SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

MARCH 11 (legislative day, MARCH 7), 1983.—Ordered to be printed

Mr. DOLE, from the Committee on Finance, submitted the following

REPORT

[To accompany S. 1]

The Committee on Finance to which was referred the bill (S. 1) to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, having considered the same, reports favorably thereon with an amendment and recommend that the bill do pass.

SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) PROVISIONS

ACTUARIAL ANALYSIS

The OASDI estimates in the following sectional descriptions were prepared by the office of the Actuary, SSA and are based on 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions. Under those assumptions, the Committee amendments described below would permit the timely payment of social security cash benefits through the short-range (1983-89).

In the long-range, the Committee amendments are projected to meet or slightly exceed the long-deficit identified by the National Commission on Social Security Reform of 1.80 percent of taxable payroll (revised under 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions to 2.09 percent of taxable payroll).

These amendments are also projected to have a significant impact on the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund. CBO estimates project an increase in the HI trust fund of $14.6 billion over the period fiscal years 1983-88.

The amendments also impact on other Federal programs. To the extent the cost/savings are reflected in the following descriptions, they have been provided by CBO and are based on CBO's February 1983 assumptions. A table showing the impact of these amendments on the total Federal budget deficit is located following the sectional descriptions.

To: Mr. Harry C. Ballantyne, Chief Actuary.

From: Francisco R. Bayo, Deputy Chief Actuary.

Subject: Preliminary estimate of the impact of S. 1, as reported by the Senate Finance Committee on the long-range financial status of the OASDI system.

The attached table includes preliminary long-range estimates for S. 1, as reported by the Senate Finance Committee based on the 1983 Trustees Report Alternative II-B assumptions. Enactment of this bill will result in a long-range actuarial surplus of 0.08 percent of taxable payroll for OASDI combined. Estimates for individual provisions are shown in the table generally only for those provisions with significant long-range impact on OASDI. However, the impact on OASDI of all provisions of S. 1, as reported is included in the totals.

The estimates assume that the allocation to the DI trust fund will be similar to the allocation in H.R. 1900 as reported by the Ways and Means Committee, except that after 1999 the rate would increase from 0.60 to 0.65 each.

SUMMARY OF SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) PROVISIONS

Coverage of newly hired Federal employees

Extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been for one year less), and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current Congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system, as of January 1, 1984. Also, states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Coverage of nonprofit employees

Extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations, effective January 1, 1984.

Prohibit withdrawal of State and local employees

Prohibit State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees. Pending terminations would be invalid, effective on enactment. In addition, provide an opportunity for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

Tax exemption for the Amish

Extend the social security tax exemption now applicable to the self-employed Amish to the Amish who are employees of the Amish.

Delay cost-of-living adjustment to a calendar year basis

Provide the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits on a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. For 1983, the COLA would be calculated as under current law (i.e., the change in the CPI for the third quarter of a year over the CPI for the third quarter of the previous year). This would ensure that the lag between the end of the period over which the COLA is measured and the time the COLA is actually applied to benefits remains 3 months. For 1983 only, the COLA would be given even if it is less than 3 percent. The SMI (Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium increase would also be delayed.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits

Reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period. Social security benefits would in no case be reduced by more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was non-covered employment. Also, the percentage reduction in the benefit formula would be limited to no more than 10 percentage points for each year coverage falls shorts of 30 years. Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

Benefits for divorced or disabled widows or widowers who remarry

Allow benefits to continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarry after age 50, and to surviving divorced spouses who remarry after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn.

Changes in indexing for deferred survivor benefits

Provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. Such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's (or widower's) benefits, whichever is earlier.

Independent eligibility for divorced spouses

Allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not the former spouse has claimed these benefits or has had them suspended because of substantial employment.

Increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers

Increase benefits for disabled widow(er)s age 50-59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60.

Adjustment of cost-of-living increase when trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent

Modify the cost-of-living adjustment formula during periods when trust fund reserves are low in order to help stabilize reserves. Beginning with 1988, if the OASDI trust fund ratio (reserves as a percentage of outgo) as of the beginning of a year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. When the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, “catch-up” payments would be made beginning the following year. This would not apply to the COLA for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program.
Increase delayed retirement credit

Gradually increase, between 1990 and 2010, the delayed retirement credit from 3 percent to 8 percent per year.

Increase social security retirement age

Gradually raise the social security retirement age to 66 by the year 2012, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the actuarial reduction factors would be larger.

Long-range benefit change

For workers first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, reduce initial benefit levels by about 5 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years.

Elimination of retirement earnings test

Gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Child-care dropout years:

Allow two years to be dropped out of the formula for computing social security benefits for persons who leave the workforce to care for children under age 3 at home. Presently, the worker's five lowest years of earnings are dropped in the computation of the worker's earnings history. To qualify for an additional childcare dropout year, a person can not have any earnings during the year.

Prisoners benefits

Eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Limitation on benefits to aliens

In the future, eliminate benefits to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. As a result, no benefits would be paid to alien dependents of alien workers who were acquired (through marriage, birth or adoption) while outside the United States. However, benefits would be paid under the following conditions:

1. the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement which provides for reciprocity of social security coverage; and
2. benefits would continue until total benefits (excluding any withheld taxes) paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner plus interest.
Fail-safe

To ensure the timely payment of social security benefits during periods when OASDI trust fund reserves are less than 20 percent of annual outgo and are also projected to decline, the Committee agreed to require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to reduce the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline in reserves. The Secretary will first reduce (or withhold) increases for people with benefits which are based on a primary insurance amount above $250 (monthly amount). If necessary, however, people with benefits at or below that level may also have their increases reduced. At a maximum, there would be no benefit increase for anyone. The Secretary would have to notify Congress by July 1 of each year in which he finds that action to limit the next COLA would be required, thereby giving Congress time to enact an alternative solution to the potential funding problem. The provision would apply only after the use of all other provisions, such as interfund borrowing, which are designed to ensure adequate trust fund balances.

Taxation of social security benefits for higher income persons

Subject social security and tier one railroad retirement benefits to income tax based on thresholds of $25,000 for single taxpayers, $32,000 for married taxpayers filing joint returns, and $0 for married taxpayers filing separate returns. To determine whether the taxpayer’s income exceeds these thresholds, one-half of social security benefits and all tax-free income would be added to adjusted gross income and tax-exempt interest. For taxpayers over the threshold, the lesser of one-half of social security benefits or one-half of the excess combined income over the threshold amount would be subject to income tax.

Beginning in 1984 the Secretary of the Treasury would be required to transfer to the appropriate trust funds, on at least a quarterly basis, the revenues estimated (on the basis of tax liability to be generated from this provision for that quarter.

Acceleration of increase in FICA taxes; 1984 employee FICA tax

Revise the OASDI tax schedule so that the 1985 rate would be moved to 1984, the 1985–87 rate would remain as scheduled under present law, part of the 1990 rate would be moved to 1988, and the rate for 1990 and after would remain unchanged. The HI tax rates for all years would remain unchanged. For 1984, a refundable tax credit would be provided in the amount of the increase in the employee taxes over what would have been payable under present law: 0.3 percent of taxable wages.

The 1984 refundable tax credit would be allowed against 1984 employee FICA and Tier One Railroad Retirement taxes rather than against income tax.

Self-employment taxes; tax credit against self-employment tax

Make the self-employed OASDI tax rate equal to the combined employer-employee rate, beginning in 1984, as those rates are rescheduled. In addition, the HI tax for the self-employed would be doubled to make it equivalent to the combined employer-employee rate. A credit against self-employment taxes would be provided.

Reallocation of OASDI tax rate

Reallocation the OASDI tax so that both the OASI and the DI trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of the year as a percentage of outgo during the year).

Interfund borrowing extension

Authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI, DI and HI trust funds, protections provided for each trust fund.

Credit amounts of unnegotiated checks to the trust funds

Provide for a lump sum payment to the OASDI trust fund from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, require credit the trust funds on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months.

Military wage credits

Credit the OASDI trust fund, in a lump sum, with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDHI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for the employer-employee taxes (OASDHI) on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

Trust fund investment procedure

Provide for reinvesting all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest based on the average market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.

Public members on board of trustees

Add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members shall not be considered fiduciaries and shall not be personally liable for any actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.

Accelerate State and local deposits

Apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that presently apply to private employers.
Triggered normalization of tax transfers

When, at the start of any month, the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1 1/2 months of benefits, the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month. Interest would be paid to the General Treasury.

Social security wage base

Expand the social security wage base to include certain deferred compensation.

Delay the SSI COLA and increase the SSI disregard

Delay the annual cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) for SSI payments from July to January, beginning with the July 1983 benefit increase, thereby maintaining the link between the COLA for SSI and OASDI. In addition, increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the "pass through" requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase.

SSI alert

Require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify elderly OASDI recipients of the availability of SSI and to encourage those potentially eligible to contact their district offices.
TITLE I OF THE BILL
A. PROVISIONS RELATED TO OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS AND DISABILITY INSURANCE

COVERAGE OF NEWLY HIRED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

(Section 101 of the Bill)

Present law

Approximately 91 percent of the Nation's workers are covered by social security. Federal civilian employees are the only major group excluded from coverage under the social security (OASDI) system. Those excluded (93 percent, or about 2.6 million out of 2.8 million employees) are generally covered by a Federal staff retirement system, engaged in temporary employment, or are members of Congress. (Beginning in 1983, nearly all Federal employees are covered under Medicare.)

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would, effective January 1, 1984, extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been one year or less), and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current Congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system.

This amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to extend coverage to all Federal employees hired after 1983. The Committee amendment also states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Effective date.—January 1, 1984.

COVERAGE OF NONPROFIT EMPLOYEES

(Section 102 of the Bill)

Present law—Work performed for a nonprofit tax-exempt organization (specified in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) is excluded from social security coverage unless the organization files a certificate with the Internal Revenue Service waiving its exemption from social security taxes. Nonprofit organizations may terminate coverage upon giving 2 years advance notice, providing coverage has been in effect for 8 years or more. Once coverage has been terminated, the organization cannot again cover its employees. About 4.3 million employees of nonprofit organizations (about 80 percent) are covered.

Committee amendment—The Committee amendment would extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date—January 1, 1984.

PROHIBIT WITHDRAWAL OF STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEES

(Section 103 of the Bill)

Present law

Employees of State and local governments may be covered under social security at the option of the State and in agreement with the Secretary of Health and Human Services. Coverage may be terminated if the State gives 2 years written notice of such intent, provided that the State or local group has been covered for at least 5 years. Once coverage is terminated, the group can never again be covered under social security.
Committee Amendment

The Committee amendment would prohibit State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees. Pending terminations would be invalid, effective on enactment. In addition, the amendment would provide an opportunity for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

This amendment is similar to the recommendation of National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—On enactment.

Exclusion from social security coverage for services performed by members of certain religious sects (sec. 104 of the bill and sec. 3121 of the Code)

PRESENT LAW

In general, social security (FICA) tax is imposed on every individual who receives wages with respect to employment. In addition, social security tax is imposed on employers who pay wages with respect to employment. There is no exemption, under present law, for employers or employees who are members of religious sects that oppose the social security system. However, present law does provide an exemption from self-employment tax (SECA) for members of religious sects that are conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provision for the care of their dependent members.

REASON FOR CHANGE

The committee believes that employers and employees who are members of the Amish sect, or other religious sects that oppose participation in the social security system, should be treated the same as self-employed members of those sects. That is neither Amish employers nor Amish employees should be required to pay social security taxes. This provision is necessary because, due to economic conditions, many Amish members cannot afford their own farms, but, rather, must work for other Amish farmers.

EXPLANATION OF PROVISION

The provision will exempt from social security tax wages paid by individuals who are exempt from self-employment taxes because of their religious beliefs to individuals who are members of religious sects that conscientiously oppose the acceptance of private or Public insurance and which make provisions for the care of their dependent members. This exemption applies both to the employer and employee portion of social security tax.

The exemption applies only in the case of religious sects that have been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

EFFECTIVE DATE

The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

DELAY COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT TO A CALENDAR YEAR BASIS

(Section 111 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) of social security benefits is applicable to June benefits (payable early in July). The amount of the increase is equal to the percentage by which the Consumer Price Index (for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, CPI-W) for the first quarter of the calendar year has increased over the CPI for the first quarter of the previous calendar year. No COLA is paid unless the increase in the CPI is at least 3 percent. By law, cost-of-living adjustments in the SSI program are made at the same time, and in the same amount as the social security cost-of-living adjustment.

The Committee amendment would shift the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits to a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. For 1983, the COLA would be calculated as under current law (i.e., the change in the CPI for the first quarter of 1983 over the CPI for the first quarter of 1982). Beginning with the COLA for 1984, the adjustment would be computed by comparing the increase in the CPI for the third quarter of a year over the CPI for the third quarter of the previous year. This would ensure that the lag between the end of the period over which the COLA is measured and the time the COLA is actually applied to benefits remains 3 months. This is the same proposal recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

In addition, the Committee amendment would, for 1983 only, provide the COLA even if it is less than 3 percent. The SMI (Supplemental Medical Insurance) premium increase would also be shifted to a calendar year basis.

Under the Committee amendment, the SSI COLA would also be shifted to a calendar year basis and would be measured in the same way as for OASDI purposes.

Effective date.—For cost of living adjustment otherwise payable in July 1983 checks.

ELIMINATE “WINDFALL” BENEFITS

(Section 112 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security benefits for workers with low average earnings are a relatively high proportion (up to 90 percent) of their average earnings under social security. No distinction is currently made between persons who have a lifetime of low earnings and those who have low average earnings only because they worked few years in covered employment (possibly at high wages) and many years in employment not covered by social security. Both groups receive the heavily weighted social security benefit intended for the first group. The heavily weighted benefit paid to the second group is often referred to as a “windfall”.

The present law benefit formula for persons who reach age 62 or who become disabled before age 62 in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of average indexed monthly earnings in covered employment (AIME), plus 32 percent of AIME over $254 and up to $1,528, plus 15 percent of AIME in excess of $1,528.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers who do not have a long record of substantial work under social security, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor in the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period as follows:

<tr>
<td>1987</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1988 and after</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

To moderate the impact of this provision on people with small pensions from non-covered employment, social security benefits could in no case be reduced by more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was non-covered employment. The offset would not apply to persons with pensions based on one year or less of non-covered employment.

In addition, the Committee amendment exempts from any reduction under this provision those individuals who have a long history of substantial work under the social security program. People who have thirty or more years of covered employment in which they paid social security taxes on at least 25 percent of the maximum taxable earnings would have their benefits computed under the regular provisions without any reduction under the windfall provision. People with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment would have the windfall reduction applied on a phased in basis under which the first factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below thirty years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision however. (A year of substantial employment is a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended modifying the social security benefit formula so as to eliminate windfall benefits received by workers who in the future receive social security as well as pensions from non-covered employment. (No specific formula was recommended.)

Effective date.—January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a non-covered pension after 1983.

BENEFITS FOR DIVORCED OR DISABLED WIDOWERS OR WIDOWS WHO REMARRY

(Section 113 of the Bill)

Present law

Current law permits the continuation of benefits for widows and widowers who remarry after age 60, the age of first eligibility for benefits. If the widow(er) marries after age 60, he or she receives the benefits to which he or she is entitled as a wage earner, widow(er) or spouse, whichever is larger. However, benefits for disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses (payable from age 50 to 60) and for surviving divorced spouses (payable at age 60) are terminated if the individual remarries.
Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that benefits continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarry after age 50, and surviving divorced spouses who remarry after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn. This is comparable to the present law treatment of widows and widowers.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—For benefits payable for months after December 1988.

CHANGES IN INDEXING FOR DEFERRED SURVIVOR BENEFITS

(Session 114 of the Bill)

Present law

Survivor benefits (for widows, widowers, and surviving children) are based on the deceased worker’s earnings in covered employment. Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes.

Should the worker die long before the spouse is eligible for benefits, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible (in old-age or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus, women who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband’s unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide wage increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's benefits, whichever is earlier. In no case would benefits be lower than under present law.

Effective date—For persons becoming eligible for survivors benefits after December 31, 1984.

INDEPENDENT ELIGIBILITY FOR DIVORCED SPOUSES

(Section 115 of the Bill)

Present law

A divorced spouse, eligible for benefits at age 62, may not begin to draw social security benefits until the worker begins to draw benefits. For some divorced women, this means that they may have to wait several years beyond their own retirement age (either because their ex-spouse delays retirement or otherwise fails to apply for benefits) before they can begin to draw benefits.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not the former spouse has claimed these benefits or has had them suspended because of substantial employment. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that the proposal would only apply to spouses who have been divorced for at least two years.

INCREASE BENEFITS FOR DISABLED WIDOWS AND WIDOWERS
(Section 116 of the Bill)

Present law

Social Security benefits for widows and widowers are first payable at age 60. Benefits are payable in full (i.e., 100 percent of the worker’s primary insurance amount) at age 65, and at reduced rates at ages 60-64 (i.e., phasing up from 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 60). Benefits also payable at reduced rates to disabled widows and widowers aged 50-59 (i.e., phasing up from 50 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 50).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would increase benefits for disabled windower’s age 50-59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60. The proposal would be applicable to new beneficiaries and to those on the rolls on the effective date of the provision. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—For benefits payable for months after December 1983.

ADJUSTMENT OF COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT
(Section 117 of the Bill)

Present law

The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) in social security benefits is applicable to the June benefit, which is payable at the beginning of July, and is based on the increase in the Consumer Price Index. When increases in prices outrun increases in wages, income to the trust funds falls behind outgo, and cash flow problems may result. There is no mechanism under current law to adjust trust fund outlays and revenues to take account of such adverse economic fluctuations.
Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would modify the cost-of-living adjustment formula during periods when trust fund reserves are low in order to help stabilize reserves. Specifically, if the OASDI trust fund ratio (reserves as a percentage of outgo) as of the beginning of a year is less than 20 percent, the adjustment of OASDI benefits would be based on the lower of the increase in the CPI or average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" benefit payments would be made during the following year, but only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32 percent. Catch-up payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for any COLA losses that result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices. This would not apply to the COLA for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—This provision would first be applicable in 1988.

Cost/savings.—This proposal is estimated to have no impact on the trust funds under 1983 Trustees II-B assumptions.

INCREASE DELAYED RETIREMENT CREDIT

(Section 118 of the Bill)

Present law

A worker who delays retirement beyond age 65 (i.e., does not actually receive social security benefits) is eligible for a delayed retirement credit (DRC). The worker's benefit is increased for each month after age 65 and prior to age 72 for which benefits are not paid, either because of earnings or because the worker does not claim benefits. For workers eligible for benefits after 1978, the DRC is equal to 3 percent per year (one-quarter of 1 percent per month).

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually increase, between 1990 and 2010, the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent per year, as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. (The amount of credit would relate to year of attainment of age 65.) Beginning in 1990 the DRC would be increased by ¼ percent each subsequent year until reaching 8 percent in 2010.

OASDI cost: —0.10 percent of taxable payroll.

INCREASE IN RETIREMENT AGE

(Section 119 of the Bill)

Present law

Unreduced retirement benefits are available to workers, spouses, and widows and widowers at age 65. Actuarially reduced benefits are available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers.
Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually raise the age at which full social security benefits are payable from 65 to 66, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Under this provision, the normal retirement age would be increased one month per year, reaching 66 for those attaining 62 in the year 2012 or later. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available beginning at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the actuarial reduction factors would be larger. The minimum age for eligibility for medicare benefits would continue to be tied to the age at which unreduced retirement benefits are first available.

The majority of the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform made this recommendation. In addition, they recommended indexing the retirement age to changes in longevity, beginning in 2012.

Effective date.—For people attaining 62 in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.40 percent of taxable payroll.

LONG-RANGE BENEFIT CHANGE

(Section 120 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing social security benefits, a worker’s earnings under social security are averaged and a benefit formula is applied to those average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents’ and survivors’ benefits are based on the worker’s PIA.

The formula for a worker who becomes eligible for benefits in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of AIME, plus 32 percent of the AIME from $254 through $1,528, plus 15 percent of the AIME over $1,528.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for the new group of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

This system was adopted by the 1977 Social Security Amendments. The annual adjustment of the dollar amounts in the benefit formula, the bend points, by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker’s prior earnings that are replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

Committee amendment

For people first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, the Committee amendment would reduce initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years. This would have the effect of reducing the ultimate replacement rate by 5 percent.

Effective date.—For people first becoming eligible for retirement or disability in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.43 percent of taxable payroll.
ELIMINATION OF RETIREMENT EARNINGS TEST

(Section 121 of the Bill)

Present law
Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment would gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Effective date.—The provision would be phased in between 1990 and 1994.

OASDI cost.—This amendment is estimated to cost 0.05 percent of taxable payroll in the long-range.

CHILD-CARE DROP OUT YEARS

(Section 122 of the Bill)

Present law
In computing a worker's covered earnings history under social security (upon which his and his family's benefits are based), up to five years in which earnings are lowest are dropped.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment would allow up to two additional years to be dropped for persons who leave the workforce to care for a child under 3 in the home. To qualify for a child-care drop year, the worker can have no earnings at all during the year.

Effective date.—For persons first eligible for benefits after 1983.

PRISONERS BENEFITS

(Section 123 of the Bill)

Present law
Persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony may not receive student benefits (which are being phased out anyway), and are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependents benefits are not affected.) Also, impairments resulting from the commission of a crime cannot be the basis for disability benefits and impairments occurring during imprisonment cannot be the basis for disability benefits during the period of imprisonment.

Presently, benefits may continue to be paid to incarcerated felons who are either retired workers, widow or widower beneficiaries, spouses of retired or disabled workers, and to those DI beneficiaries in a court-approved rehabilitation program.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would expand present law to eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Effective date.—Applicable to benefits paid for the month after enactment.

OASDI Cost: Negligible.

ELIMINATE BENEFITS TO ALIENS

(Section 124 of the Bill)

Present law

There are no citizenship or residence requirements for receiving social security cash benefits (OASDI). Any alien in the U.S.—whether legally or illegally, or as a permanent or temporary resident—is eligible for benefits provided he has engaged in covered employment and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements. Dependents and survivors are also eligible for benefits regardless of their immigration status or that of the insured worker.

About $1 billion is being paid annually to the 314,000 beneficiaries who reside abroad. About 70% of these beneficiaries are aliens.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, in the future, benefits would be eliminated to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. No benefits would be paid to alien dependents of alien workers who were acquired (through marriage, birth or adoption) while outside the United States. However, benefits would be paid under the following conditions:

(1) the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement which provides for reciprocity of social security coverage; and

(2) benefits would continue until total benefits paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner.

Effective dates.—This amendment would apply to new eligibles on or after January 1, 1985.
FAIL-SAFE PROVISION

(Section 125 of the Bill)

Present law

Presently, there are no "fail-safe" provisions in the social security system that ensure benefit payments can be met on an ongoing basis in the face of adverse economic conditions. (The Board of Trustees is required to report immediately to the Congress if any of the trust funds is "unduly small".)

Committee amendment

Under the Committee amendment, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required to make an annual evaluation of the projected balances in the cash benefits trust funds, taking into account future cost-of-living increases. If the cash benefits (OASDI) fund reserves are projected to decline from the start of the next year to the start of the following year and to then be less than 20 percent of a year's benefits, the Secretary would be required to notify the Congress and if no action is taken, to scale back the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline which would leave the reserves below that level.

Insofar as possible, the limitation on the COLA would be applied to people whose benefits are based on a primary benefit level of more than $250 per month. The determination as to whether a limitation on the cost-of-living increase was necessary would be made only after taking into account all other statutory provisions for assuring adequate funds. The Secretary would have to notify Congress by July 1 of each year in which he finds that action to limit the next cost-of-living increase would be required under this provision. Since cost-of-living increases will be reflected in the January checks, this would give Congress several months in which to provide additional funding or to address the problem in any other manner the Congress might find to be appropriate.

The Committee views this provision as a last resort which would come into play only after all other authorities for maintaining trust fund solvency had been exercised. Thus, for example, other provisions in this legislation for such procedures as interfund borrowing and normalization of tax transfers would be invoked before this provision would be operative to the extent that such procedures are authorized by law. Under current projections such measures should be sufficient to keep fund balances from declining to dangerous levels. If, however, unexpected adverse situations should develop, this provision would assure that sufficient reserves were maintained so that regular, timely payment of monthly benefit checks would not be placed in jeopardy.

This provision would implement the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform that this social security financing legislation include provision for a "fail-safe" mechanism.

Effective date.—Determinations beginning July 1, 1984.

OASDI Cost Impact: This provision is not expected to be utilized under the 1983 Trustees intermediate (II-B) assumptions.

PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

A. Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits

Present law

Under present law, social security benefits are excluded from the gross income of the recipient. Their exclusion is based upon a series of administrative rulings issued by the Internal Revenue Service in 1938 and 1941 (see I.T. 3194, 1938—1 C.B. 114, I.T. 3229, 1938—2 C.B. 136, and I.T. 3447, 1941—1 C.B. 191). Railroad retirement benefits are excluded from gross income under the Railroad Retirement Act.

In general, the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodic income (which is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business) received by a nonresident alien from U.S. sources is subject to a 30-percent tax (Code sec. 871); this tax is collected by withholding (sec. 1441). A pension for services performed in the United States would be U.S.-source income and the gross amount of a U.S.-source pension is subject to the 30-percent withholding tax or a lower rate if so provided by treaty. The U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty, as well as a number of actual tax treaties to which the United States is a party, provides reciprocally that pensions received by a resident of one country from sources in the other country are taxable only by the country of residence. However, the United States has reserved the right to tax social security benefits in the U.S. Model Income Tax Treaty and a number of actual tax treaties.

Reasons for change

The Committee believes that the present policy of excluding all social security benefits from a recipient's gross income is inappropriate. The committee believes, further, that social security benefits are in the nature of benefits received under other retirement systems, which are subject to taxation to the extent they exceed a worker's after-tax contributions and that taxing a portion of social security benefits will improve tax equity by treating more nearly equally all forms of retirement and other income that are designed to replace lost wages (for example, unemployment compensation and sick pay). Furthermore, by taxing social security benefits and appropriating these revenues to the appropriate trust funds, the financial solvency of the social security trust funds will be strengthened.
Because Tier 1 benefits provided under the Railroad Retirement Act are largely equivalent to social security benefits, the committee believes that corresponding changes also should be made in the tax treatment of these benefits. That is, a portion of railroad retirement benefits also should be subject to income taxation.

By taxing only a portion of social security and railroad retirement benefits (that is, up to one-half of benefits in excess of a certain base amount), the Committee's bill assures that lower-income individuals, many of whom rely upon their benefits to afford basic necessities, will not be taxed on their benefits. The maximum proportion of benefits taxed is one-half in recognition of the fact that social security benefits are partially financed by after-tax employee contributions. The bill's method for taxing benefits assures that only those taxpayers who have substantial taxable income from other sources will be taxed on a portion of the benefits they receive.

Under the committee's bill, a portion of social security benefits will be included in the gross income of recipients whose adjusted gross income exceeds certain levels. (This provision is not intended to change the tax treatment of social security benefits paid by foreign governments; these benefits have been held by Treasury to be fully includible in gross income (Rev. Rul. 62-1979, 1962-2, C.B. 20)). The bill defines a "social security benefit" as any amount received by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to either (1) a monthly benefit under title II of the Social Security Act (Federal Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Benefits (OASDI)), or (2) Tier 1 benefit under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974. A Tier 1 benefit generally is a monthly benefit equal to what an individual would receive if the formula for computing social security benefits were applied to the individual's history of covered wages under both the social security and railroad retirement systems.

Social Security benefits, to the extent they are taxable, will be included in the taxable income of the person who has the legal right to receive the benefits. For example, benefits paid to a child (or on behalf of a child under section 203(i) of the Social Security Act) will be considered to be the child's and will be added to the child's other income to determine whether they are taxable. The amount of benefits received refers to benefit payments after reductions under such provisions as actuarial reductions, family maximum, and the earnings test, but includes certain amounts that may be withheld from benefits, such as payments of supplementary medical insurance premiums, where the amounts withheld are for the purpose of meeting a financial obligation incurred by the individual entitled to receive such benefit payments. In addition, the amount of any social security benefits received will include the total amount of the benefits without any reduction for attorneys' fees, if any, paid in order to enable an individual to receive those benefits. The committee expects the Secretary of the Treasury to provide guidance on the extent to which expenses (such as attorneys' fees) incurred in perfecting claims to social security benefits may be deducted, now that some of the social security benefits may be taxed.
Social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of a taxpayer for a taxable year will be limited to the lesser of (1) one-half of the social security benefits received, or (2) one-half of the excess of the sum of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income, interest on obligations exempt from tax, and one-half of the social security benefits received, over the appropriate base amount. Thus, the maximum proportion of social security benefits that will be included in the gross income of any taxpayer will be one-half of benefits. This provision does not affect the exclusion for interest on tax-exempt obligations. Rather, it merely includes that interest in the base for the purpose of determining the amount of an individual's social security benefits that will be taxed.

The base amount is $32,000 in the case of a married individual filing a joint return; zero in the case of a married individual filing a separate return, unless he or she lived apart from his or her spouse for the entire taxable year; and $25,000 in the case of all other individuals.

The base amount is zero for married individuals filing separate returns because the committee believes that the family should be treated as an integral unit in determining the amount of social security benefit that is includible in gross income under this provision. If the base amount for these individuals were higher, couples who are otherwise subject to tax on their benefits and whose incomes are relatively equally divided would be able to reduce substantially the amount of benefits subject to tax by filing separate returns.

For the purpose of determining how much of a taxpayer's social security benefit will be included in gross income, a taxpayer will be permitted to reduce benefits received during the taxable year by the amount of benefits, previously received during the current or any preceding taxable year, that he repays during the taxable year. This provision is necessary to prevent a taxpayer from being subject to taxation on his benefits in those situations in which a taxpayer must repay a portion of those benefits because he has been overpaid previously. A taxpayer will be permitted an itemized deduction, to the extent allowed under section 165, for repayments of social security benefits which had been included in gross income in a previous year, to the extent that the repayments exceed social security benefits received by the taxpayer, and not repaid, during the taxable year. Alternatively, if such amount repaid exceeds $3,000, the taxpayer has the option under section 1341 to compute tax for the taxable year without the deduction and to subtract from that amount the reduction in tax that would have resulted from excluding the amount repaid from income for the year of the overpayment.

The committee's bill provides an elective, special rule for taxpayers who receive lump-sum payments. This rule was determined to be necessary because in some situations involving lump-sum payments of benefits attributable to prior years, the general income-averaging rules may not provide adequate relief.

If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the sum of the increases in gross income that result solely from taking into account the appro-appropriate portions of the lump-sum payment in the taxable year to which they are attributable. The committee intends that when lump-sum payments are made, the Social Security Administration or Railroad Retirement Board will notify the recipients thereof of the taxable years to which the payments are attributable.

Social security benefits are to be treated as a pension or annuity and, therefore, not treated as earned income, for purposes of the earned income credit, the deduction for contributions to individual retirement arrangements, the deduction for two-earner couples, and the foreign earned income exclusion.

Returns relating to social security benefits

Information reporting will be required with respect to benefit payments. Specifically, the appropriate Federal official (i.e., the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in the case of social security benefits, and the Railroad Retirement Board, in the case of railroad retirement benefits) will be required to report to the Treasury (1) the aggregate amount of benefits paid with respect to any individual during any calendar year; (2) the aggregate amount of benefits repaid by the individual during the calendar year; and (3) the name and address of the individual with respect to whom benefits are paid. In addition, each individual receiving social security or railroad retirement benefits will be furnished with a written statement showing (1) the name of the agency making the payments, and (2) the aggregate amount of payments and repayments. This statement will be due by January 31 of the year following the year in which social security benefits are paid.

The committee's bill provides that social security benefits paid by the United States are U.S.-source income for purposes of the Code, including the foreign tax credit. In addition, one-half of social security benefits paid to nonresident aliens will be subject to the general 30-percent tax which will be collected by withholding. The committee's bill is not intended to override the treatment of social security benefits provided in existing income tax treaties to which the United States is a party.

The committee's bill permits the Secretary of the Treasury to disclose to the Social Security Administration or the Railroad Retirement Board available return information from the master files of the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the address and status of an individual as a nonresident alien or as a resident or citizen of the United States. This information, which may be disclosed upon written request, may be disclosed to the Social Security Administration and the Railroad Retirement Board only for purposes of carrying out their responsibilities for withholding taxes from social security benefits of nonresident aliens. Any return information disclosed under this provision will be subject to the present law requirements regarding recordkeeping and safeguarding of return information.

The committee's bill appropriates to each payor fund the increase in Federal income tax liabilities attributable to taxing social security benefits. This amount is the difference between total income tax liabilities for the year and what income tax liabilities would have been without the application of the Code sections which provide for the taxation of benefits. A "payor fund" is any trust fund or account from which payments of social security benefits are made.

The appropriated amounts are to be transferred from time to time (but no less frequently than quarterly) from the general fund of the Treasury on the basis of estimates made by the Secretary of the Treasury. Transfers to the payor funds may be based on the proportion of each type of benefit as a share of the total benefits potentially includible in gross income under these provisions. For example, suppose that after adding OASI benefits, DI benefits and Tier I railroad retirement benefits the shares of these in the total are 80 percent, 16 percent, and 4 percent, respectively. These percentages of the increase in tax liabilities described above may then be transferred to the respective funds.

Any quarterly payment to a payor trust fund must be made on the first day of the quarter and must take into account social security benefits estimated to be received during the quarter. Proper adjustments are to be made in the amounts subsequently transferred to the extent that prior estimates were in excess of, or less than, the amounts required to be transferred. A final determination of the amount required to be transferred for a year may be based on an estimate derived from the appropriately weighted sample of individual income tax returns for that year which is used as the basis for the Internal Revenue Service's publication of statistics of income for that year under Code section 6108. In making these estimates, the Secretary of the Treasury need not take account of certain provisions of the tax law that might affect an individual's tax liability (e.g., income averaging, loss carrybacks, etc.) if these provisions are judged to have an inconsequential effect on the estimates.

The Secretary of the Treasury will be required to submit annual reports to the Congress and to the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Railroad Retirement Board concerning (1) the transfers made during the year, and the methodology used in determining the amount of the transfers and the funds or account to which made, and (2) the anticipated operation of the transfer mechanism during the next five years.

Taxation of Tier One railroad retirement benefits

The Committee's bill provides that railroad retirement "Tier 1" benefits are subject to taxation to the same extent and in the same manner as monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act. As a result of this change, certain amounts will be transferred regularly to the Railroad Retirement Account.

Under the financial interchange between railroad retirement and social security, however, the social security trust funds are placed in the same position they would have been in if railroad employment were covered under social security. Therefore, the committee understands that existing law requires that the proceeds of income taxes on those railroad retirement benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits are to be credited to the social security trust funds through adjustments in the financial interchange. This will produce exactly the same result as if the social security system had paid that portion of the tier I benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits and had received the proceeds of the income tax on these benefits.

Effective date

In general, the provisions will apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending after that date. However, the provisions will not apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, if the generally applicable payment date of these benefits was before January 1, 1984.

B. Acceleration of increases in FICA taxes; 1984 employee tax credit (sec. 132 of the bill; secs. 3101, 3111, and new sec. 3510 of the code)

Present Law

Under present law, several increases in social security payroll tax (FICA) rates are already scheduled to take effect between 1985 and 1990, as shown in the following table:

Reasons for change

In conjunction with other changes in the law which are designed to help insure the solvency of the OASDI Trust Funds, the committee has found it necessary to advance the OASDI increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1990 to 1988. In order to cushion the impact on workers of the first change, a one-time tax credit is provided to employees equal to the 1984 increase in the employees FICA tax.

The bill provides a new schedule of OASDI rates and leaves HI rates unchanged. The new OASDI rates and combined OASDHI rates are as follows:

Because railroad retirement (RR) payroll taxes are linked to the rates for social security, the committee's bill also provides similar increases in the corresponding railroad retirement taxes.

The bill provides employees a credit equal to 0.3 percent of compensation subject to the FICA and RR taxes and to payments of amounts equivalent to FICA taxes under section 218 of the Social Security Act. Because the credit is to be taken into account at the time the tax is collected (by deduction from the employees' wages or otherwise), the net OASDI employee tax rate for 1984 will be 5.40 percent. However, employees' annual wage statements are to show the gross FICA tax (7.00 percent of wages) and the credit amount (0.3 percent of wages) separately. As under present law, the appropriation of funds into, for example, the OASDI trust funds will be based on the gross OASDI employee tax rate, which will be 5.70 percent and, thus, will not be affected by the credit.

Effective date.—These provisions will apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

C. Self-employment income tax and credit (secs. 133 of the bill and secs. 43, 164, 275, 401, 1401, and 1402 of the Code)

Present Law

The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax rate that is equal to approximately 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax rate that is equal to 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

The presently scheduled OASDI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

Under present law, the expenses of compensation or purchased services, including wages, the employer FICA tax, and payments to self-employed individuals are deductible, for income tax purposes, as business expenses. However, neither the employee FICA tax nor the SECA tax is deductible.

Reasons for change

The committee is concerned that, under the current system, self-employed individuals pay into the social security system less than employers and employees, taken together, contribute for equal benefits. Thus, even though an employer may take an income tax deduction for his share of the payroll tax paid on behalf of an employee and Federal revenues would be reduced thereby, the social security trust funds received less than is necessary to provide benefits to self-employed individuals. This disparity in receipts contributes to the financial difficulties of the social security system.

Explanation of provisions

Under the bill, the OASDI rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDI rate, and the HI tax rate on self-employment income will be equal to the combined employer-employee HI rate. In order to cushion the impact of the increase, the bill provides a permanent credit against SECA taxes.

The OASDI tax rate on self-employment income will be:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date Range</th>
<th>Rate</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

The HI rate for self-employed persons will be:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<td>2.70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>December 31, 1985 – January 1, 1985</td>
<td>2.90</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Beginning in 1984, self-employed persons will be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984, the credit will be 2.9 percent of self-employment income. For 1985, the credit will be 2.5 percent. For 1986, the credit will be 2.2 percent. For 1987-1989, the credit will be 2.1 percent. For 1990 and subsequent years, the rate of the credit will be 2.3 percent. The SECA tax credits may be taken directly into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

The SECA tax credits will not reduce the revenues of the social security trust funds, since under the Social Security Act, appropriations into the trust funds will be based on the SECA tax rates specified above without regard to the credits allowed against such taxes.

Effective date.—The provisions will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

REALLOCATION OF OASDI TAX RATE

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reallocate the OASDI tax so that both trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of a year as a percentage of outgo during the year). This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

The following table displays the new allocation for the OASDI tax rate:

INTERFUND BORROWING EXTENSION
(Section 142 of the Bill)

Present law

Public Law 97-123 authorized, through December 31, 1982, borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds whenever it was determined by the Managing Trustee (the Secretary of Treasury) that additional funds were needed to pay benefits. The Conference Report specified that amounts borrowed could not exceed what was required to ensure benefit payments through June 1983. Under this authority, and to fulfill this purpose, $17.5 billion was transferred to the OASI trust fund from the DI and HI trust funds in 1982 (of which $12.4 billion was from HI).

Under the law, the borrowing fund is required to make periodic interest payments on outstanding balances. Also the loan must be repaid when the Managing Trustee determines that the assets of the borrowing fund are sufficient to begin repayment.

Committee amendment

Through 1987, the committee amendment would authorize interfund borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds. The following protections would be provided for the HI trust fund: (1) interest would be paid monthly to HI on any outstanding loans to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent (with no more to be borrowed than would reduce such ratio to 10 percent); (3) in 1983-87, OASDI would repay loans from HI whenever the OASDI fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 15 percent; and (4) in 1988-89, OASDI would repay HI, in 24 equal monthly payments, the loan balance outstanding at the end of 1987 (plus interest on any outstanding loan balance).

Similar protections would be provided for the OASI and DI trust funds in the event that HI were to borrow from OASDI.

The amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI and DI trust funds and to the OASI and DI trust funds from the HI trust fund.

Under the Committee amendment, using intermediate cost estimates the amounts available from the HI trust fund for loans (in excess of the 10 percent requirement) to the OASDI trust funds would be about $7 billion in 1984, $5 billion in 1985, $4 billion in 1986, and $3 billion in 1987; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87. Under the pessimistic cost estimate, such amounts available from the HI trust fund would be about $6 billion in 1984, $4 billion in 1985, and zero in 1986-87; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87 (although slightly worse experience during that period would make loans necessary).

Effective.—On enactment.
CREDIT AMOUNTS OF UNNEGOTIATED CHECKS TO THE TRUST FUNDS

(Section 143 of the Bill)

Present law

The social security trust funds are not credited for OASDI benefit checks which remain uncashed. Instead, the value of benefit checks which are not cashed remains in the General Fund of the Treasury.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, it would require the implementation of a procedure under which: (1) the Treasury Department would make it possible to distinguish OASDI checks from other government checks; and (2) the trust funds would be credited on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months. This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform which required only the initial lump sum transfer, assuming that future transfers were already provided for.

Effective date.—The lump sum transfer would be made in the month following the month of enactment of this provision.

MILITARY WAGE CREDITS

(Sections 144 and 145 of the Bill)

Present law

Since 1946, the OASDI system has provided gratuitous wage credits to persons who serve in the military forces. Such military personnel have been credited with earnings (upon which benefits are based) for which no payroll taxes have been paid. Two types of credits have been given: (1) for World War II veterans, noncontributory wage credits of up to $1,920 per year for active military service from 1940 to 1957; and (2) noncontributory wage credits of $1,200 per year for military service performed after 1956 to recognize the value of non-cash compensation, such as food, shelter and medical services. (In 1957, members of the military were compulsorily covered under social security.)

To finance the costs incurred in paying the benefits based on periods of military service for which no contributions were made, the social security trust funds receive reimbursements from the General Fund of the Treasury. The annual reimbursement to the trust funds has been about $700 million in recent years.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would credit the OASDHI trust funds, in a lump sum, with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDHI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for the employer-employee taxes on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform except that the Committee has extended the provision to include HI.

Effective date.—Lump sum is payable in the month following the month of enactment. Lump sums would be payable within 30 days after the enactment of this provision.

TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURE

(Section 146 of the Bill)

Present law

Payroll tax revenues which are in excess of the amount necessary to pay current benefits must be invested, generally in “special issue” obligations available for purchase only by the trust funds. Such obligations have maturities fixed with “due regard” for the needs of the trust funds and bear an interest rate equal to the average market yield on all marketable, interest bearing obligations of the U.S. government which are not due or callable for at least 4 years.

The maturity dates on new special issues and the redemption schedule for trust fund investments are not set by law, but by Treasury procedure. The Treasury attempts to set the maturity dates for special issues from 1 to 15 years—so that about ½ of the total portfolio comes due in each of the next 15 years. When securities must be sold to meet benefit obligations, special issues with the shortest duration until maturity are sold first. In the event that there are several securities with the same duration until maturity, those with the lowest interest rate are sold first.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides for reinvesting all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest based on the average market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.

The amendment would require the Managing Trustee to: (1) redeem all present special issues at their face amount; (2) redeem all flower bonds (marketable government bonds which, for inheritance tax purposes, are redeemable at par) at their current market values; and (3) invest, on a monthly basis, the redeemed investments and all future funds only in separate depository accounts for each of the trust funds.

This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, except that the Commission recommended investing in special issues.

Effective.—The first day of the first month beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment.

Revenue Gain: No significant gain or loss anticipated.

PUBLIC MEMBERS ON BOARD OF TRUSTEES

(Section 147 of the Bill)

Present law

The Board of Trustees of the four social security trust funds (Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Supplemental Medical Insurance) consists of, ex officio, the Secretaries of the Treasury, Health and Human Services, and Labor, with the Secretary of the Treasury serving as the managing trustee. Among other responsibilities, the Board of Trustees is required to report to Congress each year on the operation and status of the trust funds, review the general policies followed in managing the trust funds, and recommend changes in such policies.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members would not be considered fiduciaries and would not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform also proposed that the Board of Trustees of the OASDI trust funds be expanded to include two public members.

Effective.—On enactment.

Cost.—None.
ACCELERATE STATE AND LOCAL DEPOSITS
(Section 148 of the Bill)

Present law

Requires the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees within thirty days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

By contrast, the frequency with which deposits of social security taxes and income taxes are made by private employers is determined under regulations issued by Treasury and vary in accordance with the tax liability of the employer. Deposits are required as frequently as every week for employers with large liabilities and as infrequently as every three months for employers with smaller liabilities.

Although State and local governments are now governed by the same rules as private employers with regard to depositing withheld income taxes, deposits of social security taxes continue to be treated differently.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that now apply to private employers.

Effective date.—Effective for deposits required to be made after December 1983.

TRIGGERED NORMALIZATION OF TAX TRANSFERS
(Section 149 of the Bill)

Present law

Under current procedures, social security taxes are transferred to the trust funds on a daily basis on Treasury estimates of amounts collected. OASDI benefit payments, however, are concentrated at the start of the month creating the need for high balances in the OASDI trust funds during the first week of the month.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, when at the start of any month, the Secretary of Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1 1/2 months of benefits (reserves less than 12% of outgo), the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month.
Interest would be paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred at a rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.

Effective.—On enactment through 1987 (when the authority for interfund borrowing expires).

Cost.—Negligible.

Treatment of certain deferred compensation and salary reduction arrangements (sec. 150 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law

Cash or deferred arrangements

Under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)) forming a part of a tax-qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf or to receive such amount directly from the employer in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the employee's election are treated as employer contributions to the plan and are excluded from the employee's taxable income and social security wage base.

Amounts distributed with respect to an employee under a qualified plan generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Tax-sheltered annuities

Under present law, tax-sheltered annuities (sec. 403(b)) may be purchased on an individual basis for employees of public schools or tax-exempt religious, charitable, and other organizations described in section 501(c)(3). Subject to certain limitations, amounts paid by the employer to purchase the annuity are excluded from the employee's income. A tax-sheltered annuity may be purchased for an employee pursuant to a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee.

The Internal Revenue Service has ruled that amounts paid for a tax-sheltered annuity pursuant to a salary reduction agreement are includible in the employee's social security wage base, even though such amounts may not be subject to income tax withholding. The validity of the ruling position is in doubt in light of the Supreme Court decision in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States (see following section of this report).

Amounts distributed under a tax-sheltered annuity generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base.

Cafeteria plans

Under an employer's cafeteria plan (sec. 125), a covered employee may choose among various benefits, which may include cash, taxable benefits, or nontaxable benefits. If certain requirements are met, amounts applied under a cafeteria plan toward nontaxable benefits (e.g., accident and health benefits or plan contributions under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement) are excluded from the employee's income and generally from the social security wage base. Taxable benefits chosen by the employee (e.g., cash) are includible in income and generally includible in the wage base.

Eligible State deferred compensation plans

Under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)), an employee of a State or local government or a rural electric cooperative may elect to defer compensation, subject to certain limits. Amounts deferred under an eligible plan are excluded from income until paid to the employee under the plan. Eligible State deferred compensation plans generally are not retirement plans for purposes of the rules defining "wages" includible in the social security wage base. (For example, the income tax rules for eligible plans permit distributions to an employee after age 59½ without regard to whether the employee is retired.) Thus, amounts deferred are includible in the social security wage base at the time of the deferral if the plan is not a retirement plan.

Non-qualified deferred compensation plans

Under present law (sec. 3121(a)), standby pay or payments made to an employee on account of retirement, either on an individual basis or under a plan or system of the employer providing for employees generally, may be excluded from the social security wage base without regard to whether the payments are under a tax-qualified retirement plan (sec. 401(a) or 403(a)) or other tax-favored retirement savings program (e.g., a tax-sheltered annuity (sec. 403(b)).

Reasons for change

Generally, if an employee receives cash and then chooses to use these funds for personal savings or benefits, the amount of cash received is subject to FICA. This is true, for example, for contributions to an individual retirement account (IRA) even if the employer transmits the funds directly to the IRA account.

Under cash or deferred arrangements, certain tax-sheltered annuities, certain cafeteria plans, and eligible State deferred compensation plans, the employer contributes funds which are set aside by individual employees for individual savings arrangements, and thus, the committee believes that such employer contributions should be included in the FICA base, as is the case for IRA contributions. Otherwise, individuals could, in effect, control which portion of their compensation was to be included in the social security wage base. This would make the system partially elective and would undermine the FICA tax base.

The committee also believes that it is appropriate to exclude payments from the social security wage base where the payments are made from a tax-qualified or other tax-favored retirement plan. However, the committee does not believe that such tax-favored treatment under the FICA tax rules generally should be extended to deferred compensation plans which do not qualify for tax-favored treatment under the income tax rules.

includible in the social security wage base for tax and coverage purposes to the extent that the employee could have elected to receive cash in lieu of the contribution. The provision is intended to apply to elective amounts under the cash or deferred arrangement and not to nonelective amounts contributed by employers to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan of which the arrangement may be a part.

The bill also provides that any amounts paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee would be includible in the employee’s social security wage base. The committee intended that the provision would merely codify the holding of Revenue Ruling 65-208, 1965-2 Cum. Bull. 383, without any implication with respect to the issue of whether a particular amount paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity is, in fact, made by reason of a “salary reduction agreement”.

In addition, amounts subject to an employee’s designation under a cafeteria plan that includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee that is not otherwise excluded from the definition of wages under section 3121 of the Code.

The bill would also include in the social security wage base amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)). The payment to such a plan would be treated as wages received in the year in which the services relating to the payment were performed. However, no change is made to the present-law self-employment tax (SECA) rules regarding amounts paid under an eligible State deferred compensation plan on behalf of an independent contractor.

Under the bill, nonqualified deferred compensation generally is includible in the social security wage base when it becomes available to the employee. For this purpose, nonqualified deferred compensation generally includes payments under a deferred compensation arrangement which is not (1) a tax-qualified plan, (2) an individual retirement arrangement (IRA), (3) a simplified employee pension (SEP), (4) a tax-sheltered annuity, or (5) a governmental plan. A governmental plan is one established and maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing. However, elective deferrals under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (sec. 457(a)) are includible in the wage base as described in the preceding paragraph, and amounts payable under a deferred compensation plan of a State or local government which is not an eligible plan (sec. 457(e)(1) and (e)(2) (D) and (E)) are includible in the wage base when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture by the employee.

The bill also includes conforming changes to the provisions (sec. 3306) defining “wages” for purposes of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA). Deferred compensation includible in the social security wage base under the bill would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes. In addition, the bill provides that certain sick pay which is includible in the social security wage base under provisions enacted in 1978 would also be treated as wages for FUTA purposes.

Effective date.—These changes apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983. Codification of Rowan decision with respect to meals and lodging (sec. 151 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law

Under present law, amounts which constitute wages for income tax withholding purposes (Code sec. 3401) and amounts which constitute wages for social security tax purposes (Code sec. 3121) are separately defined. However, in Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States, 452 U.S. 247 (1981), the Supreme Court held that the definition of wages for social security tax purposes and the definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes must be interpreted in regulations in the same manner in the absence of statutory provisions to the contrary.

At issue in Rowan was whether the value of meals and lodging provided employees at the convenience of the employer were wages for social security tax purposes (i.e., were includable in the social security wage base). The value of such employer-provided meals and lodging may be excluded from the income of an employee (sec. 119). Treasury regulations required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base, but excluded such value from the definition of wages subject to income tax withholding. The Supreme Court decision invalidated those Treasury regulations which required that the value of the meals and lodging be included in the social security wage base.

Reasons for change

The social security program aims to replace the income of beneficiaries when that income is reduced on account of retirement and disability. Thus, the amount of "wages" is the measure used both to define income which should be replaced and to compute FICA tax liability. Since the security system has objectives which are significantly different from the objective underlying the income tax withholding rules, the committee believes that amounts exempt from income tax withholding should not be exempt from FICA unless Congress provides an explicit FICA tax exclusion.

Explanation of provision

The bill provides that, with the exception of the value of meals and lodging provided for the convenience of the employer, the determination whether or not amounts are includible in the social security wage base is to be made without regard to whether such amounts are treated as wages for income tax withholding purposes. Accordingly, an employee's "wages" for social security tax purposes may be different from the employee's "wages" for income tax withholding purposes. In addition, the bill provides that the definition of wages for social security tax and benefit purposes is revised to exclude the value of employer-provided meals and lodging to the extent such value is also excluded from the employee's gross income.

Effective date.—The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.
Treatment of contributions under simplified employee pensions (SEPs) (sec. 152 of the bill and sec. 3121(a)(5) of the Code)

Present law

Under present law, the Internal Revenue Code excludes from the social security wage base employer payments to or on behalf of an employee under a simplified employee pension (SEP). However, such employer contributions are treated as covered wages for social security benefit purposes.

