

In fiscal 1969, Federal outlays for WIN totals only $33 million over 81,000 slots. Budgets for fiscal 1970 and 1971 call for sizables increases but not nearly enough to meet demand in many areas. For example, New York City has 9,000 training slots in fiscal 1970. But officials told the committee that the need is for 40,000 slots.

Nothing like this kind of a quantum jump is planned under FAP. WIN is to be repealed by FAP, and replaced apparently by a program much like it. The administration planned last year to open up 150,000 new training slots and to provide training to upgrade skills of 75,000 of the 3 million newly registered working poor at a cost of $21 million. But it appears that the proposed program is clearly inadequate.

There are, in fact, a long list of problems with FAP that must be solved if work incentives are to do anything but hollow rhetoric. These include:

First. Transportation. A marked shift in the makeup of the welfare population will occur under FAP from urban to rural, largely because of the addition of the working poor. Most of the working poor live in nonurban areas.

Among the existing welfare population, 73 percent live in urban, 27 percent in nonurban areas. According to one study presented before the committee, the FAP population will break down almost 50–50 between urban and nonurban. Among the nonurban FAP population, 73 percent are persons living in towns of less than 2,500 population.

Besides making job training programs more uneconomical, the shift in the welfare population from urban to nonurban areas presents a serious transportation problem. Lack of adequate transportation is already a serious concern under existing programs. In rural areas, enrollees in the WIN program are stranded miles from program centers without cars or access to public transportation facilities.

FAP's nonsolution is a cruel one. Persons living in rural areas where private or public transportation opportunities are not available will be required to register for FAP, but will not be required to participate in the program. These people will not be considered priority cases under FAP. Government public transportation services will receive low-priority attention, Labor Department officials admit.

Special works projects: This current program could be one of the most fruitful in finding jobs in the public sector when they are not available in private industry. Such a program would employ welfare recipients through Federal, State, and local public and nonprofit agencies, offering particular usefulness in times of high unemployment in the private sector.

Such work programs could be one of the most fruitful in finding jobs in the public sector when they are not available in private industry. Such a program would employ welfare recipients through Federal, State, and local public and nonprofit agencies, offering particular usefulness in times of high unemployment in the private sector.

Adequate financial incentives to participate in this program have been forthcoming, and public agencies have shown considerable enthusiasm for it. A special works program would employ welfare recipients through Federal, State, and local public and nonprofit agencies, offering particular usefulness in times of high unemployment in the private sector.

But it should be noted that the administration's original bill barely mentioned special projects, and no estimates of future funding are available. In my judgment, there are no grounds for optimism that this important vehicle for expanding employment opportunities for welfare unemployed will be utilized any more effectively than it has been in the past.

CHILD CARE

A critical area if any new welfare program is to succeed is child care. FAP would abandon WIN's emphasis on day-care programs by adding 450,000 more children. This is an important step forward.

But more can and should be done in child care. Among the adult family welfare population, there are 750,000 women with recent full- or part-time work experience. This Labor Department statistic suggests the need for at least a further doubling of day-care slots and funding beyond the FAP proposal.

The FAP annual unit costs allocated per child of $1,600 for full-time day care and $400 for part-time care fall below the “acceptable” level of child care as defined by experts before the committee. These unit costs are only marginally above the minimum level of care, where the health and safety of the child are the primary concerns, and little attention can be given to developmental needs.

Many experts in this field observe that the disadvantages to children of a minimum level of care far outweigh the advantages of having mothers work.

Token funds of $24 million would be authorized in the first full year for renovation and remodeling of child-care centers. No money is earmarked for construction of new day-care facilities. This is considered a serious shortcoming under the present program, and will obviously prove more serious under a greatly extended program.

Beyond these specific problems, there are broad defects in the job provisions of FAP. A basic fault of this entire exercise in so-called fundamental welfare reform is the administration's failure to attempt some streamlining of the myriad number of Federal programs now operating, and daily overlapping, in the manpower development area.

The Department of Labor presented an exhibit to the committee that showed there are 24 federally assisted manpower programs now operating—some under the Labor Department, others under HEW, Defense, Commerce, and HUD.

Critics of this bureaucratic who appeared before the committee spoke of "unproductive competition among manpower programs," and "redundant calls to personnel managers," to mention only a couple of comments.

The provisions of the FAP program aimed at consolidation amount to fine tuning, not major adjustment. In my judgment, most of the 24 programs should be consolidated under a single welfare-experienced agency.

Another major problem area that FAP does not solve is where the new and improved programs are found at the end of the training programs.

A study by the Auerbach Corp. of Philadelphia presented to the committee stressed that "much more needs to be known about the actual availability" of jobs related to Federal manpower programs. The study recommended that a job analysis, on a site-by-site basis, should be made with particular emphasis on the relative potential of the public and private sectors of the economy to supply jobs.

A manpower program for the poor has to be developed around the existing market conditions that jobs will be available at the end of the training program. The size of local welfare manpower programs is presently determined by the size of the welfare population. As the Auerbach study rightfully points out: It would make some sense to let the project size be governed by actual job availability.

The study adds:

Labor market analysis would also ensure that existing programs were suitable for existing jobs.

There is no hint that FAP will correct these errors. There is only every indication that the program will carry the Nation further into the mire by a massive expansion of the work-registration rolls without any knowledge of the possibilities for placement in new or improved jobs.

We have had some talk about the penalties. If he does not work he will lose his welfare payment. What about the situation? If the family head refuses to work the only penalty here that we are imposing for refusing to work is $300 a year.

Let us take a couple of examples. First let us go down to the $720 level. Anyone in the country could earn $720 and still get 100 percent of family assistance payments under this program. So a family of two would get $1,300 and a family of three $1,600, and on up to a family of 10, which would get $4,000 under this program, assuming all they earned was $720. But where it gets more complicated is the 2.9 million new families of working poor that we are putting under the program. We counted a lot of them who never had been on welfare. But suppose they are making $2,500 a year and have a family of six children. You go up the column and you find the Federal Government would pay them $1,910 every year. They would start getting a check for that amount the next month. If you will take a larger family, you could go up to $5,000 in income. Take a family of nine children. The Federal Government would pay them $1,560 every year. They would start getting that check the next month. Of course, this assumes the means test will be passed, which is $1,500 in assets. Remember, though, that the home is exempt and whatever assets are required to hold down a job. Presumably an automobile that would be used to travel back and forth to the job would be also exempt.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mrs. GRIFFITHS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. ULLMAN. Insofar as the State supplements are concerned, we are going to pay up to the poverty level 30 percent of all of the costs of State supplementation on top of this all-Federal program. Adding it up, this program opens up the Treasury of the United States in a way that it has never been opened up before in our history. An individual fills out a form and says "I have $1,500 of assets and I have so much income." He fills it out, and sends the form in to Washington. It presumably runs through a computer to see if the man has reported his income correctly or not. Then this table is consulted to determine how much he is eligible for a check goes out. Every 100 persons or some such figure will be spot checked. However, I want to remind you that it is terribly expensive in a program like this to check. There is not sufficient money here for any kind of adequate check on the payments. Remember we are talking about 2.9 million new family heads that will begin receiving checks from the Federal Government on top of the existing 1.7 million welfare recipients already receiving checks from the State.

Mr. HUNGATE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ULLMAN. Yes, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. HUNGATE. The report mentioned reform in here. Is there any place that this would reduce the number of those on welfare? Is there any contention by the gentleman to that effect?

Mr. ULLMAN. Of course this would not reduce it. This would add 2.9 million families. And the people who talk about an incentive to get off of welfare are just talking about pie in the sky. Everybody who is a realist knows that it will not happen. If you look at this kind of a table, there is nothing in there to induce anybody to get off of it, in my judgment.

Mr. HUNGATE. On that issue of reform, is there any place that you can reduce the cost of the welfare programs to the Government?

Mr. ULLMAN. In this program?

Mr. HUNGATE. Yes.

Mr. ULLMAN. No. This would add on top of all the welfare costs we have today well over $4 billion, but I think it would be far beyond that by the time the program gets into operation.

Let me go on very quickly.

Let us look at the integrity of social security. For years we have had a basic principle that you do not mix welfare and social security.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oregon has again expired.

Mrs. GRIFFITHS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. ULLMAN. But, under this program we are putting the Social Security Administration into the welfare business.

Further, and contrary to what has been said, it will not help deserted or reunite families. The statistics are very clear. Many States that do include un-
The work requirement is a delusion. There is not any question about it. Now, Mr. Chairman, there are all kinds of loose ends in this program. The first thing that I think Members are beginning to feel already is the pressure to increase the $1,600 base.

These pressures are going to grow by leaps and bounds. There is no anchor in this program. We have got a movable feast of figures. There is no rationale. Once they say, well, then the stops are out, and we are on our way, and in place of a $5 billion program, this is going to wind up a $20 billion pro-family assistance program providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to an extensive degree.

I voted to grant a rule to permit the consideration of this measure by the full House. My reason for the rule was the passage of H.R. 13631 because I believe that in theory it is a step in the right direction. I am especially pleased to note the inclusion of an incentive program designed to encourage those now on welfare roles to seek employment, and where not trained for employment to be prepared for employment under a proposed training program. However, as I observed Rules Committee Chairman, I doubt very much that the program as outlined in the pending bill will succeed. I say this because the administration appears to be headed in the opposite direction where the unemployment situation is concerned.

On the one hand, the administration is proposing that those now on relief be trained for jobs to become self-sustaining in the future; on the other hand, the administration is acting on a mistaken theory. How can the administration hope to place newly trained workers into jobs when it is doing nothing to create jobs into which these workers can be placed? Instead, the administration hopes to encourage those on welfare and unemployment to seek employment, and to eliminate jobs and increase the unemployment rate to such an extent that those previously employed will be competing with the newly trained former welfare recipients for the limited number of jobs available, if any.

Mr. Chairman, unless the President reverses his present position, I do not believe that the realization of his policy of stemming inflation through increased unemployment is a failure, and unless the President awakens to the fact that inflation is not a cause to the administration's so-called workfare program, I think the administration's policy is now eliminating jobs and increasing the unemployment rate to such an extent that those previously employed will be competing with the newly trained former welfare recipients for the limited number of jobs available, if any.

Mr. Chairman, unless the President reverses his present position in the realization that his policy of stemming inflation through increased unemployment is a failure, and unless the President awakens to the fact that inflation is not a cause to the administration's so-called workfare program, I think the administration's policy is now eliminating jobs and increasing the unemployment rate to such an extent that those previously employed will be competing with the newly trained former welfare recipients for the limited number of jobs available, if any.

Mr. Chairman, unlike my associate myself with their support of this bill, I feel that anything comprehensive statements they have made in the hearings, I doubt very much that the program as outlined in the pending bill will succeed. I say this because the administration appears to be headed in the opposite direction where the unemployment situation is concerned.

The first objection we hear is that it is a guaranteed income. Let me say in reply that the Federal government has never provided a guaranteed income than present welfare programs which are simply Federal contributions to State programs, for welfare payments on the basis of poverty levels or payments of some other assurance that people on welfare are going to get definite relief.

Now the classic definition of guaranteed income is an income which assures income regardless of work or need or earnings. This present formula of $1,600 is exactly the opposite. In my opinion, it is a ceiling instead of an assurance of a guaranteed income than present welfare programs which are simply Federal contributions to State programs, for welfare payments on the basis of poverty levels or payments of some other assurance that people on welfare are going to get definite relief.

The third objection is the one of adding the working poor. I think the figure usually given is 12 million without taking into consideration the fact that these are simply temporary additions until the program gets underway, after which the whole philosophy, the whole purpose, the whole main thrust is to remove people from the welfare programs and reduce the cost.

I took it upon myself last Monday to take the floor and to address myself to the opposition, which I think was pretty widespread, and all Members of Congress were well aware of, of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to this bill. I pointed out in a 1-minute speech last Monday that the chamber of commerce last fall had taken a poll of its members and 86 percent of them had responded in favor of this bill, citing the work incentive program as the reason for their support. I pointed out that on Monday, so far as I understand, the chamber of commerce could reply before the bill was brought up for debate. And they did, in a letter to me dated April 14, which I have permission to put into the Record at the end of my remarks.

But I want to read this one paragraph from this letter, which I think is important from the point of view of the House Members considering who is and who is not in opposition to this bill and how much.

The National Chamber supports welfare reform and believes that the programs the House is considering are consistent with these principles.

As I read this letter from an organization which was widely reputed to have been deeply involved in obstructionist programming in the past, I repeat, it says that its opposition is... limited to the concept of the guaranteed income as it applies only to the working poor. As has been well explained by the chairman and by the ranking minority member, it is part of the main thrust of this bill.

The third objection is, of course, the work incentive, and there seems to have been a great deal of comment about a New Jersey plan and about this work incentive as a complete failure. As I sat in the committee and listened to all these people testify, as far as I know nobody spoke against the program. They did explain—and I can be corrected if I am wrong—but I think there are many aspects that could be improved.

That is the main thrust of their testimony, but nobody as I can recall has said that the WIN program is a failure. Let me call the attention of Members to a statement made by the Ohio Governor, James A. Rhodes not long ago, and I am reading now from a clipping which appeared in a newspaper circulated widely in Ohio.

Governor James A. Rhodes last week praised the 20 counties which are making use of the Work Incentive (WIN) Program to help get individuals in jobs and families off welfare rolls.

The Governor said that from Jan. 1, 1969, through Jan. 25, 1970, these counties have placed 892 enrollees in the Work Incentive (WIN) Program in meaningful employment and another 337 have been reduced as a result by a total of 4,480 persons. This has resulted in a monthly savings of $974,643 in welfare payments, he noted.

I mention this, not only because it comes from my State but also because it is pretty concrete proof that if this WIN program is given an opportunity to work, it will.

As I said, I do not want to oversimplify the issues here, but I simply want to try to pinpoint some of the answers to the objections to the bill.

In conclusion I want to point out this to the Members of the House. The President of the United States and two executive departments, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Department of Labor, have spent hours and months trying to come up with some solution to the problems of the present welfare programs. This is their answer. The Ways and Means Committee has spent hours and days and weeks of deliberations and has, with reining amendments, approved this proposal overwhelmingly.

On the basis of this tremendous amount of work, honest and conscientious effort to answer the objections which have been made to the present welfare program over the years, I would hesitate to ask the House to support this bill.

Mr. Chairman, at this point I insert the letter I referred to earlier from the Chamber of Commerce dated April 14, 1970:

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Hon. JACKSON E. BETTS, House of Representatives,

Dear Mr. Betts:

I was sorry to learn, from your statement in the Congressional Record of April 13, that you apparently have some trouble reconciling the National Chamber's current opposition to ER. 16311 with the results of the informal poll conducted last fall at our Urban Action Forums in 15 cities, which seemed to show support for the President's welfare reform proposal.

Actually, the poll did not deal with the welfare issue at all. Only the concept of a guaranteed annual income was included in the poll.

The poll, taken of our members and others in attendance at the meetings, showed 86.5% in favor of "welfare reforms" promised by the Administration, but at this time, the Administration's program was not recognized as something that would guarantee income for many families with fully employed fathers.

Of the 2,183 persons polled, 47% said that they wanted the government to "require welfare recipients who can do so, to take work or take training." Another 31% said they wanted most "to make taxpayers out of welfare families," and only 22% wanted to do away with welfare. Clearly, majority opinion in the poll was for substituting workfare for welfare, where possible.

But when the question was rephrased and lengthened, from making people work to a welfare expansion, not reform, by tripling the number of persons on welfare rolls, it was found that only 1.3 million more families (15 million persons), all headed by fathers already working full time.

This provision had been thoroughly2084

This provision had been thoroughly canvassed in earlier discussions of the program, and no wonder, because it's the entry wedge for the guaranteed annual income. It extends the guarantee, as a starter, to families with fully employed fathers. If any family refuses to work, or take training, or to take a better paying job if he already was working, his share ($500 a year) would be deducted from the family welfare allotment, but the entire family allotment is guaranteed, with nothing required and no questions asked about how the money is spent.

Once a program like that got started, where would it end? Even at the outset, large families with incomes of more than $7,000 would qualify for this new federal relief. The average worker's pay is $6,000. A family earning $6,000 would get $460 a year in tax-free welfare. Businessmen polled last fall had no hint that anything like this was in the works.

Our position on the pending welfare issue was developed only after long and careful consideration. It was recommended by a Special Committee on Welfare Programs and Income Maintenance, made up of 14 distinguished top business executives who studied the welfare problem for more than a year. Our Board of Directors, whose 64 members come from all types of business in all parts of the country, voted on the recommendation.

The National Chamber Federation comprises 2,700 local, state and regional chambers and trade associations, 1,000 trade and professional associations and 37,000 business firms and individuals.

It should be no surprise that the Chamber opposes the concept of a guaranteed income. We believe this is in accord with public sentiment. A Gallup Poll in 1968 revealed that more than 96% of the American public opposed the idea of a guaranteed income, with 6% expressing no opinion.

The National Chamber supports welfare reform and believes the provisions of the House bill are progressive. Our objection is directed only at the part of the bill that provides that the enactment of this legislation on taxpayers, it does seem appropriate that the bill come before the House on April 15 or thereabouts.

I would appreciate your placing this letter in the Congressional Record, as our answer to your statement.

Cordially,

Hilton Davis,
General Manager, Legislative Action.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlelman yield?

Mr. BETTS. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. Chairman, asked a Member permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. BUSH. Mr. Chairman, in my view the family assistance bill reported out of the Ways and Means Committee is a meaningful breakthrough in welfare legislation. It addresses itself to the ethical and financial realities of work in America today. The heritage of this country emphasizes work, fulfillment, and goodness of work. Yet we find ourselves today with a system of welfare under which people are better off in manipulating the system and getting welfare than in working at a low wage job.

One of the most common complaints I hear from people back home is "how can people be out of work when the welfare ads are full of jobs?" They are disturbed that people take welfare when they could be working and they have a right to be disturbed. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their money, not the money of the people who are supposed to be helping the people at the same time building work incentives into the program for those who are supposed to be helping the people. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their vote, not the votes of the people who are supposed to be helping the people. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system. It is their tax dollars that are supporting the welfare system.

It is time we did something to help the man who is working for a living, trying to educate his children and trying to feed them as costs rise out of sight. The Ways and Means Committee kept this problem in mind and tried to find a better way of taking care of those who cannot help themselves while at the same time building work incentives into the program for those who are supposed to be helping the people. This is the problem of work, and now low paying jobs and may be thinking of "going to welfare."

In designing an effective welfare program we cannot ignore the movement of the working poor and welfare status for there is a positive statistical correlation here. In Texas, for example, a man with a family of four is entitled to a welfare payment equal to $179 per month, or a nonworking father to do as well, the head of the household must earn the equivalent to $221 per month and this adds up to an hourly cost of $2.15. In Michigan it comes out to $1.94 per hour for housewives, $2.16; and in New York, $2.23. Why should a man or woman take a job for anything less? Yet most do. And this is one of the wonderful things about this country—people would rather work than not work.

Yet, we are endangering this important national characteristic by perpetuating a system that actually encourages people not to work. We have encouraged individuals who expect the Government to take care of them. The incentives in the present program that encourage this should be changed and I think this bill can do the job—I think it should be tried. It provides positive incentives by requiring that a welfare recipient be registered for work or work training; by permitting those who work to keep substantial portions of their earned income; and by expanding job training and day-care opportunities.

There are those who feel that this program is too expensive and I, for one, believe they have a valid point. But the alternative—the present Federal-State welfare system—is even more expensive. If we do nothing, the costs of the program will be $12 billion by 1975 and we will have spawned a new generation of welfare recipients and broken homes.

Some people also feel that the program will only provide the framework for an even more expensive welfare system—one that in the future would provide a $5,500 guaranteed annual income for every family. As a characteristic of this program, it would not have my support, the support of the Ways and Means Committee or the support of President Nixon. The family assistance plan, reported by the committee, is oriented toward work and is aimed only at families—these are not characteristics of a guaranteed annual income plan. Further, the present Federal-State welfare system comes a great deal closer to being a guaranteed annual income as it encourages idleness by making it more profitable to be on welfare than to work and provide no method by which the States may limit the number of individuals added to the rolls.

I must confess that I have one major worry about the program and that is that the work incentive provisions will not be enforced. In order to be productive, it is essential that the program be administered as visualized by the Ways and Means Committee; namely, if an individual does not work, he will not receive funds. Enforcement is essential; if the work requirement is not enforced it could simply lead to another boondoggle.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman, we need to reform the welfare system, build work incentives—not crush it further by more giveaways.

Mr. MORTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VANIK. I yield to the gentleman.

(Mr. MORTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORTON. Mr. Chairman, President Nixon has submitted to the Congress several innovative proposals which provide a major step toward what he calls the "new federalism."

This Family Assistance Act of 1970 is a major piece of legislation which I believe will help achieve that objective. It is a bold move toward the more significant coordination of effort between the Federal, State, and local governments. With the Federal Government providing the uniform floor for eligibility and payment requirements, and the necessary increased costs, we are moving toward an equitable and efficient reform of our troubled welfare system.

In his message to the Congress proposing the transformation of welfare into "workfare," a new work-rewarding system, the President stressed that the effect of his plan would be:

For the first time, all dependent families with children in America, regardless of where they live, would be assured of minimum standard payments based upon uniform and single eligibility.

For the first time, the more than two million families who make up the "working poor" would be helped toward self-sufficiency and away from dependence.

For the first time, training and work opportunity with effective incentives would be given millions of families who would otherwise be locked into a welfare system for generations.

For the first time, the Federal Government would make a strong contribution toward relieving the financial burden of welfare payments from State governments.

For the first time, the dependent family in America would be encouraged to stay together, free from economic pressure to split apart.

The bill before us, H.R. 16311, would bring about those effects.

Mr. Chairman, President Nixon stated in his message proposing a comprehensive Manpower Training Act, which I hope will be coming before us for enactment, that his manpower program is "a good example of a new direction in making federalism work." I feel that the same applies to the pending Family Assistance Act of 1970.

The chart on additional costs of this manpower program message:

We can relate substantial Federal-State manpower efforts to other efforts, tax sharing and economic opportunity, marshalling the resources of the departments and agencies involved to accomplish a broad mission.

I quote that statement to emphasize that aid to and greater cooperation with the States and the Federal Government is the foremost need which the Federal Government must meet. In attacking the socialills of the day, the new federalism is going to the root causes of poverty.

The Family Assistance Act of 1970 will tackle one of the most troublesome problems confronting our State and local governments. Those governments are crying for financial relief, and the needy people of the Nation want to get off welfare. The ever-increasing cost of living. They will all be helped—the State and local governments and the dependent Americans—by enactment of this bill. They and the country's taxpayers will be helped further toward improvement in our economic climate when President Nixon's manpower and tax sharing programs are translated into law.

In closing, therefore, Mr. Chairman, take that first big step, make that cost investment in a better America for all, by the expeditious passage of H.R. 16311.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises that the minority side has consumed 1 hour and 43 minutes and the majority side has consumed 1 hour and 33 minutes.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Vanik), a member of the committee. The gentleman is our last speaker for the day on this side.

Mr. VANIK. Mr. Chairman, the Family Assistance Act of 1970 is a bold move toward welfare reform. It is a move toward what we are considering today is an imperfect bill, designed to deal with circumstances and conditions which have developed in our imperfect society. The proposal is intended to slow down the trend which seeks to restrain welfare expenditures as well as from those who are determined to improve the life of those who are unemployed, underemployed, and poor.

In any event, the legislation moves toward the federalization of welfare, establishing minimum standards of family support without geographical discrimination and provide a uniform system of review of work eligibility of the unemployed.

Insofar as the Federal contribution toward welfare will be increased, it constitutes a revenue sharing with the States.

There has been and there will continue to be extensive discussion as to the cost of the family assistance program. It is difficult to estimate costs when economic conditions make it so difficult to forecast the extent of unemployment and the resulting need for family assistance or the potential need for adjustment. The chart on page 53, is incredibly naive and unrealistic. Although the table assumes a 4 percent growth, no provision is made for the increase in the cost of living or the effect of increased eligibility resulting from further and mounting unemployment which lurks in the wings. These estimates are optimistic beyond reason.

We must relate the family assistance program to the forces of increased unemployment which appears to be designed in our economic structure.

I cannot share the feeling of security which pervades this on-the-spot condition of the unemployment compensation law and its capacity to face up to a difficult economic challenge.

At the recent time, there are 50.9 million workers covered under State unemployment compensation laws. The wages of these workers in 1968 totaled $331,562,-437,000. Can we assume that 3.5 percent of the total wages of 1 year is a sufficient reserve? This reserve is sufficient for only the mildest of attacks of unemployment.
For each of the almost 51 million workers in the insured work force of the United States, there is about $262 in the unemployment insurance fund. Six percent unemployment of insured workers would cost the unemployment compensation fund about $7 billion a year. Two years of 6 percent unemployment of insured workers, a rate which prevailed in 1958, would completely deplete the unemployment insurance fund. It certainly would not be doing us anything more than a mild recession.

What we must realize in considering the Family Assistance Act is that it may be extensively used to back up and reinforce the unemployment compensation program which is rapidly becoming unresponsive to its avowed purpose of income support for the unemployed.

The family assistance program may well require a substantial increase in general Treasury funds to assume an obligation we thought would be undertaken by employers under the Unemployment Compensation Act. In a great measure, the burden of responsibility for income maintenance for the trained but unemployed worker will shift from the employer to the general taxpayer. We must understand what we are about. The idea that an insured worker with three dependents is unemployed in Ohio for 1 year, he receives $61 per week for 26 weeks or $1,586. In Florida, such a worker would receive a maximum of $40 per week or 26 weeks, or a total of $1,040, while in New York State such a worker would receive $65 per week for 26 weeks or a total of $1,690. All of these situations are applicable to the family assistance program—ata open-end cost. Do we really intend to use the family assistance program as a substitute for a meaningful unemployment compensation program which provides income maintenance for a trained insured worker during a period of prolonged unemployment?

As presently constituted the unemployment compensation program is a most inadequate law—designed only for the best of times. It is incapable of performing as an income maintenance system during conditions of growing and persistent unemployment. The needs of the unemployment compensation system should not be dependent upon the family assistance program.

During our discussions on this proposal, we also studied the comparative effect of family assistance under this program with family assistance for military dependents under prevailing military scales.

It appears that a family of four sustained by a member of the armed services in the lower three grades is compelled to exist on resources below poverty levels and below what we provide under this bill. Today, almost 150,000 military dependents live below the income levels provided in this bill. It is inevitable that our Nation should conscript a citizen and then order his family to live on public welfare—but such is the case for many. To maintain a family income and provide for adequate increase in dependency allowances for military dependents, particularly in the lower grades.

The recent postal employees strike in New York demonstrated the error of income levels which make no allowance for cost-of-living differentials. The same problem is evident in the Federal budget which I hope that our oversight will be corrected by the other body. It is readily apparent that the income maintenance needs are certainly higher in my community and other high-cost urban areas than they are in rural or small-town communities.

In full knowledge of the great shortcomings and uncertainties which are present in this proposal, I give it my support because it improves what we have, it moves in the right direction and represents an effort to meet the challenge.

Mr. BURKE of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I join with those that feel that no American family should go hungry and that no child should suffer—but certainly, that every individual should have the opportunity to gain self-respect and family security. I do not contest. However, I am worried about the new concept of welfare that we consider today. I endorse its intent to train and put the unemployed into the field of employment opportunity, but I fear that if this legislation passes we will create instead a new class of welfare recipients. While the President’s laudable proposals to bring order to the present convoluted welfare programs are commendable and desperately needed, the prospect of 12 million Americans becoming new members of the growing welfare state appalls me.

We have seen welfare grow into a professional and practical way of life, for some and to become intermingled as a part of our Nation’s economy and social character. When it was begun in the depression days of the 1930’s under the New Deal, it was considered only a stopgap, and President Roosevelt himself then admitted that the Nation “must and shall quit this business of relief”—and, he further added:

To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit.

His advice was not followed and hence we have what is today called the welfare mess.

President Nixon properly proposes that we reverse the direction of the welfare system. His proposals to establish training programs through work incentives and by appealing to credit higher education are a commendable step in the right direction. But a further step in this direction and one that I believe would have a more practical result without additional cost to the taxpayer is the proposal—H.R. 2697 known as the Human Investment Act that I introduced and which would give an on-the-job credit to business firms for training of workers.

I do not believe that the bill before us—H.R. 16311—which, under the rule, we are asked to consider without opportunity to offer amendments, achieves the goals that are needed today or even that President Nixon has set. Instead it seems inevitable that the number of those added to the roles of the profitably unemployed—who seek a reason not to work will increase even more with the years than it has in the past years. In these days of inflation and ever increasing taxes we are faced with the fact that this bill before us will increase the Federal budget some $5 billion or more. The proposed Federal participation in family assistance in the first year is expected to cost $3.8 billion plus $386 million which is allocated for day care. In addition, we may add to this the extra costs of job training and increased benefits, and then admitted that the Nation “must and shall quit this business of relief”—and, he further added:

To dole out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit.

His advice was not followed and hence we have what is today called the welfare mess.

I do not believe that the bill before us—H.R. 16311—which, under the rule, we are asked to consider without opportunity to offer amendments, achieves the goals that are needed today or even that President Nixon has set. Instead it seems inevitable that the number of factors required in America today. Poverty must not be accepted with pride. It must be overcome with compassion and understanding without creating the ogre of a national welfare state.

Mr. Chairman, I wish that I could support the President by voting for this legislation. Unfortunately I cannot. I do not believe that this legislation is anything more than an extension of socialism in our country. Even if it is, as some would like us to believe, better than our present welfare system, it is, at the moment, in my state. I hope it will work if it becomes law, but as for me I cannot support it, because I do not think it is the answer that America needs. We need a full review of the entire welfare program with the intent to help the needy—including the American workingman who will be called upon to pay the bill.

Mr. MINISH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in qualified support of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970. While the legislation contains many shortcomings and inadequacies, which I will deal with, it does represent a worthwhile attempt to correct the Nation's antiquated methods of assistance for her less fortunate citizens.

As a Representative from one of the Nation's most highly urbanized and densely populated counties, I have been greatly concerned by the growing welfare crisis and its adverse impact upon both welfare recipients and overburdened taxpayers. My home county in New Jersey, like New York, contains one-seventh of the population of the State, yet its welfare expenditures represent over one-third of the statewide cost. More than a quarter of a million persons now receive AFDC assistance in New Jersey—83,900 in Essex County alone. The county's welfare budget has grown from $3 million in 1958 to more than $17 million in 1969. I am sure the Federal Government must provide meaningful assistance to those areas of the country, like Essex County, N.J., which are draining their resources and their taxpayers to deal with a problem which is actually national in character.

Recognizing that welfare is a national problem and that substantial relief must be granted to those parts of the Nation which have assumed a disproportional share of the welfare burden, I introduced H.R. 11374 on May 15, 1969. This legislation would go much further than the family assistance plan to improve the lot of the average taxpayer and the family on welfare. Under my measure, AFDC would become a wholly Federal program administered by local agencies under Federal standards and control, including national minimum standards with the cost being fully borne by the Federal Government. The bill accepts the national character of the welfare problem and faces the fact that its solution cannot be met most effectively and justly by the Federal Government.

The legislation before us today establishes a program to provide the aid for dependent children program. The family assistance plan would apply to all low-income persons with children and provides a $1,600 allowance for a family of four with no other income. The full allowance would go to persons earning up to $720 per year, with subsequent benefits cut by 50 cents for each dollar earned. Therefore, the beneficiaries will always find themselves with a higher income through employment. In contrast, the present welfare system allows for the deduction of earnings from benefits—a 100-percent tax.

While it is true that this bill will eliminate the inequity of very low benefits in some States and end the State-by-State variations in AFDC levels, it will provide little real relief to the urban areas of our Nation so overburdened by spiraling welfare costs. A minimum floor of $1,000 for a family of four is barely enough to cover the food budget of a poor family, and certainly not enough to cover even half the amount presently paid such a family by an urban State like New Jersey.

In order to prevent a cutback from existing levels of assistance, the bill provides that States offering benefits in excess of the family assistance plan in January 1970 must supplement the Federal plan by the actual amount figure to or to the poverty level, whichever is higher. The Ways and Means Committee has made a significant improvement over the administration proposal in this section. Under the administration's plan, 10 percent of the supplemental costs to the States would be paid for by Federal assistance. The committee has increased this supplemental payment to 30 percent. However, if the welfare centers are to experience real relief from welfare costs, the Federal Government eventually assumes 100 percent of welfare costs.

Another area of concern to me in the Family Assistance Act involves the work and training requirements under section 447 and 448. I strongly believe that a wholesome home life must not be sacrificed. I feel that the Senate Committee has included some safeguards in this area. A mother of a child under the age of 6 is not required to register for training or work. Additionally an exclusion is provided under the female caretaker of a child if there is an adult male related to the child in the home who does register. The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare will be required to provide adequate and convenient day care for children of mothers who are undergoing work training or have been employed. Unfortunately, the work and training provisions contain no specific minimum standards regarding the kinds of jobs or the levels of wages which are to be offered and accepted by FAP beneficiaries. The plan must be strengthened in this area by the formulation of explicit Federal standards governing work referral and wages.

In conclusion, I support the Family Assistance Act. If enacted, it will set national eligibility standards for benefits, help keep intact the families receiving aid, provide assistance for the working poor, encourage initiative by allowing a recipient to keep a portion of his earnings, and provide for the first time a floor, albeit modest, under family income.

The legislation comes to the House floor under the traditional closed rule for such bills and cannot be amended by the Senate. The President has said he will sign any legislation he receives that has raised and act to improve and strengthen the family assistance plan.

Mr. O'NEILL of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I think it is of special significance that the respective leaders of the three major religious organizations have jointly endorsed and urged enactment of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970.

The statement was signed by the Most Reverend Joseph Bernadin, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference; Rabbi Henry Siegman, executive vice president of the Synagogue Council of America, and Dr. R. Edwin Espy, general secretary of the National Council of Churches—Protestant and Eastern Orthodox. They said, in part:

In introducing the Family Assistance Plan on August, the President envisions the present welfare system as a "colossal failure." The present system—if indeed it can be called a system at all—disrupts families, often fails to provide minimal subsistence, deems the recipients, reaches less than half of those in need, fosters dependence and reduces them to spiritual inequity.

Furthermore, under present cost-sharing principles, it is straining the resources of many counties and States. The House bill would move toward correcting some of these failures. It would set national eligibility standards, save families while still intact, extend help for the first time to the working poor, encourage initiative, establish a minimum Federal floor under family income and provide some fiscal relief to states and localities.

These are important steps toward making the system more responsive to human needs and more equitable. Furthermore, the requirement that able-bodied heads of households register for and accept jobs or job training should help shatter the myth that the aspirations and ambitions of the welfare recipients somehow differ from those of the rest of society.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. Chairman, after hearing so many varied comments regarding the proposed family assistance plan—FAP—H.R. 16311, I would like to call upon my colleagues to recommit the bill to committee.

I urge this action because I feel that there are many unanswered questions about the FAP. Some of these questions have been raised in the comprehensive report entitled "Time for Change," a study done by the California counties welfare modernization task force. Speaking of the FAP, the report states:

It is impossible to determine the net fiscal effect on either the state or the counties of California. The Federal Department of Health, Education, and Welfare has estimated that California would have realized a net saving of $107 million, based on 1968 data, in cost savings with H.E.W. officials indicates that in making these estimates they did not consider earned income, work and training expense allowances, or administrative costs. Hence, we believe that the figure is questionable.

I would like, at this time, to summarize several of the criticisms, as given in the report and say that I do not necessarily agree or disagree with some of the implications of the criticisms, but merely offer them as proof that there are many unanswered questions about the FAP.

The report charges that one of the “most serious deficiencies” in the FAP is the continuation of State programs to supplement Federal payments. The requirement of a State supplemental program continues the inequities which now exist in the present AFDC program. If poor are included in the Federal program will be. For the State to contract with the Federal Government and local control of a program involving a great deal of money. It continues the inequities of the difference in payment levels between States.

The working poor: Although the working poor are included in the Federal program, they are not included in the supplemental program. These families are also excluded from medical benefits. For the marginal worker this means a chance at economic advancement in which he variously qualifies for and loses supplemental benefits and medical care.

There would be a strong incentive to seek the security of being unemployed or only partially employed—

Says the report—

There is no justification for making it mandatory to continue the program under a different name.

The report further states that the problems of operating a supplemental assistance program would be “an administrative nightmare.”

Cost: The disadvantages are that no one knows what the new FAP will cost or what the cost of the State supplemental program will be. For the State to contract with the Federal Government and local control of a program involving a great deal of money. It continues the inequities of the difference in payment levels between States.

The working poor: Although the working poor are included in the Federal program, they are not included in the supplemental program. These families are also excluded from medical benefits. For the marginal worker this means a chance at economic advancement in which he variously qualifies for and loses supplemental benefits and medical care.

There would be a strong incentive to seek the security of being unemployed or only partially employed—

Says the report—

Work incentives: The report notes that the FAP requires registration for employment as a requisite for receiving assistance, but that this is nothing new. Colorado and other States had such a requirement for years. Under the FAP, there is also a penalty loss of benefits equal to the benefits of only one person. The report says—

There are none of this and it has proven less effective as a device for controlling behavior and attitudes than the former policy of termination of total assistance to the family.

California is not the only State with serious reservations about the FAP. A random telephone check by my office has revealed that there are several others who also feel that there are many unanswered questions.

Mr. Morris Pribetch, chief of administration and planning for the Mississippi State Department of Public Welfare, feels that the FAP definitely is a large step toward a guaranteed income. He also feels that the states estimate of how many working poor will qualify under this program has been greatly underestimated. He told my office—

There are a lot of unanswered questions about this program. I think the total costs are going to be a lot higher than the estimates.

New York’s Deputy Commissioner of Public Welfare, George W. Chesbro, ad-

ressing himself to the work training aspects of the FAP, said that of the total 1,300,000 people on welfare in New York, 8 percent, or 100,000 are employable. Of these 2,000, he said 2,000 are now employed. The other 40,000 are employable, he noted, but are unskilled and could only work at low-paying jobs. Jobs which, I might add, would most likely not be deemed “suitable” under the provisions of the FAP.

Harold Strode, director of social welfare for the State of Nebraska, summed up his feeling about the FAP with a simple—

We don’t know if the state can afford it.

Strode said that he strongly supported the concept of a pilot program on the FAP before national implementation. He advised—

We should look at what happened to Medicare.

As for the idea for getting people off welfare roles and onto payrolls, Strode said that the PAP requires registration for employment and a change of status that will mean job displacement for a large number of people on welfare. The PAP requires registration for employment and a change of status that will mean job displacement for a large number of people on welfare.

Texas commissioner of social welfare, Burton Hackney, was very outspoken in his criticism of the FAP.

We were told the PAP could save Texas $75 million, but our figures now indicate that it would cost the state an additional $18 million. We are not going to kid ourselves about opening up the welfare roles to other categories. Nobody knows the effect the adding of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare rolls will have on the size of the working poor to the welfare roles will have. Our real concern is how to evaluate the costs of putting these people on welfare.

On work incentives and how the WIN program works, Mr. White said—

We can’t brag about our success. It did not take off as well as it could have, even though we had some success.

Again the medical care issue was raised when White said—

When other states put the medically indigent on the government programs . . . many problems were caused because of unsound financing. Our concern is that this does not happen under the FAP.

Assistant to the director of public welfare in Missouri, John Plet, voiced similar criticisms and raised similar questions: reservations about who administers the program, how medical care figures in the FAP and what happens to the migration from the countryside to the city. The bill has helped turn our inner cities into teeming slums. It has helped breed the crime, the dope addiction, the street rebellions now making headlines—and the United States.

Another problem in our welfare system—perhaps the greatest problem of all—is its tendency to discourage work.

Even the most piddling earned income disqualifies most people from receiving welfare payments. As a result, many of the poor shun jobs.

Why, a young man might ask, should I wash dishes for $6.00 a week when I can get $20 for doing nothing?

The Congress can show him why today.

The bill now before us promises to clear away most of the problems now holding our welfare system. First, the bill would set national minimum standards for welfare payments—standards that would give all welfare recipients a comparable living standard and stop the migration into our cities.

Second, the bill would encourage work by allowing poor families a sliding scale of welfare benefits as their earned income increases or decreases. It would always pay—and pay relatively well—to have a job.

Third, the bill would literally compel people on welfare to take jobs or job training.

This legislation is much more than just another welfare bill.

It is a work bill, and it is high time the Congress passed it.

Mr. MILLIS. Mr. Chairman, would the Chair be kind enough to advise at this point as to the time remaining for both sides of the general debate?

The CHAIRMAN. The majority has remaining 1 hour and 25 minutes. There is remaining 1 hour and 45 minutes for the minority.

Mr. MILLIS. Together that is as much as 3 hours or more.
The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises the gentleman from Arkansas that there is a total of 3 hours and 15 minutes remaining.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, in view of that fact, it is quite evident to me that we will not be able to complete all general debate and have a vote on the bill on final passage as early tomorrow afternoon as I had hoped to be the case. I had told many Members that I was hopeful we could have the vote by not later than 2 o'clock. However, it now looks as if it might be later than that. We do not intend to use any further time this afternoon.

Mr. Chairman, in view of these circumstances, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Albert) having assumed the chair, Mr. Dingell, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 16311) to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and training to improve the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.
(Mr. FOREMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.)
Mr. FOREMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have some very serious reservations about H.R. 16311, the guaranteed annual wage welfare program. Admittedly, the present welfare program is costly and inequitable—but, however, I believe this bill would move the welfare rolls and what was formerly known as the Federal-State public assistance program, and other purposes. The motion was agreed to.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The bill was considered, and the Amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 16311) to authorize a family assistance plan providing basic benefits to low-income families with children, to provide incentives for employment and self-reliance, to increase the capacity for employment of members of such families, to achieve greater uniformity of treatment of recipients under the Federal-State public assistance programs and to otherwise improve such programs, and for other purposes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to appeal to the distinguished gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. GRIFFITHS), a member of the committee.

Mrs. GRIFFITHS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the President's bill on welfare.

I feel that it is an amendment that is long overdue. I would like for you to look at it for just a moment from a different view than others have taken.

At the present time, one of the heaviest burdens that rests upon your State or your city has been placed there by the Federal Government—and it is the burden of welfare. This is the thing that is destroying most of America's cities. As that tax burden on property becomes heavier and heavier to pay these welfare costs, more and more people move out of the city and more businesses move out. If there were no other reason for voting for this bill, the proper reason for voting for it would be that we do not rest upon the property in cities or in States, but it should be paid for by the Federal Government out of the General Treasury of the United States.

This is a burden of every person, not merely the burden of those who live in a specific area. The Federal Government is in the best position to pay and the Federal Government should pay.

I will admit that under this bill they will not pay the full bill, but I am sure the day will come when this burden will be taken off the taxpayers in the various States as a State tax and placed where it properly belongs.

I would like to take away some of the things that I think are wrong with the bill and that I think should be corrected and I am sure will be corrected.

In the first place, this bill pays only if you have a child. I think that is a mistake. I think that the poor, the single poor woman should be paid also. I think it is an error to pay only if there is a child. But I am sure this problem will be taken up in later Congresses and corrected. I think additionally it is a mistake to think a woman can stay at home as long as she has a child under 6. I do not believe the society gives her a choice. I think the social workers make that choice. I think this was proved in the WIN program in New York City, where they found that few women were able to go out and work, and at the end of the year I believe they had trained 106 women. I think the social workers make that choice. I think most of these women want to work and they can work and they are anxious to do so. But they have to be given an opportunity to work.

I would like to explain another amendment that I offered to this bill which was not accepted. I hope that amendment to you and I placed in the bill over in the Senate. I feel that a teenage girl who becomes pregnant should be required to continue in school after the birth of the child, or should be given further training.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to appeal to the distinguished gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) had 1 hour and 25 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) had 1 hour and 48 minutes remaining.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS).

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to appeal to the distinguished gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. GRIFFITHS), a member of the committee.

Mrs. GRIFFITHS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the President's bill on welfare.

If there were no other reason for voting for this bill, the proper reason for voting for it would be that we do not rest upon the property in cities or in States, but it should be paid for by the Federal Government out of the General Treasury of the United States.

This is a burden of every person, not merely the burden of those who live in a specific area. The Federal Government is in the best position to pay and the Federal Government should pay.

I will admit that under this bill they will not pay the full bill, but I am sure the day will come when this burden will be taken off the taxpayers in the various States as a State tax and placed where it properly belongs.

I would like to take away some of the things that I think are wrong with the bill and that I think should be corrected and I am sure will be corrected.

In the first place, this bill pays only if you have a child. I think that is a mistake. I think that the poor, the single poor woman should be paid also. I think it is an error to pay only if there is a child. But I am sure this problem will be taken up in later Congresses and corrected. I think additionally it is a mistake to think a woman can stay at home as long as she has a child under 6. I do not believe the society gives her a choice. I think the social workers make that choice. I think this was proved in the WIN program in New York City, where they found that few women were able to go out and work, and at the end of the year I believe they had trained 106 women. I think the social workers make that choice. I think most of these women want to work and they can work and they are anxious to do so. But they have to be given an opportunity to work.

I would like to explain another amendment that I offered to this bill which was not accepted. I hope that amendment to you and I placed in the bill over in the Senate. I feel that a teenage girl who becomes pregnant should be required to continue in school after the birth of the child, or should be given further training.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to appeal to the distinguished gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) had 1 hour and 25 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) had 1 hour and 48 minutes remaining.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS).

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to appeal to the distinguished gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. GRIFFITHS), a member of the committee.

Mrs. GRIFFITHS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the President's bill on welfare.

I feel that it is an amendment that is long overdue. I would like for you to look at it for just a moment from a different view than others have taken.

At the present time, one of the heaviest burdens that rests upon your State or your city has been placed there by the Federal Government—and it is the burden of welfare. This is the thing that is destroying most of America's cities. As that tax burden on property becomes heavier and heavier to pay these welfare costs, more and more people move out of the city and more businesses move out. If there were no other reason for voting for this bill, the proper reason for voting for it would be that we do not rest upon the property in cities or in States, but it should be paid for by the Federal Government out of the General Treasury of the United States.

I do not agree with her premise that the Federal Government is in better shape to solve all the problems of the States and local subdivisions of government. I cannot recall when the the Federal Government last had a balanced budget. It has been running deficits as high as $20 billion, and the Federal debt has increased until it now approaches $385 billion. No, I cannot subscribe to the theory that the Federal Government is in better shape to take care of the problems of the entire body politic. I dispute the entire welfare system of this country.

I regret the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS), the sponsor of this bill, is not here because I wanted to address a question or two to him.

In the first place, I am getting all kinds of figures as to the real cost of this bill. Some say it is $4,400,000,000 more than is already on welfare. I wonder if the gentleman from Wisconsin could help me with this. I have talked with other Ways and Means Committee members and they have given me other figures, running to much higher totals than $4 1/2 billion. I would appreciate it if the gentleman could tell us what this bill would cost in addition to what we are now spending for welfare.

I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will refer to the committee report, on page 53, he will see that we included a table projecting Federal costs for the first year of operation. For that year, 1971, the basic payments of $1,600 per family, plus the 30 percent matching of State supplements, would total $4.6 billion.

Existing legislation—that is, the Federal share of AFDC—would call for a cost that year of $2.5 billion. So the additional cost, as far as that aspect of the program is concerned, is the difference between $4.6 and $2.5 billion, or $2.1 billion. That is the difference between $2.8 billion for the first year under the present program and of the proposed legislation beyond 1971. Those figures are also shown in the table on page 53, and it is noteworthy that by 1975, according to these projections, the cost difference between this bill and the current program would drop from $2.8 billion to $1.1 billion. And that added sum would be recapedtured, hopefully, as more and more welfare recipients turn from welfare rolls to payrolls.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield briefly to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I should like to say that the total additional cost of the so-called guarantee is bidden further by the calculation at this time, because there is going to be a new department set up in HEW to handle the administration of this plan. Today, no one knows how many people are going to be needed to staff that new department.

In addition to that, this bill provides for the recovery of any money fraudulently collected from the Government. In my opinion this is going to mean almost a doubling of the size of our present Justice Department.

Mr. GROSS. Does the gentleman have a total figure for that?

Mr. WILLIAMS. No. In spite of my efforts to get some concrete figures on the amount of personnel which will be necessary to administer this law, I have been unable to get any figures.

Mr. GROSS. I thank both the gentlemen for their remarks. The gentleman from Pennsylvania points out the utter uncertainty as to cost.

Mr. COLE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me on that particular subject?

Mr. GROSS. I am always pleased to yield to my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. I asked the gentleman to yield not because I have any expertise on the matter, or any accurate figures. I tried to listen to the testimony of the various advocates as well as the opponents of this proposal before the Committee on Rules. I can safely say that there was no testimony which placed the additional cost of this program over the present program at less than $4.5 billion. Some of the estimates ran much higher.

There was a general consensus that the minimum was $4.5 billion and that it was almost impossible to get any accurate figures.

Mr. GROSS. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee for that contribution, because that is the minimal figure which was given here yesterday. Yet, of course, the cost of this bill may well be above $6 billion. I am just trying to get some kind of firm answer and again I am disappointed that the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee is absent. As the sponsor of this socialist legislation, he should be able to provide specific cost figures as well as inform the House where the revenue is to be obtained to meet the spending—actual and additional billions. Now, the chairman of the committee (Mr. MILLS) has been widely quoted in the newspapers as saying that if the base of $1,600 is increased in the other body he will divorce himself from support of the bill. I wish he had remained on the floor so that I might ascertain whether this is correct.

I address a question to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNE5) as to whether he is going to go to the other body, if this bill passes, and agree to an increase in the base figure of $1.600.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GROSS. Yes. I gladly yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The chairman of the committee and I agreed, not very happily between ourselves, but publicly there was an announcement that the Ways and Means Committee had to go to this reorganization of welfare Is overdue. Yet, neither President Nixon nor the Ways and Means Committee Is absent. As the chairman of this bill and the current program would permit the Senate to write tax legislation by inserting in the excise bill a 10-percent surtax. As Members of the House well know the Senate initiated that surtax legislation and the House conferences accepted it. But even at $1,600, the door to guaranteed annual income and full blown socialism has been opened.

Mr. Chairman, passage of this legislation would put a premium on the production of more illegitimate children and would also encourage indolence on the part of those who have no desire to work. And the added billions of cost will mean either higher taxes or more borrowing, more debt, deficit, and inflation.

I cannot support this legislation in its present form even though I agree that reorganization of welfare is overdue. Neither President Nixon nor the Ways and Means Committee had to go to this length to attain the result of reorganization and coordination.
Mr. FULTON of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BURLESON).

Mr. BURLESON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, there have been some very able speeches made on this subject today and yesterday. Our able and distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) were very convincing in presenting the case for the measure before us.

This whole proposal is convincing in theory. It sounds so good on the surface. But I remember in 1962 and in 1967 what happened. As a matter of fact, looking at child welfare, it started in 1935. This is no new program. However, in 1962 and 1967 the able chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the gentleman from Wisconsin, the ranking minority member, just like the vast majority of you, sold me on it and I voted for it on the proposition that "You are going to take people off of the welfare rolls and put them on the payrolls."

And here we are again today with the same slogans and cliches. You know, incidentally there is a remarkable thing about this whole business. If this had been proposed during the Kennedy administration, there would have been holes in the top of this ceiling right over here on the Republican side of the aisle. You know that as well as I do.

Now, several have inquired as to the cost of this program. Why, I say to you, there is nobody who can tell you the cost of it. We are going to be back in here before too long to ask you to raise the deficit. We have any budget deficit in the Federal Government, we are going to be back here asking you to raise taxes. And people just got through paying them last night. There is no one who can tell you the cost of this program. The Johnson administration, there would have been holes in the top of this ceiling right over here on the Republican side of the aisle. You know that as well as I do.

fresher. But after over 8 years as a judge of the domestic relations court and juvenile court, and based on my personal experience, it is my opinion that you may well have a family split and a claim of part of the children both ways. There is no provision to keep these people to see that they, after they have established this basis of living separately, do not move back into the same house, stay under the same roof, sleep in the same bed as husband and wife—because they do not have to be divorced—and how do we police this? How do we guard against it, and what makes it certain that it will not come about under the provisions of this bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Alabama. I do so for the purpose of asking the gentleman from his experience if he has not found that one of the real problems that we have had is the lack of enforcement of responsibility on the parents toward the support of their children?

Mr. Chairman, I yield absolutely.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. And does not the gentleman think that we have made a good step forward where we impose a subrogation, in the sense that the Federal Government is able to go against an individual for any funds that Uncle Sam has paid out in his regard?

Mr. DICKINSON. I would say to the gentleman that I think it is fine in the one instance of working under the Uniform Reciprocal Support Act.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. That is why we made it a Federal offense, because the Reciprocal State Act, as the gentleman well knows, depends on one State getting the permission of another State, whereas in this case a Federal agent moves in, and there is no need of getting permission from a State.

Who is the Federal agent who is going to move in? That is what I do not understand as to how this can be enforceable. Do we have a cadre, a police group that goes around enforcing this, or does each agency have so many agents and investigators?

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. The Federal Government will put the responsibility, as far as turning over these cases is concerned, up to the proper prosecutors, which would be Federal, and to the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, which has paid out the money. Say you have some money that you paid out. You want it back in behalf of Mr. Jones for his children. You find Mr. Jones and prosecute him.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 additional minute to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. Chairman, let me also call the attention of the gentleman from Alabama to this idea of splitting up. If the family wants to live together, then there is a responsibility on the part of the father to register. We do not insist that they be registered.

Now there are some critics who say that both the husband and wife should be required to register. That is not required in this particular case where the two are living about. But once they separate, once they start two different households, then the male living in one household has to register, and the woman living in the other household has to register. And they must do more than register—they have to take jobs, so they will both go to work under this circumstance, and maybe we would save money in the long run if we had both people who are working in the family of 4 group. If he has no children at all or just has a wife or it is the case of a wife with a child, they would receive—that wife with a child—would receive $160 above the minimum wage.

However, carrying that through—the four examples that I personally got this morning from the four girls who clean offices—the smallest family in that group was six and the largest was nine. In a family of nine, in addition to that girl's pay, it would amount to an added $2,560 of $5,280 total pay.

How can I, as chairman of the Committee on Minimum Wage, attempt to make a judgment, really, of sensible and reasonable minimum wage bill, not considering a man working full time under a positive pay plan, without considering his family?

You are now at this time, at this stage of our history, and I want it clearly understood, I hope you know what you are doing, and it may be the right thing to do. I have the greatest faith in the home, and the greatest desire to vote for a tax increase, then do not vote for this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FULTON of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Dreyfus).

Mr. DENT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. DENT. Mr. Chairman, I voted against the rule.

Last night I tried to read what I could on this legislation and I made a decision that I wanted to make. But this being the kind of legislation—and I want to vote for some kind of legislation dealing with problems in this important area, I decided that if there is a vote that will send it back to the committee meaningfully so that we can have an opportunity to look at it, I am going to vote for that motion.

Failing in that, then I am going to vote for the bill on final passage in the hope that I will get another look at it and get an opportunity to present my views to the Senate.

First of all, the view that I take of this is that it steps into an area that I am not so sure the Committee on Ways and Means has the expertise to discuss and present to the House, without some consideration being given to what they are doing. We are doing more than this. We are adding 13 million Americans at a rate of yearly minimum wages—I mean a rate of minimum pay wage that is above anything that we ever tried to put through this Congress. And I hope they do.

There are in America today about 13 million Americans who are not covered by the minimum wage law. Automatically—and I studied this all night, I am as positive about the fact that I am standing up here—automatically will be put under annual wages, out of a single person, one not without a family. You are putting over 13 million Americans at a rate of yearly minimum wages—I mean a rate of minimum pay wage that is above anything that we ever tried to put through this Congress. And I hope they do.
can function in dealing with the minimum wage will be in that area of income for an individual or a man and wife living together. It is my feeling that a program based upon the premise that more manpower training is going to create more jobs. Let me tell all of you right now that what most of us do not understand is that the greater cost of the number of persons on permanent relief in this country are unemployable persons. Studies reveal, if you will look into the matter, that the average work year in America encompasses 210 days of work, and that many of these people with large enough children who are making as much as $2.40 an hour will find themselves drawing a supplement.

Do you know that the average wage, under contract, of textile workers in America is $2.40 an hour? Do you know that the average wage of the clothing workers and garment workers is only 25 to 50 cents above the minimum wage? You will be looking for the first time in the history of our Nation a new base for the payment of labor, and I remind you of the warning given many years ago that when you get into this type of legislation, keep in mind that the minimum becomes the maximum. The maximum becomes the minimum. I just came back from Mexico. I went down there to spend 2 days on my own to look into the Prowess Territory. Fifty thousand people moved over into our territory in 2 years and 7 months. There were no training programs, and every one of those industries will tell you that in the United States, if they do not have manpower training programs, they have no jobs for these people. In Mexico they take raw labor and put them to work. They have moved across the necessary production machinery, the same production machinery we have in the United States, into the Prowess Territory of Mexico, where they are paying $3 a day in the same classified jobs in electronics served $3 in the United States. Why? To look long at this bill, because the error of the 1970's is going to be the critical error in our lifetimes. The critical decade in our lifetimes will be the 1970's when the question will be decided as to whether we survive as a free-enterprise system or not. Unless I am miserably mistaken, what we are doing is to establish the base for the deterioration of the kind of free labor and free-enterprise system in which labor and management have bared their teeth together. We are subsidizing industry the same as we subsidize agriculture. We have no indication that this will get out from under that, and we will never be able to get out from under this load, because if any person who has just been given a job can get $3,000 as a minimum wage and $2,600 as a Government subsidy, the employer does not pay the subsidy.

I tell you that when you are working alongside a man, doing exactly the same job for $5 he is doing and he receives only $3,000, and you receive $5,600 he does not want to know or care how many children you have. He has been brought up in an economy where you get paid for what you do, not for how many children you have. What is the use of talking about easier abortion laws; what is the use of talking about pills? What is the reason of cutting down the birth rate when we are introducing a program that would increase the birth rate? I do not know where to go. I do not know where to turn. Do I vote against poverty people on the floor? I do not see and hope for a chance to correct the inequities in the Senate.

This I do know: I am a troubled Member of this Congress this day. We have not had a chance to offer amendments because of the closed rule. There is not any sound reason for this, because we are not going to remove people from welfare, because in this country today we still have millions of persons who are not earning this money. We have close to 13 million Americans we have tried since 1938 to put under the minimum wage law.

In the last instance, when the bill came before me, we had reached the $1.60 an hour, but we had to reach it in a 3-year stretch—and in a 4-year stretch for some classifications. Why did we move in the area of minimum wages on the classified jobs? Because we followed the historical lines of a free enterprise society, and we paid for the job that is done. We did not pay for the number of children people had. If this becomes the cornerstone of our society as we are in this room today in this great Congress of ours, that the minimum will become the maximum.

Mr. BYRNE. Mr. Chairman, I rise with some reluctance today on this legislation.

Of course, I am not a member of the Ways and Means Committee. However, I do feel that it is important to look at this bill that apparently is classified as an administration bill. I think when the ultimate vote comes, there will be a cross section and quite a change in the thinking of a number of our colleagues, and I do not think we will find any particular coalition supporting or opposing the legislation.

When this originally was proposed a number of months ago, I visited administration offices to try to analyze just exactly what was coming off. I bow to my colleagues who have misgivings about much that is in this bill. Mr. DEVINE, Mr. Chairman, I rise with some reluctance today on this legislation.

man have any figures on the cost? I cannot anybody to tell me that.
Mr. DEVINE. I would say to the gentleman from Ohio, so far as the cost is concerned, the estimated cost I have seen for the first year, trying to make a study of this program, is an additional $4.4 billion a year.
Mr. HAYS. I wonder if they are as far wrong on that as they were on Medicare, on which they just estimated the cost exactly at 30 percent of what the real cost was. If that should be true, the $4 billion would be more like $14 billion, would it not?
Mr. DEVINE. It certainly would. I agree with the gentleman. I have the same misgivings about the estimated cost on this program. It probably would be much higher than anticipated.
Mr. HAYS. I thank the gentleman.
That is the first time I have been able to get anybody to tell me what they are thinking about the cost.
Mr. DEVINE. I would hope that the members of the Committee on Ways and Means, who have made a deep study of this, would come up with some accurate figures.
Another gentleman from Ohio, Mr. Ashbrook, worked with the minority counsel of the Ways and Means Committee in an effort to come up with a legislative estimate of the cost on this. He gave an example of a family of four with a certain income, a certain amount of money each week. They worked at great length and were unable to come up with a figure that they could agree upon.

In talking of work incentives, I would invite attention to an article which appeared March 21, 1970, in The Scripps-Howard newspaper, talking about the work-incentive program. This particular release, under the name of Robert J.
Havel, out of the Plain Dealer Bureau, Cleveland, with a Washington dateline, says:

The U.S. Department of Labor considers Ohio's work-incentive program a recipient's a flop and is unlikely to provide any money for the program in fiscal 1971.
The program, conducted in 20 Ohio counties, which Gov. James A. Rhodes recently praised as helping to get people off the welfare rolls and onto pay-rolls.
The national program, referred to as WIN, is designed primarily to train welfare mothers for such jobs as nurse's aides and clerks.

It goes on further:

This is basically the same program as President Nixon's "workfare" in his new welfare plan, on which the House will act soon.

That is what we are talking about today.
Mr. BETTS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. DEVINE. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio.
Mr. BETTS. I should like to make one to the gentleman. He is one of my close friends. I do not like to contradict him, but I just want to make sure the statement he made is compared with the statement I read yesterday quoting Governor Rhodes, in which he praised the program in Ohio. He stated how many had been taken off the rolls, and that the WIN program had reduced the expense of welfare in Ohio over $200,000

a month.

I just wonder whether that is not as important a consideration as the statement of some Federal official as to how he looks at it.
Mr. DEVINE. What is important is that I am merely quoting an article which appeared in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

One of the things which concerns me further is the auction game we are geting into with this legislation. I do not know what sort of brick wall a floor is, but they are talking about a floor of $1,600. In the next election year it will be $2,600 or $2,500. Already some are talking about $5,000. Each year they will bid higher and higher. Where will it end, and will it get regulated?

The senior Senator from New York spoke in the other body yesterday. I would invite the attention of our colleagues to the RECORD for April 15, published today, page S7535, in which he says:

I shall propose an amendment exempting mothers of school-age children and other relatives with whom such children from the work and training requirements of the bill.

Then in another part he says:

As I request co sponsorship for this amendment in the coming days, I hope that many of the House members will join with us, whether or not they support the family assistance plan, to indicate their strong opposition to the inclusion of any such work requirement in the current welfare-reform legislation which will be acted upon by the Congress this year.

So if and when this matter leaves here and goes to the other body, I do not believe you will get an agreement. This floor will become the ceiling and the ceiling will become the floor, and the $1,600 figure will be in the area of $5,000 or $6,000.

We will be in a category where I am re- minded of the $2,000 a month. It was just talking about helping people. He said,
"You know, if everybody climbs in the wagon, who is going to pull it?" If we get over 10 or 12 percent of the population on welfare, do you think anyone of us will be able to pick up the load? It is a dangerous step and I think the House ought to defeat this legislation. I am opposed to it, and will vote against it, and assume that the Nation will regret the day this philosophy was adopted, if the House does indeed, pass this unworkable legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio expired.
Mr. FULTON of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to a member of the committee, the gentleman from Caliifornia (Mr. Corman).
(Mr. CORMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CORMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act.

Our chairman, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills), has explained in great detail the reforms which this bill will bring about. I would like to underline three which are of particular importance.
First, it is the work incentive provision
This bill will require recipients who have the ability to work to register for training and employment as a condition to receiving benefits. I would not overstate the importance of this provision because I am convinced that almost every American wants to work, and the mandatory nature of this provision is not going to significantly change that situation.

Another incentive I have to do with that portion of one's earned income which a recipient will be permitted to keep. Under the present program, a mother who goes to work may be in danger of losing her assistance payment. While at work, she has the additional disadvantage of not knowing how her children are faring without her. The reform bill will assure that her children are being cared for while she is at work, and will permit her to keep a reasonable share of her earnings, in addition to her assistance payment.

The second and certainly the most important part of this bill, as far as the state of California is concerned, is that a substantial increase in the share of welfare costs will be borne by the Federal Government. For California, this will amount to about $200 million in the first full year of the implementation of the act, assuming that the State will take advantage of the Federal Government's offer to administer the program. It would then be possible for the State to take advantage of the Federal offer to care for the children of welfare recipients, thereby completely relieving the states of this financial burden.

Such a step would permit welfare costs to be shifted to the broader State and Federal tax base, leaving the State tax base free to bear the cost of educational and other municipal requirements.

The third important reform is the establissement of a Federal minimum payment. Let us take a look at this Federal minimum. Is it really dangerously high?
For a family of four without income, the minimum is $2,400 a year; $1,600 in cash and $800 in kind. It just happens that I support a family of four and it also happens that my take-home pay is approximately $2,400 a month. I assume each of us is generally in that category. If you choose to like to know the adequacy of this minimum payment, that, take next month's paycheck home to your wife and tell her she must support your family on it for a year. I believe that will convince you that it is not excessive.

I have been surprised to hear some of my colleagues worry about the willingness of Americans to work if we remove the incentive of hunger. I believe that the proposition that a man works only if he is hungry. The fact of the matter is that the state of hunger underlays every mental and physical capacity to work. I believe that Americans are inspired to seek work for many more reasons than just the need of food. I think that we have come a long way from that rather primitive notion of why people work.

Finally, a number of Members have been critical of the Ways and Means Committee because we cannot tell the effect of an increase in this program.
I would have to say to you that If you can tell me how many people in the Nation will be unemployed in the next year, and the next, and the next, then I can give you a reasonably accurate figure as to the cost of this program. For instance, if we have full employment—if everyone who has the ability has the opportunity for a job—then the cost of the program will be relatively low. And, we will then be taking care only of the aged, the blind, the physically disabled, and orphaned children whose parents are dead or in prison or for some other reason are not capable of taking care of them. But, if the present trend continues and unemployment increases, and we find millions of Americans willing and eager to work but unable to find jobs, then the cost of this program will be substantial.

We do not report to you that this bill will solve the Nation's economic ills. We do say that it will, in a modest way, provide some decent living standard for those who because of economic circumstances find themselves in dire straits. Let us alter the present system. What happened after 1929? Americans, unable to work, stood in soup lines. Children begged or stole for food. Families were made homeless because they were unable to pay rent, or because the homes or landlords were unable to pay rent. This country is not going back to those conditions and practices.

There are lots of things that need to be done in this country. We need more and better schools; more and better medical care. We need to end pollution of our streams and air. Programs such as those and many more like them—create jobs, and jobs cut down the cost of welfare.

But, we are not authorizing such programs in this bill. All we are saying in this bill is that if there are jobs, then needy people who qualify under the bill's provisions, must be trained for jobs and required to take them. If they have the physical and mental ability to do that, then the majority of them, the people, they will be given enough to keep body and soul together. If jobs are not available, neither will they have to starve or steal.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 16311.

Mr. KAZEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CORMAN. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. KAZEN. I agree with some of the things which the gentleman from California has said.

Mr. CORMAN. I hope the gentleman, then, will support the bill.

Mr. KAZEN. However, the point is, with reference to this bill, that it is not going to create jobs. I come from an area where the unemployment rate is 10 percent. The gentleman talks about a 4- or 5-percent unemployment rate. I have an 11-percent unemployment rate in some parts of the district. The reason for that is the fact that there are no jobs available. We have trained people for all kinds of work under the various programs that now exist but when all of the training was over, they did not have a job at which to work.

What in the world are we going to do with that problem?

Mr. CORMAN. There is provision in this bill for public works projects where we can federally fund certain projects in areas such as the gentleman has described, on the condition that the program in that area will enable some of these people to become ultimately employed in the private sector. It is in a sense a small WPA. True, it is only short-term, but again we cannot take care of all the economic ills of the Nation in any welfare assistance bill. This must be taken care of under the private enterprise system and other fiscal decisions which we must make.

Mr. KAZEN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, the thing that worries at least this gentleman is the fact that here we are discussing guaranteeing a minimum annual income while I think what we ought to direct ourselves to is a more pressing need—that of guaranteeing a job for those able to work before we guarantee any income not required.

Mr. CORMAN. I will say to the gentleman that there is a legitimate case which can be made for the Federal Government becoming an employer of last resort. However, I have not heard any things about that, but if unemployment continues to rise, we may find it necessary.

Mr. BETTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COLLIER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, over the past two decades, I can think of no single domestic program in this country which has been more consistently or bitterly criticized than the welfare system. The criticism of our welfare system has come from a spectrum ranging from the man on the street to the legislative and executive leaders in the country. The present system has been called deplorable, unfair, parasitic, and intolerable. I have never refuted these criticisms because they properly describe the present welfare system, which is unfair and is deplorable and is intolerable. In fact, the present system breeds irresponsibility that feeds on itself.

I have also heard many of the ardent critics of the present welfare system say, "We ought to help people who are willing to help themselves." I have heard them say, "We ought to help people help themselves." And I wholeheartedly agree. But in listening to these same critics attack the very welfare system we support today, I find them strangely inconsistent. I had hoped that there would be strong support to get rid of the present welfare system and replace it with one that conforms to the lip service reform over the years. Yet I do not find a single item of legislation introduced by those who have attacked the present system, and are now making a career out of criticizing the one which is proposed in this legislation.

If the present welfare system is so deplorable and if the proposed legislation is unacceptable, it is only logical to ask why those who find themselves in this position have not done something about offering a constructive alternative.

Yet throughout the hearings on this bill, no one came forward with anything that seemed a reasonable basis which the people were opposed to this bill, that we are providing a structure upon which improvements can be made through the process of revision and amendment. If it is necessary to provide more stringent enforcement of the work provisions, it is the responsibility of Congress to do so. And I happen to think the Congress will do so if it looks at the record of the manpower programs and the training provisions with the welfare payments and correct the gross inequities in the existing program.

I urge every Member of this House to give welfare reform a chance. To do anything less is to accept the present program, with all of its present shortcomings, and its inevitable social doom.

Mr. FULTON of Tennessee. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. SCHEUER).

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to praise the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means for his admirable leadership in preparing the forward-looking bill indeed, the precedent-shattering bill we are considering today—and for the excellent committee report on that bill.

The report of the committee regrettably that many manpower programs in the past “often emphasized work at the expense of meaningful training that would lead to the family leaving the public assistance rolls.”

Of course, that is a major goal of this bill—to enable people to acquire the education and job training to become employed, financially independent, and self-sufficient.

Section 431 (c) (2) of H.R. 16311, evidently a suggestion how to rectify those mistakes, mentions the following services for the trainees in manpower training and employment programs: “counseling, testing, coaching, program orientation, institutional and on-the-job training, work experience, upgrading, job development, job placement and follow-up services required to assist in securing and retaining employment and opportunities for advancement.”

Mr. Chairman, am I right in understanding these sections as endorsements of grants or contributions to the broader adoption of new methods of structuring jobs and of providing career-ladder opportunities?

Mr. MILLIS. Upgrading the skills of the workforce poor is an important part of the proposal, and it is a very important part.

Mr. SCHEUER. I thank the distinguished chairman.

Mr. Chairman, section 433 of H.R. 16311 states that the Secretary of Labor should try to “further the establishment of an integrated and comprehensive manpower program throughout all sectors of the economy and at all levels of government” and to “make maximum use of existing manpower related programs and agencies.”

Mr. Chairman, will the jobs encompassed under these programs include those designed to improve the social and economic conditions of the community by upgrading the quality of the public services in health, education, welfare, and public safety?

Mr. MILLIS. Yes; I might say to the gentleman there are a part of an established training program.

Mr. SCHEUER. Mr. Chairman, the committee report for H.R. 16311 states:

By requiring that the prime grantees demonstrate a capacity to work effectively with the manpower agency, the Committee believes that a great degree of coordination of manpower and child care services can be achieved than has been the case in previous programs.

Would this improved coordination of manpower and child care services include the use of the children’s parents as aides and for some of them—in time and after the proper training—as professionals at the child care centers?

Mr. MILLIS. I think it is intended.

Mr. SCHEUER. The distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, in my view, is to be congratulated for encouraging relief recipients to become economically independent. Recently the Washington Post had an article on the city welfare department’s decision to cut off the welfare of an unwed welfare mother in her last semester of high school.

I assume that the distinguished chairman would favor helping a relief recipient to complete high school since, demonstrably, such education and high school degree is so necessary to help her get a good job or to establish financial independence for herself and her children. Would that be a fair statement of the intent of the House?

Mr. MILLIS. The answer would depend upon the individual case. As I said earlier, this bill is not intended to support students primarily, but if a person is close to completing her education, it could be determined by the Employment Security Office that completing education is appropriate training.

Mr. SCHEUER. I very much appreciate the chairman’s answer. I appreciate his candor in answering all of these questions. I wish to express my admiration for the great job the committee has done during untold months of hearings and in producing a bill and a committee report that in many respects is one of the most far-reaching, imaginative, and creative pieces of legislation we have considered in many years.

(Mr. SCHEUER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BETTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WILLIAMS).

(Mr. WILLIAMS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, the proposed Family Assistance Act of 1970—H.R. 16311—would prove a dreadful hoax on the American people.

This so-called “family assistance program” would immediately add a minimum of $4.4 billion to Federal welfare costs, and would place additional millions of people on welfare rolls. The only welfare program that FAP would phase out would leave those with dependent children, on which the Federal Government now spends $2.1 billion per year.

Past experience has proved that whenever a new welfare program is created for the purpose of solving a problem, that problem is only accentuated and its cost escalated. Be assured that FAP will be no exception.

The Federal share of FAP for each family would be based on an annual $500, each, for the first two members of a family, plus $300 for each additional family member with the States required to supplement the massive Federal payment.

Obviously, it would only be a matter of time until FAP—guaranteed payments would be increased in response to well-established pressures by self-seeking officials, liberal social theorists, and hard-core professional welfareites.

The bill for FAP would be in the fact that eight types of income would be excluded from consideration before FAP payments would be determined. Since each family’s payments would have to be based on what “family income,” (exclusive of employment with income earned), a virtual army of investigators and accountants would be needed for this operation alone.

FAP would require recipients to register for suitable employment and FAP payments would be determined. But FAP would conveniently exclude five classes of people from that same registration. Further, it would provide no spelling out the definition of pre-existing conditions. Consequently, employment would really be. Nor would FAP spell out any procedure that might be applied to those who accept jobs but purposefully fail to perform properly in order to remain eligible for FAP payments.

FAP would provide for recovery of any funds fraudulently collected from the Federal Government, with enforcement resting with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare—administered FAP’s provisions. This new agency would have to employ thousands of workers who have deserted their families, and with thousands of unenforced court orders already out on fathers in behalf of dependent children, it would require a doubling of the size of the Department of Justice to enforce FAP’s recovery of fraudulent collection provision.

FAP would provide that a new agency be established within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to administer FAP’s provisions. This new agency would have to employ thousands of people and, in short order, could, in fact, actually result in doubling the present size of HEW, itself.

An abundant history makes it perfectly obvious that this so-called family assistance program would prove to be nothing more than just another gigantic giveaway which would further reward the indolent and the malcontent. This would be accomplished at the expense of those who work and support their families despite the evermore oppressive odds of high taxes borne, in great part, of too many “something for nothing” schemes.

I have also heard in this Chamber this afternoon that the State of Massachusetts is using approximately 25 percent of its budget for welfare purposes and that States and other localities need help. Let me tell Members something. We can go from one section of this country to another, and we would have to look hard to find any State in as poor financial condition as our Federal Government.

Next year alone we are going to have... to refinance over $100 billion in Federal obligations that are going to mature. We are not prepared to pay off one cent of these obligations that are going to mature during fiscal year 1971, which starts July 1, 1970. We are going to be fortunate to be able to refinance this $100 billion in maturing obligations at interest rates as low as 6 percent.

We have reached a point where every 3 years and 8 months we have to refinance our entire national debt, and if we have to refinance our entire national debt of over $350 billion at 8 percent, that is going to be a $30 billion a year annual payment on interest alone.

This will mean on welfare and interest on the national debt we are going to be spending far more than 25 percent of our budget, so as it turns out the States are in much, much better condition than our Federal Government.

Relief of human misery, easement of the present plight, and advancement of equitable opportunity fail in one category—but to elevate and lock in professional welfarism as a part of the so-called American way of life falls into quite another category which the people of this Nation simply could not afford and would not long knowingly tolerate.

Mr. BETTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CHAMBERLAIN).

(Mr. CHAMBERLAIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 16311, a bill providing comprehensive changes in our Federal, State, and local welfare program. Everyone who has studied the present program accepts on one salient fact: that it is deficient in almost every respect.

Our present program has grown dramatically in recent years, both in terms of the individuals covered and total dollar costs. In 1961, the number of families and individual recipients more than doubled—to a total of 1.8 million families and 7 million individuals. During this same period total costs have nearly doubled to the present total of $4.2 billion.

This runaway pattern is expected to continue into the future unless fundamental reforms are made, with the number of recipients nearly doubling again by 1975 and the total costs more than doubling. The immense burden that this program imposes on taxpayers at all levels is almost beyond comprehension. I address ourselves to this chaotic situation rather than turning our heads to look the other way and hope the problem will go away.

The present program discourages work and self-sufficiency by providing a "guaranteed annual income" to individuals who qualify for welfare virtually without regard to their own efforts. In many cases individuals are financially better off on welfare than they are working. By discriminating against the working poor, the present program not only encourages idleness but provides a strong incentive for family disintegration. Only by leaving home can a working poor father qualify his family for benefits under the aid to families with dependent children program.

The bill before the House today will go a long way toward correcting these defects. Instead of an incentive for idleness, the bill will insure that individuals will always be better off if they are working. It does provide a "guaranteed annual income" regardless of an individual's efforts, assistance will be contingent on an individual making every effort to become self-sufficient through work, training, and employment. The incentive for family breakup under present law will be substantially diminished and in many cases eliminated by proving coverage for the working poor.

The emphasis in this new program is to help people care for themselves by developing their potential. This will, of course, cost additional money in the first few years, but it is time that this long-range program and given time it is our hope that it will be less expensive both in human and in dollar costs.

I would like to take this occasion to point out that the bill does create one very serious inequity for working people who will not receive benefits under this bill that, in my opinion, we cannot ignore. One of the reforms in this bill provides day care for small children in order to enable adults who would normally care for them to receive training and employment so that they may become self-sufficient. The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare intends to request $386 million for child care purposes for the first full year of operation. It is estimated that this will provide care for 300,000 school age children at an estimated cost of $400 per child, and for 150,000 preschool children at an estimated cost of $1,600 per child. These day care provisions of the bill are essential to enable working parents to break the cycle of defects. Instead of an incentive for idle-ness does not exceed $6,547—the Secretary has discretion to continue paying child care expenses for another 120 days provided that the parents' income exceeds $6,000. This means that the child care deduction is eliminated when income reaches $6,600 in the case of one child and $6,900 in the case of two children.

Thus, in New Jersey, under the new child care provisions of the bill are essential to enable working parents to break the cycle of defects. Instead of an incentive for idle-ness, the Secretary has discretion to continue paying child care expenses for another 120 days provided that the parents' income exceeds $6,000. This means that the child care deduction is eliminated when income reaches $6,600 in the case of one child and $6,900 in the case of two children.

Mr. Chairman, I am sure that the matter which I have just discussed is not the only problem area that will be discussed as this reform measure is implemented. I well realize that the family assistance plan is not without its critics for I, too, have reservations. However, as we have worked on this bill—week after week—month after month—I have been impressed with the fact that no one seems to have a better plan to suggest. Nor have I heard anyone offer any strong objections to any of the provisions included in the bill as written. I am well aware that we cannot solve our complex welfare problems by any legislative magic, I am satisfied that society's greatest responsibility lies in our approach to our aggregated welfare problems—one which encourages work and
Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I am glad to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would like to call to the attention of the distinguished gentleman from Michigan that in more than half of the States the father does not have to leave the household in order for the family to receive aid under the program of aid to dependent children.

However, I do want to agree with the point which has been made by the gentleman that the AFDC program is a totally insufficient program. It is inadequate and doing nothing but accentuate the problem.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I believe everyone agrees with the gentleman's statement.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I would like to say to the gentleman from Michigan and to the distinguished gentlemen from Colorado (Mr. Colfax) and anyone else who is interested, I stated that I have worked on a substitute plan which I think I have fairly well refined now which would phase out AFDC over a period of time which would produce much, much better results, while this phasing out is being accomplished.

I would welcome the opportunity to talk to the gentleman in his office at any time, that he may consider the matter as this has been under review.

I think anyone who has any constructive suggestion to help us out of the mess we are in right now should come forward. We would be glad to hear from anyone who has a better plan.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Reserve your decision before you may not agree with my plan.

Mr. BETTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield

Mr. HUTCHINSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Chairman, we are all agreed that the present ADC program has been, and that it is now, or soon will be, completely out of hand. It must be replaced. The administration has proposed the bill now before us as a new approach—workfare instead of welfare, it is called. Many of us have grave reservations about this particular approach, but some have been able to resolve those doubts in favor of the legislation, while others have not. These are the doubts so great that in effect science we cannot support it. I propose to state briefly, Mr. Chairman, those questions about the bill which have persuaded me that, much as a new approach is needed, this is not the answer. Indeed, Mr. Chairman; I doubt that the situation will be one whit improved but rather worsened by the enactment of this legislation.

The ADC program will be abolished by this bill, and that is as good, and a family assistance program instituted in its place. But the new program of family assistance does not change much the ADC program as it applies to fatherless homes. So long as there is a child under 6—and there are 10 million of them under 6 in those homes—the mother need not register for employment or take work training in order to obtain the Federal benefit, and the State in which the family is living is not required to supplement the Federal program up to the level of payments that family now receives from ADC. As to that family, therefore, the ADC program continues, in everything but name. And, Mr. Chairman, the vast majority of present ADC cases fall within the category of a family without a man in the house. To all intents and purposes, the proposal in this bill carries forward the workfare ADC program without change. Under the present program an ADC mother is encouraged to take work training and better her lot in life thereby—on a voluntary basis. This bill carries the same suggestion.