Reasons for Change

The committee believes that it is inappropriate to treat employer payments to a SEP as covered wages for benefit purposes where such amounts are excluded from the social security wage base for tax purposes.

Explanation of provision

The bill amends the Social Security Act to exclude from the definition of covered wages for social security coverage purposes employer contributions to a SEP that are deductible as such by the employer. The bill makes clear that the exclusion applies, for both tax and coverage purposes, only with respect to the employer's contribution to a SEP, not with respect to the amount equivalent to the employee's contribution to an individual retirement arrangement (IRA).

Effective date.—This provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

a In addition to the provisions shown, the committee estimates that the provisions regarding the inclusion in the FICA wage base of amounts received under certain deferred compensation and salary reduction agreements will increase receipts of the social security trust funds by $2.0 billion during calendar years 1984 to 1989, inclusive.

TITLE II OF THE BILL
INCREASE THE SSI PAYMENT STANDARD AND MODIFY PASS-THROUGH REQUIREMENTS
(Sections 201 and 202 of the Bill)

Present law

The first $20 of income received by an individual in a month is disregarded in determining SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The income may be earned or unearned (except for some income based on need, such as veterans' pensions, which is fully counted). The disregard was provided in the original statute in 1972 to ensure that persons who had contributed toward an entitlement, such as OASDI, were better off than those who had not. The amount of the disregard has not been increased since 1972.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendments would:
A. Increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983; and
B. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the "pass through" requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase. Presently, States which provide payments to supplement the Federal SSI payment are required to pass through to recipients any Federal SSI cost-of-living increases. States have two basic options for meeting the pass through requirements: 1) they may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976, or 2) they may make State supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended that, effective July 1983, the SSI disregard be increased by $30 per month for OASDI income (not other income) in determining an individual's SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The effect would have been to increase by $30 the monthly income of those individuals who are entitled to both OASDI and SSI.

Presently, the maximum Federal SSI payment is $284 monthly for an individual and $426 monthly for a couple. After certain disregards, the amount of SSI actually received by an individual is reduced on account of other income.

SSI ALERT

(Section 203 of the Bill)

Present law

Currently, there is no statutory requirement that OASDI beneficiaries be contacted and informed of potential eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. However, since the beginning of the SSI program, the Social Security Administration has undertaken a number of outreach efforts to identify those potentially eligible. SSA routinely provides information about 581 eligibility and takes applications for SSI payments at the time of application for OASDI benefits if the applicant is potentially eligible for SSI payments. In addition, many State agencies and other private relief groups routinely refer clients to SSA. Presently, about 6.9 percent of elderly social security recipients also receive SSI.

The Committee amendment would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries who are potentially eligible of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact their district offices. In addition, the provision would require that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance.

Despite the current and past activities of the Social Security Administration to make persons potentially eligible for SSI aware of the existence of the program, the Committee believes that there may be currently needy OASDI beneficiaries who have been on the social security rolls for a period of time who may have applied for social security prior to the availability of SSI or who may not have been eligible at the time they applied but whose circumstances have since changed.

The Committee provision would alert those OASDI beneficiaries to the availability of the SSI program and would, in the future, also provide notification to those approaching the age of eligibility (age 65) through information contained with a notice of future eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance which is mailed approximately three months before a beneficiary attains age 65.

Effective date.—Notification to those on the rolls must be made before July 1, 1984.

Cost.—Unable to estimate.
TITLE III OF THE BILL
DESCRIPTION OF MEDICARE PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT PROVISION

GENERAL SUMMARY

Present law

Under current law, medicare reimburses hospitals on the basis of the "reasonable costs" they incur in providing covered services to beneficiaries, excluding any part of such costs found to be unnecessary in the efficient delivery of needed services. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA) expanded and added to existing medicare limits on reasonable cost reimbursement for hospitals by (1) expanding the existing "section 223" reimbursement limits to apply to total inpatient operating costs (not just routine costs) and (2) adding temporary growth rate limits (expiring after fiscal year 1985) which would rise annually by one percentage point plus the increase in the "market basket" of goods and services purchased by hospitals. TEFRA also directed the Secretary of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to develop and report to Congress proposals for the reimbursement of hospitals under medicare on a prospective basis. The Department's report was submitted in late 1982, and its recommendations have been embodied in Administration-sponsored legislation. The Committee amendment is a modified version of the Administration's proposal.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment includes a major change in the method of payment under medicare for inpatient hospital services. Medicare payment for inpatient operating costs of hospitals would be determined in advance and paid on a per case basis. A fixed amount would be paid for each type of case, identified by the "diagnosis related group" (DRG) into which the case is classified. These changes are intended to create incentives for hospitals to operate in a more efficient manner, since hospitals would be allowed to keep payment amounts in excess of their costs and would be required to absorb any costs in excess of the DRG rates. Hospitals would be prohibited from charging medicare beneficiaries any amounts in excess of the deductibles and coinsurance provided for by law.

The committee amendment would be effective for individual hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and would be phased-in over a 3-year period.
1. Prospective payment amounts

Present law

Under current law, Medicare payments for inpatient hospital services are retrospectively-determined based upon a hospital's reasonable costs, subject to certain limits. These reimbursement limits include (1) limits on a hospital's inpatient operating costs (the "section 223" limits) and (2) rate of increase limits on overall inpatient operating costs (a limit which expires after fiscal year 1985).

Committee amendment

(a) Diagnosis-related groups (DRG's).—Under the committee's amendment, the Secretary would be required to determine prospectively a payment amount for each Medicare hospital discharge. Discharges would be classified into diagnosis related groups (DRG's) which classify patients into groups that are clinically coherent and relatively homogenous with respect to resource use. The DRG classification system, developed some years ago, has been improved in recent years and represents the most fully developed case classification system representative of a national data base and readily adaptable to a national program. The committee recognizes that in developing a separate payment rate for each DRG it will be necessary to rely on currently available data sources and to use a sample of cases, e.g., the 20 percent sample of Medicare beneficiary bills (MEDPAR), to arrive at the DRG rates. The committee expects that the Secretary will refine the DRG rates as better data become available.

The committee recognizes that there may be insufficient data with which to calculate relative prices for some DRG's. Because of the small number of Medicare cases in some diagnosis related groups. While this has not been a major problem in the past in the design of a case-mix adjustment using DRGs (in connection with the section 223 reimbursement limit under current law), it is important in the prospective payment system to establish a rate for every DRG whether or not it is likely that a case will actually occur. Therefore, the committee recognizes that the Secretary will need to rely on an alternative method for setting the prospective rate for low-volume DRG's—for example, by combining MEDPAR data for several years or by reference to an external source in which these DRG's are more common, e.g., data from State systems.

(b) DRG payment rates.—Under the committee's amendment the Secretary would be required to determine a national standard payment rate per discharge for each DRG. The rate would be the product of:

1. the average of the standardized cost per discharge, for all hospitals in the country, as determined by the Secretary; and
2. a weighting factor for each DRG, as determined by the Secretary.

In addition, DRG payment rates would be established for urban and rural areas both nationally and in each of four census regions of the country (the 50 States and the District of Columbia) in order to moderate the impact of the prospective payment system for urban and rural hospitals in different regions of the country. Using data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, each of these payment rates would be adjusted for area differences in hospital wage levels, in similar fashion to the wage adjustment currently used under the section 223 hospital limits.

Hospitals or units of hospitals which are exempted from the prospective payment system would be subject to the rate of increase limits applicable under present law. The current section 223 limits would no longer apply to any of the facilities not included in the prospective payment system for any cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.

(c) Establishment of initial payment rates.—The process for determining DRG payment rates for the first year of the program (fiscal year 1984) begins with the determination of allowable operating costs for inpatient hospital services for each hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available. These cost data would be updated for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated industry-wide actual increase in hospital costs and further updated for fiscal year 1984 by the hospital market basket increase, plus one percentage point. The resulting amounts would be standardized by excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs, adjusting for area wage variations, and adjusting for variations in case mix. The Secretary would then compute an average of these standardized cost levels per discharge for the urban hospitals (as currently defined for purposes of the "section 223" limits) in each of the four census regions and nationally and also for the rural hospitals in each of the census regions and nationally.

Each of the average standardized amounts would be reduced to account for payment that will subsequently be made (see below) to specific hospitals for atypical cases ("outliers").

These average standardized amounts would then be reduced as may be required, to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement provisions that would have applied under the 1982 TEFRA legislation. In determining budget neutrality for the DRG part of the payment, the Secretary would include in the DRG payment amounts the additional payments for outlier cases, for indirect medical education costs, and for costs of nonphysician services to inpatients previously paid for under part B, and additional payments reflecting other adjustments.

The Secretary would next determine a separate urban and rural DRG-specified rates for each census region and the nation by computing the product of the average standardized amounts described above and the weighting factor for each DRG (reflecting the relative use of hospital resources for specific DRG's compared for resources used for other DRG's).

The DRG-specific rates would be further adjusted to recognize area wage differences both nationally and on a regional basis for purposes of determining the payment amount using methodologies similar to those currently used under the section 223 limits. The actual amount of revenue paid to a hospital, in addition to the DRG-specific payment rate, will be, of course, influenced by such factors as: payment for capital costs and costs of approved educational programs on a reasonable cost basis; adjustments for indirect teaching costs; additional payments for atypical—or outlier—cases; and various other exceptions and adjustments.
Under current law, services provided to Medicare beneficiaries who are inpatients of a hospital are generally billed under Part A of the Medicare program. However, under certain circumstances, payments are made for non-physician services (for example, radiology, laboratory, physical therapy, prosthetics, etc.) which are separately billed by the supplier as a part B service even though they are provided to a hospital inpatient. Thus, under current law, some non-physician services may be billed under Part A in one hospital and yet, in another hospital may be billed under Part B of the program. However, under the committee’s amendment, the prospective payment is intended to be payment in full for all covered items and non-physician services to hospital inpatients. Thus, the current practice of allowing independent practitioners to bill Part B for items and services provided to inpatients would no longer be permitted under the prospective payment system. Some hospitals and independent practitioners will have to modify their arrangements.

The committee amendment provides that, effective October 1, 1983, all non-physician services provided to hospital inpatients would be paid only as inpatient hospital services under Part A with the adjustments described below.

Because there are some limited situations where particular hospitals have extensively followed the practice of allowing direct billing of Part B, modifications of these financial arrangements could threaten the financial stability of some institutions. Under the committee amendment, the Secretary would be granted authority to waive the general rules for these few cases for a limited time period not to exceed the transition period during which the new system is phased in. Upon approval of a hospital’s request, the Secretary could allow continued payment of Part B billings as long as he subsequently deducted the total payments made for these billings from the payments made under the prospective system to the hospital. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the transition, the Secretary may provide for such methods of payment under Part A, as is appropriate given the organizational structure of the institution.

The Secretary would be required to provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before September 1 of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1983) interim final rates, a description of the methodology and data used in computing the DRG payment rates, any adjustment required to produce budget neutrality in relation to the TEFRA level of Medicare reimbursement outlays.

In setting the initial payment rates, the Secretary would also be required to recognize the higher payroll costs some hospitals will incur as the result of being required to enter the Social Security system, by adjusting base costs for individual hospitals and for the prospective rates to accommodate these additional costs.

(d) Annual Updates of the DRG Payment Rates. For fiscal year 1985, the initial DRG payment amounts would be increased by the marketbasket plus one percentage point. As for fiscal year 1984, reductions would be made in the payment rates for additional costs such as outlier payments, indirect medical education costs, and other adjustments in order to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement provisions which would have applied under the TEFRA reimbursement legislation.
(which it is reasonable to expect would occur more commonly in teaching hospitals than in other hospitals).

3. Effective date/transition

Present law

Under current law, the section 223 limits are authorized indefinitely; the rate of increase limits do not apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.

Committee amendment

The prospective payment system would be effective for individual hospital accounting years beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and would be phased-in over a three year period. In year one, 25 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (25 percent national, 75 percent regional); 75 percent would be based on each hospital's own cost-based experience. In year two, 50 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (50 percent each); 50 percent would be based on each hospital's cost experience. In year three, 75 percent of the payment would be based on a combination of DRG rates (75 percent national, 25 percent regional); 25 percent would be based on each hospital's cost experience. In year four, the entire payment would be based on national DRG rates, calculated separately for hospitals located in urban and rural areas. The phase-in of national DRG rates over the three-year period is designed to minimize disruption that might otherwise occur because of sudden changes in reimbursement levels.

The section 223 limits provided under current law would be repealed effective for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983. However, hospitals or units of hospitals not included in the prospective payment system would be subject to the same rate of increase limitation as contained in TEFRA, including the penalties and bonuses. The rate of increase used to update these limits would be that which is currently contained in TEFRA, market basket plus one percentage point.

4. Exemptions, exceptions and adjustments

Present law

Under current law, section 223 limits do not apply to children's hospitals, psychiatric hospitals, long-term care hospitals or to rural hospitals with less than 50 beds. In addition, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions and adjustments to the limits as he deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of psychiatric, public and other hospitals that serve a disproportionate number of low-income and medicare beneficiaries and sole community providers. Current law also requires the Secretary to provide exemptions, exceptions and adjustments to the section 223 limits as he deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of new hospitals, risk-based health maintenance organizations, and hospitals providing atypical or essential services; extraordinary circumstances beyond a hospital's control; and for other purposes.
Committee amendment

Under the committee amendment, psychiatric, long-term care, rehabilitation and children’s hospitals would be specifically exempted from the prospective payment system. The DRG classification system was developed for short-term acute care general hospitals and, as currently constructed, does not adequately take into account special circumstances of diagnoses requiring long stays and as used in the medicare program is inappropriate for certain classes of patients. In addition, distinct part rehabilitation or psychiatric units of acute care hospitals would be exempt. The Secretary, under current medicare rules and regulations, has prescribed in detail standards and criteria that distinct parts must meet including establishment of separate cost entities for cost reimbursement and requirements that such units have a sub-provider identification number.

The Secretary would be required to provide for exceptions and adjustments to take into account the special circumstances faced by sole community providers. Such providers will be paid on the same basis as all other providers are paid in year one: 25 percent of the payment would be based on a blend of rural national and regional DRG rates (25 percent national, 75 percent regional); 75 percent would be based on each hospital’s own cost experience. In no case would total payments in any one transition year be less than the payments made in the preceding year.

The committee is concerned that, in determining which hospitals have been eligible for exceptions and adjustments as sole community providers in the past, the Secretary has applied different criteria in the different regions of the country, including some which are very narrow and restrictive. Therefore, the committee expects that the Secretary, in making such determinations for sole community providers under the new prospective payment system, will develop and take into account a much broader range of factors relating to beneficiary access to basic hospital services. The committee amendment further directs the Secretary to study the problems of paying sole community providers and report back to the Congress, by April 1, 1985, on equitable methods of paying these small rural hospitals which take account of their unique circumstances, including their vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy rates.

Under this amendment, the Secretary would also be required to provide exceptions and adjustments, as he deems appropriate, to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a disproportionately large number of low-income and part A medicare beneficiaries. Concern has been expressed that public hospitals and other hospitals that serve such patients may be more severely ill than average and that the DRG payment system may not adequately take into account such factors. The Secretary in his report to Congress stated that the Department of Health and Human Services would continue to study ways of taking account of severity of illness in the DRG system.

Exceptions and adjustments would also be permitted to take into account the special needs of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii, as the Secretary now does in applying the reimbursement limits of present law.
This provision would exempt from the prospective payment system hospitals located in geographic areas outside the fifty States and the District of Columbia but within the United States for purposes of medicare (i.e. territories). The cost experience of these hospitals may be so varied that the DRG prospective payment system may not adequately reflect the needs of these hospitals.

5. Peer review

Present law

Under current law the Secretary is required to enter into contracts for utilization and quality control peer review with professional review organizations or other review organizations, including medicare intermediaries (subject to certain conditions and limitations).

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require hospitals to contract with a professional review organization (PRO) selected by the Secretary to serve that area, under title XI of the Social Security Act for the review of admissions, discharges and quality of care. The purpose of this contract is to provide for the review of the accuracy of the diagnostic information on the hospital's bills, the completeness and adequacy of the care provided, the appropriateness of its medicare admissions, and the appropriateness of the care provided to patients designated by the hospitals as outliers. These reviews would be covered as a hospital cost of care under Part A, but the PRO would be paid by the Secretary on behalf of the hospital on the basis of a budget approved by the Secretary.

6. Payments to health maintenance organizations (HMO’s) and competitive medical plans (CMP’s)

Present law

Under current law, health maintenance organizations (HMO’s) and competitive medical plans (CMP’s) may be reimbursed either on the basis of reasonable costs or under a risk-based contract, a payment equal to 95 percent of the adjusted average per capital cost (AAPCC) for medicare enrollees in the HMO’s area.

Committee amendment

Under the committee amendment, an HMO or a CMP that receives medicare payments on a risk-basis may choose to have the Secretary directly pay hospitals for inpatient hospital services furnished to medicare enrollees of the HMO or CMP. The payment amount would be at the DRO rate and would be deducted from medicare payments to the HMO or CMP. The HMO or CMP may alternatively choose to continue to pay the hospital directly.

7. State cost control programs

Present law

Under current law, the Secretary has authority to establish medicare demonstration projects. There are currently four State-wide medicare demonstrations (Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York) and one area-wide demonstration (Rochester, New York).

In addition, the Secretary is authorized, at the request of a State, to pay for medicare services according to the State’s hospital cost control system if such system—

(1) applies to substantially all non-Federal acute care hospitals in the State;

(2) applies to at least 75 percent of all inpatient revenues or expenses in the State;

(3) provides assurances that payors, hospital employees and patients are treated equitably; and

(4) provides assurances that the State’s system will not result in greater medicare expenditures over a three-year period than would otherwise have been made.

(To date, no State systems have been approved under this authority.)

Committee amendment

The Secretary would be authorized to make medicare payments under a State system if five conditions were met—the four in current law, plus the condition that the State system will not preclude HMO’s or CMP’s from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to payments for inpatient hospital services. In approving new waivers for State systems, the Secretary would be prohibited from

(1) denying an application of a State on the grounds that the State’s system is based on a payment methodology other than DRGs or (2) requiring that payments made for medicare patients under the State’s system be less than the payments which would have been made under the Federal prospective payment system.

If the Secretary determines that the test of whether or not a State system is resulting in medicare payments in excess of what would otherwise have been paid under the Federal system is based on the State maintaining a rate of increase in payments for medicare hospital inpatient services at no more than a specified percentage increase above a base payment amount for such services, then the State has the option of applying such test either on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the payment amount per inpatient discharge on admission. If the Secretary determines that the test is based on the State maintaining a rate of increase in aggregate payments for medicare hospital inpatient services compared to a national percentage increase in total payments for such services, the Secretary cannot deny a State’s application for a waiver on the ground that State’s rate of increase in such payments must be less than the national average rate of increase.

For existing State systems, the Secretary must judge their effectiveness on the basis of their rate of increase or inflation in medicare inpatient hospital payments compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments. The State would retain the option to have the test applied during the transition period (3 years) on the basis of either aggregate payments or payments per inpatient admission or discharge. After the transition period, this test would no longer apply, and such State systems would be treated in the same fashion as other waivered systems.
If, subsequent to implementation of a State program, the Secretary determines that the amounts paid over a three-year period under a State system exceed what Medicare would have otherwise paid over the same three-year period, the Secretary may reduce subsequent payments to hospitals under the State system by that amount.

For those States which currently have a Medicare waiver, the Secretary would be required to continue the State program, if, and for so long as, the five conditions noted above are met.

The committee amendment provides that the Secretary would, upon request of a State, modify the terms of the current demonstration agreement that provides that the State's rate of increase in Medicare hospital costs be 1.5 percent below the national rate of increase in Medicare hospital costs.

Under the committee amendment, the Secretary would be required to approve any State plan which meets the following requirements in addition to those that are included in the current law and the one noted above: that the system (1) is operated directly by the State or an entity designated by State law; (2) is prospective; (3) provides for hospitals to make such reports as the Secretary requires; (4) provides satisfactory assurances that it will not result in admission practices which will reduce treatment to low-income, high cost, or emergency patients; (5) will not reduce payments without 60 days' notice to the Secretary and to hospitals; and (6) provides satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system, the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals. The Secretary would be required to respond to requests from States applying under these eleven conditions within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

8. Administrative and judicial review

Present law

Under current law, a provider may request administrative review by the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB) of a final decision of a fiscal intermediary regarding ties on the provider cost report, subject to certain conditions. A provider may appeal the PRRB decision to Federal court or, where it involves a question of law or regulation which the PRRB does not have the authority to review, the provider may appeal directly to Federal court.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would provide for the same procedures for administrative and judicial review of payments under the prospective system as is currently provided for cost-based payments. In general, the same conditions, which now apply for review by the PRRB and the courts, would continue to apply.

With respect to administrative and judicial review, your Committee's bill would permit review except in the narrow cases necessary to maintain budget neutrality and avoid adversely affecting the establishment of the diagnosis related groups, the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and the appropriate weighting of such groups.
The committee amendment also permits action to be brought jointly by several providers in a judicial district in which the greatest number of such providers are located. Any appeals for judicial review brought by providers which are under common ownership or control would have to be brought as a group, with the PRRB or the district court, in any appeal involving an issue common to such providers.

9. Studies and reports

Present law

Current law directed the Secretary to develop and report to Congress on proposals to reimburse hospitals, skilled nursing facilities, and, to the extent possible, other providers on a prospective basis.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires the Secretary to conduct studies and to report to Congress on the following:

(a) Report annually, through fiscal year 1987, on the progress of implementation and the impact of the payment methodology on classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, other classes of payers for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(b) Collect the data necessary to determine the relationship between physician charges and inpatient services, and report to Congress by January 1985 with legislative recommendation for prospective payments for physician services based on a DRG-type classification of cases. In addition, the Secretary is directed to examine ways to assure that information is transferred between parts A and B of the program, particularly with respect to those cases when a denial of coverage is made under part A, thereby raising questions about the appropriateness of the reimbursement claimed under part B by an attending physician or physicians.

(c) Study the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or such other modifications to the diagnosis related groups and report to the Congress by December 1985 on the advisability and feasibility of providing for the application of such modifications. In addition, the Secretary should report on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas.

(d) Report on the feasibility and impact of eliminating separate urban and rural prospective payment rates of applying the prospective system to all payers, and the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the levels of payments accepted by both public programs and by classes of private payers.

(e) The Secretary will continue hospital demonstrations in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or of methods of payment. The Secretary is also directed to approve a continuation for the On Lok demonstration.

(f) Study the severity of illness and intensity of care differences between hospital and community-based skilled nursing facilities (SNFs), and make recommendations with respect to SNF payment by December 31, 1983. In addition, the committee amendment delays for one year the implementation of section 102 of TEFRA concerning a single reimbursement limit for skilled nursing facilities.
The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) established the FSC program. This program provides additional weeks of unemployment compensation at the same weekly benefit amount to individuals who have exhausted their State benefits and any extended benefits to which they were entitled. The FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, expires March 31, 1983.

As originally enacted, the FSC program provided 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. The Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-424) increased the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits to 16, 14, 12, or 8, depending on the State where the individual filed for or received the additional benefits.

Beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program began providing the following maximum weeks of benefits:

1. 16 weeks in States with an insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent (measured as the average over a moving 13 week period);
2. 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
3. 12 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 4.5 percent;
4. 10 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 3.5 through 4.4 percent; and
5. 8 weeks in all other States.

In order to qualify for FSC, a worker must have worked at least 20 weeks or earned its equivalent in wages in his base year, usually defined as the first four of the last five completed calendar quarters before he filed his claim for regular State benefits. He must also have exhausted the regular and extended benefits to which he is entitled. In addition, his benefit year must have ended on or after June 1, 1982 or he must have been eligible for extended benefits for any week beginning on or after June 1, 1982.

If an individual is eligible for FSC benefits, the number of weeks of FSC he may receive is determined in relation to the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled. An eligible individual may receive FSC for the lesser of (a) 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled or (b) the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits provided in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in his former State.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would extend FSC for 6 months from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983. To qualify for FSC, an individual would need at least 26 weeks of work or its equivalent in wages in his base year. This restriction would apply only to claimants who initially become eligible for FSC on or after April 1, 1983.

The number of weeks available in each State would be:

(1) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:

(1) 14 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above;
(2) 12 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent;
(3) 10 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent;
and
(4) 8 weeks in all other States.

No State would, however, lose more than 4 weeks when compared to present law.

(2) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhaust FSC before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:

(1) 8 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above
(2) 6 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent
(3) 4 weeks in States with IUR at 4 percent to 4.9 percent
(4) 4 weeks in all other States.

(3) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(4) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted their FSC entitlement on September 30, 1983 when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. No new claimants would be added to the FSC program on or after September 30, 1983.

Effective date.—For weeks beginning after April 1, 1983.

OPTIONAL EXCLUSION FROM DISQUALIFICATION FOR NOT ACTIVELY SEEKING WORK UNDER EXTENDED BENEFITS AND FEDERAL SUPPLE-MENTAL COMPENSATION FOR CLAIMANTS WHO ARE HOSPITALIZED OR SERVING ON JURY DUTY

(Section 422 of the Bill)

Present law

Present law disqualifies claimants from receiving extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation if they are not actively seeking work. Moreover, the disqualified claimant must go back to work for at least 4 weeks and earn at least 4 times his weekly benefit amount before he can qualify again for Extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would permit States to determine on a weekly basis the eligibility availability of claimants of Extended Benefits and Federal Supplemental Compensation who are serving on jury duty or are hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition. A State must treat these individuals in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

DENIAL OF BENEFITS TO NONPROFESSIONAL EMPLOYEES OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS BETWEEN ACADEMIC YEARS OR TERMS

Present law

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) covers employees of educational institutions. FUTA requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to certain professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities if they have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. FUTA gives the States the option of the same denial of benefits, however, for nonprofessional employees of educational institutions.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the denial of benefits between academic years or terms to nonprofessional employees mandatory if the employees have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. In addition, States would be required to deny benefits between terms to individuals performing services on behalf of an educational institution or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or agency.

Effective date

The provision would be effective on or after October 1, 1984. States in which there is no legislative session before that date would, however, be given additional time to comply with this provision.

MODIFICATION OF CREDIT REDUCTION CAP PROVISIONS

Present law

Employers in all States currently pay the tax levied under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally received a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. Prior to reforms enacted in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, State UC programs could borrow on an interest-free basis from the Federal Unemployment Account. However, once a State defaulted on its loans from the Federal account, employers in the State began to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of at least .3 percent a year.

Specifically, if an advance is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State’s employers is reduced by .3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional .3 percent (i.e., .6, .9, 1.2 percent, etc.). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970’s, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975–1980 for States satisfying specific requirements. Sixteen states are experiencing a credit reduction for 1983.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan repayment conditions: interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after April 1, 1982 (except those made for “cash flow” purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and States are allowed to “cap” the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

For a State qualifying for the cap, the annual tax credit reduction is limited to 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year, whichever is higher. These loan reform provisions are in effect from January 1, 1981 to December 31, 1987.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State’s total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the FUTA penalty tax a State must demonstrate that:

1. the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
2. there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
3. its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983–1987); and
4. the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983–1987). The comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the credit reduction cap: provisions in present law permanent. A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law to qualify for the credit reduction cap in present law. The committee amendment would, however, provide two possible lower credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the credit reduction would be 0.2 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral authorized as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the credit reduction would be 0.1 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points. The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reductions. The credit reduction applicable in each subsequent year after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

MODIFICATION OF INTEREST PROVISIONS

Present law

Present law imposes interest of up to 10 percent per year on loans obtained by the States after April 1, 1982, except for “cash flow” loans that States repay by the end of the fiscal year in which the loans were obtained. A State can defer payment of its interest due for the fiscal year by paying 25 percent in each of four years beginning with the year in which the interest is due. Interest accrues, however, on the deferred interest.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would make the provisions imposing interest on the States permanent. It would also provide for another deferral and a discounted interest rate for which States could apply if they meet certain conditions as certified by the Secretary of Labor.

The new deferral would be 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet two conditions to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and
(2) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 30 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested. Deferral in the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 40 and 50 percent are made.

The discounted interest rate would be one percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

For purposes of determining whether a State meets the conditions in (2) above, the Secretary of Labor will provide an estimate of the unemployment rate for the base year, the calendar year in which the deferral is requested. The level of benefits and revenue liabilities will be determined using the State law in effect before passage of the legislation. The estimate of changes as a result of new legislation will be made from the base year in each year for which a deferral is requested. Once a deferral is approved, a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so would result in immediate payment of all deferred interest.

Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 after calendar year 1982 and increases in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent after calendar year 1984 will not be counted for purposes of meeting condition (2).

States will not be penalized or rewarded if economic events change from those used in the base year for computing eligibility under condition (2).

Effective date. —Date of enactment.

CHANGE IN SECOND YEAR ADDITIONAL CREDIT REDUCTION

Present law

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable wage base of $7,000, the tax rate base on the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if their taxable wage bases were $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would change the computation of the average tax rate to reflect the ratio of the federal unemployment tax base to the national average wage in covered employment.

Effective date. —Taxable year 1983.

CHANGE IN THE DATE INTEREST IS DUE

Present law

Present law requires that interest is due no later than the first day of the next fiscal year. If the first day of the next fiscal year falls on a weekend, interest is due in the prior fiscal year. Otherwise, it is due on the first day of the next fiscal year.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires that interest be paid before the first day of the next fiscal year.

Effective date. —Date of enactment.
COLLECTION INTEREST

Present law

Present law provides no mechanism through which the Federal Government can collect interest from the States if the States do not pay interest when it is due.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require the collection of delinquent interest charges one year after they are due by a reduction in the FUTA credit of 0.1 percentage point. Any amount collected during the imposition of this provision exceeding the overdue interest would be applied to the outstanding loan as an involuntary repayment. This provision would provide a specific collection mechanism to assure the payment of interest pending completion of any conformity proceeding which is implicitly but clearly required for nonpayment of interest by a State.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

COSTS OF CARRYING OUT THE PROVISIONS OF THE BILL

U.S. CONGRESS,
CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE,

Hon. Robert J. Dole,
Chairman, Committee on Finance,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Chairman: Pursuant to Section 403 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the Congressional Budget Office has prepared the attached cost estimate for S.1, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, as ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983.

Should the Committee so desire, we would be pleased to provide further details on this estimate.

Sincerely,

James Blum
(For Alice M. Rivlin, Director).

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

1. Bill number: S. 1.
3. Bill status: As ordered reported by the Senate Committee on Finance on March 10, 1983.
4. Bill purpose: To amend the Social Security Act to assure the solvency of the Social Security trust funds; to accelerate presently scheduled payroll tax increases; to tax 50 percent of certain individuals' benefits; to increase the self-employed tax; to delay the payment of cost-of-living adjustments; to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals; to extend the federal supplemental compensation program; and for other purposes.
5. Estimated cost to the Federal Government: The following table shows the estimated costs of this bill to the federal government.

Because no draft language has been received, CBO cannot estimate certain provisions in this bill at this time. These provisions relate to the Unemployment Insurance and SSI programs. The cost estimate for the remaining provisions present the best estimates based on current information.

The spending effects of this bill fall within budget functions 550, 600 and 700. The budget authority is the net result of higher interest income on higher trust fund balances for the Old Age Survivors Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI) and Hospital Insurance (HI) programs, transfers to the trust funds from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury, and required additional budget authority for the Supplemental Security Income (SSI), Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI), Food Stamps, Veteran's Pensions and Medicaid programs.

Basis of estimate: This bill generally incorporates the January, 1983 recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It also incorporates provisions affecting the Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and Unemployment Insurance Programs. Table 2, shows the costs, savings and revenue impacts of this bill to the federal government.

One major purpose of this bill is to ensure the continued payment of all Social Security benefits. The impact of some of the provisions in the bill on the financial status of the Social Security trust funds differs from their impact on the federal budget. Many provisions transfer funds within the government, which has no impact on budget outlays or receipts. In addition, the savings to and income into the trust funds generate additional interest income or budget authority. This income also does not affect the unified budget deficit. The impact of the bill on the trust funds therefore is shown separately in Table 3.

1. Less than $0.5 million.
2. This bill contains no estimates relating to unemployment trust fund loan reform.
3. The budgetary impact cannot be estimated because the bill would allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services, as advised by a panel of experts, nearly unlimited discretion in setting payment rates for inpatient hospital services. Those rates could be set such that Medicare outlays in the aggregate would increase or decrease.
4. The cost of this provision cannot be estimated because it depends on the actions of state hospital rate-setting commissions in Massachusetts and New York.
5. SSI costs do not include costs of the provision requiring notices to be sent to social security beneficiaries informing them about SSI. See the text for details.

Source: CBO estimates based on February 1983 economic assumptions.

A Section by section description for the basis of the estimates for the provisions in this bill having major cost impact is given below.
These estimates were prepared from a draft of the bill before Committee amendments were added and from mark-up documents. No bill as amended has been received.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING THE FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

Cover new Federal employees

This provision extends Social Security coverage to all new permanent federal civilian employees as of January 1, 1984. The proposal is expected to cover about 150,000 new permanent federal entrants per year through 1988. The proposal raises $61 million in unified budget revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $1.7 billion in revenues from fiscal year 1984 through 1988.

This provision assumes no change in the current Civil Service Retirement system for those federal workers newly covered by Social Security. No impact of any Civil Service change is given in this estimate.

The estimate is based on CBO's current economic and federal employment assumptions.

Cover workers in non-profit organizations

The provision requires mandatory coverage of all employees of non-profit institutions and organizations. Approximately 20 percent of employees of non-profit organizations and institutions are not currently covered by Social Security. Covering the last 20 percent of non-profit employees raises $1 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $8.7 billion in fiscal years 1984 through 1988.

The extension of mandatory coverage to all non-profit employees results in an income tax offset against the increase in OASDHI revenues. The offset equals 25 percent of the employer contribution and reduces income tax revenues. Income tax revenues are estimated to fall because it is assumed that non-profit employers pass the entire payroll tax increase onto their employees in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The estimate was based on CBO's economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Termination of State and local coverage

Currently, state and local governments can terminate Social Security coverage upon giving two years notice of their intention to withdraw, and then doing so. This provision would prohibit any such withdrawals, effective with the bill's enactment.

CBO's current law revenue estimates do not assume reductions in trust fund income that could result from withdrawals of certain state and local governments. Thus, there would be no revenue gain to the CBO baseline estimates from prohibiting such withdrawals.

Delay payment of annual cost-of-living adjustment from July to January of each year

This section delays the payment of future cost-of-living adjustments (COLA's) for Social Security for six months, from July to January of each year. In addition, the provision changes the base period from which the COLA is calculated.

The COLA is measured by the growth in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) from the first calendar quarter of the previous year to the first quarter of the current year. Whenever the increase is greater than three percent, an adjustment to the benefits paid each July is made. The July, 1983, COLA will be paid in January, 1984 under this provision, and will be based on the current law indexing period. Subsequent adjustments will be based on the CPI growth from the third quarter of one year to the next. The table below shows the CBO COLA assumptions under current law and under this provision.

| Assumed Percentage Increase in Social Security Benefits Under Current Law and Under S.1 |
|---------------------------------|---|---|---|---|---|
| Current law—July                | 4.1  | 4.5  | 4.2  | 4.0  | 3.8  |
| Proposed—January                | 0.0  | 4.1  | 4.6  | 4.4  | 4.1  | 3.8  |

This bill also guarantees that a January, 1984 COLA will be given, even if the rate of inflation is so low that the adjustment is less than three percent. Since CBO's current economic assumptions have this COLA adjustment at 4.1 percent in 1984, this clause has no cost effect.

The change in the COLA base and date of payment is expected to save $24 billion in Social Security benefits over the period, and an additional $1.3 billion in SSI and other benefits directly linked to this COLA. These COLA changes would increase food costs by $240 million over the period as incomes of food stamps recipients decline.

Taxation of 50 percent of Social Security and Railroad Retirement benefits for individuals with income above $25,000 and married couples above $32,000

This provision includes in taxpayers' adjusted gross income (AGI) half of Old Age, Survivors and Disability Insurance (OASDI) benefits when those benefits plus AGI exceed a threshold amount. For the purpose of taxing half of OASDI benefits, the interest from tax free bonds is added to AGI. The threshold is $25,000 for single returns, $32,000 for joint returns, and zero for married couples filing separately. This limit would be calculated including an individual's or couple's tax exempt income, although this income would not count towards determining one's marginal tax rates. The amount of benefits included in AGI would be the lesser of either 50 percent of benefits or the one-half of the balance of the taxpayers' summed income over the threshold.

The provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 and $15.5 billion from fiscal year 1984 through 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates based on the Social Security Trustees' II-B assumptions, with benefit amounts lowered to take account of the CBO's lower inflation (and therefore cost-of-living adjustments) projections.
Increase social security payroll tax (FICA) and 1984 tax credit

The provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax (FICA) increases for employees and employers. The payroll tax increases to 5.7 percent from 5.4 percent on January 1, 1984 instead of January 1, 1985. Another tax rate speedup increases the rate to 6.06 percent from 5.7 percent on January 1, 1988 and January 1, 1989. This increase was scheduled to take effect in 1990. The proposal also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

The FICA tax acceleration results in an income tax offset equal to 25 percent of the employer payroll tax contribution. The offset lowers income tax receipts because employers are assumed to pass back onto employees the full payroll tax increase in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The provision is estimated to raise OASDI unified budget revenues $6.4 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $19.0 billion from fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The income tax offset equals $2.2 billion from fiscal years 1984 through 1986. The revenue loss due to the payroll tax credit results in a $4.2 billion loss by fiscal year 1985.

The estimates are based upon CBO's latest economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Increase self-employed tax rate

The provision raises the self-employed payroll tax rate (SECA) to a level equal to the combined employer-employee contribution rate (including the FICA tax acceleration). In 1984 the SECA OASDI rate increases 3.35 percent and the HI rate increases 1.3 percent for a SECA rate of 14 percent. Further, the provision includes a payroll tax credit equal to 2.9 percent of total SECA contributions in 1984 and 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, and 2.1 percent in 1987 and 1988.

Reallocation of OASI and DI tax rates

This provision has no net cost to the federal government. It realigns the payroll tax portions allocated to the OASI and DI trust funds so as to keep the two funds' balances at approximately the same percentage of outlays at the start of each year.

Benefits to certain widows, divorced and disabled women

These provisions would: (1) allow the continuation of benefits to surviving, divorced or disabled spouses who remarry; (2) change the indexing procedure for benefits for those receiving deferred survivor benefits; (3) allow divorced spouses to draw benefits regardless of whether the former spouse is receiving benefits; and (4) increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers.
Together, these provisions would cost less than $200 million per year once fully effective in fiscal year 1985. The largest cost in this group of provisions would allow disabled widows or widowers ages 50 to 59 to receive benefits at an amount equal to which non-disabled widows or widowers over age 59 currently receive. This provision is estimated to cost $90 million in fiscal year 1984, $125 million in 1985 and an estimated $600 million over the five year period. Based on Social Security Administration data, approximately 200,000 recipients would receive $50 or 20 percent in added benefits per month under this provision.

In addition, a provision in this bill to allow women with children additional years of zero earnings in the calculation of their benefits.

Reimbursement to OASDHI trust funds for military wage credits and unearned OASDI checks

These provisions will credit the three Social Security trust funds with $23.8 billion as part of a transfer in 1983 from the general fund of the Treasury. A total of $22.4 billion of this transfer represents the present value of estimated benefits arising from Social Security credits granted to military personnel for service prior to 1957, and the amount of taxes on these credits between 1956 and 1983. The remaining transfer is for the estimated amounts of uncashed Social Security checks for past years. Checks uncashed for longer than six months will also be credited back to the trust funds in future years.

These estimates were provided by the Social Security Administration. Although they add large amounts to the trust funds, the provisions do not have any cost impact to the federal government as a whole. There are offsetting interfund transfers within the federal unified budget.

State payment speedup

This provision will require state and local governments to transfer their payroll tax collections to the Treasury under the same rules as private sector employers. Currently, state payments are made on the 30th day of each month. The provision requires that states transmit payroll tax collections to the federal government soon after their employees are paid. Therefore, the Treasury would receive state FICA collections more frequently. Thus, the transfer to the Treasury would be hastened, adding to trust fund revenues by $1.6 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $2.2 billion over the period.

This estimate was prepared by the Social Security Administration.

LONG-TERM FINANCING

This section of the bill reduced initial benefit levels beginning in the year 2000. There are no effects resulting from these provisions in the 1983 to 1988 period. In addition, the retirement age will be gradually raised from 65 to 66 beginning in the year 2000.
MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

These provisions are aimed mostly at work incentives for the elderly, and at insuring the financial soundness of the trust funds. The provisions would eliminate the retirement test for workers over the age of 65 beginning in 1990. This test reduces retirement benefits by $1 for each $2 in earnings over a given amount ($6,600 in 1983). A delayed retirement credit of 8 percent would also be phased in. This credit would increase from 3 percent the added benefit amount paid to a retiree for each year a worker decides to retire after age 65.

Another section of the bill would require Congress to act if the balances in the trust funds fall below 20 percent of a year’s outlays. If Congress does not, and interfund borrowing (also provided for in the bill) does not achieve this result in each fund, then the cost-of-living adjustments would be altered until the funds recover. The cost-of-living adjustment would be reduced first for those with higher benefits, but those with lower benefits would also ultimately be reduced, if necessary. This cost estimate does not assume any further cost-of-living adjustment reduction beyond the six month delay discussed above.

SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME PROVISIONS

This title of the bill raises SSI benefits and makes other minor changes in SSI and AFDC. Together these changes are estimated to add $728 million to federal outlays in fiscal year 1985.

Beginning July 1, 1983, SSI benefits would be increased by $20 a month for individuals living in their own household and by $30 a month for couples. These increased benefits would more than offset the effect on SSI recipients of the COLA delay. The largest part of the added cost comes from the benefit increase for current SSI beneficiaries. In addition, CBO estimates that about 125,000 persons would become new beneficiaries of SSI. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits. For these persons, CBO has assumed a participation rate of 25 percent (that is, of all the newly eligible, 25 percent would actually participate in SSI). Some of the other new beneficiaries would be persons previously eligible who would now choose to participate as a result of the increased benefit levels. There are also an estimated 65,000 persons who were receiving SSI state supplements only who would now become eligible for a small federal SSI payment.

Partially offsetting the costs in SSI from these benefit increases is a savings in the food stamp program as incomes of SSI beneficiaries rise. There are also added costs in Medicaid for those new SSI beneficiaries who also become newly eligible for Medicaid.

This title would also enable temporary residents of emergency public shelters to receive SSI for three months in any twelve-month period. This provision is estimated to cost $1 million in fiscal year 1983 and $3 million a year thereafter. In addition, Title IV would disregard in the determination of benefits any in-kind assistance based on need received by SSI and AFDC beneficiaries. This provision, which is effective only through September 30, 1984, is estimated to cost less than $500,000 a year in SSI and $1 million in 1983 and $2 million in 1984 in AFDC.
The bill also apparently includes a provision that would require the Social Security Administration to send notices to Social Security beneficiaries informing them of their potential eligibility for SSI and urging them to contact a local office if they think they would be eligible. No language is available for this provision and the extent of the notices could vary considerably. Hence, there is no cost estimate for the provision. However, costs under even a fairly limited provision could be significant, perhaps around $50 million. Not only would there be added administrative costs but it would be reasonable to assume that around 5 percent of those receiving a notice who are eligible for SSI would apply for SSI benefits.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

Federal supplemental compensation

This section of the bill would extend for six months the federal supplemental compensation program (FSC) now scheduled to terminate March 31, 1983. It would provide up to 14 weeks of additional unemployment compensation benefits for individuals exhausting regular or extended unemployment benefits after March 31, the maximum number of weeks provided varying with a state's insured unemployment rate (IUR). In addition, it would provide those persons who have exhausted their FSC entitlement before March 31 with up to 8 additional weeks of benefits, the maximum number of weeks again varying with a state's IUR. Also, it would allow those persons who have benefit entitlements remaining on September 30, 1983 to receive up to one-half the balance of those entitlements.

The estimate of the fiscal impact of this section of the bill is based upon estimates of the states' IURs and weeks compensated, and the determination of whether a state will be paying extended benefits which underlies the CBO baseline. It is assumed that the national seasonally adjusted IUR will be 4.4 percent for both quarters of the extension. Furthermore, it is assumed that 45 percent of those claimants in the current law FSC program would exhaust and collect added weeks of benefits during the extension. This point estimate is based upon the experience of exhaustees of the federal supplemental benefits program of 1975 to 1978.

CBO estimates that any FSC extension results in a reduction in AFDC and Food Stamp outlays as individuals who exhaust unemployment benefits and would otherwise draw benefits from these means-tested programs continue to draw jobless payments. It is estimated that the extension through September 1983 will cause AFDC and food stamp expenditures to drop by $142 million. In addition, CBO estimates that the six-month FSC extension will cause income tax revenues to increase in fiscal year 1984 by $142 million.

Loan reform

This bill contains a provision relating to limiting the federal tax credit reduction and to paying interest of federal unemployment compensation loans to states. CBO has provided no estimates of the fiscal impact of these provisions.
MEDICARE HOSPITAL INSURANCE PROVISIONS

Conforming changes in medicare premiums

The bill would postpone from July 1 to January 1 of the following year increases in Medicare premiums. Current premium amounts would apply during the interim. Future premiums (and the general revenue contribution to SMI) would be calculated on the basis of estimated incurred costs for the calendar year during which the premium would apply. Consonant with the changes made by TEFRA a year ago, SMI premiums would be set at 25 percent of cost per aged enrollee in calendar year 1984 and 1985, but would be limited in subsequent years by the cost-of-living increase in social security benefits in the previous January.

The estimated costs of this provision are the difference between projections of income from premiums under current law and under the amendment. Premium income under the amendment is the product of monthly enrollment projections and monthly premium amounts computed on the basis of projected incurred costs by calendar year.

General.—The bill would provide for reimbursing most hospitals for inpatient services provided to Medicare enrollees on the basis of payment amounts, varying by diagnosis, fixed in advance of the period in which they would apply. The provision would be effective with hospital cost-reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983. With the exceptions discussed below, for the first two cost-reporting periods affected, the payment rates would be set to assure that total Medicare payments for inpatient hospital services in affected hospitals would be neither greater nor less than under current law. If implemented faithfully, the provision would have no budgetary impact in fiscal years 1984 and 1985. In subsequent fiscal years, however, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, advised by a panel of experts, would have nearly unlimited discretion in setting payment rates. Given that discretion, CBO is unable to determine whether the prospective payment provision would result in federal costs or savings after fiscal year 1985.

The proposed mandatory Social Security coverage of employees of non-profit organizations could raise labor costs for some hospitals. Under the bill, Medicare’s share of any such costs would be additional costs to the Medicare program. CBO is unable to estimate those costs at this time.

Change in State Waiver Requirement.—The bill would phase out the requirement that the rate of increase in Medicare hospital costs in states currently reimbursing hospitals under demonstration agreements entered into after August 1982 be less than the national rate of increase in those costs. The provision would affect only Massachusetts and New York, both of which operate hospital rate-setting programs that have for several years held their hospital cost increases well below the national average. If those states were to continue to be as successful as they have been, the provision would have no budgetary impact. On the other hand, the provision would allow larger cost increases than current law. If Medicare hospital costs were to rise one percentage point faster under the provision, federal spending would increase by about $50 million in 1984.
6. Estimated cost to State and local governments: A number of the provisions of this bill would affect budgets of state and local governments. Their estimated net impact on categories of state and local expenditures is shown in the table below.

Basis of estimate: The acceleration of FICA rate increases would add to state and local government payroll costs. Currently, about 70 percent of total state and local government employment is covered by Social Security. State and local governments would have added payroll tax contributions of $291 million in fiscal year 1984 and $896 million over the entire 1984—88 period. The CBO estimate does not include a future cost to states who would no longer be able to withdraw from the Social Security system under this legislation.

The provision speeding up FICA deposits would require state and local governments to forward their FICA deposits about one month earlier. In the first fiscal year following enactment, states would show higher budgetary outlays for their (the employers') share of the FICA deposits which is one-half of the total savings shown for the federal government. In addition, state and local governments would lose small amounts of interest they would otherwise have earned on the balances over a one month period.

The changes in SSI would increase state and local government costs. Virtually all states supplement federal SSI benefits. The $20 benefit increase would raise state costs unless states were to lower their state supplement benefit levels. Typically, lowering of benefit levels requires action by state legislatures. The CBO cost estimate assumes that current state supplement levels remain in effect. Consequently, it represents a maximum cost to state and local governments.

The CBO cost estimate for the $20 benefit increase incorporates added costs to states and localities for current state supplement only beneficiaries, for new state supplement beneficiaries as a result of the new federal beneficiaries (about one-third of federal SSI beneficiaries receive state supplements), and for new state supplement only beneficiaries who are newly eligible. Costs of this provision are estimated to total $124 million in fiscal year 1985.

In addition to the effect of the $20 benefit increase, SSI state supplement costs would be increased by the COLA delays in SSI and OASDI. When COLAs are made, state supplement costs decline slightly because for state supplement only beneficiaries OASDI increases are larger than SSI increases. The costs of the COLA delays are estimated to total about $6 million a year.

The CBO cost estimate does not include any cost effect of the altered “pass-through” requirements of section 402. Current law requires states to pass through to SSI beneficiaries federal benefit increases unless state payment levels are above their December 1976 levels or unless aggregate state SSI supplement expenditures in the 12 months following a federal payment level increase exceed aggregate state expenditures in the 12 months prior to the federal change. This provision would require states to pass through the dollar amount of the COLA that would have occurred in July 1983 under current law and also all future federal benefit increases, even if state payment levels are above the December 1976 levels. Hence, in future years the provision would limit the flexibility of states to reduce supplement levels when federal SSI benefits increase, raising costs for some states. However, for other states—those with payment levels equal to their December 1976 levels—this provision would result in potential savings because they could pass through the July 1983 cost-of-living adjustment amount (roughly $11) rather than the full $20 benefit increase.

Expenditures of state and local governments would also rise because of higher Medicaid costs occasioned by the SSI benefit increase and the Medicare premium delay discussed earlier. The state and local government financing share of Medicaid averages about 46 percent.

The increased federal supplemental compensation benefits for the unemployed would lower state and local government expenditures in two ways. First, AFDC outlays would decline in fiscal year 1983. The state share of such outlays averages 46 percent. Second, outlays for state and local general assistance (GA) programs would also decline. GA programs are fully funded by state and local governments and are means-tested, typically serving those ineligible for AFDC and SSI. There are no reliable statistics on which to base an estimate of savings in GA. However, a rough estimate of the estimated effect in Michigan provided by Michigan analysts was used to estimate national effects. Michigan accounts for about 15 percent of GA expenditures nationwide.

The amendments made by this subsection shall be effective with respect to benefits payable under title XVI of the Social Security Act for months after June 1983.

Sec. 202. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) In the case of an individual whose primary insurance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who becomes entitled after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service'), the primary insurance amount of that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment."
(B) If paragraph (A) of this subsection would apply to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such computation the percentage of the individual's average indexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (A) shall be 32 percent. There shall then be computed (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall be reduced by an amount equal to one-half of the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to non-covered service to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance benefits are payable. The individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be computed under paragraph (A) of this subsection for the purpose of applying other provisions of this title.

(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under paragraph (A)(C)(i).
(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the payment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any computation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed, to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'periodic payment' includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments."

(b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:
"(5) In the case of an individual whose primary insurance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who becomes entitled after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings in nonecovered service, his primary insurance amount for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

"(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount (computed without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)), or

"(ii) one-half of the portion of the monthly periodic payment (or payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) attributable to nonecovered service to which that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits.

The amount of such periodic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.
"(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under subsection (a)(1)(C)(i)."

(c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(9) (A) In the case of an individual who becomes entitled to a periodic payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first month in which he becomes entitled to an old-age or disability insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount has been computed without regard to either such subsection or subsection (d)(5); such individual’s primary insurance amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effective with the first month of his concurrent entitlement to either such benefit and such periodic payment:

"(B) If an individual’s primary insurance amount has been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it becomes necessary to recompute that primary insurance amount under this subsection—

"(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount payable with respect to such primary insurance amount (other than in the case of the individual’s death); such increase shall be determined as though such primary insurance amount had initially been computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

"(ii) by reason of the individual's death, such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed without regard to (and as though it had never been computed with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

"(C) In the case of any individual whose primary insurance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount of the relevant periodic payment.

FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

SEC. 207. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III), by striking out "The increase shall be derived" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (5), the increase shall be derived".