As to those cases where there is a man in the house, the bill requires him to register with the employment service, receive their counsel, take their training programs, and accept a job they find for him. But the preferred employment must be suitable work. Now that term, "suitable work," has acquired a meaning in the law. It is a term well understood in unemployment compensation. It means that an unemployed individual need not take a job beneath his skills, but only such employment as he has regularly had in the past. It is argued that in the case of the newly trained individual without work experience this unemployment compensation meaning of suitable work will not apply. I anticipate that it will mean a man is trained for a particular skill, not employment will be deemed suitable for him, even though there may be no need for such employment in his community. I expect that the word "suitable work" will have the same narrow construction in the requirement for employment within the family assistance program as it has had in unemployment compensation.

But if a newly trained individual is put to work within the scope of his new training, there is no compulsion upon him to do his best to keep the job. Suppose he quits, or is fired for cause. What then? Will there be any elimination under the family assistance program continue?

And even if he refuses to work, the only economic penalty upon him is a loss of $300 in family assistance benefits to his family unit. All benefits to other members of his family continue, and if he leaves home, his wife and children can comply with the ADC requirements, with family assistance program supplemented by State grants up to the level now provided.

I doubt this family assistance plan has enough economic inducement within it to achieve that goal of keeping families together.

Mr. Chairman, the legislation we now consider is intended to meet the problem, made infinitely worse by recent Supreme Court decisions outlining residency requirements for welfare assistance which results from a variation of benefits among the States. Some, like Michigan, have become a magnet to those people because of the generosity of their welfare payments. Some way must be found to offset the benefit structures between the States so as to discourage the immigration of welfare cases into some States where the benefits are generous—but so is the cost of living in those States high. The requirement in this bill that those States must supplement the Federal payments on ADC cases to their present levels means the immigration of such cases will likely continue.

A fundamental change in this new approach is to embrace the working poor into the welfare system. I had hoped the solution to our welfare problems would include programs to reduce the dependence of people on welfare, programs that will increase their motivation to go out to work and that will increase that dependence. True, it purports to contain inducements sufficient to persuade large numbers of people to go out and work, but it fails. The ambitious will be so encouraged. But for many if not most, I suspect they will not feel sure enough of themselves to want to completely separate themselves from the security of tax free welfare income, and the welfare system as we now it—but greatly expanded in costs and in numbers—will continue.

Much as I concur, Mr. Chairman, in the sentiment of the voters in the 18th District of Texas, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PRICE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield

Mr. ASHBROOK asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. PRICE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentle

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Chairman, the legislation we now consider is intended to meet the problem, made infinitely worse by recent Supreme Court decisions outlining residency requirements for welfare assistance which results from a variation of benefits among the States. Some, like Michigan, have become a magnet to those people because of the generosity of their welfare payments. Some way must be found to offset the benefit structures between the States so as to discourage the immigration of welfare cases into some States where the benefits are generous—but so is the cost of living in those States high. The requirement in this bill that those States must supplement the Federal payments on ADC cases to their present levels means the immigration of such cases will likely continue.

A fundamental change in this new approach is to embrace the working poor into the welfare system. I had hoped the solution to our welfare problems would include programs to reduce the dependence of people on welfare, programs that will increase their motivation to go out to work and that will increase that dependence. True, it purports to contain inducements sufficient to persuade large numbers of people to go out and work, but it fails. The ambitious will be so encouraged. But for many if not most, I suspect they will not feel sure enough of themselves to want to completely separate themselves from the security of tax free welfare income, and the welfare system as we now it—but greatly expanded in costs and in numbers—will continue.

Much as I concur, Mr. Chairman, in the sentiment of the voters in the 18th District of Texas, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Finally, I have some strong reservations about the merits of the Family Assistance Act as it is presently written. I think the present welfare system is cancerous because it benefits neither the welfare recipient, the recipient who supports the extended family nor society in general which must continue to strive for progress despite the continued drag caused by the sizeable number of individuals who would rather take a Federal relief check than a job!

Our present welfare system has made it more profitable for some people to loaf than to work. In addition to the individual and family problems this directly creates, legislation is forced to propose legislation to its preference; hopefully, without killing the President's basic proposals in the process.

This was not the case, however, with the President's welfare reform proposals. The majority on the House Ways and Means Committee approved the bill almost as it was written by the President. They then went before the Rules Committee in an effort to pervert the bill which was debated under a rule not allowing for the submission of corrective amendments from the House floor.

This is most unusual. A President's proposals usually do not receive such uniform approval from a House committee. This is especially true when the President belongs to a different political party than does the majority of committee members. The majority Members are normally too jealous of their legislative prerogatives and too partisan to bend without challenge to the Presidential will.

The President's comprehensive tax reform program is an excellent example of the tendency to which I am referring. The President submitted his proposals to Congress last May. By the time the House Ways and Means Committee got through rewriting the proposals, their original form was hardly recognizable.

I can think of one good reason why the President's welfare reform proposals were so uniformly approved by the Ways and Means Committee. The legitimate cause of welfare reform has become fatally involved with partisan politics, and liberal members of the majority party want to fabricate a campaign issue for the November elections. They have to make welfare reform proposals appear to be important, or else they will be disregarded them any. He is trying in the best fashion he knows how, to lead the country into a productive and peaceful decade. The other party knows this; but more importantly, the negative parts of the welfare system at any greater lengths, but will turn to a brief explanation of why I do not think the proposed Family Assistance Act solves the Nation's problem.

The act proposes that the Federal Government finance minimum annual welfare payments of $500 for each of the first two members of a family and $300 for each additional member. This means that a family of four, the statistical average American family, would be entitled to $1,600. This amount would be supplemented by State payments so that no family would receive less under the act than it presently receives. Add to this the fact that welfare recipients will be able to obtain $16 worth of federally financed food stamps for every $10 they spend on the stamps, and it works out to an additional $800 or so in welfare benefits. We are really, then talking about $2,400 in guaranteed benefits for each family of four, which is nothing more, and nothing less than a guaranteed annual income. Adding it to income maintenance floor does not change anything but the name by which it is referred to.

I am unalterably opposed to a guaranteed annual income system. I believe it would wreck our incentive system of production, the system that couple with the free enterprise system, has brought the United States to the productive heights it has achieved today. People just would not work, if they could get paid for not working. This is not a blanket indictment, however, for some people would work even if they get something for nothing, it generally would erode their will to work and contribute to society.

Another objection I have to the proposed bill is that it would add about 15 million new individuals to the welfare rolls. In my mind, this would not solve our welfare problem, it would just increase it.

I also object to the $4.4 billion that the program will cost, and this is just for the first year of its operation. I do not believe that this program will work any better than the programs it is intended to replace. I think the present welfare system is cancerous because it benefits neither the welfare recipient, the recipient who supports the extended family nor society in general which must continue to strive for progress despite the continued drag caused by the sizeable number of individuals who would rather take a Federal relief check than a job!

The purpose of legislative history several questions.

On page 33 of the committee report there is language which I think will be much more difficult to interpret. In the middle of the page it says:

"It is not intended by your committee that these programs should provide assistance which would be supportive of firms or industries which have high rates of turnover of labor because of low wages, seasonality or other factors."

I would ask the able chairman whether or not he has some concern in the administration of this program, and the regulations that will carry it out, whether or not this in effect would not in the future likely remove the tendency for employment security offices to refer potential workers in so-called work incentive programs to what might be called marginal industries. These would include hotels, motels, laundries and restaurants which traditionally have been low-wage industries. Does the gentleman see any danger in putting language such as this in the bill? Would its effect be to make it more likely to refer people to such low-income industries?

Mr. MILLS. If the gentleman will yield, yes, I would not deny that there is some problem. What we are trying to do in the report, as I am sure the gentleman in the well knows, is to give some clarity or better guideline to the Department of Labor in the establishment of regulations as to the feeling of the committee, at least, about these matters.

We do not want these people to be working in just seasonal jobs if we can find for them annual jobs. We do not want to put them into all of these low-paying jobs, because we think some of them as a result of training, particularly those that have as much as a high school education, can be trained for better paying jobs.

Mr. ASHBroOK. But will the gentleman agree that while it is the legislative intent to encourage getting these people the best jobs possible—

Mr. MILLS. That is right.

Mr. ASHBroOK. That it could very well go on bureaus from the Office of HEW or Labor the option of saying "Wait, we are not going to send these people to the lower paying industries such as restaurants, laundries, motels, and hotels?"

Mr. MILLS. No. That is not intended. Mr. ASHBroOK. Because these are, in the language of the committee, low-wage industries?

Mr. MILLS. No.

Mr. ASHBroOK. Everybody knows they are low-wage industries, but they might possibly form the only jobs available to them.

Mr. MILLS. If they were full-time jobs they might conform.

Mr. ASHBroOK. So it is not the intention of the committee to rule out some what might be called future employment in the low-wage industries?

Mr. MILLS. We are not overlooking the fact that some people may be assigned low-wage jobs, and they may not be all assigned to full-time annual jobs in the very beginning.

Some of them may have to take some seasonal jobs to begin with, but we hope the bulk of them will not.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I think the added threat and purpose of this bill is to get people into a posture to help themselves. We want to make the job basically compatible for that individual, but there is nothing in the bill that says that if you qualify for a high skilled job when there is a lower skilled opportunity available right now.

Mr. MILLS. That is correct.

Mr. ASHBroOK. I think the gentleman is correct. I certainly agree with the purpose of the bill, the desire, it is obvious that everybody would like to be in high paid employment, but I think some of us have fears that in the social climate in which we live, and possibly because of bureaucratic type setup, there is a strong likelihood that people will not be referred to jobs of this type simply because they are at the lower rung of the economic ladder.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin, Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASHBroOK. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. That is one of the reasons we went into detail on some of these criteria. We wanted to make sure that the Secretary could substitute his own subjective judgment for the intent of the committee and the Congress.

If this person had very little work experience or no work experience, then of course he is going to have to take a lower paying job. He is going to have to take a lower job consistent with his background. In other words, we do not rule out any jobs. He has to recognize that while maybe the job that is given is not a particularly desirable job, the person who has not had that work or experience, can fill that job and acquire work experience and discipline that will enable himself to qualify for a better job in the future.

Mr. ASHBroOK. I think the gentleman is certainly optimistic in his outlook. Having had a little more experience with HEW guidelines and Department of Labor guidelines, I would have to observe somewhat facetiously—I am afraid not as facetiously as it might seem—that I will sit back and wait for the very first person who is denied his family assistance because he refused to accept one of these lower rung jobs. If that time comes, I will frankly tell you that you are right and I am wrong—but I am not going to hold my breath until that happens. I think the gentleman.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Let me say to the gentleman, either one, do not have any misgivings on these premises. Does the gentleman honestly feel that over a reasonable period of time these people, the 11 or 12 million people being added, will in fact work themselves off the rolls?

I think it is clear that there is not a strong work incentive in this legislation. Anybody who has any doubt can look at page E3226 of the RECORD of yesterday. If there is not a strong built-in work incentive, I can see such a superstructure on the theory that they will work themselves off the rolls and the coverage of this bill over a period of time.

Will the gentleman respond to that? Mr. MILLS. Yes, I will be glad to.

No one, may I say to the gentleman, on the Committee on Ways and Means or anywhere in the Government can tell you with any degree of precision that we will work all of these people into better paying jobs or will work them all off the rolls.

There are two reasons, in my opinion, why we are justified in offering the work incentive for this bill and that is in the training. Those we are talking of largely are full-time employees which means they are working 40 hours or more than 30 hours a week. They apparently are not making enough to provide the income for their family sufficiently to provide them with these basic necessities of life.

There is the danger first that they may fall out of their welfare program, in the States of Ohio or the State of New York or elsewhere, will pay them more money and give them more take-home pay than they can make while earning a living.

If that is the threat, why do we not offer them this supplemental income while they are working full time in return for their taking training? In theory, it is good to think that the success of the program depends entirely, in my opinion, on the attention that is given these individuals on an individual basis by the employment security agencies of all of our States, if we do not want to tell you that I could assure you. I do not believe anybody would say that. But this is legislatively an improvement, I think, in every way.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. MILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. WAGGONNER) such time as he desires.

(Mr. WAGGONNER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WAGGONNER, Mr. Chairman, my August 1968 newsletter was titled, "Full Scale Socialism for All Advocated in Advisory Council Recommendation." The opening lines of that newsletter were these:

In a 148-page report the like of which no Socialist dreamer ever dared propose seriously before, a "Great Society" plan has recommended to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare that a program should be undertaken immediately to provide every man, woman and child in the United States a guaranteed annual income.

In August of 1966, this was only a recommendation to the Johnson administration. Less than 4 years later, today, we face a proposal by the Nixon administration. This dream of every Socialist of having the Government guarantee him an income is wrapped up in the bill we are now considering.

As was to be expected, the minute this guaranteed annual income feature was unveiled last year, the bandwagon started to roll. The predictable gable of liberals, leftists, and radicals were, at first, astounded that a supposedly socially conservative administration was proposing national welfarism in a greater magnitude than even the most liberal Democrat in the history of the Nation. They regained their composure quickly, if not their Intelligence, and began an outpouring of statements, position papers and conferences calling for increases that stagger the imagination and would employ the pocketbooks of the working public. No sum, it seems, is too much to take from the pockets of the taxpayers and dole out to those unwilling to work. I used the word "unwilling" only after much thought. Good words, because anyone willing to work today, except for the lame, the halt, and the blind, can find a job by simply picking up a newspaper and reading the beginning help wanted ads.

The proposal before us calls for a cash donation of $1,600 per year to every family of four in the United States whose income is under that figure, or whatever it takes to reach that sum plus an additional $800 in food stamps, for a total of $3,400, all of which is, of course, tax free. And it must be remembered that this is only the beginning. Each year a demand from the welfare receivers and their liberal representatives in and out of the Congress will grow irresistible. The figures will climb with the regularity of the sun in the sky.

This was made crystal clear by Mr. R. E. Patricelli, Deputy Assistant Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, when he addressed a meeting of Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York last late year. He said:

"When the budgetary situation improves, we might look toward increases in the federal base payment.

He also stated that the program "should be made universal," meaning that childless couples and single persons should also be included in the future.

No one believes more than I that the present welfare system needs a massive overhaul. I agree with the President when he says it is a failure. It has robbed a significant portion of the population of their will or interest in providing for themselves; it has made them wards of the state. But what is needed is not an overhaul which more than doubles the number now on the rolls, and no proposal would—nor does it which adds another $4½ billion to the already staggering burden of welfare costs as this proposal would.

In the past 10 years, the number of people receiving some form of relief assistance has increased 52 percent and the cost of these programs has advanced 211 percent. All of this in only 10 years. It is now estimated that the Federal, State, and local costs exceed $72 billion per year.

And, needless to add, each of these $72 billion comes out of the pocket of the taxpayers who work for their livelihood.

Third- and fourth-generation families are now appearing upon the welfare rolls, demanding higher and higher payments and less and less supervision of what they use the money for or whether or not they are even eligible for the payments. We are, in short, their "constitutional right," an attitude which has been upheld more than once recently by various courts. The traditional concept of welfare as temporary assistance for those who are in need because of reasons beyond their control, no longer exists.

In an effort to soft-peddle the full socialist impact of this proposal, the Nixon administration is attempting to sell it as a "work fare" proposal. If it were this, it would be more acceptable, but an examination of the facts reveals that the work requirements are almost nonexistent, and those that do exist are unenforceable.

There are presently 9,600,000 persons now on welfare. Of these, exactly half are children; 1,500,000 are their mothers; 920,000 are disabled; and 40,000 are blind. All of these would be exempt from work under exemptions provided by the Nixon proposal.

This leaves an additional 500,000 who would be eligible for work. But, even then, there is another catch. These 500,000 would be required to accept only those jobs which are, in the opinion of the Secretary of Labor, "suitable." Would be, some future Secretary or some liberal adviser or employment security official consider a job as a dishwasher "suitable"? Or as a janitor, a lawncutter, maid, busboy, window cleaner or any of the other such manual labor jobs which the unemployed say are "demeaning"? I frankly doubt.

This proposal, like many Federal programs, is offered up as the total answer to all the problems of the poor. Yet I cannot help but recall that, a few short years ago, the so-called poverty program was sold to the Congress and the people as being the one sure way of ending poverty and welfare in this Nation forever. Countless billions of wasted dollars later, the program is in a shambles, having done little for the poor but a great deal for the manipulators of the poor and the leeches who feed off the misery of others.

Other impractical, visionary programs have likewise failed to live up to their publicity.

This proposal, in the jubilant words of liberal-leftist James Reston, "proposes more welfare, more people on public assistance than has the lament in the history of the Republic." It goes far beyond the socialist's dream of providing for each according to his needs. This proposal provides where there is no need. It does not require that need even be demonstrated.

There is a need in this country for a welfare program, honestly administered, to assist the needy who are needy for no fault of their own, for the aged, the lame, the halt, and the blind. This kind of program I have supported and will always support. There is a need also for a program of temporary assistance for the unemployed, the able-bodied, the hard working, and jobs; a program that requires some sort of public work in the interim to pay for their support by the public. But. In this time of unparalleled prosperity, of jobs crying for workers, of opportunities for all regardless of race, sex, creed, or color, there is no justification for turning this Nation into a socialist welfare state.

What's wrong with a guaranteed annual income for nothing, if not a socialist concept? Everything. If, like me, you believe in democracy and the free enterprise system.

A number of items have appeared in the press since this proposal was first unveiled that I would like to include here at the end of my remarks because it is vital to me that the record show that there was no doubt but that this Congress knew the road it was taking this country down when it enacted this legislation. It would be convenient, in years to come, for those who are going to vote for this bill to say that it was developed into what it will be before many years go by. I want to close that escape route so that every man who votes for this proposal will have to admit that he chose to ignore them. These are the items I have in mind.

The Nixon Plan: Compounding the Welfare Mess

(By Henry Hazlitt)

Ironically, the professional staff of the House Ways and Means Committee, a group controlled by the Democrats, has criticized the Republican Nixon welfare program chiefly from a conservative point of view.
April 16, 1970

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

H 3159

The staff analysis asserts that, by extending welfare to working families, "the government, in a sense, would be telling a working father that he is officially not capable of supporting his family. And that government believes is the necessary solution. One possible reaction of some fathers may be to go out and get a low-paying job, to try to complete supporting his family." Another criticism is that when he looks at how the plan applies to his family, a father "may suddenly realize that the only way for him to increase his income is to have a larger family..." A third criticism is that some families might buy goods to reduce their cash needs, yet "they are putting their dollars to work for the government." And that 'government supplement to the wages of the working poor could create a subsidized private welfare system.'

This report, however, no doubt inspired by Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, by no means assures that the Democratic Congress will flatly reject the Nixon plan. More likely it will put together a welfare package that the Democrats can call their own, and outbid even the Nixon plan in total cost.

Because the President's proposal, which he first put forward on television on August 8, is over 2 years old, and because the Nixon administration and Congress have, in general, moved in a direction toward conservatism, many conservatives were misled, and it was weeks before the plan really received adequate analysis. By far the best analysis is the 23-page study put out by the American Conservative Union. Among the points it makes are these:

1. It makes it more comfortable to be on welfare, both by eliminating any means test and by increasing benefits for many welfare recipients while decreasing benefits for none.

2. Mr. Nixon proposes that the federal level be $5,000 for a family of four with no outside income. This would be about $9,000 to receive an income of $3,400 a year from the Federal Government, with any state allowance in addition.

3. One great danger in federalizing welfare is the new opportunity it provides for manipulation by organized groups. Welfareists will be able to concentrate all their pressures directly on Washington. This very tactic has often been employed to force increases in Social Security and minimum-wage laws. Already the AFL-CIO and other pressure groups are attacking President Nixon's reported $9,000 figure, which, it is said, would provide recipients more than "the minimum federal poverty level income" of $3,400.

4. The program will more than double the number of welfare recipients, adding twelve million more to the nearly ten million already on the rolls.

5. It will cause an initial increase of $5 billion in the federal budget, and perhaps double that.

6. It put forward as a "workfare" program. "Everyone," said Mr. Nixon, "who accepts a job, a full-time job that provides suitable jobs are available..."
The only exceptions would be those unable to work, those with "true" physical disabilities, and those under 16 or over 65. But the ACU points out that after we deduct the blind, the disabled, the aged, the children, the fear of not getting welfare or "legitimately exploiting" those from the 9.6 million people now receiving aid, only about 500,000 or 5 percent, would be required to accept work or receive job training under the Nixon plan. Whether this requirement could be enforced even for those more than doubtfully. Already the professionals who handle the programs are charging that any work requirement would amount to "involuntary servitude."

7. It is itself has greatly expanded the program since it was announced. White House aides said at first that the Families with Children at lesser earnings would be food stamps. A few months later they announced that food stamps would not only remain, but that the annual appropriation for them would be doubled. This means that each family of four would not receive a federal food stamp allotment of $1,400 (not counting state payments) but an additional food stamp allotment bringing the total annual food payment to $2,380.

The Nixon program, despite its doubtless sincere intentions, will, in the long run greatly exacerbate the "welfare mess" for three basic reasons:

(1) It makes welfare more comfortable when it should be made less comfortable.

(2) By moving toward a guaranteed income, it makes welfare more respectable, more of a "right" when it should be made less respectable, less of a "right."

(3) It drastically increases the number of recipients, thus risking corrupting 12 million more Americans and making the desperate efforts to be reduced the number of persons receiving unearned checks from government.

In a 1935 message to Congress, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said: "The Federal government must and shall quit this business of relief—continue payments of relief induces a spiritual and moral disintegration, fundamentally destructive to the National fibre. To dote out relief in this way is to administer a narcotic, a subtle destroyer of the human spirit."

While subsequent history showed that FDR was right even though he had been his "New Deal" with the good intention of getting the government out of the business of direct welfare, the President's proposals in 1970 would doubt that President Nixon's intentions are the same—the to give people off welfare.

In a 1935 message to Congress, President Roosevelt said: "You should not just hand people things...the least effective way to people action...something..."

Whether this preposition is true or is perhaps the most important question that the Congress will have to decide on President Nixon's welfare plan.

The September 2 issue of the National Review Bulletin:

At Home

(By M. Stanton Evans)

Will the "new federalism" proclaimed by President Nixon in the field of social welfare cure the Nation's relief problems or make them worse?

The Nixon program starts from a commendable awareness that the present welfare systems has failed, and that the President and his advisers have given a good deal of thought to the various components of relief failure. In a 1935 message to Congress, President Roosevelt said: "The Administration spokesmen acknowledged, everyone on the effectiveness of various "work incentives" to be built into the program.

The President's plan runs clearly counter to the "less relief" idea, since it would lead to an estimated doubling of the number of people receiving assistance (from ten million in 1968 to 22.4 million in 1978) and double the cost (the $4 billion or so on top of the existing $8 billion). It is this development which causes liberal James Rathdowney to note that Nixon "proposes more welfare, more people on public assistance..."

FOOT-IN-THE-DOR DOELPES PLAN

Just days before President Nixon was touting his No. 1 domestic program—welfare reform—in his State of the Union message, a key Administration official revealed to a pro-welfare group in New York the truly revolutionary nature of his proposal. However, this same official indicated it would not only be extremely costly to the taxpayer, but that its passage would probably be the first step toward an even greater outpouring of lavish welfare benefits—an outpouring that the Nixon Administration appears to actually welcome.

Though this official didn't exactly say so,
the thrust of his remarks suggests the Nixon package is designed to clear the way for a complete federal takeover of welfare and the start of a guaranteed annual income for every person that falls below the upward spiralng "poverty line."

Speaking to a meeting of the Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York, Robert E. Patricelli, deputy assistant secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Administration's chief lobbyist for the measure, frankly acknowledged the mammoth size of the program.

"The total cost in new federal dollars of the program," he stated—and some think vastly understated—"is $4.4 billion per year, and the value of the assistance portion of the program will be some 28 million people—up from the present 10 million recipients.

While the common conception is that the Federal government will provide only $1,600 yearly to a family of four, Patricelli pointed out that to "that $1,600 base must also be added the expanded food stamp subsidies which the President has proposed and which the Administration has determined to implement as much as possible by administrative action. Under that program, a family of four receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits, for example, will receive $500 in food stamp subsidies for a total package of $2,600 in federal income maintenance payments."

Yet, suggested Patricelli, this was just the beginning. "The Administration proposal," he remarked, "our critics point out that the Family Assistance Plan is not universal in its coverage. It does not provide federal assistance to the working poor, nor is it available to single persons. But that omission in the plan	races not to any disagreement in principle with the need to provide cash assistance, other than to the need to accommodate to what we hope will be short-term budgetary limitations."

Within the $4.4 billion available, we chose to place our emphasis upon families with children, but there is no disagreement in principle that the system should be made universal when resources permit.

Second, said Patricelli, "critics point out that $1,600 for a family of four is far from adequate. That, too, is certainly the case and we have made it clear that the Family Assistance Plan provides a guaranteed adequately income. It does, however, when com-pined with food stamps, provide over two-thirds of the amount up to the poverty line. ... Again, when and if the budgetary situation improves, we shall see a steady increase in the federal base payment."

Thus, even before the legislation is launched, Administration spokesmen are saing that the administration of the Family Assistance Plan is deliberately designed to weaken the existing welfare system—"workfare"—proposals aming to put "workfare" systems into operation, and it doesn't require that jobs provided by the Administration.

Patricelli, however, says these provisions "hadn't worked effectively anywhere and that the Federal Government "should ultimately be able to deliver welfare benefits—excepting mothers of pre-school children—without a welfare system that should ultimately be able to deliver welfare benefits—excepting mothers of pre-school children—without Yet this ingredient is far less revolutionary than originally believed, for a similar "workfare" formula is continued in the current welfare plan, the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC).

In this, the Nixon plan, the Social Security Act, mothers in the AFDC program are automatically assigned to "incentive work jobs" rather than being thrown out into the cold for refusing offered opportunities.

In short, the Nixon plan appears intent on fastening upon the nation and his party one of the costliest welfare programs ever devised, and the Social Security Act itself is advised to write to their congressmen and tell them they are opposed to this "welfare reform" package. Do the Republicans, it should be asked, wish to abandon the party that added 15 million people to the relief rolls?

money for those on welfare, larger welfare rolls will be necessary for the nation to shoulder the increasing costs for the federal government. The liberal Democrats have been against any change in the Social Security Act because it is their belief that the government is not equipped to handle such a task. However, with the growth of the welfare rolls, it is becoming increasingly clear that something must be done to alleviate the burden on the federal government.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Scherle).

(Mr. Scherle asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SCHERLE. Mr. Chairman, I favored an open rule on H.R. 16311 because I believe there are simply too many unanswered questions surrounding the Family Assistance Act of 1970.

My primary concern about the legislation is its workability. President Nixon last February told the National Governors Conference that he wanted the family assistance program, and I quote here “has never been tried, not even very well, and it is not a program that can be done for the States.”

As a matter of fact, a check by my office with the Department of Labor has revealed that there will be no pilot program on the family assistance program until August of this year when the entire State of Vermont will be used as a FAP guinea pig. In other words, Mr. Chairman, the passage of this sweeping welfare reform message was asked of Congress in 1968. A year after this program was authorized to see if it would work. Thus, in effect, we are asked to hop aboard a plane which has never been flight-tested.

There has been a work incentive pilot program conducted in New Jersey to study the effect of Federal supplements on the so-called working poor. But this study did not address itself to the key question: “How many of those people receiving Federal payments in New Jersey project ultimately worked themselves entirely off the welfare roll.” I asked OEO, “Who paid for the study?”

Mr. OEO said, “It was a Federal supplement to the New Jersey project.”

Mr. Patrick, in that same speech, also stated that when and if the budgetary situation improves, quote:

"We might look toward increases in the Federal base payment."

How much more universality is planned when the budgetary condition improves? How much will the base payment be increased? At this point, we do not seem to find an answer which could be investigated.

Another vital question on which we must have an unequivocal answer: Does the family assistance program constitute a guaranteed annual income? Ask the question of the White House pamphlet, we are told that it does not. But there are disturbing indications that it is at least a large step in that direction.

In a speech to the National Jewish Welfare Board, the spiritual mentor behind FAP, Dr. Daniel P. Moynihan, described the family assistance program, and I quote:

"Simply put, it is a proposal to place a floor under the income of every American family. Whether the family is working or not. United or not. Deserving or not."

The press has also described the program as a guaranteed annual income.

Knight newspaper reporter James K. Batten, in a story about FAP in the Buffalo Evening News, wrote:

"Does the family assistance program constitute a guaranteed annual income?"

Syndicated columnist Roscoe Drummond, writing in the Christian Science Monitor, called FAP, quote, "a significant stride toward a guaranteed annual income."

The Chicago Tribune, which originally spoke favorably of the family assistance program, editorialized on March 30, quote:

"The "work incentive" element of President Nixon's welfare reform proposal was introduced as a sugar coating for the guaranteed annual income pill."

Another aspect of FAP which I think significantly discussed, Mr. Chairman, is whether the plan is an incentive for people to work. This is not a new concept. Examples of high rates of welfare illegitimacy abound:

A recent statewide audit of the California AFDC rolls revealed an illegitimacy rate of approximately 14 percent, representing a loss of $59 million a year.

A 1969 GAO check of AFDC rolls in New York City showed 10.7 percent of the families illegible and 3.1 percent recipients. The combination of these two amounted to about $27 million loss yearly just in the city.

Mr. Chairman, there is currently a controversy. A little bit of the rounds entitled "Welfare Cadillac." One of the verses goes something like this:

"But things are still gonna get better, at least that's what I understand."

"They tell us the President has put in a whole new poverty plan."

"Well, I for one, do not share the optimism of the songwriter that this whole new poverty plan is going to make things better. And it is for this reason that I again urge the family assistance program be debated more fully and brought to the floor of the House of Representatives under an open rule."

The definition of suitable employment, moreover, is anyone's guess. It is not clear whether the administration means "employment for which the applicant is qualified," or whether more subjective leeway is to be allowed in the definition. And the applicant is to decide for himself what constitutes a suitable job.

In view of the problems and ambiguities inherent in the present proposals, it is doubtful whether such reforms would really improve the welfare mess. It is much more likely that they would only add to the confusion. I am therefore writing to Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, Robert H. Finch, to ask him to clarify the administration's position. Unless he can give some assurance that these problems will be solved, I cannot support this bill.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consider proper to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

(Mr. OBEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, I associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from Arkansas, the distinguished chairman of the committee on yesterday. It seems to me that was one of the most transparent expressions of this proposal which I have seen anywhere.

Mr. Chairman, the present welfare system is in need of overhaul, and the legislation proposed by the President and reported by the Ways and Means Committee would be an improvement over present law.

Nonetheless, I have some misgivings about what we are being asked to erect in its place. For one thing, it will cost considerably more than the President has estimated, in my judgment.

For another, the family assistance plan looks more like a cash-food-work plan than a jobs program, and for that reason none of us should be overly optimistic about it.

This proposal has been touted in some quarters as a workfare program, but that is a misnomer. It is really a guaranteed cash income plan, and I am concerned about its adequacy as a means of identifying and providing jobs.

The family assistance plan requires a head of household to take a job or enlist in a job-training program, provided a suitable one is available. This is a work incentive notion, and the Office of Economic Opportunity claims it has evidence that it works. However, I have strong doubts about that—doubts that I have seen anywhere.

Mr. Chairman, I wish I had the capability. I wish I had whatever it requires—

I should say maybe the ability of the gentleman from Arkansas, for whom I have the greatest admiration—to express my feelings about this proposal we have here today.

Unquestionably it is the most controversial, it is the most complex and disturbing piece of legislation that I have had occasion to consider personally. It is an occupational career history of a Member of this body.

I am very much disturbed about this bill. I am very much disturbed about the threat that it poses to our system of government, to our way of life.

I am more disturbed about this when I realize that my able friend from Arkansas is one of the chief proponents of this bill. I ask my friend the President of the United States for whom I also have a very high regard and much respect. When these two gentlemen advocate this type of legislation it does not necessarily mean that they consider controversial or perhaps even dangerous. They have a great deal of wisdom and experience that we do not have here.

But here we have one of the greatest threats that have been proposed in the history of this country. It is a threat to our way of life, to the economy, to the standards that we have here. It is a threat to our way of life and to the protection of our way of life.

I am more disturbed about this when I realize that I have seen two gentlemen who have discussed this matter in my presence, either on the Committee on Rules or on the floor of this House, has said that it was difficult to estimate and an estimate was the only way you could arrive at a figure. The best and the lowest estimate that has been made is $4.5 billion additional cost—and if I am not correct about this, I would like to be corrected. Over the 2 years of the fiscal year that this goes into effect. This will be a minimum of $4.5 billion. There are estimates of up to $10 billion additional cost. And again, I want to emphasize that this is but the beginning.

Mr. Chairman, this is a political body. Thank God it comes up for re-election every 2 years. I am talking about the House. I have never subscribed to the theory that the House of Representatives should have more than 2 years, because I think, as the Founding Fathers thought, that the people should have an opportunity every 2 years, if I may use an expression of my own, to turn the rascals out.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLMER. I yield to my good friend from Iowa.

Mr. GROSS. First, I want to commend the gentleman from Michigan on his splendid remarks. The gentleman never ceases to warn the House of the peril that is facing this country.

Yesterday the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, Mr. Mills, was asked the question, "Where are you going to get the money to pay for these additional billions of costs of this legislation? Do you plan to raise the taxes?" The gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills), and... he did not propose to sponsor a bill increasing taxes. Now, where is the money to come from to finance this vastly expanded program, and when is it expected we return to some financial sanity in this Government, either by stopping the expansion of programs or abandoning some of the programs already in existence? It cannot be both ways.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. Chairman, if I may, the able chairman, for this additional time.

Let me say to my friend from Iowa and to any and all others who might be interested that there is an old trite saying that we still are operating under a system where the people have to support the Government and the Government cannot support the people.

I believe there is only one way for the Government to get money with which to pay for these appealing programs and that is through taxes.

Now, we are confronted here with a national debt greater than all the rest of the free world put together. We will be faced before the final gavel is sounded here in this Congress with a request to increase that national debt limitation. We have scheduled a repeal of the surtax. The gentleman from Iowa and most of the others who give thought to this subject know that if we continue with these programs, even with this program, this general revenue, I think we have a surplus as the administration hopes, but we are going to be in the red again and we are going to have to retain all of the present taxes and probably add more.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 3 additional minutes.

Mr. COLLIER. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, and I appreciate the very gracious action of the chairman.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, I confess that I have used my best efforts to see that our committee had an open rule and thorough hearings on this bill which I regard as containing many inequities and impracticalities. I feel that we have succeeded at least to a degree. I think that the people of this country and those in the House, as well as the world, have benefited from those hearings. At the risk of seemingly being guilty of self-serving statements, I would like to add that I used my best efforts to bring this bill out under a modified closed rule. I realize that an open rule under present circumstances was unobtainable. I wanted to see a rule that would make it in order for the House to pass its will, and to determine whether this guaranteed income phase of the bill should remain therein or be stricken out.

Unfortunately, under the precedents of this House in the matter of closed versus open rules, Plus the acumen of the leadership on both sides of the aisle, as well as the able chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, and his opposite number member, the ranking minority member, my efforts proved fruitless.

I have always maintained since I have had the privilege of being a member of the Rules Committee that the Members of this House are capable of legislating as the Members of this Capitol who legislate in a free atmosphere.

Unfortunately, under the precedents of this House in the matter of closed versus open rules, I am disappointed, realizing that an open rule under present circumstances was unobtainable. I wanted to see a rule that would make it in order for the House to pass its will, and to determine whether this guaranteed income phase of the bill should remain therein or be stricken out.

Unfortunately, under the precedents of this House in the matter of closed versus open rules, I am disappointed. Under the closed rule whereby we indicate that the minority has over here to recommit the bill which frankly, I think, would be better than just voting it down. Let it go back to this distinguished Committee on Ways and Means and have them give further consideration to it and come up with something that would be more palatable to get us out of the admitted mess that we are in in this welfare program.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, again I thank the gentleman.

So we are left with these options. Now, I understand that a motion will be made by the minority—and the powers that be, the leadership on both sides, not to mention the persuasive which, under the Rules of the House, the minority justly has.

So you will have an opportunity, then, to recommit the bill which frankly, I think, would be better than just voting it down. Let it go back to this distinguished Committee on Ways and Means and have them give further consideration to it and come up with something that would be more palatable to get us out of the admitted mess that we are in in this welfare program.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I cannot impose upon the few faithful here, and upon my gracious friend. But just let me wind up.

I am worried—I am concerned about the future of this Republic and the future of the enterprise system that we enjoy, the liberties that we enjoy, and their perpetuation for future generations.

I wonder how many of you recall the letter that Lord Macaulay wrote to his friend Henry S. Randall some 113 years ago in which he said that he had studied our American system of government and he was sorry to say that it could not prevail; that it was all sail and no anchor; that the day would come—and this is in substance what he said and not a verbatim quote—that the day would come when the demands of the people upon their elected Representatives would be so great that they could not be met and the whole American dream would collapse.

Mr. Chairman, I think this bill: should be recommitted.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. DENNIS).

Mr. DENNIS. Mr. Chairman, I am under no illusion that anything I say here today is likely to sway the course or affect the result of this debate; nor do I claim any expertise in the welfare field; but this is a landmark piece of legislation, I have to vote upon it, and I feel impelled to say a few words which express my feelings and my doubts and reservations on this matter, and which set forth my point of view.

This is a bill for welfare reform which commits the Congress to double the number of persons on the welfare rolls; certainly a somewhat anomalous situation. The argument is that, in the end, the number on these rolls will be decreased, by the incentives built into the measure, which are designed to encourage recipients to become employed and to support themselves.

Whether this will in fact prove to be the case has much to do with the use of incentives for self-removal from welfare programs in respect to those already on the welfare rolls, before we add millions to their number? And why do we not undertake and, for some reasonable and significant number of years, observe, evaluate, and if it should prove, in any way, a true pilot program in one or two localities, before we undertake this sweeping and costly experiment on a national basis?

All are agreed, I think, that the heart of the matter, the justification for this legislation, is the so-called workfare provisions of the bill. It is these provisions which are designed to encourage and to bring about self-removal from the welfare rolls; and it is one of the effectiveness of these provisions, in practice, that the claimed virtues of this legislation are dependent upon.

These workfare provisions, in turn, have two aspects. One is the work requirement; the other is the work incentive. A basic query here is, how efficient and how effective are these provisions in respect to those already on the welfare rolls, before we add millions to their number? And why do we not undertake and, for some reasonable and significant number of years, observe, evaluate, and if it should prove, in any way, a true pilot program in one or two localities, before we undertake this sweeping and costly experiment on a national basis?

At present, welfare recipients receive guidance from a trained counselor. Many people need this guidance annually because they need money, but under this proposal in many cases the guidance would be gone and checks would just be mailed out from Washington.

This bill would encourage large families to be supported at public expense by the Government, rather than a guaranteed income. The best way to end poverty is to get all in out by providing all workers with needed skills and provide enough good jobs to go around. I cannot help but believe that welfare payments in many cases stifle the initiative and the pride of the recipients and perpetuate their poverty by destroying their get-up-and-go and their ambition.

We all favor providing adequately for the disabled and for those who are unable to provide for themselves, but I favor a route which enables able-bodied people to provide for themselves, but for them, accepts no poverty by vigorously pursuing an opportunity to offer them employment.

I testify on April 14 before the Rules Committee in favor of a rule which would make it possible to offer specific and meaningful help to the poor in their striving to escape poverty because it can be decisively improved, although it is a step in the right direction, a first step, but one which is essential this Congress must take.

Let us recognize to begin with that a guaranteed annual income is not a privilege. It should be a right to which every American is entitled. No country as affluent as ours can allow any citizen or his family to not have an adequate diet, not to have adequate housing, not to have adequate health services and not to have adequate educational opportunity—in short, not to be able to have a life with dignity.

While there may be differences as to the mechanics of implementing an income maintenance system, there should be no dispute as to its need. There can be no dispute that poverty in the midst of this affluent country is insufferable and unbearable.

Certainly, an improvement over both the administration bill and the bill reported out of the Ways and Means Committee would be the Income Maintenance Program, which I first introduced in the 89th Congress, and which I reintroduced in revised form in the 91st Congress as H.R. 14773. It is this bill on which I testified before the Ways and Means Committee last November 13. Obviously, H.R. 14773 was not adopted by the Ways and Means Committee.

Accepting the concept of income maintenance, and establishing the mechanics for implementing that concept are two far different things. We do well to emphasize the concept; but at the same time, the implementation which is seriously flawed. It is these flaws which I want to address, so that they will be clearly perceived, and so that we will be clear as to what improvements must be made after this bill is passed.

Let us look at some of the areas where H.R. 16311 is deficient. Some of the deficiencies were in the original administration bill (H.R. 14173). Some are new.

First, I think it is essential that the benefit levels provided for in H.R. 16311 be raised. Under this bill, the basic allowance payable to a family of four with no other income is $1,600 annually. This amount is totally inadequate. Even given the fact that some States will provide supplementary assistance, there can be no acceptance of a $1,600 level for a family of four without accepting as well that this would be a failure to provide meaningful help. The fact is, in fact, the case is demonstrated by the statistics showing that only in 8 States will families experience a rise in assistance levels.

While the benefit levels for the aged, blind, and disabled have been improved by H.R. 16311, the levels for families remain the same as in the administration bill. And the figures prepared by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare show how adequately aided under these benefit levels. Only 301,000 families will rise above the poverty line: 2,708,000 families will remain below it. In addition, 2,582,000 families whose incomes fall between the poverty line and the low-income line will remain there. Only 77,000 families will rise above the income line. The administration’s estimates further reveal that of 8,546,000 children whose families’ incomes now fall below the poverty line and the low-income line, only 341,000 will rise above it; 6,805,000 will not.

Yet, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it costs a family of four living on a lower budget $8,771 a year in New York City. The National Welfare Rights Organization is calling for a $5,500 level. And according to the Gallup poll of January 25, 1970—

The average American believes a family of four needs a minimum of $120 per week ($6,240 per year) to make ends meet.

In brief, the benefit levels for the family assistance plan proposed by H.R. 16311 are totally inadequate. In addition, while the committee is to be commended for raising benefits for the aged, it is in its failure to provide for the important Federal matching provision.

Second, H.R. 16311 should be modified to cover single adults and childless couples. At present, the bill only applies to families with children. Yet, the need for such a program is serious.

Third, a higher percentage of the costs for state supplementary benefits should be borne by the Federal Government. While this bill provides for 30 percent Federal matching funds, it is not adequate. Instead of matching State supplemental payments only up to the poverty line, the matching provision should apply to those State payments made in excess of the poverty line, as well.

What is more, the matching provision should not be made retroactive. As H.R. 16311 was reported out, it abandoned the provision in the administration proposal permitting disregard of one-half unearned income. The maximum—$500 million—was set to the poor off-set by the added expenditures incurred in providing for matching Federal funds. The consequence is to take money from the poor. While the burden borne by the States is commendable, it cannot justify denying the poor.

Actually, the solution is to provide for full federalization of income maintenance. Under the present scheme, States... which already have made the effort to meet their obligations to their disadvantaged citizens, provides a relatively better AFDC benefits, such as New York, are penalized. Their burden is lightened by 30 percent Federal matching, but the remaining load of 70 percent is an onerous one.

It is a fact that Federal matching, if it is to really aid those States which most need Federal moneys because they are most responsibly meeting their obligations, must be far greater than the 30 percent provided in H.R. 16311.

Finally, this provision for State supplementary benefits should be expanded to apply to those benefits paid to the working poor. Section 453 of H.R. 16311 precludes Federal sharing in the cost of these benefits. This limitation is unjustifiable for several reasons. For one thing, one of the objectives of the Family Assistance Act is to do away with the distinction between the working and the nonworking poor. This objective stems from the obvious principle that no penalty should be imposed upon the working poor by virtue of their being ineligible for welfare benefits in most States. This bill institutionalizes the distinction, rather than obliterates it.

In addition, once again those progressive States which have implemented welfare programs for the working poor—such as New York—even though they received Federal matching for such programs, are penalized. They still will not be receiving any Federal funds for these programs.

Fifth, the Federal Government should assume 100 percent of the costs of the programs for the aged, disabled, and blind.

Again, as I said earlier, only the Federal Government has the resources to assume this burden. The States simply are not financially able to readily meet the welfare needs of their citizens. Full federalization, not only of the programs for the aged, disabled, and blind, but of the entire welfare system, is urgently needed. Provision should be made for a 3- to 5-year phasing-in transition to this end.

Sixth, the coercive work requirement embodied in H.R. 16311 is undesirable. Philosophically, it is objectionable: forced work is alien to individual choice and freedom. Dramatically, the fact is that there are very few persons who would work, but who do not. The coercive work requirement is a misguided approach to a problem which really lies in the failure of government to provide the necessary work stations and the failure of government—Federal, State, and local—to provide adequate job opportunities to enable these people to develop skills which will make them attractive to employers.

Seventh, the work requirement for mothers with school age children is especially egregious. Mothers, particularly mothers with very young children, do not conceive of requiring that of mothers with adequate incomes, and there can be no justifiable basis for requiring that of them. Their misfortune—a misfortune thrust upon them, not chosen—to suffer inadequate incomes.

H.R. 16311 is even discriminatory as between recipient mothers. Those who have received welfare, but are not required to take suitable employment. Those who have the misfortune of being without a husband are subjected to this requirement.

Moreover, practicality instructs us that such a provision cannot work: mothers who object simply will not comply with this requirement that they take suitable employment. Mitchell Ginsberg, administrator of New York City's Human Resources Administration, clearly stated the fact in his speech before the National League of Cities Conference on March 10, 1970.

Finally, this coercive work requirement levied against mothers with school age children is unnecessary. Most mothers do, in fact, seek work, if there are jobs for them and day care facilities for their youngsters. The April, 1970 issue of Nation's Business, certainly not a noted liberal magazine, states in an article entitled, "The Great Welfare Debate."

Survey after survey has shown that most welfare mothers have been thwarted by the welfare bureaucracy, lack of training opportunities, lack of day care centers, for children's knowledge about job opportunities. (p. 60)

It is obvious from the deficiencies which are incorporated in H.R. 16311 that passage of this bill—which at least does achieve the commendable end of making a guaranteed annual income a reality—will be objectionable; many provisions will have to be amended; many improvements will have to be made.

Because of this, I want to briefly detail the bill which I introduced, H.R. 14773, the Income Maintenance Act. By way of preface I would point to what I consider three of the most important differences between it and the Ways and Means Committee bill. First, the Income Maintenance Act provides for significantly higher benefits than does H.R. 16311—benefits for a family of four with no outside income reach $3,228 by the fifth year. Second, the Income Maintenance Act provides for child support for the top income levels of the well-to-do, with $2,599 by the fifth year. Third, the act contains no work requirement.

Now, I want to outline more extensively the major defects of the Income Maintenance Act.

First, Eligibility. The Income Maintenance Act, H.R. 14773, provides that all individuals and families are covered, with the exception of unmarried children under age 18 who are not members of an eligible family. This contrasts with H.R. 16311, which limits benefit eligibility under the Income Maintenance Act to families with children.

Second, Benefits. The Income Maintenance Act provides for increasing payments over a period of 4 years. In the first year, a family of four with no other income would receive an annual benefit amount of $2,044. This breaks down to a monthly rate of $50 for the family head and aid for each dependent child. Which includes the spouse. The maximum family benefit for families of seven or more persons would be $5,472.

An additional factor in this equation is cost of living adjustments. Benefits are adjusted to reflect variations in living costs, including regional housing cost differentials.

Third, Reduction of benefits. The Income Maintenance Act which I introduced provides for a sliding scale of reduced benefits, so that as outside earned income increases the percentage decrease in benefits rises. The purpose is a simple one. If there is a large reduction in earnings following upon a comparatively small amount of earned income, there will be a substantial work disincentive.

Thus, for the first and second years of the act's existence, earned income in an amount equal to one-fourth of the maximum benefit will cause benefits to be reduced by an amount equal to 25 percent of that income. Earned income in excess of one-fourth of the maximum benefit causes benefits to be reduced by 50 percent of the income. For the third year of the act's existence, and thereafter, the same 25 percent tax, so to speak, will apply. Similarly, the 50 percent reduction will apply, but will be limited to earned income equal to one-fourth of the maximum benefit but less than 1½ times the maximum benefit. All earned income above that will cause benefits to be reduced by 75 percent of the amount of the income.

In other words, there is a three-step tax, so to speak—25 percent, 50 percent, and 75 percent, applied to different proportions of earned income.

The way this works in dollar amounts is demonstrated by looking at the break-even point: that is, the point at which outside income reduces the income maintenance benefits to zero. For a four-member family, not receiving any earned income in the first year of the Income Maintenance Act amounting to $4,259 would reduce benefits to zero. But the fifth year, when benefit payments catch their matching share, and the 75 percent reduction has come into effect, a four-member family would have to have outside income of $6,188 before reaching zero benefit payments.

Fourth, Coordination with present welfare. The assumption of my bill is that in States which now have higher average AFDC benefits than the base benefits provided by H.R. 14773, the State and Federal governments would make up the difference according to the present AFDC formula. Therefore, the present welfare recipient in those States would never be worse off than he is now.

And, of course, where welfare benefits are below the standards of H.R. 14773, the recipients would be considerably better off.

Where the Federal income maintenance benefit is supplemented, my bill provides for State maintenance of present effort. The standards of need and the percentage of need provided are not to be reduced.

Fifth, Supplemental State programs. Under the Income Maintenance Act States may establish supplemental income maintenance programs patterned after the Federal program. Fifty percent of State expenditures under such a program would be reimbursed by the Federal Government. As a condition of such Federal payment, however, eligibility under the State programs would have to be extended to all persons eligible under the Federal program.

Sixth. Work requirements. The Income Maintenance Act has no work requirement. Beneficiaries on a voluntary basis may request referral for participation in a work incentive program in which they are actually participating in such programs would receive an additional allowance of $30 per month. Obviously, this is one of the chief differences from the Ways and Means Committee bill—H.R. 1631—which has a coercive work requirement, whose objectionable features I have already detailed.

Seventh. Assets. As for treatment of assets, under H.R. 14773, the Income Maintenance Act, there is no limitation on the amount of assets a family can own. While income would be imputed to each family on the basis of its assets, at a rate of 5 percent of their value, no income would be imputed to the family on the basis of the family's personal effects, tools, home, household goods, or automobile except to the extent that the total value of such assets exceeds $30,000.

Eighth. Administration. As for administration, the Income Maintenance Act establishes a newly created Bureau of Income Maintenance within the Treasury Department. Investigations—other than routine examinations which would be limited to no more than 5 percent of the number of applicants, randomly selected except where there existed probable cause to doubt eligibility. Appeal rights would include the right to a hearing and also judicial review in cases where the results of a hearing were disputed. Overpayments could be recovered by withholding future benefits or by direct payment of the overpayment. However, no more than 50 percent of the overpayment could be recouped by recovery from assets unless the overpayment had been obtained by fraud.

I have devoted this time to outlining the bill I introduced last August along with Mr. Congressmen Mr. Whalen, and Mr. Ryan, was designed to solve the glaring weaknesses in our current welfare system which many of us in Congress, and citizens acceptance for which has been low. It was designed to improve both the adequacy of the income provided to the poor, and the conditions under which assistance is made available. It raised the minimum amount of necessary of income to $3,200. It greatly increased the Federal contribution for welfare, which has become such an impossible financial burden for areas like New York City where more is now spent on welfare than on education. It would have established more uniform national welfare standards making the program more equitable for recipients and removed the temptation for individuals to migrate to already overcrowded urban areas in the North.

The welfare reform program originally proposed by the President offered many of the same improvements in the national living income program, including the concept of assistance for the working poor, but fell short on others. It excluded, for example, the childless poor, and proposed work requirements that have already proved impossible to enforce and questionable in value. It failed to make provision for regional variation in benefits; to reflect regional cost-of-living differences, and the basic benefits were most inadequate—only $1,600 minimum for a family of four.

The modified version of the President’s plan reported out by the Ways and Means Committee and now before the House would effect many of the changes in the welfare system I have long urged and which were essential ingredients of the National Living Income Act. In many respects, it is a measure of recovery over the President’s proposal, for which I want to commend and thank the distinguished and very able chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, as well as the members of the Ways and Means Committee. I urge my colleagues to vote for it.

However, Mr. Chairman, we cannot afford to make the mistake of allowing ourselves by thinking that this bill makes all the improvements in our welfare programs that need to be made. On the contrary it contains many of the weaknesses contained in President Nixon’s program. For example, the so-called family assistance program ignores the childless poor—giving disadvantaged young couples an incentive to have children to qualify for welfare which in my judgment, such a view is viewed in many quarters as unrealistic—a radical demand not to be taken seriously. My judgment, such a view is a tragic mistake one. Not only have a number of welfare recipients, those most prominently the National Welfare Rights Organization, made a strong case for a $5,500 basic welfare benefit, but such a large and representative group of concerned people participating in the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition, and Health, called together by the White House to advise the President on problems of hunger and poverty in America, adopted a final action resolution calling for a $5,500 annual income floor.

Mr. Chairman, so that the Members of the House may be reminded of the specific recommendations of the President’s Conference on Food, Nutrition, and Health with regard to income levels in relation to this legislation, I have earlier asked unanimous consent to include the “Task Force Findings” adopted by the Conference in the Racoan following my remarks.
This bill comes before us under a closed rule, with no amendments permitted. This is a procedure which I deplore. How can the poor people of this country be expected to understand that Members of this House have no chance to vote, for example, for an increase in the benefits provided?

I was opposed to the form of the resolution—or rule—bringing the bill before us. The rule supported amendments to permit the bill to be opened up for amendment. But by vote of the House in closing off debate on the rule, no amendments to it could be considered except those of the majority party. As Chairman, these practices are seen by the general public as undemocratic; they demean the House. It is time they were changed. It is time the Members of the House were treated as intelligent adults, capable of voting amendments to a bill up or down on the merits, instead of being told they must accept or reject the bill exactly as it emerged from committee.

I hope that the needed improvements in the bill, including a major increase in the minimum income guarantee, will be made in the Senate and that the House conference will look favorably on such amendments. I know that many of my colleagues share these sentiments.

Task Force Action Statement

Introduction

In opening the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition and Health, President Nixon said: “This meeting sets the seal of urgency on those of us who seek to end an end to hunger and malnutrition due to poverty in America.” We who have come here are already firmly dedicated to that goal. The President said: “Our job is to assure truly adequate benefits and guarantees that the poor will be reformed and expanded immediately in nutrition and allied health professions, in connection with other private and public efforts to solve simultaneously social problems and unemployment problems. These actions alone should provide two million new jobs.”

(a) Grants to encourage and support businesses to provide homes and food for all low income citizens in local ownership and under operation of such services as food production and distribution.

(b) Establishment of housing factories on the order of the automotive industry to serve the dual function of provision of low-cost shelter and job creation for all who need it.

(c) Development of new methods and practices which add unnecessarily to the cost of food. This cost inflation is unfair to everyone, and particularly diabolical to the poor. We need:

2. Mandatory price marking and posting which facilitates and simplifies price comparison.

3. Effective inspection and regulation to assure availability of safe nutritious food at fair prices and conditions of sale.

4. Mandatory processing, packaging, and labeling requirements to identify and preserve nutrient content and assure accurate and honest promotion.

5. Encouragement of retail distribution systems which take special account of the needs of the poor.

(1) Establishment of a national prepaid health insurance program and new methods for the delivery of health care and extension of existing health programs. The Medicaid Bill should be fully implemented by 1971.

The task forces feel that it is especially important to note that all health programs can be self-supporting and/or income-producing, and none will require appropriations higher than a fraction of the cost of the medical program. Together they should create substantial new tax revenue (4 million jobs should produce an average increase of $5 billion a year in taxes), substantial increase in income through increased buying power of $7 billion of funds misapplied under the present public assistance programs.

III. Interim Family Food Programs

Now of the existing family food programs—food stamps, commodity distribution, emergency food and medical services—provides an adequate diet or permits the participation of all who need it. Major reforms and expansions are necessary to make sure that all people in need have access to an adequate diet until an adequate income becomes a reality.

As an interim measure only, the food stamp program must be altered so that it can be converted into a vehicle for the delivery of an adequate diet to those in need in all parts of the United States and its territories, and on Indian reservations. Programs for those whose income is less than $100 a month (for

A family of four), modification of the price schedule so that no recipient must pay more than 10 percent of his income for food, and full recognition of the social security poverty index as modified by the Children's Bureau for determining eligibility for food stamp programs. The program should be fully funded and implemented in all parts of the United States and its territories, including Indian reservations, before the end of this fiscal year.

(b) The Economic Opportunity Act Amendments of 1969. Section 401—Title X, Title XX, and Title 4, should be quickly approved, and the food stamp program should be extended to include the entire nation. The program, the following steps should be taken:

(a) Nutritious food selected shall be consistent with the cultural preferences of the children to be fed.

(b) Funds shall be provided to enable schools, child care centers, and other participating groups to provide a nutritionally adequate feeding program for all pre-school elementary and secondary school children.

(c) Community groups shall be eligible to operate child feeding programs.

(d) Community representatives must be trained for careers in nutrition planning and food preparation for employment in the program.

(e) Food provided at the schools shall be available at the choice of the children and their parents.

IV. UNIVERSAL SCHOOL FOOD PROGRAM

There must be established a national child feeding program which will make available at least 1/2 of the Recommended Dietary Allowance. This is to be accomplished by improvements in the free lunch and breakfast program for all pre-school elementary and secondary school children.

The future maximum participation in the program, the following steps should be taken:

(a) Nutritious food selected shall be consistent with the nutritional preferences of the children to be fed.

(b) Funds shall be provided to enable schools, child care centers, and other participating groups to provide a nutritionally adequate feeding program for all pre-school, elementary and secondary school children.

(c) Community groups shall be eligible to operate child feeding programs.

(d) Community representatives must be trained for careers in nutrition planning and food preparation for employment in the program.

(e) Food provided at the schools shall be available at the choice of the children and their parents.

V. RUNNING THE PROGRAMS

There is a conflict of interest established in the U.S. Department of Agriculture in its dual role primarily the advocate for the producers of food, and secondarily the distributing of food to the needy. Therefore, all programs relating to the provision of food, food services, food stamps, commodity distribution, and other programs must be removed from the administrative jurisdiction of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and be established in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, whose primary concern are the needs and well-being of the people these programs were created to assist. Wherever possible, the provisions of food services of all kinds should be tied as closely as possible to the provision of overall comprehensive care. We trust that the President to use his Executive authority to initiate these changes.

The provisions of food services have too often been thwarted by their ineffectiveness at the state and local government levels. The poor should run their own programs. Maximum dignity participation by recipients is insured by provisions for local operational responsibility to include food, education, health, nutrition, and community action programs.

Mr. WHALEN. (Mr. WHALEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks).

Mr. WHALEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 16311.

During the past 200 years the United States has developed the greatest standard of living the world has ever seen. Despite this fact there are today 25 million Americans who do not enjoy the fruits of this great standard of living. How to assist these less-fortunate Americans represents one of the most challenging domestic issues confronting our country today.

The Social Security Administration has developed what it calls a poverty index. According to this index in 1969, 22 percent of all Americans lived below the poverty income line. Due to the great productivity of our economic system, by 1968 this figure had been reduced to 19 percent. Yet the poverty bracket, nevertheless, today signify 34 percent of all non-white Americans live in what we call the poverty category, according to the social security poverty index.

Second, in the 9-year period between 1959 and 1968 there has been absolutely no change in the number of Americans who are members of families headed by female-headed families. This is one of the major factors that define the American family structure. Yet the hard-core poor have not been dislodged. The reasons are many for the failure of our welfare programs to work. Yet we have already heard a number of them mentioned. Let me cite what I consider to be the two most important.

First, current welfare benefits do not always go to those who are in need. Let me give you a couple of illustrations. A count of the Warren Commission on poverty estimated a couple of years ago that only about 1 out of 10 poor Americans receives any benefit from our Federal poverty programs. Another well-known economist, Dr. James Tobin, delineated a series of Federal, State, and local welfare and social insurance programs, and he made the comment that less than half of the poor in America receive any benefits from these programs.

Second, our current welfare programs provide the wrong incentives. For example, when a person on welfare accepts a job, he or she must pay a substantial portion of his welfare benefits. These fixed benefits are reduced by an amount corresponding to the additional income he receives. Mr. Chairman, it is evident, therefore, that our current programs are simply not working and we must have a new approach. I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman and members of the committee, that we have a new approach in the family assistance program which we are considering today. This approach, in my opinion, overcomes the weaknesses that are present in the current Federal, State, and local welfare programs.

For example, the benefits under FAP will go directly to the needy because they will be based upon income. Second, FAP will provide a positive work incentive, whereas under present programs we have negative incentives.

I think it was the late President Kennedy in his inaugural address in January 1961 who repopularized an old Chinese proverb:

A journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step.

I think we are taking today a significant first step if we adopt the family assistance program.

As the previous speaker, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Bingham) indicated, there are some Members who feel that there should be broader coverage and that the benefit level should be greater than that which is proposed in H.R. 16311.

As a matter of fact, I joined the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers) in presenting such a bill. But if I recall my time, due to the present Federal budget stringencies, it is not very practicable to think in terms of broadening coverage right now.

Therefore, I would like to suggest to those who would have me believe as I believe that ultimately the program should be broadened, that the benefit level should be increased, that we are today indeed taking a significant first step. We are changing direction, we have come up with an innovative program. It is for this reason that I intend to vote affirmatively for H.R. 16311 and I would urge my colleagues to do likewise.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Burton).

( Mr. BURTON of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BURTON of California. Initially, Mr. Chairman, I would like to record my support for the pending legislation and my commendation to the administration for their willing understanding to come forth with this proposal.

For those of our colleagues who are concerned that this proposal is too rich for their blood, I might note that a $1,600 annual base for a family of four hardly compares favorably with the Bureau of Labor Statistics findings that it takes some $5,500 a year for a family of four in the major urban areas of the country to live at some comfort level.

I must also state that I think the administration bill was somewhat preferable in the family plan than that which the committee presented, and I make the specific reference to the fact that in the administration proposal the unearned income was permitted to be disregarded by the committee, the committee deleted this benefit to the extent which had the effect, I think, of legislatorially, of taking some $600 million or $700 million per year out of their pockets.

However, with reference to the adult program the Nixon administration provided literally no assistance to the elderly, the blind, and the disabled in this country. It merely increased the Federal matching which was going to result—essentially—in savings to the States. In this regard I think the committee is to be highly commended for their significant changes in the adult category by providing some protections to the aged, to the blind, and disabled people.

And, finally, Mr. Chairman, I would like to note this: A number of my colleagues on the Democratic side of the aisle have privately noted that if the bill does not work, Republicans are going to have to take the full blame. Well, I happen to feel that that is just so much nonsense.

I am not sure this bill is going to work perfectly and I do not think the administration has said that. But anyone who knows anything about this field knows that our current program not only does not work and the costs of that program are skyrocketing. For those who are going to oppose this bill, I think the only way one can interpret that vote is that they are on record supporting the current mess that we have and these skyrocketing costs. The current program will be theirs to defend and not mine. I am going to support the legislation.

I ask Chairman Mills, it is my understanding that under present law and under this bill the food stamp bonus will be disregarded in figuring the amount of adult assistance payments. Is that right?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. Under present law and regulations, home produce used by the household for its own consumption is disregarded as income or as a resource for adult public assistance recipients. Would you permit this to continue, would it not?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. It is my understanding that under the adult assistance provisions of the type which would be disregarded under the family assistance provisions the bill would also be disregarded as part of the rehabilitative services disregarded under the family assistance provisions, which apply in particular to the disabled and the blind. Is that right?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. It is my understanding that it is the intention of this bill that the authority of the Secretary to set the 25-percenter Federal matching ceiling in the adult categories would not be invoked at a lower level of average payment, including full Federal participation, than the highest levels of average payment now made by the States under current State programs for the aged, blind, and disabled. Is that your understanding also?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. It is my understanding that the minimum payment to adults provided in section 1603 (b) shall be in the form of a cash payment which when added to an individual's other income, not disregarded under the bill, will be at least $110 a month. That term would not include any amounts provided for medical care, except, of course, in the case of institutionalized people. Is that right?

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. If a State chooses Federal administration of the adult assistance categories, then the Federal Government would administer the program in accordance with requirements of Federal law whether or not the State plan was in full compliance with Federal law.

Mr. MILLS. Yes.

Mr. BURTON of California. Mr. Chairman, enactment of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970, is a sound first step in the progress of public assistance structure. It provides benefits that are far below any objective gage of poverty and will provide only marginal assistance to all too many of our neediest citizens. Thirteen Members of the House have joined me in signing the following statement in support of significantly higher income guarantees than those provided in H.R. 16311:

We believe all Americans are entitled to an adequate income from wages, welfare, or both. Surveys by the U.S. Department of Labor demonstrate that an urban family of four needs $5500 to live at a low level with an adequate diet. A Gallup Poll of January 25, 1970, says that the average American believes a family of four needs $120 a week (6240 a year) to get along.

Therefore: 1. A real welfare reform must be based on the amount of money actually needed for family needs.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics regularly compiles such data that reflects what people actually must spend to obtain decent food, clothing, and shelter.

We support the implementation of the Department of Labor's determination of need. The Nixon administration presented an objective standard of need as already determined by government agencies.

2. We criticize, as inadequate, the income levels proposed in H.R. 16311 as a sound step toward the elimination of poverty. Although FAP will provide a positive work incentive, it does not include any amounts provided for medical care, except, of course, in the case of institutionalized people. I think we are taking today a significant first step.

A journey of a thousand miles begins with the first step.
as a result the bill has been measurably strengthened. I submit for the Record now these recommendations so that all Members may familiarize themselves with them. We will be working in the months ahead to further strengthen the bill. Under the lines the task force has recommended so that the final product will, while remaining within the administration's fiscal and programmatic guidelines, ensure that every Federal dollar counts toward the welfare of recipients.

In addition I submit for the Record the Democratic Study Group's Fact Sheet entitled "Proposed Welfare Reform." This analysis was coordinated and developed by our brilliant and hard working staff member, Rick Merrill. In my view this document provides an extremely useful summary of the bill and analysis of its key provisions and points of controversy.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS ON PRESIDENT NIXON'S WELFARE PROGRAMS

The Task Force on Health and Welfare herewith submits its report and recommendations regarding President Nixon's welfare proposals to the DSG membership. The report and recommendations were forwarded to all Democratic members of the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committee, as well as to appropriate Government agencies and officials.

The Task Force, at the request of the DSG membership, has been studying this issue since last October, when H.R. 14173, the Administration's welfare reform bill, was introduced in the House. The Task Force held a number of meetings and briefings, and some of these sessions were held with Mr. Ben Heineman, Chairman of President Johnson's Commission on Income Maintenance, former HEW Secretary, Wilbur Cohen, and an Administration briefing team headed by Presidential Counselor Daniel Moynihan and HEW Under Secretary John Veneman.

The Nixon welfare proposals contain a number of initiatives, particularly with respect to coverage for all families with children and Federal participation in family assistance programs. The Task Force recommends approval of the Nixon Family Assistance Plan as a sound step toward the elimination of poverty in the United States. The Administration's intention that the DSG leadership, has been studying this issue since last October, is reflected in this Task Force report and recommendation for approval of the Administration's proposals, with the following additions:

1. To increase $150 per month (from the $90 per month) for the Nation's aged, blind, and disabled.
2. To provide for a cost-of-living escalator clause in the Administration's guarantee.
3. To reduce the age eligibility from the present 65 years to age 60 for men and age 55 for women.
4. To increase earnings permitted to $100 per month for the aged and the same amount for the blind and disabled with an earning increase of up to $50 per month in addition to the $100 disregard.
5. To require the states to fully meet any federal share of the costs but not to meet needs—needs of aged, blind, and disabled recipients.
6. To provide that no individual receives reduction in his benefit (Federal or state) from what he is currently receiving.
7. To provide for the temporary suspension of the disregard of $7.50 per month of outside income. In the event a 6% rate of unemployment is reached, the Task Force recommends that the disregard be eliminated.
8. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
9. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
10. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
11. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
12. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.

The Task Force recommends approval of the Administration's proposals, with the following additions:

1. To increase $150 per month (from the $90 per month) for the Nation's aged, blind, and disabled.
2. To provide for a cost-of-living escalator clause in the Administration's guarantee.

12. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.

FAMILY ASSISTANCE PLAN RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Labor standard safeguards contained in the DSG Plan should be clarified, including definitions of wage levels and conditions under which job offers will be considered suitable.
2. Any work provisions for mothers should in all instances place the interests of the child or children first.
3. The Nixon Plan should contain a commitment to full federalization of family assistance, with benefit levels raised to the poverty level in equal stages within a specific time period.
4. Only net earned income, after deducting the expenses of seeking, obtaining, or holding a job, should be considered in the calculation of the family assistance grant.
5. The Nixon Plan should contain a provision automatically to all family assistance beneficiaries in amounts for which they are eligible.
6. States should be required to meet budget-cut needs in their family assistance programs, at the risk of loss of other Federal funds.
7. Assurance should be provided that no family receives a reduction in its grant (Federal and state) from what it is currently receiving.

AGED, BLIND, AND DISABLED PROGRAM RECOMMENDATIONS

The Task Force recommends approval of the Administration's proposals, with the following additions:

1. To increase $150 per month (from the $90 per month) for the Nation's aged, blind, and disabled.
2. To provide for a cost-of-living escalator clause in the Administration's guarantee.
3. To reduce the age eligibility from the present 65 years to age 60 for men and age 55 for women.

8. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
9. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
10. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
11. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.
12. To include within the disregard of $7.50 per month all income which is income from any other source, including income from a former spouse or other relative.

PROPOSED WELFARE REFORMS

This DSG Fact Sheet deals with H.R. 16311, which contains President Nixon's basic recommendations for reform of public assistance programs. The bill establishes a new Family Assistance Plan (FAP) with Federal eligibility standards and benefit provisions for families with children. The bill also provides Federal eligibility standards and minimums for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled.

The Ways and Means Committee reported the bill (H. Rept. 91-904) on March 11 by a vote of 21-3. The Rules Committee is expected to grant a closed rule on Tuesday, April 7. Floor consideration will begin Wednesday, April 8, subject to a rule being granted.

SECTION ONE

Current public assistance programs contain a major component of assistance to families with dependent children (AFDC), and adult assistance programs for the aged, the blind, and the disabled. Both components are administered by the States or by localities with State supervision, with widely varying eligibility standards, benefit levels, and work requirements. As a result, AFDC benefits range from an average of $44 per month in Mississippi to $624 per month in New Jersey. Adult assistance benefits range from an average of $940 per month for the aged in Mississippi to $180 per month for the blind in California. About 6.7 million individuals receive AFDC. Another 3 million individuals receive assistance under programs for the aged, the blind, and the disabled.

Concern over public assistance programs has focused primarily on AFDC due to the rising rate of families applying for such assistance. The last significant expansion of AFDC was the 1967 Amendments to the Social Security Act, which provided: "The "freeze," temporarily suspended and repealed in June 1966, on the number of eligible children in a given state receiving AFDC due to absence of a parent from the home.

Mandatory referral of "appropriate" AFDC recipients for work training projects, with the word "appropriate" for the first time to be defined "appropriate" under Federal-state guidelines.

Work incentives providing for exclusion of first $300 per month earned plus one-third of the remainder, after deduction of the wages of working.

State rolls, however, continued to rise and a number of Federal agencies began to systematically analyze the public assistance programs. The Committee generally begins to question traditional assumptions about public assistance beneficiaries. Most importantly, welfare recipient work is viewed in the overall context of poverty in the United States.

As a result of these various studies, new information about poverty, and the poor generally came to light:

- Income at the government-defined poverty level for a family of four allowed about $100 per year for items other than basic necessities, such as medical care, furniture, and school supplies.

The food budget for an average welfare family was discovered to be $1 per day per person—too low for a nutritionally adequate diet, according to the Department of Agriculture.

In a total public assistance population of about 10 million persons, only $5,000, or 1 in 20, were found to be able-bodied employable males.

In the course of such findings and mounting pressure for reorganization, the administration, taxpayers, and welfare recipients themselves, the Nixon Administration in August of 1969, introduced the Federal Assistance Plan (FAP) for welfare reform, along with recommendations for consolidation and a basic Federal minimum payment in the aged, blind, and disabled programs.

The President's proposals generally received widespread public support. On March 11, 1970, after extensive hearings, the Committee on Ways and Means reported H.R. 16311 containing the key elements of the President's proposal: four Federal minimums and eligibility standards for family assistance and for programs for the aged, blind, and disabled.

Summary

H.R. 16311 terminates Federal participation in AFDC programs and instead establishes a Federal minimum for any year for a family of four with no other income. Work incentive earned income exclusions permit a family of four to earn $3,600 before losing any Federal supplement completely. FAP provides Federal eligibility standards that would include families headed by an unemployed man in the home and the first of families headed by a full time employed person.

The bill requires States to maintain programs to supplement FAP up to their January 1970 level of payment or the poverty level, whichever is lower. States receive 30% in Federal matching funds for these supplementary programs. States would receive no Federal funds for programs to assist the working poor.

The bill provides tight Federal requirements for registration and referral for job training and employment programs to be developed by the States. Mothers of pre-school children need not register, but the bill requires all others, including the working poor, to register for job training. The bill authorizes grants up to 100% of the Federal-State programs and sets Federal eligibility standards and income exclusion provisions. The bill provides a minimum payment of $110 per month for all aged, blind, and disabled families who have no other income.

The Committee bill authorizes grants up to 90% of the Federal-State programs to assist the States in the administration of the bill and an estimated $100 million in direct Federal costs. Thirty percent of the Senate Appropriations Committee Bill adds an estimated $300 million in savings to the States in the PAP Committee bill adds an estimated $600 million in direct Federal costs.

Summary of key differences between administration proposal and H.R. 16311

The Committee bill consolidates existing Federal-State programs and sets up the Federal-State programs into a single program for the aged, blind, and disabled. Federal and State administration of both the PAP and the State supplementary program would be required to follow the rules for PAP, except in the case of the work incentive earned income exclusion. The complicated earned income formula for the State supplement, when combined with the FAP work incentive exclusion, would have roughly the same impact as the current disregard (all working expenses plus $80 per month plus one-third of earnings above this amount.)

Administration of FAP

The bill provides three possible administrative arrangements: Federal administration of both the FAP and the State supplementary program in the case of the Federal Government would pay all the administrative costs of both programs.

State administration of both the FAP and the State supplementary program in the case of the Federal Government would equally divide the costs of administering the State supplementary program.

The bill also contains a provision under which derelict parents would incur an obligation to the Federal Government for the amount of Federal payments to their families under FAP. Other provisions authorize $20 million for research and demonstration projects to improve FAP and technical assistance to the States.

Service Programs

Individuals registered under the FAP would be provided an "employability plan" and services and training similar to those provided under the current work incentive (WIN) program. Existing manpower training programs would be utilized where possible and State welfare departments would be required to provide health care and other services to enable an individual to participate. Each individual participating in a training program would receive $30 per month and allowances to cover transportation and other associated costs. The Federal Government would pay 90% of the costs of such training programs.

The bill authorizes grants up to 100% to public or private agencies for day care programs for children of manpower training participants. For school-age children, group or institutional care would be provided through local educational agencies whenever possible. Fees for child care could be charged on the basis of a family's ability to pay.

The bill authorizes 90% Federal matching grants for services supporting manpower training programs. HEW will make further recommendations for social services in the near future.

This level would be adjusted annually to reflect changing living costs. Thirty percent in Federal matching funds would be available for this supplementation. The Federal Government would pay 90% of the administrative costs of State supplementary programs.

The bill would also provide for the supplementation of 30% of the earnings of those newly eligible under the FAP standard, except the working poor. All States would be required to supplement the benefits of families where the father is unemployed or where a child is between 18 and 21 and in school, both now at State option, except in the case of the work incentive earned income exclusion. The complicated earned income formula for the State supplement, when combined with the FAP work incentive exclusion, would have roughly the same impact as the current disregard (all working expenses plus $80 per month plus one-third of earnings above this amount.)
The bill would repeal current Federal programs for the aged (OAA), blind (AB), and permanently and totally disabled (APTD) and establish a new comprehensive program of old-age, survivors, and disability benefits. The bill provides for a monthly benefit minimum of $110 for a family of four living in 1970. The Administration recommends a basic benefit of $110 per month with a maximum of $500. The bill also provides for Federal contributions of 50% to 90% of the State's share of administrative costs depending on the relative costs of administration in the State. The Administration proposes a $300 million Federal matching fund for the program.

The Administration proposes that the Federal Government pay 50% of administrative costs in cases where the State matches the Federal contribution. The Administration also recommends that the Federal Government pay 60% of the cost of supplementary benefits and 75% of the cost of food stamps for families with incomes up to 150% of the Federal poverty level. The bill also recommends that the Federal Government contribute $300 million to the State's share of administrative costs.

noted the desirability of providing benefits higher cash payments only, but said it could not devise a program to accomplish this end within Administration cost guidelines.

Alternative proposals, including the Harris bill, recommend abolishing food stamp assistance in favor of a smaller cash supplement. Rep. Gibbons of the Committee in additional views recommends an immediate integrated cash-benefit program, both to eliminate the interaction of the food stamp program and to save substantial administrative costs.

Manpower training and employment programs

The 1967 Amendments to the Social Security Act provided for a work incentive program (WIN) administered by the Department of Labor rather than HEW through state welfare administrations. The program fell below Congressional expectations because of Department of Labor and HEW slowness in promulgating guidelines, varying State interpretations of the guidelines for referral, inability of States to develop effective training programs, and inadequate provision for administrative costs.

Both the Committee bill and the Administration proposal abolish the old WIN program and replace it with a new federal program with tight referral provisions to eliminate differing interpretations of referral requirements. Both also contain specific provisions for State cost sharing and coordination with existing programs. Both authorize about $600 million for expanded manpower training and day care facilities.

In order to insure adequate day care facilities, the Committee bill provides for complete Federal financing for day care programs as a Federal matching Federal matching in the Administration proposal. The Committee bill also contains increased emphasis on special work projects where employment in the regular economy is not available, and on-the-job training with new financing formulas under the Department of Labor.

Alternative proposals recognize the necessity of providing work training opportunities for family assistance beneficiaries but stress the need to provide meaningful employment, with the Federal government the employer of last resort.

Costs

Both the Administration proposal and the Committee proposal are based on Revision of the Bureau of the Budget to add $4.4 BILLION to current public assistance expenditure levels for the first full year of operation. Both provide about $600 million for job training and day care and $300 million for administration in appropriation estimates.

Estimates of costs are based on 1968 data and are predicated on 100% participation in the programs. Estimates for administrative costs are based on the Committee proposal for full Federal financing. Following are the breakdowns for the Administration proposal and the Committee bill:

The Administration proposal would have provided an additional $3 BILLION in payments to families, reduced by elimination of the Federal matching formula to $2.8 BILLION in the Committee bill.

The Administration proposal would have provided $1.5 billion in relief to the States (the 50%—90% formula) raised under the new formula matching formula to $600 million.

The Administration proposal would have provided an additional $400 million for aged, blind, and disabled, raised to $500 million due to the increase in the Federal minimum from $90 per month to $110 per month.

Alternative proposals are estimated to add from $7 billion (Harris bill) to $30 billion (National Welfare Rights Organization) to public assistance costs in the first full year of operation.

AABD minimum benefits

The Administration proposal contained a Federal minimum of $80 per month for aged, blind, and disabled beneficiaries with no other income. The Committee raised this minimum to $110 per month. The Committee bill also contains a new formula for Federal participation that makes it impossible for States to avoid a contribution, as they could, under the Administration formula. The Administration proposal would set the Federal family assistance minimum to a level that would adequately cover present AABD recipients and permit abolition of current AABD for the favor of a single Federal formula for the needy.

AABD income disregards and eligibility requirements

For the blind the Administration proposal and the Committee bill both have a mandatory disregard of the first $5 per month of earned income plus one-half the remaining income disregards for the aged, and disabled, this Administration proposal allowed the first $20 per month of earned income plus one-half the remainder up to $65 per month (existing law). The Committee bill extends to the disabled the same earnings disregard accorded the blind and permits disregard the first $80 per month plus one-half the remainder for the aged.

The Committee bill contains a provision allowing a one-half option disregard of $75 per month of earned or unearned income, and a mandatory $4 per month disregard for Social Security recipients. The Committee bill also drops a provision in the Administration proposal that expressly prohibited States from imposing property limitations against all public assistance recipients of benefits paid them.

Special provisions

Work Registration Requirements

Pro: Work registration requirements will provide an additional incentive to get people off welfare rolls and onto employment rolls. Since 11 million mothers of children under 18 now receive payment, should not not receive special treatment. Requiring the working poor to register will permit upgrading of skills and allow the Department of Labor to develop a more adequate database from which to analyze poverty.

Con: Registration requirements only perpetuate the myth that most welfare recipients are shiftless chiselers. Requiring mothers of children over six to register is potentially harmful to the development of the children; mothers should be allowed to determine the extent to which their presence is needed in the home. The requirement that the working poor register will swamp unemployment services. The bill in addition establishes no priorities for referral of registrants for job training. The working poor (including the members of the Armed Forces), mothers of children under six volunteering for training, and unemployed fathers will all get the same treatment.

Work Incentives

Pro: By permitting people to hold full-time jobs while still receiving family assistance, the bill significantly reduces the incentive to quit work and go on welfare. The Federal uniform initial work incentive of $720 per month plus one-half the remainder allows individuals to keep enough earnings to make work worthwhile and supercedes with a greater incentive varying amounts to existing exempsts.

Con: The so-called initial $720 plus one-half the remainder work incentive in the bill in effect excludes the amount of money needed to meet the costs of employment, already provided for in the 1967 Amendments. The much-vaunted 50% marginal tax rate is deceptive, because when one takes other public assistance income such as unemployment compensation and State and local taxes, as much as 90% of each dollar over $720 is deducted, thereby eliminating all financial incentives in the bill.