(b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph (2) to become effective for monthly benefits payable for December 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secretary makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined trust funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which such December falls is less than 20 percent, be determined under paragraph (2) by substituting—

"(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined for purposes of subsection (b)(2)(A)(ii)) exceeds such average for the second preceding calendar year (and if no increase in such wages took place, the percentage shall be deemed to be zero; for

"(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under paragraph (2),

but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

"(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment would not be made under this subsection on account of the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-month period in such longer period which would have been effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

"(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as of that time.
"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'combined trust funds ratio' means the ratio of—

"(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any calendar year, to

"(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

"(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been determined on the basis of the substitute formula in subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding calendar year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust funds ratio is greater than 32 percent, the Secretary shall pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period beginning with the following December in amounts not to exceed—

(i) in the aggregate; a total amount which, according to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by which the balance in such trust funds on the date of such determination exceeds the amount necessary to effect a combined trust funds ratio of 82 percent for the following year; and

(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits for each month in such 12-month period, an amount equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all benefits paid to him during all previous years were less than the amounts which would have been paid to him but for the provisions of this paragraph.

Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage increase in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title for the months in which such additional amounts are being paid.

(E) In any case in which additional payments are made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 12-month period for which such additional benefits were made;
the percentage increase under this subsection applicable to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such additional payments (as measured with respect to payments which are not subject to reduction under any other provision of this Act).''.

(e) Only with respect to the determination made for January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year (for purposes of determining the increase under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for December of such year) shall be determined by using the actuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human services of the ratio of—

(1) the combined balance which will be available in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, at the close of business on December 31 of such calendar year, to

(2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 204 of such Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

(d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "", or, if greater, the percentage by which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5),"" after "are increased for such month".

"(iii) \( \frac{3}{2} \) of \( \frac{1}{2} \) percent for increment months earned after 2008.

ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

SEC. 112. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service') of at least one year's duration, the primary insurance amount of that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.

"(B)(ii) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such computation the percentage of the individual's average indexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii). There shall then be computed (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall be reduced by an amount equal to the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (E)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance benefits are payable. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable (but only counting any such months occurring after 1956) bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the purpose of applying other provisions of this title.

(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in this clause is—

(I) 78.4 percent, with respect to individuals who initially become eligible for old age or disability insurance benefits, or who die (before becoming eligible for such benefits) in 1984;

(II) 66.8 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1985;

(III) 55.2 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1986;

(IV) 43.6 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1987; and

(V) 32.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1988 or thereafter.
"(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

"(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

"(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the payment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any computation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

"(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed, to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

"(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'periodic payment' includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

“(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

“(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

“(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

“(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

“(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.

“(i) 90 percent, in the case of an individual who has 30 or more of such years of coverage;

“(ii) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who has 29 of such years;

“(iii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who has 28 of such years;

“(iv) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who has 27 of such years;

“(v) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who has 26 of such years; and

“(vi) 40 percent, in the case of an individual who has 25 of such years.”.

(b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(5)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings in noncovered service of at least one year’s duration, his primary insurance amount for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

"(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount (computed without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)), or

"(ii) the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (B)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment (or payment determined under subsection
(a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The amount of such periodic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.
“(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable fraction is—

“(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

“(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

“(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

“(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

“(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.”.

“(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under subsection (a)(1)(C)(i).”.

(c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
“(9)(A) In the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for a periodic payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first month in which he becomes eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount has been computed without regard to either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), such individual's primary insurance amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effective with the first month of his concurrent eligibility for either such benefit and such periodic payment.

“(B) If an individual's primary insurance amount has been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it becomes necessary to recompute that primary insurance amount under this subsection—

“(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount payable with respect to such primary insurance amount (other than in the case of the individual's death), such increase shall be determined as though such primary insurance amount had initially been computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

regard to (and as though it had never been computed with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5). “(C) In the case of any individual whose primary insurance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount of the relevant periodic payment.”.

(d) Sections 202(e)(2)(B)(i) and 202(f)(3)(B)(i) of such Act are each amended by striking out “section 215(f)(5) or (6)” and inserting in lieu thereof “section 215(f)(5), 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)”.

effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1983.

(2) In the case of an individual who was not entitled to a monthly benefit under title II of such Act for December 1983, no benefit shall be paid under such title by reason of

ADJUSTMENT TO COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WHEN TRUST FUND RATIO FALLS BELOW 20 PERCENT

Sec. 117. (a) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of the Social Security Act is amended, in the matter following clause (III), by striking out "The increase shall be derived" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (5), the increase shall be derived".

(b) Section 215(i) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5)(A) The amount of the increase under paragraph
(2) to become effective for monthly benefits payable for December 1988 or any December thereafter shall, if the Secretary makes a finding under this paragraph that the combined trust funds ratio (as defined in subparagraph (D)) as of the start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which such December falls is less than 20.0 percent, be determined under paragraph (2) by substituting—

"(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such average for the second preceding calendar year (and if no increase in such wages took place, the percentage shall be deemed to be zero), for

"(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under paragraph (2),

but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

"(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment would not be made under this subsection on account of the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-month period in such longer period which would have been effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

"(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as of that time.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'combined trust funds ratio' means the ratio of—

"(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, as of the start of business on January 1 of any calendar year, to

"(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age
and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

"(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been determined on the basis of the substitute formula in subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding calendar year, the Secretary determines that the combined trust funds ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, the Secretary shall pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period beginning with the following December in amounts not to exceed—

"(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, according to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by which the balance in such trust funds on the date of such determination exceeds the amount necessary to effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32.0 percent for the following year; and

"(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits for each month in such 12-month period, an amount equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all benefits paid to him during all previous years were less than the amounts which would have been paid to him but for the provisions of this paragraph.

Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage increase in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title for the months in which such additional amounts are being paid.

"(F) In any case in which additional payments are made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 12-month period for which such additional benefits were made, the percentage increase under this subsection applicatable to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such additional payments (as measured with respect to payments which are not subject to reduction under any other provision of this Act)."

(c) Only with respect to the determination made for January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year (for purposes of determining the increase under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for December of such year) shall be determined by using the actuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human services of the ratio of—

(2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of such Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

(d) Section 1617(a)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by inserting "; or, if greater, the percentage by which benefit amounts under title II would be increased for such month but for the provisions of section 215(i)(5)," after "are increased for such month".

the month preceding such cost-of-living increase; the percent-determine all other monthly benefits shall not be such as to be made under subparagraph (A), the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar year shall be treated as exceeding the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following such calendar year if ratio of the estimated combined balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund for such second following calendar year to the amounts estimated to be paid from all such Trust Funds during such second following calendar year exceeds the ratio of the estimated balances in all such Trust Funds to estimated payments from all such Trust Funds for such first following calendar year.

(d)(1) For any particular month after March 1983, a State shall be deemed to have met the requirements of paragraph (4) of subsection (a) if—

TITLE III—MEDICARE

MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES ON THE BASIS OF PROSPECTIVE RATES

Sec. 301. (a)(1) Section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: “Such term does not include costs of approved educational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital-related costs, as defined by the Secretary.”
(2) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sub-paragraph:

"(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985."

(3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the implementation of a system for including capital-related costs under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient hospital services, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after the effective date of the implementation of such a system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differently from costs of projects initiated before such date.

(b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding sections 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section";

(2) by inserting "(other than a subsection (d) hospital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))" in the matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after "of a hospital";

(3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1) following subparagraph (B), "(other than on the basis of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under subsection (d))” after “payable under this title”;

(4) by repealing paragraph (2);

(5) by inserting “and subsection (d) and except as provided in subsection (e)” in paragraph (3)(B) after “subparagraph (A)”;

(6) by inserting “or fiscal year” after “cost reporting period” each place it appears in paragraph (3)(B);

(7) by inserting “before the beginning of the period or year” in paragraph (3)(B) after “estimated by the Secretary”;

(8) by striking out “exceeds” in paragraph (3)(B) and inserting in lieu thereof “will exceed”; and

(9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982, to read as follows:

“(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code for 1954 for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was not subject to such taxes for the 12-month cost-reporting period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base year amount referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i) for such hospital applicable to such cost reporting period by the amount of such taxes paid or accrued by such hospital for such cost reporting period.

(c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and",

and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

"(D) the Secretary determines that the system will not preclude an eligible organization (as defined in section 1876(b)) from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to the organization's rate of payment for inpatient hospital services.

The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's hospital reimbursement control system is based on a payment methodology other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the ground that the amount of payments made under this title under such system must be less than the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining payment amounts at no more than a specified percentage increase above the payment amounts in a base period, the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining aggregate payment amounts below a national average percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpatient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's rate of increase in such payments for such services must be less than such national average rate of increase.";

(2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "requirement of paragraph (1)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1) and, if applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5),", and

(B) by inserting "(or, if applicable, in paragraph
(5))" in subparagraph (B) after "paragraph (B)".

(3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

"(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—
"(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system, and

"(B) with respect to that system a waiver of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act has been approved on or before (and which is in effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

With respect to a State system described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospital payments for individuals under this title, as compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments, with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test shall no longer apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in the same manner as under other waivers.

"(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—
“(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system;

“(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

“(i) is operated directly by the State or by an entity designated pursuant to State law,

“(ii) provides for payment of hospitals covered under the system under a methodology (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as well as any method for changes in the methodology) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hospital services during a specified period are established under the system prior to the defined rate period, and

“(iii) hospitals covered under the system will make such reports (in lieu of cost and other reports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise required under this title) as the Secretary may require in order to properly monitor assurances provided under this subsection;

“(C) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that operation of the system will not result in any change in hospital admission practices which result in—
“(i) a significant reduction in the proportion of patients (receiving hospital services covered under the system) who have no third-party coverage and who are unable to pay for hospital services,

“(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient hospital services for which payment is (or is likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for or costs of such services,

“(iii) the refusal to admit patients who would be expected to require unusually costly or prolonged treatment for reasons other than those related to the appropriateness of the care available at the hospital, or

“(iv) the refusal to provide emergency services to any person who is in need of emergency services if the hospital provides such services;

“(D) any change by the State in the system which has the effect of materially reducing payments to hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to which is likely to be materially affected by the change; and
"(E) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals.

The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

"(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount equal to the amount by which the payments under this title under such system for such period exceeded the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system."

(d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, is amended—

(1) by striking out "section 1814(b)" in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b)", and

(2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act under the following heading:

S 1 RS

"Elimination of Lesser-of-Cost-or-Charges Provision".

(e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1)(A) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital services (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

"(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

"(I) the target percentage (as defined in sub-paragraph (C)) of the hospital’s target amount for the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection
(b)(3)(A)) for the period, and

"(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in sub-paragraph (C)) of the applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

"(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges."
“(B) As used in this section, the term ‘subsection (d) hospital’ means a hospital located in one of the fifty States or the District of Columbia other than—

“(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section 1861(f)),

“(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the Secretary),

“(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predominantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

“(iv) a hospital which has an average inpatient length of stay (as determined by the Secretary) of greater than 25 days;

and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the Secretary). The exclusion of any category of hospitals or units under this subparagraph shall become inapplicable at such time as the Secretary determines that adequate data of clinical and statistical significance is available such that the Secretary may include such category in the payment system established under this subsection.

“(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, the 'target percentage' is 75 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 25 percent;

“(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, the 'target percentage' is 50 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 50 percent; and

“(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, the 'target percentage' is 25 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 75 percent.

“(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II), the 'applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate' for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

“(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, is a combined rate consisting of 25 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 75 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (2) for such discharges;

“(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 50 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 50 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges;
“(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 75 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 25 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3); and

“(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, is a rate equal to the national DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3).

“(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges in each such region, for which payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such rate shall also be determined for hospitals located in urban or rural areas within the United States and within each such region. Such determinations shall be made as follows:

“(A) Determining allowable individual hospital costs for base period.—The Secretary shall determine the allowable operating costs per discharge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available.
“(B) UPDATING FOR FISCAL YEAR 1984.—The Secretary shall update each amount determined under subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

“(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated average rate of change of hospital costs industry-wide between the cost reporting period used under such subparagraph and fiscal year 1983, and

“(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the applicable percentage increase (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

“(C) STANDARDIZING AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall standardize the amount updated under subparagraph (B) for each hospital by—

“(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs,

“(ii) adjusting for variations among hospitals by area and region in the average hospital wage level, and

“(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix among hospitals.

“(D) COMPUTING URBAN AND RURAL AVERAGES.—The Secretary shall compute an average of the standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (C) for the United States and for each region—
“(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in an urban area, and “(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in a rural area.

For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘region’ means one of the four census regions established by the Bureau of the Census, established by the Secretary; the term ‘urban area’ means an area within a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) or within such similar area as the Secretary has recognized under subsection (a) by regulation; and the term ‘rural area’ means any area outside such an area or similar area.

“(E) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment rates which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

“(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEutrality.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.
“(G) Computing DRG-specific rates for urban and rural hospitals in the United States and in each region.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate which is equal—

“(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States, and for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and

“(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

“(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States, and for hospitals located in a rural area in each region, to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals' costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

"(3) The Secretary shall determine an adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital for which payment may be made under part A of this title, as follows:

"(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban area within the United States and, for fiscal year
1985, for hospitals located in an urban area within each region, and for hospitals located in a rural area within the United States, and for fiscal year 1985, for hospitals located in a rural area within each region, and equal to the respective average standardized amount computed for the previous fiscal year under paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, increased by the applicable percentage increase under subsection (b)(3)(B) for that particular fiscal year.

"(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment amounts which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate for the fiscal year which is equal—

“(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and

“(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in a rural area in each region (and, if applicable, in a census division), to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and
"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion, (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges within these groups.

"(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secretary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which reflects the relative hospital resources used with respect to discharges classified within that group compared to discharges classified within other groups.

"(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and

(B), at least every five years, to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources.

“(D) The Commission (established under subsection (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the Secretary with respect to adjustments to be made under subparagraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evidence with respect to new practices, including the use of new technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

“(5)(A)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the lesser.

“(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a hospital may request additional payments in any case where changes, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the DRG rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is greater.

“(iii) The amount of such additional payment under clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

“(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total payments made based on DRG prospective payment rates for discharges in that year, and the DRG rates shall be reduced to compensate for any payments under this subparagraph in excess of such 6 percent.

“(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs of medical education, in an amount computed in the same manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2), except that in the computation under this subparagraph the Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to twice the factor provided under such regulations.

“(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions and adjustments to the payment amounts established under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of this title.
“(ii) With respect to a hospital which is a ‘sole community hospital’, payment under paragraph (1)(A)(i) for any cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after October 1, 1983, shall be determined using the target percentage and DRG percentage applicable for the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1983, and in no case shall total payments to such a hospital under this title for any cost reporting period beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be less than such payments to such hospital for the preceding cost reporting period. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘sole community hospital’ means a hospital that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geographical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

“(iii) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments to the payment amounts as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii.

“(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of reimbursement made for services described in section 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph
1 (2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being made.

2 "(ii) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause (i).

3 "(E) This paragraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals that receive payments in amounts computed under this subsection.

4 "(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, including any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

5 "(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review under section 1878 or otherwise of—

6 "(A) the determination of the requirement, or the proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursuant to subsection (e)(1), and

7 "(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).
"(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals beginning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applicable percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure that—

"(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(I) and (d)(5) for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital services of hospitals, are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983;

except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not apply for purposes of making computations under subsection (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

“(2) The Secretary shall provide for appointment of a Commission of independent experts, selected by the Office of Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the ‘Commission’) to review the applicable percentage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate percentage increase which should be effected for hospital inpatient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1985. In making its recommendations, the Commission shall take into account changes in the hospital market-basket described in subsection (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (including the quality and skill level of professional nursing required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effectiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

"(3) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on an appropriate increase factor which should be used (instead of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in that fiscal year.

"(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage increase which will apply for purposes of this section as the applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which will assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

"(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published in the Federal Register, not later than—

"(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), the Secretary's proposed determination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and

Such appointments shall be without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three years, except that the Director may provide initially for such shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the terms of no more than seven members shall expire in any one year. Members of the Commission shall be eligible for reappointment for no more than two consecutive terms.

"(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide expertise and experience in the provision and financing of health care, including but not limited to physicians and registered professional nurses, employers, third party payors, and individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of biomedical, health services, and health economics research.

The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of

Subject to approval by the Director, the Commission shall appoint one of the members of its staff as Executive Director.

The Commission is authorized to seek such assistance and support as may be required in the performance of its duties from appropriate Federal departments and agencies. Such assistance may include the provision of detailees, office space, and related services, with or without reimbursement, as agreed upon by the Commission and the head of the appropriate department or agency.

“(D) While serving on the business of the Commission (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving away from home and his regular place of business, a member may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commission.

"(E) The Executive Director shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

"(v) prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems necessary with respect to the internal organization and operation of the Commission.

"(H) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2)(A), the Commission shall collect and assess information on medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the safety, efficiency, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect and assess factual information, giving special attention to the needs of updating existing DRG's, establishing new DRG's, and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in delivering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting and assessing information, the Commission shall—

"(i) utilize existing information, both published and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed either by its own staff or under other arrangements made in accordance with this part; and

The Federal Liaison Committee shall consist of delegates of those Federal agencies which can, in the judgment of the Commission, play a significant role in assisting the Commission. The Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration shall serve as the Chairman of the Committee. Members of the Committee shall serve without additional compensation. The Committee shall meet at the call of the Chairman of the Committee, or at the call of the Chairman of the Commission, but not less than six times a year.

“(K)(i) The Office shall report to the Congress, from time to time, on the functioning and progress of the Commission and on the status of the assessment of medical proce-

annual for the first three years of the Commission’s operation and biannual thereafter, and shall be delivered to the Congress by March 15 of each reporting year.

“(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all deliberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediately upon its request.

“(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this part, the Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Com-

Any such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to be made under part B but that the payments to such hospital under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of the billings for such services under part B. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may provide for such methods of payments under part A as is appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institution.

REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Sec. 303. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the “Secretary”) shall study and report to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be included within the prospective payment amounts computed under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment methodology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of physician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, legislative recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for determining the amount of the payments for physicians' services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

(C) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of studies on—

(iii) the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related groups, and the advisability and feasibility of providing for such modifications; and

(iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the payment methodology under such section to payment by all payors for inpatient hospital services.

(3) Prior to April 1, 1985, the Secretary shall complete a study and make legislative recommendations to the Congress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole community hospitals which takes into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addition, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an information transfer between parts A and B, particularly with respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made under part A, and no adjustment is made in the reimbursement to the admitting physician, or physicians. The Secretary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas. The Secretary shall also on the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the cost of care to patients financed by both public programs and private payors.

(2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of a State which has a demonstration project, for payment of hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act approved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, which (A) is in effect as of March 1, 1983, and (B) was entered into after August 1982, the terms of the demonstration agreement shall be modified so that the percentage by which such demonstration project is required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in medicare hospital costs shall be decreased by one-half of one percentage point per contract year, beginning with the contract year begining in 1983.

(c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act—

(1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior Health Services (according to terms and conditions as specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care demonstration project, and

(2) the application of the Department of Health Services, State of California, dated November 1, 1982, pursuant to section 1115 of the Social Security Act, for the waiver of certain requirements of title XIX of such Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a demonstration project for capitated reimbursement for comprehensive long-term care services involving On Lok Senior Health Services.

(d) The Secretary shall continue demonstrations with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or methods of payment.

SEC. 304. (a)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this title apply to items and services furnished by or under arrangements with a hospital beginning with its first cost reporting period that begins on or after October 1, 1983. (b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction in the payment amount under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if the admission has occurred before a hospital’s first cost reporting period that begins after September 1983, to take into account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items and services furnished before that period.
(c)(1) The Secretary shall cause to be published in the Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG prospective payment rates established under subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no later than September 1, 1983, and allow for a period of public comment thereon. The DRG prospective payment rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the necessity for consideration of comments received, but the Secretary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after considering those comments.

(2) A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a DRG prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modification is published in the Federal Register.

Sec. 305. (a) Section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out
“October 1, 1982” and inserting in lieu thereof “October 1, 1983”.

(b) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to the Congress, with respect to the effect which the implementation of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 would have on hospital-based skilled nursing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the patient populations served by such facilities and by community-based skilled nursing facilities.

SHIFT IN PART B PREMIUM TO COINCIDE WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE

Sec. 306. (a) Section 1839 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), and (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

“(a)(1) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age (as defined in section 216(a)) which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

“(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled under this part for each month after December 1983 shall, except as provided in subsections (b) and (e), be the amount determined under paragraph (3).

“(3) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the monthly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal to the smaller of—individuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-age insurance benefits for December of the year preceding the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly premium rate by the same percentage by which that primary insurance amount is increased when, by reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals for the following December.

“(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age, determined according to paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar year, or

Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced, issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assumptions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the derivation of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

"(4) The Secretary shall also, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate under this paragraph, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.”.

such individual's eligibility for additional weeks of compensation by reason of the amendments made by this part shall not be limited or terminated by reason of any event, or failure to meet any requirement of law relating to eligibility for unemployment compensation, occurring after the date of such exhaustion of rights and before April 1, 1983 (and the period after such exhaustion and before April 1, 1983, shall not be counted for purposes of determining the expiration of the two years following the end of his benefit year for purposes of section 602(b) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982).

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any State fails or refuses, within the 3-week period beginning on the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agreement, the Secretary of Labor shall terminate such agreement effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before such 3-week period.
PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND CREDIT REDUCTIONS

DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

Sec. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section for any year after December 31, 1982, and before January 1, 1986, a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). Interest shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C).

"(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State must—

"(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982, which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or the net solvency of its unemployment system (as determined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954); and

after referred to as a 'solvency effort') by a combined

1 total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such 2 revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect
3 without such State action).

4 In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over 5 a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such 6 year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the 7 case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall 8 be 40 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applica-9 ble percentage shall be 50 percent.

"(C)(i) The base year is the first year for which deferral 11 under this provision is granted. The Secretary of Labor shall 12 estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To deter-
13 mine whether a State meets the requirements of subpara-14 graph (B)(ii), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the per-15 centage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with 16 the application of the action referred to in subparagraph
17 (B)(ii) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such 18 benefits and taxes would have been without the application of 19 such action. In making this determination, the Secretary 20 shall deem the application of the action referred to in subpar-21 agraph (B)(ii) to have been effective for the base year to the 22 same extent as such action is effective for the year following 23 the base year. Once a deferral is approved a State must con-24 tinue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall result in the State being required to make immediate payment of all deferred interest.

"(ii) Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the requirement of subparagraph (B).

"(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than the 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent required under subpar-agraph (B), the deferred interest shall be computed at an interest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise applicable interest rate."

(b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out "and before January 1, 1988".

CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

Sec. 412. (a)(1) Section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof
the following new paragraph:

"(8) PARTIAL LIMITATION.—

"(A) In the case of a State which would meet the requirements of this subsection for a taxable year prior to 1987 but for its failure to meet one of the requirements contained in subpara-graph (C) or (D) of paragraph (2), the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

"(B) In the case of a State described in sub-paragraph (A) which also meets the requirements of section 1202(b)(8)(B) with respect to such taxable year, the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be further reduced by an additional 0.1 percentage point."

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to taxable year 1983 and taxable years thereafter.

unemployment compensation law" and inserting in lieu thereof “the total of the wages attributable to such State subject to taxation under this chapter”.

(b) Sections 3302(c)(2)(B)(i) and 3302(c)(4) of such Code are each amended by striking out “2.7” and inserting in lieu thereof “2.7 multiplied by the ratio of the wage base under this chapter divided by the estimated average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which the determination is to be made”.

“(1) In addition to any other reduction required under this section, if any accrued interest under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act has not been paid by a State within one year after the date such payment is otherwise required to be paid, then the total credits (after applying any other provisions of this section) otherwise allowable under this section for the following taxable year, in the case of a taxpayer subject to the unemployment compensation law of such State, shall be reduced by an amount equal to 0.1 percent of the amount of the wages paid by such taxpayer during such taxable year which are attributable to such State.

“(2) Any increase in the amount of tax paid by reason of paragraph (1) shall be first applied as a payment of such overdue interest, and any remainder shall be applied as a repayment of principal under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act.”.

ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

Sec. 112. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(7)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subparagraph (D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings for service which did not constitute ‘employment’ as defined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as ‘noncovered service’) of at least one year’s duration, the primary insurance amount of that individual during his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which the individual becomes eligible for such benefits, and shall be periodically recomputed thereafter at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.

"(B)(ii) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply to that individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that for purposes of such computation the percentage of the individual's average indexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii).

There shall then be computed (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under this subsection (other than this paragraph), except that such second amount shall be reduced by an amount equal to the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (E)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service to which the individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the month for which such old-age or disability insurance benefits are payable. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable (but only counting any such months occurring after 1956) bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the purpose of applying other provisions of this title.

"(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in this clause is—

"(I) 78.4 percent, with respect to individuals who initially become eligible for old age or disability insurance benefits, or who die (before becoming eligible for such benefits) in 1984;

"(II) 66.8 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1985;

"(III) 55.2 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1986;

"(IV) 43.6 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1987; and

"(V) 32.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible or die in 1988 or thereafter.
“(C) No primary insurance amount may be reduced by reason of this paragraph below the amount of the primary insurance amount as determined under paragraph (1)(C)(i).

“(D)(i) Any periodic payment that otherwise meets the requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

“(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the payment is deemed to be increased (for the purpose of any computation under this paragraph) by such reduction.

“(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that is subsequent to the month in which he becomes eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that payment for purposes of subparagraph (B) shall be deemed to be the amount to which he is, or is deemed, to become entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

“(iv) For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘periodic payment’ includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

“(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

“(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

“(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

“(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

“(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.

“(i) 90 percent, in the case of an individual who has 30 or more of such years of coverage;

“(ii) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who has 29 of such years;

“(iii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who has 28 of such years;

“(iv) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who has 27 of such years;

“(v) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who has 26 of such years; and

“(vi) 40 percent, in the case of an individual who has 25 of such years.”.

(b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(5)(A) In the case of an individual who was not eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit for December 1983 and whose primary insurance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, and who first becomes eligible after 1983 to a monthly periodic payment (or a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(D)) based (in whole or in part) upon his earnings in noncovered service of at least one year's duration, his primary insurance amount for purposes of his entitlement to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

“(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount (computed without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)), or “(ii) the applicable fraction (as determined under subparagraph (B)) of the portion of the monthly periodic payment (or payment determined under subsection

(a)(7)(D)) attributable to noncovered service to which
that individual is entitled (or deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits.

For purposes of the preceding sentence, the portion of the monthly periodic payment attributable to noncovered service shall be that portion of such payment which bears the same ratio to the amount of such payment as the number of months of service in noncovered service to which such benefit is attributable bears to the total number of months of service to which such benefit is attributable. The amount of such periodic payment for purposes of clause (ii) shall be periodically
recomputed at such times as the Secretary determines there has been a significant change in the amount of such periodic payment.
“(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable fraction is—

“(i) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1984 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifteenth,

“(ii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1985 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), two-fifteenths,

“(iii) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1986 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-fifth,

“(iv) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1987 to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), four-fifteenths, and

“(v) in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible during 1988 or thereafter to a monthly periodic payment described in subparagraph (A), one-third.”.

c Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
“(9)(A) In the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for a periodic payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(A) or (a)(7)(D) in a month subsequent to the first month in which he becomes eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount has been computed without regard to either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), such individual’s primary insurance amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effective with the first month of his concurrent eligibility for either such benefit and such periodic payment.

“(B) If an individual’s primary insurance amount has been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it becomes necessary to recomput[e this subsection—

“(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount payable with respect to such primary insurance amount (other than in the case of the individual’s death), such increase shall be determined as though such primary insurance amount had initially been computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

“(ii) by reason of the individual’s death, such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed without regard to (and as though it had never been computed with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5).

“(C) In the case of any individual whose primary insurance amount is subject to the requirements of subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), the amount of such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed as may be required under such subsections by reason of a significant change in the amount of the relevant periodic payment.”.

Act are each amended by striking out “section 215(f)(5) or (6)” and inserting in lieu thereof “section 215(f)(5), 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)”.

start of business on January 1 of the calendar year in which such December falls is less than 20.0 percent, be determined under paragraph (2) by substituting—

"(i) the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the average of the total wages for the preceding calendar year (as determined for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii)) exceeds such average for the second preceding calendar year (and if no increase in such wages took place, the percentage shall be deemed to be zero), for but only if the percentage determined under clause (i) is less than the percentage determined under clause (ii).

"(ii) the percentage otherwise applicable under paragraph (2),

"(B) In any case in which a cost-of-living adjustment would not be made under this subsection on account of the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index being less than 3 percent, no such cost-of-living increase shall be made by reason of this paragraph. For purposes of any subsequent determination of a cost-of-living increase based upon a period of more than 12 months, the percentage of the cost-of-living increase (if any) to be applied under paragraph (2) shall be the sum of the percentage increases for each relevant 12-month period in such longer period which would have been effective under this subsection (including this paragraph) but for the provision of paragraph (1) which limits such increases only to cases in which the relevant increase in the Consumer Price Index is equal to or greater than 3 percent.

"(C) The Secretary shall make the finding with respect to the combined trust funds ratio (as of the start of business on January 1 of each calendar year) on October 1 of each calendar year, based upon the most recent data available as of that time.

"(D) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘combined trust funds ratio’ means the ratio of—

“(ii) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

"(E) If any increase under paragraph (2) has been determined on the basis of the substitute formula in subpara-graph (A)(i) of this paragraph, and, for any succeeding calendar year; the Secretary determines that the combined trust funds ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, the Secretary shall pay additional benefits with respect to the 12-month period beginning with the following December in amounts not to exceed—

"(i) in the aggregate, a total amount which, according to actuarial estimate, equals the amount by which the balance in such trust funds on the date of such determination exceeds the amount necessary to effect a combined trust funds ratio of 32.0 percent for the following year; and

"(ii) with respect to any individual, for benefits for each month in such 12-month period, an amount equal to one-twelfth of the total amount by which all benefits paid to him during all previous years were less than the amounts which would have been paid to him but for the provisions of this paragraph.

Such additional benefits shall be paid as a percentage increase in the monthly benefits otherwise payable for months during such 12-month period. If there are not sufficient funds available to pay additional benefits in the full amount to all individuals (taking into account the limitation in clause (i)), amounts paid under this subparagraph shall be paid on a pro rata basis to all individuals who are entitled to any such amount and are entitled to a benefit under this title for the months in which such additional amounts are being paid.

"(F) In any case in which additional payments are made by reason of the provisions of subparagraph (E), for purposes of determining benefit amounts for months after the 12-month period for which such additional benefits were made, the percentage increase under this subsection applicable to benefits payable for such 12-month period shall be deemed to be the actual percentage achieved by reason of such additional payments (as measured with respect to payments which are not subject to reduction under any other provision of this Act)."

(c) Only with respect to the determination made for January 1, 1988, the combined trust fund ratio for such year (for purposes of determining the increase under section 215(i) of the Social Security Act for benefits payable for December of such year) shall be determined by using the actuarial estimate of the Secretary of Health and Human services of the ratio of—
(1) the combined balance which will be available in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, reduced by the amount of any outstanding loan (including interest thereon) from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, at the close of business on December 31 of such calendar year, to be made under subparagraph (A), the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the second calendar year following such calendar year shall be treated as exceeding the estimated OASDI trust fund ratio for the first calendar year following such calendar year if ratio of the estimated combined balances in the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund for such second following calendar year to the amounts estimated to be paid from all such Trust Funds during such second following calendar year exceeds the ratio of the estimated balances in all such Trust Funds to estimated payments from all such Trust Funds for such first following calendar year.”.

(2) the amount estimated by the Secretary to be the total amount to be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for calendar year 1988 for all purposes authorized by section 201 of such Act, but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds, and reducing the amount of any transfer to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from the Railroad Retirement Account.

Resolved, That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1, an Act to implement the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and with respect to the consideration of H.R. 1000, dealing with the same subject matter. Such waiver is necessary because the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform require prompt action in order to ensure the stability of the social security system.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983
Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1000, the social security measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
A bill (H.R. 1000) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, the situation is this: It appears to me we are not going to be able to negotiate a compromise settlement of the jobs bill dilemma today. I regret that. I must say that all of the parties to this matter have given their best efforts and have done so conscientiously. I commend them all for it. Senator Kasten and Senator Dole have tried and tried repeatedly to reconcile the differences in their point of view on this matter without success. Finally, we have arrived at the place where we have to move on.

This in no way signals that we are not going to pass a jobs bill. We are going to pass a jobs bill if it is humanly possible for that to be done. But there is a filed against further debate on the jobs bill that will not mature until Friday. In my judgment, there was simply no reason for us to sit here in quorum calls and what appeared to be endless efforts to negotiate a settlement on this matter until Friday. I think we can make good use of the time between now and Friday, 1 hour after we convene, by considering aspects of the Social Security bill and perhaps even passing it. I hope we can pass it.

On Friday, the cloture motion on the jobs bill will occur as the pending business. If cloture is invoked, we shall be back on the jobs bill, whether we finish social security or not. I hope we have finished social security and we can continue then with the jobs bill in an orderly way.

The Senate should be on notice, Mr. President, of the strong possibility of a Saturday session.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. On behalf of Mr. Moynihan, I make the following unanimous-consent request: I ask unanimous consent that floor privileges be granted during the disposition of the pending social security measure to Dr. John Hambor, Director of the Division of Economic Research in Office of Research & Statistics, Social Security Administration. He is serving as a legislative fellow in the office of Senator Moynihan at this time. It is a bit of an unusual request, but I hope the Senate will grant it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I express my appreciation to the minority leader for his courtesy in this matter and to the Senator from West Virginia, Dr. Hambor, a respected authority on the issues of fact that will come before the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TITLE III—MEDICARE

MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL
SERVICES ON THE BASIS OF PROSPECTIVE RATES

Sec. 301. (a)(1) Section 1886(a)(4) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: “Such term does not include costs of approved educational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital-related costs, as defined by the Secretary.”.
(2) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new sub-paragraph:

"(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985."

(3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the implementation of a system for including capital-related costs under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient hospital services, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after the effective date of the implementation of such a system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differently from costs of projects initiated before such date.

(b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "Notwithstanding sections 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections" in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof "Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section";

(2) by inserting "(other than a subsection (d) hospital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))" in the matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after "of a hospital";

(3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1) following subparagraph (B), "(other than on the basis of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under subsection (d))” after “payable under this title”; (4) by repealing paragraph (2); (5) by inserting “and subsection (d) and except as provided in subsection (e)” in paragraph (3)(B) after “subparagraph (A)”; (6) by inserting “or fiscal year” after “cost reporting period” each place it appears in paragraph (3)(B); (7) by inserting “before the beginning of the period or year” in paragraph (3)(B) after “estimated by the Secretary”; (8) by striking out “exceeds” in paragraph (3)(B) and inserting in lieu thereof “will exceed”; and (9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982, to read as follows: “(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code for 1954 for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was not subject to such taxes for the 12-month cost-reporting period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base year amount referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i) for such hospital applicable to such cost reporting period by the amount of such taxes paid or accrued by such hospital for such cost reporting period.".

(c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),

(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof "; and",

and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's hospital reimbursement control system is based on a payment methodology other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the ground that the amount of payments made under this title under such system must be less than the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining payment amounts at no more than a specified percentage increase above the payment amounts in a base period, the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining aggregate payment amounts below a national average percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpatient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State’s rate of increase in such payments for such services must be less than such national average rate of increase.

(2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—

(A) by striking out “requirement of paragraph (1)(A)” and inserting in lieu thereof “requirements of subparagraphs (A) and (D) of paragraph (1) and, if applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5),”, and

(B) by inserting “(or, if applicable, in paragraph (5))” in subparagraph (B) after “paragraph (1)”.

(3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

“(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—
"(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system, and

"(B) with respect to that system a waiver of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act has been approved on or before (and which is in effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

With respect to a State system described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospital payments for individuals under this title, as compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments, with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test shall no longer apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in the same manner as under other waivers.

"(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—
"(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system;

"(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

"(i) is operated directly by the State or by an entity designated pursuant to State law,

"(ii) provides for payment of hospitals covered under the system under a methodology (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as well as any method for changes in the methodology) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hospital services during a specified period are established under the system prior to the defined rate period, and

"(iii) hospitals covered under the system will make such reports (in lieu of cost and other reports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise required under this title) as the Secretary may require in order to properly monitor assurances provided under this subsection;

"(C) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that operation of the system will not result in any change in hospital admission practices which result in—
“(i) a significant reduction in the proportion of patients (receiving hospital services covered under the system) who have no third-party coverage and who are unable to pay for hospital services,

“(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient hospital services for which payment is (or is likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for or costs of such services,

“(iii) the refusal to admit patients who would be expected to require unusually costly or prolonged treatment for reasons other than those related to the appropriateness of the care available at the hospital, or

“(iv) the refusal to provide emergency services to any person who is in need of emergency services if the hospital provides such services;

“(D) any change by the State in the system which has the effect of materially reducing payments to hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to which is likely to be materially affected by the change; and
(E) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals.

The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount equal to the amount by which the payments under this title under such system for such period exceeded the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system.

(d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, is amended—

(1) by striking out "section 1814(b)" in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b)", and

(2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act
under the following heading:

"Elimination of Lesser-of-Cost-or-Charges Provision".

(e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1)(A) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital services (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

"(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

"(I) the target percentage (as defined in sub-paragraph (C)) of the hospital's target amount for the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection
(b)(3)(A)) for the period, and

"(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in sub-paragraph (C)) of the applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

"(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges."

“(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section 1861(f)),

“(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the Secretary),

“(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predominantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the Secretary). The exclusion of any category of hospitals or units under this subparagraph shall become inapplicable at such time as the Secretary determines that adequate data of clinical and statistical significance is available such that the Secretary may include such category in the payment system established under this subsection.

"(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, the 'target percentage' is 75 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 25 percent;

(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, the 'target percentage' is 50 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 50 percent; and

(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, the 'target percentage' is 25 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 75 percent.

"(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(i)(II), the 'applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate' for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, is a combined rate consisting of 25 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 75 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (2) for such discharges;

(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 50 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 50 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges;
“(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 75 percent of the national DRG prospective payment rate, and 25 percent of the regional DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3); and

“(iv) on or after October 1, 1986, is a rate equal to the national DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3).

“(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges in each such region, for which payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such rate shall also be determined for hospitals located in urban or rural areas within the United States and within each such region. Such determinations shall be made as follows:

“(A) Determining Allowable Individual Hospital Costs for Base Period.—The Secretary shall determine the allowable operating costs per discharge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available.
“(B) Updating for Fiscal Year 1984.—The Secretary shall update each amount determined under subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

“(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated average rate of change of hospital costs industry-wide between the cost reporting period used under such subparagraph and fiscal year 1983, and

“(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the applicable percentage increase (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

“(C) Standardizing Amounts.—The Secretary shall standardize the amount updated under subparagraph (B) for each hospital by—

“(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs,

“(ii) adjusting for variations among hospitals by area and region in the average hospital wage level, and

“(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix among hospitals.

“(D) Computing Urban and Rural Averages.—The Secretary shall compute an average of the standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (C) for the United States and for each region—
“(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in an urban area, and

“(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in a rural area.

For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘region’ means one of the four census regions established by the Bureau of the Census, established by the Secretary; the term ‘urban area’ means an area within a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) or within such similar area as the Secretary has recognized under subsection (a) by regulation; and the term ‘rural area’ means any area outside such an area or similar area.

“(E) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment rates which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

“(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.
"(G) Computing DRG-specific rates for urban and rural hospitals in the United States and in each region.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate which is equal—

"(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States, and for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

"(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States, and for hospitals located in a rural area in each region, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and

“(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

“(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

“(3) The Secretary shall determine an adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital for which payment may be made under part A of this title, as follows:

“(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban area within the United States and, for fiscal year
1985, for hospitals located in an urban area within each region, and for hospitals located in a rural area within the United States, and for fiscal year 1985, for hospitals located in a rural area within each region, and equal to the respective average standardized amount computed for the previous fiscal year under paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, increased by the applicable percentage increase under subsection (b)(3)(B) for that particular fiscal year.

"(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment amounts which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a DRG prospective payment rate for the fiscal year which is equal—

“(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in an urban area in each region, to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region, and “(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosisrelated group; and

“(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States and (if applicable) for hospitals located in a rural area in each region (and, if applicable, in a census division), to the product of—

“(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or in that region, and
"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion, (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals’ costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national or regional average hospital wage level as appropriate.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges within these groups.

"(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secretary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which reflects the relative hospital resources used with respect to discharges classified within that group compared to discharges classified within other groups.

"(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and (B), at least every five years, to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources.

(D) The Commission (established under subsection (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the Secretary with respect to adjustments to be made under subparagraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evidence with respect to new practices, including the use of new technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

(5)(A)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the lesser.

(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a hospital may request additional payments in any case where changes, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the DRG rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is greater.

(iii) The amount of such additional payment under clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

"(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total payments made based on DRG prospective payment rates for discharges in that year, and the DRG rates shall be reduced to compensate for any payments under this subparagraph in excess of such 6 percent.

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs of medical education, in an amount computed in the same manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2), except that in the computation under this subparagraph the Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to twice the factor provided under such regulations.

"(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions and adjustments to the payment amounts established under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of this title.
“(ii) With respect to a hospital which is a ‘sole community hospital’, payment under paragraph (1)(A)(i) for any cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after October 1, 1983, shall be determined using the target percentage and DRG percentage applicable for the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1983, and in no case shall total payments to such a hospital under this title for any cost reporting period beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be less than such payments to such hospital for the preceding cost reporting period. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘sole community hospital’ means a hospital that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geographical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

“(iii) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments to the payment amounts as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii.

“(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of reimbursement made for services described in section 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph
(2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being made.

"(ii) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause (i).

"(E) This paragraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals that receive payments in amounts computed under this subsection.

"(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, including any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

"(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review under section 1878 or otherwise of—

(A) the determination of the requirement, or the proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursuant to subsection (e)(1), and

(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).
“(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals beginning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applicable percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure that—

“(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(I) and (d)(5) for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital services of hospitals, are not greater or less than—

“(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983; except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not apply for purposes of making computations under subsection (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

“(B) For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide under subsections (d)(2)(F) and (d)(3)(C) for such equal proportional adjustment in each of the average standardized amounts otherwise computed for that fiscal year as may be necessary to assure that—are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the DRG percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

"(2) The Secretary shall provide for appointment of a Commission of independent experts, selected by the Office of Technology Assessment (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as the ‘Commission’) to review the applicable percentage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate percentage increase which should be effected for hospital inpatient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1985. In making its recommendations, the Commission shall take into account changes in the hospital market-basket described in subsection (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (including the quality and skill level of professional nursing required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effectiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

"(3) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on an appropriate increase factor which should be used (instead of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in that fiscal year.

"(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage increase which will apply for purposes of this section as the applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which will assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

"(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published in the Federal Register, not later than—

"(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1985), the Secretary's proposed determination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and “(B) the September 1 before such fiscal year, the Secretary’s final determination under such paragraph for that year.

The Secretary shall include in the publication referred to in subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year the report of the Commission’s recommendations submitted under paragraph (3) for that fiscal year.

“(6)(A) The Commission shall consist of fifteen individuals selected and appointed by the Director of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (hereafter in this part referred to as the ‘Director’ and the ‘Office’, respectively). Such appointments shall be without regard to the provisions of title 5, United States Code, governing appointments in the competitive service. Members of the Commission shall be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three years, except that the Director may provide initially for such shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the terms of no more than seven members shall expire in any one year. Members of the Commission shall be eligible for reappointment for no more than two consecutive terms.

“(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide expertise and experience in the provision and financing of health care, including but not limited to physicians and registered professional nurses, employers, third party payors, and individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of biomedical, health services, and health economics research. The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of groups, including but not limited to—

"(i) national organizations representing physicians, including medical specialty organizations and registered professional nurses and other skilled health professionals;

"(ii) national organizations representing hospitals, including teaching hospitals; and

"(iii) national organizations representing the business community, health benefit programs, labor, and the elderly.

"(C) The Commission may employ such personnel (not to exceed 50) as may be necessary to carry out its duties. Subject to approval by the Director, the Commission shall appoint one of the members of its staff as Executive Director. The Commission is authorized to seek such assistance and support as may be required in the performance of its duties from appropriate Federal departments and agencies. Such assistance may include the provision of detailees, office space, and related services, with or without reimbursement, as agreed upon by the Commission and the head of the appropriate department or agency.

"(D) While serving on the business of the Commission (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving away from home and his regular place of business, a member may be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commis-

"(E) The Executive Director shall be compensated at the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code.

"(F) The Executive Director shall, in accordance with such policies as the Commission may prescribe, appoint and fix the rates of compensation of such personnel as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this part. Such rates of compensation may not exceed the level specified in subpar-agraph (E).

"(G) The Commission shall have the authority to—

"(i) enter into contracts or make other arrangements, as may be necessary for the conduct of the work of the Commission, with any competent personnel or organization, with or without reimbursement, without performance or other bonds, and without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 5);

"(ii) make advance, progress, and other payments which relate to the work of the Commission without regard to the provisions of section 3324 of title 31, United States Code;

"(iii) accept services of voluntary and uncompensated personnel that are necessary for the conduct of the work of the Commission and provide transportation and subsistence as authorized by section 5703 of title 5, United States Code, for persons serving without compensation;

"(iv) acquire by purchase, lease, loan, or gift, and hold and dispose of by sale, lease, or loan, real and personal property of all kinds that is necessary for, or results from, the exercise of authority granted by this part (without regard to the first section of the Act of March 3, 1877 (19 Stat. 370; chapter 106; 40 U.S.C. 34)); and

"(v) prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems necessary with respect to the internal organization and operation of the Commission.

"(H) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2)(A), the Commission shall collect and assess information on medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the safety, efficiency, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect and assess factual information, giving special attention to the needs of updating existing DRG’s, establishing new DRG’s, and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in delivering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting and assessing information, the Commission shall—

"(i) utilize existing information, both published and unpublished, where possible, collected and assessed either by its own staff or under other arrangements made in accordance with this part; and

"(ii) carry out, or award grants or contracts for, original research where existing information is inadequate for the development of useful and valid guidelines by the Commission.

"(I) The Commission shall have access to such relevant information and data as may be available from appropriate Federal agencies. The Commission shall maintain the confidentiality of all confidential information it receives."
“(J) There shall be established a Federal Liaison Committee to the Commission (hereafter in this part referred to as the ‘Committee’). The Committee shall—

“(2) advise the Commission with respect to the activities of Federal agencies that relate to the duties of the Commission or to particular medical procedures and services under study, or being considered for study, by the Commission.

The Federal Liaison Committee shall consist of delegates of those Federal agencies which can, in the judgment of the Commission, play a significant role in assisting the Commission. The Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration shall serve as the Chairman of the Committee.

Members of the Committee shall serve without additional compensation. The Committee shall meet at the call of the Chairman of the Committee, or at the call of the Chairman of the Commission, but not less than six times a year.

“(K)(i) The Office shall report to the Congress, from time to time, on the functioning and progress of the Commission and on the status of the assessment of medical procedures and services by the Commission. Such reports shall be annual for the first three years of the Commission’s operation and biannual thereafter, and shall be delivered to the Congress by March 15 of each reporting year.

“(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all deliberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediately upon its request.

“(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this part, the Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Commission. The Office shall be reimbursed for such funds by the Commission from the appropriations made with respect to the Commission. The Office shall carry out such duties subject to approval of the Technology Assessment Board, as prescribed by sections 3(d) (2) and (3) of the Technology Assessment Act of 1972 (2 U.S.C. 472(d) (2) and (3)).

“(L)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

(2) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

Any such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to be made under part B but that the payments to such hospital under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of the billings for such services under part B. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may provide for such methods of payments under part A as is appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institution.

REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Sec. 303. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the “Secretary”) shall study and report to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be included within the prospective payment amounts computed under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment methodology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of physician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, legislative recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for determining the amount of the payments for physicians' services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

(C) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of studies on—

(i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospective payment rates under paragraph (3) of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

(ii) whether and the method under which hospitals, not paid based on amounts determined under such section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a prospective basis as under such section;

(iii) the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related groups, and the advisability and feasibility of providing for such modifications; and

(iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the payment methodology under such section to payment by all payors for inpatient hospital services.

(3) Prior to April 1, 1985, the Secretary shall complete a study and make legislative recommendations to the Congress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole community hospitals which takes into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addition, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an information transfer between parts A and B, particularly with respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made under part A, and no adjustment is made in the reimbursement to the admitting physician, or physicians. The Secretary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas. The Secretary shall also on the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the cost of care to patients financed by both public programs and private payors.

(4) The Secretary shall complete a study and make recommendations to the Congress, before April 1, 1984, with respect to whether hospitals located outside of the fifty States and the District of Columbia should be included under a prospective payment system.

(2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of a State which has a demonstration project, for payment of hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act approved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, which (A) is in effect as of March 1, 1983, and (B) was entered into after August 1982, the terms of the demonstration agreement shall be modified so that the percentage by which such demonstration project is required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in medicare hospital costs shall be decreased by one-half of one percentage
ing in 1983.

(c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act—

(1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior Health Services (according to terms and conditions as specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care demonstration project, and

(2) the application of the Department of Health Services, State of California, dated November 1, 1982, pursuant to section 1115 of the Social Security Act, for the waiver of certain requirements of title XIX of such Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a demonstration project for capitated reimbursement for comprehensive long-term care services involving On Lok Senior Health Services.

(d) The Secretary shall continue demonstrations with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or methods of payment.

the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this title apply to items and services furnished by or under arrange-hospital’s cost reporting period that has been made after No-1983.

(b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction in the payment amount under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if the admission has occurred before a hospital’s first cost reporting period that begins after September 1983, to take into account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items and services furnished before that period.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall cause to be published in the Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG prospective payment rates established under subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no later than September 1, 1983, and allow for a period of public comment thereon. The DRG prospective payment rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the necessity for consideration of comments received, but the Secretary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after considering those comments.

(2) A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a DRG prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modification is published in the Federal Register.

(3) Rules to implement subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as so amended) shall, and exceptions, adjustments, or additional payment amounts under paragraph (5) of such subsection may, be established in accordance with the procedure described in this subsection.

SEC. 305. (a) Section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out

(b) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to the Congress, with respect to the effect which the implementation of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 would have on hospital-based skilled nursing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the patient populations served by such facilities and by community-based skilled nursing facilities.

Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled under this part for each month after December 1983 shall, except as provided in subsections (b) and (e), be the amount determined under paragraph (3).

(3) The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the monthly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal to the smaller of—

(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age, determined according to paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar year, or

dividuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-age insurance benefits for December of the year preceding the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly premium rate by the same percentage by which that primary insurance amount is increased when, by reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals for the following December.

Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced, issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assumptions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the derivation of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

"(4) The Secretary shall also, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees who have not attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate under this paragraph, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.”.

(b) In the case of any eligible individual—

(1) to whom any Federal supplemental compensation was payable for any week beginning before April 1, 1983, and

(2) who exhausted his rights to such compensation (by reason of the payment of all the amount in his Federal supplemental compensation account) before the first week beginning after March 31, 1983, such individual’s eligibility for additional weeks of compensation by reason of the amendments made by this part shall not be limited or terminated by reason of any event, or failure to meet any requirement of law relating to eligibility for unemployment compensation, occurring after the date of such exhaustion of rights and before April 1, 1983 (and the period after such exhaustion and before April 1, 1983, shall not be counted for purposes of determining the expiration of the two years following the end of his benefit year for purposes of section 602(b) of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982).

(c) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest practicable date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose to each State with which he has in effect an agreement under section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 a modification of such agreement designed to provide for the payment of Federal supplemental compensation under such Act in accordance with the amendments made by this part. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any State fails or refuses, within the 3-week period beginning on the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agreement, the Secretary of Labor shall terminate such agreement effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before such 3-week period.
PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND CREDIT REDUCTIONS

DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

SEC. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section for any year after December 31, 1982, and before January 1, 1986, a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). Interest shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C).

"(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State must—

"(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982, which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or the net solvency of its unemployment system (as determined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954); and

after referred to as a ‘solvency effort’) by a combined total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect without such State action).

In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall be 40 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applicable percentage shall be 50 percent.

“(C)(i) The base year is the first year for which deferral under this provision is granted. The Secretary of Labor shall estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To determine whether a State meets the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the percentage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such benefits and taxes would have been without the application of such action. In making this determination, the Secretary shall deem the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii) to have been effective for the base year to the same extent as such action is effective for the year following the base year. Once a deferral is approved a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall
ment of all deferred interest.