Work Training and Child Care Programs

Pro: Work training and employment programs contain the essential elements with the ability to obtain adequately paying employment and get off welfare. Since successful work trainees have a large measure on adequate day care facilities, the Committee bill provides full Federal... financing for day care, which will spur development of day care facilities by the States and localities.

Con: Emphasis on work training programs

Pro: The new Federal need determination and disregard provisions will save State administrative costs and insure that recipients are treated equally in all jurisdictions. Disregard provisions of the bill will prove almost useless because of a provision for disregard of tuition.

Incentive for families to spend their limited savings or life-insurance on additional household goods to qualify for benefits.

Unemployment Definition

Both supporters and critics agree that one of the major shortcomings of the bill is its reliance on the current definition of unemployment as working less than 30 hours a week. As long as the working poor are excluded, Federally assisted State supplementary programs, the current definition creates a work disincentive for many working poor. Individuals in States with a level of payment over $2,100 can receive additional income (and, in some States, qualify for Medicaid) if they can come close to their previous level of working 30 hours a week instead of full-time.

One remedy would be to define unemployment as a period during which a person does not work but cannot find other work. This would make it difficult for a person to earn his benefit, will produce sufficient additional income to on basis of latest Federal-State program for assisting 2.2 million disabled (APTD).

The amount of assistance a family could receive under H.R. 16311 will vary depending upon many factors, including the number of persons in the family, the family’s income, and the State in which the family resides. To determine the family’s total supplement for all States, one must first determine the amount of the Federal supplement and then the amount of the State supplement.

Federal supplement

Determining the Federal supplement is a three-step process:
1. Earned Income—As used in H.R. 16311, all remuneration for services performed as an employee and net earnings from self-employment.
2. Unearned Income—As used in HR. 16311, all income received other than wages or salary in the form of interest, dividends, net proceeds from the sale of a personal property, rents, royalties, and alimony payments.
3. Special disregard provisions, applicable to families with an income past the FAP break-even point ($3,920) but still eligible for state assistance.

Thus a family of four with total earnings of $2,000 (and no disregable income) would receive a Federal supplement of $960, as follows:
1. $2000 (earnings) minus $720 equals $1280.
2. $1280 divided by 2 equals $640.
3. $1600 (basic FAP) minus $640 equals $960 Federal supplement.

State supplement

Determining the State supplement is also at three steps:
1. Find the difference between the following amounts: Earnings minus $720, one-third of earnings minus $720, and total earnings.
2. Add the family’s Federal supplement to this amount.
3. Subtract this figure from the State’s current level of payment (determined from table on reverse side).

Thus our family of four with $2,000 earning $1,415, State supplement. $960.

Total supplement

Thus the total supplement for an Illinois family of four earning $2,000 a year would be $2,275, being the family’s total income to $4,375, as follows:
3. Find the difference between the family’s total income and the Federal supplement.
4. Add the family’s State supplement to this amount.

Thus the total supplement for an Illinois family of four earning $2,000 a year would be $2,275, being the family’s total income to $4,375, as follows:

Mr. RUTH. Mr. Chairman, for several weeks I have been telling my constituents that I would like to hear the debate before making up my mind on this issue, and then the amount of the State supplement.
and there are several points that I would like to mention.

First, for a bill of this magnitude I am disappointed that the proponents are not talking about the merits of the bill to the extent that they have. It is better than what we have.

Second, if a pilot program has been conducted in two States for about a year, it seems we should either have more definite evidence or wait until we have more evidence as to its effectiveness.

Third, it seems if this were a business enterprise the chairman would be saying "We have a failure on our hands. We are going to change a few formulas, include a new people, refine it, and try it some more".

Fourth, I hate to see the campaigns of the future become based on the amount of the guaranteed income promised by the candidates.

Fifth, I hope we do not vote for work incentives which turn out to be just the opposite. We should be less concerned with what we hope this bill would do, and more concerned with what the bill will actually do.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the Members that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. BYRNES) has 24 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS) has 20 minutes remaining.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. CLEVELAND) who has been given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. CLEVELAND. Mr. Chairman, I have taken this time to inquire further from the gentleman from Arkansas and the gentleman from Wisconsin concerning details of this bill. One of the questions I would like to ask of the gentleman from Arkansas, who is on the floor, is that I am concerned about the rural poor. The President stated in his state of the Union message that we probably have a tendency now among our people to misuse bad statistics. I think that here we have some definite evidence to indicate that many of the people who have been on the farms all their life, who have a right to know who they are, are discouraged from working, and encouraged to stay on the farm, and that fact is not necessarily a matter of the individuals but of the whole community. I think that here we have some definite evidence to indicate that many of these incentives which turn out to be just the same as the Guaranteed Income promised by the proponents that the FAP, which will by 1975 be costing only a little more than existing programs would-if we did not change them. In order to determine the anticipated cost of existing programs, if unchanged, it is assumed that the estimates for the family assistance plan in order to provide the transportation, if anything, going to give an incentive to make it possible for him to and from his training, if that is necessary, to make it possible for him to attend his training. They would have to do that.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I would comment simply by saying that I do not think this can be considered as encouraging people to stay in the rural areas. I think it is, if anything, going to give an incentive to move in the rural areas where they can travel a short distance to apply and travel a short distance to their training program, and where inevitably the recommended job will be located.

Mr. MILLS. In my own area, I envision a situation where three counties might be included for the purposes of one training center. But the employment security office would have to make available to the individual such transportation as necessary to enable him to carry out his instructions to attend a course of training. They would have to do that.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I would comment simply by saying that I do not think this can be considered as encouraging people to stay in the rural areas. I think that he was right in saying that the people who have been on the farms all their life, when adversity comes along and they find they are not making the living on the farm that they want to, to go to the city. I think that here we have some degree of opportunity to train these people for the jobs for employment. It may be in a town where they get that employment or within the city. But they could take their training while they are at home. They do not have to go into the city in order to get that.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I have another question that I would like to ask, if the chairman would be so kind.

Is there any provision in this bill which deals with the question as to whether people who register under the provisions of this act—whether their names will be made public under our public information laws?

Mr. MILLS. There is a special regulation within the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare dealing with these matters prohibiting, say, a newspaper from going to an office and getting a full list of these names. The names of these people will be made available to the prospective employers; that is, to people who have a right to know who they are.

Mr. CLEVELAND. To a certain extent, they will be published.

Mr. MILLS. Yes; to that extent.

Mr. CLEVELAND. Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, I regret that there is no more time to explore a number of other questions which I have about this program, and which I have not heard satisfactorily answered in this debate.

A significant point is that the proposed bill will more than double the number of persons who will be registered at the State employment security offices. Though Congress may get around to increasing the appropriation to provide for this, I personally tend to doubt it.

Will we be prepared for the deluge of applicants which will descend upon the employment security offices?

A second aspect of this bill which I question is that social security recipients who qualify for family assistance will lose their FAP reduced by the amount of their social security payments. Yet if these same people want to help themselves instead of relying on the dole, they will run into a $1,600 earnings limit. They are discouraged from working, and encouraged to stay on the farm, and that fact is not necessarily a matter of the individuals but of the whole community. I think that here we have some definite evidence to indicate that many of these incentives which turn out to be just the same as the Guaranteed Income promised by the proponents that the FAP, which will by 1975 be costing only a little more than existing programs would-if we did not change them. In order to determine the anticipated cost of existing programs, if unchanged, it is assumed that the estimates for the family assistance plan in order to provide the transportation, if anything, going to give an incentive to make it possible for him to and from his training, if that is necessary, to make it possible for him to attend his training. They would have to do that.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Chairman, I would comment simply by saying that I do not think this can be considered as encouraging people to stay in the rural areas. I think it is, if anything, going to give an incentive to move in the rural areas where they can travel a short distance to apply and travel a short distance to their training program, and where inevitably the recommended job will be located.

Mr. MILLS. In my own area, I envision a situation where three counties might be included for the purposes of one training center. But the employment security office would have to make available to the individual such transportation as necessary to enable him to carry out his instructions to attend a course of training. They would have to do that.

Mr. CLEVELAND. I thank the gentleman.

Can we honestly say that we are not going to give periodic increases to compensate for inflation, just as we do in all other programs? Yet if we do, the FAP will be much more expensive than even the existing program.

Not only are the cost projections suspect, but the Legislative Reference Service tells me that there is reason to believe that the recent rapid growth in the cost of AFDC is leveling out. Yet the figures cited project that the rate of increase will be the same as that of the last three years. This too should be clarified.

Mr. Speaker, by no means am I opposed to giving to those truly in need and my record amply proves that. However, I raise these questions because I doubt whether the proposed reforms are any better than the existing situation, which apparently we all deplore. About the only thing that is certain about the family assistance plan is that it will immediately add at least 10 to 15 million people to the rolls.

About the lowest estimate of its cost put forth is approximately $5 billion. For this same amount, we could adopt the Prouty proposals to give all social security recipients adequate retirement income—$1,800 for one person, $2,400 for two people—as well as eliminate the anti-incentive earnings limit on social security for all people over 65. This certainly seems a better investment than pay-out dollars, if we want to put them where they would do some real good at no additional administrative cost.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Boggs) 5 minutes.

Mr. BOGGS. Mr. Chairman, we are coming to the end of this debate which, in my judgment, has been a most significant and enlightening one in attempting to show to the Members of the House the pressing need for welfare reform in our country.

As all of you know, this bill came to the floor after many weeks of intensive hearings and after many weeks of executive sessions in the Committee on Ways and Means, with only three of the 25 members on the committee against it. I believe that more than a majority of the members on the Committee on Ways and Means at the beginning of the hearings approached the proposals with considerable misgivings. But after examining alternatives, and after looking hard, carefully, and critically at the existing welfare programs and how they have worked over the past 30 years, after a full and intensive debate, the committee came, as I said, to a unanimous conclusion that this was the proper and right thing to do.

There is almost universal agreement among those concerned with our present welfare system that that system, particularly with respect to the program for needy families with children, has failed. This bill is being proposed to remedy this situation by an approach that recognizes that we can no longer attempt to patch up what is basically an unsound structure.

The present AFDC program is characterized by incentives to family breakup and by the inequitable exclusion from assistance of poor families in which the father is employed. The bill has come to replace this program with an entirely new program—the family assistance plan. Under this plan, for the first time, on a nationwide basis, families with unemployed fathers would be able to receive benefits; at present, AFDC benefits are available to such families in some States but not in others. Also, working poor families would be provided assistance, for the first time, on a nationwide basis.

It is time we recognized that it is bad social policy to have families in like situations treated differently because of the employment status of the family head—a policy that has all too often made it more attractive to go on welfare than to go to work. The exclusion of families in which the father is working has acted as an incentive for fathers to become unemployed or leave home in order to qualify for family assistance. H.R. 16311 would do much to correct these inequities.

Another inequity to which this bill addresses itself, and in my opinion successfully, is the very large variations in pay-out levels and conditions of eligibility among the present State programs. Under this bill, all dependent families with children in America, regardless of where they live, would be assured of a Federal minimum standard of income—$1,600 for a family of four—based upon uniform eligibility standards. Moreover, families will be able to keep a fair share of their earnings. The first $720 of earnings a year will be completely disregarded, and above this amount, benefits will be reduced by only $1 for every $2 of earnings. This treatment of earned income would provide a strong incentive both to take employment and to increase one's earnings. A family with a working member will always be better off than a family without a working member. This provision gives recognition in the case of the welfare recipient of a fact of life so fundamental and so obvious that the rest of us have always taken it for granted—simply that if a person would be better off working, he will work. To illustrate the effect of this provision, it would be possible, for a family of four to receive some benefits under the program until its income reached $3,920. At the family's income increases over the basic $720 of exempted income, its benefit payment would, of course, be reduced.

In addition to the obvious advantage to the recipient of uniform eligibility standards is the fact that such standards allow for uniform administrative mechanisms, so that we could take advantage of the economies of scale that are possible with an automated and nationally administered system.

Another important reform provided under the bill is the requirement that every able-bodied adult member of a family—except mothers who have pre-school-age children or others specifically exempted such as those with a disabled family member to care for—register for work or training. There is no other single provision in this bill that is more fundamental to the success of our efforts to transform welfare into work and training.

An important change in this bill would make in the present welfare system relates to the programs which provide aid to our citizens who are in financial need due to old age or due to blindness or other crippling disabilities. It is important that we not allow the urgent need to reform the program of aid to families with dependent children to overshadow our concern for and commitment to our older citizens. I have been greatly concerned about the inadequacy and unevenness of assistance payments now being made to recipients of aid under the adult categories.

I am pleased that this bill would take constructive and very much needed steps to revise and improve the substance and operation of these adult programs. In particular, the bill would require that States assu re that each aged, blind, and disabled adult will receive assistance sufficient to bring his total income up to at least $110 a month. This measure is the result of great concern for our citizens who are finding it increasingly difficult under the inflationary conditions that prevail today to live on their present fixed inadequate incomes.

I am also glad to see that the bill would provide more uniform requirements under the adult programs for such eligibility factors as the level and type of resources allowed and the degree of disability and blindness required for eligibility and quality for assistance. In addition, the bill would liberalize the earnings exemptions under these programs. The earnings exemption for recipients of old-age assistance, which is optional with the States, would be made consistent with that under the family assistance program—the first $60 a month plus one-half of the remainder. The exemption for permanently disabled persons would be consistent with that which has been in effect for some years for the blind—a mandatory exemption of the first $85 a month plus one-half of the remainder. I believe these provisions provide clearly toward providing real encouragement to the severely disabled to accept rehabilitation services and employment within their capacities.

I am also pleased that under this bill, the Federal Government will make a strong contribution toward alleviating the financial burden of the States. In order to offset the States' mandatory payments, the bill provides that the Federal Government would pay 30 percent of a State's supplementary payment costs up to the poverty level. This representation is an important improvement over the original proposal under which States were assured a savings of 10 to 50 percent of their costs in the federally assisted public assistance programs.

The inclusion of the new provision under which the Federal Government will pay 30 percent of a State's supplementary payment costs should go a long way toward providing relief for the financially burdened States and in a
Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 8 minutes.

(Mr. CONABLE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Chairman, and my colleagues, one thing that we have proven in the past 2 days of debate has been that Alexander Pope knew what he was talking about when he said in one of his famous couplets:

All looks yellow to the jaundiced eye.

I do not blame my colleagues for being a little jaundiced about this whole subject. It has been a very visible part of our social structure. It has been subject to a great deal of criticism because it has not been working. We are not so much trapped in a semantic sense as embarrassed by the emotional surcharge that the word has acquired over the years of misdirection of our welfare program.

And when we talk about adding people to the welfare rolls, that means something to us that frightens us instinctively, because when we think of the welfare rolls we think of people who are not working but who are participating in the largesse of the taxpayers, the productive elements of our society.

When we talk about adding people to the welfare rolls in this bill, we are not describing the traditional sense. Of the millions that are added, many are going to be added only in a peripheral sense. They are going to be people who will receive only a modest amount of welfare, who are already working and who are ineligible for welfare now, because they are working. In short, under the bill they are going to be receiving supplements, not traditional welfare.

This is the only way in fact that we can design a bill that will make it worthwhile for people to work. I do not know about my colleagues, but I will tell Members that one of the toughest matters I have to answer is the letter which comes from a man who says that he works very hard, he has been working all his lifetime, and he has never been able to participate in the affluence of America. The fellow across the street from him, his wife and children are on welfare, and he is making more money than the man who works. Therefore, he asks, why should he continue to work when it is costing him money.

We have talked a great deal about incentives, and those who have been viewing this bill with a jaundiced eye have said that in this bill the incentive of this bill is not going to work. In fact, they say we are just adding millions to the welfare rolls and increasing dependency rather than reducing it.

Mr. Chairman, this country has paid more than lip service to the incentive system for 300 years. The incentive system has served this country well, although only a minority of our population has been participating in an incentive system. The bottom 10 percent has had a disincentive to work. In fact, they have been criticized by members of their own families for refusing to go on welfare, because it was economically advantageous for them to do so.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, will the bill provide the incentive instead of a children-producing incentive in the sense the gentleman is talking about.

Mr. HAYS. I hope it does, but it seems to me that it provides both.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas, the chairman of the committee.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call to the attention of my friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HAYS), the fact that in this bill there is more incentive to work, bearing in mind that the person who was mentioned by the gentleman from Ohio will not continue on this program to get one penny for himself until he goes to the employment office and registers for work and training. He must do that before he can get even one cent.

Mr. HAYS. He will have a doctor's certificate to say that he is not able to work.

Mr. MILLS. Then he is not able to work.

Mr. HAYS. He is able, but he will get a certificate from his doctor stating he is not able.

Mr. MILLS. If the gentleman will yield further, the local office of the agency in the gentleman's hometown where the person applies for benefits or is referred for training and work will have their own doctors and they can examine that gentleman.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Chairman, the critics of this plan have attacked...
Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to assure my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio, that when we come to our first witness, I do know the gentleman knew in his hometown, whom he knew all his life, and who was raising his kids, the gentleman suspected, to stay on welfare, when I started to rise it was not because I suspected that constituent to be of one particular race or the other.

I want to assure the gentleman of that. I am glad he explained who this person was.

I have some disagreement, not on the question of the ethnic background of that one single person mentioned. I am sorry he is in the gentleman's town and is a constituent.

I was questioning the premise of whether or not we are going to let one person like that stop this kind of a program. I believe there are probably some people like that in every Member's district, but I am not prepared at this time to say that this very minimal bill should not go through.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield very briefly to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. I can say to the gentleman, this is not the only case like that I know of. I could cite many of them, I cited this one because it is an extreme case and because I know it better than others.

Mr. CONABLE. I hope the gentleman will give the incentive system an opportunity to work by acknowledging the obvious economic advantage this bill gives to those who go to work or continue to work.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. CONYERS of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. CONABLE. I should like to address myself briefly to the issue of the suitability of the job offered the welfare recipient.

The point that must be made and cannot be made frequently enough is that the suitability is not going to be determined by the recipient himself or by a traditionally minded welfare worker. The issue of suitability is going to be determined by the Labor Department.

Frankly, we have to be tough on this issue because of the very type of welfare recipient the gentleman from Ohio was referring to. I believe the American people, the American taxpayers, except no less.

On this issue of suitability, it has been within our intent to limit it to the determination of the Labor Department from the word "go."

I realize there is a good deal of misgiving about this, and I hope it can be cleared up not only through our discussion of legislative intent but also in other ways.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York yields back 1 minute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin has 10 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Arkansas has 15 minutes remaining.

Mr. CONYERS of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that the minute yielded back be yielded to the gentleman from Wisconsin. I consumed at least 1 minute of the gentleman's well-known courtesy.

Mr. Chairman, the Chair will do that by unanimous consent.

The time remaining is 11 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin and 14 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, may I ask the gentleman whether he has any other speakers, other than possibly himself?

Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COLLIER).

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBISON. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ROBISON. Mr. Chairman, in the months of debate and discussion which have preceded our formal consideration of the administration's family assistance plan, I have been impressed with the overwhelming fact that it seems pre pared to defend our present system of welfare. Good men may argue about the advisability of the new program before us, but everyone seems to agree that the system we have developed, in patchwork form, over the past 35 years is not fulfilling its purpose or achieving its stated objectives. The difficulties with the past program—both conceptual and logistical—are such that the children, legitimate or not, would be eligible for increased welfare assistance. I am surprised that we have accepted, as a fact of our federal system, the wide diversity among States in the amounts given to families who, after all, are destitute in one State and in another. I am surprised that we have been so complacent about a system which people continue to label an incentive to work. I am surprised that we have not before seen the overriding need for widespread availability of day-care centers and training programs to be directly coordinated with any national program of assistance.

And it is with this backdrop, and with this appreciation of our basic problems with what has evolved in the past, that I am especially hopeful about the family assistance plan which we now consider. As a Republican who holds the belief that his party can be the vehicle for peaceful and orderly progress, I am proud of President Nixon's leadership in providing what he has rightly called, "an income strategy to deal with the most pressing domestic problem."

This "strategy" is carried out under the family assistance plan in several ways. The working poor with children are the prime beneficiaries of this new services system by having their earnings supplemented if their income is below the poverty level, so as to guarantee that they will always be making more money by working than by staying home. All adult recipients, who are not disabled, are required to register for work or job opportunity training, unless the individual is a mother of a minor child or someone. A Food Stamp program is established which will serve to narrow the gap among the various States in welfare payments. In addition, these specific components of the program are coordinated with a greater emphasis on providing day-care centers in the proximity of the affected families and on providing training opportunities for those without the skills necessary to procure dignified and worthwhile employment.

By a combination of these provisions, and together with food-stamp assistance, the early effect of this plan will be to lift some 7,000,000 low-income people above the official poverty level of $3,400 yearly for a family of four.

But it is not my purpose to scrutinize the details of the program itself. Instead, I wish to comment further on the outreach in which this piece of legislation was developed and presented, because I believe that we can all learn something from it. This is one of the most fundamental and significant reforms that may be considered in my 13 years in the Congress. Yet we do not herald in this program with slogans which go far beyond this one bill's promise. We do not claim to solve all the problems of the American people that this bill alone will still the turmoil in this Nation; we do not insure that poverty will hereafter disappear or that the program will meet every family's need. Mr. Easter, from the President on down, effective action has been quietly taken without the unnecessary bravado which, in the past, has so often come back to haunt us.

The word "meaningful" has become milked dry by so many people for so many purposes that I hesitate to use it at all anymore. But if the word continues to have any vitality at all, it does not describe what we seek to do. For example, as our society has defined it for the Family Assistance Act of 1970 is truly meaningful—as an indication of this administration's concern for the disenfranchised of our society; as a reformation of the outdated, inequitable, chaotic welfare system we currently tolerate; and as a method by which we can better serve, and train, and educate families in need. This is a responsible and responsive piece of innovative legislation. I salute the President for initiating it, and I salute the leaders of both parties here in the House for their expeditious action. The admission that this measure, coming as it does so early in 1970, might well portend this shall be the decade of hope and real accomplishment; as contrasted to the 1960's, which became, sorrowfully enough, the decade of disillusionment and unfulfilled promises.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, all throughout the debate and discussion of this bill, for the past 2 days it has become apparent that many Members of this House would firmly support the bill, believe in the fundamental concept and principle it embraces, but understandably have some reservation about the use of the word "suitable" in determining acceptance of employment by the welfare applicant. They indeed have some reservation— and, understandably so—about the definition, fullness with which they contend it is ambiguous and perhaps might be a loophole in terms of making the program work in accordance with the intent of the committee and the legislation itself.

Therefore, I intend at the proper time to offer a recommittal motion. I shall do so as a firm supporter of welfare reform legislation. The motion in sum and substance would remove the word "suitable", as well as the language of the bill as well as the definition. In order to do this we would strike section 448(b)(1) of the present bill but would make certain that the labor standards as they appear in section 448(b)(2) would be preserved.

I trust in offering this recommittal motion that this will eliminate what I think is the prime objection of many Members of the House who otherwise would support this bill.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. COLLIER. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

MR. GROSS. That sounds to me a good deal like gimmickry. Why not a motion to recommit striking out the guaranteed annual income?

Mr. COLLIER. I cannot be responsible for what the gentleman from Iowa construes this amendment to be. If he thinks it is gimmickry, the fact is that he is wrong.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. COLLIER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's graciousness in yielding to me. I do so for the purpose of asking the question what part of the language in charge of this legislation have denied the Committee of the Whole here any right to amend the bill is it the purpose of the minority to insist that there cannot be a vote on this particular matter, with this little amendment here which would not give us a clear vote on that issue?

Mr. COLLIER. The gentleman from Mississippi has been in this House much longer than I have been. He is a distinguished legislator and parliamentarian. He knows full well that this procedure is entirely in order and is certainly in keeping with what I construe to be the proper and normal process of dealing with legislation in this body.

Mr. BYRNE of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. COLLIER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BYRNE of Wisconsin. Of course, this is done under the rule. The rule provides that one motion to recommit shall be in order, and it is generally conceded by the members that a motion to recommit will be with instructions. There is no variation here at all.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLIER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. HAYS. I may say the gentleman stated that he began that he is a firm supporter of the bill, but he will offer a motion to recommit. Does that come in the rules?

Mr. COLLIER. It will make me a much firmer supporter with the motion to recommit adopted.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. COLLIER. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLMER. Yes. In reply to the statement of the gentleman from Wisconsin and the gentleman from Illinois himself, yes, it is in order, but it is the purpose of this minimum amendment— and I do not want to use the word "gimmick"—to be a way of preventing an outright vote on the matter.

Mr. COLLIER. I would have to disagree. On the other hand, I would construe it to be a method of providing the means by which Members who want to support the bill and who believe in the concept and principle can do so by a clarification of the provision of the bill which has caused them difficulty.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLIER. I am happy to yield to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may use to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers).

(Mr. CONYERS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise at this time because we believe our task is larger. Over the course of this debate no one has quarreled with the fact that the present system of welfare payments needs revision. We now will consider changes in that system when we vote on House Resolution 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970. This bill, embodying President Nixon's welfare reform package, is purported to be a progressive and drastically different approach to meeting the crisis of poverty in America. We appreciate the significance of the proposal and the progress that would be made in reforming the present welfare system. If we vote for this measure it will be fully recognizing that it falls far short of what is needed.

The basic annual Federal allowance provided for a family of four is grossly inadequate. This Federal payment will raise assistance levels in only eight States. Of all those who would receive payments under the plan, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare reports that the incomes of only 301,000 families would be effectively raised above the poverty level. Is this really fighting poverty? Furthermore, nowhere in the President's Assistance Act is there a provision that would raise the payment levels to the poverty level, much less to a minimum adequate level.

We believe our commitment must be larger and more immediate. As a necessary first step we advocate that Congress set an adequate level of income for every American as a goal to be attained in the near future. Only in this way can the Government have a standard by which to realistically measure the problem and our progress toward its resolution. An adequate living income is required to guarantee the basic right of every human being—the right to life—a necessary condition to all other constitutional, civil, and human rights. A major shortcoming of the President's categorical assistance plan is that it departs little from the social theories behind present welfare programs. We believe in the other hand that the Government of the richest nation on earth must insure a living income for every American as a basic right. Only such a restructuring of the basic premises of assistance architecture will meet the real needs of the poor and achieve the goals desired by Congress.

We do not believe that mandatory training and work requirements are the way to develop self-supporting independence in assistance recipients. To break the cycle of poverty, we must not only encourage meaningful employment but further human dignity for work. The Family Assistance Act, which substitutes coercion in place of work incentives, will inevitably prove counter-productive. We believe mothers should be free to decide for themselves whether or not to leave their children and take a job or enter job training. Even so, to require job training that will lead to meaningful employment is one thing, but if there is no job guarantee at the end of the line it is only another cruel hoax designed to placate critics of payments to the poor. Although House Resolution 16311 has been called a viable "workfare" plan, there has been no proposal for full employment that is even envisioned by the Federal Government. We believe the Government should supplement its public assistance programs with public service employment.

The immense and tragic proportions of poverty in America necessitates that we in Congress recognize the problem in its full dimension. We believe that our efforts now must be greater, our will more determined, and our action greater. The challenge we must accept is providing the strength and direction to create for each American adequate conditions in which to live and develop and so to become a fully contributing member of our society. The Family Assistance Act of 1970 does not meet this challenge. Mr. MILLIS. Mr. Chairman, I have only one further speaker on this side. Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, this is my final speaker. I yield the balance of the gentle- minority leader, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. GERALD R. FORD).

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair advises the gentleman from Wisconsin he has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. BYRNES of Wisconsin. I will give him all 6 at one time.

NWRO is challenging the country to change its priorities from an emphasis on death and destruction to an emphasis on life and peace. We believe that every man, woman, and child has the right to live in dignity and self-determination. to live. We call upon our country to begin subsidizing life!

We believe a minimum adequate income for a family of four is $5600. This figure is derived from data collected in surveys conducted by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Department of Labor, which show how much families of four actually spend to live at a lower standard. We call upon the President to propose to guarantee every American this minimum income.

Our plan includes the following features:

1. The income should be automatically adjusted for variations in size of family, costs of living in various parts of the country, and changes in personal living and median family income as they occur.

2. Eligibility should be based solely on need, and should be based on a person's declaration of what his needs are, with spot checks as is done under our income tax system.

3. The system should provide a work incentive by permitting recipients to keep 50% of their earnings.

4. Recipients should be entitled to a fair hearing prior to the termination or reduction of benefits. The hearing should take place within fifteen (15) days of the application for appeal. Special grants should be provided for recipients to obtain lawyers or other advocates.

5. The regulations pertaining to rights and entitlements under this system should be公布. Information should be distributed to everyone who might be interested.

6. Recipients have the right to choose whether to itemize their deductions or take a standard deduction, depending on which method of itemizing he is interested in, taking into account actual expenses or the acquisition of equipment.

7. Special grants should be available to take care of all emergency or unusual situations.

8. There should be no provision for appliances and furnishings for the home and its furnishings to bring persons up to minimum standards for health and decency.

9. The budget is based on statistical averages and is subject to 10% per variation, depending on the locality. The range runs from $5309 in most non-metropolitan areas to $6049 for Honolulu. The budget for several cities is estimated in Table 2.

1. The BLS budget was updated to Spring 1969 prices. Inflation has caused a 15% increase in the cost of living since BLS computed the cost of living in 1967.

2. The importance of continued recognition of special needs and of providing alternate ways of meeting needs, whether through the establishment of a flat grant or through individual consideration (computations), is emphasized for two reasons. First, there may not be able to obtain adequate housing in good condition at the $92 a month rent that the budget allows, even if that happens to be the average for the city in which he lives.

3. Similar arguments can be applied to transportation costs, where the transportation quantity for school children in the BLS budget was less than the number of miles that the child travels in the school year! This is because it was an average amount children who rode to school and those who walked. It can be assumed that some families would be over in one category and under in another. Additional statistical differences may not always average out to give a family an adequate income. This is why we are asking for special grants for wardrobes and furnishings to bring persons up to minimum standards for health and decency.

4. The budget is based on statistical averaging formulas which do not necessarily apply to real people or real situations. For example, an individual family of four may or may not be able to obtain adequate housing in good condition at the $92 a month rent that the budget allows, even if that happens to be the average for the city in which he lives.

Family of four budget computed from the Bureau of Labor Statistics lower standard budget and as described in the text. Benefits (not shown) are designed to provide adequate income and prevent families from breaking up.

Note: $1,000 per year for each additional family member. Under the NWRO work incentive a family of four will receive benefits up to $10,000 per year and earn income.

Hunger

The elimination of hunger in the United States requires that every citizen be assured an adequate income. Poor people know better than anyone else that the bread-pantry of programs set up by the Department of Agriculture are welfare programs for farmers and the food processing and distribution industry. They are not designed to serve the needs of poor people.

Welfare programs which exclude people for reasons other than need are a basic source of hunger and malnutrition.

The Nixon Plan claims that the food stamp program will add about $800 to recipients annual budgets but only about 38% of welfare recipients currently receive stamps according to the Department of Agriculture. Food stamp allotments could be converted toward raising the cash floor.

The solution to the problem of hunger and malnutrition is for every citizen to be guaranteed an adequate income to meet his basic food and other needs. Therefore, the money directed toward giving bonuses in the direction of splitting families together should be redirected toward providing a more adequate basic income for poor people.

Welfare Reform

Much has been said and written about the inadequacies of our present welfare system. Much has also been said about the inadequacies of the President's so-called welfare reform.

As we press toward an adequate income much can be done to improve the welfare system and the Nixon Plan NOW! I believe it is possible to do so.

The bill should set an adequate income goal based upon the NWRO $5000 standard.

2. Higher Federal income floors: The bill should provide a federally guaranteed income for work to the NWRO. Food stamp allotments could be converted toward raising the cash floor.

3. Time limits to reach adequate income: The bill should provide a time table for reaching the standard within the earliest possible date.

4. Emergency grants: The bill should provide for emergency grants to take care of special or unusual situations that poor people face because of the conditions they are forced to live in.

5. Cost of living adjustments: The bill should provide an annual cost of living adjustment for all federal or federally regulated assistance programs. It should prohibit states from eliminating special grant programs when this would have the effect of circumventing the cost of living adjustments. State supplements must be based on state pay scales and reflect the required cost of living adjustments as mandated by Section 402(a)(23) of the 1967 amendments.

6. Broader coverage: Coverage should be extended to all persons (including single persons, childless couples and elderly persons) whose requirements fall below the benefit level.

7. Simple Federal administration: The bill should provide direct, unified federal administration for all programs including aged, disabled and blind.

8. No forced work for mothers: All mothers must be exempt from requirements to accept work or training programs. The right to day care and the mother as judge of adequate day care should also be made clear.

9. Job standards: Work requirements for men must be regulated by strict national standards including minimum wage protection and fair labor standards.

argued for reforms in our present welfare system. Without question, there must be change. But while this bill of-ers a number of changes, it may open the flood-gates to revolutionary innovation, which could all but break the back of the already overburdened American taxpayer.

It is my understanding, Mr. Chairman, that this legislation would add at least 15 billion new people to the welfare rolls, at a cost of at least $4.4 billion a year.

This is at the beginning. The program is sure to grow and cost more.

While I favor the overall thrust of the bill, namely to provide benefits to families in need in a manner that will encourage employment and family stability, I question whether H.R. 16311 will accomplish this.

Self-reliance and self-sufficiency have long been the hallmark of the American family. Guaranteed handouts from the Government can only undermine the motivation of young people who are in need under these conditions.

I agree with my distinguished colleague from Georgia, (Mr. Lanwsum) that this bill puts the benefits in this order:

1. Cash, food, and work
2. Education
3. Employment
4. Marriage counselors
5. Day care

I need to do this around and put work first and cash last.

Mr. Chairman, I cannot, in good conscience, vote to levy additional taxes on the American taxpayer in order to guarantee handouts to every person who simply will not work. And I am afraid that is what would happen if we passed this bill in its present form.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that this bill is too far reaching, too revolutionary, and must be modified. I would like to see some of the provisions become law. But I favor striking out the guaranteed income provision.

In my judgment, what this country needs most at this time is a reduction in spending and an intensive effort by the administration to lower interest rates.

Mr. HANSEN of Idaho, Mr. Chairman, I rise to call the attention of my colleagues to the child care provisions of the Family Assistance Act of 1970. There is a growing awareness of the need to provide child care services as a means of encouraging mothers of small children who can and want to work to move from the welfare rolls into productive employment. There is also a growing recognition of the value of providing a wholesome atmosphere to stimulate the child's physical, emotional, and intelllectual growth and development.

The Select Education Subcommittee under the chairmanship of the gentlemam from Idaho has concluded lengthy public hearings on child care development legislation. I am confident that we will soon report a bill that will provide the product of an effective bipartisan committee on a program that is truly responsive to the needs of children in the preschool years. This will be landmark legislation in every sense of the word. The services to children provided in this bill will supplement and complement the services provided in the Family Assistance Act.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to answer some questions the Members of the House may have concerning the operation of this part of the bill before us, I include as a part of my remarks a series of questions and answers to the best of my knowl-
dge of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare:

1. Question: What are child care services?

Answer: Child care services include the funding of care for the child in his own home, in a family day care program, or in a group day care program. It includes care both for preschool children and for school-age children during the summer, on school holidays and before and after regular school hours. HEW would propose to limit such care to children under the age of 16 except for special education services for children whose care requires protective care (i.e., mentally retarded children, or handicapped children).

There would be no minimum age limit. The length of program for a child will depend on the needs of the parent—it may be only a few hours a day or as long as 10 or 12 hours a day. Child care services also extend from morning through with health care agencies. Treatments or other home, in a family day care program, or in a group day care program.

2. Question: Who is eligible to receive child care services?

Answer: Child care services may be provided for the following families:

(a) Those which are unemployed or partially unemployed, temporarily laid off, or unemployed but actively looking for employment or training under the provisions of the Family Assistance Act.

(b) Those which are receiving supplementary financial payments from a state pursuant to Part E of Title IV as added by the Family Assistance Act.

(c) Those which had previously received benefits under Part D or Part E.

(d) Those with an adult family member referred under paragraph (a) or (b) above to Section 447(d) of the Economic Opportunity Act to participate in vocational rehabilitation. All of the above may continue to receive child care after they are

(e) Those which are receiving AFDC payments prior to the date when Part D becomes effective for a state.

In each case, the family is eligible only if the purpose for providing child care is to better enable an adult family member to engage in training, to take employment, to continue employment or to participate in vocational rehabilitation. HEW would intend to permit continued child care for short periods of time if the parent is 1, seasonally unemployed, temporarily laid off, or unemployed but actively looking for work. The Secretary is authorized to limit the length of time a family may continue to receive child care after they are

3. Question: Who may receive funds for child care?

Answer: Funds may be provided in the form of direct grants or contracts to any state or local government, educational institution, private organization or agency, or to any non-profit or profit-making corporation, institution, or agency. Contracts may be entered into through grants for any public or non-profit, profit-making organization. HEW would propose to establish criteria for use in determining the competence of organizations to carry out a child care program. Equal conderation would be given to all types of agencies as operators of child care programs. HEW would give preference to operators of child care services programs. HEW would give preference to those organizations which have demonstrated their ability to work effectively with the Coordinating mechanism would not be a bar to funding public or private agencies.

Grants could be made to employers, labor unities and where it is determined that the sub-

4. Question: What may be funded as a part of child care programs?

Answer: Funds may be provided to carry out a program of daily activities, to provide transportation, to provide food for use in the program, to provide necessary supplies and materials, and to provide for medical and dental examinations and for referral and follow-up. HEW would propose to establish criteria for use in de-

5. Question: What proportion of total cost will HEW pay?

Answer: The Federal Government will pay up to 100 percent of the total cost of child care programs.

6. Question: Are families required to pay a portion of the cost of day care?

Answer: The law authorizes the Secretary to require families to pay part or all of the costs of services in such amounts as may be reasonable in light of the family's ability.

HEW would propose to establish for each family an intake and referral service to parents as-

7. Question: Coordinated Child Care Program?

Answer: HEW would plan to apply the standards developed under Title V-B of the Economic Opportunity Act (Federal Interagency Day Care Program Requirements) to programs under the Family Assistance Act. This is consistent with the requirements of Title V-B of the Economic Opportunity Act that

8. Question: Are families required to be involved in the day care program?

Answer: The law authorizes the Secretary to require families to be involved in the day care program with the cooperation of the child care provider.

HEW would propose to establish criteria for use in determining the competence of organizations to carry out a child care program. Equal conderation would be given to all types of agencies as operators of day care programs. HEW would give preference to operators of day care services programs. HEW would give preference to those organizations which have demonstrated their ability to work effectively with the Coordinating mechanism would not be a bar to funding public or private agencies.

9. Question: What proportion of total cost will HEW pay?

Answer: The Federal Government will pay up to 100 percent of the total cost of child care programs.

10. Question: Are families required to pay a portion of the cost of day care?

Answer: The law authorizes the Secretary to require families to pay part or all of the costs of services in such amounts as may be reasonable in light of the family's ability.

HEW would propose to establish for each family an intake and referral service to parents as-

11. Question: Coordinated Child Care Program?

Answer: HEW would plan to apply the standards developed under Title V-B of the Economic Opportunity Act (Federal Interagency Day Care Program Requirements) to programs under the Family Assistance Act. This is consistent with the requirements of Title V-B of the Economic Opportunity Act that for assistance under the Family Assistance Program.

7. Question: What role will the state government play in the administration of the program?
Answer: State agencies may be the grantees for child care funds in those situations where state agencies hold appropriate positions to perform for child care services. HEW will require that all child care programs meet the licensing requirements of the states. HEW will contract with state agencies to provide technical assistance to grantees to help the latter to meet licensing regulations. HEW would propose to use state agencies under technical assistance contracts to assist grantees to improve their programs.

8. Question: What funds are available for training and technical assistance?
Answer: There will be funds available for training and technical assistance. These funds may be provided in the form of grants to any public or private (including for-profit) agency or organization. HEW would propose to administer and coordinate the funds for the training of personnel involved in the provision of child care services; for career development in the case of nonprofessionals, and for training in the case of those individuals who have supervisory or leadership potential. HEW will also propose to use these funds for the training of evaluation and research personnel.

9. Question: Are funds available for research or demonstrations?
Answer: Funds are available for research and demonstration projects to public and private (including for-profit) agencies or organizations. HEW would propose to coordinate the research and demonstration funds under this authorization with research and demonstration funds available under the Head Start program, Section 426 of the Social Security Act and other Federal authorizations administered by the Department.

10. Question: A family is required to pay a portion or all of the cost of child care, may such cost be deducted from earned income?
Answer: The Secretary may prescribe regulations which permit a family to deduct all or part of such costs from earned income, if such deduction is found to be in the public interest.

11. Question: How will grants be made?
Answer: Agencies designated as applicants for child care grants will file an application with the appropriate HEW Regional Office of Child Care. Where applicable, HEW has established coordination mechanisms, priority will be given to those applications for operation of child care service programs which have the approval of the coordinating organization. Where no coordinating agency exists, grants will be made on the basis of the quality and cost of the program proposed by each applicant.