"(ii) Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the requirement of subparagraph (B).

"(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than the 30 percent, 40 percent, 50 percent required under subpar-agraph (B), the deferred interest shall be computed at an interest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise applicable interest rate.".

(b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out ", and before January 1, 1988".

CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

SEC. 412. (a)(1) Section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof
the following new paragraph:

"(8) PARTIAL LIMITATION.—

"(A) In the case of a State which would meet the requirements of this subsection for a taxable year prior to 1987 but for its failure to meet one of the requirements contained in subpara-graph (C) or (D) of paragraph (2), the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

"(B) In the case of a State described in subparagraph (A) which also meets the requirements of section 1202(b)(8)(B) with respect to such taxable year, the reduction under subsection (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and each subsequent year (in a period of consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State) shall be further reduced by an additional 0.1 percentage point."

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to taxable year 1983 and taxable years thereafter.

(b) Section 3302(f)(1) of such Code is amended by striking out "beginning before January 1, 1988, ".

thereof "the total of the wages attributable to such State subject to taxation under this chapter".

(b) Sections 3302(c)(2)(B)(i) and 3302(c)(4) of such Code are each amended by striking out "2.7" and inserting in lieu thereof "2.7 multiplied by the ratio of the wage base under this chapter divided by the estimated average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which the determination is to be made".

(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective for taxable year 1984 and taxable years thereafter.

RECOUPMENT OF INTEREST

"(h) RECOUPMENT OF OVERDUE INTEREST.—

"(1) In addition to any other reduction required under this section, if any accrued interest under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act has not been paid by a State within one year after the date such payment is otherwise required to be paid, then the total credits (after applying any other provisions of this section) otherwise allowable under this section for the following taxable year, in the case of a taxpayer subject to the unemployment compensation law of such State, shall be reduced by an amount equal to 0.1 percent of the amount of the wages paid by such taxpayer during such taxable year which are attributable to such State.

“(2) Any increase in the amount of tax paid by reason of paragraph (1) shall be first applied as a payment of such overdue interest, and any remainder shall be applied as a repayment of principal under section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act.”

PART C—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS

TREATMENT OF EMPLOYEES PROVIDING SERVICES TO EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

“(v) with respect to services to which section 3309(a)(1) applies, if such services are provided to or on behalf of an educational institution, compensation shall be denied in the same manner as if such services were performed directly for an educational institution, and”.
(2) Clauses (ii)(I), (iii), and (iv) of such section are each amended by striking out "may be denied" and inserting in lieu thereof "shall be denied".

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply in the case of compensation paid for weeks beginning on or after April 1, 1984.

(2) In the case of a State with respect to which the Secretary of Labor has determined that State legislation is required in order to comply with the amendment made by this section, the amendment made by this section shall apply in the case of compensation paid for weeks which begin on or after April 1, 1984, and after the end of the first session of the State legislature which begins after the date of the enactment of this Act, or which began prior to the date of the enactment of this Act and remained in session for at least twenty-five calendar days after such date of enactment. Amendment No. 516

H. R. 1900
Resolved. That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1, an Act to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and with respect to the consideration of H.R. 1900, dealing with the same subject matter. Such waiver is necessary because the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform require prompt action in order to ensure the stability of the social security system.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1900, the social security measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The motion was agreed to. Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I understand the situation, the situation is this: It appears to me we are not going to be able to negotiate a compromise settlement of the jobs bill dilemma today. I regret that, I must say that all of the parties to this matter have given their best efforts and have done so conscientiously. I commend them all for it. Senator KASTEN and Senator DOLE have tried and tried repeatedly to reconcile the differences in their point of view on this matter without success. Finally, we have arrived at the place where we have to move on.

In no way signals that we are not going to pass a jobs bill. We are going to pass a jobs bill if it is humanly possible for that to be done. But there is a cloture motion filed against further debate on the jobs bill that will not mature until Friday. In my judgment, there was simply no reason for us to sit here in quorum calls and what appeared to be endless efforts to negotiate a settlement on this matter until Friday. I think we can make good use of the time between now and Friday, 1 hour after we convene, by considering aspects of the social security bill and perhaps even passing it. I hope we can pass it.

On Friday, the cloture motion on the jobs bill will occur as the pending business. If cloture is invoked, we shall be back on the jobs bill, whether we finish social security or not. I hope we have finished social security and we can continue them with the jobs bill in an orderly way.

The Senate should be on notice, Mr. President, of the strong possibility of a Saturday session.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. On behalf of Mr. MOYNIHAN, may I make the following unanimous-consent request: I ask unanimous consent that the floor privileges be granted during the disposition of the pending social security measure to Dr. John Hambor, Director of the Division of Economic Research in Office of Research & Statistics, Social Security Administration. He is serving as a legislative fellow in the office of Senator MOYNIHAN at this time. It is a bit of an unusual request, but I hope the Senate will grant it.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I am going to express my appreciation to the minority leader for his courtesy in this matter and to the Senate. Dr. Hambor is a respected authority on the issues of fact that will come before the Senate.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. Without objection, it is so ordered.

BUDGET ACT WAIVER

Mr. BAKER. I ask that the Chair lay before the Senate S. Res. 91, a budget waiver with respect to consideration of S. 1.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The clerk will state it.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A Senate resolution (S. Res. 91) waiving section 303(a) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 with respect to the consideration of S. 1.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICIAL. The motion was agreed to as follows:

S. Res. 91

Resolved, That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1.

That pursuant to section 303(c) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the provisions of section 303(a) of such Act are waived with respect to the consideration of S. 1.

The resolution was adopted by unanimous consent.

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

UP AMENDMENT NO. 67
(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 816.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 67.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's hospital reimbursement control system is based on a payment rate determined on other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the ground that the organization's rate of payment for inpatient hospital services must be less than the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system. With respect to a State system described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospital payments for individuals under that title, as compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments, with the State retaining the option to have the test applied to the basis of the aggregated payment or payments per inpatient admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985, after which such test shall cease to apply, and such hospitals shall be treated in the same manner as under other waivers.

The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—

(C) the State has provided the Secretary with guarantees that no noncompliance of any of the system will not result in any change in hospital admission practices which result in—

(i) a significant reduction in the proportion of patients receiving hospital services covered under the system who have no third-party coverage and who are unable to pay for hospital services;

(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient hospital services for which payments are made in the system (which shall exclude exceptions and adjustments) which is equal to or less than the Medicare costs for, or costs of services such as—

(D) any change by the State in the system which has the effect of materially reducing payments to hospitals can only take effect upon 90 days notice to the Secretary; and

The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

(i) the Secretary determines that the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount equal to the amount by which the payments under this title under such system for such period exceeded the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title without using such system.

REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

SEC. 303. (a) (1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services hereinafter referred to as the Secretary shall study and report to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the method by which capital-related cost, such as real estate, replacement, and other costs, can be included in the prospective payment amounts computed under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

(2) The Secretary shall study and report annually to the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984 and ending with 1987) on the impact of the payment methodology, as prescribed in section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other providers.

(b) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of physician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to physicians' services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary shall include, in the collection of data for such year, legislative recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for determining the amount of the payments for physicians' services attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to payment under the DRG classification of the discharges of those inpatients.

(c) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) the Secretary shall include the results of studies on—

(i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospective payment rates under paragraph (3) of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

(ii) whether and the method under which hospitals, not paid based on amounts determined under such section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a prospective basis as under such section;

(iii) the application to hospitals of self control, which takes into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy. In addition, the methodology should include paths for coordinating an information transfer between parts A and B, particularly with respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made after November 1982 shall be recognized for purposes of this section only if the Secretary finds good cause for that change.

(2) The Secretary shall continue demonstration projects with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to test the feasibility and desirability of innovative systems of care or methods of payment.

SEC. 304. (a) (1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by the following sections of this title apply to items and services furnished by or under arrangements with a hospital beginning with its first cost reporting period that begins on or after October 1, 1983. A change in a hospital's cost reporting period that has been effective before November 1982 shall be recognized for purposes of this section only if the Secretary finds good cause for that change.

(2) Section 1866(a)(1)(F) of the Social Security Act (as amended by section 302(h)(1)(C) of this title), section 1862(a)(14) and section 1862(a)(11) of the Social Security Act as added by section 302(e)(3) of this title and sections 1868(a)(11) of the Social Security Act (as added by section 302(2)(1)(C) of this title) take effect on October 1, 1983.

(b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction in the payment amount under such Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if the admittance has occurred before a hospital's first cost reporting period that begins on or after May 1, 1983, and if the payment amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as in effect before the date of the enactment of such Act) would be different if such changes had been in effect on the date of such discharge.
ment of this Act for items and services furnished before that period.

The Secretary shall cause to be published in the Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG rate established under subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no later than September 1, 1983, and of each year thereafter, a period of public comment thereon. The DRG prospective payment rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the necessity for consideration by the Federal Register, if no public comment is received, but the Secretary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after consideration of public comment.

A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a DRG prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modification is published in the Federal Register.

Rules to implement subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as so amended) shall, and exceptions, adjustments, or additional payment amounts under paragraph (5) of such subsection may, be established by the Secretary, in consultation with the National Health Planning and Resource Development Council, by regulations in the Federal Register, if no public comment is received, but the Secretary shall, by regulations published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after consideration of public comment.

Section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 shall be amended by striking out “October 1, 1982” and inserting in lieu thereof “October 1, 1983.”

The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to the Congress, with respect to the effect which the implementation of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (a) to have on hospital-based skilled nursing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the implementation of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (as amended) as compared with section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1981, and (b) to have on long-term health care costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplemental Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age, the Secretary shall determine the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

Subsection (c) of section 1839 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out “subsections (b), (c), (d), and (g)” and inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a)”.

The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age as defined in section 215(a)(1) which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year.

The Secretary shall, during October of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age, determined as follows: The Secretary shall ascertain the amount determined under section 215(a)(1), based upon average indexed monthly earnings of $900, that applicant who becomes ineligible for and entitled to old-age insurance benefits for December of the year preceding the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly premium rate by the same percentage by which that primary insurance amount is increased when, for reasons of the law in effect at the time the promulgation is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals for the following December.

Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced, include in the statement setting forth the actuarial assumptions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age.

(4) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply with respect to premiums payable for January 1984 and each month thereafter.

The monthly premium amount under section 1839 of the Social Security Act for the months of July through December of 1983 shall be equal to the monthly premium amount as determined under such section (as in effect prior to the amendments made by this section) for June 1983.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any State fails on or before the 3-week beginning on the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agreement then effective with such State, such agreement effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before such 3-week period.

Part B—Provisions relating to interest and credit reductions

DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

SEC. 411. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

(c)(1) The base year for which such deferral under this provision is granted shall be the base year in which the Secretary of Labor shall estimate the unemployment rate of any State for which the unemployment compensation rate is 5 percent or lower. The Secretary of Labor shall estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To determine whether a State meets the requirement that the unemployment rate of such State be 5 percent or lower for the base year, the applicable percentage shall be 50 percent. Such percentage shall be determined after the Secretary of Labor shall determine the percentage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with the application of such percentage to such revenues and benefits as they would have been in effect without such State action. In the case of the first year for which there is a State with an unemployment rate of 4 percent or lower (e.g., the fourth year of a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such year, the applicable percentage shall be 50 percent. In the case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall be 30 percent. In the case of the third such year, the applicable percentage shall be 20 percent.

(2) The Secretary of Labor shall, at the earliest practicable date after the date of the enactment of this Act, propose to each State with which he has in effect an agreement under section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982 a modification of such agreement designed to provide for such deferral under Federal supplemental compensation under such Act in accordance with the amendments made by this part. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if any State fails on or before the 3-week beginning on the date the Secretary of Labor proposed such a modification to such State, to enter into such a modification of such agreement then effective with such State, such agreement effective with the end of the last week which ends on or before such 3-week period. A rate equal to or exceeding 6 percent shall not be imposed during the year or years for which such deferral is effective. Failure to do so shall result in the State being required to make immediate payment of all deferred interest.

(d) In the case of the tax payable from $6,000 to $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the requirements of subparagraph (B).

"(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than the 30 percent, 40 percent, and 50 percent required under subparagraph (B), the interest shall be computed at an interest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise applicable interest rate.

"(b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out "", and before January 1, 1988."

CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION
Sec. 412. (1) Section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(b) Partial limitation."

"(A) In the case of a State which would meet the requirements of this subsection for a taxable year prior to 1987 but for its failure to meet one of the requirements contained in subparagraph (C) or (D) of paragraph (2), the reduction under subparagraph (c)(2) in credits otherwise applicable to taxpayers in such State for such taxable year and for each of a period of five consecutive years for each of which a credit reduction is in effect for taxpayers in such State shall be further reduced by 0.1 percentage point.

"(B) In the case of a State described in subparagraph (A) which also meets the requirements of section 1202(b)(8)(B) with respect to calendar years which begin before January 1, 1988, and taxable years thereafter.

"(b) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply with respect to taxable year 1983 and taxable years thereafter.

(A) of such Code is amended by striking out "beginning before January 1, 1988."

AVERAGE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATE
Sec. 413. (a) Section 3302(d)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is amended by striking out "before Januar" and inserting in lieu thereof "such taxability of wages attributable to the subject to taxation under this chapter".

"(a) Sections 3302(c)(1)(B) and 3302(c)(1)(C) of such Code are each amended by striking out "2.7" and inserting in lieu thereof "2.7 multiplied by the ratio of the wages base under this chapter divided by the estimated average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year which is in effect for taxpayers in such State at the time of the determination to be made"

The recommendations of the National Commission, as embodied in the Finance Committee amendment, will require concessional treated—are such as the taxing of benefits—were modified in an significant way. Also, the committee threshold with two areas in which the Commission was unable to reach consensus: the long-range, financing deficit and a "fail-safe" mechanism. In total, the social security financing package reduces the short-range deficit in the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance programs (OASDI) by $165 billion. For the long-range, the committee bill eliminates the entire long-range deficit in OASDI, and actually generates a small surplus.

MAJOR PROVISIONS
The recommendations of the National Commission which would include the consensus recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. Each of the recommendations of the National Commission were approved by the committee and, I might add, only those areas that required real changes—such as the taxing of benefits—were modified in an significant way. Also, the committee threshold with two areas in which the Commission was unable to reach consensus: the long-range, financing deficit and a "fail-safe" mechanism. In total, the social security financing package reduces the short-range deficit in the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance programs (OASDI) by $165 billion. For the long-range, the committee bill eliminates the entire long-range deficit in OASDI, and actually generates a small surplus.

COVERAGE
First, the bill would expand coverage. Newly hired Federal employees, the President, Vice President, Members of Congress, the Social Security Commissioner, and employees of nonprofit organizations would, beginning in 1984, be covered by social security on a mandatory basis. State and local governments would no longer be granted the privilege of opting out of the system. To deal with the problem which could exist as long as coverage is not universal, experiences will be eliminated for people who earn disproportionately large benefits because of long periods in noncovered employment. To moderate the impact of this provision, the committee bill would phase in the windfall provision and provide additional guarantees for people with long periods of covered employment.

I might note that that is the one minor change in the House-passed bill—to phase in that particular provision.

COLA

Second, on the benefit side, the annual cost-of-living adjustment of social security and SSI payments would be delayed by 6 months, from July to January. To protect the needy elderly during the transition to the new payment schedule, the maximum payment under the SSI program would be increased by $20 per month ($30 for couples). This would allow the income of all SSI recipients to rise by $20 a month beginning in July even though his or her COLA is delayed.

REVENUE PROVISIONS

Also, for beneficiaries with high incomes, half of social security benefits would be included in taxable income. The "notch" resulting under the Commission recommendation was eliminated by specifying that half of social security benefits be added to the individual's adjusted gross income and his income tax-exempt obligations to determine whether any of his benefits will be subject to taxation. Counting adjusted gross income, tax-exempt interest, and half of social security benefits in this manner, the thresholds in the House-passed bill are then $25,000 for an individual and $32,000 for a couple. The lesser of one-half of social security benefits or one-half of income above the thresholds would be subject to income taxes. In no case would an individual's benefits be taxed if his income was below $20,000 (or if a couple's adjusted gross income was below $25,000).

In addition, part of the payroll tax increases now scheduled by law would be accelerated, as recommended by the National Commission. Thus, the 1985 increase in the OASDI rate would take place in 1984, and part of the 1990 increase would take place in 1988. A direct credit against FICA tax would exactly offset the increase in the employee's tax in 1984 so that the acceleration in the rate increase originally set for 1985 will increase trust fund receipts without increasing an employer's tax liability.

For the self-employed, the OASDI tax on self-employed income would be increased so as to equalize his or her contribution to the social security trust funds with the combined contribution paid by workers and their employers. The tax on the self-employed—now about 1.5 times the employee's OASDI tax and the same as the employee's HI tax—would be made equal to the combined employee-employer rates. To offset partially the increased tax burden in this provision, if the employee had an option under the plan to defer income pursuant to a cash or deferred annuity plan qualifying under section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code, the employee could choose to defer these taxes into a deferred compensation plan. Third, salary reductions made under a salary reduction plan would be included in taxable wages for purposes of OASDI, as would certain other forms of noncash compensation at the time the employee elects to forego current cash for a nonqualified deferred compensation plan. Finally, amounts paid in lieu of a nonqualified deferred plan would be included in the wage base when it becomes available to the employee.

Accounting changes

Two accounting changes recommended by the Commission are included in the bill that would improve the treatment of the social security trust funds. First, the trust funds would be reimbursed for all forgone taxes and interest on account of gratuitous wage credits provided to people with military service. Presently, the trust funds are not reimbursed until the additional benefits are paid. Second, the trust funds would be credited with the value of all checks which have remained unredeemed for 1 year or longer. Presently, such checks remain a drain on the trust funds even if they are never cashed.

STABILIZER

To help stabilize the financial condition of social security, this bill includes the recommendation of the National Commission to trigger a new method of indexed special funds if reserves are critically low. Beginning in 1988, if reserves fall below 20 percent of annual outgo, the annual COLA would be based on the lower of the increase in wages or prices. As reserves begin to accumulate again, a "catch-up" provision would pay any benefits for any prior reduction in their benefit increases. This would help prevent insolvency when prices grow more rapidly than wages, as they have in the last 5 years.

EQUITY PROVISIONS

Also included in the bill are provisions which would increase outlays somewhat, but they improve the equity of the system considerably for women and for the elderly who continue to work. As recommended by the National Commission, benefit adequacy is improved for widows and widowers and for divorced widows and widowers. Eligibility requirements are eased for divorced widows and widowers, and for divorced disabled widows and widowers. For the elderly who continue to work and who do not now receive an actuarially fair increase in their benefits when they delay retirement, the delayed retirement credit would be increased from 3 percent to 8 percent a year.

Along these same lines, two additional provisions were added by the Finance Committee. First, people who leave the work force to care for a child under 3 will be allowed to drop up to 2 extra years of earnings in the computation of their earnings history. This change would help acknowledge the economic contribution of spouses in the home and reduce the financial penalty they now suffer when they are out of the work force. Second, the bill would gradually phase out the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. This is a broadly supported change that would remove a strong disincentive for the elderly who wish to continue working beyond 65.

Additional provisions recommended by the National Commission

In addition to these provisions, which constitute the bipartisan consensus, this bill contains three other recommendations made by the National Commission. These were approved unanimously in November. First, trust fund investment procedures would be revised so as to improve the level of public understanding.

I might say I see the distinguished Senator from Mississippi in the Chamber. I wish to commend the efforts of the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin that this provision was added and agreed to by the National Commission. We will be discussing that more in length later and will notify the distinguished Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator. Mr. DOLE. We appreciate the Senator calling that to our attention last year.

In the future, any excess reserves would be invested on a monthly basis at the yield of the 30-year Government bond. Second, two public members would be added to the Social Security Board of Trustees. Presently, the Board is composed of the Secretaries of Treasury, Labor, and Health and Human Services.

I guess that was a recommendation that the Commission felt should have been adopted, and we have adopted it.

Third, salary reductions made under a salary-reduction plan were included under the committee bill, amounts deferred under a qualified "cash or deferred" plan or a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement would be includable in the FICA wage base. Similarly, amounts used to fund fringe benefits under a cafeteria plan would be included in the wage base if the employee had an option under the plan to defer income pursuant to a cash or deferred plan. Amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan would be included in the FICA wage base in the year the related services were performed. Other nonqualified deferred compensation would be included in the FICA wage base when it becomes available to the employee.

We feel that these changes should prevent future decreases in OASDI tax income and benefit credits that might otherwise occur from increased use of deferred compensation plans. It is my hope that this provision will provide significant benefit for the future.

PAIL-SAFE PROVISIONS

The National Commission unanimously recommended that the social security trust funds be placed in a Pail-Safe. Senate Bill 3022 as passed by the House would place the trust funds in a Pail-Safe Reserve Fund. The fund investment procedures would be streamlined to improve deliberation and decision-making.
Together, these three provisions—the COLA fail-safe, interfund borrowing, and normalized tax transfers—should provide the safety valve necessary to insure the continued solvency of social security (OASDI) during the 1980s.

I really believe that with those additions and with the change made in the Finance Committee, the changes in those three areas—I guess if we did not change anything, or changed the other two areas somewhat—that we have provided a real fail-safe and it should protect all those who participate in short term.

We move from the short term to the long term.

LONG RANGE

To close the long-range deficit in OASDI, the committee bill would lower the long-term cost of the program through a combination approach. First, the bill would raise the age at which full retirement benefits are payable from 65 to 67. Second, the bill would gradually reduce the level of present law benefits payable to people who retire after the turn of the century by about 5 percent. In other words, people would come on to the rolls at a benefit level about 5 percent lower than now projected. This, of course, would produce a surpluses which are higher than today. This change would reduce the deficit by another 0.43 percent of taxable payroll. In conjunction with the rest of the bill, these two changes would completely eliminate the OASDI deficit projected by the Social Security Board of Trustees.

PROMPT ACTION ESSENTIAL

In my view, this is a good bill in the sense that it represents a fair compromise between all of the parties that have a stake in social security. While none of us have wished to go further, particularly in regard to short range financing, we did the best we could recognize that bipartisan consensus was essential. Opening social security up again to the partisan political system on a sound financial footing, the 1980s the way medicare pays for hospital services, a change which the Senator from Kansas wishes to point out, was initiated by this body last year.

As you will recall, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 contained a provision directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop, in consultation with the Finance Committee and the Committee on Ways and Means, proposals for the reimbursement of hospitals under medicare on a prospective basis. The Department's report was submitted in late 1982. Hearings were held by the Finance Committee's health subcommittee on February 2 and 17, 1983. Witnesses present at the hearings represented the hospital industry, provider groups, the insurance industry, consumer groups, and representatives of the business community.

Mr. President, a great many issues were raised during these hearings, many of which we tried to address in the drafting of this legislation. Clearly, there are those problems we were unable to solve, but I am hopeful that over time, once the system is in place, we will continue to make changes as necessary.

The provisions contained in this bill are by no means perfect. Any time you attempt to devise a new system, problems occur which you were either unaware of, or unable to resolve at the outset. This system is no different. However, this Senator believes ample flexibility has been provided, giving the Secretary the opportunity to adjust the system, and in some cases directing the Secretary to make certain changes when possible. For example, in the area of hospital reimbursement, a change which the Senator from Kansas wishes to point out, was initiated by this body last year.

The first recognizes the direct costs of teaching—salaries, benefits—and passes these costs through. The second adjustment recognizes the indirect costs of teaching and doubles the current adjustment for these costs. These will help—only help to recognize some of the unusual costs faced by these institutions.

MEDICARE

Title III of the committee amendment provides for a major change in the way medicare pays for hospital services, a change which the Senator from Kansas wishes to point out, was initiated by this body last year.

As you will recall, the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 contained a provision directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop, in consultation with the Finance Committee and the Committee on Ways and Means, proposals for the reimbursement of hospitals under medicare on a prospective basis. The Department's report was submitted in late 1982. Hearings were held by the Finance Committee's health subcommittee on February 2 and 17, 1983. Witnesses present at the hearings represented the hospital industry, provider groups, the insurance industry, consumer groups, and representatives of the business community.

Mr. President, a great many issues were raised during these hearings, many of which we tried to address in the drafting of this legislation. Clearly, there are those problems we were unable to solve, but I am hopeful that over time, once the system is in place, we will continue to make changes as necessary.

The provisions contained in this bill are by no means perfect. Any time you attempt to devise a new system, problems occur which you were either unaware of, or unable to resolve at the outset. This system is no different. However, this Senator believes ample flexibility has been provided, giving the Secretary the opportunity to adjust the system, and in some cases directing the Secretary to make certain changes when possible. For example, in the area of hospital reimbursement, a change which the Senator from Kansas wishes to point out, was initiated by this body last year.

The first recognizes the direct costs of teaching—salaries, benefits—and passes these costs through. The second adjustment recognizes the indirect costs of teaching and doubles the current adjustment for these costs. These will help—only help to recognize some of the unusual costs faced by these institutions.
In addition to these two adjustments, we have also provided an institutional opportunity to apply to the Secretary for additional payments where the length of stay for a particular case is unusually long, or the cost unusual compared to the DRG rate. The House bill only provides for special treatment for long lengths of stay.

Our bill also contains a provision requiring that the Secretary make adjustments or exceptions as he deems appropriate to take into account the special circumstances of hospitals caring for a large number of low-income patients. Sole community providers are given special treatment, as are psychiatric hospitals, children's hospitals, and rehabilitation hospitals.

I understand the distinguished Senator from Texas will offer an amendment to assist those institutions that serve as regional or national referral centers, an amendment we are certain will also assist the Secretary in making adjustments.

In the case of capital costs and direct education costs, we will continue to reimburse hospitals as we do under current law until October 1, 1986, after which time capital costs will no longer be "passed through." The Secretary is required to determine adjustments for future years.

The hospital industry has made it clear that they want to move ahead with this system. They do not like the current system of controls any more than we do. They want a system that offers some incentives for efficiency into place. They are, of course, concerned that we treat hospitals equitably, but also believe that our recommendations go a long way toward resolving some of these concerns.

Major provisions of the prospective diagnosis-related groups and rates

Under the committee amendment, the Secretary is required to determine prospectively a payment amount for each Medicare hospital discharge. DRG rates would be established for urban and rural hospitals both nationally and in each of four census regions.

These rates would be increased for fiscal year 1984 and fiscal year 1985 by the marketbasket plus 1 percentage point. Adjustments for future years would be decided upon by the Secretary, based in part upon recommendations made by an independent commission.

Changes in the relative weights of the DRG's would be made at least every 5 years to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources. The independent commission mentioned earlier will also assist the Secretary in making these changes.

Outliers

Another major provision is the one that deals with outliers, the unusually costly cases or those with particularly long lengths of stay. As noted earlier, our proposal is more generous in dealing with these concerns.

Exclusions of capital-related expenses and medical education expenses

In the case of capital costs and direct education costs, we will continue to reimburse hospitals as we do under current law until October 1, 1986, after which time capital costs will no longer be "passed through." The Secretary is required to determine adjustments for future years.

The proposal provides for a full national DRG system. During the transition the hospitals would be paid a mixed rate based on their historical costs, a national DRG rate and a regional DRG rate. This transition provides ample time for the hospital to adjust to the new system.

Exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments

As noted earlier in my comments, certain hospitals are excluded from the prospective system and adjustments and exceptions are provided for to accommodate certain concerns, such as unusual patient case-loads or geographic locations.

Performance review

The proposal includes a requirement that hospitals contract with a professional review organization selected by the Secretary under title XI of the Social Security Act. It will be particularly important that a monitoring system be developed along with a payment program that pays an established rate per diagnosis. We will want to continue to insure that appropriate and necessary services are provided.

State cost control programs

The States will continue to be able to design and implement State payment systems. In fact, the language contained in the proposal strengthens the case of States applying for Medicare waivers as long as they meet the requirements established by the statute.

We continue to be interested in examining the State systems, believing that there are a great many ways one might go about addressing the problem of rising hospital costs, and that the Federal Government might still have a great deal to learn.

Administrative and judicial review

The committee amendment continues to provide the opportunity for institutions to seek administrative and judicial review in all cases except those that relate to the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors.

Studies and reports

Mr. President, the last major provision of title III deals with studies and reports. The committee has asked that the Secretary complete a number of studies on issues of concern in establishing this new prospective system.

Of particular note are the studies and reports dealing with the severity of illness, intensity of care, or other such modifications to the diagnosis-related groups that deal with the treatment of patients. We feel it is logical to our efforts to insure that institutions receive a DRG payment that is reasonably sensitive to the care being provided to patients.

There is one other aspect of title III that bears noting. This is the creation of a Commission of experts to assist the Secretary in making adjustments to the DRG's and in examining those changes in the health care industry that have a bearing on health care delivery and the cost of care.

The Commission will help us look at such important issues as variations in treatment practices, utilization of medication, and medically appropriate patterns of care. Because this Commission would be made up of a mix of experts, for example, nurses, physicians, employers, and hospital administrators, they will be able to explore a number of diverse issues, such as the value of prevention, the treatment of a patient and its impact on the overall use of services.

Changes in technology will be particularly important for us to track. We certainly do not want to discourage the kind of innovation we have come to expect from the health care industry. The introduction of a new treatment modality or a new piece of equipment can have enormous implications for a particular DRG and its so-called weight. We want to make sure that changes in the DRG's really follow changes in the industry.

Need for action

Like the other aspects of S. 1, this title should be given every consideration by my colleagues. It is clearly time to move away from the old inefficient cost based reimbursement system, to one that puts some incentives in place. These provisions do exactly that.

Unemployment compensation provisions

The Finance Committee included four provisions in S. 1 dealing with the unemployment insurance system. The first provision would provide a 6-month extension of the Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program currently scheduled to expire on March 31, 1983. Two provisions deal with coverage and eligibility issues, and the final provision provides some relief from the interest and loan requirement of the current law. The House-passed bill, H.R. 1900, includes only the extension of FSC.
The Finance Committee provision extends the Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program for 6 months, through September 30, 1983. The basic tier of benefits has been redesigned to reflect more accurately current unemployment conditions. The proposal has three new and important features:

1. FSC benefits are provided to claimants who have exhausted the initial FSC entitlement prior to April 1, 1983. These benefits are again geared to the level of distress in each State.

2. Claimants who have used their full entitlement are permitted to continue to receive FSC benefits after April 1, 1983.

3. Those individuals who may have FSC entitlement remaining on September 30, 1983, when this program will expire, will not have their benefits immediately cease. Instead, the proposal allows a "phase out" of benefits whereby the claimant would receive half of the remaining weeks of his entitlement. To me, this is attractive because it allows the individual who was well served for FSC late in the program's life to receive some benefit from it.

In order to afford this "phase out" feature, it is necessary to scale back somewhat the level of benefits available. The current FSC program provides 18 weeks of benefits to States with the highest uninsured unemployment rates (IUR). This proposal would allow 14, the same level provided in the House-passed bill. In my opinion, this is justified not only on cost grounds, but also because there does appear to be a downward trend in unemployment which is projected to continue, although slowly, through the spring and summer. Should this not be the case, I certainly expect that the Congress will be in session this summer and alterations can be made, if necessary.

Additionally, we have included an increase in the number of weeks of work required to qualify for FSC benefits—from 20 to 26 weeks. This requirement would be applied on a prospective basis only, that is, for people who first began receiving FSC after April 1. It seems reasonable to me that a work force attachment beyond 20 weeks should be required for the receipt of benefits as many as 53 weeks in some States.

CBO estimates the fiscal year 1983 cost of this proposal at $2.1 billion. There would also be a cost in fiscal year 1984 of $3.5 million. This is in addition to the $2.5 billion fiscal year 1982 and fiscal year 1983 cost of the current FSC program. It is a substantial expenditure of Federal dollars and demonstrates a real commitment to aiding our Nation's unemployed. We may not agree.

The second provision approved by the Finance Committee would correct a serious situation which was brought to the attention of the committee by one of its members, Senator Bradley, and by a number of our House colleagues. This provision would permit a State to treat FSC claimants serving on jury duty and those who are hospitalized in the same manner as such claimants serving under the regular State programs. A number of cases were documented in which FSC claimants were terminated from benefits for failing to meet the "able to work" and "available for work" requirements under Federal law. The claimants were serving on jury duty or, in some cases, had been suddenly hospitalized. The committee recognized that such occurrences are generally beyond the control of the individual. Therefore, the Bradley amendment was adopted to allow States the flexibility to deal with such cases as they do in their own State programs.

The third provision would require States to deny unemployment benefits to school employees and certain employees who perform services for educational institutions. This denial of benefits would apply during periods between academic years or terms. The denial would take place only if there was reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. This treatment of these employees with the treatment now accorded to professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities.

Finally, the Finance Committee adopted a measure which provides limited relief for States which are borrowing from the Federal Treasury to meet benefits payments. This is a responsible provision which is deserving of the support of the full Senate. The committee developed a plan which will allow a State to spread the interest it owes over a 5-year period. The State can also qualify for a reduction of 1 percentage point in the interest rate charged on borrowing. Additionally, a State which does not qualify for the full cap on the Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) credit may, under the committee provision, qualify for a partial cap.

Some action on the State's part for this relief is, of course, necessary. The Finance Committee provision requires States to make progress toward solvency of 30 percent the first year, 40 percent the second year, and 50 percent the third year. If the State makes an effort to reach solvency which increases its taxes to 90, the interest rate will be reduced by 1 percent.

Even this limited relief will have a Federal budget impact. The loss of interest paid to the Federal Government could total $23.0 million in fiscal year 1983 from the deferral alone. The reduced interest rate would only increase the revenue impact. The availability of the partial cap on the offset credit loss would also have a negative impact on the next fiscal year of $250 million. However, the Finance Committee recognized the fact that the current recession has been deeper and more prolonged than we expected in the summer of 1984 when the interest and cap provisions were enacted as part of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act. Therefore, the committee was willing to make some temporary changes in the current law in order to allow States extra time to make the necessary State law changes to bring their programs closer to solvency.

I urge my colleagues to support these modifications in the interest and loan provisions. I believe that the Finance Committee proposal treats in a fair manner those States who have operated solvent programs over the years, borrowing when necessary but repaying on time and making the required State law changes to insure solvency. The interests of those States and their taxpayers deserve our attention.

CONCLUDING REMARKS

The social security financing package, as well as the medicare and unemployment compensation provisions, represents the result of intensive negotiations between a bipartisan group of interested parties.

I urge my colleagues to support this important and comprehensive bill.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a detailed description of each of the social security provisions along with cost estimates provided by the Office of the Actuary, SSA, and the Congressional Budget Office, and also a detailed description of the Finance Committee amendments dealing with the unemployed insurance program.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

The spending effects of this bill fall within budget functions 550, 600 and 700. The budget authority is the net result of higher interest income on higher trust fund balances for the Old Age Survivors Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI) and Hospital Insurance (HI) programs, transfers to the trust funds from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury, and required additional budget authority for the Supplementary Security Income (SSI), Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI), Food Stamps, Veterans' Pensions and Medicaid programs.

Basis of estimate

This bill generally incorporates the January, 1983 recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It also incorporates provisions affecting the Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and Unemployment Insurance Programs. Table 2, shows the costs, savings and revenue impacts of this bill to the federal government.

One major purpose of this bill is to ensure the continued payment of all Social Security benefits. The impact of some of the provisions in the bill on the financial status of the Social Security trust funds differs from their impact on the federal budget. Many provisions transfer funds within the government, which has no impact on budget outlays or receipts. In addition, the savings to and income into the trust funds generate additional interest income or budget authority. This income also does not affect the unified budget deficit. The impact of the bill on the trust funds therefore is shown separately in Table 3.

A section by section description for the basis of the estimates for the provisions in this bill having major cost impact is given below. These estimates were prepared from a draft of the bill before Committee amendments were added and from mark-up documents. No bill as amended has been received.

Cover new Federal employees

This provision extends Social Security coverage to all new permanent federal civilian employees as of January 1, 1984. The provision is expected to cover about 150,000 new permanent federal entrants per year through 1988. The proposal raises $1.6 billion in unified budget revenues in fiscal year 1984 and $1.7 billion in revenues from fiscal year 1984 through 1988.

This provision has no change in the current Civil Service Retirement system for those federal workers newly covered by the Social Security system. The extension of mandatory coverage to those federal workers currently covered under current law and under this provision.

The extension of mandatory coverage to all non-profit employees results in an income tax offset against the increase in OASDI revenues. The offset equals 25 percent of the employer contribution and reduces income tax revenues. Income tax revenues are estimated to fall because it is assumed that non-profit employers pass the entire payroll tax increase onto their employees in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The estimate was based on CBO's economic assumptions using the Social Security Administration's short-term revenue forecasting model.

Termination of State and local coverage

Currently, state and local governments can terminate Social Security coverage upon giving two years notice of their intention to withdraw, and then doing so. This provision would prohibit any such withdrawals, effective with the bill's enactment.

CBO's current law revenue estimates do not assume reductions in trust fund income that could result from withdrawals of certain state and local governments. Thus, there would be no revenue gain to the CBO baseline estimates from prohibiting such withdrawals.

Delay payment of annual cost-of-living adjustment from July to January of each year

This section delays the payment of future cost-of-living adjustments (COLA's) for Social Security for six months, from July to January of each year. In addition, the provision changes the base period from which the COLA is calculated.

The COLA is measured by the growth in the Consumer Price Index (CPI) from the first calendar quarter of the previous year to the first quarter of the current year. Whenever the increase is greater than three percent, an adjustment to the benefits paid each July is made. The July, 1983 COLA will be paid in January, 1984 under this provision, and will be based on the current law indexing period. Subsequent adjustments will be based on the CPI growth from the third quarter of one year to the next. The table below shows the CBO COLA assumptions under current law and under this provision.

This bill also guarantees that a January, 1984 COLA will be given, even if the rate of inflation is so low that the adjustment is less than three percent. Since CBO's current economic assumptions have this COLA adjustment at 4.1 percent in 1984, this clause has no cost effect.

The change in the COLA base of payment is expected to save $24 billion in Social Security benefits over the period, and an additional $1.3 billion in Medicare and other benefits directly linked to this COLA. These COLA changes would increase food stamp benefits by $240 million over the period as incomes of food stamp recipients decline.
This provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 and $1.5 billion from fiscal year 1985 through 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation. The provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax by $893 million in fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The provision also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

This provision has no net cost to the federal government. It realigns the payroll tax portion allocated to the OASI and DI trust funds so as to keep the two funds’ balances at approximately equal percentage of outlays at the start of each year.

Benefit to certain widows, divorced and disabled women

These provisions would (1) allow the continuation of benefits to surviving, divorced or disabled spouses and minor children; (2) change the indexing procedure for benefits for those receiving deferred survivor benefits; (3) allow divorced spouses to draw benefits regardless of whether the former spouse is receiving benefits; and (4) increase benefits for disabled widows and widowers.

Together, these provisions would cost less than $300 million per year once fully effective in fiscal year 1985. The largest cost in this group of provisions would allow disabled widows or widowers ages 50 to 59 to receive benefits at an amount equal to which non-disabled widows or widowers over age 59 currently receive. This provision is estimated to cost $90 million in fiscal year 1984, $125 million in fiscal year 1985, and an estimated $600 million over the five-year period.

The provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation estimates based on the Social Security Trustees’ I-B assumptions, with benefit amounts increased for the years covered (see the CBO’s lower inflation (and therefore cost-of-living adjustment) projections).

Increase social security payroll tax (FICA) and 1984 tax credit

This provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax by $893 million in fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The provision also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

This provision raises $800 million in fiscal year 1984 and $1.5 billion from fiscal year 1985 through 1988. The revenue effects are derived from the Joint Committee on Taxation. The provision accelerates the OASDI payroll tax by $893 million in fiscal year 1984 through fiscal year 1988. The provision also includes a payroll tax credit of 0.3 percent of employee FICA contribution for 1984.

The FICA tax acceleration results in an income tax offset equal to 25 percent of the employer payroll tax contribution. The offset lowers income tax receipts because employers are assumed to pass on to employees the full payroll tax increase in the form of lower wages and salaries.

The provision is estimated to raise OASDI unified budget revenues $8.2 billion in fiscal year 1984 and $19.0 billion from fiscal year 1985 through 1988. The income tax offset equals $2.2 billion from fiscal years 1984 through 1988. The revenue loss due to the payroll tax credit results in a $4.2 billion loss by fiscal year 1985.

The estimates are based upon CBO’s latest economic assumption using the Social Security Administration’s short-term revenue forecasting model.

Increase in employer tax rate

This provision raises the self-employed payroll tax rate (SECA) to a level equal to the combined employer-employee contribution rate (including the FICA tax acceleration). In fiscal 1984 the SECA rate rises 3.35 percent and the HI rate increases 1.3 percent for a SECA rate of 14 percent. Further, the provision includes a payroll tax credit equal to 2.9 percent of employee FICA contributions for 1984 and 1.3 percent for 1985.

Long-term financing

This title would also enable temporary residents of emergency public shelters to receive SSI for three months in any twelve-month period. The provision is estimated to cost $1 million in fiscal year 1983 and $3 million a year thereafter. In addition, Title IV-D would be expanded to include individuals who would now choose to participate as a result of the increased income limits for these persons. CBO has assumed a participation rate of 25 percent, which would now participate in SSI. Some of the new beneficiaries would be persons previously eligible to participate in SSI. The largest cost results from the benefit increase for current SSI beneficiaries. In addition, CBO estimates that about 22,000 persons would become new beneficiaries of SSI. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits. For these persons, CBO has assumed a participation rate of 25 percent, which would now participate in SSI. Some of the new beneficiaries would be persons previously eligible to participate in SSI. The largest cost results from the benefit increase for current SSI beneficiaries. In addition, CBO estimates that about 22,000 persons would become new beneficiaries of SSI. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits. Most would be newly eligible for SSI as a result of the increased income limits.

Partially offsetting the costs in SSI from these benefit increases is a savings in the food stamp program as incomes of SSI beneficiaries rise. There are also added costs in Medicaid for those new SSI beneficiaries who also become newly eligible for Medicaid.

The provision is estimated to cost less than $300 million per year once fully effective in fiscal year 1985. The largest cost in this group of provisions would allow disabled widows or widowers ages 50 to 59 to receive benefits at an amount equal to which non-disabled widows or widowers over age 59 currently receive. This provision is estimated to cost $90 million in fiscal year 1984, $125 million in fiscal year 1985, and an estimated $600 million over the five-year period.

This section of the bill would extend for six months the federal supplemental compensation program of 1975 to 1978 scheduled to terminate March 31, 1983. It would provide up to 14 weeks of additional unemployment compensation benefits for individuals exhausting regular and extended unemployment compensation benefits in the previous January. The maximum number of weeks of benefits would be limited to 30. Persons who have exhausted their FSC entitlement before March 1, 1983 would receive up to one-half of the balance of those entitlements. The estimate of the fiscal impact of this section of the bill is based upon estimates of the states' UIRs and weeks compensated, and the determination of whether a state will be paying extended benefits which under the CBO baseline will amount to 4 percent of regular UI payments. This would be an increase of $200 million in fiscal year 1984. The CBO estimates that any FSC extension results in a reduction in AFDC and Food Stamp outlays because individuals who exhaust unemployment compensation benefits would be more likely to apply for these programs.
would lower state and local government expenditures in two ways. First, AFDC outlays would decline in fiscal year 1983. The state share of such outlays averages 46 percent. Second, outlays for state and local general assistance (GA) programs would also decline. GA programs are fully funded by state and local governments and are means-tested, typically serving those ineligible for AFDC and SSI. There are no reliable statistics on which to base an estimate of savings in GA. However, a rough estimate of the estimated effect in Michigan provided by Michigan analysts was used to estimate national effects. Michigan accounts for about 15 percent of GA expenditures nationwide. Estimate comparison: None.

Estimate approved by C. G. Nuckols (for James L. Blum, Assistant Director for Budget Analysis).

TITLE I OF THE BILL
4. PROVISIONS RELATED TO OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS AND DISABILITY INSURANCE Coverage of newly hired federal employees (Section 101 of the Bill)

Present law
Approximately the same percent of the Nation’s workers are covered by social security. Federal civilian employees are the only major group excluded from coverage under the social security (OASDI) system. Those excluded (93 percent, or about 2.8 million out of 2.9 million employees) are generally covered by a Federal staff retirement system, engaged in temporary employment, or are members of Congress. (Beginning in 1983, nearly all Federal employees are covered under Medicare.)

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would, effective January 1, 1984, extend social security coverage to all Federal civilian employees hired after 1983 (unless their break in Federal service has been one year or less), and to staff retirement systems if Congress, the President, Vice President, the Social Security Commissioner, and to current congressional staff not already covered under a Federal staff retirement system. This amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to extend coverage to all Federal employees hired after 1983.

The Committee amendment also states that “Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees, and their families.”

Effective date.—January 1, 1984.

Exclusion from social coverage for services performed by members of certain religious sects (sec. 104 of the bill and sec. 3121 of the Code)

Present law
In general, social security (FICA) tax is imposed on every individual who receives wages with respect to employment. In addition, a social security tax is imposed on employers who pay wages with respect to employment. There is no exemption, under present law, for employers or employees who are members of religious sects that oppose the social security system. However, present law does provide an exemption from self-employment tax (SECA) for members of religious sects that are conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of private or public provision for the care of their dependent members.

Reason for change
The committee believes that employers and employees who are members of the Amish sect, or other religious sects that oppose participation in the social security system, should be treated the same as self-employed members of other sects. That is neither Amish employers nor Amish employees would be required to pay social security taxes. This provision is necessary because, due to economic conditions, many Amish cannot afford their own farms, but, rather, must work for other Amish farmers.

Explanation of provision
The provision will exempt from social security tax wages paid by individuals who are exempt from self-employment taxes because of their religious beliefs to individuals who are members of religious sects that conscientiously oppose the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provisions for the care of their dependent members. This exemption would be applicable both to the employer and employee portion of social security tax.

The exemption applies only in the case of religious sects that have been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

Effective date
The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Delay cost-of-living adjustment to a calendar year basis (Section 103 of the Bill)

Present law
The automatic cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) of social security benefits is applicable to June benefits (payable early in July). The amount of the increase is equal to percentage by which the Consumer Price Index (for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers, CPI-W) for the first quarter of the calendar year has increased over the first quarter of the preceding calendar year. No COLA is paid unless the increase in the CPI is at least 3 percent. By law, cost-of-living adjustments in the SSI program are made at the same time, and in the same amount as the social security cost-of-living adjustment.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would shift the automatic cost-of-living adjustment of social security benefits to a calendar year basis. Beginning in 1983, the COLA for OASDI benefits would be applied to the December benefit, which is payable at the beginning of January. In addition, the amendment would provide an adjustment for State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once coverage is terminated, the group can never again be covered under social security.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits

Present law

Social security benefits for workers with low average earnings are a relatively high proportion (up to 25 percent) of their average earnings under social security. No distinction is currently made between persons who have a lifetime of low earnings and those who have low average earnings only because they worked few years in covered employment (possibly at high wages) and many years in employment not covered by social security. Both groups receive the heavily weighted social security benefit intended for the first group. The heavily weighted benefit paid to the second group is often referred to as a "windfall".

The present law benefit formula for persons who reach age 62 or who become disabled before age 62 in 1983 is 90 percent of the first $254 of average indexed monthly earnings in covered employment (AIME), plus 32 percent of AIME over $254 and up to $1,528, plus 15 percent of AIME in excess of $1,528.

The Committee amendment would reduce (but not eliminate) social security benefits for retired and disabled workers who first become eligible for a pension based on non-covered employment after 1983. For such workers who do not have a long record of substantial work under social security, the heavily weighted 90 percent factor of the benefit formula would be replaced by a factor of 32 percent, phased in over a five year period as follows:

To moderate the impact of this provision on people with small pensions from non-covered employment, social security benefits paid to the second group would be reduced by no more than one-third of the portion of the worker’s pension based on service which was non-covered employment. The offset would not apply to pensions based on one year or less of non-covered employment.

In addition, the Committee amendment exempts from any reduction under this provision those individuals who have a long history of substantial work under the social security program. People who have thirty or more years of covered employment in which they paid social security taxes on at least 25 percent of the maximum taxable earnings would have their benefits computed under the regular provisions without any reduction under the windfall provision. People with less than 30 years of substantial social security employment would have the windfall reduction applied on a phased in basis under which the first factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentag points for each year below thirty years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision however. (A year of substantial employment is a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

Survivor benefits would not be affected by this provision.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended modifying the social security benefit formula so as to eliminate windfall benefits for workers who in the future receive social security as well as pensions from non-covered employment. (No specific formula was recommended.)

Effective date.—January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a non-covered pension after 1983.

Benefits for divorced or disabled widowers or widows who remarried

Present law

Current law permits the continuation of benefits for widows and widowers who remarried after 60, the age of first eligibility for divorced widows. If the widower (widow) marries after age 60, he or she receives the benefits to which he or she is entitled as a wage earner, widower (widow) or spouse, whichever is larger. However, benefits for disabled widowers and disabled surviving divorced spouses (payable from age 50 to 60) and for surviving divorced spouses (payable at age 60) are terminated if the individual remarries.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide that benefits continue to be paid to certain beneficiaries upon remarriage if that marriage takes place before the maximum taxable age of first eligibility. Benefits would be payable to: disabled widowers and disabled surviving divorced spouses who remarried after 50, and surviving divorced spouses who remarried after 60. No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows only the highest benefit to which an individual is eligible to be drawn. This is comparable to the present law treatment of widows and widowers.

This amendment is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Effective date.—For benefits payable for months after December 1983.

Changes in indexing for deferred survivor benefits (Section 114 of the Bill)

Present law

Survivor benefits (for widows, widowers, and surviving children) are based on the deceased worker’s earnings in covered employment. Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes.

Should the worker die long before the spouse is eligible for benefits, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible (in old-age or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus widows who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband’s unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.

The Committee amendment would provide that deferred widow and widower benefits would continue to be based on earnings indexed to wages as under present law, however, this wage indexing would continue after the death of the worker. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

In addition, the Committee amendment would specify that such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow’s benefits, whichever is earlier. In no case would benefits be lower than under present law.

Effective date.—For persons becoming eligible for survivors benefits after December 31, 1984.

Independent eligibility for divorced spouses (Section 115 of the Bill)

Present law

A divorced spouse, eligible for benefits at age 62, may not begin to draw social security benefits until the worker begins to draw benefits. For some divorced women, this means that they may have to wait several years beyond their own retirement age (either because their ex-spouse delays retiring or otherwise fails to apply for benefits) before they can begin to draw benefits.

The Committee amendment would allow divorced spouses (who have been divorced for a significant period) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse has claimed benefits and they have been divorced because of substantial employment. This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In addition, the Committee amendment would modify the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) during periods when trust fund reserves are low to 3.1 percent of the primary insurance amount, or 3.1 percent of the worker's average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents' and survivors' benefits are based on the worker's PIA.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for groups of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

This system was adopted by the 1977 Social Security Amendments. The annual adjustment of the dollar amounts in the benefit formula, the bend points, by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker's prior earnings that is replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

Committee amendment

For people first becoming eligible for benefits in 2000, the Committee amendment would reduce initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent by decreasing the percentage factors in the benefit formula by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years. This would have the effect of reducing the ultimate replacement rate by 5 percent.

Effective date.—For people first becoming eligible for retirement or disability in 2000.

OASDI savings: 0.43 percent of taxable payroll.

Elimination of retirement earnings test (Section 121 of the Bill)

Present law

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would gradually phase out, between 1990 and 1994, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings would be increased by $3,000 in 1990 and in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Effective date.—The provision would be phased in between 1990 and 1994.

OASDI cost.—This amendment is estimated to cost 0.05 percent of taxable payroll in the long range.

Child-care drop out years (Section 122 of the Bill)

Present law

In computing a worker's covered earnings history under social security (upon which his family's benefits are based), up to five years in which earnings are lowest are dropped.
Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would allow up to two additional years to be dropped for persons who leave the workforce to care for a child under 3 in the home. To qualify for a child-care drop year, the worker can have no non-covered earnings during the year.

Effective date.—For persons first eligible for benefits after 1983.

Prisoners benefits

(Section 123 of the Bill)

Present law

Persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony may not receive student benefits (which are being phased out anyway), and are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependents benefits are not affected.) Also, impairments resulting from the commission of a crime cannot be the basis for disability benefits and impairments occurring during imprisonment cannot be the basis for disability benefits during the period of imprisonment.

Committee amendment

Presently, benefits may continue to be paid to incarcerated felons who are either retired workers, widow or widower beneficiaries, or dependents of deceased workers, and to those DI beneficiaries in a court-approved rehabilitation program.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would expand present law to eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Committee amendment

Effective date.—Determination-S beginning January 1, 1985. Effective dates—This amendment would begin to apply to new eligibles on or after January 1, 1985.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment provides that, in the future, benefits would be eliminated to former prisoners who reside abroad. About 70% of these beneficiaries are aliens.

Committee amendment

(2) benefits would continue until total benefits paid to the wage earner and dependents equal taxes paid by the wage earner.

Reasons for change

The Committee believes that the present policy of excluding all social security benefits from a recipient's gross income is inappropriate. The Committee believes, further, that social security benefits are in the nature of benefits received under other retirement systems, which are subject to tax. The Committee believes that a portion of social security benefits will improve tax equity by treating more nearly equally all forms of retirement and other income that are designed to replace lost income that are designed to replace lost income, will not be taxed on their receipt for any reason.

PART C—REVENUE PROVISIONS

A. Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits (sec. 181 of the bill, new Code secs. 86 and 6050, and Code secs. 861, 871, 1441, and 6103)

Present law

Under present law, social security benefits are excluded from the gross income of the recipient. Their exclusion is based upon a series of administrative rulings issued by the Internal Revenue Service in 1914—1918 (see I.T. 3194, 1938-2 C.B. 136, and I.T. 3447, 1941-1 C.B. 191). Railroad retirement benefits are excluded from gross income under the Railroad Retirement Act.

In general, the gross amount of fixed or determinable annual or periodic income (which is not effectively connected with a U.S. trade or business) received by a nonresident alien from U.S. sources is subject to a 30-percent tax (Code sec. 871); this tax is collected by withholding (see, 1441). A pension for services performed after 1950 in the United States would be U.S.-source income and the gross amount of a U.S.-source pension is subject to the 30-percent withholding or a lower rate if so provided by treaty. The U.S. would allow as an expense, as well as a number of actual tax treaties to which the United States is a party, provides reciprocally that pensions received by a resident of one country from sources in the other country are taxable only by the country of residence. However, the United States has reserved the right to tax social security benefits as they are presented by the United States in the Model Income Tax Treaty and a number of actual tax treaties.

substantial taxable income from other sources will be taxed on a portion of the benefits they receive.

Taxation of social security and railroad retirement benefits

Under the committee's bill, a portion of social security benefits that are included in gross income is calculated on a case-by-case basis. The determination of the amount of social security benefits subject to tax is based on the individual's earned income for the taxable year. The committee believes that the family should be treated as a single entity in determining the amount of social security benefits that is includible in gross income under this provision. If the base amount for these individuals is over $10,000, the benefit will be reduced by one-half of the amount of benefits received during the taxable year in excess of the base amount. This provision is not intended to change the tax treatment of benefits to nonresident aliens.

For the purpose of determining how much of a taxpayer's social security benefit will be includible in gross income, a taxpayer will be permitted to elect to treat the benefit as received during the taxable year by the amount of benefits, previously received during the current or any preceding taxable year, that he repays during the taxable year or to report the benefit as received during the preceding taxable year. Alternatively, if such amount exceeds $3,000, the taxpayer has the option under section 1341 to compute tax for the amount paid to him or her during the taxable year. If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the amount of social security benefit that is attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief.

If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the amount of social security benefit that is attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief. If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the amount of social security benefit that is attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief. If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the amount of social security benefit that is attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief. If this special rule is elected, the taxpayer will determine the tax for the taxable year of receipt of the lump-sum payment by including in gross income for the current year the amount of social security benefit that is attributable to prior years, the general income averaging rules may not provide adequate relief.
The Committee's bill provides that railroad retirement "Tier 1" benefits are subject to taxation in the same manner as monthly benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act. As a result of this change, certain amounts will be transferred regularly to the Railroad Retirement Account.

Under the financial interchange between railroad retirement and social security, however, the social security trust funds in each position they would have been in if railroad employment were covered under social security, therefore, the committee understands that existing law requires that the proceeds of income taxes on those railroad retirement benefits which are strictly equivalent to social security benefits are to be credited to the social security trust funds through adjustments in the financial interchange. This will produce exactly the same result as if the social security system had paid that portion of the Tier 1 benefits which would have been taxable to the social security system less the proceeds and had received the proceeds of the income tax on these benefits.

Effective date

In general, the provisions will apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, in taxable years ending that date. However, the provisions will not apply to benefits received after December 31, 1983, if the generality applicable to the date of these benefits before January 1, 1984.

B. Acceleration of increases in FICA taxes; 1984 employee tax credit (sec. 132 of the bill; secs. 101, 1111, and new sec. 3510 of the code).

Present law

Under present law, several increases in social security payroll tax (FICA) rates are already scheduled to take effect between 1985 and 1990, as shown in the following table:

Reasons for change

In conjunction with other changes in the law which are designed to help insufice the solvency of the OASI Trust Fund, the committee has found it necessary to advance the OASDI increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1986 to 1985. In order to cushion the impact on workers of the first change, a one-time tax credit is provided to employees equal to the 1984 increase in the employees FICA tax.

Because railroad retirement (RR) payroll taxes are linked to the rates for social security, the committee's bill also provides similar increases in the corresponding railroad retirement taxes.

The bill provides employees a credit equal to 0.3 percent of compensation subject to the FICA and RR taxes and to payments of amounts equivalent to FICA taxes under section 218 of the Social Security Act. Because the credit is to be taken into account, the time the tax is collected (by deduction from the employees' wages or otherwise), the net OASDI employee tax rate for 1985 will be 6.40 percent. However, employees' annual wage statements are to show the gross FICA tax (7.00 percent of wages) and the credit amount (0.3 percent of wages) separately. Under present law, the appropriation of funds into, for example, the OASDI trust funds will be based on the gross OASDI employee tax rate, which will be 5.70 percent and, thus, will not be affected by the credit.

Effective date—These provisions will apply to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

C. Self-employment income tax and credit (secs. 133 of the bill and secs. 43, 164, 275, 401, 1401, and 1402 of the Code).

Present law

The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax rate that is equal to approximately 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax rate that is equal to 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

The presently scheduled OASDI rates for self-employment income are as follows:

<thead>

The HI rates for self-employed persons will be:

<tr>

</tr>

Beginning in 1984, self-employed persons will be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984, the credit will be 2.9 percent of self-employment income. For 1985, the credit will be 2.5 percent. For 1986, the credit will be 2.2 percent. For 1987-89, the credit will be 2.1 percent. For 1990 and subsequent years, the rate of the credit will be 2.3 percent. The SECA tax credits may be taken directly into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

The SECA tax credits will not reduce the revenues of the social security trust funds, once under the Social Security Act, the Social Security Act, appropriations into the trust funds will be based on the SECA tax rates specified above without regard to the credits allowed against such taxes.

Effective date—The provisions will be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

Reclassification of OASDI tax rate (section 151 of the bill)

Present law

The tax rate allocation between OASI and DI is fixed in the law. The following table displays the allocation for employers, employees and the self-employed:
Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would reallocate the OASDI tax so that both trust funds will have about the same reserve ratios (i.e., reserves at the beginning of a year as a percentage of outgo during the year). This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Interfund borrowing extension (Section 142 of the Bill)

Present law

Public Law 97-123 authorized, through December 31, 1982, borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds whenever it was determined by the Managing Trustee (the Secretary of the Treasury) that additional funds were needed to pay benefits. The Conference Report specified that amounts borrowed could not exceed what was required to ensure benefit payments through June 1983. Under this authority, and to fulfill the Treasury's $17.5 billion transfer to the OASDI trust fund from the DI and HI trust funds in 1982 (of which $12.4 billion was from HI).

Under the plan, if a borrowing fund is required to make periodic interest payments on outstanding balances. Also the loan must be repaid. The Managing Trustee determines that the assets of the borrowing fund are sufficient to begin repayment.

Committee amendment

Through 1987, the committee amendment would authorize interfund borrowing between the OASI, DI, and HI trust funds. The following protections would be provided for the HI trust fund: (1) interest on any outstanding obligations to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent; and (3) in 1963-87, OASDI would repay HI from the OASDI trust fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 10 percent; and (4) in 1988-89, OASDI would repay HI from the OASDI trust fund ratio at the end of each year. (5) The committee amendment is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to authorize, through 1987, interfund borrowing between the OASI and DI trust funds and to the OASI and DI trust funds from the HI trust fund.

Under the Committee amendment, using intermediate cost estimates the amounts available from the HI trust fund for loans (in excess of the 10 percent required), the OASDI trust funds would be about $7 billion in 1984, $5 billion in 1985, $4 billion in 1986, and $3 billion in 1987; however, the committee amendment would not require any further loans in 1983-87. Under the pessimistic cost estimate, such amounts available from the HI trust fund would be about $6 billion in 1984, $4 billion in 1985, and zero in 1986-87; however, under this estimate the OASDI trust funds would not need any further loans in 1983-87 (although slightly worse experience during that period would make loans necessary).

Effective—On enactment.

Credit amounts of unexpended checks to the trust funds (Section 143 of the Bill)

Present law

The social security trust funds are not credited for OASDI benefit checks which remain uncashed. Instead, the value of benefit checks which are not cashed remain in the General Fund of the Treasury.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would provide for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past. In addition, it would require the implementation of a procedure under which: (1) the Treasury Department would make it possible to distinguish OASDI checks from other government checks; and (2) the trust funds would be credited on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of twelve months. This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform which required only the initial lump-sum transfer, assuming the future transfers were already provided for.

Effective date—The lump sum transfer would be made in the month following the month of enactment of this provision.

OASDI benefit checks (Sections 144 and 145 of the Bill)

Present law

Since 1946, the OASDI system has provided generous wage credits to persons who serve in the military forces. Such military personnel have been credited with earnings (upon which benefits are based) which no pay is made. Two types of credits have been given: (1) for World War II veterans, noncontributory wage credits of up to $1,920 per year for five military service years from 1940 to 1957; and (2) noncontributory wage credits of $1,200 per year for military service performed after 1956 to recognize the value of non-cash compensation, such as food, shelter and medical services. (In 1957, members of the military were compulsorily covered under social security.)

To finance the costs incurred in paying the benefits based on periods of military service for which no contributions were made, the social security trust funds receive reimbursements from the General Fund of the Treasury. The annual reimbursement to the trust funds has been about $700 million in recent years.

Committee amendment

The Committee amendment would credit the OASDI trust fund with a lump sum with an amount equal to the estimated additional cost of providing future benefits based on pre-1957 military wage credits. In addition, the OASDI trust funds would be credited with a lump sum payment equaling the taxes that would have been collected and the interest that would have been earned if the credits for service after 1956 and before 1983 had been taxed as they were earned, less the reimbursements already received. Beginning in 1983, a general fund appropriation would reimburse the trust funds on a current basis for employer-employee taxes on additional military wage credits given for non-cash compensation.

This is the same as the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform except that the Committee has extended the provision to include HI.

Effective date—Lump sum is payable in the month following the same of enactment. Lump sums would be payable within 30 days after the enactment of this provision.

OASDI benefit checks (Sections 146 of the Bill)

Present law

Payroll tax revenues which are in excess of the amount necessary to pay current benefits must be invested in special-issue obligations available for purchase only by the trust funds. Such obligations have maturities fixed with “due regard” for the needs of the trust funds and bear an interest rate equal to the average market yield on all marketable, interest-bearing obligations of the U.S. government which are not due or callable for at least 4 years.

The maturity dates on new special issues and the redemption schedule for trust fund investments are not set by law, but by Treasury procedure. The Secretary is authorized to set the maturity dates for special issues from 1 to 15 years—so that about 2/3 of the total portfolio comes due in each of the next 15 years. When maturities must be sold to meet benefit obligations, special issues with the shortest duration until maturity are sold first. In the event that there are several securities with the same duration until maturity, those with the lowest interest rate are sold first.

The Committee amendment provides for investing all trust fund assets each month at a rate of interest equal to the market rate on all public-debt obligations currently held by Treasury with a duration of four or more years until maturity.
The amendment would require the Managing Trustee to: (1) redeem all present special issues at their face amount; (2) redeem all floor bonds (marketable government bonds which, for inheritance tax purposes, are redeemable at par) at their current market values; and (3) invest, on a monthly basis, the redeemed investments and all future funds only in separate depository accounts for each of the trust funds.

This is similar to the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, except that the Commission recommended investing in special issues.

Effective.—The first day of the first month beginning more than 30 days after the date of enactment.

Revenue Gain.—No significant gain or loss anticipated.

Public members on board of trustees
(Section 147 of the Bill)

Present law
The Board of Trustees of the four social security trust funds (Old-Age and Survivor Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Supplemental Medical Insurance) consists of, ex officio, the Secretaries of the Treasury, Health and Human Services, and Labor, with the Secretary of the Treasury serving as the managing trustee. Among other responsibilities, the Board of Trustees is required to report to Congress each year on the operation and status of the trust funds and the general policies followed in managing the trust funds, and to recommend changes in such policies.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment would add two public members to the Board of Trustees (Excerpt, HI, and SM1 trust funds). The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Public members would not be considered fiduciaries and would not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity as a result of the trust funds.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform also proposed that the Board of Trustees of the OASDI trust funds be expanded to include two public members.

Effective.—On enactment.

Cost.—None.

Accelerate state and local deposits
(Section 148 of the Bill)

Present law
Requires the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees within thirty days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

By contrast, the frequency with which deposits of social security taxes and income taxes are made by private employers is determined under regulations issued by the Treasury and the frequency of payments of the liability of the employer. Deposits are required as frequently as every week for employers with large liabilities and as infrequently as every three months for employers with smaller liabilities.

Although State and local governments are now governed by the same rules as private employers with regard to deposit of withheld income taxes, deposits of social security taxes continue to be treated differently.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment would apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that now apply to private employers.

Effective date.—Effective for deposits required to be made after December 1983.

Amounts distributed under a tax-sheltered annuity generally are includible in the recipient's income, but are excluded from the social security wage base. Taxable benefits chosen by the employee (e.g., cash) are includible in income and generally includable in the wages.

Effective for deposits required after December 1983.

Triggered normalization of tax transfers
(Section 149 of the Bill)

Present law
Under current procedures, social security taxes are transferred to the trust funds on a daily basis on Treasury estimates of amounts collected. OASDI benefit payments are made only at the end of the month creating the need for high balances in the OASDI trust funds during the first week of the month.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment provides that, when at the start of any month, the Secretary of Treasury determines that the reserves of the OASDI trust funds are inadequate to meet 1 1/2 months' benefits (referred to as the '91-day bill'), the Secretary would be required to credit the trust funds on the first day of the next month with the full payroll tax revenues estimated for the month. The amount credited would be paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred at a rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.

Effective.—On enactment through 1987 (when the authority for interfund borrowing expires).

Cost.—Negligible.

Treatment of certain deferred compensation and salary reduction arrangements (sec. 150 of the bill and sec. 3121(a) of the Code).

Present law
Cash or deferred arrangements.—Under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement (sec. 401(k)) forming a part of a tax-qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf prior to receipt such amount directly from the employer in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the employee's election are treated as employer contributions to the plan and are includible for purposes of the rules defining "wages" includible in the social security wage base. (For example, the income tax rules for eligible plans permit distributions without regard to whether the employee is retired.) Thus, amounts deferred are includible in the social security wage base at the time of the deferral if the plan is not a retirement plan.

Non-qualified deferred compensation plans
Under present law (sec. 401(a)), standby pay or payments made to an employee on account of retirement, either on an individual basis or under a plan established by the employer providing for employees generally, may be excluded from the social security wage base without regard to whether the payments are included for purposes of the rules defining "wages" includible in the social security wage base.
quality for tax-favored treatment under the income tax rules.

Explanation of provision

Under the bill, an employer's plan contributions on behalf of an employee under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that the arrangement may be a part. The provision is intended to apply to elective contributions under the cash or deferred arrangement and not to non elective amounts contributed by employers to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan of which the arrangement may be a part.

The bill also provides that any amounts paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee would be includible in the employee's social security wage base. The committee intended that the provision would merely codify the holding of Revenue Ruling 85-208, 1985-2 Cum. Bull. 383, without any implication with respect to the issue of whether a particular amount paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement is includible in the employee's social security wage base.

In addition, amounts subject to an employee's designation under a cafeteria plan (Code Sec. 125) that constitute a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee that is not otherwise excluded from the definition of wages under section 3121 of the Code. The bill would also include in the social security wage base amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (Sec. 457(a)).

The provision is intended to apply to elective contributions under the cash or deferred arrangement and not to non elective amounts contributed by employers to a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan of which the arrangement may be a part.

In addition, amounts subject to an employee's designation under a cafeteria plan (Code Sec. 125) that constitute a qualified cash or deferred arrangement will be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee that is not otherwise excluded from the definition of wages under section 3121 of the Code. The bill would also include in the social security wage base amounts deferred under an eligible State deferred compensation plan (Sec. 457(a)). The payment to such a plan is treated as a wages for social security tax purposes.

Reasons for change

The committee believes that it is inappropriate to treat employer payments to a SEP as covered wages for benefit purposes where such amounts are also excluded from the social security wage base for tax purposes.

Explanation of provision

The bill amends the Social Security Act to exclude from the definition of covered wages for social security coverage purposes employer contributions to a SEP that are deductible as such by the employer. The bill makes clear that the exclusion applies, for both tax and coverage purposes, only with respect to the employer's contribution to a SEP, not with respect to the amount equivalent to the employee's contribution to an individual retirement arrangement (IRA).

Effective date—This provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.
INTRODUCTION OF THE BILL
INCREASE THE SSI PAYMENT STANDARD AND
MODIFY PASS-THROUGH REQUIREMENTS
(Sections 201 and 202 of the Bill)

Present law
The first $20 of income received by an individual in a month is disregarded in determining SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The income may be earned or unearned (except for some income based on need, such as veterans' pensions, which is fully counted). The disregard was provided in the original statute in 1972 to ensure that persons who had contributed toward an entitlement, such as OASDI, would be better off than those who had not. The amount of the disregard has not been increased since 1972.

Committee amendment
The Committee amendment would:
A. Increase the SSI payment standard applicable to all individuals by $20 ($30.00 for a couple) per month, effective July 1983; and
B. To help protect the States from increased costs resulting from this provision, expand current law to allow States to meet the “pass through” requirement for 1983 if they pass through the equivalent of the COLA that would have occurred under current law rather than the proposed monthly payment increase. Presently, State which provide payments to supplement the Federal SSI payment are required to pass through to recipients any Federal SSI cost-of-living increases. States have two basic options for meeting the “pass through” requirements: 1) they may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976, or 2) they may make monthly supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform recommended that, effective July 1983, the SSI disregard be increased by $30 per month for OASDI income (not other income) in determining an individual’s SSI eligibility and benefit amount. The effect would have been to increase by $30 the monthly income of those individuals who are entitled to both OASDI and SSI.

Currently, the maximum Federal SSI payment is $284 monthly for an individual and $426 monthly for a couple. After certain disregards, the amount of SSI actually received by an individual is reduced on account of other income.

Title II of the Bill
INCREASE THE SSI PAYMENT STANDARD AND MODIFY PASS-THROUGH REQUIREMENTS

Title IV of the Bill
UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

Extension of Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) Program

(Section 203 of the Bill)

Present law
Currently, there is no statutory requirement that OASDI beneficiaries be contacted and informed of potential eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. However, since the beginning of the SSI program, the Social Security Administration has undertaken a number of outreach efforts to identify those potentially eligible. SSA routinely provides information about SSI eligibility and takes applications for SSI payments at the time of application for OASDI benefits if the applicant is potentially eligible for SSI payments. In addition, many State agencies and other private relief groups routinely refer clients to SSA. Presently, about 7 percent of all OASDI disability social security recipients also receive SSI.

The Committee amendment would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries who are potentially eligible of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact their district offices. In addition, the provision would require that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance.

Despite the current and past activities of the Social Security Administration to make persons potentially eligible for SSI aware of the existence of the program, the Committee believes that there may be currently needy OASDI beneficiaries who have been on the social security rolls for a period of time who may have applied for social security prior to the IUR of at least 4.5 percent; and
(5) 8 weeks in all other States.

Effective date—Notification to those on the rolls must be made before July 1, 1984.

Title IV of the Bill
UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION PROVISIONS

Extension of Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program

(Section 201 of the Bill)

Present law

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) established the FSC program. This program provides additional weeks of unemployment compensation at the same weekly benefit amount to individuals who have exhausted their State benefits and any extended benefits to which they were entitled. The FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, expires March 31, 1983.

As originally enacted, the FSC program provided 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. The Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-424) increased the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits to 16, 14, 12, or 8, depending on the State where the individual filed for or received the additional benefits.

Beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program began providing the following maximum weeks of benefits:
(1) 16 weeks in States with an insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent; (measured as the average over a month or 2 straight months over the previous 12 months)
(2) 14 weeks in States that were triggered to the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
(3) 12 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 5.5 percent;
(4) 10 weeks in remaining States with a 13 week average IUR of at least 3.5 through 4.4 percent; and
(5) 8 weeks in all other States.

In order to qualify for FSC, a worker must have worked at least 20 weeks or earned its equivalent in wages in his base year, usually defined as the first four of the last five completed calendar quarters before he filed his claim for regular State benefits. He must also have exhausted the regular and extended benefits to which he is entitled. In addition, his benefit year must have ended on or after June 1, 1982 or he must have been eligible for extended benefits for any week beginning on or after June 1, 1982.

If an individual is eligible for FSC benefits, the number of weeks of FSC he may receive is determined in relation to the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was eligible. An eligible individual may receive FSC for the lesser of (a) 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits to which he was entitled or (b) the maximum number of weeks of FSC benefits provided in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in his former State.

Committee amendment
The committee amendment would extend FSC for 6 months through April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983. To qualify for FSC, an individual would need at least 26 weeks of work or its equivalent in wages in his base year. This restriction would apply only to claimants who initially become eligible for FSC on or after April 1, 1983.

The number of weeks available in each case would be:
(1) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:
(1) 16 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above;
(2) 12 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.5 percent;
mandatory if the employees have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. In addition, States would be required to deny benefits between terms to individuals performing teaching services or attending instruction or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or agency.

Effective date
The provisions would be effective on or after October 1, 1984, States in which there is no legislative session before that date would, however, be given additional time to comply with this provision.

Modification of credit reduction cap provisions

Present law
Employers in all States currently pay the tax levied under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally received a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. Prior to this amendment, FUTA does not provide for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions, the credit reduction would be 0.1 percent of at least 0.3 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral authorized as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the credit reduction would be 0.1 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reductions. The credit reduction if a State does not meet the interest deferral condition after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Modification of interest provisions

Present law

The new deferral would be 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet two conditions to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and
(2) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits, a State must demonstrate that:

(1) the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981-1987).
(2) there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981-1987);
(3) its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983-1987); and

(4) the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of each year (effective for taxable years 1981-1987). The comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981.

The committee amendment would make the credit reductions contingent on the adoption of a State unemployment law permanent. A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law. The committee amendment would, however, provide for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions, the credit reduction would be 0.1 percent of at least 0.3 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral authorized as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the credit reduction would be 0.1 instead of at least 0.3 percentage points.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reductions. The credit reduction if a State does not meet the interest deferral condition after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Modification of interest provisions

Present law

The committee amendment would make the provisions imposing interest on the State unemployment lien. It would also provide for another deferral of interest payments and a lower interest rate for which States could apply if they meet certain conditions as certified by the Secretary of Labor. The new deferral would be 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year. It would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet two conditions to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and
(2) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after October 1, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits, a State must demonstrate that:

(1) the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981-1987).
(2) there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981-1987);
(3) its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983-1987); and

(4) the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of each year (effective for taxable years 1981-1987). The comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981.

Change in second year additional credit reduction

Present law

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State’s average tax rate is lower than 2.7

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable wage base of $7,000, the tax rate base on the State’s tax-and Federal taxable wages in the same year would be $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have higher tax efforts.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would change the computation of the average tax rate to reflect the ratio of the federal unemployment tax base to the national average wage in covered employment.

Effective date.—Taxable year 1983.

Change in the date interest is due

Present law

Present law requires that interest is due the first day of the next fiscal year.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment requires that interest be paid before the first day of the next fiscal year.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Collection interest

Present law

Present law provides no mechanism through which the Federal Government can collect interest from the States if the States do not pay it by the first day of the next fiscal year.

Committee amendment

The committee amendment would require the collection of delinquent interest charges each year after they are due by a reduction in the FUTA credit of 0.1 percentage point. Any amount collected during the deferral period (if overdue interest) would be applied to the outstanding loan as an involuntary repayment. This provision would provide a specific collection mechanism for payment of interest pending completion of any conformity proceeding which is implicitly but clearly required for nonpayment of interest by a State.

Effective date.—Date of enactment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, there is a lot of other material, but I would just say this, the Senator from Kansas belies this is an outstanding piece of legislation, not because it is perfect in every sense of the word, not because the Commission did not have its shortcomings, not because there probably are others who might have better ideas, but let the Senator suggest, because the distinguished Senator from

New York is in the Chamber, had the Senator from New York not visited with the Senator from Kansas on January 3, this year we might not be here this afternoon.

As I recall, that was about 12:20 p.m., that day when everyone was being sworn in, and the Senator from

New York came back to the desk of the Senator from Kansas and said:

Well, are we going to let social security go down the drain.

Or something to that effect.

We talked about it for a while, and we said, we can help it. So we deided to discuss it ourselves, along with Robert Ball, a former Commissioner, probably the most knowledgeable if not one of the most knowledgeable men about social security in this country.

The next day we brought in Alan

Greenspan, the chairman of the Commission. The next day or the following day we brought in a representative of the White House.

Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. CONABLE.

Mr. DOLE, Mr. CONABLE. That is correct.

That started what we thought was a very successful process because we came up with a compromise, and for that we owe a debt of gratitude to the distinguished Senator from New York and the others who were willing for about a 2-week period to try to hammer out some of these differences.

So what I believe we have is a fair and a reasonable proposal, not a perfect proposal, but the proposal that probably any one of us in this Chamber or anyone within the hearing of my voice would put together themselves. Let us face it. There is some resistance to bringing in new hires and new Federal employees. These is some resistance to COLA delay. There is some resistance to the fall-safe mechanism. There is some resistance to taxing benefits. That is only about 7 percent of the beneficiaries. There is some resistance of accelerating payroll taxes.

I would guess the strength of this package may be the weakness of its parts because it is a very fragile package we have.

If during the course of debate one of those should fall by the wayside, it is the option of the Member who may end up without a compromise and without a social security package this year.

Along with all the others who deserve great credit and certainly that would be every Member, with the exception of the Member speaking, on Social Security. The proposed change and perhaps more importantly the willingess of the President and the Speaker of the House of Representatives to endorse the package and in a bipartisan way, to remove politics, partisan policies from consideration of social security in my view has been the highlight of anything that has happened around here for the last several years.

It is a very, very politically sensitive program. There are between 36 million and 37 million beneficiaries. There are between 115 million and 116 million people who pay into Social Security. It seems to many of us on the Commission that we could have gone to the Commission meetings and argued about politics, whether it is the Democrats, fault, the Republicans, fault and we could have spent months doing that. But we determined at a very early stage to try to work out a compromise, and let the politics be played out in some other fashion.

So I certainly believe that we owe a debt of thanks to the President of the United States, to all the members of the National Commission, to members of the staff who worked with the Commission and members of our own personal staff in an effort to sort of put all this together. And then finally, we cannot fail to recognize the very good work done on the House side, the way it was handled by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the very speedy action by Chairman Rosten-kowski and Congressman CONABLE, the ranking Republican member on Ways and Means, and all the members on that committee, and the quick and responsible action on the House floor and, I must say, I hope the equally responsible and quick action in the Senate Finance Committee and on the Senate floor.

This is one piece of legislation that should pass the Congress and be signed by the President before the so-called Easter break, and I have every reason to believe that it will be passed,

I hope, by a substantial vote.

I am not suggest there is no one on the Commission that I know of has ever indicated this would be their package.

If they could write out their own package they would probably have different provisions. But the members of that Commission, knowing the limitations, knowing the severity of the crisis, in my view acted very responsibly, and I am very proud to have been a member of that group.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, before I say a single word with respect to the specifics of the measure before us, let me say that the Senator from Kansas has spoken of the role of the President, which was indispensable, of the Speaker, who led the legislation, of members of the White House staff, of the Commission members, and of the members of the Finance Committee in bringing this measure to the floor which, as he said, is almost surely the most important legislation we will deal with in this Congress. But it would not be here in what we firmly believe to be the final stage of enactment save for the Senator from Kansas. It is his willingness to give up personal concerns, to set aside other matters pressing on him in the Congress, to set aside the legitimate interest of party and legitimate political interests in all these matters that have brought us here today, and I stand in tribute to him and I suppose this tribute is also paid by my colleagues. I am grateful that every member of our side, the Democratic side, of the Finance Committee, voted to report this bill, and a larger statement of confidence we could not have, and none would be more deserved.

Mr. President, it is a very exceptional piece of legislation. I have a statement which deals with a number of aspects of the bill.

Mr. President, today the Senate begins deliberations on one of the most significant issues to face the 98th Congress. I refer, of course, to S. 1, the Social Security Amendments of 1983. The House has already concluded its consideration of the social security issue, and its approval of H.R. 1900 is a clear and unequivocal endorsement of the package of recommendations proposed by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. I am proud to have been a member of that Commission, and I am pleased the House was able with such speed and fairness to pass the package. The Senate Finance Committee package, along with a few technical improvements. It is my sincere hope that we in the Senate will be able to act in a similarly expeditious and fair manner. The Senate and House versions contain only relatively small differences, and the Washington Post generously describes each as "a basically fair and responsible approach to dealing with an issue that, without qualification, be rated as the most politically sensitive one on the American Scene."

I think we would do well to review the history of the so called social security crisis, for it underscores the pressing nature of the problem, as well as the successes that are within our reach.

On May 12, 1981, the administration proposed a package consisting primarily of benefit cuts designed to raise $110 billion over 13 years. The measure, however, passed unanimously, on May 20, 1981, a resolution stating "that Congress shall not precipitously and unfairly reduce early retirees' benefits." The prospect of governmental gridlock loomed.

But the shrinkage of the trust funds that resulted from further deterioration in the national economy, coupled with mounting public concern that the system was beset with long-term problems, made clear the need for action. On December 16, 1981, by Executive order of the President, the National Commission was created and charged with providing appropriate recommendations to the Administration "on long-term reforms to put social security back on a sound financial footing."

The Commission met nine times during 1982 and reviewed material produced by various public bodies including Congress, the 1979 Advisory Council, and the 1981 National Commission on Social Security Reform. It sought the advice of experts and examined a wide variety of alternative approaches. These deliberations led to a consensus about the size and nature of the problem. The Commission agreed that there is a short-term problem—a $150 to $200 billion shortfall between now and 1989; that from 1990 through the early 2000's the system will be in surplus; and that due to the retirement of the "baby boom" generation, there is a long-term problem beginning after 2010. Equally important, the Commission agreed that "Congress * * * should not alter the fundamental structure of the social security program or undermine its fundamental principles."

There was, however, no agreement on solutions to the social security crisis. Commission members were deeply divided on recommendations to cover both the short-term and long-term revenue shortfalls. This impasse persisted until the middle of January, at which point the combined efforts of Commission members, the congressional leadership and the White House produced the difficult compromise necessary to achieve an acceptable package of proposals.

Twelve of the fifteen Commission members, the President, the Speaker, and other congressional leaders agreed that the National Commission's recommendations strike an acceptable balance between tax increases and reductions of benefit increases. Since the report was issued, it has been endorsed by a broad range of organizations, including the Save our Security Coalition, the National Association of Manufacturers, the United Auto Workers, the American Council of Life Insurance, and the Business Round Table.

No Commission member is satisfied with every recommendation. No Member of the House or Senate will be satisfied with every recommendation. But as a January 18 Washington Post editorial argued, the package as a whole "as close to absolute fairness as any social security revision can ever be." The balance, nonetheless, is fragile. The House has succeeded in avoiding significant alterations in the package. It is our responsibility in the Senate to do the same.

I have been of the opinion that throughout these long and difficult negotiations, more than just social security has been at stake. An alarming number of people, social security contributors and beneficiaries alike, became convinced of the inability of the Congress to govern fairly and effectively. When S. 1 passes, we will have demonstrated not merely that the social security system fundamentally sound, we will have demonstrated that there is a genuinely bipartisan spirit, and it can govern. While the effort and patience needed have been great, it is without question a point worth making.

I conclude by saying that if we are on the verge of a historically important achievement, it has come without the chairman of the Finance Committee's initiative, commitment, and patience. Our hearings were open to the widest range of opinion on this issue and the Committees deliberations were thoughtful and exhaustive. The chairman of the Finance Committee and his staff operated made S. 1 possible, and I want to express my personal thanks to him. It is my hope that within a short time the Nation too will recognize the valuable role he has played in the development of this truly praiseworthy piece of legislation.

I would call the attention of Senators to an editorial which, by a happy bit of serendipity, appeared in the Washington Post this morning entitled "Social Security Speeds Along. It begins with the paragraph which I will take the liberty of reading. It says:

If you get discouraged from time to time about government's inability to deal with the hard problems, reflect upon the surprising agility with which the Social Security rescue legislation is moving through Congress. Not only has the progress been swift, but, marvelous to tell, each step along the way has actually brought additional improvements to the package.

I ask unanimous consent that the editorial and its full text be placed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the editorial was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Social Security Speeds Along

If you get discouraged from time to time about government's inability to deal with the hard problems, reflect upon the surprising agility with which the Social Security rescue legislation is moving through Congress. Not only has the progress been swift, but, marvelous to tell, each step along the way has actually brought additional improvements to the package.

The measure approved by the House last week made better the version proposed by the National Commission on Social Security Reform; it solved, in addition to the short-term Social Security deficit, the long-term Social Security problem. The House would achieve this by a further increase in the payroll tax in the next century and by gradually postponing the age at which full retirement benefits can be received from 65 to 67.

The Senate Finance Committee bill, which will come to the Senate floor this week, provides additional protection for the fund through a more recession-resistant and better long-term plan for shorting up the program. The retirement age would be postponed by only one year and the needed savings would come from a small reduction in benefits for all new retirees. This is a much more fair approach than that taken by the House, which would put a heavy burden on those people who are forced into early retirement because of job loss.

The Senate version also allows people who go on working after age 65 to draw full Social Security benefits starting in the next decade. This is a sweetener for high-income beneficiaries who would now have to pay taxes on their benefits, but it would also help people with relatively modest earnings.

If, as seems likely, the Senate approves the measure this week, the conference will be in a happy position. They will need only to reconcile relatively small differences between the two measures, each of which is basically a relatively fair and responsible approach to dealing with an issue that can, without qualification, be rated as the most politically sensitive of all.

Note also that this has been accomplished without round-the-clock floor battles and encampments of the elderly staked out in the halls of Congress—and with admirable disregard for the million-dollar campaign of misleading argument launched by federal and postal workers' lobbies. It's enough to make you feel optimistic about the future of the republic.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. It comments upon the success of the Finance Committee, in the view of the Post, in fact improving upon a measure which the House passed, which, in turn, improved on the proposals of the Commission.

With respect to a repeated theme of my friend's colleagues' remarks that none of us would necessarily approve any of the details and many would disapprove of all, and yet together the weakness of each provision is the strength of the whole—let me, in a word or two, in a sentence, may I point out that in the House of Representatives Senator Pepper, as he is referred to in that body, moved in the final House floor consideration an arrangement which would deal with the long-term problem without increasing the age of retirement. This had been a matter of the deepest concern and conviction on the part of Senator Pepper for a very long while, and yet his measure lost in the final proposal, and I do not mean to propose the floor of the Senate.

I think the judgment of the Senate, as reflected in the Finance Committee, should be settled. Similarly in the House Committee on Ways and Means there was a proposal to deal with the long-term problem of shortfall by a combination of a reduction in benefits and an increase in taxes, and again while that was overwhelmingly approved in the Ways and Means Committee, it was not voted on on the floor, and I think it is well to proceed from where we are and just raise that alternative either, and I will not do that. I will vote for the proposal as it emerged from the Finance Committee and hope it will not in any significant way be changed.

I would like to make several points that may be as widely recognized or in some cases simply only recently have been established that are important in this matter.

First of all, with respect to the constituents, the beneficiaries from social security. It is commonly stated that there are some 36 million to 37 million beneficiaries of social security and there are some 110 million or 115 million persons paying into the system for the support of the beneficiaries.

Not so, Mr. President. Every person in this house, whether still actively employed and paying into it or retired and receiving from it, is a beneficiary of it, because social security provides the protections of insurance, life insurance, disability insurance, care of the widow and the orphaned, for everybody involved. No person would deny that an insurance of that quality is a real benefit. In consequence of which I think it would be more widely understood that we are all beneficiaries of it, because social security provides the conditions which we hope that by the end of this legislation will be made universal.

The original 1935 legislation left out a number of groups. One by one they have been included. Now, with inclusion of Federal employees and, indeed, employees of the Social Security Administration, coverage will be as near as possible to a reasonable possibility, universal.

A second point I would like to make is about the stabilizer, as we have come to call it, and the Senator from Kansas described it. I would like to note that during the course of the informal negotiations in January, we were able to replicate the experience of the period 1975 to 1982, given the hypothetical existence of the COLA adjustment part of this stabilizer.

It is remarkable and important to note that had we had such a stabilizer in effect in 1977 we would not be on the floor today. There would be, no shortage in the hands of the Senate, we might not be on the floor today making changes that are in themselves wholly desirable—desirable because there are improvements in the system in this legislation. The Senator from Kansas mentioned but two—the former in the hands of the Senate and the former in the hands of the House. I think the Finance Committee, in the view of the Post, in fact improved the social security and the fact that he was still in demand for consulting and other duties, lecturing that he could carry out.

I remember, in my early years in Washington in the 1960's, how that great man had to make every decision about what he was going to do, where he could speak, in terms of would he lose his social security benefits if somehow he went over that $8,000 limit. It was lower than that then. That will be behind us and ought to be.

I would note that there are a number of provisions that are specifically correcting, such as inequities in the present system with regard to older women, and they too are additions to the system.

Finally, Mr. President, in order that we may have some sense about the magnitude of the measure that we put in force today or tomorrow or the next day—and we must put them in force in this period in the Congress—else we cannot make the technical adjustments at the Social Security Administration to send out the June checks as they will be required—I would like to offer for the Record, Mr. President, estimates of the cumulative OASDI surpluses which this measure will bring about. We added the Office of Actuary to the Social Security Administration to estimate the period during which the funds will increase from year to year until the first moment, the first year, at which it could be estimated they will decline. And the Office of Actuary reports to us that from the year 1992 to the year 2021, these funds, the OASDI funds. increase each year.

Now, we are cautioned that things can surprise us. But this is the Office of Actuary. They make the best judgment they can. And, Mr. President, at the end of that period, in the year 2021, the cumulative surpluses are $12.1 trillion. That suggests a considerable achievement and the importance of this measure which we bring to the floor at this point.

I see that my distinguished friend the Senator, the distinguished Senator from California, is on the floor. We would be happy to hear his views on these matters.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank my friend from New York. I appreciate his eloquent statement with regard to the importance of social security.

UP AMENDMENT No. 68

(Purpose: To require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to prepare an implementation report on earnings sharing legislation)

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. (Mr. PRESSLER.) The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California (Mr. Cranston) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 68.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 172, between lines 5 and 6, insert the following new part:

PART E—EARNINGS SHARING IMPLEMENTATION REPORT

Sec. 161. (a) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this Part referred to as the "Secretary") shall develop, in consultation with the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, proposals for earnings-sharing legislation as described in subsection (a) of section 404 of title 31, United States Code.

(b) The Secretary shall report such proposals to such committees not later than January 1, 1984. The report and proposals provided to such committees shall:

(1) take into account, discuss, and analyze the impact of earnings sharing on various categories of social security beneficiaries and include recommendations for the implementation of earnings sharing which may be necessary to provide adequate protection for particular classes of beneficiaries;

(2) include specific recommendations with respect to an appropriate and feasible time period or time periods for implementation of such proposals along with recommendations for any transition provisions which may be necessary or appropriate; and

(3) provide cost-impact analyses on each proposal.

(b) For the purposes of subsection (a), the term "earnings sharing" refers to proposals that would combine earnings of a husband and wife during the period of their marriage and each spouse would receive equal social security credits for earnings accrued during the course of the marriage. The earnings-sharing concept is very similar to the community property model, which is characterized by the basis for division of all property or property rights—including private pension rights—acquired during marriage.

Mr. President, I was very pleased that 8 of the 15 members of the Social Security Reform Commission in January specifically referred in their supplemental statements to the earnings-sharing concept as the most promising and direct approach to dealing with the fundamental inequities faced by women under the social security system. They urged that steps be taken now to work out the details for implementation of earnings sharing.

The amendment I am offering would set in motion the process toward developing a concrete and viable plan of action to achieve this goal.

IMPLEMENTATION REPORT NOT A STUDY

Mr. President, I want to stress that this amendment does not call for another study. We did that in 1977. The 1977 social security amendments in section 341 called for HHS to study the problems facing women under the social security system. The report developed as a result of the 1977 amendments presented the earnings-sharing model as one of two possible options for dealing in a comprehensive fashion with the problems facing women under social security. Other commissions and task forces—both public and private—which, I think, at the problem have also identified earnings sharing as the most promising alternative for providing equity for women under the social security system. What needs to be done now is to work out and test the details on how a specific earnings-sharing model can be implemented, and determine what type of transition provisions are needed and what modifications in the basic earnings-sharing concept are necessary in order to provide adequate protection for various categories of beneficiaries.

Mr. President, last year I introduced an earnings-sharing proposal in the Senate, I noted that there were a number of complex technical issues that would need to be resolved during the course of consideration of earnings-sharing legislation. However, as of the end of the 99th Congress, Reform Commission members noted in urging action on earnings sharing:

The fact that transition to such a program will be complex to design and implement should not prevent this much-needed change. Work on the program should begin now so that the details can be worked out and communicated well in advance.

The amendment which I am offering today is designed to do that. It is patterned after the amendment adopted in the 1982 Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act which directed HHS to develop specific proposals for implementation of prospective reimbursement for medicare. The expertise of HHS along with CBO would be focused upon providing Congress with concrete proposals and a data base upon which legislative action can be taken in the very near future. I am convinced that this type of implementing analysis should precede enactment of earnings sharing and that we need to take action now so that the technical and programmatic issues can be resolved in a responsible, yet timely fashion.

SOCIAL SECURITY AND THE NEEDS OF WOMEN

The principal problem with the current social security system as it relates to the needs of women is that the program has not adapted to the profound changes in the role of women in our society since the social security system was founded.

In the 1930's when the social security program was created, the typical American family consisted of a man who was a full-time worker and his wife who was a full-time lifelong homemaker. The labor force participation was less than 17 percent and fewer than 1 in 12 marriages ended in divorce. The social security benefit structure was established as a lifelong concept of a lifelong couple with one wage earner and a dependent spouse.

The situation has dramatically changed over the past 50 years and the typical family of the thirties and forties is not the typical family of today. Women have become a major part of America's work force, enriching the world of work with their contributions and productivity, despite continuing wage discrimination and employment barriers. The percentage of married women in the work force exceeds 50 percent and it has been estimated that 90 percent of all women spend some portion of their lives in the work force, many of them moving in and out of the roles of wage earners and homemakers as the needs of their families change. It is no longer true that women are likely to be either lifelong homemakers or lifelong wage earners; these roles are combined and interchanged throughout a lifetime.

Similarly, we must recognize, like it or not, that the status of marriage has changed dramatically over the past 50 years. Today, one in three marriages ends in divorce.

Mr. President, despite these massive changes in our society, the social security system has continued to operate on the basis of a philosophy designed for an era when most women did not work and when most women were part of a lifelong marriage. Consequently, the current system works well only for those women whose family and work patterns have not changed from the thirties and forties. For the majority of women and families that no longer fit into that pattern, the system fails to provide either adequately or equitably for their needs.

Both homemakers and women in the labor force are inadequately protected under the current system.

Women who work outside of the home often find that their social security benefits are no higher than they would be if they had never paid into the system. Members of two-earner families often find that they receive lower social security benefits than one-earner families with precisely the same lifetime earnings records.

The inequities of the current system can be even more acute for those women who have been full-time homemakers and are displaced from that role, either by divorce or the death of a spouse. After years of work as a homemaker, a divorced woman may find herself without any work record or eligibility for social security benefits only as a dependent spouse—at 50 percent of what her former spouse receives. A homemaker also receives no protection against disability under the current system.

A woman who drops out of the labor force for child rearing is also penalized since the current system rewards continuous work patterns. Each year she remains out of the work force to care for her children can reduce her ultimate social security benefits.

Mr. President, under the earnings-sharing concept, the combined earnings of a couple would be divided equally. Each spouse would have a separate social security account and would accrue credits equally during the period of marriage. Homemakers would receive disability and retirement benefit protection in their own right. The current bias against two-earner families would be eliminated. Women who enter and leave the work force to fill necessary child-rearing roles would no longer be penalized by gaps in their social security coverage.

Mr. President, the earnings-sharing concept represents a fair and equitable approach to revising the social security system to reflect the changing role and needs of women and their families.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from California. The only question the Senator from Kansas had was the date. That has been changed to January 1, 1984.

Mr. CRANSTON. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. As the Senator knows, the consensus package of the National Commission includes some of the recommendations to improve the equity of the social security system for women. In addition, it includes a provision offered by Senator Armstrong that has already been referred to, which will allow people who are out of the work force caring for children under 3 to drop up to 2 years of earnings in the computation of their earnings history.

I think this is a good amendment which I support. It does take it beyond the study stage. We shall develop in consultation with the Senate Committee on Finance and the House Committee on Ways and Means, proposals for earnings sharing legislation described in section (b). That has been made part of the record.

I am prepared to accept the amendment. I thank the distinguished Senator from California not just for the amendment, but for his past interest in this problem. This is an area of discrimination or inequity, whatever we may call it. The Senator from California has been in the forefront in trying to correct it.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank the Senator from Kansas very much.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, may I simply associate myself with the views of the chairman of the Finance Committee. This is a matter that the Commission did very much concern itself with. The amendment of the Senator from California will put that concern into statutory language and set about a process by which we will be able to do this in the context of time and when we will more than likely have the funds. That is a necessary combination.

Mr. CRANSTON. I thank my friend from New York.

Mr. President, I move adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 69) was agreed to.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 69

(Purpose: To conform certain Veterans' Administration pension law to accommodate the proposed six-month delay in cost-of-living adjustments)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send a technical amendment to the desk on behalf of the distinguished Senator from Wyoming (Mr. Simpson) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

On page 75, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following: (a) Section 541(b) of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-35, title 38, United States Code, section 541(b)) is amended by subsection (a)(1) shall apply with respect to amounts payable for periods beginning after May 31, 1983.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendment made by subsection (a)(1) shall apply with respect to amounts payable for periods beginning after May 31, 1983, that an increase is made in maximum annual rates of pension pursuant to section 541(b) of title 38, United States Code.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment will not in any way alter the substance of the package of social security reform we are considering today. It will simply conform VA pension law to those reforms. It will affect only the payment of certain veterans' benefits, not the payment of any social security benefits. Its sole purpose is to protect VA pensioners from any reduction in their monthly benefits.

I think the Senator from California should be added as a cosponsor to the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Yes.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, this amendment concerns the effect of the 6-month cost-of-living adjustment (or COLA) delay for social security on the Veterans' Administration improved pension program.

Pursuant to the reconciliation requirement last year's last-minute first-concurrent budget resolution, Senate Concurrent Resolution 92, the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee reported out legislative language which provided that, in computing amounts of monthly non-service-connected VA pension, payable amounts of 10 cents or less shall be rounded down to the next lower dollar. This provision, which was enacted as section 403 of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1982, Public Law 97–253, was made effective "with respect to amounts payable for periods beginning after March 31, 1983," so as to coincide with the effective date, under section 3112 of title 38, United States Code, of this year's COLA for the improved pension program enacted in the Veterans' and Survivors' Improved Pension Act of 1978 (Public Law 95–588). Under that section, monthly amounts of such pension are increased at the same time and by the same percentage as title II social security benefits are increased pursuant to section 215(1) of the Social Security Act, which currently provides that benefits shall be increased effective on June 1 of each year.

The congressional intent underlying last year's rounding-down enactment was stated as follows in the joint explanatory statement accompanying the conference report on the Reconciliation Act—House Report No. 97–759, at 83:

The conference stress that this provision will be effective at the same time as the cost-of-living adjustment in the "improved" pension program (enacted in Public Law 95–588), pursuant to section 3112 of title 38, scheduled for June 1, 1983, with the result that such pension's monthly rate will be, by virtue of this provision, reduced below the amount paid for the previous month.

We feel that, in order to preserve and give full force and effect to this congressional intent, it is necessary that any social security COLA delay that is enacted in S. 1 be accompanied by a corresponding and simultaneous delay in the rounding-down provision contained in section 403 of the 1982 Reconciliation Act. Toward this end, the present amendment would delay the effective date of the rounding provision only with respect to improved pensions while retaining that provision's current effective date—June 1, 1983—for old, non-indexed pension payable under section 305(a) of Public Law 95–588.

In short, Mr. President, this amendment is entirely consistent with the bipartisan program of reforms contained in S. 1, and is not intended to alter, amend, or undercut any of those reforms. I would strongly urge its adoption.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know of no objection. This has been cleared on both sides.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it is emphatically approved by this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 69) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I rise in support of H.R. 1900, the bill reported by the Senate Finance Committee, to implement the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Mr. President, at the outset, I would like to pay tribute to the chairman of the committee, Senator DOLE, whom Senator MOYNIHAN and I had the privilege of serving with as members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

I believe the Senator from New York referred to the first paragraph in today's Washington Post editorial which comments that at each step along the way the work of the Commission has been improved upon and that in the Senate and in the Senate Finance Committee it has been improved still further.

Certainly, we all are very privileged to have had the leadership of the chairman of the Finance Committee. He has been tireless in his efforts to find ways to do a better job within the understanding arrived at among the members of the Commission and with Senator BAKER, Speaker O'NEILL, and the President. I believe with his guidance and help we have indeed been able to do that.

I secondly want to pay my tributes to the senior Senator from New York, Senator MOYNIHAN, who, it is literally safe to say, rescued the Commission in its moment of deepest and darkest despair, namely on the very day that we were all coming back to the Senate floor on January 3 to business as usual. But since the Senator from New York does not go about business as usual, and he never has in his distinguished public career, he was able to restore the process that had somehow begun to drift away from us over the Christmas recess, and it is thanks to his initiative, and I mean this sincerely, that we have been able to complete the accomplishments of the President, the Speaker, or any of the rest of us would not have been possible without that initiative. I think we all owe him a deep debt of gratitude.

Indeed, Mr. President, I think that even the critics of this package—Senator ARMSTRONG, as a member of the Finance Committee and as a member of the commission—have had a very positive, salutary impact upon it.

Several of the amendments in this legislation come about because of the interest of Senator ARMSTRONG in trying to make sure we really did the job. I do believe that this package does do the job and, in that respect, rises above even the most optimistic expectations that any of us might have had for this effort.

When I say it does the job, I do not mean that it just preserves a short-term deficit; I do not mean that it just addresses, for the first time that I am familiar with, the long-term deficit. It does so with a variety of safeguards and policy choices that are both responsible and necessary. Uneasy choices admittedly, but responsible and necessary assuredly.

I shall have more to say about that in just a moment, but the reason I stress that point is that, at this very moment, roughly three out of four Americans under age 45 say to people like Harry or George Gallup that they do not believe there is going to be a social security system when they retire. This bill, which does the job in meeting the solvency tests not just of the next 6 years but the next 75, should help restore public confidence in our fiscal measure. If there is anything we politicians are capable of doing, we should meet the test of reassuring those millions of Americans upon whom the very continuation of the social security system truly depends.

I have often said that this legislation is important not just to 38 million people—the retirees, their survivors, those who are disabled—by securing them against some kind of catastrophe, but I think it secures the interests of the 100-million-plus payees into the Social Security Trust Fund. This bill, plus this bill, we cannot be accused of giving only some kind of idle chatter or meaningless talk when we give a commitment to a strong social security system.

This bill insures the future financial integrity of the old age, survivors, and disability insurance trust funds. It provides a rescue plan which should hearten all beneficiaries and workers who have feared for the future of the social security system.

Included in this bill are measures which can restore the solvency of social security for the foreseeable future with no reductions in current social security benefit levels and no increases in payroll tax rates above those already scheduled in the law. The bill reaffirms the soundness of the basic structure of social security by making balanced and minimal adjustments to provide immediate relief from the short-term financing problems and to restore the long-term solvency of the program.

MEETING SHORT-TERM FINANCING NEEDS

The financing package reported from the committee improves the financing of OASDI by $165.5 billion over the next 7 years under intermediate assumptions. With only a modest improvement in the economy, this amount will be sufficient to pay benefit checks on time throughout the rest of the decade without resorting to any of the various fail-safe provisions in the bill.