12. Question: What do the words "remodeling and remodeling" mean?
Answer: The legislation gives no definition of these terms. HEW would propose to give them a very broad interpretation, but would exclude purchase of land or construction of a new building. Minor additions to a building which did not involve an increase of more than 20 percent in the size of the building would be included in the definition of reconstruk-

13. Question: How much money is available for remodeling?
Answer: The law authorizes appropriation of such funds as are necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act. It also requires that the Secretary shall make provision for the furnishing of child care services for so long as he deems appropriate to persons who, pursuantly to registration under Section 447, are participating in manpower services, training or employment. Funds are expected to be available to ensure that child care services are available to eligible recipients.

14. Question: May the Secretary of Labor provide day care services?
Answer: The Secretary of Labor has authority to provide child care services in approved programs of manpower programs under his jurisdiction. However, he must obtain the concurrence of HEW with regard to policies involving such child care programs. HEW would recommend that the Secretary of Labor provide child care services only in unusual circumstances and that, in such cases, the Federal Interagency Day Care Requirements be fully applicable.

15. Question: What will happen to day care provided under the Work Incentive Program?
Answer: The Work Incentive Program will be repealed at the time the new Family As-

16. Question: May the Secretary of Labor remain on welfare?
Answer: The claim is made that such beneficitaries would be expected to apply for work, take job training if necessary, and accept suitable employment. But that requirement is so riddled with loopholes that in my judgment it is rather meaningless.

17. Question: What will happen to day care funded under Parts A and B of Title IV of the Social Security Act?
Answer: States may continue to fund day care programs under Parts A and B of Title IV subject to the provisions and regulations presently in effect. It will usually be financially advantageous, of course, to provide such care under the Family Assistance Act rather than Title IV. There are, however, individuals who may not be eligible for services under the Family Assistance Act but who would qualify under Title IV. This would be particularly true in the case of potential recipients.

Mr. FISHER. Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the pending bill. It is being projected as a welfare reform measure, but in reality it would place 3 million additional families on welfare. A total of 15 million would, in one fell swoop, be added to the relief rolls.

The Secretary would determine that such beneficitaries would be expected to apply for work, take job training if necessary, and accept suitable employment. But that requirement is so riddled with loopholes that in my judgment it is rather meaningless.

A highly objectionable provision would guarantee an annual income in the amount of $1,600, along with $800 per year in food stamps, for families of four. Let us recognize that the concept of a guaranteed annual income is given congressional approval, it will become a part of our welfare way of life. There will be no turning back. The pressure will be on to constantly increase the $1,600 base guarantee. Already the Americans for Democratic Action—ADA—is demanding $5,500, and so are the professional welfare organizations.

Now, if we subtract the added cost, and where is the money coming from? Proponents estimate that initially the cost will increase by $4.4 billion, which is admittedly conservative. We must be forewarned for the next three times that amount—in addition to what welfare is now costing. Does this mean an increase in taxes to the tune of an additional $5 billion or $10 billion per year? If not, then what about the inflation that will result from deficit financing?

Mr. Chairman, this administration bill should be defeated. Let us help the poor but let us refuse any welfare to those who are able bodied and refuse to work when employment is available.

Mr. MCCLOSKEY. Mr. Chairman, I have voted for H.R. 1691 today, the Family Assistance Act, but with some reservations, and with a particular regret that the closed rule did not permit us to offer floor amendments.

The most persuasive argument for this bill is that it provides an incentive for people to get off the welfare rolls and out of poverty.

I think the bill, however, also includes an indirect incentive to remain in poverty, that being its provision that the impoverished family will be allocated an additional $300 per year for every child they bear.

It has been recognized that while birth rates among the poor are not merely a result of poverty, they are also a cause of poverty. Reports by the Census Bureau and other organizations indicate that poor families have a disproportionate share of the resources at their disposal for raising and educating those children in a manner which would increase their chance for moving out of poverty. Additional children can drag a family into poverty.

It thus seems inappropriate in this bill to pay an additional $300 per year for each child an already impoverished family may have. It would be hard to concede this is anything but an incentive to coninue bearing more children at a time when the impact of our population explosion is pushing us into both high expenditures and urgent concern for slowing if not halting population growth.

It was only a month ago that the President signed into law the population commisson bill, directing a study of appropriate methods of achieving proper population levels.

Had an open rule been granted it was my intention to offer a general amendment that, "H.R. 1691 be amended to add members of children to be included as family members to those children born before December 31, 1971, and to no more than two such children born thereafter. Such amendment would be limited as follows:

Certain Additional Children Ineligible
(1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this part or part E, no more than two children who are nonwhite, of either or both of the parents in the family and who were born after January 1, 1972, shall be included as members of the family purposes of determining the family's benefits under Section 442(a) or the amounts of such benefits under Section 442(b)."

In my judgment, Mr. Chairman, it is essential that the U.S. Government make a firm declaration of national policy that family sizes will have to be voluntarily limited if we are to preserve our envirnmental quality.

The statement that if unlimited population growth can destroy both the environment and quality of life on this planet, it seems of doubtful wisdom to pass any law at this stage in history which includes encouragement for large families. It may be that after the new population commission has studied the problem and recommends that the American population can increase by one or two percent per year without endangering our national goals and way of life. If so, we may then have the luxury of RETURNING TO A GOVERNMENT FAMILIAR WITH respect to the problem of how the nation can best help its citizens. The result is that the children born today or which will be born under the encouragement of the bill before us, will have the same inalienable rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness that we do. It seems worthwhile to suggest a moratorium until we have more knowledge on the question as to how many people can survive comfortably on this earth.

I appreciate that my remarks do not affect the passage of this bill under the closed rule, but would like to record my position at this point in the Record in the hope that it will furnish a basis for discussion by the Congress on this point in the months ahead.

Mr. DENNEY. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 16311, the proposed Family Assistance Act of 1970, is significant because it proposes for the first time in the history of this country—that is, the Federal Government guarantee an income to American families, regardless of their productive abilities or inclinations. In addition to substituting the family assistance program for the present AFDC program, this proposal would make substantial changes in three other existing Federal-State programs—aid to the aged, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently disabled. These three programs would be combined into a single adult assistance program.

The Ways and Means Committee report on H.R. 16311, indicates that if the family assistance plan had been in effect in calendar 1968, the Federal costs of benefits payments would have been $2 billion greater than the cost of the existing AFDC program. Even though H.R. 16311 is an additional requirement, the resulting expenses of the Federal government would amount to approximately $1 billion greater than the cost of the current system.

Americans long ago accepted the idea of helping those truly need help and cannot help themselves. But, we have not as yet ever endorsed the idea that the Government should pay welfare to those already working. Once this principle is established in law, the only distinction between those who pay taxes and those who claim them is some arbitrary, Government-decided income level. And, as this level is raised, proportionally fewer and fewer people will be paying higher taxes to support more and more welfare recipients. It is argued that a nationwide Federal minimum will eliminate these differentials, but the objective is unattainable. In addition, it is possible to break up the AFDC payment levels, or poverty level which is currently $3000 per family, and the total aid that will be received by families with children, receiving assistance has increased by one hundred percent—from 20 per thousand in the population to 60 per thousand.

The AFDC has also failed in its basic system of paying benefits to families that break apart. The existing program principly aids female-headed families with no provision to assist families headed by fathers earning full time for substandard wages. There are also in this program unjustifiable inequities among various States and regions in our country. Reflective of this is the huge discrepancy between the female-headed family of four—being $45 per month—and the highest benefits—$263 per month.

Another failure of the present system is seen in its built-in incentives to encourage a person to actually quit work. One of its major requirements is that the family have no working male head. In the growth of participation rate and compliance with this requirement, the family break-up, State inequities, and the negative approach toward work, I feel there is an immediate necessity for the passage of this welfare reform bill.

Although there are definite and severe inadequacies in the proposal I find it a necessary and progressive move toward a workable solution to present welfare problems.

The proposed major accomplishments of the family assistance plan would blend strong work requirements with firm work incentive. It would treat the female head of the family on an equal footing with the father. In this manner, there would be established a national minimum income. Payment combined with national eligibility standards as well as major fiscal relief for the States. Of prime importance to the jobless and the working poor is the plans for providing job training and child care facilities for the working poor. Additionally, the bill proposes an increased national minimum payment to the aged, blind, and disabled.

The family, under this program, would receive assistance benefits in the form of Federal payments. This would include all families with children having an earning capacity of less than $500 per month. Federal and Matching payments would be required to participate in work registration or lose benefits. The family with no earnings would receive $500 for each of the first two members and $300 for each additional member thereafter. The family earning an income would have no reductions of benefits for their first $720 and 50 cents off benefits for each additional dollar earned. The Federal funding would be an improvement over the present system as it would include more working heads of families in need who could possibly become self-sufficient.

The States would be required to supplement Federal assistance benefits up to the AFDC payment levels, or poverty level—whichever would be lower. There is no supplementation of the working poor or required, and Federal matching would provide for 30 percent of the State payments up to the poverty level. Under the current system, that exists a huge emphasis on the States and this reform proposal encourages a more fully fedralized system of funding which lifts some of the burden from the States, who are so often unable to provide adequate benefits.

Of prime importance in this bill is the increased attention given to the aged, blind, and disabled. The bill proposes to require the States to assure a minimum income of $110 per month to each person. In addition there would be Federal matching of 90 percent of the first $65 and 50 cents off benefits for each additional dollar earned. The Federal funding would be an improvement over the present system as it would include more working heads of families in need who could possibly become self-sufficient.

I feel such assistance to this particular group of recipients is extremely necessary, although still not adequate.

The family assistance program offers certain services which in itself is not a new principle. This program, however, extends the principle and makes it more effective. There would not only be a $30 minimum monthly training incentive, but also a $40 monthly cost-of-living increase—training for decent, acceptable jobs with a 50 percent retention of earnings is certainly a broader incentive plan than we are currently experiencing. Certain training expenses as well as transportation costs should be reimbursed. Plus, supportive services to encourage continued employment seem to me additional feasible incentives to participate in the work training program. Most importantly, however, the mother would be paid for all hours worked.ografy the need for the family assistance plan is not sufficiently developed.

There are specified work requirements that function with the incentive program. Training—with mandatory registration of recipients at a local employment office—and employment are compulsory for benefits, and there is required a referral of family assistance recipients with physical or mental disabilities for vocational rehabilitation.

Such are the major propositions of the family assistance plan. Recognition of the fundamental problem areas is adequate and I support any efforts in such a basic direction. I wish to emphasize, however, that this plan should be only the beginning of a massive awakening to our welfare programs and treatment of the poor. I agree that the Federal Government should provide minimum income to those unable to work. Similarly, able-bodied adults—of which 80,000 males are currently on the welfare rolls—should be given remedial education and jobs. It must be remembered that mere funding does not guarantee wise application of dollars by the recipient. Mandatory training and work requirements are not the sole channel through which incentive will develop: the job, income, and living conditions of the breadwinner and family must also foster human dignity. For this reason, I wish to express my serious concern over the adverse effect of the inadequate income offered to the recipient, the lack of an effective job placement program, and the undeveloped potential of the day-care centers.

The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics has not employed an objective standard of determining the genuine need for a family's minimum expenditures on decent food, clothing, and shelter. The Department of Labor has estimated $5,500 a year as a standard income needed for a family of four. Interestingly enough, American citizens have responded to the poll questions establishing a minimum need at $6,240. It seems ludicrous that the family assistance program should construct a minimum level of $1,600 for the same family, and a ceiling of only $3,720. Thus, a four-member family receiving the highest assistance benefits would barely creep over the official poverty line, $2,555 per year. The program should also contain a provision for automatic cost-of-living increases, now raised at 6.2 percent each year. If a family is to help itself up the social and economic ladder, it certainly must be able to afford decent living conditions. I feel there must definitely and as immediately as possible be additional legislation furthering this goal of placing each American family above the poverty line.

Second, if a job training program is offered it is totally unrealistic to assume it a function of the work-incentive principle unless participants can be guaranteed a decent job at the conclusion of his training. What kind of incentive can there be in a program that could possibly force a person to do menial labor at substandard wages? And what measure of assurance is there regarding continued employment? What cannot even find meaningful satisfaction in his labor? Inclusion of the working poor is a revolutionary step in our welfare efforts, but success in raising the level of poverty and independence of the worker will not be achieved unless more adequate job placement programs are developed.

Third, I would like to suggest extended and varied use of the job training programs. Six billion dollars, accommodating only about 500,000 children—has been sanctioned for such centers but truly effective utilization of them requires more funding and attention. Quality child care services are extremely important not only to the success of the working parent, but to the future development and growth of the children who have so unwittingly landed in a poverty-striken home. A child should be able to remain in his own home and neighborhood. Effective and successful physical, emotional, social, and intellectual growth of the young child in the day-care center requires participation in and by the community.

These centers could provide not only health and educational programs for children, but they could become a focus of community participation and interests. Adult education and consumer information could be offered. Recreational potentials of such facilities are enormous as well as important and necessary to the poor community. Centers such as this could become a place of community concern, as local attitudes can aid in fighting our poverty crisis in this country. The federal program keeps assistance below the minimum necessary for a humane level of existence. There are so many persons desperately in need who are currently being excluded from help. The present system repeatedly implies that the recipients are lazy. Welfare workers must become both his investigative and service functions. The federal program does not provide an incentive to get people off welfare. The objective is a noble one, but we have little assurance that it would be accomplished. Indeed, there is substantial reason to believe that it could have just the opposite effect: that persons who have always been among the "working poor" would find it to their economic advantage to stop working and depend on welfare altogether.

Mr. Chairman, last November Prof. Milton Friedman, the distinguished University of Chicago economist on whose proposal for a "negative income tax" this legislation is based, testified before the Committee on Ways and Means. While expressing his general approval of the concept, he warned the committee's attention to what he considered to be several serious flaws—and those flaws have not been corrected. I am not in total agreement with Professor Friedman, but I shall discuss shortly, but I nevertheless believe he made some important points in his statement to the committee, and I include that testimony in the Record at the point in my remarks.

STATEMENT OF DR. MILTON FRIEDMAN, PROFESSOR, DEPARTMENT OF ECONOMICS, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

Dr. Friedman, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I am glad to be here.

The Chairman. Mr. Burke, just a moment.

Dr. Friedman. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman. My connections with it go back far, far, farther than an employee of the Division of Tax Research of the U.S. Treasury Department.

The Chairman. I know that.

Dr. Friedman. I strongly endorse the basic principles embodied in President Nixon's proposal for reforming our welfare system: the provision of a strong work incentive; the equal treatment of equals; eligibility requirements based on the objective criterion of income; the separation of income assistance from other social services. These are principles that I have long supported and long urged. If the President's program does not go far as I would like to go in replacing the present welfare system by a system incorporating these principles, but it is a major and true step in that direction.

The proposed reform has the potential of greatly improving the social and economic conditions of low-income families in the United States, while at the same time reducing the burden imposed on the taxpayer to provide for the disadvantaged. But these high hopes will be realized only if Congress can avoid a number of pitfalls in translating the principles into practice.

Dr. Friedman, in my testimony, I wish to direct the committee's attention to three problems that require careful treatment if the program is not to be made ineffective. Unless this is done, there is real danger that actions taken on the details of the plan will have the effect of compromising its effectiveness and of converting it from a major step forward to a major step backward. These problems are related to the degree of the proposal in the imaginative and thoughtful proposal that is before you.

The problems are—and here I summarize them—then I am going to return mostly to discuss the first of these.

The basic problem is that, with a single marginal rate tax law rate low enough to provide a real work incentive. This is by all odds the most important issue.

The basic marginal rate is stated to be 50 percent of earned income for social security, income tax, and the method of handling State and other income.

In my opinion, this would be accomplished by having the Internal Revenue system.

As it turns out, the federal marginal tax rate is 10 percent or more than zero. Fifty percent is therefore an excellent compromise, and I support it fully. The problem Is that, when additional features of the proposed plan, plus other features of current income tax, which requires that the payment of ben-fits be at a fixed rate. Yet, given the present marginal rates at zero and then of 20.8 percent.

The problems of persons involved, 50 percent is a very high rate. Yet, given the present low exemptions under the positive income tax, which requires that the payment of ben-fits be at a fixed rate. Yet, given the present marginal rates in the column for the State federal income tax, which combined equal rates in section B of the table, I have calculated the rate for a sample State that has a current maximum benefit of $3,400 a while a family of four, I believe that this is roughly the maximum in New York and may be in others as well. In any event, it will serve to give approximate upper limits.

For each of the States, the marginal rates are higher. The exact rates vary from State to State, depending on the maximum benefit now paid, so the average of the rates in the States may be different from the rates calculated for a single family of four. For this State, the food stamp allowance is $180 ($1,200 minus 30 percent of
$3,400) —or a total of $3,680.

The second, disregarding the first $720 of earned income, the family assistance plan, which is absurdly small, is the only additional benefit--the amount that would be received by a family with no other income.

In calculating the food stamp allowance, I have followed the President's proposal, which, as I understand it, would provide a maximum benefit of $1,600; this would be reduced by 30 percent of total income, including any family assistance benefit. A family that received the $1,000 family assistance benefit, with no other income, would receive $1,200 less 30 percent of $1,000 or $1,200 less $360, or a total of $2,320. This would also be the net benefit received if the family had no other income.

I believe that this is an obvious solution and at $3,000 to 85.5 percent. These are presumably these maximums. This explains the president's proposal does so by two key provisions: first, disregarding the first $720 of earned income; second, a tax imposed on all income other than the family assistance payment, with no exemptions. The excess of the basic benefit over the tax is the net amount the family receives (or the amount of the tax over the benefit net amount it pays).

To keep matters simple, I have considered only a family of four with two adults and
and other income.

The first column of the table, part A, is for the 20 States in which the family assistance program would replace completely the present AFDC program. In those States, the basic benefit is received by a family with no other income—consists of of five parts, listed in the lefthand part of the table: (1) the family assistance basic benefit of $1,200; (2) the additional State supplement of $800; and (3) a food stamp allowance of $180 ($1,200 minus 30 percent of $3,400) —or a total of $3,680.

Under the proposal, the State is not permits to reduce its supplementary payment on account of the first $720 of earned income. This is permitted by the State of New York. For this State, the food stamp allowance is $180 ($1,200 minus 30 percent of
$3,400) —or a total of $3,680.

The next bracket runs to $3,000, the point at which, under the current tax law, income taxes, and the method of handling State
other income.

In this bracket, that is, the bracket between $720 and $3,000, the family assistance benefit for each family is $1,200 (which is the only additional income for which the federal tax allowance is reduced only on account of the extra 80 cents of each dollar of earnings that is retained by the family.

The family would receive an additional $3,000, which makes the total marginal rate 83.8 percent.

At $8,500, the family assistance benefit has been reduced to zero, so this item drops out, reducing the total marginal rate to 48.8 percent. At $4,000, the food-stamp allowance would have been reduced to zero, so this item drops out, leaving only the income tax, plus Federal income tax, which combined equal just under 20 percent.

These are clearly not very desirable tax rate structures, which are irregular, declining and rising in a pattern that is not very stable on rational grounds. More important, for most of the range of incomes they are far higher than the top rate under our positive income tax. In addition, under present law, families on welfare payments, and other income.

The other items are the same as before, so the total marginal rate is 69.5 percent.

For any $3,000 in other income, making the total marginal rate 83.8 percent.

Persuaded as I am of the merits of the President's general approach, I am convinced that the specific provisions of the program would make it in the form embodied in these tables. These high marginal rates are, I am sure, inadvertent—the unexpected combined result of a number of separate policies. In looking at them as a whole, this committee can enormously improve the present proposals by insisting that no combined marginal tax rate should exceed 50 percent.

The proposals that the committee has already made for reforming the positive income tax rate should exceed 50 percent. But this change, important as it is, will not bring them anywhere close to 50 percent for much of the income of the working poor. The other measures that seem most promising are: (1) Reconsideration of the food stamp allowance proposal; (2) alternative revising the family assistance basic grant and tax schedule so that, when combined with food stamps, they provide the basic grant and tax schedule now proposed for the family assistance program alone; (3) not permitting States to reduce their supplement for the first 3,920 of earned income, and then providing that once their supplement exceeds by not more than 50 percent of earned income in excess of $8,920.

II. EQUAL TREATMENT OF EQUALS

Under the proposal, if Jane and Mary work side-by-side in a factory, receive the same low wages, have the same size family, and are in similar circumstances in still other respects, they should still receive an equal net benefit. They will do so if Jane was formerly a member of a family on AFDC while Mary was employed and received no welfare payments, and if they are in a State that now provides benefits higher than the family assistance benefits. In that case the State is required to continue to supplement the income of Jane but not of Mary.

Similarly, as I interpret the proposed law, Jane and Mary may have differential access to manpower and training programs and to child care services. If the earned income of both is high enough to reduce the family assistance net benefit to zero, but low enough to entitle Jane, who was formerly on AFDC (to supplementary State benefits), then Jane will also have access to the other programs, while Mary will not.

This is highly inequitable. It is also perverse and expensive. It encourages the working poor to quit working and to qualify for welfare in order to get the additional benefits. Equal benefits should be treated equally.

III. ADMINISTRATION OF THE PROGRAM

I believe that our ultimate goal should be a complete integration of assistance to low-income families with collection of taxes from higher income families. The actual program should have a considerable number of people who receive as well as those who pay. I would expect that the employer has an obligation, in a sense, to pay to the employee in an employer-employee relationship. Now you would bring an employer relationship to the Federal Government in terms of the money.

Dr. Friedman. Representative Byrnes, I would also in administering this program have an annual recapitulation for those who receive supplements. I would treat both groups alike. You must do that in any event because you will be operating the family assistance program on the basis of advance estimates and you need a reconciliation in order to compare what happens after the event with what was planned.

Mr. Byrnes. Well, we do in part, but then we also provide a recapitulation at the end. You would be taking out money that the employer has an obligation, in a sense, to pay to the employee in an employer-employee relationship. Now you would bring an employer relationship to the Federal Government in terms of the money.

Dr. Friedman. Representative Byrnes, it is the thrust of the administration proposal placing the emphasis on job training, bringing job opportunities together with the assistance.

And I wonder whether the emphasis you put here doesn't almost ignore that aspect.

Mr. Byrnes. Oh, no, I don't.

Mr. Byrnes. Or do you think it can be ignored?

Dr. Friedman. Oh, no, I don't.

Mr. Byrnes. What is your attitude in that area?
Mr. BYRNE. That is your 50 percent.

Mr. FRIEDMAN. Right. It seems to me you have two problems. One is to have opportunities for the people themselves who are involved have a strong incentive to take advantage of those opportunities.

But of the most effective ways to have it come about, I would like to give him a great an incentive as possible to take advantage of the opportunities available. We are, presumably, subordinating the impoverished person, a person of a very low income level, if we say to you, "You take a job and work, leave your home and incur the extra expenses of going back and forth. But, of course, you are only going to get back 30 cents for every dollar you earn, or at the most, 50 cents. The people who have to get back 16 cents for every dollar you earn. It seems to me that unless we can say to people, they will get back half of what they earn, anyway, and go out and work really hard to provide them with the kind of incentive that you and I would like them to have, without the advantage of the opportunities available.

I may say on one other point that is suggestive to us. I think one of the major reasons why I would like to see this handled equitably and, particularly the withholding arrangement, is for nonmonetary reasons. The same program is handled by IRS as proposed, the people who receive a payment are in a wholly different category from those that are not. In the social application at a different office. They are going to get a separate check somewhere else.

Particularly for the working people who are receiving a supplement, if you can integrate the whole thing, everybody in that factor working in the plant is on the same basis. There aren't two classes of citizens. Everybody gets his paycheck at the end of the week. So let's say that you have high pay a little deducted. Others who have low pay have a little added. And a person may shift from one category to another from week to week. From a view of morale and of not making people feel that they are somehow pariahs and not contributing to the economy, it seems to me that is a very great advantage.

Mr. CORMAN. You have a line and your comments are most intriguing and most interesting. Thank you very much.

Mr. BURKE. Are there any further questions?

Mr. CORMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. FRIEDMAN. Mr. Corman, you agree that we really can't consider a negative income tax until we get to the point where we tax all source of wealth? We get ourselves in this dilemma where people may pay no tax on a substantial number of dollars at their disposition and yet they aren't subject to the income tax.

What would we do with them when we talk about the negative income tax?

Mr. FRIEDMAN. This term intended in the comment I made here when I said that the credit barrier is at the moment in the difference of wealth. We get someone making the positive income tax and the negative income tax. As an ultimate ideal I agree thorough-ously, I agree with you, I would myself like to see a far more far-reaching reform of the entire positive and negative income tax structure, but that all incomes would be treated alike.

But I believe we want to be very careful not to let the best destroy the good. I think we are now faced with a situation in which we have a chance to improve the system as a whole substantially by introducing the principles of a negative income tax but with a different design that is used for the positive income tax. That is a step forward.

Dr. FRIEDMAN. It will have no effect, sir, because the willingness of employers to pay what they pay today does not derive from their social conscience but it does not derive from their concept of a living pay. It derives from competition. It derives from the fact that this could be worked.

Mr. CORMAN. Yes, sir, but my concern is of the marginal worker, as much as other employers pay, they are not going to get anybody to work for them.

I don't see there is any reason that I can see why from the side of the employer he will be affected in any significant way by the fact that in part he is serving as an agent of the Federal Government. Let me put it to you, if I may, another way. If his administering this for the Federal Government, then he would have knowledge of the individual getting a supplementary check from the social securty board. I think something else would have the same effect. What would be very hard on economic grounds to see any reason why should have any measurable effect on the employer wouldn't be willing to pay more. Any employer is willing to pay an indefinite amount if he can afford to do so. But he can't afford to pay more than the market price, according to the law to at-ttract the labor, and he can't afford to pay less, because if he pays less, he doesn't get any workers. If he pays more, he is going to go out of business.

Mr. CORMAN. Yes, sir, but my concern is of the marginal worker, the person who doesn't have great skill, and there is competition for those jobs. It presents a dilemma. You don't want the man to live on less than a reasonable amount of money.

On the other hand, I would think that this employer might say, "I can pay you at the poverty level now. If we go supplementary tax, I'm going to subsidize a portion of it, and I will pay you the rest, and you take the job."

This is a silly situation, but I could envision an employer perhaps going to employees and say, "Maybe you better go home and have a few more kids. Your job is going to work any harder, but I can get more money from the Government the same way you are doing."
Professor Friedman objects to this bill on the following basis:

First, that when the value of food stamps and State supplementary benefits is figured in, the marginal tax rate on the earned income of the working poor is far higher than the apparent 50 percent—indeed, it may actually come to more than 100 percent, thus providing a serious disincentive to accept employment rather than the incentive that this program is designed to create;

Second, that families in similar economic situations should be treated equally, and that this is not the case under the provisions of the bill as it now stands, either in the regulations relating to State supplemental benefits or in the advantages it may give persons who do not work over those who do. Thus, the act does not require states to pay supplemental benefits to the working poor—which means that two men could be working at similar jobs and earning the same wages, but one would receive the state supplemental by virtue of the fact that he had been unemployed, but the other would not. This is a clear incentive for the working men to "arrange" unempemployment category status in order to qualify for the extra benefit; and

Third, that the arrangements proposed to administer the provisions of this bill are cumbersome and costly, and that it could be administrated far more efficiently through the system already in existence for payroll deductions and income tax payments.

Let me conclude this section of my remarks by noting that Professor Friedman—the father of the negative income tax—stated in a public meeting last Saturday, April 11, 1970, in Chicago that:

"If I were a Member of Congress, I would vote against H.R. 16311, as it is presently written."

As I have indicated, however, I am not totally in agreement with Professor Friedman. One of the main objections that I have to the pending bill, that he does not share, is the inclusion of the working poor in the Nation's welfare population. I must object to this on several counts: First, its cost; second, its bureaucratic implications; and third, its moral and psychological implications.

It seems to me that this extension of the concept of welfare will impose upon the American people. It is estimated that the cost of increasing the number of welfare recipients to the point where it will cost 10 million to about 22 million under the pending bill will be $4.4 billion in the first full year, and that it will increase substantially thereafter. In 1 year we will add 12 percent new people to the welfare rolls—most of them the very people who have struggled for years to avoid subjecting themselves to that very indignity.

The second point is that the present bill would add a whole new bureaucracy under the Social Security Administration of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. As Professor Friedman, so aptly pointed out last Thursday to the Committee on Ways and Means, the wrong administrators could use this new program to expand their own offices and staffs. It should be noted that one of the ways in which our present welfare system is in need of reform is in the bureaucracy that has grown up to administer it. We should not now be looking for ways to expand that bureaucracy or give it a new lease on life.

My third objection to the pending legislation as it affects the working poor is probably the most serious of all. Here-tofore, the increase in the poverty of the American poor has been due to the failure to get a job, the lack of one, rather than being due to the poverty of the family. This is the proper way for a family to support itself in our society. As a people, we have realized our obligations when it came to personal hardship cases, such as the disabled and the aged; but in general, the work ethic has been an integral part of our whole national fabric, and I believe, vital to our national success.

And as I indicated earlier, the other programs have sought to encourage those who are unemployed to seek employment. They have been, at least in theory, temporary or emergency programs to be on welfare and to receive a government handout has had a definite social stigma attached to it. And this is as it should be, if we are to encourage individuals, capable of doing so, to stand on their own two feet.

Now, however, we are seeing this long-standing principle demolished. In recent years we have witnessed a new class of permanent welfare recipients come into being and produce a second and third generation of welfare families. And today we have before us a proposal that will even further institutionalize this new and tragic welfare class, this time under the aegis of the Federal Government.

I believe such a system will be truly demoralizing for those citizens who have long been too proud to accept a dole from the Government. Those who claim that the proposed legislation will provide incentives to keep the poor from taking jobs, apparently have not looked at the other side of the coin—that it will also provide a disincentive for the working poor to stay employed.

NEW FEDERALISM

Mr. Chairman, the President has consistently expressed that we should be returning to a reinvented federalism in our Nation's domestic affairs.

I support this viewpoint and heartily concur that we must redress the imbalance that currently exists in our State-Federal relations. We must enable the States to determine the priority of their own programs, so that by dictate of the faceless Federal bureaucracy is not determining the lives of individuals in the Arlington Heights', Kokuk's, and Springfield's of the Nation.

The pending bill would move us in the wrong direction, to give us toward more Federal control, and away from State determination of their own future programs.

It seems to me that this point has been completely overlooked by those who support the pending bill.

SUMMARY

To summarize, then, I oppose this bill because I do not believe that it takes into account the dangers involved in establishing a "guaranteed income" for American families. I am opposed to its enactment because it does not, in my opinion, provide any genuine incentives to work for anyone not now employed, including the social workers needed to administer it. We should not now be looking for ways to expand that bureaucracy or give it a new lease on life.

My third objection to the pending legislation as it affects the working poor is probably the most serious of all. Here-tofore, the increase in the poverty of the American poor has been due to the failure to get a job, the lack of one, rather than being due to the poverty of the family. This is the proper way for a family to support itself in our society. As a people, we have realized our obligations when it came to personal hardship cases, such as the disabled and the aged; but in general, the work ethic has been an integral part of our whole national fabric, and I believe, vital to our national success.

I have looked over the figures supplied by HEW and frankly am at a loss to understand exactly how they have arrived at certain statistics. It is indicated on the one hand that there are now 1.7 million families receiving AFDC—and a total of 20 million persons. Still other figures which have been circulated show that the possible total to be covered by the program would include not 3.9 million homes but 5.2 million which would take care of 26 million of persons to 26 million, so nobody knows exactly what the statistical situation is.

Enactment of the family assistance plan will eventually cost incalculable sums which must be made up somewhere. The guaranteed income is, of course, subject to rising living costs, so that it is a foregone conclusion that once the principle of guaranteed income is established and increases the number of people to be covered, the income must go up. I am opposed to the guaranteed income as such but also realize that the figure provided in this bill is low enough so that if the law is passed, there will be an immediate clamor to increase it.

I am diametrically opposed to trying to solve problems by creating new levels of Government bureaucracy with the idea that they may be able to grope toward workable solutions. I have far too much of this and HEW is perhaps the most significant example in the Government of the inadvisability and inefficiency of such attacks on problems.

It is obvious to those who have taken the time to study the family assistance proposal that reform of existing programs is secondary to the objective of establishing a guaranteed income. I am opposed to this and feel that the vast majority of our people are against it. HEW is merely trying to camouflage its real purposes by putting forth the idea that this will encourage families to stay out of welfare. It is not the function of the Government per se can be called the primary reason for the breakup of families. This bill would add to the Government welfare rolls vast millions of people and establish the precedent that the Government will guarantee to them a basic income. No one in authority seems to be able to give any idea as to how many people will be involved, how much the cost will be, how many more administrative personnel will be required, or where the road will eventually lead.

For this reason, I feel that it is a mistake to go too far with this kind without more painstaking study by Congress. Past experience has shown that we cannot rely too much on the statistical information provided. HEW will undoubtedly present experience with medicaid to cause us to pause and raise questions as to where this all will lead.

It seems to me that we have gone far afield in this country as to our understanding of the role of the Government in relation to its citizens. The Government was never established to take care of the people but to simply provide a vital and historic step toward lifting the poor from dependency to dignity.

Mr. ABBITT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act.

This bill pretends to be a reform of the present welfare system when actually it opens a Pandora's box which will greatly increase the total cost of welfare in every county and city in the United States. In my opinion, the bill now before us, if adopted, will be a major step toward a Federal dole system.

This is a matter of much importance, and I believe that the so-called reforms which are now being considered may in fact be the most encompassing domestic legislation to come before the Congress since the adoption of the Social Security Act in the 1930's. This greatly concerns me and I am afraid that in our haste to reform the present system, we may in fact be creating far greater problems than now exist.

There is no question that the present system needs reforming to some extent. We have tolerated too long certain facts of our welfare system which tend to benefit those who are not interested in working, but feel that they were entitled to support from the Government. On the other hand, there are certain aspects of the present law which tend to penalize needy families simply because of the bureaucratic structure which does not take into account personal circumstances in individual cases. I also feel that the present system does not provide for adequate investigation and followup in some welfare cases.

However, I believe that the reform proposals now before us do very little, if anything, to change this situation. In fact, the bill incorporates most of the bad features of the present welfare system and makes provision for no improvements in the administrative tangle that makes the existing system so ineffective. This simply adds a new Federal layer on top of a system that is already buried in bureaucracy. The Family Assistance Act has all of the features which tend to discourage reliance on the Government. In addition, by establishing national standards, it undertakes the established patterns of welfare systems in many States.

The thing that concerns me most is that the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is using unfairly the claim that the present aid for dependent children program encourages the breakup of families. The truth of the matter is that HEW is simply using this as a facade to get approval of a guaranteed annual income and once the door is open then it is up to the eventual ramifications and cost will be.

According to my understanding, the statistics being used by HEW in support of the family assistance program were obtained on less than 18,000 homes. This compares with approximately 50 million homes in the country and such a sampling would be only thirty-six one-hundredths of 1 percent of the total. It is incredible that Congress should be called upon to act on the basis of the meager information which has been presented to us in this instance.

I have looked over the figures supplied by HEW and frankly am at a loss to understand exactly how they have arrived at certain statistics. It seems to me that we have gone far afield in this country as to our understanding of the role of the Government in relation to its citizens. The Government was never established to take care of the people but to simply provide a... climate wherein its citizens may have the freedom to make a living and go about their daily pursuits without governmen tal interference. I have traveled already too far down the road toward socialism and the establishment of a dole system. I believe the final move toward the completion of the socialist pattern. Obviously there are many good features to the welfare program and the present bill makes improvements in aid to the blind and other handicapped persons, child care and certain incentives toward manual training, and so forth. I am afraid, however, that taken on balance the bill before us would create more problems than it would solve and will establish patterns which will be difficult to reverse once it is obvious that they are wrong.

One of the main failings of the Federal Government is that we too often think of solving problems in terms of creating bureaucracy and making Federal aid available. In the instance of public welfare my feeling is that too much money has been spent to accomplish too little good and that along the way we have contributed to the establishment of a pattern whereby many individuals tend to rely on public support rather than to rely on their own responsibilities. Nothing in the present bill which would reverse that trend but, in fact, feel that it is likely to be accelerated under its terms.

Mr. HANLEY. Mr. Chairman, we have before us today one of the most far-reaching pieces of legislation to be debated in the 91st Congress, the family assistance plan. I am pleased that we are moving in this direction, but I am concerned at the procedure under which the bill is proceeding. While I am in general agreement with the concepts contained in the bill, I was hopeful that the measure could have been presented to us under an open rule permitting amendments. It was for this reason that I voted against the closed rule yesterday. I intend to vote for the bill on final passage within the same time frame, holding the hope and the belief that the Senate will refine certain of the provisions with which I am not in wholehearted agreement.

For a moment now, I would like to discuss a few of the more important features of the bill.

The President proposes a floor of $1,600 income for a family of four, paid entirely by the Government. Additional payments to families with income at all would be made by those States where current benefit levels exceed $1,600. For families where a member is working, the first $720 per year earned income will not be counted against the $1,600 floor. In addition, only one dollar of each two earned over the $720 will be taken from the floor payment. For the family of four whose earned income reaches $4,000, the Federal payment would no longer be paid. I am pleased with this provision because it will represent a substantial improvement of the indigent in some States, but I do not believe that the inherent disparity in benefits among the States will slow or alter the trend toward unproductivity and migration. I am pleased that the eligibility features for the family assistance plan will apply nationwide, and I hope that the bill is amended in the Senate to close even more the gap which exists in benefits among the States.

I regret that the President’s program does not contain a new proposal to strengthen the hand of the welfare agency in obtaining support payments from deserting fathers, but two provisions should help to cut down on deser tions: Removal of the “man in the house” rule and imposition on the deserting parent or spouse of a financial obligation equal to the amount of Federal assistance paid to his or her family as a result of the abandonment. This first provision is a humane and stabilizing feature because we are removing the incentive which exists for a father to desert his family when he is unable to provide for them and when his mere presence is a stumbling block to the family’s receipt of public assistance. It replaces the incentive to desert with an incentive to find work. The second provision moves in the direction of insuring that the Government is not picking up the tab for someone who is capable of picking it up himself.

One of the more negligible points in the bill before us, and one which I am sure the Senate will attempt to revise in its consideration, is the fact that the legislation does not move in the direction of providing local and state taxpayers by assuming a greater Federal share of the costs of the program in the more progressive States like New York. The Nixon program requires the States to supplement the income of welfare families in the amount which exceeds the basic $1,600 up to the level of welfare paid in that State at the beginning of 1970. Unfortunately, the bill provides that the States will pay only 30 percent of the cost of these supplementary payments, and no Federal assistance will be available where the States makes a supplemental payment to the working parent or spouse. The new provision of the Nixon program offers New Yorkers no relief to speak of from the burden of welfare. The bill has to be amended in the Senate to provide for a much larger share of the supplemental benefits and aid should be available for the working poor.

Mr. Chairman, my remarks today, of necessity, do not cover all of the features in this country’s most important test event. I am going to vote for the bill because, on balance, it is a good one. I did, however, want to take this opportunity to urge our colleagues to some of the more obvious deficiencies in the measure and at the same time urge our colleagues over in the Senate to seriously consider amendatory language.

Mr. OTTINGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970. While I believe that this bill should have been brought to the floor under an open rule to allow us to offer much-needed amendments, the measure is a step in the right direction of reform of our drastically ineffective, inequitable, and misdirected welfare system. I have been advocating welfare reform for many years, my early and current career, and I am gratified that we at last have a vehicle to enable us to carry forward the necessary struggle to eliminate hunger and poverty in the United States.

Our existing welfare system should have been discarded long ago. It places recipients in the awful position of having to refuse employment that would reduce their meager income from public assistance. It encourages dependency and creates generational cycles on relief rolls. It breaks up families in areas where "man in the house" rules have restricted eligibility and it encourages the poor to flock to overcrowded cities where welfare payments are higher. When a family of four receives $44 a month in Mississippi and could be eligible for $264 a month in New Jersey, who could resist the impulse to emigrate?

It is heartening to witness the public support for overhaul of public assistance. Significant elements of the business community, commission on income maintenance, key groups in administration, public-service agencies such as the Urban Coalition, the National Welfare Rights Organization, and organized labor have lent their support to this effort, and while the Family Assistance Act falls short of what needs to be done, it deserves our support because it will incorporate many desirable features into the Nation’s public assistance programs.

I specifically endorse the bill’s emphasis on jobs and job training for all able-bodied welfare recipients who have no small children to care for; the establishment of minimum Federal standards for eligibility and expanded Federal financing and administration; complete Federal funding of day-care centers for working parents; Federal assistance for the very poor; assistance to the working poor whose income falls below the poverty level; and a minimum guaranteed payment for aged, blind, and disabled people. These initiatives embody much-needed principles if we are to break the pervasiveness of poverty which so debases the moral posture of a Nation with a gross national product nearing $1 trillion a year.

I was, however, among those who requested an open rule on this legislation to give all Members of this body a full opportunity to add still further innovations and increases needed to make this truly a welfare reform bill.

While the Family Assistance Act does provide for greater Federal involvement, it will still allow for State variations in the amounts of assistance paid by different States and will, therefore, not completely discourage the migration of the poor to the States like New York where burdens are distorted in the entire national budget. Equity demands full Federal funding and administration of public assistance, and we will not have a truly workable and adequate system until this basic step is taken.