However, in the past the Congress has been overly optimistic in its financing assumptions. The 1977 amendments were based upon intermediate assumptions which projected surpluses in OASDI beginning in 1980, with reserves accumulating to 7 months of outgo by 1987. Instead, because of several years of unanticipated double-digit inflation, declining real wages, and high unemployment, deficits continued in OASDI. Drawing reserves down to 1 month's payout by the end of 1982.

The significant departure from previous social security financing efforts in this financing package is that it is, in fact, going to be financed by long-term financing. The security to squeak through the decade under some kind of middleing or, if you will, intermediate assumptions. The bill contains, through the direct financing measures that have been well recorded, a number of fail-safe provisions designed to go into effect whenever reserve levels become dangerously low. The first failsafe is the automatic crediting of the trust funds with a full month's revenue whenever reserves fall below 12 percent of annual outgo.

This tax transfer enables the trust funds to continue making timely benefit payments as long as monthly revenues will cover the checks. The second failsafe is authorization to continue borrowing among the three trust funds with a 1 month's reserve. If these two provisions are insufficient to finance benefit payments, the third failsafe, a graduated COLA reduction, would be triggered into effect, with appropriate notice.

The short-run financing safeguards in this package are important because they should enable social security to continue making timely benefit payments even if economic conditions, contrary to expectation, deteriorate through the rest of the decade. Even under the most pessimistic economic assumptions, only the use of normalized tax transfers would be necessary to enable social security to continue making benefit payments without interruption through the end of 1987.

So, Mr. President, in sum, what we have achieved is a new effort to plan for the worst, and it is significant because, in the past, we have always planned for the best.

Mr. President, that has not, as we know, been good enough. This effort today before us reverses a good deal of wishful thinking, that I wish we had not done.

The bill before us provides adequate short-term financing for social security without placing an undue burden on any single group of beneficiaries or taxpayers. Ultimately, there is no painless solution to social security's financing problems, but this package spreads the pain that there is as evenly as possible. Above all, the new financing would affect employers and workers, a third would affect other accounts in the budget, and a third would affect beneficiaries. Because the financial burdens are broadly shared, they are more easily borne by any particular group of individuals.

In addition, the timing and sequence for implementing the various proposals in the package is designed to cushion their impact. The substantial immediate financing need in social security would be met primarily through transfers from other accounts in the budget—$19.2 billion would be transferred from the general fund in the first year alone. Significant payroll tax increases would be postponed until the last years of the decade to avoid any adverse consequences for economic recovery. The sequencing of this financing package makes it possible to provide sufficient revenues in the early years without drastic or immediate changes in the structure of the system.

I would like to say a few words about long-term financing.

More impressive than the success of this legislation in resolving the short-term financing problem is the fact that it would totally eliminate the long-term deficit currently forecast under intermediate assumptions, for the first time in a decade. The Congress has faced a projected 75-year deficit in OASDI continuing. The Senate bill would actually leave the trust funds with an unheard of long-run surplus of 0.08 percent of taxable payroll. Enactment of this bill would thus do more to restore public confidence in the program than any other single action the Congress could take.

Two-thirds of the financing improvements in the long run come from proposals which are included primarily to meet the immediate financing needs of the program. The other third comes from a combination of proposals designed specifically to resolve the long-term financing problem. This long-term solvency package incorporates four changes which in combination improve the financing of the program by an estimated 0.74 percent of taxable payroll over the next 75 years. These changes are: One, to gradually raise the age of normal retirement from 65 to 66 between 2003 and 2015; leaving the retirement age at 65 for the first two, to gradually reduce relative benefit levels in OASDI by 5.3 percent between 2000 and 2008 so that by 2008 workers on average would receive 40 percent of their preretirement earnings from social security, instead of the 45 percent anticipated under current law; three, to gradually phase out the earnings limit for persons 65 and older beginning in 1990, by raising the limit by $3,000 a year over the indexed amount until the earnings limit is completely eliminated in 1995; and four, to allow persons who leave the labor force before age 62 to include 2 additional dropout years in computing their social security benefits.

Splitting the long-run solution between raising the retirement age and reducing replacement rates spreads the adverse consequences of the program to the very broad group of middle-aged individuals who have occurred over the past 40 years and are expected to continue over the next 60. For men aged 65, life expectancy has increased by 5 years since 1940 and is expected to increase by another 4 years before 2040. An increase of 1 year in the normal retirement age is a modest response to this change.

I was very pleased with the third paragraph in today’s Washington Post editorial, which I am going to quote. It says:

The Senate Finance Committee bill, which will come to the Senate floor this week, provides additional protection for the fund in the event of severe recessions and a better long-term plan for shoring up the program. The retirement age would be postponed by only one year and the needed savings would come from a slight reduction in benefits for all new retirees. This is a much more gradual approach, the one taken by the House, which would put a heavy burden on those people who are forced into early retirement by disability or job loss.

Mr. President, that is exactly right. We have a far better plan than the House, which mandates that the retirement age eventually change from age 65, not to age 66 but to age 67. What we have done to pick up the additional money is, in effect, lower the so-called replacement rate by about 8 percent. That means in English is that, in comparison to the roughly 42 percent of earnings replacement— preretirement earnings replacement that people now get from social security—that percentage, instead of being 42 percent, would be reduced to about 40 percent replacement, a very small change. Indeed, that change would be gradually phased in from the year 2000 to 2006. It is a change of such a small magnitude that we can say with virtual assurance that the standard of living of people retiring just on social security will be, notwithstanding that change, substantially better than it is today.

The reason we can say that, Mr. President, with some assurance as we look 25 years into the future, is that it has been historically true over long periods of time that wages grow substantially faster—history says 1.5 percent faster—than prices. A 25 percent improvement in the real standard of living for all Americans, including those just about to retire.

What that means, Mr. President, is that, even with this change in the replacement rate, there will be a very substantial increase in the standard of living, not just for Americans before they retire but for those after they retire. And we have met our commitment to insure that all Americans, retired or not, do participate in the real growth of this country. I am very pleased to have been able not only to make that commitment, but to keep it.

Mr. President, one of the things that is unfair about raising the retirement age to 67 is that it affects different people very unequally. It is not that it is illogical policy. It is not illogical policy because we are living longer. We are expected to live longer with the additional advances in medical science. Indeed, life expectancy, as I have said, has increased for men of age 65 by 2 years since 1940. It is expected under inflationary assumptions far longer by another 3 years before the year 2040. For women aged 65, life expectancy has increased by 5 years since 1940, and it is expected to increase by another 4 years before the year 2040.

Indeed, in the future, the retirement age 20 years from now should coincide with changes in preferences for work after the turn of the century. Today, quite naturally, workers who have spent 40 years on the production line or in manual labor look forward to retirement at age 62 as a right they have earned. In addition, employers facing labor surpluses have been willing to offer older workers added pension benefits to take early retirement. While few of our older skilled workers encouraged to terminate with one employer stand little chance of finding employment with another. Early retirement benefits under social security have provided the unemployed the unhealthy older worker a chance to retire early with some dignity.

However, there is an increasing probability that preferences and opportunities for work will be quite different after the turn of the century. Demographers project the development of labor supply shortages toward the end of this century, leading to an increasing demand for older workers. In addition, today's younger generation, which entered the labor force later, has developed a higher level of education and skills, and has worked in less physically demanding occupations than their elders, may prefer to work longer than the current generation of retirees.

While the average worker may choose to delay retirement, there will still be those who are primarily those in stressful or hazardous jobs—who will need to maintain the option to retire early. There will continue to be workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be unable to work or will be unable to find employment when they are older.

For those who can work longer, raising the retirement age will conform to their choices and their opportunities. Combined with the incentives in this proposal, the increase in the delayed retirement credit and phase out of the earnings limit—raising the retirement age should help to dilute the strong association which has existed in the past between age 65 and retirement.

So, while people may be living longer, there is very inconclusive evidence that those living longer are going to be able to work proportionately longer.

In technical terms, our improvements in morbidity do not necessarily keep up with our improvements in mortality. For those who can not continue working past age 62, improvements should be made in disability insurance (DI), supplemental security income (SSI), and unemployment compensation to assure that those unable to work longer are not unfairly or unnecessarily punished for events which are fully beyond their control. Raising the retirement age only 1 year assures that benefit changes from this proposal will be modest.

It is for that reason that I am going to offer an amendment that is going to urge that there should not be action taken in the future to make improvements in our disability insurance program, make improvements in the supplemental security income program and in unemployment compensation, to assure that those people who are unable to work longer are not unfairly or unnecessarily punished for events which are beyond their control. When I say they would be punished, imagine, if you will, the difference in circumstances between someone who might have to retire at age 64 under current law versus age 64 under the House bill. The difference in today's terms would be that if the House bill were enacted, the individual would be forced to take roughly a 14-percent cut in retirement benefits—while others who could work longer would take no cut in benefits at all. That is what I mean by an unequal burden.

In addition to raising the retirement age 1 year, the long-term solution embodied in this bill would reduce relative benefit levels for future retirees by 5.3 percent from those anticipated under current law. This adjustment would be accomplished by gradually reducing the percentage of factors in the benefit computation formula beginning in 2000 until a 5.3-percent reduction is achieved for those becoming entitled to benefits after 2007.

Interest in slowing the growth in real benefit levels in the long run has resulted from concern about the effects of the tremendous increase in the social security benefits granted to social security beneficiaries in the late 1960's and early 1970's. Across-the-board increases of 43 percent between 1968 and 1971 and 20 percent in 1972 raised nominal benefit levels by more than twice the rate of inflation. These substantial real increases in benefits helped in the early 1970's to cut the rate of poverty among the elderly in half. However, coupled with unintentional increases in real benefit levels resulting from the "double-indexing" of future benefits for inflation, these increases also contributed to the decline in essential trust fund reserves. The 1977 amendments reduced the projected long-run replacement rate for future beneficiaries from 55 percent to 42 percent in an effort to stabilize the financing of the program. Some believe this still left long-run replacement rates nearly 10 percent higher than intended in the legislation of the early 1970's.

An across-the-board 5-percent reduction in benefits would still provide for real increases in benefits in the future. However, social security beneficiaries would be slightly lower in relation to preretirement earnings than they would be under current law. Because this adjustment in benefit levels is accomplished through the benefit formula, it affects all social security beneficiaries—retired, surving, and disabled—equally, unlike the adjustment in retirement age which would affect only retired beneficiaries. For this reason, it spreads a relatively small adjustment across a much larger group than the group affected by the retirement age. And the adjustment is fairer, because it makes the same proportionate reduction for everyone, rather than having its effects on benefits vary depending on the responses of individuals.

The combination of these two proposals in the long run, accompanied by benefit increases to encourage delayed retirement and special programs to aid those who cannot delay retirement, could result in relatively minor benefit adjustments for any particular group of individuals. As with the changes made in the short term to meet the emergency financing needs of the program, the long-term changes...
represent a blend of proposals to achieve a fair and balanced package of reforms to insulate the continuation capability of the social security program.

In conclusion, the most serious problem in social security has not been the financing shortfall, but the crisis in public confidence. In the last few years, the proportion of the population aged 65 and over has doubled, and there is little or no confidence in the future of social security has grown from just under half to over three-quarters. This massive loss in public confidence should be genuine cause for alarm because the whole social insurance system rests upon a compact across generations. Younger workers pay taxes to finance benefits to today's retired and disabled beneficiaries with the expectation that younger generations of the future will do the same for them when it is their turn to retire. Growing doubts about the future of social security threaten to undermine the willingness of workers to support the payroll tax upon which the entire system rests.

The bill before us represents a dramatic step toward restoring public confidence in social security. For the first time in more than a decade, with the enactment of this legislation, there will be no long-run or short-run financing shortfall in social security. In addition, despite the years of public debate and political stalemate leading up to this legislation, the Congress has demonstrated this year that it can work quickly and in a bipartisan fashion when necessary to maintain this important social institution. The commitment to preserving the social security system which we demonstrate by our actions this week will be an important indicator to today's younger workers that social security is as permanent as the Government which operates it.

I think, Mr. President, that our bill achieves a good balance. I hope we do not retreat from the position in this bill in conference, and that we fight very hard to retain the ability of people who, having retired, will not see their earnings taken away and offset their social security.

We, as you know, do eliminate in this legislation, starting in 1990, the so-called earnings test, to which I say good riddance, because it has achieved a bad habit of preservation, distortion, and even heartbreak for many rather fearful senior citizens who have worried that if they earned, somehow, $1 dollar more than the $5,500 or $6,000 the law permits without an offset, they somehow are doing something wrong. I also think that the provision added by the Senator from Colorado in the additional dropout years for women is a very important step forward. Mr. President, in sum, I hope my colleagues will support this measure. It represents an enormous amount of work. It is something that all members of the Finance Committee made major contributions to. I do not think any of us would labor under the illusion that it is totally perfect. We do not know how to write perfect legislation yet and probably never will, but this is as good a product as has been my privilege to work on behalf of, and I do urge my friends and colleagues to support it.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, before the senior Senator from Pennsylvania may have to leave the floor, I should like to have him hear from me in person just this one statement. He called attention to the editorial comment in this morning's Washington Post, which, very accurately in my view, states that the provisions that the Senate Finance Committee made to resolve the long-term gap in the deficit, that period which appears in the outer third of the 75-year period, are superior to those that emerged from the House.

What the Senator from Pennsylvania did not say is that it is he who fashioned that provision, and it was his efforts, his ability, to see the parts of compromise, bring a coalition together, that made the measure in the Finance Committee but earlier I observed, that although alternative arrangements had been contemplated by the Democratic members of the Commission, we would not offer them. We would support the measure as was reported. I wish to thank him for his extraordinarily generous remarks about the Senator from New York, I would like to put the record clear about who did this job. It was the Senator from Pennsylvania.

I should like to add one more note. We have made some quick calculations on the subject of what Keynes called "the miracle of compound interest," and I would report to the Senator and to the Chamber that if real wages rise 1.5 percent in the next 30 years, which is a reasonable projection, certainly historically attained, real wages will be 56 percent higher than they are now. If as a result of the changes in this program, the wage replacement rate of benefits is 40 percent rather than 42, we will still be working from a base of 50 percent higher base, so that real benefits will be considerably higher. I again thank him for his generosity.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, the Senator is absolutely correct: I had meant to say this, but I do thank him for his kind words. He is quite right about the miracle of compound interest. I had left that out of my explanation not because I am totally unaware of compound interest.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Oh, no, the Senator stated it. We just did the calculation.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. It is very true that what we have before us is a very happy prospect for future generations of Americans, one that they did not necessarily face a year ago when we faced as a Congress the issue of social security in some disorder and confusion.

I thank my friend from New York for all his very kind words.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Well, then, will the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. HEINZ. I would be happy to yield.

Mr. DOLE. I also extend my thanks to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, and I think the record should reflect that when we were trying to figure out what to do in Alexandria, Va., last November after a 3-day session in the Ramada Inn there, as I recall, it was the Senator from Pennsylvania who first broached the idea of sort of splitting it down the middle, at least getting us to think about how we are going to bring all the factions together. And that became sort of the starting point of the negotiations that started again in January.

For that effort we will be eternally grateful to the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania, and we appreciate this constructive action not only at every Commission meeting but particularly when we seemed to be bogged down and not really going anywhere. Even though we did not adopt that specific recommendation, it became the basis for the compromise which was ultimately adopted by the Commission. I thank the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I want to join others who have spoken in complimenting the members of the Senate Finance Committee, especially its distinguished chairman, for producing this legislation, a feat which many thought would be impossible, even quite recently.

I must say that the scholarship and resourcefulness of the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee is well known to this body, but in this particular instance he has performed a near miracle by the leadership he has given to the Senate, not only in his stewardship of the Finance Committee but also in the way he helped shepherd this matter through the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

I also join the Senator from New York in congratulating the Senator from Pennsylvania. I agree with what he has said and Senator Dole has said about the pivotal role John Heinz has played not only during the past few weeks but also from the start, and especially through the crucial—and at one point quite difficult—National Commission on Social Security Reform, when many were wringing their hands and, privately at least, confessing that this would not work out.

The Senator from Pennsylvania did not lose faith. He made many proposals which formed the basis for further
Mr. President, I wish also to say a word of congratulation to Alan Greenspan, who was the Chairman of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. We all know that Alan Greenspan is a brilliant man, but he is also a man of extraordinary patience. In fact, often, as the Commission deliberations droned on, I saw Alan seated at the head of the table, patiently listening to all the points of view and then synthesizing the increments on which we could agree and, in a gentle and courteous way, proposing that we lay aside those matters about which we could not agree, and taking one tiny victory after another and building on it and finally leading us, by painful steps, to a compromise, which was agreed to by a large majority of the Commission.

I say that as one who was not a part of the 12-member majority. I was part of the minority who did not think that, in the form recommended by the Commission, this was a satisfactory answer; but it does not lessen my admiration for the skill and dedication with which the Chairman of the Commission, Alan Greenspan, approached this task.

I will not mention them one by one, but I also want to say, for the benefit of my colleagues who did not have the privilege of serving on the Commission, that the public members who served did so with great distinction and did so with a clear understanding and expertise that I think is unusual in a citizen commission.

It is very difficult even for a Senator or for a Member of the House of Representatives, who has staff resources, who has experience dealing with legislation, to get under the same tent and agree that a large problem exists in the long term and that something should be done about it.

When the Commission issued this report, it said that we could expect a trust fund deficit during the remainder of this decade of between $150 billion and $200 billion and a potential deficit in excess of 1.8 percent of payroll—I guess 1.1 percent of payroll in the longer term. Since that time, the actuaries have had a little and now say that the potential long-term deficit is a bit over 2 percent of payroll, a change which makes it a somewhat awkward moment, but something I think not to be too concerned about because, after all, we are talking about future decades. We are talking about things that, in the end, are unknowable until they occur. But I am pleased to note that the Commission’s report, in the process of being considered by Congress, has been resolved to include the full long-term deficit.

With that as a background, let me put the bill before us in the perspective of the Commission’s report.

I objected, along with two other members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform—Mr. Waggonner of Louisiana, a present member of the House of Representatives, and Bill Archer, a present Member of the House of Representatives and a member—perhaps others would agree, a very knowledgeable member—of the Budget Ways and Means Committee and a recognized authority on social security. The three of us—Mr. Archer, Mr. Waggonner, and Mr. Armstrong—disagreed with the Commission’s recommendations for several reasons, and our concerns basically were these:

First, we were determined that any final resolution of the social security issue ought to be on the basis of assuredly solving the problem.

Recognizing that there are no guarantees in this world, and recognizing that there is no 100-percent certainty of anything in the future, we wanted to put on a package that would close the gap as surely as we could do so. We felt that the long-term solution as it came out of the Commission fell short of that, in that it left a sort of either-or process.

The Commission’s recommendations provided nearly 1.22 percent of payroll rather than the full amount of long-term deficit and settled the short-term problem, which the Commission identified as between $150 billion and $200 billion at the low end of that range.

Moreover, I was fearful that the actuarial assumptions used in at least certain portions of the report might prove to be optimistic. My first concern that we close the gap and do so without any question. I am pleased to come before the Senate today and say that, in my opinion, the bill which is recommended by the Senate Finance Committee, because of the amendments which have been adopted or recommended by the Finance Committee for adoption by the Senate, will in fact close the gap.
Now that does not say that there still could not be an unforeseen event intervene, but within the reasonable range of economic projections I think we can be confident that the benefit restraint which has been enacted, together with the increase in longevity and the fail-safe mechanism which has been described earlier, can assure with a very high degree of certainty that social security will not be running short of money any time in the near future, perhaps for the remainder of our lives.

In my opinion, that is critical for reasons that have already been stated. The Senator from Pennsylvania pointed out that many people, particularly younger workers, have expressed great criticism about whether or not social security was on a sound basis, whether it would be there when they retire. It is really crucial, in my opinion, that we secure public faith and confidence in the social security system because younger workers are much more likely to pay taxes month after month, particularly rising taxes, into a system if they do not have the confidence at least when they get to the retirement age there will be something there for them to retire to.

Second, it is crucial for us to shore up public confidence because of the experience we had in 1977. At that time it was believed, and I am sure in good faith, that the action taken by Congress would put social security on a sound basis in the next half century or more, and we were assured that that was the case. Five years later we were right back in the same dilemma that we had been in in 1977. I just do not think we can afford to have a repetition of that and come back in 1985, 1986, 1987, 1988 or 1989 or any time I hope within the service of the Senator from Colorado in this body, ever come back to this issue again.

The second concern that I felt about the long-term outlook for social security was doing something to raise the normal retirement age.

The idea of gradually increasing in some way or another the normal age of retirement had been previously recommended prior to the consideration of the National Commission on Social Security Reform by the Advisory Council on Social Security, the President's Commission on Pension Policy, the Council of Economic Development, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the American Association of Pension Analysts, the National Association of Homebuilders, the National Association of Wholesalers and Distributors, the American Council of Life Insuranc, the National Association of Life Underwriters. That last piece of that matter by committees of Congress.

And each of these committees and groups had recommended that in one way or another we should increase the normal retirement age. The need to do so is really obvious, I think, if we look at the fact. I am convinced that the centerpiece of any kind of permanent sound social security reform must be gradually increasing the retirement age. The need to do so is emphasized by the fact that the life expectancies of persons in this country have been rising and rising very rapidly so much so that a person who is 71 years old today has the same life expectancy that someone who was 65 had at the time social security was enacted.

If we do nothing about increasing the age in some way, not drastically, not absolutely, over time, if we do nothing, it will be impossible, in my opinion, for us to have a sound retirement system because the combination of taxes and/or benefit restraints that are implied if we keep funding longer and longer years of retirement when people are working fewer and fewer years is simply untenable, and we are right at the outer limits of that at the present time.

There are several proposals for increasing the age which have been suggested. Frankly, I am not at all sure that any of them are acceptable to me, provided that they are not abrupt, that they do not disrupt the retirement planning of people who are at or close to retirement and, second, that they get the job done over a gradual phase-in period of time.

I see in the Chamber the Senator from Idaho who I think may even offer an amendment on this subject, and I will support him. His amendment can be an amendment to the Senator, but if it has to do with gradually increasing the retirement age over a 36-year period, I believe, doing it at the rate of 1 year each month.

Mr. SYMMS. One month each year.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I beg the Senator's pardon. The Senator is correct, raising the retirement age by 1 month in each of the next 36 years so that 36 years from now people would retire at age 68 normally rather than age 65.

The House of Representatives adopted a different approach which raises normal retirement age to 67, phased in after the turn of the century.

My favorite proposal, as many Senators have heard me discuss before, was Item F-12, option F-12 in the Commission book which simply said that after the turn of the century we would increase the normal retirement age from 65 to 66 and there after index future changes in the retirement age changes in longevity.

The actual proposal which is recommended to us by the Finance Committee is a combination of raising the retirement age from 65 to 66 gradually after the turn of the century and making the kind of changes in the replacement ratio which have been described earlier by the Senator from Pennsylvania.

In fact, it was he who engineered the compromise which I will read out the various conflicting points of view which has led the Finance Committee to recommend this formula.

It is not my favorite approach. In my opinion option F-12 remains the best of these several ideas. But I think that the compromise which the Senator from Pennsylvania put together in the committee and is now the Finance Committee amendment on this subject is a good one and I intend to support it.

I say to my friend from Idaho that if he offers his amendment I intend to support that also, but it underscores the point that the issue is in some way actuarially rational the retirement age and I am fairly flexible about how exactly to do it.

The third area of broad concern to me is the need for benefit restraint. We have not done as much in that area as I would like, although I have pointed out one aspect of the compromise put together by the Senator from Pennsylvania is a very modest degree of benefit restraint after the turn of the century to lower the replacement ratios.

In addition, the Commission has recommended a brief delay in the cost-of-living adjustment during this decade. That is not a very great degree of benefit restraint. It is a little something. In fact, it is priced out to be $39 billion over the decade. That is the amount of savings from a 4-month cost-of-living adjustment delay.

This has to be measured, I think, against the fact that we are projecting cost-of-living adjustment benefit payments between now and the end of the decade of $259 billion. In other words, we are going to pay out about $2 trillion in benefits between now and 1990 and a part of that will be $259 billion arising from COLA adjustments.

To save only $39 billion on COLA adjustments in this decade does not seem to me to be very burdensome. In fact, it does not seem to me to be burdensome enough either from the economic standpoint or from the standpoint of justice. And here is why I think it would really be just to save a bit more than $39 billion.

During the last decade the cost-of-living adjustments in social security have risen about twice as fast as have the wages and salaries on which these benefits are based and significantly have gone up about 50 percent faster than the consumer price index which is the presently available measure of the cost of living for retirees.

So I think both economic issues and fairness issues could have called for a greater degree of restraint in the cost-of-living adjustment. However, I do note with satisfaction the proposal which was adopted and recommended by the Finance Committee for a graduated cost-of-living adjustment benefit restraint when the trust fund is in a less than 20 percent reserve ratio condition and when reserve ratios are declining.

That proposal which has been described earlier I think by the Senator from Kansas simply says that when the trust fund gets into trouble, when

Congress idea of a compromise as usual really hasn't been translated into a compromise.

Mr. President and my colleagues, that is the one real shortcoming that remains in this bill, which is it so heavily dependent upon massive increases in taxes upon those who have already been heavily taxed.

In 1977, Congress was persuaded to concoct the largest tax increase that the world has ever seen, and now like déjà vu we are being asked once again to enact a massive tax increase.

As one reflects upon the proposed increases in taxes contained in this bill, it is good to remember that during the decade of the 1970's the social security benefits had quadrupled and these taxes will triple again in the 1980's before we even start looking at the recommended tax increases in this bill.

Yes, I did say there will be a twelve-fold increase in social security tax maximums during the 1970's and 1980's before we consider the enactment of the tax increases contained in this legislation.

Today, Mr. President, the average working man and woman will pay much more in social security taxes than they pay in Federal income taxes. It is a burden of importance and keenly felt significance in the lives of working men and women in this country.

Nor is this burden inconsequential to the companies involved. Recently I was in Detroit, Mich., where unemployment is a problem of truly poignant concern and not just an economic problem, it is a human tragedy of great proportions, and I learned to my surprise that the Big Three automobile companies, and it is every manufacturing and service industry in this country. As a matter of fact, the CBO warned in 1977, when we last increased these taxes on a large scale, that the result would be rising unemployment.

They estimated it would cost 500,000 jobs, and I personally do not think it is any coincidence that the unemployment, which has plagued America in the late 1970's and early 1980's, comes at the same time that we have seen large increases in payroll taxes and other taxes in this country.

I just do not think it makes sense at the very time when workers are already heavily burdened, the very moment when the economy is trying to lift itself up, when we are beginning to see the effects of new regulations, when housing starts are up, when automobile sales are rising, when interest rates at long last are getting down to viable levels, when the stock market is performing well, when there is a growing sense of optimism about the economy, I do not think it makes sense to pile on top of the hard-earned benefits of this Nation's economy with tax increases above those which are already scheduled to go into effect, and remember payroll taxes are going up whether or not we enact any of the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Maybe this is a simple-minded approach, I do not think so, but whoever said if you tax something you get less of it I believe summed up an important economic reality. If you want to get less of something, whatever it is, you put a tax on it. It does not matter whether the tax is in this bill or whatever it is, if you tax something you are going to get a little less of it, and the higher the tax is and more of it, the greater the effect will be observed.

That means if we go through with the proposed tax increases in this bill we are going to get a little less employment in this Nation, and I do not think that makes sense at this time. Therefore, Mr. President, at the right moment it is my intention to offer an amendment which will roll back the payroll tax which is suggested in this legislation.

I am not going to go after the other pieces of tax increases in this bill, not because I think they are justified, I do not, but simply because I recognize a compromise is a compromise and you cannot do everything. It does seem to me the most egregious single portion of the tax increase in this bill or whatever it is, the payroll tax, the part that bears the most heavily and most regrettably on working men and women at a time when they can simply ill-afford it.

I do want to mention, in passing, I tried to get the Finance Committee to do away with the taxation of benefits. I think we are making a mistake if we do not think that makes sense at this time. And in this case it is a case of tax the poor and give the benefits to the rich.

considered a number of amendments here in the Senate and have resoundingly affirmed our desire not to tax benefits, so I think in so-doing we are making a mistake, and really it is unfortunate that the Finance Committee has so recommended.

Mr. President, I also want to clarify one aspect of the benefit tax issue because I am not going to offer an amendment on that specific subject, but I want to make it absolutely clear if somebody has the notion this is only going to be a tax on the rich. It is only 7 percent of the beneficiaries who are going to be taxed as a result of the amendment which is proposed by the Senate Finance Committee, and that is perfectly true the first year. But I want to point out to you that the threshold of taxation is not indexed, and if we have the same kind of inflation threshold of taxation is not indexed,

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I would say to the Senator from Minnesota that it is its impression that it was not a carry-forward, carry-back kind of credit. But, frankly, we discussed that issue so many different times and in so so many different formats that I would want to be positive before I give him that assurance. Can staff clarify that for me?

Mr. HEINZ. If the Senator will yield, my recollection is that the tax credit is not against income taxes. It is against social security taxes.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Senator is

Mr. HEINZ. And, therefore, if you are paying any social security taxes, you get the credits right then and there.

Therefore, it is not necessary in this instance to carry it forward and back.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Senator's point is well taken. I thank him for refreshing our recollections.

Mr. President, I wish to conclude my

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The Senator said that they wanted some kind of

How it will be determined, what is going to be to unscramble any existing pension plans they may have. We just, without notice, without warning, change the ground rules.

That is going to be a serious problem for some of these organizations. Many of them, by the way, are quite small—a number of them are not—but some of them are literally organizations that have four or five employees doing meals-on-wheels or various kinds of missionary work, youth activities, community services, and that kind of thing. So if we suddenly impose a 15-percent payroll tax, that is exactly what is what we are talking about here—It is going to mean, if they have five employees, some of these community organizations are going to have to lay somebody off and their program will be reduced accordingly.

Well, I do not object at all to the notion that they ought to be covered, but I do think that that is moving too abruptly. So the proposal in my amendment will be to treat nonprofit in the same way we are treating the Government. You know that we are covering the Federal workers for the first time in this proposal but we are not saying on January 1 that they are all covered. We are saying they will be phased in, that as new employees come onto the Federal employment rolls then they have to be covered by social security and I am suggesting for the new hires of nonprofits, that they be given exactly the same treatment as Federal employees.

So those are the three amendments that I will offer. I must admit that I could offer many other amendments, but we have come a long way and I am restrained in the proposals I am going to bring to the floor partly by the fact that my colleagues on the Finance Committee have been kind enough to accommodate me in adopting a number of other amendments I have offered. For that, I am grateful.

I just close as I began by saluting the chairman and the other members of the committee and those who have worked so hard on this bill. I think we are making good progress and I, for one, hope this really does prove to be a once-in-a-lifetime proposition. I hope that within 2 weeks we will have a bill on the President's desk and that he will sign it and that there will be no extraneous amendments attached to it and that we never have to revisit this issue again anytime.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I share the prayerful wish and expectation of my friend and colleague, Mr. Armstrong. And there remains some years. But the historic compromise both important concessions to economic reality, before the Senate today, will on its way is the landmark that is set here. We have done our job and we will not dent, if enacted in the form that we generations will have to keep an eye whole need, recognizing that future or 80 percent of it or half of it, but the eating a system that was double-funded prudent trustees.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Yes.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I think the Senator’s point is well taken. I share his feelings that these demographic projections are, in a sense, unknowable. But I believe it is significant that the bill we bring to the floor full-fills everything that could be asked of prudent trustees.

Now, Suppose we could imagine creating a system that was double-funded or triple-funded, but that would not be prudent. The prudent thing is to get our best estimates of what the need is, then fulfill that; not 90 percent of it or 80 percent of it or half of it, but the whole thing. Fulfilling that in all future generations will have to keep an eye on this thing. I am reasonably confident, if enacted in the form that we have before us or close to that, that we have done our job and we will not have to do it back again. I think that is the landmark that is set here.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. That is what is necessary. I thank the Senator.

AN IMPERFECT COMPROMISE

Social Security’s rescue legislation comes before the Senate today, well on its way toward passage. The Senate bill and one passed by the House last week both contain improvements. In reality, something Congress has resisted for two years. But the historic compromise both sides are so pleased with still tilts against workers and savers. And there remains some danger that the till will become a waterlogged but by the time it reaches the presiding officer.

Conceptual idea of a ‘compromise’, as usual, relies heavily on tax increases. The Social security payroll tax boost scheduled for 1985 will come a year early and there’ll be another early bump in 1988, not to mention a brand new tax on middle-income benefits. Where the two bills disagree is on how benefit costs will be contained and how are to be controlled at all. Both houses formally accept the principle of raising the retirement age and lowering benefits for early retirees. The Senate bill proposes to raise the retirement age by one year in 1990 and, as a step toward actuarially, the immediate future interests us more.

Small Social Security’s burgeoning cost will come from postponing this year’s cost-of-living increase six months. Where the two houses don’t agree is on what happens the next time Social Security starts running short on money. The House proposes to meet that contingency by indexing cost-of-living adjustments to either prices or wages, whichever is lower (something that should have been done long ago, as a matter of course). Senate Finance, in its wisdom, would meet this contingency by having Social Security administrators notify Congress six months in advance that the toll is running dangerously low. If Congress didn’t act in that six months, let’s say by taking another bite out of the workers’ paychecks. Congress will have to stretch out cost-of-living adjustments in benefits. Our trust in future Congresses is such that the House version, and now, not in 1988 as the bill proposes.

How likely is the fund to run short again? Very likely, we’re afraid. The tax boost scheduled for next year will raise labor costs, killing jobs and cutting revenues. And we are not convinced that attempts to limit Medicare reimbursements will succeed in containing burgeoning Medicare costs to the extent it backers advertise. So don’t be too surprised if Social Security has to activate, sooner, rather than later, the “fall-safe” provision, assuming there is one in the final bill.

Yet another innovation in the legislation of both the houses is a provision to tax Social Security benefits. In other words, a system that currently transfers income from workers to nonworkers will become, additionally, a system that transfers income from retirees who saved for their old age to retirees who did not. As Paul Craig Roberts wrote on this page last Friday, a retired couple with an income of $175,000. Young workers are getting hit with the payroll tax, and retirees are getting hit with a tax on their savings.

We wonder if the politicians who have been playing Social Security for cheap votes these many years understand where they are heading. At this rate, Social Security will become little more than a welfare program. And, once social security is suddenly politically vulnerable. There will be no trouble at all summoning up the votes to cut benefits next because neither middle-class workers nor retirees will have any stake in preserving the system. That could happen even before some of the senior members of both houses decide to lay down the burdens of office.

We respectfully suggest that the full Senate give the bill careful thought today. The Administration is finding very boring with being told every siz years that Social Security is finally on sound footing, only to be defeated a few years later that it’s going to cost more than we have. Today’s marvellous compromise will only be marvellous if the bill that finally lands on the President’s desk has controls on benefit growth that match its bite out of payroll and savings. We’ll see.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, first let me begin by thanking the distinguished chairman of the committee (Mr. DOLE), the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG), and the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. HAY), for the long hours and laborious, dedicated effort they have put into serving on the Commission and making it possible to bring this bill before the Senate.

This bill represents a combination of the views of all those on the Commission. Some parts of it I very much wish I did not, and some parts of it I do not agree with.

Mr. President, I voted in committee to order the social security financing bill favorably reported. I did so with reservations.

I voted to order the bill favorably reported because the Senate and the Congress need to act now to assure the long-range soundness of the social security system. The bill reported by the committee generally follows the recommendations of the Social Security Commission. But the committee bill does two important things the Commission recommends and, even though they failed to reach a consensus on how these two things should be done.

First, the Finance Committee bill includes provisions to eliminate the long-range deficit in the social security cash benefit programs. It does this, essentially, by raising the retirement age to 66 and gradually modifying the social security benefit formula, both beginning with the year 2000.

Second, the Finance Committee bill includes a contingency plan to deal with situations where cash benefit trust fund reserves are less than 20 percent of annual outgo and are projected to decline. This provision is designed to avoid the kind of crisis situation we now face, where a decline in the trust fund reserves jeopardizes the continued prompt payment of benefit checks.

Now let me express my reservations about the Finance Committee bill.

GENERAL FUND FINANCING

I am concerned that the Finance Committee bill relies so heavily on the use of general fund financing for the rest of this decade. Depending on what one categorizes as general fund financing, perhaps almost one-third of the short-range financing package represents an infusion of general revenues to shore up social security financing. For the future, this action provides a dangerous precedent. There would be a strong temptation to simple increase this general fund portion when the need arises. For example, in the Finance Committee it was decided that the increased payroll tax burden on employers would not be paid by the committee solution was to scale back the payroll tax increase on the self-employed and make up the difference with general funds.

This, in effect, is a matter of saying that whenever the cost goes up, just add it to the Federal deficit and be done with it. Of course, Mr. President, if we continue to do that type of thing, it will eventually lead to where the Federal Government itself cannot assume the value of its currency and where eventually our money would have no value. After all, if we cannot find the revenues or cannot find the courage to vote for a tax to pay the benefits under this program that is the essential income of some 36 million people, then I doubt that the Congress can find the revenues to finance anything in the Federal Government.

EXTENDING COVERAGE

In extending mandatory social security coverage to new Federal employees and employees of all nonprofit organizations, the committee bill simply assumes that by the end of the year, the Congress and the nonprofit organizations will be able to modify their existing survivorship, retirement, and disability benefits to take into account social security coverage. Federal employee organizations do not share that confidence. For all they know, much of the income security they count on through their existing plans may disappear. Nothing in the committee bill provides them any assurance that the impact on existing protections will not be severe.

In another area relating to coverage, the Congress has always taken a position that under the Constitution, Federal law cannot mandate social security coverage of State and local government employees. For this reason, those State and local governments that wish to voluntarily join the social security system pay contributions rather than taxes and they can withdraw from social security coverage after giving 2 years' notice.

The committee bill would prohibit those State and local governments which have opted for social security coverage from terminating coverage for their employees. Aside from the constitutional question, which will ultimately be resolved in the courts, I believe it is unfair for the Federal Government to unilaterally change the agreements which State and local governments entered into on a voluntary basis, especially when they reached that agreement with the Federal Government itself.

I believe this is particularly unfair to those units of government which have already given notice of their intent to terminate. Many of these entities, relying on the word of the Federal Government, have already expanded great effort and expense setting up alternative retirement programs.

TAXING SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS

Under the committee bill, half the social security benefits would be taxed if an individual's income exceeds $25,000 or a couple's income exceeds $32,000. However, the committee bill, unlike the House bill, would include tax-exempt income for purposes of measuring income, thus income exceeds the threshold above which social security benefits would be taxed. The effect of this is that for the first time tax-exempt income would be taxed. While the impact of this provision might be small in terms of the number of people, the dollar impact is a big one. It suggests that Congress, which has not been willing to tax State and local bond interests directly, is willing to do so if the tax is disguised as a tax on something else. This point will not be lost on those in the Treasury Department who have long sought ways to tax State and local bond interest.

PROSPECTIVE REIMBURSEMENT UNDER MEDICARE

Up to this point, I have discussed my reservations that related to social security provisions of the bill. But I am equally concerned about two provisions whose descriptions were not even available to committee members until the day of our markup session.

The first provision would completely change the reimbursement of hospitals under the medicare program. Many hospitals would do better under the new system, but many would do worse, perhaps even to the point of having to close. When the committee acted, it did not have information it would need to determine which hospitals were winners and which were losers, and whether winning or losing had any relationship to the hospital's efficiency. An administration spokesman at the committee hearing could not even answer my question what the level of reimbursement would be for the diagnosis-related groups which serve as the new basis for reimbursement.

This new provision will not achieve budget cuts in the next 2 years. It will not solve the hospital insurance trust fund financing problem. In my view, we should not be considering this fundamental change in medicare until we are in a better position to know the impact it will have on hospitals in States. I fear that if we enact this provision now, we will soon find that it results in situations that we do not intend and that we will need to change.

Mr. President, I have been told that this provision would cause the hospitals in the State of Louisiana to gain as much as 15 percent in medicare reimbursement. That, of course, would be partly at the expense of hospitals in other States. On the surface you would think the Senator from Louisiana would be in here advocating that kind of change. But I also note that while gaining 15 percent, and while a majority of the Louisiana hospitals would gain that much, about one-third of them would get a cut, and that cut would be about 20 percent.

The information provided to me, Mr. President, is not adequate to tell me on what basis those hospitals would face a cut, or to give those people a chance to make their case and defend themselves against the consequences.

Other States are going to find that their hospitals are not receiving an increase in net income like Louisiana would receive, and that more than one-third of their hospitals take a cut, and they will not know what the impact will be until the bill goes into effect and their hospital people come to Washington to complain about matters that could have been more carefully considered and matters which could have been corrected before they were enacted into law.

It has been my experience as a Senator for more than 30 years in this body that it is a lot better to find out about the problems and to try to take care of them in advance, than it is to pass a major bill without knowing what you are doing or how it is going to impact upon the people who would have to try to look then try to take care of the many problems that will arise after the measure has become law and all the growing pains become obvious.

I think we would have done much better to have had a great deal more information. This bill would have been available if we had taken even a few more months to develop this proposal and see how it would work throughout the 50 States in the Union.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION STATE LOANS

Mr. President, an area concerned with States under the unemployment compensation program. The committee approved major provisions affecting loans to States under the unemployment compensation program. Like hospital reimbursement, this provision bears no relationship to social security as an administration spokesman made clear at the committee hearing.

Unlike prospective reimbursement, there is no equivalent provision in the House bill.

When we enacted legislation imposing interest on State loans, we intended that this interest would serve as an incentive for a State legislature to undertake reform to insure its unemployment program's fiscal soundness. I am particularly concerned that under the committee bill, if a State fails to repay the interest, it owes the Federal Government, the Federal employer tax in that State would be raised by one-tenth of 1 percent. I fear that States will see this automatic increase in employer taxes as a signal that Congress intends the tax increase as an alternative to program reform.

I believe that if the committee had spent the time it should have spent considering this provision, it would have wanted to make clear that payment of interest was not the purpose.

This meant that a State would need to take legislative action to assure the financial solvency of its unemployment compensation funds and not simply fail to act so that a Federal employment tax increase would go into effect.

IMPROVING THE BILL

When the National Commission on Social Security Reform issued its
Mr. President, I commend them on their efforts and say:

I would expect that some changes will occur as the proposal finds its way through the legislative process. As with any legislative proposal, I am sure there will be ways of improving it.

The Finance Committee has already made a series of modifications in the commission's recommendations. As I have suggested, more improvements can and should be made and I hope will be made as the bill finds its way through the Senate.

Mr. President, several months ago the Social Security Administration was forced to do something it never had done before. The social security OASDI trust fund, which is the paying in and more and more taking out. It started perhaps on the lines of a chain reaction. The system was vested and they were getting more or less on the lines of a chain reaction to that single person who is living on a Social Security Administration.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators, be present: the one who did not vote for the bill in its present form. I would like to address that, but before I can do so, I think that we should first recognize why it is that social security is in such trouble.

that and paying taxes on it. Yet, with respect to social security, I have seen figures that say that there are up to 275,000 to 300,000 millionaires who are drawing the maximum social security benefits and yet have been continually realizing the benefits of the cost-of-living adjustments that have not been commensurate with the change of the wage index of the people who are paying in on the other end of the chain letter.

So I think the committee, the Commission, all deserve some credit that they did look to that problem. This little bit of legislation that was brought up with was to tax the benefits. I would have preferred to limit the future increases in those benefits rather than taxing them, but at least I would have to say that we should compliment the committee for recognizing that problem.

Now, with respect to the long-term solution where the large unfunded liability in the program lies, those figures, when we heard testimony before the committee, ranged anywhere from $1 trillion to $2 trillion. It depends on whose econometric models you want to look at. But we all recognize that there is a huge unfunded liability out there in the year 2020, 2010, past the turn of the century, that has to be reckoned with. Most people agree, because of the statistics and the evidence that people are living longer, that we should do something in a gradual way to raise the retirement age.

I have to say that I am pleased that the committee recognized this and would do something about that effect. I think that we should be a little more aggressive. We should recognize the problem is here now. People are living longer. All evidence statistically supports that. Therefore, at the proper time I intend to offer an amendment which will raise the retirement age starting in 1984 1 month every year for 36 years. That will put the retirement age for maximum benefits at age 68 and for early retirement at age 65. I think that would take care of the long-term problem.

But then, Mr. President, I believe there is still one area where we are sadly lacking, and that is the opportunity to encourage Americans to save. I think we could do something with respect to this that would be very simple and we should be doing it now.

One of the biggest problems that the social security system has brought upon the American economy is it has been a failure for the American people to save money with which to build the tools and equipment that are necessary to drive a growing, strengthening, noninflationary economy. The way the system works is that those workers' savings get taxed in a regressive fashion out of that portion of their income. It is paid out to the beneficiaries. The money never ends up in savings accounts, never ends up in the banks where it can be lent to increase the tools and equipment that provide the jobs and backbone of America's great productive might.

So what I suggest we do, and I will offer an amendment to this effect, is provide a social security option account (SSOA) for those people who can afford to do it. Individuals would be able to contribute up to 20 percent of their social security wage base into this account and they would be allowed to withdraw from above what the IRA laws now allow. For every $1,000 contributed, individuals would forfeit one-half percent of their social security benefits in the future.

Now, you ask the question, "Would they start having to pay social security taxes?" Yes, they would, because the way the chain letter works we cannot allow people out. But how does that worker afford to do that? That decision would rest with each individual's ability to save, but I think we would find that many Americans would choose a tax deduction on the front end if it would actually reduce their social security benefits in the future. Future Congresses, 40 or 50 years from now, will not be faced with the same political dilemma that this Congress is faced with, Mr. President.

The problem we have here, let us face it, is that there are 36 million Americans out there receiving benefits. Congress has to be conscious of that, and we are in fact sensitive to the fact that those 36 million people are our future. We have to be sensitive to their wishes because, after all, those of us in this body do work for the people. I am not faulting that, but I think it would be an imaginative and ingenious way for us to actually develop savings in the private sector today.

In addition to savings in the private sector today, we could end up developing a constituency of people who own their own retirement accounts. This would be exchanging the privilege of owning their own accounts for future social security benefits. So that 40 or 50 years from now, we could remove some of this political pressure we have felt these many years.

That is why this problem has not been faced. We have to allow it to go to crisis proportions before we face it. There are other things I would like to see in this system, but we want to address the short-term problem in order to get away from raising payroll taxes.

There is no doubt in my mind and in the minds of many economists in this country that this speeding up of the payroll taxes and the drain this is going to have on the private sector is going to exacerbate the unemployment problems in the United States; because when you look at where those payroll taxes are going in the near future, it is a tremendous burden on small business and on the working people just to pay the social security taxes. The result of this will be less jobs in the private sector because of the excessive, regressive tax that comes with this solution.

As to the long-term problem, I urge this body to carefully look at my amendment which will be offered to raise the retirement age in 1984 1 month every year for 36 years. That will cause no dislocation to an individual. It will allow people to plan their futures. It will be a very gradual change.

People are living longer. All the statistical evidence and other evidence point to the fact that people are healthier, are living longer. That is a compliment to our society. It is a good thing. But we need to start now and not put it off to the year 2000, and we should address the retirement age.

Third, Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment which will address the problem of the lack of opportunities that most working Americans have in order to have their private retirement account. We could offer this as an alternative. It would take years and years, and I do not expect it to change in my lifetime. But I believe in the future we could remove the political pressure of those Americans totally dependent on the social security system, the ever-increasing pressure to raise benefits, raise benefits—and the benefits, frankly, have been raised much faster than the ability of the ability of the people to pay those benefits.

I say to my colleagues, "Look around in your States. How many people do you see receiving social security whose grandchildren are not as well off as the recipients of the social security?"

Yet, the entire pressure in Congress and the entire pressure that has been focused on is that, somehow, all we have to do is raise the payroll tax and we will not have to touch any future benefits.

I am saying that we do not have to take benefits away from anybody. We have to get the wage index and the benefit levels back into balance, and they are presently out of balance. The only way I can see that to do this is to delay the COLA until December of 1985 and then put it on the sound footing of the wage index and the price index. Then we will have a system with solvency for the future, and then we will in fact see a restoration of the long-term capital markets in this country. Once the long-term capital markets are restored in this country, we will see activity in the steel mills in Pennsylvania, activity in the chemical plants in New Jersey, we will see housing from the farms, the fields, and the forests will be rejuvenated. We will restore the true noninflationary growth in the United States.

However, I do not believe that will happen if we always walk into this Chamber and pay those benefits so we can raise taxes to solve the problem because we do not have the political will to really bite the bullet on the problem, and that is that the
The amendment I have offered will address the need to bring this practice to an end. It will not completely eliminate it; I will admit that. But I think it is a substantial contribution to the solution of the problem.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 70
(Purpose: To require notice on social security checks that it is a violation of law to cash a check issued to a deceased individual.)

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The amendment is as follows:

The amendment I have offered will address the need to bring this practice to an end. It will not completely eliminate it; I will admit that. But I think it is a substantial contribution to the solution of the problem.

NOTICE ON SOCIAL SECURITY CHECKS

Sec. 153. The Secretary of the Treasury shall, with the approval of the Attorney General, prescribe regulations to provide that all checks issued for the payment of benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act, and the envelopes in which such checks are mailed, must bear a legend making it clear to any potential casher of such check that the fraudulent cashing of a check issued to a deceased beneficiary is a felony under section 206 of the Social Security Act, carrying a maximum penalty of a $5,000 fine and 5 years in prison. I think that will cause a great many people, those who have been involved in fraudulently cashing checks, to stop and consider the gravity of the act they are about to commit.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I am happy to yield to my colleague from Idaho.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I complement the Senator for his amendment. The majority have reviewed the amendment. The Treasury believes that this amendment would be helpful for a more fair and equitable application of the act. I compliment the Senator for offering it. On this side of the aisle, we are prepared to accept the amendment.

It is my understanding that the majority also has accepted the amendment.

Mr. HUMPHREY. That is also the understanding of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. President, if we may have a word from the manager of the minority side, I think we can dispose of this amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, we have no objection on this side to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire. No one has expressed opposition.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Then, I believe, Mr. President, if I may have the floor for that purpose, we are ready to dispose of the issue and I have nothing further to say on the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WANKER). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

(Putting the question.)

The amendment (UP No. 70) was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 71
(Subsequently numbered amendment No. 520.)

MR. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment with the provision shall be effective with respect to checks issued for months after December, 1983.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, there are many controversies swirling about the social security issue, but I think there is one point on which all parties agree, and that is the continued cashing or attempted cashing of social security checks issued to deceased persons cannot be permitted to continue.

The amendment I have offered will address the need to bring this practice to an end. It will not completely eliminate it; I will admit that. But I think it is a substantial contribution to the solution of the problem.

Mr. President, if I may, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in recess until 9 a.m. tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 100, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

(1) meets the criteria for entitlement to old-age insurance benefits which are specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 202(q)(1), only if he first meets the criteria specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 215(a) in the same way they apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits (as defined in section 216(1));

(d) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining whether an individual is under an occupational disability and an individual shall not be considered to be an occupational disability unless he furnishes such medical and other evidence of the existence thereof as he may require.

(e) Except as otherwise specified in this section or in other sections of this Act, the provisions of this title shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits in the same way they apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits.

(a) by inserting "or 234" after "benefits under section 203" in subsection (a)(2)(A);

(b) by adding after "or" at the end of subsection (b)(2)(A) the following new clause:

"(iv) disability retirement benefits under section (b)(2)(A) the following new clause:

and

under section 202" In subsection (a)(2)(A);

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply only with respect to benefits months after December 1999.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a factsheet explaining the amendment be printed in the Record at the conclusion of my statement.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today, which was developed by Congressman Row Wynn and myself, would establish a new social security program to aid older workers with major health problems. Under our proposal, beginning in the year 2000, a limited number of workers between the ages of 62 and 66 would receive a new "disability-retirement" benefit if they cannot stay in their jobs because of poor health. It is imperative that we take this step in conjunction with any increase in the social security retirement age. If the retirement age is increased, as now seems likely, it will mean a hardship for many older workers who cannot stay in their jobs because of poor health and also cannot qualify for regular disability insurance benefits. These workers should not be shortchanged in any way, but the hardship cases in our health care system cases are taken to protect these workers.

My amendment would allow workers to qualify for these benefits if they can demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held during the 10-year period before the onset of their disability. If workers had not worked at any occupation for at least 2 years, then their work history would be examined to determine if their medical condition prevents them from using skills or abilities comparable to those required by work they had previously performed.

Mr. President, it should be pointed out that the definition of "work" or "occupation" does not necessarily mean the same thing as the old OASDI program, but rather the same general occupation or type of work requiring the same skills. It must also be pointed out that the program will not take effect until the year 2000; Congress has the next 17 years to formulate a more exact definition of eligibility. This program would be considered a separate OASI program, with benefits payable from the OASI trust fund. Benefits for this program would be paid according to the OASI current law schedule for reduced benefits at ages under 65 and with full benefits paid at age 65. In effect, these workers would be "held harmless" to the proposed increase in the retirement age and reduction in early retirement benefits.

Mr. President, a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, including Senators Dole and H hex, recommended that the retirement age be raised. In addition, these same members recommended a liberalization of the disability program for those aged 62 and above.

I quote from the Commission report:

"Disability benefits are now available under somewhat less stringent definitions for those aged 60-64. However because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and be able to work longer, we assume that the disability benefits proposal prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age would extend their working careers for health reasons.

Mr. President, the Finance Committee raised the retirement age but did not make improvements to the disability program. My amendment merely follows through on the recommendations made by a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission. The Social Security Commission's actuarial estimate is that only about 10 percent of future retirees would fit into this category. Therefore, the long-term cost of this change is minimal—0.04 percent of payroll—and this additional cost can clearly be accommodated in the bill before us now because the savings in the Finance Committee bill exceed by 0.08 percent the level necessary to achieve long-term solvency.

Mr. President, I believe that this proposal is a fair one. If we raise the social security retirement age, we need to develop a safety net for older workers who, for health reasons, simply cannot keep working. I urge my colleagues to adopt the amendment.

Mr. Dole. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New Jersey.

I have indicated to the Senate that we have only had an opportunity to see the amendment for about 30 to 45 minutes. I know of no objection. It may depend on what other amendments might be adopted. Plus we wish the time to analyze it carefully on our side.

I am wondering if the Senator from New Jersey might be willing to let us set this amendment aside, give our staff and social security people a chance to review it carefully, and then we could either call it back up or in some way dispose of it. If we can agree on it, or with some modification, it could be accepted.

I have not checked either with the distinguished ranking minority member, Senator Long. But we would be willing to look at it carefully the next 24 hours.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I would have no objection to temporarily laying the amendment aside until the next order of business is disposed of.
of, and then this amendment would be pending again, and it would be my hope that by that time maybe by tomorrow we could resolve this. I know that the chairman as he stated in the Commission report expresses considerable interest in this problem, and I have every expectation we will be able to solve it.

Therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be temporarily laid aside until the next order of business is disposed of and then this amendment, please.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the cooperation of the Senator from New Jersey.

It may be that other Members have amendments which we can agree upon. If so, we could dispose of those amendments. It is my understanding we may want to adjourn between 6 and 7, nearer 6.

But I would say to Members who may be in their offices or members of the staff if there are noncontroversial amendments, we would like very much to dispose of this yet this afternoon, and we hope to come in—there has not been an order yet—but early tomorrow morning and go until some time late tomorrow afternoon and hopefully during the remainder of the day and all day tomorrow we can, first of all, dispose of noncontroversial amendments. We believe there are a number that can be disposed of. There are some we cannot agree upon. There may be rollcall votes sometime after 1 p.m. tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, as an original cosponsor of S. 1, I want to join my colleagues in commending Senator Dole, the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator M OYNNIAN, and others who have helped fashion a reasonable, effective, and broadly accepted proposal to address the difficult problem of financing our social security system.

This compromise, Mr. President, is of obvious and urgent importance to 152 million American workers who have put their trust in the commitments undertaken by this Government. For millions of our people social security spells the difference between dignity and despair for the future, and I am convinced that the compromise being considered by the Senate comes down squarely on the side of dignity.

There is another equally important dimension to this legislation. It provides the most striking evidence I have seen in sometime that the American political system, despite the strains of partisanship accentuated by an economic system in which prolonged inflation, is still capable of acting—rapidly, effectively, and with unity—to serve the vital interests of our people.

The social security package is a classic in the art of bringing the diverse elements together in the search for honest answers to the difficult problems facing our Nation. No party, I am sure, is perfectly satisfied with this formulation. Everyone has been asked to sacrifice, to take up a part of the burden, to pay more, to defer increases, to suffer a little so that millions of older Americans will have to suffer much less.

I sincerely believe, Mr. President, that the obvious element of bipartisanship and good will so evident in our deliberations on the social security package can serve as the groundwork for broader sustained effort to respond to America's pressing economic problems and help us establish an agenda for the future.

With this compromise the Congress will be taking a giant step toward removing social security as a contentious, partisan, emotional issue in future elections. I sincerely believe this formulation reflects great credit on those who had the courage and foresight to bring it to the floor.

I commend my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for a job well done. I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of this legislation and urge its prompt approval by the Senate.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not see anyone rising in an amendment.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for a quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, so far today we have heard a few hours' debate on this very important issue and I want to take this opportunity to give you my views on the entire package, and to relay what I consider to be its strengths and weaknesses.

As this body begins consideration of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, I would like to share my hopes and goals, as we comprehensively take aim at this issue. The first goal, one which we all share, is to adopt a comprehensive package that will insure a sound social security system for as long into the future as we can predict.

Second, we must adopt a well-balanced plan that is fair, one which calls on all who are touched by this system to share in the sacrifices required to restore it to solvency.

When I first heard the National Commission's recommendations I was less than pleased. In my view the plan relied far too heavily on tax increases and it was far too short on reform. My misgivings were based on my past experience in the House of Representatives during deliberation of those very important 1977 Social Security amendments. At that time we heard promises from the House Democratic leadership and from the Democratic President, that adoption of the 1977 bill would guarantee adequate financing for social security until the year 2030.

Here we are, only a little over 5 years later, still wrestling with the issue of social security. If Congress has learned anything about this issue over the years it should be evident that continual reliance on tax increases does little to address the real problems with our social security system. Tax increases do not correct the generosity of past Congresses which greatly expanded benefits, nor do tax increases address the demographic changes which have radically affected the program.

Furthermore, greater and more taxes merely exacerbate our economic situation of prices increasing more rapidly than wages and of continued high unemployment.

We are rapidly approaching the limit which taxpayers can afford to pay for social security. I would argue that in many instances that threshold has already been reached. Economic changes are such that in 1950 we had 16½ workers supporting each retiree but by the year 2000 each retiree will be supported by less than 3 workers. Obviously the answer to this situation is not further tax increases.

I fully recognize the difficulty in trying to predict into the future what economic conditions will exist, but we surely must do a better job this go-around than we did in 1977 when we passed those incredibly high taxes.

If we must err in our economic forecasts, it is far better to err on the side of conservatism.

The bill reported out of the Senate Finance Committee not only closes the long-term deficit but also has a slight surplus over the course of the 75-year estimates. This cushion, this surplus, is a prudent measure.

My only hope is that present or future Members of this body do not see those extra dollars as monies to squander but rather time to vote for a few more sweeteners in the social security benefits structure.

In order to close that long-term gap, my colleagues and I on the Finance Committee adopted what I believe to be a balanced and fair plan. First, the retirement age would be gradually increased to age 66 but would not be indexed. I know many individuals who felt the retirement age should be increased but were troubled by the thought of continual increases through the indexing process.

Second, the outside earnings limitation would be phased out in our Senate Finance Committee plan. I have long been an advocate of repeal of the Social Security Retirement Earnings Test which penalizes the effort of elderly individuals to continue to be productive members of society in their later years.

Finally, our committee adopted a measure which would slightly reduce the initial benefit workers would receive upon retirement.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

March 16, 1982

These measures are a fair approach to reconciling the long-term deficit. It recognizes the trend toward increased longevity, yet balances the needs of those individuals who must retire due to illness or disability. The long-term benefit change is structured to minimize any impact on future retirees, and it should be stressed these provisions do not impact in any way on those individuals currently retired nor those for whom retirement is imminent. These changes approved by the Senate Finance Committee greatly improves the overall balance and fairness of the original Commission report.

Additional changes approved by the Finance Committee also serve to make the plan more palatable to those of us who feel workers are burdened with enough taxes.

Senator Long offered an excellent fail-safe plan which is exceedingly fair, and will indeed function as a true fail-safe mechanism. The fund reserves be below 20 percent of annual outgo, and be projected to decline. The Secretary of Health and Human Services would be authorized to reduce the annual cost-of-living adjustment to the extent necessary to prevent a further decline in reserves. However, the Secretary must first inform Congress of the Impending action, so Congress would have ample time to enact an alternative solution.

One other change the committee has recommended is to provide some relief to the self-employed of this Nation who will be hard hit with additional taxes in 1984. These individuals who serve as the backbone of our economy, and are pivotal in a recovery, would have been dramatically affected by the Commission's original proposal. While we did not eliminate the provision to equalize the self-employed tax rates with the combined employer-employee amount, we approved the use of SECA tax credits to help ameliorate the impact, particularly in the first year.

These changes, approved by the Finance Committee, greatly enhanced the overall package, so that a lot of people who might not otherwise vote for this bill on the floor of the Senate may now be able to do that. To give the Commission its due, their original report laid a strong foundation for Members of both Houses of Congress from which to make their final recommendations. Without the Commission's leadership and diligence, I fear the discussions on social security would be far more acrimonious.

I must register some concerns with portions of the package I find most troublesome. The authorization contained in this bill could, if not properly structured, spell nothing but trouble. It is our duty to develop a package that will actually solve the funding crisis. In my mind, this fall-back provision merely means we were not able to make the hard decisions and legislate all the needed changes to solve the problem of the social security system. It also has grave implications for the solvency of the Medicare fund, and conversely, for the O.A.S.I. It would allow Medicare beneficiaries to borrow from its larger sister prior to 1988.

The combination of the interfund borrowing authority and the use of certain accounting gimmicks are more than just a little disturbing. The so-called normalization of tax transfers is a thin disguise for general revenue borrowing, albeit for a month at a time. I would, however, like to state that the Senate's version of this scheme is far better than what the House adopted in their version of the Commission recommendations. At least the normalization mechanism is triggered in our bill with a time certain payment, including interest.

The integration of the civil service system with social security poses another problem. While we have heard from the distinguished Senator from Alaska (Mr. Stevens) that the formulation of a supplemental plan for new Federal employees is not an insurmountable problem, such assurances do little to soothe the nation's civil servants. Congress must work in earnest, and as expeditiously as prudence allows, to develop an adequate and fair retirement program for Federal workers who are hired after the first of next year. We also have the solemn obligation to continually evaluate the Federal employ that we are solidly and completely committed to their right to accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement system.

One final point I would like to make on the completeness of this package is the adequacy of financing over the next decade because I have some doubts about how adequate that is. We have heard comments from a wide variety of sources that the package provides for a razor thin margin within the next ten years. I am deeply troubled by reports that this package may not be sufficient to cover the short-term funding problem. I refer to my earlier remark that it would be far better to be overly conservative in our estimates to guarantee a solvent system. While I find such a possibility abhorrent, the plan reported out of the Finance Committee, does provide for a fail-safe plan which would be implemented should the system face a crisis in the next few years. Should we receive further indications that the bill not be adequate to remedy the problem, prompt and honest action must be initiated to guarantee we do not fall into the same trap we did in 1977.

While many of the provisions contained in S. 1 are distasteful, I am well aware that no social security plan could have been embraced by so many different groups and elected officials had it not been broad based, and constructed to meet the needs of today's and tomorrow's retirees. The private sector individuals who so freely gave of their time to work for a reform measure also deserve our thanks. The President, and other elected officials demonstrated their ability to compromise and bend a little, to insure the economic security of today's and tomorrow's retirees. Finally, special thanks need to go to Robert Myers for his tireless efforts and seemingly endless patience.

After careful and thorough evaluation, I am supporting this compromise plan as presented today. I realize my individual and special interest groups find particular provisions included in the package to be sufficiently onerous that the plan cannot have their support. I can only say that we must evaluate the package in its entirety, and weigh the ultimate goal of a safe and secure social security system.

With these thoughts in mind, I lend my support to this plan.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the statement of the Senator from Iowa. I wish to thank the Senator from Iowa, a member of the committee, for his assistance in what he has described as may be not a perfect solution but certainly one that I believe was improved in the Senate Finance Committee with the assistance of the Senator from Iowa.

We believe that we have a good compromise. We believe that it will pass the Senate hopefully without any significant change and that we can go to conference with the House early next week and have this on the President's desk sometime late next week.

But I do wish to thank the distinguished Senator from Iowa for his invaluable assistance.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank the Senator from Kansas very much. I appreciate it. I know it has not been easy. He has had to listen to my complaints and the complaints of everybody else. Let me say this and I say it sincerely:

This bill has come out of the Finance Committee a much better bill, a much stronger bill. If the chairman will remember the comments I made in the committee as I asked question after question of the various people who were testifying in support and against this bill, it is very difficult for me to buy two-thirds of a loaf even though two-thirds of a loaf may be better than no loaf at all.

But what came out of the Finance Committee, quite unexpectedly what came out of the House of Representatives, is a complete package.

One of the things that I needed to be assured of the most if I was to vote for this plan was to be assured that I could tell retirees that as best we can presently determine we have solved the social security problem well into the future.

We were assured of that in 1977 based on fantastic tax increases, and yet here we are almost 6 years later with the same situation we had then.

But because the chairman has made some reform in the system, we can tell the young workers who will pay into the system for the next 40 years, as well as the person who is retired or close to retirement, that we have given the people a complete and sound package.

The contribution of the chairman of the Finance Committee to something which has become an integral part of our society and of the social fabric of America, the social security system, should be received with all the compliments we can offer. I hope he gets such compliments for a long time because he does deserve them.

Mr. DOLE. I thank my friend.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I would like to join with my friend from Iowa in complimenting the Senator from Kansas. I share those comments.

Mr. President, I have not supported the package yet because I feel there are still a few amendments that need to be added to improve this package.

Having said that, I did vote against an amendment which I spoke about earlier this afternoon, but I do believe the chairman has made a lot of headway and made improvements over what I thought the committee would be able to do.

(Purpose: To increase the retirement age at which full benefits paid to age 66)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report. The legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. Symms) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 72.

On page 97, beginning with line 11, strike out all through line 9 on page 98, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"RETIREMENT AGE"

(a) The term 'retirement age' means—

(1) with respect to an individual who attains the early retirement age (as defined in paragraph (2)) before January 1, 1984, 65 years of age;

(2) with respect to an individual who attains the early retirement age after December 31, 1983, and before January 1, 2020, 65 years of age plus the number of months in the age increase factor (as determined under paragraph (3)) for the year in which such individual attains early retirement age; and

(3) with respect to an individual who attains early retirement age after December 31, 2019, 68 years of age.

(b) The term 'early retirement age' means age 61, in the case of an old-age, wife's, or husband's benefit, and age 60 in the case of a widow's or widower's benefit.

(c) The age increase factor for individuals who attain early retirement age in the period described in subparagraph (B) shall be equal to one-twelfth of the number of months in the period beginning with January 1984 and ending with December of the year in which the individual attains early retirement age.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, this amendment would raise the retirement age 1-month per year beginning in calendar year 1984 for 36 years—which would bring the regular retirement age up to 68 and the early retirement age up to 65.

This amendment is needed as one of the measures to assure the long-term solvency of the social security trust fund. Increasing the retirement age gradually over a period of 36 years gives today's workers adequate time to adjust and plan for their own retirement.

Increasing the retirement age is well justified because of the increased longevity of Americans. When social security was initiated, the average life expectancy at the time of birth was about 50 years. Those setting up the social security trust fund set the social security retirement age at 65. Today, the average life expectancy at the time of birth is about 72 years, and yet the social security retirement age still remains at 65. It is time we brought this matter up to date to help insure the long-term solvency of the trust fund.

I know that there are many who are opposed to increasing the retirement age because of a variety of reasons, including bad health. But I would also like to mention that I have read considerable information indicating the benefits of working longer, remaining involved, and so forth, which keeps a person physically and mentally healthy.

I will not belabor this matter anymore because I believe this has been discussed in the hearing process and today.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays. I know the chairman of the committee wants to set the vote over until tomorrow, but I would like to ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE, Mr. President, we do want to put the vote on that amendment over until tomorrow.

Mr. SYMMS. That will be fine.

Mr. STEVENS. Can we discuss the time later?

Mr. SYMMS. That will be fine with me.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, unless there are other non-controversial amendments, we now have an amendment laid down. This is not a non-controversial amendment, I might add. It might not be a controversial amendment to the Senator from Idaho, but it might be to others. With that amendment pending, this might be a good time to retire for the day.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I believe would be acceptable inasmuch as it is in the House version. We might take care of it tonight.

Mr. DOLE. Perhaps we can have a brief quorum call while we look at it. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time for the vote on the Symms amendment be determined during the time allocated to the leadership on tomorrow when the Senate reconvenes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I will not agree to that. I would just like to say to the acting majority leader that I hope we might have, if necessary, 5 minutes for all Senators to restate what his or her amendment does and then vote. I think if we can work that out, there will be no problem.

Mr. STEVENS. To make sure there is no misunderstanding, I ask that that be the case, that there be 5 minutes on each side on the Symms amendment prior to the time of the vote, being agreed upon tomorrow between the two leaders.
Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, as the Senate turns attention to the long-awaited social security reform package, I plan to offer two amendments to address the problem of erroneous benefit payments to deceased individuals. Many of our constituents were justifiably angered by the disclosure late in 1981 that over $60 million in benefits had been routinely mailed, for as long as 15 years, to over 8,000 individuals listed as dead on Medicare records. In one documented incident, a gulf coast widow forged her deceased husband's signature, cashed his benefit checks, and told investigators that he was at sea on a shrimp boat. In another, a wealthy middle-aged businessman cashed his father's social security checks for many months after his death, explaining to investigators that he needed to maintain cash flow for his business. I believe we need to take action to stem this hemorrhage of the trust funds.

The first amendment I plan to offer focuses attention on those individuals who criminally negotiate the erroneously issued checks. The Secretaries of Treasury and Health and Human Services would be required to provide that all Title II benefit checks, and the envelopes in which they are mailed, bear a printed legend warning that the cashing or attempted cashing of a check which was erroneously issued for payment of benefits to a deceased individual constitutes a felony punishable under the provisions of section 208 of the Social Security Act by a maximum penalty of $5,000 fine and 5 years imprisonment. I believe it would be wise to plainly warn potential felons of the nature and consequences of such an act, in order to give them pause to reconsider an act of disrespect both for the dead and for the taxpayers who fill the trust fund coffers.

The second amendment I plan to offer would add a provision directing the Secretary of Health and Human Services to establish a program under which the States voluntarily contract with the Secretary to periodically furnish information concerning individuals with respect to whom death certificates—or equivalent documents—have been filed. The Secretary would be required to compare this information with SSA files, and to make necessary corrections.

Mr. President, my amendment is essentially the same as an existing provision of the House-passed reform bill—which reflects the efforts of Representative Willis Gradison—and differs only in that it incorporates certain modifications recommended by GAO and SSA. The amendment stipulates that administrative funds are to be used for payments to the States, and that the Secretary may enter into information sharing agreements with Federal and State administrators of other benefit programs, provided that such agencies provide reimbursement for reasonable costs. Finally, the amendment provides that information provided under this section to the Secretary may not be used for any other purpose, and that the Secretary shall report to Congress next year on the status of the program.

Mr. President, I am hopeful that these proposals will receive the support of my colleagues. At a time when the trust funds are facing severe financial hardship, this unacceptable state of affairs cannot be tolerated any longer.
MR. BENTSEN. Mr. President, we are considering today historic legislation that will have far-reaching effects on the delivery of medical services in our Nation. This legislation, establishing a new prospective system for reimbursing hospitals under the Medicare program, has sprung from the Congress concern over rising costs of health care and the need to take positive action to hold down future cost increases. What, in effect, you are going to see is a rationing of health care by its very economics. However, we must be equally concerned, as we move into the use of prospective reimbursement, that this system does not impair our ability as a nation to continue on the leading edge of technological innovation and advance in clinical medicine, some of the things that lead to the United States being out on the technological frontier for the delivery of health care services, nor impair our ability to provide the most critically ill patients suffering multiple complications a commensurate level of care.

In order to preserve and foster these great assets of our health care system, I am offering an amendment to authorize the Secretary to take account, as appropriate, of the special circumstances of facilities furnishing extraordinary medical and surgical care to the sickest and most resource intensive patient populations.

We have a number of hospitals that are national and regional referral centers where we can send patients who require an intensity of resources beyond the capabilities of general community hospitals. One example of such an institution in my State of Texas is the Methodist Hospital. This hospital is nationally recognized as one of the leading hospitals in sophisticated technological advances—pioneering in the treatment of cardiovascular diseases. As a result, Methodist Hospital became the primary teaching institution for many physicians who were later to become well-known and widely respected cardiovascular surgeons.

The Methodist Hospital is one example of such highly specialized facilities. There are others within the Texas Medical Center in Houston, St. Luke’s Episcopal Hospital, Hermann Hospital, and the University of Texas Health Science Center. Such advanced institutions have made the Texas Medical Center a mecca of health care, annually attracting patients from all 50 States and from more than 80 foreign countries. Other States also possess institutions with similar characteristics—characteristics which make them regional and national assets.

These large, technologically sophisticated hospitals which serve as regional and national referral centers are characterized by high patient volumes, diverse geographical patient mix, and numerous multidisciplinary medical education programs. Leaders as well in basic and clinical research, these institutions have furnished and must continue to furnish technological leadership in medicine. These hospitals incur costs above those of ordinary hospitals. These additional costs are attributable not merely to the costs of education, but as well to the technological innovation, specialized training, and specialty treatment capacities of these institutions.

These regional and national referral centers are leaders in providing quality health care and are an invaluable national resource. They are in the vanguard of developments in clinical practice, medical technology, and basic and applied research. They have a unique capacity to offer diverse, highly specialized training in all areas of medical and allied health care.

They serve the sickest people in their community, together with a broad international, national, and regional group of referred patients for whom there is no other place to turn. To the extent these centers are no longer able to serve the same number of referred patients, other local and regional hospitals will be forced to bear the burden of caring for this critically ill portion of the patient population.

I am delighted and pleased that the distinguished chairman of the committee has chosen to cosponsor this, and I want to say how appreciative I am of the cooperation and help that he has given me in the preparation of the speech I am working to insure the achievement of the objective we seek.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know there is no objection to the amendment. I wonder if we might—my staff has not yet arrived—have a brief quorum call. I think Miss Burke is on the way.

I have a statement to put in the Record. I do not wish to detain the Senator from Texas. The amendment will be accepted, but I wonder if we might have a quorum?

Mr. BENTSEN. I have also discussed this with the ranking Democratic member, Senator Long, who has been most helpful and who shares the same concerns. I urge the Senate to adopt the committee amendment regarding national and regional referral centers to insure that the Secretary will consider any deleterious effects on these centers of the new prospective reimbursement system and to make the necessary adjustments in payment rates to such hospitals will be made.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Texas addresses one of the problems I mentioned in my opening statement which quite naturally occurs when a new system of reimbursement is devised—problems which need attention if the system is to be as equitable as possible.

Regional and national referral centers may be quite different from other hospitals. Certainly we know that such centers are magnets—attracting difficult cases that, for one reason or another, cannot be handled elsewhere. We do not have the data, nor can we perform at this time the analysis needed, to verify that such centers require $100, or $1,000 more per case than other hospitals. We do know, however, that some analysis is necessary and if the results so indicate, adjustments must be made for the special needs of these hospitals.

Our intention is to continue to support the enormously important work done by institutes like the Methodist Hospital in Texas. These institutions have a unique capacity to offer diverse, highly specialized care and education in all areas of health care.

The amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Texas, Mr. Bentsen, directs the Secretary to examine the experience of these hospitals carefully and to make the necessary adjustments to their reimbursement to account for their special circumstances.

As I have indicated before, the Senator from Kansas supports this amendment. I know the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) is a cosponsor, and he raised the question in the committee during the committee deliberations.

There is no problem with the amendment except I think Senator COCHRAN wanted to offer a slight amendment to the Senator's amendment, to which I do not think you have any objection, which relates to Mississippi, and he is on his way to the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, if the Senator will withhold, I suggest that Senator Long, from Louisiana, be listed as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 74

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I send to the committee an amendment to the Bentsen amendment and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Cochran) for himself, Mr. Stevens and Mr. Specter, proposes an amendment numbered 74 to the Bentsen amendment numbered 73.

After "referral centers" insert "(including those hospitals of 500 or more beds located in rural areas)"

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment on behalf of myself, Senator Stevens, and Senator Specter. The purpose of the amend-ment is to attempt to address a special problem with the provisions of the bill for payment to hospitals for direct costs under Medicare.

The bill provides a basic distinction between urban and rural hospitals, with the assumption that the cost incurred by urban hospitals is about 30 percent higher than the cost of a rural hospital reflecting the more sophisticated equipment, procedures, and personnel that are necessary to deal with the more complex medical problems that are encountered in the larger urban areas.

This is true in some cases—but there are some special exceptions to that generalization. There is, for example, in my State of Mississippi a 650-bed hospital located in Tupelo. Miss. It is the North Mississippi Medical Center. For all purposes, other than the fact that it is located in an area that is not defined as an SMSA, it is a big hospital; the largest in our State. But because of this arbitrary distinction—maybe it is not arbitrary in all cases—but because of this distinction that is in the bill, it would be eligible for reimbursement at a rate of some 30 percent less than the hospitals in Jackson, Miss. It is, for instance, which are located in the standard metropolitan statistical area.

We had hoped to be able to get the committee to go along with a simple amendment that would treat these large rural area hospitals, with 500 beds or more in their facility, as if they were urban hospitals. I still think that is the simplest way to do it—but because of objections from the Department and the committee, we are offering an alternative.

This will provide for the Secretary to permit payment to these large rural hospitals at the same rate as the urban hospitals if it is found that the costs incurred in incurring the care justified that level of payment. I am hoping that that will be the decision of the Secretary.

The amendment specifically directs the Secretary of HHS to analyze the circumstances for those rural hospitals with over 500 beds—and there are only four hospitals like this that I know about in the United States—and to make adjustments so that those hospitals can be paid at the rate which reflects their actual cost, even though they would otherwise be in the rural category.

In addition to providing the Secretary with the authority to order payment as if these large rural hospitals were in an urban area, it also permits an amendment to determine those medical functions which reflect the higher costs incurred by these large rural hospitals different from the costs for similar medical functions incurred by smaller hospitals in the same areas, and directs her to make reimbursements accordingly to calculate reimbursement levels that would be fair to the large hospitals based on their higher costs. I am hoping that this amendment is going to meet the problem, it will, if the Secretary acts promptly and develops a set of rules that will reflect fair treatment for these very large hospitals in rural areas.

In talking with the chairman of the committee and others, I understand that it is the intention of the managers of the bill to accept this suggested change in the language of the legislation, and I appreciate that very much. The distinguished chairman of the committee and Senator Bereuax have been very courteous and helpful in developing this language to meet this problem which exists in my State and three others. I understand there is a situation in Texas, as well, where they are dealing with a large rural center.

I appreciate the opportunity to offer this amendment at this point on behalf of myself and the other Senators mentioned.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Mississippi. His amendment is an opportunity for adjustments in the case of another small, but important, group of hospitals which could have been all too easily overlooked during the implementation of this new system. We intended to devise this new hospital reimbursement system so as to be responsive to as many concerns as possible.

In the case of the five institutions Senator Cochran is concerned with, each is quite large and located in a rural area. They are concerned that their services and their costs more closely approximate those of a large urban hospital.

Certainly the rural-urban split in the prospective rates may not be appropriate in the case of very large acute care hospitals located in rural areas. But rather than pose a simplistic answer to the problem at this time, this Senator feels strongly that we ought to direct the Secretary to make an adjustment that makes sense given the particular circumstances.

This kind of situation is a matter best addressed from an analytical standpoint. It is in our own best interest to see that a financial system which is responsive to as many concerns as possible.

I thank the Senator for his amendment and for his concern.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I commend the Chairman for his amendment regarding hospitals that serve a national and regional referral centers. While the driving force behind the prospective payment system has been the need to restrain cost increases in health care, the committee has shown that it is also mindful of the need to sustain research and development in clinical medicine at the Nation's great medical centers. Such institutions have special capabilities, not ordinarily found in community hospitals, that require technological sophistication and innovation; multidisciplinary and highly specialized training programs; and the capacity, experience, and support systems necessary to care for the sickest, most resource-intensive, patients. Payment of cost of care in such hospitals may far exceed the rates at which the hospital would otherwise be reimbursed under the prospective payment system. The committee amendment will insure that, as the Secretary implements this new reimbursement system, he makes appropriate adjustments to payment rates to insure that the ability of our regional and national referral centers to provide the highest quality of care for the sickest of our people is not impaired, and that our commitment as a nation to remain in the forefront of advances in clinical medicine is not diminished.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, earlier this morning I was away from the floor when the Senate considered the Cochran amendment to the Bentsen amendment. I am very glad that Senator Cochran is concerned with, and that our commitment as a nation to remain in the forefront of advances in clinical medicine is not diminished.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, the amendment (UP No. 74) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move adoption of the Bentsen amendment, as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 73, as amended) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs on the Symms amendment.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I want to share with my colleagues my thoughts on this legislation we are considering today designed to secure the financial integrity of the social security system. Clearly, the bill we have before us is the product of the work and thoughts of many individuals. These individuals have struggled through many difficult choices in their attempt to arrive at a workable solution to the financial shortfall facing the social security system.

While I and others have reservations about certain aspects of the package, I think the Commission deserves praise for their hard work and their perseverance. In particular today I want to commend Senator Dole, who, as a member of the National Commission and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has demonstrated important leadership and sensitivity on this vital matter.

The recommendations of the National Commission and the compromises worked out in the Senate Finance Committee are a remarkable achievement, given the complexity of the problem.

In addition to Senator Dole, I want to praise the efforts of the senior Sen-Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order of business be suspended.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, in 1981, the Congress, with excellent justification, cut off social security benefits to persons convicted of crimes; that is, to criminals. In the current social security reform package pending, the Congress proposes to tighten up further on that procedure to deny all benefits, not just disability benefits, but all benefits which are not being extended to convicted criminals.

Some months ago, during one of my frequent visits to the State which I have the honor of representing, one of my constituents came to me and complained that he knew of a number of instances where persons committed to the State hospital for having committed crimes but adjudged not guilty by reason of insanity. This in no way affects benefits for which such persons' families might be eligible. This statute applies to the person himself, just as the statute enacted by Congress in 1981 applying to criminals applies only to that person found guilty and not to any benefits to which his family might be entitled.

This in no way affects benefits for which such persons' families might be eligible. This statute applies to the person himself, just as the statute enacted by Congress in 1981 applying to criminals applies only to that person found guilty and not to any benefits to which his family might be entitled.

If we could have the attention of the distinguished ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, I believe we are prepared to dispose of this amendment, but I want to give an opportunity to the minority to comment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Humphrey).

The amendment (UP No. 75) was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER UP AMENDMENT NO. 70

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I also move to reconsider the vote by which the Humphrey amendment was agreed to yesterday. This is the one which the Humphrey amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MOTION TO RECONSIDER UP AMENDMENT NO. 70

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I believe we have another noncontroversial amendment that has been cleared by both sides.

I spoke too soon, Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceed to call the roll.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of Title I add the following new section:

USE OF DEATH CERTIFICATES TO PREVENT ERRONEOUS BENEFIT PAYMENTS TO DECEASED INDIVIDUALS

Sec. 153. Section 205 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection: "Use of Death Certificates to Correct Program Information"

'(r)(1) The Secretary shall undertake to establish a program under which—

"(A) States (or political subdivisions thereof) voluntarily contract with the Secretary to furnish the Secretary periodically with information (in a form established by the Secretary in consultation with the States) concerning individuals with respect to whom death certificates (or equivalent documents maintained by the States or subdivisions) have been officially filed with them;"

"(B) There will be (1) a comparison of such information on such individuals with information on such individuals in the records being used in the administration of this Act, (2) corrections in the results of such comparisons, and (3) correction in such records to accurately reflect the status of such individuals;"

"(2) Each State (or political subdivision thereof) which furnishes the Secretary with information on records of deaths in the State or subdivision under this subsection may be paid by the Secretary from amounts available for administration of this Act the reasonable costs (established by the Secretary in consultation with the States) for transcribing and transmitting such information to the Secretary.

"(3) In the case of individuals with respect to whom federally funded benefits are paid by (or through) a Federal or State agency other than under this Act, the Secretary shall to the extent feasible provide such information to a cooperative arrangement with such agency, for ensuring proper payment of those benefits with respect to such individuals—

"(A) under such arrangement the agency provides reimbursement to the Secretary for the reasonable cost of carrying out such arrangement; and"

"(B) such arrangement does not conflict with the duties of the Secretary under paragraph (1)."

The amendment agreed to yesterday addresses the problem of the millions of dollars being lost every year in benefits being paid to deceased persons and whose demise has not been brought to the attention of the Social Security Administration.

As I said yesterday, this approach, the printing of the legend on the check is not a perfect and full remedy for the situation. Therefore, I propose another amendment which I send to the deck.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator asking unanimous consent to set aside the pending business?

Mr. HUMPHREY. I ask unanimous consent that the pending business be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the Humphrey amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Humphrey) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 76.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

prepared to accept this amendment. We think it is a constructive change and, in fact, addresses itself to a problem which, in the long run, could cost substantial amounts of money for the social security fund. We think this is a very useful approach and we are grateful to the Senator from New Hampshire for raising this issue. We urge an aye vote on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 76) was agreed to.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the Symms amendment.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Symms amendment be set aside and that I may be permitted to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senators from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong), for himself and Mr. Baucus, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 77.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following:

"SEC. 1. Table of thresholds.-(a) General rules. Effective for months beginning after December 31, 1983, in applying section 31302(c)(1)(A)(1)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 and the Internal Revenue Regulations-(1) "$5,000," shall be substituted for "$3,000 in such section with respect to the first deposit required to be made during any calendar month."

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, the amendment addresses itself to a relatively simple matter but one which is of great interest to a number of small business concerns throughout the country. As Senators know, employer tax withholding deposit requirements are determined by the Internal Revenue Service in accordance with a series of thresholds that allow employers with $5,000 or less in monthly withholding of social security and income taxes the opportunity to deposi times a month—so far as we know, even years—on the general question of social security, and working on the Commission. He has labored very diligently and industriously, and I think he has as much knowledge as anyone else of the intricacies and the problems facing our social security system. He certainly knows the problems that face small business.

This is a simple amendment. It is very brief; it is equitable. It is designed to help small business, very simply, by providing that any businessman who holds less than $5,000 in FICA payments, as opposed to gross pay, need only make those payments on a monthly basis, 15 days after the end of each month.

The problem at this time is that businesses that hold $3,000 or more have to deposit up to eight times a month. That is the same provision that applies to businesses of all sizes. This amendment would enable small businesses, those with about 15 to 20 employees, to deposit withheld payroll taxes once a month, 15 days after the end of each month.

This amendment would not cost very much; it is less than $1 billion for the decade. That might sound like a lot of money, but we all know that in dealing with the social security system, it is minimal.

This amendment is endorsed by many organizations—the National Federation of Independent Business, the Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Wholesalers and Distributors, and others. Obviously, it is one that is needed for our economy as we work ourselves out of the recession, on the road to recovery. Working capital will be increased for capital-starved small businesses, and the administrative savings from paying monthly will also be significant.

I have one final point which is often made but is one that I think we should keep in mind: Most innovation in comes from small business. We might think that any innovation, new ideas, or increases in productivity come from big business. That is not the case. Studies show that, by far, most innovation, most new ideas, most increases in productivity come from small businesses. In the main, that is because smaller businesses enable the entrepreneur to develop new ideas; whereas, in larger business, often the size of the business and the bureaucracy tend to stifle new ideas, and increases in productivity.

Mr. President, I do not want to labor the point. This is a simple and fair amendment. It gives a bit of relief to America's small businesses.

Mr. President, a final point: I think and large, the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security are on the right track. Each of us might have minor adjustments we would make; but I think, by and large, it is pretty much on the right track, because there is no better alternative.
The problem, though, is that when you look at the whole realm of the burden that has to be born by the small business, you have to bear in mind that big business can withstand some of the burdens a little easier than can small business. Big business tends to be in a little better position to pass on those cost increases in terms of higher prices. That is somewhat less true in the case of small business. Small business tends to be locked in a little more.

It is for that reason that the Senator from Colorado and I think small businesses deserve a little break to even out the equities. This is truly more fair, so the package will be truly more balanced.

For those reasons, I hope our colleagues will support the amendment, and I urge its quick adoption.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I congratulate him on his statement. He has presented the amendment with great clarity, but also he has made a point that we need to emphasize every day of the year. It is that the economic future of this country depends on small business. That is not to denigrate the enormous contribution large concerns are making. It is the small companies, the companies which do not have the ability to cope with making deposits of withholding tax several times a month.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

The Senator from Montana and I are talking about very small firms. We are not talking about even medium-sized companies when we say that their withholding might be $4,000 or $5,000 a month. This is perhaps for a firm that has a dozen or 15 or, at most, 20 employees. So we are not talking about large companies.

I appreciate the Senator from Montana particularly making that point, because I would not want there to be any confusion. This is simply a practical problem that we are addressing, and I thank him for his participation and leadership on this issue.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, one more point: Often, the first question Senators ask themselves about an amendment is, "Does this break up the package? Does this bust the package?" Some amendments do and some amendments do not. This amendment is perhaps for a firm that has a dozen or 15 or, at most, 20 employees. So we are not talking about large companies.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I agree with what both Senators have said. I appreciate the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Colorado bringing this amendment to the floor.

It will not break the package, but it may save a lot of small businesses that are on the margin now, bearing these higher social security trust fund costs, in the long run, the $1 billion projected cost, as the Senator from Montana accurately points out, in terms of the social security program, is not going to make or break the system. In fact, it may not cost anything in the long run, just because it removes the necessity for some unnecessary red tape. Also, it will help some of those businesses facilitate their normal operations and pay their bills. It is an amendment that affects every State.

I think the Senator from Montana and the Senator from Colorado are correct. Small businessmen and businesswomen of America literally are the backbone of the enterprise system in this country.

This is one thing that we could and should do to improve this package. I hope that we can get an overwhelming majority vote for this amendment. It is just plain commonsense. I know from personal experience that it is very helpful to the small businessman who has cash flow and accounting difficulties.

I thank both Senators for offering the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not know that the Senator from Kansas has any problem with the amendment, but again I think we should state for the Record that it is not cost free as far as the trust fund is concerned. We are concerned about the status of the social security fund.

We are advised that the budget effect of this amendment is $500 million in 1984 and $1 billion over the decade. It will decrease the trust fund receipts by $200 million in 1984 and $400 million over the decade. It will also reduce general revenues in the amount of $300 million in 1984 and $600 million over the decade.

As pointed out, the Senator from Kansas had to be absent from the Chamber when this amendment was discussed in the Finance Committee by the distinguished Senator from Colorado, the Senator from Montana, and I believe the Senator from Idaho.

It is an expensive provision to both the social security trust fund and the Federal budget generally. We were trying to figure out some way to satisfy the concerns of small business without having such a significant impact on the trust funds and on the Federal budget generally. Apparently we did not get that working out.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I cosponsor and support the Armstrong-Baucus amendment which will reduce the paperwork burden on many small businesses by allowing them to deposit social security payroll taxes on a monthly basis rather than more frequently.

The burdens that we have placed on small business are heavy. The struggle that they face in this recession is deep. We should be ever sensitive to the paper work and paperwork burdens which we impose upon them.

This amendment is one way of reducing those burdens and displaying that sensitivity and we should grasp the opportunity to do so. I am happy to be a cosponsor.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have not discussed this amendment with the principal sponsors, the Senator from Colorado, the Senator from Montana, and with the distinguished ranking minority member, Senator Lugar. I am prepared to accept the amendment if there is no objection of the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. Would the pending matter be the vote on the Armstrong amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have been ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong). The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mr. D'Amato) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New York (Mr. D'Amato) would vote "yea." By Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings), the Senator from New York (Mr. Moynihan), and the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. Pryor) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Symms). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S 3231

NOT VOTING—4

So Mr. Armstrong's amendment (UP No. 77) was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator LEVIN, Senator SASSER, Senator MITCHELL, Senator BRADLEY, Senator LAUTENBERG, and Senator JEPSEN be added as cosponsors of the amendment that was just agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The majority leader is recognized.
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Add at the end of the bill the following new title:

TITLE—VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION REORGANIZATION

Sec. 1. The requirements of section 216(b)(2)(A) of title 38, United States Code, shall not apply to the planned administrative reorganization at the Veterans' Administration Los Angeles Data Processing Center involving the transfer of 25 full-time equivalent employees from the Office of Data management and technology to the Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans' Administration.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I indicated, this is an amendment that I have offered on behalf of the distinguished Senator from California, Senator Cranston, and the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, Senator Simpson. It is a noncontro versial amendment relating to the transfer of a small number of VA employee positions from one VA department to another in Los Angeles. It is one that there has been an agreement upon. It is technical in nature. I know of no objection to the amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, as far as I understand on this side of the aisle, there is no objection.

This amendment does not relate to social security. It relates to an internal reorganization problem in the Veterans' Administration, and the Administration needs the amendment in order to transfer 25 full-time equivalent employees from one agency to another within the Veterans' Administration. I am not aware of any opposition to the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my good friend, the chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee (Mr. SIMPSON), in submitting for printing a noncontro versial amendment to S. 3233, as I understand on this side of the aisle, there is no objection.

This amendment relates to an internal reorganization problem in the Veterans' Administration, and the Administration needs the amendment in order to transfer 25 full-time equivalent employees from one VA department to another within the Veterans' Administration. I am not aware of any opposition to the amendment.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my good friend, the chairman of the Veterans' Affairs Committee (Mr. SIMPSON), in submitting for printing a noncontro versial amendment to S. 1 that we intend to offer during Senate consideration of S. 1 later this week. The substance of the amendment—relating to a staffing reorganization in the Veterans' Administration—is not related to the subject matter of S. 1. Rather, we are proposing to add it to S. 1 because of the need to insure early enactment of the provisions of our amendment.

Mr. President, I will ask that a February 1, 1983, letter from the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, dated February 1, 1983, be printed at this point in the RECORD. There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

Hon. Alan Cranston,
Ranking Minority Member, Committee on Veterans' Affairs, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR CRANSTON: The continuing resolution signed into law on December 31, 1982, Pub. L. No. 97-377, states that no appropriated funds shall be used to further develop or maintain this Agency's Computerized Medical Information Support System (COMISS). It also mandates the transfer of a full-time equivalent employment (FTEE) cell of 69 positions (on an annualized basis) previously assigned to COMISS development, from the Office of Data Management and Telecommunications (ODMT) to the Department of Medicine and Surgery (DMS) for the support of the Decentralized Hospital Computer Program (DHCP). However, the law states that funds can also be used to operate the Automated Pharmacy, Patient Accounting, and Storage (APPLES) system at locations where that system is currently operating.

We are taking the actions that are necessary to transfer the specified 69 FTEE cell, plus an additional 11 positions previously assigned to COMISS development, from ODMT to DMS. This transfer includes the total FTEE ceiling for COMISS in Central Office and at the Hines Data Processing Center and therefore complies with both the letter and intent of Pub. L. No. 97-377.
In order to further comply with the thrust of that law, I have decided that the transfer should also include an FTEE ceiling of 25 positions that currently support the hospital maintenance of the APPLES system at the Los Angeles VA Data Processing Center. The APPLES system is a centrally maintained and operated hospital outpatient system that currently supports VA hospitals in Southern California. The intent of the Congressional directive to terminate COMISS development is to ensure that hospital-based automation is accomplished by DM&S through DHCP. The APPLES system is an outdated centralized system which will eventually be replaced by the system. Logically, therefore, the FTEE ceiling for APPLES should also reside within DM&S and not ODM&T.

However, since including this FTEE ceiling of 25 positions exceeds 10% of that of the total FTEE ceiling of 80 positions, I am reporting to you, in accordance with USC 210(b)(2), my intention to transfer that operation and maintenance of 25 positions that currently support the hospital computer support. The Congressionl directive is to help accomplish the gradual transition from centralized to decentralized hospital support. Logically, therefore, the FTEE ceiling for APPLES should also reside within DM&S and not ODM&T.

The APPLES system is an outdated centralized outpatient pharmacy system that currently resides within DM&S and not ODM&T. Therefore, the FTEE ceiling for APPLES should also reside within DM&S and not ODM&T.

The intent of the Congressional directive is to help accomplish the gradual transition from centralized to decentralized hospital support. Logically, therefore, the FTEE ceiling for APPLES should also reside within DM&S and not ODM&T.

In any event, at this point there are probably not more than a dozen amendments. We would hope that if some of these are controversial, we could dispose of them before we go back on the jobs bill.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

COSPONSORS—AMENDMENT NO. 512

Mr. LONG, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as original cosponsors on Senate amendment No. 512, social security reform: Pell, Glenn, Riegle, Pressler, Biden, and Warner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG, Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending business.

Mr. DOLE. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the pending business.

Mr. DOLE. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, that amendment would change the retirement age to 68. Is that correct?

Mr. DOLE. Yes; that is the understanding of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MATTHEY assumed the chair.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if the distinguished majority leader will yield, I was in the chair, and I could not respond.

Very simply, the amendment raises the retirement age 1 month every year for 36 years, so it is a very gradual change, and it will not disrupt anybody's plans. It will save billions of dollars for the long-term problem and several billion dollars in the next 10 years when there is a squeeze on the trust fund.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator. I just thought Senators should know what the question is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from New York (Mr. D'AMATO) would vote nay.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BOMSTEAD), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 12, nays 84, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 29 Leg.]
Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was defeated.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There will be order in the Senate.

The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, earlier this afternoon, I described the terms of a proposed unanimous-consent agreement that I hope the Senate will agree to.

Mr. President, I have no changes except minor language changes, to make in the request as I described it earlier. I will put that request in just a minute. I would like to make sure that all the principals and the minority leader are on the floor. I thought that was the case, but it apparently is not at the moment.

I do not want to put this request until I am sure everybody is here who expressed an interest in it or who wants to be on the floor, so let me wait just a minute.

I now suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—KASTEN AMENDMENT

NO. 504

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, as I said earlier, I want now to propound a unanimous-consent request that is identical, I believe, with the one I described on the floor a little while ago, with certain minor changes that I believe do not affect in any way the substance of the agreement but do, in fact, contribute to its clarification. I hope the agreement will be granted by the Senate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending measure be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the amendment to the reciprocality bill, S. 141.

I further ask unanimous consent, when that measure is before the Senate this afternoon, that it will be before the Senate only for one purpose, and that is to permit the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. Kasten) to offer one amendment dealing with dividend and interest withholding.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendment to the Kasten amendment be in order this afternoon; that no debate be in order this afternoon; that no point of order be in order to be made at this time; that immediately after the reporting of the Kasten amendment, the Senate, without further action, then resume consideration of the jobs bill; that no further amendment dealing with withholding of dividends and interest be in order to that bill; that on April 15, 1983, four hours after the Senate convenes, the Senate resume consideration of the reciprocality bill, at which time the Kasten amendment will be the pending question for debate and with no waiver of any Senator's rights.

I further ask unanimous consent that the Kasten amendment to the Abbanon amendment be withdrawn and that the Kasten amendment to the committee amendment be withdrawn.

I further ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that the order for the Senate to convene on Saturday be vitiated.

I ask unanimous consent that the order for the Senate to convene on Saturday be vitiated.

Mr. President, that is the request.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, reserving the rights to object, and I do not intend to object, Mr. President. I just want to make it clear that, as far as the Senator from Louisiana is concerned, if Mr. Kasten is willing to agree to that unanimous-consent request with regard to his amendment, I will respect his decision.

Mr. BAKER. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. LONG. Yes.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, that is entirely appropriate and I think we should ask the Senator from Wisconsin if he is agreeable with the request.

Mr. KASTEN. I am agreeable to this request. I would like to say to the Senator from Louisiana that this is similar to what he and I and others have been working for now for 2 or 3 days. It means this will be the pending amendment. It means we will be able, within a short period of time, by working the will of the Senate, to have a vote up or down on the withholding question.

Mr. LONG. Let me say further, it is the judgment of the Senator from Louisiana that the jobs bill was not the most appropriate bill on which to offer the amendment.

If the Senator from Louisiana had been planning to offer that amendment, he would have offered it on the social security bill. I do not know that I am going to offer it on the social security bill, but I want to make clear that a Senator has that right, if he wants to do so.

When one studies the amendment, I am not sure that the Kasten amendment will get the support of the House of Representatives even if the Senator from Kansas has a majority of the votes here in the Senate.

I have read Mr. Dole's remarks which appeared earlier in today's Record. They make it clear that the Senator from Kansas and those who agree with him would have a right to debate the Kasten amendment on the trade bill as long as they want to, and they would have a right to conduct a postluteus filibuster on it, if that be their desire.

It is clear that that is the right of Senators.

This Senator is willing to go along with the unanimous consent agreement.

This Senator salutes the Senator from Wisconsin for the noble fight he has made on this matter. At least he did succeed in getting a showing of strength. He gave the Senate an opportunity to go on record in favor of repealing withholding, and he did have a majority of the votes, 59 votes, as I recall. So he made a noble contribution to the cause.

I am frank to say that many Senators—in fact, by the time they think it over, maybe a majority of those who favor what Mr. Kasten is trying to achieve feel that they are compelled to offer a similar amendment on the social security bill or some other bill.

As I understand it, that is their privilege if the unanimous-consent agreement is agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. Yes. As the Senator knows, Mr. President, I had earlier hoped we could include in this agreement a prohibition against the interest withholding amendment on either the jobs bill or social security. As the Senator from Louisiana points out, that would be unlikely to be agreed to by the Senate. There are a number of Senators on both sides of the aisle who have indicated they wish to have their say on that right. I continue to hope they do not do that because we do need to pass social security. But I did not include that request at this time for that very reason. Of course, any Senator is free to offer any amendment that they wish and that qualifies to the social security bill without any effect on this agreement.

Mr. LONG. I just want the Senator to understand that if a request had been made that no such amendment be made to the social security bill, I would have been compelled to object today. I might have wanted to reconsider my position over the weekend, but today I would be compelled to object to the request. I will not object to the pending request, and I hope other Senators will not object.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. BAKER. Let me yield to the Senator from Wisconsin once more.

Mr. KASTEN. I want to thank the majority leader for yielding. I wanted to direct my comments to the Senator from Louisiana.

He is correct. The possible flaw in this agreement is that this particular bill will not have the power or legislative strength, if you will, to go all the way through the process. I recognize that. It is my feeling that at this time we wanted to get a vote by which we could pass it out of the Senate Chamber without slowing down the Jobs bill.

If it turns out that the Senator's remarks are correct, that this will be tucked away in some back corner desk in the Way and Means Committee, we have not in any way cut off the amendment. The debt ceiling bill, for amending other appropriations matters, for amending a tax bill when it comes.

This issue is going to be before the Senate and this issue is going to be before the American people until it is before the American people. If we pass a bill that is not germane to the issue we are discussing, we have not in any way cut off or delayed the Senate.

The question is how are we going to get from where we are to there. We are in no way precluded from any other mechanisms or benefits.

Mr. LONG. I just want to make clear that that situation, that the Senator from Wisconsin, certainly he or any other Senator, is not barred if he feels he wants to offer this amendment on the social security bill or any other bill. In my judgment, such an amendment should have been offered on what is clearly a revenue bill.

Over in the House of Representatives they have a way of doing business where they regard an appropriations bill as being a bill to raise revenue. Just read the Constitution. It says bills to raise revenue must originate in the House of Representatives. My imagination defies me to see how an appropriations bill to spend money can be determined to be a bill to raise revenue.

If we try to amend them an appropriation bill that originates in the Senate, they will say it is a revenue bill and send it back to us. If we take another bill that has nothing to do with revenue, and if we put on an amendment to reduce revenue, not raise it, they will send it back. We do not have to appeal their action because we have no right to make an appeal over there in the House or to make a motion there. We have to act over here when it gets sent back to us. We are powerless to do anything about it when those people in the House put a construction on a bill that is obviously wrong. But, who are we going to appeal to?

We have no recourse. We just have to go along with them on the theory that you can offer an amendment on a revenue bill, and while at it you might as well offer it on a real revenue bill.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, you have heard from a man who never served in the House, and I am one of those who never served in the House. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, you have heard from a man who never served in the House, and I am one of those who never served in the House.

I confess freely I do not understand the ways of the House. But I do understand that the Senator from Wisconsin is not a minority party. They will do that to us. The Founding Fathers gave us nothing to do in return, I am afraid, so there is not much we can do about that, at least right now.

I want to subscribe absolutely and totally to the description of that situation by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Now I will yield to the Senator from Nebraska and then to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. EXON. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object. I would like to try to structure a proposal to ask two questions, if they will answer, first a question to the Senator from Wisconsin and then to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I yield for that purpose.