Further, the principle of an income floor is a major breakthrough and a long overdue reform. But how any family of four in the United States can live on $1,800 is $720 is not adequate in most sections even the official poverty borderline. Instead of testing the water with our operation. Thus the income floor will be a more reasonable and realistic minimum; and we should not bracket at such a positive move toward a more reasonable. But how any family of those who cry that we are establishing a positive move toward a better system. And also creating Jobs encouraging the search for hidden income and other subterfuges plaguing the relief system. Mr. Greene's admirable plan is a poor person, and by passage of this legislation we shall have failed to help those in need of help. Certainly, almost any change from the utter chaos of the present system which sees welfare recipients are aged, blind, disabled, and $400 for a child. This would give a family of $2,600. A 100-PERCENT ENCOURAGEMENT TO WORK Briefly, this is how the “Fair Share” plan can replace welfare, providing the poor with the necessities of life while at the same time inviting them to better their standard of living. Poor or not, every citizen (and that includes President Nixon, the butcher, the baker and you and me) would receive a taxable allowance. For example, Congress might set the figure at $100 for an adult and $400 for a child. This would give a family of four an annual “Fair Share” income of $1,400. Disbursement of these “Fair Share” funds would be handled by and combined with our existing internal revenue service system.
and it will not produce the miracle we need to solve our problem. "Fair Share" offers, instead, 100 percent encouragement to take a job, to go to a job of better pay. This means if we must have if we are ever to get this American society-saving missile off the pad.

Let's look at a table that shows how much better off a person would be under "Fair Share" than it would be under the reform proposal with its 50 percent work discouragement.

The recipient of reformed welfare who somehow fought his way to a $3,600 50 percent benefit deduction on everything he made over $720 would at that point have $3,030 in his pocket. He would have been dragging a 50 percent benefit deduction on everything he made over $720 and chain ever since he passed the $720 mark and now would be receiving no benefits at all.

But consider a recipient: who adds his "Fair Share" of $2,600 to earnings of $3,920 to support his family of four. He has $6,520. Assume he takes the ordinary 10 percent deduction plus $2,400 for members of his family and pays a surcharge of 20 percent as all taxes. He would have needed to do to finance the program. At present rates, he would return to the government $695.24 in taxes and still have $5,864.75 in his pocket.

This would stimulate the ladder of earning power because as he climbed, his spendable income would have risen with him rung by rung.

REDUCE TAXES FOR MOST

It will not be until the higher brackets are reached that the "Fair Share" allowance is canceled out by increasing income taxes.

Those with low income receive the greatest benefit which goes hand in hand with incentive to earn.

And those who earn "Fair Share" both give and take—it gives in allowance and takes in taxes—will pay for itself; these taxes plus the money saved by scrapping the bureaucratic anti-poverty programs that cost an intolerable and expensive program.

Moreover, "Fair Share" both gives and takes—will pay for itself; these taxes plus the money saved by scrapping the bureaucratic anti-poverty programs that cost an intolerable and expensive program.

CHECK INFLATION

Millions of persons now on welfare will instead be encouraged to seek jobs and would begin to fit again into society, to perform services, to manufacture articles for sale. The Gross National Product could rise dramatically to a point where the value of the dollar would no longer be attacked by the hands of prosperity.

Gone forever into the limbo of unhappy economic experiments would be the cost of welfare workers who are misusing their talents to examine shoes, poke mattresses and scan cupboards to determine if a person is entitled to relief. Gone with them would be the hassle of the rush to be where the handout is biggest.

"Fair Share" protects every American citizen to the maximum extent of our laws. It gives an American citizen. He would be able to hold his head high, to put his heart, his mind, and his hands to the business of earning a better living.

Mr. ROUDEBUSH. Mr. Chairman, we have before the House today welfare reform legislation which aims to revamp the chaotic welfare system in the Nation.

I certainly concur that there is ample need for improvement in our welfare program which has grown like Topsy and has placed a very heavy tax burden on our citizens.

All Americans share the concern and sympathy for the less fortunate in our society, but at the same time it is difficult for some of our hard-working citizens to accept a system that seems to actually encourage idleness and dependence on assistance even though employment and the ability to work is available.

We are all willing to assist those who by physical disability or by economical circumstances cannot find work. But a new plan that will, according to some estimates, nearly double the number of persons receiving assistance, is not appear to offer reform, but Instead seems to be an expansion of an already ponderous and expensive program.

Therefore, rather than further complicate the problem of the present program, it is my intention to oppose this legislation.

I do not think the Federal Government should be the encourager and multiplier of the welfare "way of life" in this Nation.

Our citizens will never turn away from those honestly and sincerely in need of assistance, but to tax our productive citizen exorbitantly to prolong and expand an already misused program, is not good legislation.

Mr. ANNUNZIO. Mr. Chairman, many of us have long looked forward to the opportunity to contribute toward the passage of basic welfare reform legislation. Therefore, I would like to commend those who have paved the way for today's breakthrough, which will make very important structural changes in our present welfare system.

In particular, I want to call attention to the contribution of the Honorable Walter Mills, whose role as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means was crucial to the development of the proposal which is now before us. The committee, under the leadership of Mr. Mills, was successful in studying the proposal made by the administration and making amendments to strengthen it. The chairman is to be commended for his very constructive leadership for welfare reform.

The bill before us is a good one. It does not please everyone, but surely we must recognize that welfare legislation must be fair to everyone, whatever it contains. It does, however, go very far in the direction of rationalizing our present irrational system. It also introduces a much-needed element of determination for— and the amount of—welfare assistance which families throughout the country are entitled to receive.

I have been concerned about the growing crisis in welfare in some time. In August 1967, Cook County began a growth in the number of recipients of aid to families with dependent children which was unprecedented, and which has not yet begun to slow. The number of families receiving AFDC in Cook County increased nearly 70 percent this year. Overall, the county now includes about 380,000 individuals who are receiving some kind of cash welfare assistance. We now have slightly more than two-thirds of all the welfare recipients in the entire State of Illinois.

What is disturbing about all this is not only the numbers, but the human misery behind the numbers. A substantial number of those now on welfare, both those new to Chicago and old-time residents, might never have had to ask for assistance, or might have worked their way off by now, if we had a system which helped them at the time and in the way that they needed it.

We know that our public welfare system, although created to promote the general welfare, has in some ways undermined it. It has—too often—provided too little assistance for those in desperate need, and has—too often—created inequities both for welfare recipients and for taxpayers. And, finally, it has failed to provide assistance and incentives designed to promote family stability and independence.

H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act, is not a cure-all for the problems of poverty in this country. However, it constitutes a major departure from previous policy, and moves very definitely in the direction of providing more help for welfare payments, removing the discrimination against families in which the father is present and working, and toward uniformity in eligibility requirements.

The bill would provide at least $1.600 a year for a needy family of four, regardless of where in the United States it lived. This basic payment would be supplemented in several ways, depending on the family's circumstances. The working poor, who would be eligible for assistance for the first time, would, of course, supplement the payment through their own efforts. Other families would, in all except a few States, be eligible for State supplementary payments. And all poor families would be eligible for food stamps to add to their cash income.

In addition to providing a minimum standard of assistance payment, the bill contains very promising provisions for work incentives. The provision for disregarding certain earned income should give recipients strong economic incentive to maximize their incomes through employment.

I believe the manpower training features of the bill will also be of immeasurable value to those who need an opportunity to improve their employment potential. In Cook County we have had extensive programs for training recipients of AFDC in the past, but our efforts should be manifestly more effective under this new legislation. The bill makes possible a mobilization of all kinds of services to assist individuals in training for and finding jobs, and to provide the kind of comprehensive experience that it is this kind of comprehensive... approach which welfare recipients often need.

Perhaps the most valuable of the supportive services which the bill provides is for expanded child care services. Many people fail to realize that a large number of mothers on welfare are already working in jobs which may make it advantageous for them to arrange for appropriate child care. Many more mothers want to work, but have refrained from seeking employment because they could not arrange for appropriate child care.

The Family Assistance Act would assure that all mothers who participate in employment or training under the family assistance plan would have appropriate child care. It is estimated that 600,000 child care openings would be provided under the bill, including 150,000 for quality preschool care and 300,000 for after-school care.

The bill would also provide a greatly improved program of assistance for the aged, blind, and disabled. These people, who are the most disadvantaged of all in our society, would be assured a minimum welfare standard of $110 for each individual, a sum which was increased substantially by the Ways and Means Committee above the administration's proposal, will make it possible for many more Americans to have some measure of decency and dignity.

Another major improvement in the bill is the strengthened role of the Federal Government in the administration of welfare assistance. The Federal payments for family assistance recipients would be made by a new Federal agency which could draw upon other Federal resources to assist it in making eligibility and payment determinations. For example, the vast record and computer resources of the Social Security Administration could be used to check earnings statements for purposes of family assistance.

By having the plan administered by the Federal Government, we can end the very widespread discrepancies which have existed in the past in welfare determination in the States, which has made assistance much needed uniformity, and a greater assurance that poor families will be treated in a dignified and fair way.

The Ways and Means Committee also improved the likelihood of having Federal administration of the State supplementary payments and of the adult programs by providing 100 percent Federal funding for the costs of administration in those States which make agreements with the Federal Government for Federal administration. This is another step toward equity and rationality in public welfare.

Mr. Chairman, the Members of the House of Representatives, Republicans and Democrats alike, cannot lose the opportunity now before us to legislate basic welfare reform. We have castigated the present system which makes a mockery of the welfare system which is generally acknowledged to be falling in important ways is profoundly unfair. We cannot in good conscience let it grow worse. Particularly is this so in those States which make agreements with the Federal Government in the administration of welfare assistance. The Federal payments for family assistance recipients will be made by a new Federal agency which could draw upon other Federal resources to assist it in making eligibility and payment determinations. For example, the vast record and computer resources of the Social Security Administration could be used to check earnings statements for purposes of family assistance.

By having the plan administered by the Federal Government, we can end the very widespread discrepancies which have existed in the past in welfare determination in the States, which has made assistance much needed uniformity, and a greater assurance that poor families will be treated in a dignified and fair way.

The Ways and Means Committee also improved the likelihood of having Federal administration of the State supplementary payments and of the adult programs by providing 100 percent Federal funding for the costs of administration in those States which make agreements with the Federal Government for Federal administration. This is another step toward equity and rationality in public welfare.

April 16, 1970

at the beginning, we cannot expect a healthy capitalist, free system to survival if we do not establish this bulwark against actual misery.

The most expensive part of this legislation is the addition of the working poor to the welfare rolls, and the annual minimum guaranteed payment of $1,600 per year to a family of four—$500 for each parent, $300 for each child—we are adding the right to work and earn money up to $720 per year. Beyond that, 50 cents of each welfare dollar is deducted from each $1 earned, and the complete transition from welfare to self-reliance is reached at $3,920. This is not a perfect formula, but to allow the recipient to retain more than 50 cents would add improperly to costs of the program, and to require him to deduct more from his welfare would discourage him from working. I am not satisfied with this formula, but I know none better and we will have to live with experience in order to make needed corrections.

To allow and to encourage the welfare recipient to work to supplement his income, to be civilized to me and we must face the initial cost of training a welfare recipient in order to promote his self-sufficiency.

There is widespread impression among those who view the welfare rolls filled with lazy persons who would not work. There are some, but the proved percentage is very low. Of all those on welfare, the figure for these individuals in my judgment is very low. Of all those on welfare, the figure for these individuals is 6.7 percent. For those "lazy persons who would not work," this legislation has an answer.

I strongly favor the provision of your bill encouraging parent involvement (section 6(d)(9)(B)). I hope this feature will be implemented in the Family Assistance program.

I strongly support the objectives of your proposal. If there is anything else I can do please let me know.

Sincerely,

WILL J. COHEN, DEAN.

Mr. Chairman, I am glad to say that the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS) has read Mr. Cohen's letter and has advised me that he agrees with the interpretation I make in my letter on the relationship between the two bills.

Mr. CHORD, Mr. Chairman, like every other Member in this Chamber, I am highly discontented with the operations of the present welfare program. During this debate, members have characterized the present plan as a "mess." With that characterization, I wholeheartedly agree. The present program has had the effect of destroying the will to work on the part of many welfare recipients. We need a new program—a new direction.

I believe that this legislation is an earnest effort on the part of the majority of the members of the Committee on Ways and Means to use the "carrot and stick" approach to get welfare recipients who are able to work off the "welfare rolls" and on the "payrolls." There are no guarantees in the legislation which would lead me to vote for the same. The establishment of a nationwide floor is definitely desirable. The "carrot" is provided in the form of incentive payments, the "stick" is present in the form of requirements which are part of certain recipients to either work or train to work. However, when I examine the specific provisions of the bill, I must conclude that this plan has not been fashioned sufficiently strong to reach the objectives so meritoriously sought. In undermine the work motivation of the millions of new recipients—the working poor—who will be added to the welfare rolls, or will their taxes, or will on other income really offer the best work incentive for the least cost? Will the employment and training programs in H.R. 16311 really be effective in moving people off the welfare rolls, or will those, like the similar provisions in present law, prove to be little more than expensive window dressing? As a practical matter, will the mandatory work provisions be effective, or will recipients who are unwilling or unable to evade them? Will this bill help to heal whatever animosity there may now be between welfare recipients and the working poor, who are ineligible for welfare? Or is it possible that if such animosity will be deepened when both groups are eligible for welfare but the working poor are excluded from State supplemental payments and from the benefits of the medical program?

Indeed, will a guaranteed annual income actually promote work? What requirements will be necessary to clarify the term, "suitable employment?" And if the "broad front assault" of the bill is a program of "workfare," will that be the lasting solution to our present financial crisis? And if it is not, will the mandatory work provisions undermine the work motivation of the millions of new recipients—the working poor—who will be added to the welfare rolls, or will on other income really offer the best work incentive for the least cost? Will the employment and training programs in H.R. 16311 really be effective in moving people off the welfare rolls, or will those, like the similar provisions in present law, prove to be little more than expensive window dressing? As a practical matter, will the mandatory work provisions be effective, or will recipients who are unwilling or unable to evade them? Will this bill help to heal whatever animosity there may now be between welfare recipients and the working poor, who are ineligible for welfare? Or is it possible that if such animosity will be deepened when both groups are eligible for welfare but the working poor are excluded from State supplemental payments and from the benefits of the medical program?

The immediate cost of this program also can be estimated. During the first full year of operation, the family assistance plan will cost the Federal Government an additional $4 billion, above and beyond the current Federal expenditure of $4.2 billion. According to the Bureau of the Budget, the cost to the Federal Government of "providing or financing medical services" has increased an estimated 1,000 percent since 1960, accounting for approximately 15 percent of the entire increased Federal expenditure since that time.

What we are actually doing here is an entirely new concept which will add millions to the welfare rolls at a cost of billions of additional dollars to the American taxpayer.

I believe with many other Members of the Congress that the priorities of this legislation may well have the effect of stemming the flow to the cities of those in need of help and opportunity. It would do this by enabling our working and our nonworking poor of the nonurban areas to maintain a minimum standard of living where they are and thus to encourage the development of such areas commercially and as labor plentiful areas.

Let me stress exactly what my thoughts are. Perhaps the Family Assistance Act is workable and practical, and it certainly is innovative. To take such a giant step—at least in its present form—demands in my judgment much more documentation and many more specific sections but also denied us the possibility to propose immediately what I believe to be a needed pilot program.

Mr. TAFT. Mr. Chairman, I want to express strong support for H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970. As a welfare board member, as chairman of the Hamilton County Council of Social Agencies, as a State legislator, and as a Member of Congress, I have had personal contact with the hardships to people and the problems of society crowded or aggravated by the deficiencies of our existing welfare programs.

This measure proposes a broad frontal attack to correct family disruption, disincentive to work, inadequate levels, welfare-motivated desertion and migration, and a lack of adequate training and day care facilities. It may develop some problems if the program is comprehensive and incurred. The cost of this sort would be almost certain to do so, but it is, at least, a courageous assault on monumental existing difficulties, and represents an honest attempt to meet realistically present-day needs and challenges. The alternative is to stand by and watch family relationships deteriorate further, the relief cycle of generation to generation to continue, and the burden on our States, and metropolitan areas mount.

Much has been said already about the bill's provisions. I would just like to add one other point of emphasis. In my judgment, this legislation may well have the effect of stemming the flow to the cities of those in need of help and opportunity. It would do this by enabling our working and our nonworking poor of the nonurban areas to maintain a minimum standard of living where they are and thus to encourage the development of such areas commercially and as labor plentiful areas.

Mr. FUQUA. Mr. Chairman, the debate here today has contained much comment that we are revising our present welfare program. Well, there is no question that our present welfare program is in need of drastic revision, but this is not the answer.

What we are actually doing here is an entirely new concept which will add millions to the welfare rolls but also deny us the possibility of providing a cost of billions of additional dollars to the American taxpayer.

I believe with many other Members of the Congress that the priorities of this legislation may well have the effect of stemming the flow to the cities of those in need of help and opportunity. It would do this by enabling our working and our nonworking poor of the nonurban areas to maintain a minimum standard of living where they are and thus to encourage the development of such areas commercially and as labor plentiful areas.

Little has been said already about the bill's provisions. I would just like to add one further point of emphasis. In my judgment, this legislation may well have the effect of stemming the flow to the cities of those in need of help and opportunity. It would do this by enabling our working and our nonworking poor of the nonurban areas to maintain a minimum standard of living where they are and thus to encourage the development of such areas commercially and as labor plentiful areas.

Mr. MURPHY of New York. Mr. Chairman, for more than a generation welfare programs have been expanded to such an extent that the Nation have grown in size and cost, but accomplished precious little in reclaiming human resources, providing dignified assistance to those genuinely in need, and providing a ladder of opportunity to millions of Americans. Indeed, these systems have been counterproductive—they have served to lock people into poverty and despair, rather than lift them out.
Over the years, the large urban areas of America have borne the brunt of the national problem without having the national resources needed to provide effective and productive welfare assistance. Our cities can no longer be expected to shoulder this burden alone.

In New York there is wide-ranging support for this bill—among those who must receive welfare, and among those who do not. All recognize that the existing situation is intolerable and should be changed. The program the President has planned for the welfare system will the welfare system fill the needs of those who it is intended to serve, and distribute the burden evenly throughout the Nation.

This legislation establishes a family assistance plan with Federal eligibility standards and benefits for families with children, and also provides standards and minimums for aid to the aged, the blind, and the disabled. Nationwide participation will stop the drift of poor people into the already intolerable ghettoes of the cities, and give hope to those who subsist on welfare.

It is important to note that this new approach to welfare contains strong requirements for Federal work-registration and referral-for-employment procedures. The bill authorizes a new work incentive plan. Federalization will stop the drift of poor people into the already intolerable ghettoes of the cities, and give hope to those who subsist on welfare. There will be no more opportunity for those who have used the present system to build their own secure futures, but has failed to live on the system without a genuine effort to find and hold employment.

The bill for this legislation has come from many quarters. The AFL-CIO supports the bill, and notes that it contains important labor standards.
The bill would also require the employment service to provide vital services to each individual who registers. An employment service that is effective must be willing to be drawn up for each person, and a whole range of rehabilitative resources would be drawn upon in order to help the welfare recipient to be trained for and to find a suitable job.

Individuals who enter training will receive a training allowance. Perhaps even more important, mothers who require day care services for their children in order to participate in work or training will be provided them. The bill makes possible a major expansion of day care resources by authorizing the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to pay for up to 100 percent of the cost of necessary day care projects.

Studies of the present work incentive program have shown that one of the major impediments of welfare recipients to entering or retaining employment is the lack of child care facilities. The bill would work toward eliminating this impediment, and at the same time provide the kind of quality child care services which many disadvantaged children need. I am very strong in the present preschool care programs which will include educational, medical, nutritional, and social services. In this way, too, it will reduce the likelihood of razing a new generation of welfare recipients.

The bill moves toward a greater federalization of welfare, and I believe that welfare recipients throughout the United States will benefit from this. A new Federal administration of family assistance payments and from the new Federal standards for eligibility. The family assistance plan will introduce greater equity and uniformity, and diminish into the treatment of welfare recipients.

The States will benefit, also. They can, if they choose, elect to have the Federal Government administer the entire welfare program from the State down, retaining only the obligation of providing supplementary services to welfare recipients who are in training, and of contributing their share of the cash assistance payments.

But equally important will be a position to undertake employment, and will also encourage them to do so.

By combining the three existing adult programs into the whole system and providing for Federal eligibility requirements, we will be promoting greater equity and uniformity for this group, just as we will be for recipients of family assistance.

Mr. Chairman, this bill has strong merits. Probably every Member of the House has some point, major or minor, with which he disagrees and would like to change. But the administration has worked long and hard over the bill. The Committee on Ways and Means has spent months in public hearings and in executive session refining the proposal. And we have now a well thought-out package of true welfare reform.

There will, in the future, be improvements which we will want to make. But I am satisfied that the bill moves in the proper direction. Levels of assistance will be maintained in the future, as the administration has testified will be necessary. But the family assistance plan can stand now as a solid social program which will benefit both the neighborhoods and the general public. I urge my colleagues to join with me in voting for H.R. 16311.

Mr. MONAGAN. Mr. Chairman, I am supporting H.R. 16311, the Family Assistance Act of 1970.

The President has urged the passage of this bill as a means of reducing welfare loads and his request and assurance are entitled to great consideration.

Although there are many debatable points about this legislation, there are two principal considerations which impel me to support it. One is the fact that the proposed method of providing for poor families may bring about the elimination of the scandalous defects in the aid to the dependent children program. Certainly the present system has proved to be a disaster and I agree that we must change it in the right direction. Levels of assistance will definitely have to be reconsidered in the proper direction. As was the elimination of the blind, and the disabled. The new provisions which relate to the old, the blind, and the disabled.

The serious shortcomings of the welfare system in its present form are obvious. In operation the system fosters family breakups, it encourages benefit recipients to stay on welfare by failing to have workable incentives and provisions for becoming employed, and it has failed to slow the steady movement of needy families from State to State in search of higher welfare grant payments. In short, the present welfare system is unworkable; it definitely must be changed in the direction of encouraging employment and family stability. No one can guarantee, of course, that the welfare given any one family deserves credit for opening up the world of opportunity to be tested. Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, that evening last August when President Nixon announced his proposed welfare reform plan, a national radio network asked me to perform one of those "instant analyses" which later became so unpopular with the administration. My very first comment on the President's suggestions was that was that part of the proposal should be recognized as meaningful and progressive while other other changes should be viewed as mere continuations of the atavistic mentality which created the current welfare problems in the first place. Eight months and innumerable contentions later, I find that my view has changed very little.

There is no question that the President deserves credit for opening up the chance of welfare reform for all members of the specific recommendations in his bill. The minimum Federal payment guarantee, the inclusion of the working poor in the programs, and the nationalization of eligibility standards are all desperately needed changes in the present AFDC system.

The House Ways and Means Committee would likewise be complimented for several developments in the bill. The most significant innovation in the original proposal. I was especially pleased that the base payment for aid to the aged, blind, and disabled was increased by over 20 percent. The added incentive which this provides for the administration of the entire family assistance program was also a very necessary bettement, as was the elimination of 10 percent local matching requirements for day care centers.
Collectively, these suggestions mark a significant forward thrust in the Federal Government's attitude concerning its responsibilities to the poor of this Nation, and for that reason I shall vote for H.R. 16311. Nevertheless, my colleagues and I thoroughly understand that this bill faces a wealth of opposition, and what those responsibilities ought to be, and that all of us in this chamber who have worked so long for an adequate welfare system will not be satisfied until they are.

My primary objection to H.R. 16311 concerns the payment provisions, which are inferior even to those in the President's original bill. It is disgraceful, for instance, that the eight Southern States that have done the very worst job of providing for their needy citizens are rewarded in this legislation by allowing them to terminate all state payments.

Mr. Chairman, we have all been prevented—proof—proved totally in Alabama, Birmingham, New Orleans, or St. Louis can raise her child on the 82 cents a day from the Federal minimum. At least the President's bill required these States to pay more than that. It is unconscionable.

I have been in attendance throughout the entire debate on this bill, hoping to find solid evidence that a far-reaching bill such as this requires us to decide if we are on the threshold of a brilliant new direction in solving some of our most serious social problems, or on the verge of an economically and socially disastrous mistake of incalculable consequence.

I know from long exposure to the bitter problems in a major city that our welfare programs, initiated in the early days of the New Deal to meet what were then well-understood family crisis situations—a program little changed since then except in details—is completely out of date in terms of today's problems. If this family assistance plan had been a part of the original Social Security Act of 1935, it would have made a great deal of sense. In today's day, the concept of public assistance was to have the people who needed welfare assistance could not wait to find the jobs which would get them off welfare. Most of them would have leaped enthusiastically to take advantage of the opportunity to learn new skills, and would have welcomed supplemental benefits while in job training and then when starting to pay benefits which would have speeded the transition. The rehabilitation of most of the families then eligible for the kind of help now called for in this bill.

We made repeated attempts during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations to establish programs to achieve what this bill is now intended by its sponsors to establish programs to achieve what the kind of help now called for in this bill.

This is one of the reasons I am so much against turning the food stamp program into a free handout, giving the stamps to people to buy enough food to eat well without having to pay anything for it. It is not the cost of the stamps which disturbs me: We can afford, out of our tremendous abundance of food in this country to help every American to eat a proper, nutritious diet. What worries me about giving the stamps out free is the implication that the Government has the obligation to see that every family all the food it needs without any cost to it whatsoever, so that the money that family would normally spend for food could be spent on other things.

Once that principle were ever extended, the moderate income family, which struggles to pay its bills and struggles to afford a decent diet, would so resent the idea of other families receiving absolutely free more food than the self-supporting family can afford to buy that such resentment would destroy the basic of public support for any kind of food stamp program.

I feel that this so-called family assistance plan invites a similar reaction— not envy for someone who is needy getting little help. Even a lot of help; rather it is the likelihood of such a situation by the taxpaying family that its taxes are being used to subsidize someone who abuses the program.

Most people would gladly pay taxes at personal sacrifice to help children break the welfare cycle. But they insist that any such program be tightly administered to prevent all adults citizen who use the welfare payments for their own indulgence rather than for the children for whom the money is intended. And this is not an idle cry. It must be a terrible thing to have to spend money that was intended for children, which was intended for children. I thought this bill would solve the problemons, I would not hesitate for a second to endorse it wholeheartedly.

Main Need is for Adequate Day Care Centers

But throughout the long hours of debate on this bill, I have not been convinced that the proposed program would solve our real welfare problems. All it would do, it seems to me, would be to give the impression the problems were in some way being solved, as if an income of $31 a week is what the bill would assure a family of four, including their own earnings—would unify broken homes, prevent deserting, encourage job training, and so on.

Now, I am not sure what the figure would have to be to serve as incentive enough to accomplish those objectives; no one in the debate has ventured to give such a figure. We all know that if the figure were set high enough to really achieve these goals, the sums needed to carry out the program could never be appropriated.

Probably the main key to getting more work from the mothers motivated into taking job training and getting off welfare is to provide adequate—and I mean adequate—daycare centers for their children. This bill does not do that. In fact, I would gladly vote to spend all the money the bill authorizes to be spent for the supplementary benefits if it were used instead to build and operate the kind of daycare center one can find, in the center of downtown Singapore, but hardly anywhere in the United States. We had such centers during World War II, and mothers gratefully left their young children there each day to take jobs where their skills and hands were needed. If we can do it in a war, we can certainly do it in the achievement of the social objectives of this bill knowing that we would be cutting right to the heart of the whole issue.

I have never pretended, even to myself, that everyone else is wrong and I alone am right because I know that could not happen in the Congress or anywhere else. But I have deep reservations about this bill after hearing the entire debate—reservations so deep about the eventual direction or cost of this program compared to its anticipated results, that I have reluctantly decided I must vote against it.

The fact that it would cost so much to do so little, and the fact that the cost of doing what would have to be done if the concept of the bill were really to solve anything would be so prohibitive, fortify my conclusion.

Defeat of Bill Could Result in Better Program

My whole record in the Congress has been directed toward helping all of our people, and particularly our low-income people, to enjoy a better standard of living. I have often been criticized and even attacked for my efforts in behalf of social welfare legislation, and I have been willing to stand on my record because I think we all prosper in this country only as every American has a decent opportunity to advance himself economically. If I thought this bill would solve serious welfare problems, I would be delighted to vote for it.

Perhaps other Members have more wisdom, more knowledge of this issue, more concern for sound draftsmanship of this program, and do not suffer the same doubts I feel so strongly. I recall that a lot of Members of Congress could not see the good in the social security bill in 1935, and many of us voted against it, and of course we were wrong. On a measure like this bill, one can imagine that a "no" vote, for whatever reason, might stand forever as a monument to one's lack of foresight. Thus, when I many Members ready to accept this bill, I feel somewhat lonely in taking a negative position, but I think the Members here know that I do not cast my vote lightly on any issue or without feeling that my vote is the right one. On that prayerful basis, I will vote "nay."

On the unlikely possibility that it might be defeated here, or is recog....
The bill also consolidates the assistance for the blind, disabled, and aged. The coverage under this bill will increase those assisted from 7 million to 20 million under family assistance plan—FAP—and from 3 to 4 million under the blind, disabled, and aged. The total Federal-State cost is estimated to be increased to $4 billion, or $500 million for FAP including $500 million for blind, disabled and aged and $600 million for job training features and day-care centers.

In analyzing this bill, I share the concern of a number of my colleagues that the $1,600 Federal minimum is inadequate to cover even the barest necessities of food, clothing, and shelter for our less-fortunate citizens. Although this will be increased by the State supplement, I would like to see a cost-of-living feature in the direct Federal contribution. Since this bill comes to the floor under a closed rule, we cannot amend the bill, but I think that the final version should include a higher Federal base and the cost-of-living feature in the Federal contribution so that our poorer citizens are not left out in the cold by fluctuations in our economy.

The coverage of this bill is commendable but in some areas falls short. The bill quite correctly extends coverage to the poverty-level families headed by full-time working mothers and families where the father is unemployed and at home. This hopefully will curb the trend in the dissolution of the family structure of the poor.

This new family assistance plan is not a panacea for ending poverty but I do feel that it offers an increased opportunity for many of our less-fortunate citizens to break out of the poverty cycle. The existing welfare structure has not been effective, I think the family assistance plan represents a prudent first step in correcting some of its deficiencies.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I am against the passage of H.R. 16311, labeled "the Family Assistance Act of 1970." There are good and valid reasons to oppose the passage of this bill that it becomes a problem to enumerate such reasons in their relative importance or to decide which deserves the greater emphasis. Let me try to take some time to provide detailed statistics to prove the danger of this bill. But all of these back-up figures can be fully documented and substantiated. This welfare package is a 100-page bill with an accompanying report of 85 pages. It will entail a first annual Federal cost of $4.4 billion in three categories. By 1975, it is estimated the annual cost will have increased to $7.3 billion.

Under the provisions of this bill a family which consists of the parents and two children will be assigned a family benefit level of $1,600 per year. If their income falls below this amount, supplemental income will be provided to bring their income up to the $1,600 level. So far as I have been able to find out, this is the first time in the history of our country the Federal Government has agreed by law to provide a guaranteed annual income to its citizens.

In my opinion, this is a wrong turn for our country to take at this time. Regardless of the figures that are involved, under the provisions of this bill, there is a philosophy which is closely akin to a pure socialist philosophy.

In the present law administered by the States it is true there is aid or welfare for the aged, the badly disabled and the blind. This is true welfare. On the other hand, to pay able-bodied people to do nothing and pay them $4.4 billion to anyone who can sit at home and be guaranteed a fixed amount of income may very well soon lose their own self-respect. As much as I deplore the depression conditions today, I think we have at least this was a true work program for the able-bodied. With all of the jobs that go begging in our country today, people ought to work and should not be encouraged to stay home in idleness.

Of course we are all mindful of the words that have been used to make this act saleable. It is argued that "workfare" should replace the word "welfare." Yet, careful study of those portions of the bill which require the family to register for employment or training, will reveal there is a long list of exceptions, exclusions as well as a long list of exemptions. One member suggested that the bill took at least three beggars of print to provide all the loopholes for those who want to receive welfare but do not work.

One of the worst things about this entire welfare package is that the guarantee annual income amounts to a kind of foot in the door that could very well be open ended. True, we have established a definite figure for this current year but I have reason to believe that those who vote for this measure today will have opponents campaigning against them who will be promising an increase in guaranteed annual income if they are elected. Each of those who support this bill should ask themselves the question. Will they be for larger payments next year? And the next year? And the following year? If we pass this bill today we, in effect, establish a policy by which the Federal Government will reward those who will choose to take advantage of every exclusion, exception, and exemption under the beautiful description of workfare. This policy means instead of proving to a State that his income, instead of proving any kind of an incentive, could well be described as a disincentive to improve earnings or occupational capacities, and a disincentive for people to improve their chances.

Today, we hear so much about revenue sharing with the States and the desirability of decentralization toward greater State responsibility. Has anyone taken the time to consider what this bill will do to such concepts? It should be recalled that benefits payable under title II of this measure spells out that there must be a State supplement in order to receive Federal funds. The very natural question to follow is how well can the already impoverished States afford these additional demands on their treasuries for welfare funds?

It should be noted that if the present program is repealed a new Federal program is substituted under which the States are forbidden to impose restrictions such as duration of residence requirements and the denial of payments to aliens. Then this means that the recipients in low-benefit States will flock to States where higher benefits are paid with the result of further overcrowding in the teeming cities in those States where higher paying State programs are in effect.

I am making it clear that I am not opposed to all of the provisions of this bill. I am unalterably opposed to that part which commences or begins for the first time a revolutionary guaranteed income plan. Because of the gag rule under which all the Members of this House are muted, muzzled, and have had their voices stilled to offer any amendments, there is no way to eliminate this most objectionable provision. Unless the minority is fair enough to offer a motion... to recommit or else hope for the defeat of the bill or final passage.

Nearly all of the Members of the House are for welfare reform, but most of us are also against welfare expansion. If the figures which have been made available to me are correct, this bill will provide for tripling the number of persons on welfare. It would add about 3 million more families, or 15 million more persons. These figures have been rather carefully concealed in most of the discussions. It is little wonder that they have, because therein lies the entry wedge for the guaranteed annual income.

The present measure extends the guarantee to families with fully employed fathers. I recognize that the proponents will counter such a statement by saying that if the head of a family refuses to work or take a better-paying job he will lose his welfare. That is true. But what really happens is that his share—$300 per year—will be deducted from the family welfare allotment and the rest of the family allotment will continue to be guaranteed. I should like to see no questions asked about the expenditure of the remainder of the money.

One of the best criteria of the weakness of the so-called welfare section of this bill is the surfeit of criticism by conservatives because they believe there are too many loopholes and at the same time is the target of criticism by the liberals because there are not enough loopholes. Both groups seem to admit that it will take a costly, cumbersome bureaucracy which will grow to supervise the assignment of job opportunities and the training of millions of people if such provisions are to be really and truly enforced. The bill deserves a lot more consideration by the Committee on Ways and Means and should be restudied in detail if we expect to reform our welfare programs rather than the vast expansion of these programs.

Search as carefully and as frequently as you choose and you will find nowhere in this bill any provisions to finance it. Even if all the surplus anticipated by the present administration in this current year's budget materializes, there would not be enough money to pay for the benefits of H.R. 16311. No matter how hard an effort is made to conceal the fact, if this bill is passed, this same Committee on Ways and Means will have to propose a tax increase to pay for this handout. In any event, the House and Senate expect to extend the surplus, with increased rates back to 10 percent in order to finance what has been so cleverly called the Family Assistance Act.

Does the Committee on Ways and Means intend to raise the payroll tax provisions? Do they propose a social security payroll tax increase, doubled in order to provide family assistance benefits? These are questions which no one has answered during this debate and so far as I know, no one has made an attempt to answer.

The bill as it now stands who benefits from controlled economics.

Who gains from distribution-of-the-wealth programs? In four generations of guaranteed welfare, many of the same families remain on welfare while the rich, the manipulators of the program, have become richer.

Few among us would have ever feared that a controlled Socialist plan such as guaranteed income would be the announced goal and program of a Republican President. Had this proposal arisen under a Democratic President, one doubts it could have received such a bi-partisan support.

The positive thinkers urge us to look at the good side of the plan—to ignore the evil—while the progressives say give the plan a chance to see what will happen.

I say neither time or experience is needed to know a scheme born of upside down fantasy. Socialism but begets socialism.

In our lifetime we have seen empire building by a central government under both national parties exert more and more power and control over our lives and institutions, and, as always, through the inducement of our moneys.

Federal funds are not followed with Federal control. Witness the downfall of State authority, local government, industries, public schools, labor unions, and now this latest attack on the basic unit of our society—our families.

This bill is a menace to the family—with its expected guidelines and the ever-present threat of a removal of funds for noncompliance with some bureaucrat's ideological dictates.

Today's bill places a ceiling of $1,600 a year for coverage. Who will guarantee that next year the ante will not be $10,000 or $20,000?

We have all witnessed socialism with its foot-in-the-door advance. It survives only on growth and requires expansion to bring more and more people under its nefarious umbrella.

In H.R. 16311 unless this body and becomes law, we are participating in the creation of a new feudal system in the United States, in which case we are attending the funeral of the American traditions of our fathers—work, pride, thrift and individuality.

The class war will then have officially been instituted.

I would never cast my people's vote for such an un-American measure.

Mr. BYRNEs of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, we have no further requests for time.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time. I had some time to reserve for myself, but I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the bill is considered as having been read for amendment. No amendments are in the bill except amendments offered by direction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Are there any committee amendments?

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Chairman, there are no committee amendments.
Mr. BURLESON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BURLESON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I have a preferential motion. Is it in order to offer a preferential motion at this time?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman advise the Chair what sort of preferential motion he has in mind?

Mr. BURLESON of Texas. To strike the enacting clause. Is it in order at this time?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the gentleman from Texas that that motion is not in order unless amendments are in order, and are offered. There being no committee amendments, that motion will not be in order at this time.

Mr. BURLESON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire, if there are no committee amendments to be offered, if the bill is defeated?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will advise the gentleman from Texas that the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. MILLS), just advised the Chair that there are no committee amendments. That being so, the motion is not in order at this time.

Under the rule, the Committee rises. A quorum of the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DINGELLE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee has the bill before it. Mr. Chairman, I am considering the bill (H.R. 16311) to authorize a family assistance to achieve self-sufficiency.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. GROSS. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COLLIER) qualifies because he has stated his opposition to the bill in its present form, which is the bill now before the House.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, is it not true under the rules of the House that the motion to recommit should go to one who is unqualifiedly opposed to the bill?

The Speaker. The Chair will state that a Member who states that he is opposed to the bill in its present form.

Mr. LANDRUM. Mr. Speaker, is that not a modification of the rule that a Member in order to qualify must be opposed to the bill?

The Speaker. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COLLIER) qualifies because he has stated his opposition to the bill in its present form. Therefore, the gentleman, with that statement, and upon his possession, qualifies.

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The Speaker reads as follows:

Mr. COLLIER moves to recommit the bill (H.R. 16311) to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendments:

Page 21, line 1, strike out "suitable". Page 21, lines 2 and 3, strike out "suitable".

Strike out line 21 on page 21 and all that follows down through line 17 on page 22, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(b) No family shall be denied benefits under this part, or have its benefits under this part reduced, because an individual who is (or would be, in subsection (a), be) a member of such family refuses work under any of the following conditions:

(1) if the position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout, or other labor dispute;

(2) if the wages, hours, or other terms or conditions of the work offered are comparable to those prescribed by Federal, State, or local law that are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality;

(3) if, as a condition of being employed, the individual would be required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization, or"

The Speaker. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 248, nays 149, not voting 33, as follows:

Committee on Ways and Means,
U.S. House of Representatives,
1102 Longworth House Office Building,
Washington, D.C. 20515

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills (Democrat, Arkansas), Committee on Ways and Means, U.S. House of Representatives, announces decisions made by the Committee on Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid

The Honorable Wilbur D. Mills, (Democrat, Arkansas) Chairman, Committee on Ways and Means, U.S. House of Representatives, today announced the decisions made by the Committee on Ways and Means on the subject of Social Security, Medicare, and Medicaid for drafting purposes. The staffs have been instructed to prepare a draft embodying these decisions and bring it back to the Committee.

The decisions are as follows:

I. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY CASH PROGRAM

1. Cash Benefit Increase

Social security payments to the 26.2 million beneficiaries on the rolls would be increased by 5 percent beginning with payments for the month of January 1971 (payable on February 3, 1971). This benefit increase will mean additional payments of $1.7 billion in the first 12 months.

2. Retirement Test

The retirement test, which provides for reducing benefits of social security beneficiaries who have earnings, would be amended by increasing the annual exempt amount from the present level of $1,680 to $2,000. For each $2 of earnings up to $3,200, a recipient's benefit would be reduced by $1. For each $1 of earnings over $3,200 per year, a beneficiary would lose $1 in benefit payments. An additional $475 million would be paid out for months in 1971 under this provision.

3. 100 Percent Widow's and Widower's Benefit at Age 65 and Reduced Benefits for Widowers at Age 60

Under present law a full widow's (or dependent widower's) benefit applied for at age 62 or later is equal to 82 1/2 percent of the primary insurance amount of the wage earner. An actuarially reduced benefit may be received by a widow at age 60. Under the bill a widow or widower would be entitled to a benefit equal to 100 percent of the primary insurance amount if first applied for at age 65 or later. Benefits applied for between age 62 and 65 would be proportionately increased over the present 82½ percent rate according to the age of the applicant at the time of application. In addition, widowers under age 62 would be granted the same privilege of applying for benefits on an actuarially reduced basis as now applies to widows. There are 3.3 million widows and widowers on the rolls who will receive additional benefits. $700 million in additional benefit payments will be made in the first 12 months.

4. AGE 62—COMPUTATION POINT FOR MEN

Under present law, the method of computing benefits for men and women differs in that all years of earnings up to age 65 must be taken into account in determining average wages for men, while for women, only years up to age 62 must be included. This discrepancy, which presently favors women over men, would be eliminated by applying the same rules to men as now apply to women. In the first 12 months, an additional $925 million would be paid out. An estimated 10 million on the rolls on the effective date will receive larger benefits under this provision and in addition 60,000 persons—workers and their dependents not eligible under present law—will be added to the rolls.

5. ELIMINATE REDUCTION IN SPOUSES’ BENEFITS IN CERTAIN CASES

Under present law, when a woman applies for a retirement benefit prior to age 65, it is computed under the actuarial reduction formula; if she later applies for a spouse’s benefit, it is reduced in the same proportion as her retirement benefit. The bill would eliminate the actuarial reduction in such cases when the spouse’s benefit is applied for. The same rule would apply to dependent husbands entitled to spouse’s or widower’s benefits. Approximately 100,000 beneficiaries would be affected by this provision, which will result in additional benefit payments estimated at $10 million during the first 12 months.

6. DISABILITY BENEFITS FOR BLIND PERSONS

Under present law one of the general requirements for disability insurance benefits is that the disabled person must have worked 5 out of the 10 years before he becomes disabled. This requirement would be dropped for blind people. As a result a blind person could qualify for benefits when he had sufficient work to qualify for retirement benefits.

7. WORKMEN’S COMPENSATION OFFSET FOR DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFICIARIES

Under present law a disability insurance beneficiary who also qualifies for workmen’s compensation has his Social Security benefit reduced so that his combined payment will not be more than 80 percent of his average earnings before he became disabled. Under the bill the combined payments allowable would be raised to 100 percent of his average earnings.
8. MILITARY SERVICE CREDIT

Present law provides for a credit of $100 a month, in addition to pay, for military service performed after 1967. This credit would also be provided for service provided from 1957, the date military service was covered under social security. Approximately 130,000 beneficiaries will be affected immediately. $35 million in additional benefits will be paid out in the first 12 months.

9. DISABLED CHILDREN

Under present law a person disabled prior to age 18 may continue to receive a child’s benefit without regard to his age for as long as he is disabled. Under the bill persons disabled prior to age 22 could qualify for such a disabled child’s benefit.

10. OTHER AMENDMENTS

The Committee also adopted other amendments relating to Social Security coverage for policemen and firemen in Idaho, the coverage of Home Loan Bank employees, the treatment of earnings of self-employed persons paying taxes on a fiscal year basis, the treatment of earnings under the retirement test of persons in the year they attain age 62, and payment of disability insurance benefits on the basis of applications filed after the death of the disabled person.

11. FINANCING

In order to pay the additional cost of the new benefits provided and to meet the existing actuarial deficit in the hospital insurance (part A of Medicare) program, the tax base would be increased from $7,800 a year to $9,000 a year, starting January 1, 1971, and a new schedule of tax rates would be provided as follows:

II. AMENDMENTS RELATED TO THE MEDICARE, MEDICAID AND MATERNAL AND CHILD HEALTH PROGRAMS

COVERAGE AND BENEFIT CHANGES UNDER MEDICARE

1. Relationship Between Medicare and Federal Employees Benefits.—No payment would be made under medicare for services covered under a Federal Employees Health Benefits plan effective with January 1, 1972, unless in the meantime the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare determines that the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program has been modified to make available coverage supplementary to medicare benefits and to assure that Federal employees reaching age 65 will continue to have the benefit of the government contribution towards health insurance.

2. Hospital Insurance for the Uninsured.—People reaching age 65 who are ineligible for hospital insurance benefits under medicare... would be able to enroll, on a voluntary basis, for hospital insurance coverage under the same conditions under which people can enroll under the supplementary medical insurance part of medicare, provided that those who enroll must pay the full cost of the protection—$27 a month at the beginning of the program, rising as hospital costs rise. States and other organizations would be permitted to purchase such protection on a group basis for their retired employees age 65 or over.

3. Health Maintenance Organization Option.—Individuals eligible for both Part A and Part B medicare coverage would be able to choose to have their care provided by a health maintenance organization (a prepaid group health or other capitation plan). The government would pay for such coverage on a capitation basis not to exceed 95% of the cost of medicare benefits provided to beneficiaries in the area not covered under the health maintenance organization.

Improvements in the Operating Effectiveness of the Medicare, Medicaid and Maternal and Child Health Programs

1. Limitation on Federal Payment for Disapproved Expenditures.—Reimbursement amounts to providers of health services under medicaid, medicare, and maternal and child health for capital costs, such as depreciation and interest, would not be made with respect to capital expenditures (in excess of $100,000) which are inconsistent with state or local health facility plans.

2. Experiments and Projects in Prospective Reimbursement and Incentives for Economy.—The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be required to develop experiments and demonstration projects designed to test various methods of making payment to providers of services on a prospective basis under medicare, medicaid and maternal and child health. In addition, the Secretary would be authorized to conduct experiments with methods of payment or reimbursement designed to increase efficiency and economy, and with community-wide utilization review mechanisms.

3. Limits on Costs Recognized as Reasonable.—The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be given authority to establish and promulgate limits on provider costs to be recognized as reasonable under medicare based on comparisons of the cost of covered services by various classes of providers in the same geographical area. Hospitals and extended care facilities could charge beneficiaries for the care not covered (except in the case of an admission by a physician who owns an interest in the facility).

4. Limitation on Recognition of Physician Fee Increases.—Charges determined to be reasonable under the present criteria in the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health law would be limited by providing: (a) that for fiscal year 1971 medical charge levels recognized as prevailing may not be increased beyond the 75th percentile of actual charges in a locality during calendar year 1969; (b) that for fiscal year 1972 and thereafter the prevailing charge levels recognized for a locality may be increased, on the average, only to the extent justified by increases in the cost of production of medical services, levels of living and the earnings of other professional, managerial and technical personnel; and (c) that for medical supplies, equipment and services that, in the judgment of the Secretary, generally do not vary significantly in quality from one supplier to another, charges allowed as reasonable may not exceed the lowest levels at which such supplies, equipment and services are widely available in a locality.

5. Changes in Federal Matching Percentages with Respect to Certain Services.—The Federal medicaid matching for certain outpatient services would be increased and the Federal matching with respect to long-term institutional care would be decreased and certain other limitations would be imposed. Specifically, (1) the Federal matching percentage for outpatient hospital services, clinic services and home health services would be increased by 25 percent; (2) the Federal percentage after the first 60 days of care in a general or TB hospital would be reduced by one-third; (3) the Federal percentage after the first 90 days of care in a year in a skilled nursing home would be reduced by one-third; (4) the Federal matching for care in a mental hospital after 90 days of care would be reduced by one-third and no Federal matching would be available after 275 days of such care during an individual's lifetime; and (5) the Secretary would be authorized to compute a reasonable cost differential for reimbursement purposes between skilled nursing homes and intermediate care facilities.

6. Payments for Services of Teaching Physicians.—Medicare and medicaid would not pay for the services of teaching physicians unless other patients who have insurance or are able to pay are also charged for such services and the medicare deductibles and coinsurance amounts are regularly collected. Medicare payment would be authorized for services to hospital patients by staff of certain medical schools that now furnish these services without charge to the hospital.

7. Termination of Payments to Providers Who Abuse the Medicare Program.—The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be given authority to terminate or suspend payment for services rendered by a supplier of health and medical services found to be guilty of program abuses. Program review teams would be established to furnish the Secretary professional advice in carrying out this authority.

8. Repeal of Medicaid Provision Requiring Expanded Programs.—The requirement in present law that States have comprehensive medicaid programs by 1977 would be repealed.

9. State Determination of Reasonable Hospital Costs.—States would be permitted to pay hospitals on the basis of their own determination of reasonable cost, provided there is assurance that the medicaid program would pay the actual cost of hospitalization of medicaid recipients.

10. Government Payment No Higher Than Charges.—Payments for services under the medicare, medicaid, and maternal and child health programs would not be higher than the charges regularly made for those services.

11. Institutional Budgeting.—Health institutions under these programs would be required to have a written plan reflecting an operating budget and a capital expenditures budget.

12. Federal Matching for Modern Claims Processing Systems.—Federal matching at the 90-percent rate would be available under medicaid for the states to set up mechanized claims processing and informational retrieval systems. Federal matching for the continuous operation of such systems would be at the 75-percent rate.

13. Guarantee of Payment for Extended Care Services.—The Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would establish specific periods of time (by medical condition) after hospitalization during which a patient would be presumed to require extended care level of services in an extended care facility. Similar provision would be made for post-hospital home health services.

14. Prohibition of Reassignments.—Medicare and medicaid payments to anyone other than a patient or his physician would be prohibited, unless the physician is required as a condition of his employment to turn over his fees to his employer or unless there is a contractual arrangement between the physician and the facility in which the services were provided under which the facility bills for all such services.

15. Utilization Review in Medicaid.—Require hospitals and skilled nursing homes participating in the medicaid and maternal and child health programs to have the same utilization review committee with the same functions as in the medicare program.

16. Medicaid Deductibles for the Medically Indigent.—States would be permitted to impose a flat deductible or cost sharing provision with respect to people eligible under medicaid programs but not eligible for cash public assistance payments. (Present law requires such deductible or cost sharing to vary directly with the amount of the recipient's income.)

17. Stopping Payment Where Hospital Admission Not Necessary.—If the utilization review committee of a hospital or extended care facility in its sample review of admissions finds a case where institutionalization is no longer necessary, then payment would be cut off after 3 days. This provision parallels the provision in present law under which long-stay cases are cut off after 3 days when the utilization review committee determines that institutionalization is no longer required.

18. Role of State Health Agencies in Medicaid.—State health agencies would be required to perform certain functions under the medicaid and maternal and child health programs relating to the quality of the health care furnished to recipients.

MISCELLANEOUS AND TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

1. Retroactive Coverage Under Medicaid.—States would be required to cover under medicaid the cost of health care provided to an eligible individual during the 3-month period before the month in which he applied for medicaid.

2. Certification of Hospitalization for Dental Care.—A dentist would be authorized to certify to the necessity for hospitalization to protect the health of a medicare patient who is hospitalized for noncovered dental procedures.

3. Christian Science Sanatoria under Medicaid.—Christian Science sanatoria would be exempted from the medicaid requirement that they have a licensed nursing home administrator and from other inappropriate skilled nursing home requirements.

4. Physical Therapy Services Under Medicare.—Under medicare's supplementary medical insurance program, beneficiaries would be covered for up to $100 per calendar year of physical therapy services furnished by a licensed physical therapist in his office or the patient's home under a physician's prescription. Hospitals and extended care facilities could continue to provide covered physical therapy services to inpatients who have exhausted their days of hospital insurance coverage. Where physical therapy is furnished under contractual arrangement with a hospital or extended care facility medicare reimbursement to the institution will in all cases be based on a reasonable salary payment for the services.

5. Grace Period for Paying Medicare Premium.—Where there is good cause for a medicare beneficiary’s failure to pay supplementary medical insurance premiums, an extended grace period of 90 days would be provided.

6. Extension of Time for Filing Medicare Claims.—The time limit for filing supplementary medical insurance claims would be extended where the medicare beneficiary’s delay is due to administrative error.

7. Enrollment Under Medicare.—Relief would be provided where administrative error has prejudiced an individual’s right to enroll in medicare’s supplementary medical insurance program. Eligible individuals would be permitted to enroll under medicare’s supplementary medical insurance program during any prescribed enrollment period and would no longer be required to enroll within 3 years following first eligibility or a previous withdrawal from the program.

8. Waiver of Medicare Overpayment.—Where incorrect medicare payments were made to a deceased beneficiary, the liability of survivors for repayment could be waived if the survivors were without fault in incurring the overpayment.

9. Medicare Fair Hearings.—Fair hearings, held by medicare carriers in response to disagreements over amounts paid under supplementary medical insurance, would be conducted only where the amount in controversy is $100 or more.

10. Collection of Medicare Premium by the Railroad Retirement Board.—Where a person is entitled to both Railroad Retirement and Social Security monthly benefits, his premium payment for supplementary medical insurance benefits would be deducted from his Railroad Retirement benefit in all cases.

11. Medicare Benefits for People Living Near U.S. Border.—Medicare beneficiaries living in the United States close to the U.S. border would get covered care if the hospital they use is in Canada or Mexico and is closer to their residence than a comparable hospital in the U.S.

12. Chiropractors’ Services.—The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare would conduct a study on covering chiropractors’ services (on a very limited basis) under medicare, utilizing the experimental authority under the medicaid program. A report on the study, including the experience of other programs paying for chiropractors’ services would be submitted to the Congress within 2 years.

1970 SOCIAL SECURITY LEGISLATION

To Administrative, Supervisory, and Technical Employees

Yesterday, Secretary Richardson testified before the Senate Finance Committee on H. R. 17550, the "Social Security Amendments of 1970." Enclosed is a copy of his prepared statement.

The Finance Committee had previously, on June 17, held one day of hearings on H. R. 17550. At that time, the Assistant Secretary for Legislation, Creed C. Black, gave a short statement highlighting the most significant parts of H. R. 17550, and I presented a series of charts explaining in greater detail the provisions of the bill.

After the Secretary had finished his statement yesterday, the Committee questioned him on the various provisions of the bill. The Committee will continue questioning Department officials today. No date has yet been fixed for testimony on the bill by public witnesses.

Robert M. Ball
Commissioner

Enclosure
Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee:

I am pleased to testify before your Committee today on H.R. 17550, the Social Security Amendments of 1970. The bill embodies practically all of the proposals submitted for the consideration of the Congress by the President in his September 25, 1969, Message on Social Security, and other proposals, such as the Cost Effectiveness Amendments of 1969, that were later submitted by the Administration are included in the bill. The legislation will improve the protection afforded by the social security cash-benefits program and improve the Medicare, Medicaid, and maternal and child health programs with regard to both overall effectiveness and the potentials for control of health care costs. The President has endorsed the major provisions of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, on June 17th Commissioner Ball went into some detail concerning H.R. 17550 in his chart presentation. Today, therefore, I would like to confine my opening remarks to the most significant proposals in the bill and, with your permission, submit a more detailed statement for the record.

Automatic Adjustment of Social Security Benefits

H.R. 17550 provides for automatic adjustment of social security benefits to increases in the cost of living. In my opinion, this proposal is the most important one in the bill concerning the cash-benefits program. Both political parties included it in their 1968 national convention platforms, and there is widespread support for it among both contributors to the program and beneficiaries. This is a proposal whose time has come.

Over the years Congress has established a policy of restoring the purchasing power of benefits when price increases have eroded their value. Sometimes, however, there have been long periods during which benefits have remained unchanged and beneficiaries have had to get along on these benefits while the cost of living increased substantially. On the other hand, the Congress has occasionally set new and higher benefit levels than had previously been established, actually increasing the purchasing power of the benefit in real terms.

Here is what has happened: there were no general benefit increases between 1940, when monthly benefits were first payable, and 1950. Then the benefit level was increased to about make up for the rise in prices that had occurred during the 1940's. As a result of the amendments of 1952 and 1954, the Congress established a somewhat higher level benefits in real terms. Then, during the next 15 years, three across-the-board benefit increases were enacted that approximately restored the purchasing power of the benefits as they were established in 1954. The 15-percent benefit increase earlier this year again established a somewhat higher level of benefits in real terms.

Although Congress has established a policy of restoring the purchasing power of benefits, and indeed on occasion increasing the real level of benefits, there have been substantial time lags between the increases in price levels and the increase in benefits. For example, there were no increases between 1940 and 1950, although the purchasing power of the benefits declined by about 37 percent. There was no general increase in benefits between 1959 and 1965 although the purchasing power of the benefits declined by about 8 percent.

When substantial time lags occur between increases in price levels and benefit increases, congressional action increasing benefits cannot make up for the hardships beneficiaries endure while awaiting such action. Older people, widows, orphans, and disabled people, who have had to get along for years on benefits that were declining in purchasing power, have suffered hardships during those years that cannot be overcome by a later restoration of the purchasing power of the benefits.

The automatic adjustment provision controls the time lag and adds predictability to the increase. Writing the established congressional policy into the law will give both beneficiaries and covered workers the peace of mind that comes with the certainty that the purchasing power of their benefits will not be eroded by future price increases. Had this provision been in effect during the last 15 years, instead of the four benefit increases that occurred in 1959, 1965, 1968, and 1970, there would have been seven benefit increases. Thus, beneficiaries who were on the rolls during those years would have had the purchasing power of their benefits maintained throughout the period at a level much closer to the purchasing power of the benefit level established in 1954. The somewhat higher level of benefits established this year would have required congressional action.

To take account of price increases occurring during this calendar year, 1970, the bill provides an across-the-board 5-percent increase in benefits effective January 1, 1971. The 5-percent benefit increase will go to more than 26 million beneficiaries and will total $1.7 billion during the first 12 months the increase is in effect. The first automatic benefit increase could take place in January 1973, based on an increase in the cost of living from 1971 to 1972, if that increase is at least 3 percent.

Increase in the Contribution and Benefit Base

The House bill also provides for increases in the contribution and benefit base—the amount of a worker's annual earnings that is subject to social security contributions and counted towards social security benefits. The base would be increased from the present $7800 to $9000 effective for 1971. Thereafter, the base would be automatically adjusted on a regular basis—but no more often than once in 2 years—as earnings levels rise.
The Congress has clearly established a policy of adjusting the contribution and benefit base as earnings levels rise, just as it has with respect to the adjustment of benefits to prices. Here again, a provision for automatic increases in the base to keep it in line with increases in earnings levels would write into the law already established Congressional policy, thus giving greater assurance to workers who earn higher wages in the future that they will get credit toward benefits for those higher earnings. The automatic increases in the base, in line with rising wages, would also provide adequate financing for the automatic benefit increases.

The contribution and benefit base was originally established at $3000 in 1935. No action was taken to increase the base until 1950, when it was set at $3600. At this level it covered 81 percent of payrolls and all of the earnings of a little over 75 percent of covered workers. Since that time, through legislative changes, the percentage of payrolls covered has been maintained at about 80 percent, and the percentage of covered workers who have all their earnings covered has been maintained at about 75 to 80 percent. The increase in the base to $9000 in 1971 will restore the relationship between the base and earnings levels generally that was established in 1950 and that has been maintained by Congress over the last 20 years, and the provision in the bill for automatic adjustment in the base would mean that similar relationships would be maintained automatically.

These provisions would not delegate to the executive branch any discretion whatsoever. The power to increase taxes would remain in the hands of the Congress. What this provision does is to provide a specific formula in the law that determines what the social security tax base shall be. The base would be increased only in direct proportion to increases in average earnings for all workers in covered employment.

Retirement Test

H.R. 17550 improves the social security program's retirement test. This is the provision under which social security benefits for an individual under age 72 are withheld or reduced if he earns more than the exempt amount--currently $1680--in any year.

In his Message to the Congress last September the President expressed his concern about this provision. He said:

"The present retirement test actually penalizes social security beneficiaries for doing additional work or taking a job at higher pay. This is wrong."

As you know, the Congress has on a number of occasions made changes designed to minimize this effect. Yet, a problem remains under the present retirement test because benefits are reduced dollar-for-dollar on earnings above $2880 in a year. Because of taxes and work expenses, a beneficiary's spendable income--that is, his social security benefits plus his earnings after taxes--may be less if he earns somewhat more than $2880 than his income would be if he had earned less than $2880. The bill remedies this by eliminating the dollar-for-dollar reduction and providing that social security benefits be reduced by only $1 for each $2 of earnings above the annual exempt amount, regardless of how much is earned.

The bill also increases the retirement test annual exempt amount from $1680 to $2000. This change takes account of increases in general earnings levels that have occurred since the present $1680 exempt amount became effective.

The bill also provides for the future automatic upward adjustment of the retirement test as earnings levels rise, similar to the automatic adjustment provision for raising the contribution and benefit base. This change would prevent hardships to beneficiaries that have sometimes occurred because there was a lag in updating the test.

The retirement test changes in the bill would result in about $570 million in additional benefits being paid in 1971. These benefits would go to about 1.3 million beneficiaries, including 400,000 who would not receive benefits under present law.

Increase in Widow's Benefits

Surveys of social security beneficiaries show that, as a group, widows have less regular income than most other classes of beneficiaries and in general are financially worse off. Under present law, a widow cannot be paid more than 82-1/2 percent of the benefit amount her husband would have received if he started getting benefits at or after age 65. We believe that a widow should not be expected to live on less than her husband would have been paid if he had lived.

H.R. 17550 would increase benefits for aged widows and widowers. For those who become entitled to benefits at or after age 65, the benefit amount would be increased to 100 percent of the amount which the widow's deceased husband would have received if he had lived and his benefits had started at or after age 65. For those becoming entitled to benefits before age 65, the 100-percent amount would be reduced in a way similar to the way in which the worker's benefit is reduced if he elects to receive it before age 65.

Some 3.3 million widows and widowers on the rolls at the end of January 1971 would receive higher benefits under this provision. Additional benefit payments in the first 12 months would total $700 million.

Uniform Computation Method for Men and Women

Under present law, the computation of retirement benefits for men is different from the computation for women. The result is that a man who has had the same earnings as a woman may in many cases get benefits that are lower than hers. Under the bill, benefits for men would be calculated in the same way as they are for women under present law. As a result, the retirement benefits payable to men, the benefits payable to their wives, and the benefits payable to survivors of men who live beyond age 62 would be increased.

Approximately 10 million people on the rolls in January 1971 would have their benefits increased under this provision, and additional numbers would become eligible for benefits in the future because of the change in the eligibility requirements. In the first 12 months after the provision goes into effect an additional $925 million in benefits would be paid.

MEDICARE AND MEDICAID PROVISIONS

Mr. Chairman, the Committee will recall that when HEW representatives testified here in February, they emphasized the need to take steps to encourage changes in structure and to improve the operation of the Nation's health care delivery system. Inefficiencies and discontinuities in that system underlie a significant part of the extraordinary increase in the costs of health care that has been experienced throughout the Nation in recent years. It is one of the highest-priority objectives of this Administration to have government programs contribute to improving the Nation's health-care system to the greatest extent possible. We believe that the Medicare and Medicaid programs have a special responsibility in this regard.

MEDICARE

With about 20 million people protected under the hospital insurance part of Medicare and more than 19 million people enrolled in the medical insurance part, this program is the major federally operated health insurance plan and, indeed, by far the largest single plan in the United States. Overall, Medicare payments in fiscal year 1969 accounted for about 70 percent of the expenditures of the aged for hospital and physicians' care. We believe that Medicare, which has done much to alleviate the financial burden of health care for the aged, can be a powerful force in improving the system on which we all rely for health care.

There are four major provisions in H.R. 17550 designed to affect over the long run the cost of delivering quality health care to the American people. One of the most significant of these provisions is the one which would establish, under Medicare, a health maintenance organization option.

Health Maintenance Organization Option

We believe that enactment of the HMO option will have the effect of stimulating the Nation's voluntary health system to offer new choices to individuals and families and to organize new ways of delivering health care.
Under this provision, doctors, hospitals, and other providers of service could receive payments from the public programs under terms that encourage prudent management of utilization.

Several types of existing health organizations and plans have shown evidence that payment arrangements with physicians can make a difference in the utilization of a broad spectrum of health services. Payment to these organizations on a per capita instead of a straight fee-for-service basis provides incentives for early diagnosis and treatment, an important factor in the success the organizations have had in reducing the incidence and duration of high-cost institutional care. This method of payment also shifts motivation away from the provision of high cost services and towards the provision of less expensive levels of medically appropriate care. We believe that with encouragement by the Federal Government and with the removal of legal barriers which exist at the State level, more of these organizations can be developed.

Health maintenance organizations are, essentially, organizations which will contract to provide to Medicare eligibles all services covered by Part A and Part B of the program in return for a fixed annual payment per enrollee. The fixed annual sum, which would be determined in advance, would be less than the Government now pays on the average for conventional Medicare benefits. Prospective payments to health maintenance organizations (HMO's) would be determined annually, taking into account the organization's regular premiums, and would not exceed 95 percent of average per capita payments under Parts A and B in the locality (with appropriate actuarial adjustments for expected cost differentials due to such factors as age and sex variations in membership composition of an organization). Thus, the economic incentive of the provider and the health interests of consumer more closely align because the provider bears the financial risk of ill health. Both parties will have, therefore, an interest in the maintenance of good health.

When a health maintenance organization offers membership opportunities in a community, the individual Medicare beneficiary could choose whether to continue under the present Parts A and B arrangements or to elect the HMO option. For Medicaid recipients, sufficient authority currently exists under title XIX for the States to contract with these same health maintenance organizations to provide a defined scope of services, on a negotiated per capita basis.

This proposal represents a significant departure from the more traditional approach in which the individual patient must largely find his own way among the various types and levels of services. Under the health maintenance organization option, a single organization will have the responsibility for determining the covered services a patient needs and then delivering those services.

These two features of the proposal--first, the introduction of economic incentives to control unnecessary utilization and assure effective early treatment; and second, the requirement that an HMO be responsible for all phases of covered services--will result in a greater assurance of medically appropriate care.
There are a variety of health maintenance organizations already in existence. I would like to emphasize, however, that we do not think any particular structure or sponsorship is a prerequisite for a health maintenance organization. Indeed, we think the country will benefit, by diversity and competition among different kinds of HMO's and between HMO's and other providers of health care.

One of our goals is to open the market place and provide opportunities for new delivery systems. The capacity of existing HMO's (essentially, group practice prepayment plans) is limited, so that only a very small proportion of Medicare and Medicaid recipients will, in the beginning, be able to receive services through them. We hope that HMO's, and their use by beneficiaries, will expand greatly in the future, and we believe that there can be significant long-run savings in program costs due to the HMO option.

Prospective Reimbursement

When representatives of the Department last discussed the Medicare and Medicaid programs before this Committee, we urged moving as quickly as possible to a system of prospective reimbursement to institutional providers under these programs.

The House has endorsed the principle of prospective reimbursement and has directed the Department to experiment with and evaluate alternative methods for setting reimbursement on a prospective basis, and to recommend to the Congress by July of 1972 specific methods for the full implementation of a prospective reimbursement system. This is a major step forward. We recommend, however, that the House-passed bill be revised to provide authority for the Department to implement desirable methods for reimbursement as soon as they can be worked out by agreement with providers, without having to wait for further congressional action. We think that statutory language requiring that the Committees receive reports on the proposed experiments and projects before they can be implemented is unnecessary. Such a requirement could result in delays in the implementation of projects. Considering the fact that a great deal of research and analysis must be completed within a very short period of time, any delays in implementing projects and experiments may be costly. For this reason, we recommend the deletion of the reporting requirement in section 222.

Reimbursement of Practitioners

Another major change relating to Medicare reimbursement that was recommended by the Administration and adopted by the House is one that would make Medicare recognition of prevailing charge levels for medical services more closely related to general economic trends. Under this provision, physicians would still ordinarily be reimbursed on the basis of the customary charge that they made for a specific procedure to their patients generally. However, the overall maximum set in terms of the prevailing charges in a community would be allowed to rise in the future only in relation to rises in prices and the general earnings level.
It is true that over the long-run past physicians' fees have not risen quite as fast as earnings generally, and if this were to continue to be the case, the proposed amendment would ordinarily not have any effect. However, the amendment is needed as a guarantee that this would indeed be the case in the future. We are faced with a substantial shortage of physicians in a period of rapidly increasing demand, and there may be, therefore, a tendency for fees to rise out of proportion to other economic indices.

Planning

Although there is a clear need to achieve balance in and improved distribution of health-care facilities, there is also a need to assure that improvements will be accomplished in ways which avoid the duplication or random growth of health care facilities that would result in inefficient use of the facilities and, therefore, in unduly high health care costs. Under H.R. 17550, the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare would be given authority to withhold or reduce reimbursement to providers of service for depreciation and interest for capital expenditures that are found to be inconsistent with State or local health facility plans. The Secretary's determination would be based on findings and recommendations submitted by qualified planning agencies in the States--organizations which have consumer representation and which will be designated by agreement between each State and the Department. If the Secretary determines, however, after consultation with a national advisory council, that withholding or reduction of reimbursement in a given case would be inconsistent with effective organization and delivery of health services he would be authorized to make reimbursement without such withholding or reduction. As the Committee will recall, a proposal with the same general objectives passed the Senate in 1967.

Other Medicare Provisions

The House-passed bill contains a considerable number of other Medicare provisions which I have not discussed. In large part, these provisions are aimed at improving the operating effectiveness and the administration of the Medicare program. They include the Administration's Health Cost Effectiveness Amendments, previously presented to this Committee. Among these proposed amendments are those relating to authority to terminate payments to suppliers of services who abuse the Medicare program, authority to base payments to institutional providers on charges where these are less than cost, and expanded authority to conduct experiments and demonstration projects to develop incentives for economy in the provision of health services. In addition, the bill makes provision for advance approval of benefits for extended care and home health services. Under this provision, the Secretary would be authorized to establish specific periods of time, related to medical condition, during which a patient would be presumed, for payment purposes, to require a level of institutional services available only in an extended-care-facility setting.
Review of Utilization

The most difficult, as well as the most important, area of program controls relates to determinations of medical necessity for the volume and type of service provided. These determinations, of course, can be made only by the medical profession reviewing the actions of its own members. There are several features of the present law which are directed to this problem, including the requirements of a physician's certification of medical necessity for many types of service and the requirements for utilization review committees in hospitals and extended care facilities.

The House bill provides for some additional strengthening in this area by, for example, modifying utilization review procedures to allow for payment cutoff when unnecessary utilization is discovered in the course of a sample review of hospital admissions. In addition, the bill authorizes experiments with the use of areawide utilization review mechanisms.

However, this is an exceedingly difficult area of administration, and we welcome the opportunity to examine additional approaches which might have the effect of strengthening peer review of the utilization of medical services. The approach recently outlined by Senator Bennett, for example, represents a possibility that might be most helpful.

As is indicated in the Senator's statement appearing in the Congressional Record of July 1, the objective of greater physician participation in and responsibility for reviewing and evaluating utilization cannot be implemented at once, but will require a great deal of careful planning. It would be impossible, for example, and I believe in many ways undesirable, to supplant entirely the present Medicare administrative system of conducting utilization reviews and to substitute new review organizations. Even in areas where review organizations exist, it may be both desirable and necessary to approach their full implementation in stages.

The Senator's proposal warrants careful consideration, and the Department is eager to collaborate with the Committee in developing a sound and effective system of professional peer review.

MEDICAID

As I have stated earlier, I believe we are now at a time when significant new Federal initiatives should be taken in the health field. You are all aware of the President's announcement of June 10 that this Administration is committed to the reform of the Medicaid program and to the development and implementation of a Family Health Insurance Program for low-income families. We believe that this proposal, which we will discuss with you in more detail in the future, will effectively integrate the Nation's major health program for the poor with the proposed Family Assistance Program (FAP). This strategy will fundamentally restructure the Medicaid program for families with children.
In addition, there are other, less critical, changes which should be made at this time. Let me turn the Committee's attention for a moment, if I may, to some of the strengths and weaknesses of the current Medicaid program.

Few can deny that the title XIX program has moved a long way in a short time toward achieving its goal of improving the availability and accessibility of medical care and services for the Nation's poor. More than 12 million people will receive medical care with Medicaid's help this year. This is more than double the number who received Federally-aided medical assistance in 1965.

Medicaid is providing health care for children whose families have enough money for their daily needs but not enough for special medical needs. From 1965 to 1969 the number of children who received Federally-supported medical assistance rose from 1.5 million to 5.9 million; about half the children in the latter group were not in families receiving AFDC payments. We believe it is important to recognize the achievements of this program and to maintain our commitment to improving and expanding health programs for the poor until medical services are available to all who require them but cannot afford to pay.

Clearly, however, there have been serious problems with the Medicaid program; the ability to finance care doesn't guarantee the availability, adequacy, or reasonable cost of care. The health system has severe problems in the supply and distribution of facilities, manpower, and services, as well as in the organization and delivery of care.

In addition, the Medicaid program itself has been difficult to administer--partly because of the title XIX legislation, partly because of the nature and administration of the welfare program it has supplemented, and partly because Medicaid has been a Federal-State program. Medicaid, as you know, has operated not as one but as 52 separate and distinct programs. Each program is different in design, varying according to the people it covers, and in the services offered. Serious geographic and other inequities have, therefore, resulted.

We know that Medicaid has been an expensive program placing heavy fiscal burdens on the States and the Federal Government. Because of program variations, a disproportionate share of Federal matching funds has been spent in support of programs in only a few of our States.

We have been aware of the need to undertake fundamental reforms of the Medicaid program to deal with these problems. We were also concerned with the difficulties pointed out by your Committee, of meshing the current Medicaid program with a reformed welfare system. The "sudden death" loss of Medicaid benefits when income reaches a specified level--the so-called "notch" problem--is an unacceptable defect in the current structure of Medicaid.
I can assure you that the Department has given the most serious consideration to these issues. They are not problems which lend themselves to easy or quick solutions. Some months' time will be necessary before we can present you with our final legislative proposals on the Family Health Insurance Program and with the related proposals dealing with broad reforms in our health care system. We will continue to work with the Committee staff as we develop these proposals.

In the meantime, we believe there are important immediate steps that can and should be taken immediately to amend title XIX to make it a more effective and economical vehicle for financing health care. We think these improvements should be made before the Family Health Insurance Plan becomes an operating program, since title XIX will continue to support health care for those in the adult assistance programs.

We propose to require that the State health agency be responsible for establishing and maintaining health standards for institutions in which title XIX beneficiaries receive care and services. The same agency shall be responsible for maintaining, to the maximum extent practical, uniformity or consistency of determinations relating to eligibility of institutions for participation in the titles XVIII, XIX, and V programs.

As your Committee has pointed out, some of the most serious problems of Medicaid relate to the lack of adequate information systems for surveillance, rigorous claims review, utilization review, and program evaluation. This is caused in part by the lack of capability in the States to develop the necessary systems. We are, therefore, requesting authorization for Federal payment of 90 percent of the costs incurred by the States in the design, development, and installation of mechanized claims processing and information systems. The Federal Government would also pay 75 percent of the cost of operating such approved systems. States would not be eligible to receive this increased Federal support until they have developed the capacity to furnish each recipient with a notice and explanation of health care paid for on his behalf by the program—a suggestion made by this Committee. We are currently designing information systems for the States to use as models.

Providers have been reluctant in many instances to care for potential Medicaid eligibles because frequently the patient has not applied for Medicaid prior to his illness and, therefore, the providers would not be eligible to receive payment for their services. Thirty-one States have dealt with this problem by providing payment for care of eligibles for periods up to 3 months prior to the month of application. We propose to make 3 months retroactive coverage mandatory on all States having title XIX programs.

This bill also includes a provision, in line with earlier suggestions by the Congress, to prohibit reassignment of benefits, except in specified cases, in order to prevent vendor payments from being made to independent collection and bill discount agencies.
We are hopeful that in this, and other programs, we will establish a more consistent policy of aiding the States to help themselves. Although we will provide technical assistance and models, the States will be encouraged to develop and operate their own systems.

Medicaid Reimbursement Changes

The President, in his message sent to the Congress on February 26, suggested changes in the Federal matching percentage for medical assistance that would encourage States to substitute less expensive care for more expensive care when it is equally beneficial. Our proposal, adopted in the House-passed bill, provides for increased matching to encourage use of selected outpatient health services and for decreased Federal matching to discourage the States from permitting overutilization of institutional services.

This provision would permit the Federal Government to institute a reasonable cost differential between reimbursement made to skilled nursing homes and to intermediate care facilities, thereby incorporating another useful suggestion made earlier by your Committee. Reimbursement disincentives for nursing home care are expected to increase placement of patients in intermediate care facilities (institutions that provide care that is more custodial in nature and at a more appropriate level for many of those in nursing home and mental institutions) and use of home health services.

Experimental Authority

We are aware of your Committee's concern about ways to restrain the increases in cost arising from the relatively open-ended Medicaid program, including the use of insurance carriers, capitation arrangements, and changes relating to eligibility. We agree that there are apparent defects that will be remedied ultimately only by changing the structure of the program. But while we are moving toward a complete change in the program's nature, we need to gain experience with different approaches to providing the benefits, different approaches to eligibility, underwriting, administration, and organization and delivery of services.

We are, therefore, asking Congress to make changes in title XIX to authorize the States to conduct experiments on a Statewide, areawide, county, city, or neighborhood basis. We are interested in encouraging experiments with pre-enrollment of adult categories on an annual basis, the use of different combinations of benefits and different types of benefit packages for different population groups, and limited use of copayments and deductibles for medically needy.

We need to experiment in the way of risk-sharing with private insurance companies, foundations, prepaid group practices, and health maintenance organizations. We would use the authority in this provision to experiment in these types of areas: purchasing private insurance for Medicaid eligibles, capitation or contract payments to States for specified groups, and capitation arrangements with prepaid groups, neighborhood health centers, foundations, and medical societies.
We are also proposing that the Secretary be permitted, through experiments or demonstration projects, to make payment to organizations and institutions for services which are not currently covered under titles V, XVIII, and XIX. These new services would have to be provided in addition to services already covered under these programs, and their inclusion would have to offer the promise of program savings without any loss in the quality of care. The Secretary could also authorize experimentation with the use of rates established by a State for administration of one or more of its own laws for payment or reimbursement to health facilities located in such State.

FINANCING PROVISIONS FOR SOCIAL SECURITY
CASH BENEFITS AND MEDICARE

To meet the cost of the proposed changes in the social security cash-benefits program and to bring the hospital insurance program into closer actuarial balance, H.R. 17550 would revise the social security contribution-rate schedules. Under present law, the current contribution rate for cash benefits of 11.2 percent each for employees and employers is scheduled to go to 11.6 percent for 1971 and 1972 and to 5.0 percent for 1973 and after. Under this schedule, there would be unnecessarily large accumulations in the trust funds in the near-future years. For example, the funds would increase by $7 billion in 1971, about $8 billion in 1972, about $12 1/2 billion in 1973, and much more in future years.

Under the bill, for these reasons, the present rate of 4.2 percent for the cash-benefits program would remain in effect through 1974, would go to 5.0 percent for 1975 through 1979, and then would rise to an ultimate rate of 5.5 percent for 1980 and after. Maintaining the present rate of 4.2 percent through 1974 is consistent with past decisions by the Congress to delay scheduled increases in the rates so as to avoid unnecessarily large accumulations in the cash benefit trust funds. Under the bill, the funds would increase by $1.6 billion in 1971, $2.1 billion in 1972, and $3.3 billion in 1973.

The bill would also make changes in the contribution rate scheduled for the hospital insurance program. The hospital insurance fund requires additional income over and above that scheduled under present law in near-future years. Under the bill, the contribution rate scheduled for 1971 and 1972 would be increased from 0.6 percent for employees, employers, and the self-employed to 1 percent each. The rate would then be kept at 1 percent. Under present law it would be gradually increased from 0.6 percent in 1970 to 0.9 percent in 1987 and after.

With the revisions in the contribution-rate schedules, the combined contribution rate for cash benefits plus hospital insurance in 1971 would be 5.2 percent each for employees and employers--the same as present law. The actuarial balances would be -0.15 percent of taxable payroll for the cash benefits program and -0.11 percent of taxable payroll for the hospital insurance program. The estimate for the hospital insurance program takes no account of the saving that should result from the cost-control provisions of the bill, and not taking account of these potential savings represents some margin of safety. The long-range deficit of 0.11 percent of payroll indicated in the estimates, if it actually does develop, would not result in a decline in the HI trust fund before at least 15 years from now.

CONCLUSION

These then, Mr. Chairman, are the major provisions of H.R. 17550. We think they go a long way toward improving all of the programs affected. The Administration, as you know, is continuing to study the social security program with the aid of the statutory Advisory Council on Social Security, which Secretary Finch appointed in May 1969. We recognize that there are several social security matters of importance to members of this Committee and other members of the Senate that are not included in H.R. 17550. These matters will be included in the study being made by the Council, which is reviewing every social security proposal pending before the Congress. As you know, the Council is required to study all aspects of the program and to submit its findings and recommendations not later than January 1, 1971.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer one important cautionary note. The Federal budget is severely strained. I urge this committee to weigh this carefully in its consideration of H.R. 17550. Substantial changes, particularly in total costs or financing techniques, might upset the delicate balance with the requirements of our economy that this bill now enjoys. I sincerely hope that the principal features of this bill remain intact, so that its prompt enactment into law can be assured.

For the present I believe the changes in H.R. 17550 represent significant progress, and I urge enactment of the bill with the changes I have mentioned and the more minor ones referred to in the statement I will be submitting for the record.