Mr. EXON. I will first ask a question of the Senator from Wisconsin, reminding him and the body that I am a cosponsor of the amendment he has fought so hard for, to eliminate the withholding on interest and dividends come July 1.

My question has to do with a news report that I read earlier today that was attributed to the Senator from Wisconsin indicating that he was suggesting that we move up the cloture petition vote to this afternoon, that he intended at that time to vote for cloture and then move to overrule the likely ruling of the Chair that his amendment would not be germane.

Is it in order and could he answer the question as to whether that effort failed, or does the Senator think that the recommendations that have just been outlined by the majority leader better serve the cause that the Senator and I are dedicated to?

Mr. KASTEN. In response to the Senator from Nebraska, I want to say that I think him for his strong support and coauthorship of the amendment and his strong support in the effort to repeal this regulation concerning withholding on interest and dividends.

This morning when I spoke, I said to the Senate it would be my hope that we not delay this whole process, that either we follow the outline just described by the Senator or that we work with the leadership to try to accommodate our needs. We have been trying to work with them since last Thursday. Significant changes were made today which made it possible for a bill to be brought up, for an amendment to be attached to it, and for that to be voted on if that route is followed.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, you have heard from a man who never served in the House, and I am one of those who never served in the House. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, you have heard from a man who never served in the House, and I am one of those who never served in the House.

I think the fact that we talked about pushing the cloture vote and, frankly, pushing the Senate into a postcloture situation, having been difficult and that vote on postcloture germaneness would have started to push against the rules of the Senate, although there have been precedents in 1990 in the event of the Kasemba Amendment, I chose, and I believe our cause is best served, to not push on that at this time, by not forcing ourselves into a postcloture filibuster situation, and by not slowing down the Jobs bill any further.

We have what we wanted from last Thursday. We now have the opportunity for the up or down vote on a particular date certain and without interfering with business that can be used to fence us out.

We have what we wanted. Last Thursday, we got to it in part by talking about going through the cloture situation this afternoon.

Mr. EXON. I thank my friend from Wisconsin for his explanation. Now I would like to have him and the learned friend and master of the parliamentary procedure, the Senator from Louisiana.

The measure upon which the compromise is based is the reciprocity bill; is that correct?

The Senator from Nebraska happens also to be a cosponsor of that reciprocity bill. I do not know whether or not this idea has been cleared with the sponsors of that bill, but I am inquiring of the Senator from Louisiana as to what he thinks the chances are of the amendment ever getting to the House. Republicans, in my judgment, do not want to distress the Senate.

Mr. KASTEN. In response to the Senator from Wisconsin to the reciprocal bill that I am a cosponsor of, the Senate from Wisconsin to the reciprocity bill that I am a cosponsor of, indeed mean that neither one of them will ever see the light of day?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I have no doubt that they will see the light of day on the Senate floor, because that is called for in the unanimous consent request. They will see the light of day on the Senate floor.

Mr. EXON. I mean off the Senate floor.

Mr. LONG. I assume that if the opponents of this measure are as firm in their opposition as they are now—and the statement of Mr. DOLE, the chairman of the Committee on Finance, indicated that he is still as firm in his views as he has been up to this point—I would say that the chances of anything happening other than the bill coming back from the House with a blue slip on it are little or none. All it takes is a single slip on over there, and it comes back to us with a blue slip on it, and that is the end of it. We can pass the bill and it will come back from the House with a blue slip.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, a few minutes ago I indicated that I do not know anything about the House rules. I do not know much, but I know a little, because I have been enlightened on this subject by the chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and others. I understand that a major-

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, that may be, and I would be glad to check it out the best I know how.

My understanding is that the reciprocity bill is an S-numbered bill, a bill originating from the Senate. We on the committee know that that bill itself violates the Constitution. If we send the House a bill that is unconstitutional on the face of it then under the Constitution, they have no business considering it.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we are talking as members of the Senate who know the least about House procedures.

Mr. LONG. But I know something about the Constitution.

Mr. BAKER. I recommend that we defer to our friends in the House about it.

Mr. LONG. If he wants to plead ignorance about the Constitution, the Senator from Tennessee is free to do that. I do not plead ignorance.

Mr. BAKER. I do not plead ignorance, Mr. President, but I do not know.

Mr. LONG. Well, I do. If the Senator wants to come to me and ask questions on the point of constitutional law, I will be glad to talk to him. I have studied it many times.

Mr. HELMS. If my Senator will yield, Mr. President, that is a majority leader that has always been courteous and candid with me. I do not wish to go against his wishes, but I feel I must play ball with the people I have cosponsored the amendment with.

Mr. SYMMS. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BAKER. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if I had not given my word to the distinguished majority leader that I would not object to this amendment, I am not sure just what my attitude would be. I wanted to propose a question.

To which bill was the Senator from Louisiana speaking that is going to the blue slip on it? Was he talking about the jobs bill, or the reciprocity bill?

Mr. LONG. I said that the reciprocity bill is a revenue bill; it is plainly a bill to raise revenue, because it has to do with tariffs.

Mr. SYMMS. This reciprocity bill, did it not pass the Senate previously and never come out of the Ways and Means Committee?

Mr. LONG. No, Mr. President, it has not passed the Senate. But there is no doubt about it, if the reciprocity bill on the calendar goes from here to the House, it is not going to be acted on in the House. The House is going to tell the Senate that a revenue bill must originate in the House of Representatives, period, and here is your bill back. It is a very polite thing to do. They could just burn the bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. SYMMS. As is so often the case, Mr. President, I think, from my experience in the other body, the Senator from Wisconsin has said that it may be that the Senate from Louisiana also is right that the proper bill for the proponents of the repealing the withholding on interest and dividend income is the social security bill. Could that be the bill to which it should be attached. Maybe the Senators from Nebraska and Wisconsin and the other Senators who are authors of this amendment could offer it there instead of having it on the jobs bill if it pleases the leadership to have it there.

Mr. LONG. It was the thought of the Senator from Louisiana that if somebody wanted to ask me what bill to put on the Senate amendment, I would have suggested the social security bill. I advise that you ask Wisconsin for the try he made. It takes the hide of a rhinoceros to tackle one of those big bills against the leadership on his side of the aisle, or this side of the aisle, for that matter, when he is told that a bill is urgent, we cannot take time to think about matters, this bill has to pass right now, people are hungry, they need across the width and breadth of America and there is some unemployment insurance money here, and something has to happen. I think the Senator from Wisconsin has said that against the kind of pressure he has faced. But as a practical matter, if one wants to amend this bill or that one, he had better to prepare to face that type of calamity.

At the same time, it seems to the Senator from Louisiana that if you want to offer your amendment, you would do well to try to amend what is a House revenue bill to begin with, because when it gets to the House side, they are going to challenge it if it is not a House revenue bill.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the Senator. If I may reserve the right to object a little further, I shall not object. I would like to join in those compliments of the Senator from Wisconsin for his noble efforts. I am sorry to be at odds with my distinguished chairman, whom I have so much respect for on the Finance Committee. I do think when we passed the 1982 TEFFA Act, we made a mistake to include that in the bill. I was one of those who voted for it, and I am willing to admit I made a mistake.

I wish we could stop fighting this issue and allow the American people—whom we have told for years and years they ought to take an active part in politics. I have told my own people, "You ought to take the time to try to influence the people you do business with, whether it is on the payroll slips or anything else." That is all they have done in this case. The people have responded.

I think as rapidly as possible, we ought to give them a vote on the House floor and let the President make the decision that he wants to. I wish we could bring up a clean bill, pass it, and send it over to the House. But that is not the choice of the leadership.

I do not object.

Mr. BAKER. I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, let me see if I have the scenario straight. First of all, we are going to lay aside the social security bill temporarily and proceed to S. 144, a bill sponsored by Senator Daves and Senator Long has correctly said that that is a cadaver on its face. It is a legislative corpse. So what we are looking at are two legislative corpses if this unanimous-consent request is agreed to. I say to my friends from Wisconsin and North Carolina, we have said to him in private, that for all practical purposes, the fight is over on the proposal to repeal 10 percent withholding of dividend and interest income.

What we are talking about, I say to the majority leader, is simply giving Senator Kasem a rolleicord vote on this amendment this afternoon on the reciprocity bill. Is that it?

Mr. BAKER. No, Mr. President, it is not that. What we are talking about is calling up the reciprocity bill this afternoon for the purpose of permitting the Senator from Wisconsin to offer his amendment, or this other amendment, but it is clearly the divi dend and interest withholding.

But after the Kasten amendment is reported, then we would go off that bill and back to the jobs bill. There would be no vote on that today.

Mr. HELMS. So we will not even get a show of strength out of this unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. BAKER. I think he has shown about all the strength we can handle. Mr. HELMS. I beg the Senator's pardon? I am sorry, I did not understand.

Mr. BAKER. I say that I think our friend from Wisconsin has shown about all the strength we can handle.

Mr. HELMS. At one time this morning had 62 votes.

Mr. BAKER. Fifty-nine is strength.

Mr. HELMS. It had been watered down to 59 in the well. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. The Senator and I were in the well together, as I recall. Mr. HELMS. Yes. He just outwatered me.

There is nothing implicit, let alone explicit, no misunderstanding, no hard feelings if this proposal comes back on some other posture.

Mr. BAKER. No, Mr. President, the Senator is absolutely right. I made it clear, and I will reiterate here, nothing in this agreement affects in any way the right of any Senator to offer a different amendment, interest withholding amendment to S. 144, or any other bill including social security. I hope that does not happen, but the answer to the question of the Senator is that he is correct.

Mr. HELMS. I understand. Mr. President, my dear friend, the majority leader, knows my affection for him, and he also knows that we have been to this well before time and time again and always came out all right. I will say to him that if it were my judgment call to make, if it were my amendment—and I have said this to the Senator from Wisconsin—I would object to the unanimous-consent.

But it is not my judgment call to make. It is, uniquely, the judgment of the Senator from Wisconsin and I respect that, whatever the reason.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MATTINGLY. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. MATTINGLY. Would it be out of order to bring up the reciprocity bill today and just vote on the first amendment thereto and then come back April 15?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the Senator from Georgia is my friend, he is my colleague, he adjoins me to the South. We have a common unfortified boundary between Tennessee and Georgia, but I earnestly ask him not to disturb one comma, not one letter in this agreement. I do not believe he knows how much trouble we have gone through over a period of days to see this done. I hope the Senator will not object to this agreement. I must say to him, in all candor, that it is not possible in my opinion to change this agreement at all.

Mr. MATTINGLY. I can tell by the pained expression.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator from Georgia yield

Mr. MATTINGLY. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. It might not be out of order, but the Senator from Kansas would not be going to Savannah with the Senator from Georgia for some Hibernian event this evening. [Laughter.]

Mr. MATTINGLY. We might be able to get somebody else. [Laughter.]

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I hope the Chair——

Mr. DOLE. It is not too late for that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAKER. I hope the Chair will put the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the agreement?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.
Mr. BAKER, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now temporarily lay aside the jobs bill and resume consideration of the social security bill but that at 3:10 p.m. today the Senate then once again lay aside the social security bill and resume consideration of the jobs bill and that without intervening action by the Senate or debate the vote occur on final passage as previously ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the bill.
The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

THE PRESIDENT. The pending business is the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas to the social security measure. Mr. HELMS, Mr. President, is a further amendment in order?

THE PRESIDENT. The amendment of the Senator from New Jersey is a first-degree amendment. A second-degree amendment would be in order.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey be temporarily laid aside.

THE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME EARLY DISTRIBUTIONS FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT

SEC. 103. (a) Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 310 as section 311 and by inserting after section 312 the following new section:

SEC. 310. INCOME FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.

"(a) In General.—Gross income does not include income which—

(1) accrues on amounts contributed to an individual retirement security account; and

(2) A remains in such account until the taxpayer attains age 62, or

(3) is withdrawn by the taxpayer in accordance with—

(A) a provision of an individual retirement security account; or

(B) a provision of an individual retirement security account, if the account is held in a credit union, under which the account may be granted, in the manner described in both clause (i) and clause (ii), a loan to the taxpayer pursuant to section 3101(e), 3101(f), or 1401(d).";

(b) Account Exempt From Tax.—Any individual retirement security account is exempt from taxation under this subsection.

(c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is absolutely correct. The Senator from North Carolina, Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the amendment I am offering today substitutes for the pending amendment the provisions of S. 541, the Social Security Guarantee and Individual Retirement Security Act of 1983.

Mr. President, S. 541 is the bill I introduced this past month to strengthen the social security system and to guarantee once and for all the retirement and old age security for every American.

Before I discuss the provisions of the pending amendment, I want to commend my very good friend, the distinguished Senator from Kansas (Mr. Dole) for his remarkable leadership in this effort to salvage social security.

As all Senators know who followed the deliberations of the so-called Social Security Reform Commission, there were many and divergent viewpoints about which way to proceed. So what we have to do is to findsome compromise which was not really acceptable to any member of the Commission. I do not think, once the American people learn of the provisions, that they will find it acceptable either. But in any case we should all be grateful to Bob Dole's tireless search for the solution to the immediate funding problems of the system.

Also, I would pay my genuine respects to the distinguished Senator from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong) for his efforts during all of this matter and the enormous amount of work that he did—truly an incredible job under the circumstances. And I am grateful to Senator Dole and Senator Armstrong and others.

I would say, furthermore, that every member of the Finance Committee deserves our gratitude for offering the American people a better reform package than the one recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. That is not to say that the Senator from North Carolina is pleased with H.R. 1900 or that he will vote for it, but in no way do I want my personal convictions or those of so many citizens of North Carolina who have contacted me to detract from the diligence of the Senator from Kansas. I reiterate he has done a remarkable job.

Second, I am pleased that the Finance Committee dealt favorably with a number of the sections of the reform bill that I introduced. Of course I refer to S. 541. In fact, upon examination, I find that the Finance Committee bill that we are now considering includes 11 of the 20 sections of my bill. And that is a pretty good average, Mr. President.

The bill before us does cure, for example, a number of inequities that women suffer under social security as it now exists. It gradually phases out the retirement earnings test for people 85 and over and it cuts off benefit payments to aliens and their dependents and survivors who reside outside the United States and its territories. Several other sections of S. 541 are included in the bill now before us, but I will not use the Senate's time to discuss these in any great detail.

Let me simply say that the bill under consideration is certainly an improvement over its predecessor legislation.

Havi ng said that, Mr. President, despite the improvements made thus far, the social security reform bill, is, in my judgment, still lacking. I am convinced that Americans, young and old, want a fully funded system that will be able to pay benefits when they retire.

Mr. President, one of the problems with social security in the United States is that so few know anything about it. Some weeks back I met with members of the news media and it occurred to me that it might be interesting to see how much those who daily report on social security developments know about social security itself. So we prepared 20 multiple choice questions. I gave part of the test to media representatives and, I must say, they did very poorly. And I will say also that before I began looking into the social security system, I would have had done perhaps even more poorly.

For example, let me read two or three of the questions and the multiple choice answers for each and see how the Chair would do if he can follow these in his mind as we go along. The first question:

If you went to work when social security began in 1937 and earned enough to pay the maximum tax from 1937 to 1982, today you would have paid Social Security taxes of:

A. $127,650; B. $98,450; C. $16,950; D. $47,550.

The answer is C, $16,950, Mr. President.

The second question:

If you retired today and paid the maximum tax possible since 1937, your annual social security benefits for you and your spouse would be:

A. $19,000; B. $12,200; C. $14,000; D. $16,000.

The correct answer is B. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this test given to the news media be printed in the Record at this point.

The being no objection, the test was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Social Security is the Nation's largest domestic program, and affects the lives of almost every American. How much do you know about this important program? Here are 20 multiple choice questions to test your knowledge.

1. If you went to work when Social Security began in 1937, and earned enough to pay the maximum tax during 1937 to 1982, today you would have paid into the system:

2. If you retired today, and had paid the maximum tax possible since 1937, your annual Social Security benefits for you and your spouse would be:

A. $19,000; B. $12,200; C. $16,000; D. $8,000.

8. To be fully eligible for Social Security retirement benefits, what is the minimum number of years you have to have worked in a Social Security covered job, and therefore have paid Social Security taxes?

A. 7% b; B. 21%; C. 30; D. 50.

9. President Roosevelt, when he proposed the Social Security Act in 1933, said its basic goal was:

A. To fully meet all of the economic needs of the elderly, the nation's most cherished national resource.

A. 35 percent; B. 14 percent; C. 52 percent; D. 17 percent.

15. U.S. citizens are currently not a requirement to receive Social Security benefits. Millions of dollars are paid annually in benefits to non-U.S. citizens living outside the United States?

A. $35 million; B. $700 million; C. $235 million; D. $945 million.

16. Since the death of the President, Social Security benefits out of current reserve. The funds have enough reserves to pay benefits at present levels for how long?

19. Since 1935, the maximum Social Security taxes have increased what percent? A. 200 percent; B. 60 percent; C. 6,900 percent; D. 4,000 percent.

20. What percentage of Social Security current beneficiaries are over age 65, the full retirement age? A. 44 percent; B. 66 percent; C. 78 percent; D. 81 percent.

Mr. President, my bill, S. 541, the Social Security Guarantee and Individual Retirement Security Act of 1983, would guarantee to every American the social security benefits to which he or she is now entitled without raising taxes. As a matter of fact, it would repeal all future scheduled payroll tax increases. It has both a long-term and a short-term goal for addressing the funding problems facing social security.

In the long run, Mr. President, it would phase in a new kind of private savings account, called an individual retirement security account (IRSA), in which each working American could invest for his or her own retirement. These federally insured accounts would guarantee for all time absolute security for every American. They would also help the Nation’s economy by providing a capital pool for investment to create jobs and put people back to work, lower interest rates, boost GNP, and help this Nation toward a much-needed economic recovery.

In the short run, it would keep our present social security system solvent while the long-term plan has a chance to take effect.

The Present Problem

We will be deceiving ourselves if we do not face up to the seriousness of the social security crisis. In my view, it is both a national tragedy and a national disgrace. What is more, too few Americans understand the nature and extent of these problems. Certain politicians and members of the media have made a political football out of social security.

Let us examine for a moment how so many Americans have been misled, even deceived, by political and bureaucratic words and phrases that have created false impressions in their minds. To put it bluntly, the people have been hoaxed by expressions that have crept into the American vocabulary.

First, how many times have we heard references to the “Social Security Trust Fund”? There is no trust fund. It does not exist. It has never existed. Just ask someone to point out the vault where the money is kept. From the first days of social security, the American people have been led to believe that every worker has an accumulated social security account in Washington with his or her name and his or her social security number on it. That is what employer and employee payroll taxes were supposed to be paying for. But such accumulated savings accounts do not exist; they have never existed.

Second, how many times have American workers been told that they “contribute” a specified sum of money to social security, and their employer “contributes” a like amount? But that is not correct either. All of the money that workers contribute and what employers contribute—all of it is a part of the total payroll expenses that an employer has allotted for a particular job, including salary and other costs involved in having hired someone in the first place. So every penny is really the worker’s money, the money an employer has to pay in a dozen different ways to employ someone.

Mr. President, that contribution is not a contribution. It is a tax, and nothing but a tax. Social security, as it now exists, is not really a retirement insurance and savings program. It is a program of taxation that is in fact bankrupt; and the retirement benefits of every American are, and have been, at the mercy of politicians who decide how much money from the Federal Treasury retired Americans will receive.

The Commission Plan

Along with other Americans, I waited—perhaps too patiently—for the 15-member, blue-ribbon, bipartisan Social Security Reform Commission to come up with proposals that, we had all hoped, would realistically and honestly address the problems facing the social security system. But after more than a year’s work, the Commission submitted a report to the President that reflect a total absence of creativity and imagination—and, worse still, a total lack of understanding of where they would lead the American economy. The Commission asks Congress to raise taxes and reduce social security benefits. Taxes on working people and their employers would be increased. Taxes on self-employed persons such as farmers, doctors, and lawyers would be increased. For the first time ever, the benefits of social security recipients would be reduced. New clients and organization employees would be brought into the system, and employees of State and local governments would be prohibited from withdrawing from the system.

But these painful changes and others recommended by the Commission may still not, by the Commission’s own admission, be enough to cover either the short-term funding needs or the long-term social security deficit.

According to the Commission’s report, the short-term deficit—that is, the deficit that would accumulate between now and 1989—would come to between $150 and $200 billion. Their short-term remedy would take care of $105 billion of that projected shortfall. The long-term deficit—that is, for the next 75 years—depends on your source of information. Or perhaps I should say it gets worse each time it is calculated.

The Commission report estimates a long-term deficit of 1.52 percent of payroll taxes—estimated to be roughly $1.6 trillion. The Commission’s proposal would reduce this deficit by only two-thirds. The members came to no agreement on whether to recover the remaining one-third by gradually raising the retirement age or by increasing the payroll tax on employers and employees.

Shortly after the report was published, social security actuaries revised their estimate of the deficit. They now project it will amount to 2.1 percent of payroll, which is equal to several hundred billion dollars more than previously estimated. The Commission plan, then, falls woefully short of resolving the long-term deficit, even if the retirement age were to be raised or payroll taxes increased.

Clearly, then, Mr. President, however well-intended, the report of the Social Security Reform Commission is, it not only fails to address all the problems facing our social security system, but it does not adequately solve even those it does address.

Distrust of Social Security

Is it any wonder, then, that the American people have lost faith in social security? Some weeks back, I saw the results of two polls that had been taken among younger Americans now in the work force. A 1982 Washington Post-ABC News poll stated 76 percent of those under 45—and 70 percent of those under 35—that believe that social security will not be in existence when they retire. A 1981 New York Times-CBS News poll found that 75 percent between ages 25 and 34 doubt they would receive any of the social security benefits they have been promised. The same poll found that 73 percent of all Americans have lost confidence in social security.

The same doubts and fears have been expressed to me in letters and telephone calls from countless Americans—young, middle aged, and elderly, including some who are already retired. These people are concerned, and rightly so, about their futures, and about the futures of their children and grandchildren.

We Will Not

In a moment I will describe in greater detail what my proposal would do, but first let me emphasize what it will not do.

It will not—It repeat not—reduce any promised benefits to anyone—not to retired Americans, not to those about to retire, and not to anyone else who has a right to any retirement benefits.

It will not—and again I repeat not—raise social security taxes in the future. In fact, it would repeal the social security tax increases already scheduled to take effect in 1985 and 1986.

It will not raise taxes on self-employed individuals.

It will not bring any employees of nonprofit, tax-exempt organizations into the social security system.

It will not require employees of State and local governments to participate in social security.

It will not tax benefits of social security recipients.

It will not make our senior citizens wait several months for the annual cost-of-living adjustment they depend on so much.

It will not raise the retirement age.

The IRA account

My plan would authorize every American worker to establish an "Individual Retirement Security Account," in whatever authorized institution he or she chooses, be it a local bank, credit union, savings and loan association, or whatever. These fiduciaries would be qualified under standards similar to the Treasury Regulations section 1.401–12(n).

This new kind of account would be similar to the IRA accounts most people know about already, but with a big difference. The difference would be that a tax credit, instead of a tax deduction, would be given for deposits in these individual retirement security accounts. A tax credit means a dollar-for-dollar tax writeoff, the kind that means something to the small- and medium-income taxpayer.

Individuals could contribute to these IRSA's any amounts they choose. For every dollar contributed to an IRSA, the individual would be entitled to claim a 20-cents-on-the-dollar credit against the income tax liability, up to a maximum credit of 20 percent of the amount paid that year by the individual to the social security trust fund. To the extent the individual elects to take advantage of the income tax credit, his future pension claims against the common OASI trust fund would be reduced according to an actuarial formula. Maximum utilization of the income tax credit each year for 20 years would reduce the individual's OASI claims to zero. Lesser utilization would reduce the trust fund's liabilities proportionately.

Guaranteed benefits

My proposal would guarantee all current pension obligations with the full faith and credit of the United States. Many Americans are surprised when they learn that social security benefits are not guaranteed under current law. In fact, in 1960, the U.S. Supreme Court rules in Flemming v. Nestor (363 U.S. 603) that the Federal Government cannot guarantee social security benefits at any time. That case is still the law today. If Congress wants to reduce social security benefits, it is free to do so. I want to change that.

Under my plan, every participant, upon retirement, would receive a certificate made out in his or her name. It would be an obligation backed by the full faith and credit of the United States. This bond would guarantee continued social security benefits. Never again will a retired American feel that his or her social security benefits would be cut by an act of Congress, the courts, or any other agency of Government. No one could ever be denied the credits he or she has earned or will earn in the future under the Government system.

Everyone's retirement credits must be guaranteed.

Mobilize the private sector via IRSA's

But in the long run, we also need to offer workers something more—a supplement, an alternative to the Government-managed system.

No system of taxes can improve real benefits to Americans because taxes are not productive. They destroy the incentive to create jobs and the incentive to save. What we need is a system of savings and investment. A lot of people originally thought that was what the social security system was supposed to be. But in fact, we have a system where the taxes collected this month are paid out in benefits next month, and this system is bankrupt. I want to expand the system to create individual worker's investments in the private sector. I want to encourage savings and investment, create jobs, help lower interest rates, and thereby restore the strength and vitality of America.

Interest, dividends, and capital gains accumulated in the IRSA account would be tax exempt, and annuities and withdrawals from it upon retirement anytime after age 62 would be tax free. Funds held in an IRSA account could be used tax free by a worker before age 62 to acquire life insurance, health insurance, or disability insurance. The individual could participate with his fiduciary in managing the IRSA account as a fully funded individual retirement program.

For the first 10 years after enactment, an individual could set up an individual retirement security account and receive tax credits. Then, starting in 1994, there would begin a phased transfer in which employers and employees would be required to pay part of their social security taxes to the respective worker's individual retirement security account instead of to the Federal Government. As more of the individual's and employer's taxes go to the worker's IRSA, less would be paid to the common OASI trust fund to pay benefits for a declining number of social security beneficiaries.

By the year 2004 the phased transfer would be complete, and all payroll tax payments would be made to employees' IRSA's. Interest credits would be available between 1994 and 2004 for amounts invested in an IRSA above the amount deposited by employers and employees via the FICA deduction. The credit would phase to zero as the OASI component of the FICA deduction phased to zero by the year 2004.

OASI liabilities would shrink as participation in IRSA's increased. By the year 2045, according to my projections, residual OASI liabilities would be reduced to zero.

OASI liabilities would shrink as participation in IRSA's increased. By the year 2045, according to my projections, residual OASI liabilities would be reduced to zero.

My proposal also addresses the short-term financing crises facing the social security system. Undeniably, a short-term infusion of funds is needed to keep the system afloat, at least... until my long-range plan has a chance to take effect. The Commission estimates a deficit of $150 billion to $200 billion between now and 1989. They propose to raise $168 billion through a combination of tax increases and benefit cuts. Using the Commission’s own numbers and assumptions, I have come up with a package of proposals and reforms that will yield $167 billion in additional revenues between now and 1989. Quite frankly, my proposals should actually yield more than this because of the favorable effect on employment of my proposed tax cut. With lower wages and greater savings, the economy will grow faster than the Commission assumes, thus boosting the tax base and lowering benefit outflows.

INCREASE ALL FEDERAL WORKERS

The first thing I propose is to include all Federal workers under social security—now that it is in effect. As the Commission has proposed—but all of them, beginning with all Members of Congress and their staffs. The social security problem is a national problem, and all of us ought to participate in solving it. My proposal would not affect the civil service retirement system in any way. Federal employees could continue to participate in civil service retirement much the same way employees in the private sector participate in their employer-sponsored retirement plans.

COLA DELAY
Second, I propose to delay for 3 months—from July to October—the social security cost-of-living adjustment. I do not agree that there should be a 6-month delay, as was proposed by the Commission. That would be a burden on our senior citizens. A 3-month delay would be much fairer, and it would help a great deal to solve the short-term deficit.

PROPRATION OF COLA

Third, cost-of-living increases should be prorated to reflect the month of retirement. The present system is unfair to the senior citizen who retires in, say, January—because the person who retires the following December now receives the same cost-of-living adjustment as the senior citizen who retired early in the year.

ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS
Fourth, I propose that the expenses of administering the social security system be counted against general revenues rather than the social security accounts. Payroll tax revenues should only be used to pay benefits, and should not go to pay administrative expenses.

UNCASHED CHECKS

Fifth, I propose we adopt the Commission’s recommendations regarding crediting the social security system for all uncashed social security checks. Until I began my detailed study of the social security system, I was not aware that millions of dollars in social security checks are never cashed each year. I was astonished to learn that the money represented by these uncashed checks does not have to go back to the social security system—but instead may be used for other Government spending. My proposal would require that the money be credited to the social security system.

MILITARY BENEFITS

Sixth, I propose the social security fund also be credited for all military benefits the social security system pays out with no Government contribution.

REVENUE CALCULATIONS

The following table reflects the short-term revenue increase under my proposal:

The revenue figure shown here, $172.4 billion, does not reflect the projected revenue loss as a result of repealing the 1985 payroll tax increase. Under present law, the combined employer-employee payroll tax rate, which is now 13.3 percent, is scheduled to increase to 14.3 percent by 1986 and 15.3 percent by 1990. The maximum payroll tax would become $8,263.40 in 1986 and $8,590.40 in 1990.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that the 1977 payroll tax increases cost $500,000 for each family making 50 percent of their jobs. Higher payroll taxes would only exacerbate the unemployment crisis and contribute to further economic stagnation.

My proposed payroll tax cut is projected to reduce the social security system’s revenue by only $5.4 billion by 1990. With this projection, my package of short-term proposals would result in a net increase in social security revenues of $167 billion, almost the same amount as the Commission proposes to bring in by raising taxes and cutting benefits.

I emphasize these projections are based on the same assumptions used by the Commission and their figures. Quite frankly, I believe my proposed tax cut will have a more favorable result than projected, and that between now and 1989 the social security system will be much better off under my short-term plan than under the Commission’s proposal.

EQUITY REFORMS

Mr. President, along with proposals for solving the long-term and short-term funding problems facing the social security system, my bill also contains proposals for reforming social security in certain areas. I include these reform proposals because of the pressing need for Congress to address issues relating to women, the disabled, nonresident aliens, and American Indians with productive abilities who wish to continue working past age 65.

EQUITy FOR WOMEN

Mr. President, clearly our present social security system treats women unfairly. The problems have become more acute as more women have entered the workforce. When the social security system was created, only 20 percent of women were in the workforce. Today that figure is roughly 50 percent.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform addressed a number of issues relating to women. They made several proposals that have merit that I have included in my bill. These proposals are as follows:

First, present law permits the continuation of benefits for surviving spouses who remarry after age 60. This benefit would be extended to disabled surviving spouses aged 50 to 59, disabled divorced surviving spouses aged 50 to 59, and divorced surviving spouses aged 60 or over.

Second, spousal benefits for divorced spouses would be payable at age 62 or subject to the requirement that the divorce has lasted a significant period, if the former spouse is entitled for retirement benefits, whether or not they have been claimed, or if they have been suspended because of substantial employment.

Third, deferred surviving-spouse benefits would continue to be indexed as under present law, except that the indexing would be based on the increases in wages after the death of the worker instead of by the increases in the CPI, as under present law.

Fourth, the benefits rate for disabled widows and widowers aged 50 to 59 at disability would remain at 75 percent, and that for nondisabled widower and widowers first claiming benefits at age 60—that is, 71% percent of the primary insurance amount—instead of the lower rates under present law—gradually rising from 50 percent at age 50 to 71% percent for disability at age 60. Such change would not only be applicable to new cases, but would also be applicable to beneficiaries of this category who are on the rolls on the effective date of the provision.

Unfortunately, the Commission’s proposals do not go far enough in insuring equal treatment for women. My bill contains additional protections.

Under present law, the method of calculating social security benefits creates a disincentive for women to remain at home with children. Such years are calculated as zero earning years in the determination of the primary social security benefits. Often a parent, usually the mother, needs to spend time at home during a child’s early years of development. The Government should not discourage motherns from spending a long time at home with their children during the children's formative years.

My bill would allow a person to exclude from the calculation of his or her social security benefits each year spending six months at home with their children, as long as the child is younger than 6 years old. Up to 6 years could be excluded, and this exclusion could be taken in addition to every individual's already guaranteed 5 low year exemption. During the year excluded, the parent could earn up to one-half the average wage of all social security covered workers each year.

I also propose extending additional equity to divorced spouses. Both memers of a household should be considered to have de equal contributions to their family and thus retain equal pro-property rights for the income in their family structure. This is not the case under social security today. My legislation would correct this situation by créditing each divorced spouse half the earned family income during the marriage for the purpose of determining social security retirement and disability benefits.

Mr. President, another part of my bill addresses serious problems involving the arbitrary cutoff of benefits to disabled citizens. Often disability payments, which provide life-sustaining funds for so many individuals, are terminated by an overzealous Social Security Administration before the beneficiary is actually interviewed. Administrative law judges have reversed roughly 70 percent of disability cutoff cases reviewed. This indicates the seriousness of the problem.

Mr. President, let me first acknowledge that there has been much abuse of social security disability. But the move-movement to correct this situation must have guidelines and it must be fair. Therefore, I propose that Congress insure due process to every individual receiving disability benefits before any benefits can be cut off. My bill provides this. Each disability beneficiary would be entitled to a hearing before an administrative law judge before benefits could be cut. The Social Security Administration could not bring a case before a judge for determination unless they could show a change of circumstances or conditions affecting the individual, fraud, or mistake in the initial determination of disability.

My bill would leave the disability trust account untouched. It will remain in good shape, capable of paying benefits well into the future, if the remaining social security accounts would store these funds for the future. A 401(k) plan can help you save for your future. Learn more today.

have great admiration for his truly remarkable job in bringing forth the legislation before us. As he indicated, he very graciously welcomed me to appear before his committee. Eleven out of 20 of our proposals, I believe, are incorporated in this legislation.

I was telling a group earlier this afternoon, a group of North Carolinians, that I believe in incremental success; you go one step at a time, do the best you can. I believe the Senator from Kansas believes in the same philosophy. He certainly has demonstrated that in the way he has handled various pieces of legislation.

I will not ask for a vote on this amendment, but I did want to present it for the consideration of the Senate and for the people of this country for their future assessment. Maybe as we move down the road step by step, we can bring about, in the end, a system that will be meaningful and certainly beneficial to the people.

I again thank the Senator for his comments.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the distinguished Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will be temporarily set aside and the Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 81

Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut (Mr. Dodd) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 81.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place add the following:

( ) Sections 201(e), 1817(d), and 1841(d) of the Social Security Act are repealed.

( ) The next to last sentence of section 201(c) of such Act is amended by striking out "Such report shall also include" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Such report shall include an actuarial opinion by the Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration certifying that the techniques and methodologies used are generally accepted within the actuarial profession, a statement of key economic and demographic assumptions underlying projected trust fund revenues and outlays, and shall also include".

( ) Section 1817(b) of such Act is amended by inserting immediately before the last sentence the following new sentence: "Such report shall also include an actuarial opinion by the Chief Actuarial Officer of the Health Care Financing Administration certifying that the techniques and methodologies used are generally accepted within the actuarial profession, and a statement of key economic and demographic assumptions underlying projected trust fund revenues and outlays."

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, very briefly, this amendment would codify an already existing practice by requiring the inclusion of an actuarial opinion in the OASDI and HI trustees' annual reports. This amendment would also require the inclusion in those reports of the economic and demographic assumptions underlying the conclusions in those reports.

The art of economic and actuarial forecasting is by no means perfect and I do not pretend that passage of this legislation would enable us to predict the future with any more certainty than we can now. However, by strengthening the process under which such forecasting and analysis is generated, we can create a sounder basis for future social security planning and administration.

For these reasons, I urge that this amendment be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Connecticut will yield, time has expired.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator may speak for an additional 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. In 1977, for example, Congress relied on economic and actuarial forecasts which led to conclusions on social security which were far more optimistic than the reality that followed. Back then, we were told that the 1977 social security amendments would leave the system sound well into the 21st century.

This amendment will not guarantee that that will not happen again. But it will write into law a step which is essential to minimizing the likelihood of such an occurrence.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I will say that the distinguished Senator from Louisiana finds this amendment acceptable to him and, as ranking minority member on the floor, I believe it is a good amendment that we would be delighted to accept.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Senator.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we have reviewed this amendment carefully and we have had an opportunity to discuss the amendment, with the Senator and his staff. We have made some slight modification which was satisfactory. We have no objection to the amendment in its present form.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The Senate continued with the consideration of H.R. 1900.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 1900.

The pending question is the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of Senators, we are back on the social security bill. It is
Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. President, no one in this Chamber has a higher regard for the Senator from Louisiana than I do. I welcome his remarks, and I am grateful for them. I offer whatever services I am capable of and have remaining, to try to get this matter to third reading.

Of course, the Senator is correct. It may be possible to get to third reading on Friday, and final passage on Monday, and get to conference, we will have only two things remaining before we go out. Those are the conference report on the jobs bill and the conference report on social security. We have all next week to do that.

What it really boils down to is that if we can get to the conference on Monday, we might be out of here on Wednesday, and there should be a result much to be wished for, in my judgment.

Mr. President, does the minority leader seek the floor?

Mr. BYRD. I seek to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. BAKER. I yield to the minority leader.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, there are some reports circulating that I want the rollick vote on final passage put over until Monday. We had some discussion about which possibly led to that conclusion.

My idea was that if we could finish the bill tomorrow and get it to third reading, there would be some absentees, undoubtedly, on both sides of the aisle, and all Senators should be put on notice as to when exactly the final vote will occur, so that they could plan to be here.

That was my only reason for suggesting that the final vote be on Monday. I am not welded to that idea. If all Senators are ready to have the final vote tomorrow, if we reach the final vote in the normal course of things, it would be satisfactory to me to have the final vote tomorrow.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, it would suit me to have final passage tomorrow.

I suppose the best way to go, then, is just to play it by ear.

I withdraw any suggestion that we would want to come Monday to have final passage, and I suggest, instead, that we do the best we can tomorrow, Friday, that we get to final passage if we can, or that we get to third reading if we can, or get as far as we can.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. I yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, the thought occurs to the Senator from Louisiana that we might be able to achieve the majority leader's objective if between the majority leader and the minority leader and others here we can arrange some live pairs for some absent Senators. I personally am willing to pair with anyone who is absent, provided those on the other side of an issue are doing likewise.

It may be in order to get this job done that we could accommodate one another by pairing some of our absentees who incidentally have been coming to me and urging that we postpone the matter so they can be here.

Every Senator has a different schedule, and I have avoided trying to promise Senators that I was going to hold this matter up for them because when you try to accommodate one Senator who cannot be here Friday afternoon, the next Senator cannot be here Monday, and another Senator cannot be here Tuesday, and so it goes. So, I have not been promising anyone.

If it can be done, I would like to accommodate Senators who very much want to vote and who may be necessarily absent on that occasion.

Maybe the majority leader can help me work it out so that I may try to find some pairs over here and give one myself, and maybe he could find someone on the other side to help pair.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I also will give a pair. I say to my friend from Louisiana.

I think his suggestion is an excellent one, and I shall work with him on the minority leader to see if that will expedite the passage of the measure.

Mr. President, I yield now to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, will the majority leader be good enough to clarify what was a little confusing to the Senator from Ohio? I understood the other day that he had indicated that if we were able to bring the social security matter and the jobs bill to a conclusion by the end of this week the majority leader would look very favorably upon sending all of us out to meet with our constituents and bringing us back only for the purpose of acting on the conference report when it was ready to be acted upon.

Mr. BAKER. I think we are saying the same thing.

Mr. President, if we finish these bills we will be able to go to the East, and I hope we are going to, the only thing remaining are the conference reports. It may be that Senators do not need to be here while those conference reports are in progress except the conferees. That may be something that could be examined when we get closer to the event.

I guess what I should say to the Senator is somewhat what I have already said to the minority leader and that is that other than the conference reports and other much legislation to deal with between now and the time we go out for the Easter recess.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I appreciate the comments of the majority leader.
Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, will the Senate yield?

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, will the majority leader yield for a question?

Mr. BAKER. May I yield first to the Senator from South Dakota and then to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I suggest that we work late tonight and get final passage tomorrow and come back maybe Wednesday or Thursday for 1 day and do the conference reports and then those of us who go home could stay at home until Wednesday and make just one trip back to the city.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator. It is not a bad idea. I sort of like it. But I think it also points out one other fact and that was the observation made by the Senator from Louisiana, that everyone has his own schedule. I admire that, and I respect that, and I assure the Senator from South Dakota that I will explore that possibility, trying to arrive at the most convenient arrangement for the Senate in that respect.

I must say it is sort of like my wife finding things on the church calendar. We have not earned this money yet. We have not passed this bill yet. We have not found anyone to do business with. What we might do is lay down an amendment that we could take up. We could have something pending and have everyone on notice for a vote.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senate were to schedule a vote after 9 I guarantee there will be Senators here.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the reason is no one will show up at 9. We were here this morning at 9:30 and could not find any business.

What we might do is lay down an amendment that we could take up. We could have something pending and have everyone on notice for a vote.

Mr. MITCHELL. If the Senate were to schedule a vote after 9 I guarantee there will be Senators here.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I would be happy to start at 9. I think that is about the time I will get back from Savannah.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator for his suggestion. Let me explore that as well if I may.

Mr. President, there is time for one more vote. I hope we can get on with it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Gorron). The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest that we do not have that many amendments and I understand now that the Senator from Idaho has an amendment which we will have a rollcall vote on and hopefully dispose of it.

Is that correct?

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, the Senator is correct.

However, the amendment I shall propose, and I tell the chairman it is not on withholding on savings, so he can sigh relief there, is not the amendment that the distinguished chairman is speaking of. It is the amendment that affects the COLA stabilizer, and it is an amendment that I think does have considerable merit. I wish to offer that amendment at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must announce that an amendment of the Senate from New Jersey is pending.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. MITCHELL. S 3268

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I yield.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, recognize the demands on everyone, everyone wishes to leave sometime late tomorrow. Could we not begin at 9 In everyone wishes to leave sometime late today and do the conference reports and then those of us who go home could stay at home until Wednesday and make just one trip back to the city.

It is this difference in indexing, along with low productivity growth and recession, that explains the recent phenomenon of benefit growth outpacing wage growth noted by social security actuaries.

The full CPI COLA is also the primary reason why growth in other entitlements benefited 77 percent of the budget uncontrollability from 1978 through 1982.

Compensating recipients of Federal entitlements more generously for inflation than the average American is a strikingly unfair practice in the present indexing practices of the Federal Government. The full CPI entitlement COLA is not only responsible for recent budget uncontrollability and destabilization of the OASDI trust fund. More basically, it is unfair to the taxpayers whose incomes are not fully insulated against increases in the CPI.

I want to make clear that the amendment I am now offering does not compensate the wage earners for the taxes they are paying and have paid for overcompensating the retirees in the last few years. My amendment simply guards against overcompensating the retirees in the future. In the future, should the OASDI trust fund balance not be at a sufficiently solvent level, the trustees will get compensated for previously reduced benefits as long as the trust fund reserves remain at 32 percent.

The general effect of my amendment will be to reduce the COLA's in the near term to about the increases that wage earners will be having with their paychecks increased while the trust fund balance is building up. Then, over the long term, senior citizens will benefit by indexing COLA as long as the trust fund reserves remain at 32 percent—even though I personally believe we should review this as a matter of equity in the future.

Now, many of you might think that this amendment is unfair to the senior citizens—although I fail to see why. Nevertheless, I do want to address this popular misconception, which I believe is based on the common perception that the economic status of the elderly is based on conditions that prevailed in 1958, not those in 1982.

They do have time to organize into effective political blocks and to finance organizations which protect and enhance what has become for many a major source of retirement income—Federal transfer payments. One-third of the Federal budget is now devoted to benefit payments for the elderly.

In 1958, 35 percent of America's elderly were below the poverty threshold. The image of elderly widows subsisting on canned dog food was a national disgrace. Amendments to the social security system which increased benefits across the board had been sporadic. No benefit increases were forthcoming in the first 10 years of the system. In 1950, benefits were increased $18 and $27 per year. Amendments in 1953 barely compensated for CPI inflation between 1940 and 1950. Further benefit hikes of 12½, 13, and 7 percent in 1952, 1954, and 1959, respectively did outpace inflation during the 1950's. Yet the incidence of poverty among the elderly population was still 13 percent greater than among the general population at the start of the 1960's, and the next general benefit increase was not enacted until 1965. Even that amendment did not match the rise in inflation during the intervening period.

During the next decade, the economic status of the elderly changed dramatically. In 1965, Medicare was established, and between 1965 and 1974, five double-digit increases in social security benefits were legislated by Congress. These five benefit increases in total were 22 percent greater than during that period. Along with the development of several in-kind benefit programs for the elderly legislated in the 1970's, automatic indexing to the CPI established annual benefit increases for OASDI in 1972, Medicare in 1973, and SSI in 1975. In the past 5 years, those COLA's have further increased social security benefits by almost 50 percent.

The trend of entitlement growth for the elderly and increases in payroll taxes to finance part of this benefit liberalization have led to a progressive redistribution of income from young to old on a per capita basis. One effect of this redistribution policy has been a reversal in the incidence of poverty between the young and old.

Clearly, there are a variety of forces at work in the changing incidence of poverty. The basic change is not the reversal of incidence between generations, but the absolute decline in poverty among all age groups since 1959. Still, a growing lack of intergenerational equity in programs to relieve poverty appears to characterize the dynamics of current entitlement laws.

An element of fairness in a permanent program like social security should be some degree of equity in benefits across generations. Overtaxing the young to pay the father violates equity in the social compact between generations that is really at the heart and soul of social security.

It appears to me that it is foolish for Congress to allow a system to continue where the wage earner is not keeping up with the recipient of benefits because the formula is out of balance. That system allows for a division to grow among the generations in America. There is absolutely no reason for Congress to stand idly by and not do something about the fact that the
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The point is well taken. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. DOLE. The National Commission consensus package included a provision which is in the committee bill that would allow indexing by the lower of the increase in wages or prices if trust fund reserves fall below 20 percent. Catch-up payments would be provided when reserves rise above 32 percent. The provision is effective in 1988.

What the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Idaho would do is to establish the effective date of the provision. In so doing, the amendment would alter an essential feature of the consensus package.

On that basis—it is not that the Senator from Kansas does not believe the amendment does not have merit—It would seem to me to be contrary to the provisions in the Commission report. For that reason, I would have to oppose the amendment.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Will the Senator from Kansas yield?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would only raise one point in support of the amendment. I am going to vote for it. I think what is good in 1988 ought to be even better now.

But will the Senator from Kansas admit that one of the really uncertain things about the package—and perhaps the only uncertain thing about the package—is whether or not we will get by then 2 or 3 years?

Mr. DOLE. That is correct.

Mr. GRASSLEY. This seems to me as though it would add a little more soundness to the system. If we have a revitalization in the economy, as we hope we will, then there is no doubt about going by the next 2 or 3 years. But there is still some doubt whether or not we will have the improvement in the economy that we all hope for.

To the extent which there is that doubt, then the amendment by the Senator from Idaho makes more certain that social security will remain solvent over the next 2 or 3 years. If we can get by those years which are probably the most questionable, we can answer with certainty that solvency is no longer doubtful for the short term.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me say that we have, in addition to this proposal, the so-called stabilizer, we did adopt in the committee the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, Senator Lucey. That provision provides for a COLA "failsafe" mechanism. In addition, we have the "normalization" amendment.

Given each of these provisions, we believe that the advice of actuarial experts—that we are going to survive those years. As I understand it, it is going to be close, although some would say we are going to have a big surplus.

Mr. President, I would like to come to a vote on this.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, if the chairman would yield, I would say one more thing. I thank the Senator from Iowa for bringing that point up. The effect of this amendment would be that we would probably be on the wage index immediately which is nothing more than you are asking of wage earners. I will bet the farm on the fact that if we would adopt an amendment like this we will restore the long-term capital markets in this country and help get people back to work in our respective States. It will not in any way affect those people on SSI benefits. Indeed, today's 5-year-old will get a 200 percent better deal than a 37-year-old. So the neediest and the poorest of the senior citizen recipients are protected, as I and everyone in this Chamber think they should be.

What it would do is give the confidence to the country that the Congress really is doing the right thing. It will not take any present benefits away from any recipient. They would still get an increase, but it would not be quite as much of an increase as they would have otherwise received.

I do not want to have any Member misunderstand the amendment would reduce the pressure for another tax increase on the social security system and will reduce the necessity of continually increasing the payroll taxes at the present time. I think it is an amendment that the Senate will well accept. If the conference somehow came back and said, "OK, we will go to 1986," that would be some help instead of 1988. I would urge the committee to take this amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me say in conclusion that I think I started off in our Commission deliberations about where the Senator from Idaho is now. I argued for 1985 rather than 1988. But we could not reach any consensus. Finally, along with about 15 or 20 others, we had to make a judgment; 1988 may not be early enough—for those of us who believe it should be earlier—but that is the earliest date we could have. I do not quarrel with anything the Senator said, but I would hope that the amendment would not be adopted.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Nickles) be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MATHIAS. Vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment. If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Idaho. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. Bumpa, the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Hart), and the Senator from South
Mr. HEINZ. If the leader will yield, I am advised that there are two amendments on the table that they are not controversial and that no roll call votes would be required on them. Mr. BAKER. Very well. Does the manager want to go forward with them at this time?

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, Mr. STENNIS, Mr. President, will the Senator yield? He used the term special orders. Does that mean special orders as a part of the bill?

Mr. BAKER. No, no, Mr. President. May I say that some Senators had requested that this morning to speak on an unrelated subject, and I had asked them to forebear until the end of the day to do that instead of the beginning.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator. Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes; I yield to the distinguished ranking minority member of the Finance Committee.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as cosponsors to my amendment No. 512: Messrs. DODD and LEVIN.

Mr. LONG. The chairman of the Finance Committee, the distinguished manager of the Finance Committee, and I appreciate being able to bring it up at this time and getting it taken care of. It is designed to enhance the work incentives incorporated into S. 1 by coordinating an increase in the delayed retirement credit with the phaseout of the outside earnings limitation.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, the senior Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), has been a strong advocate of addressing the outside earnings limitation issue, and I salute him for these efforts.

S. 1 would gradually increase the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent per year over the period between 1990 and 2010. My amendment would accelerate this increase so that the 8 percent annual credit would take effect in 1995, the year in which the limit on outside earnings would be totally lifted. In addition, this amendment would permit an individual to receive the increased delayed retirement credit every month after age 65 in which receipt of benefits is deferred. At this time, the delayed retirement credit is not made available for benefits deferred after age 72. The Office of the Social Security Actuary has estimated that adoption of this amendment would result in negligible additional cost to the package.

Currently, a worker who does not receive social security benefits until after age 65 is eligible for a delayed retirement credit. The benefit amount is increased for each month after age 65 the benefits are not received. This increase occurs at a rate of 3 percent each year. Although current law rewards delayed retirement, the 3 percent credit is inadequate from an actuarial standpoint. The actuarially fair level is 8 percent, which would be attained by the year 2010 under the measure reported by the Finance Committee.
The current Social Security Act also provides for a $1 reduction in benefits for each $2 earned over certain exempt amounts by beneficiaries under the age of 70. This year, the annual exempt amount of earned income is $6,600 for individuals age 65 and older. The outside earnings limitation, which has long been criticized as a disincentive for longer work lives, would be phased out between 1990 and 1994 under S. 1. For individuals age 65 and older, the exempt amount would be increased by $3,000 per year beginning in 1990. In 1995, the earnings limitation would be completely eliminated.

The purpose of my amendment is to have these two reforms work in tandem. Consider the situation of an individual reaching age 65 in 1998. He or she will have the option of beginning to receive full social security benefits at the age of 65, taking earnings into consideration. The decision to delay retirement would be a form of savings for the older worker, with the 8 percent credit being a savings mechanism for the elderly, through changes in the retirement incentive structure to delay retirement.

Believing that we should actively encourage individuals to work longer, I am attempting today to bring better coordination to the efforts already underway to encourage individuals to work longer. This amendment is supported by the American Association of Retired Persons—a group long committed to eliminating work disincentives to older persons—and I urge its adoption by the Senate.

I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for yielding to me.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I have examined the Kassebaum amendment, and I compliment the Senator from Kansas on offering it. It is indeed an improvement on what is in the Senate bill. It will accelerate the delayed retirement credit by a considerable amount.

It is also my understanding, after checking with the actuaries, that it is revenue neutral. Anything we can do to give people a worthwhile incentive to continue their active working career is an incentive.

On this side, we are happy to accept the amendment. Perhaps the minority manager would concur in so doing. I know of no objection to this amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I wish to reinforce the statements of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

This is an improvement to the proposal. It is attractive, and it approaches that happy condition called pareto optimality, where everyone gains and no one loses. Only the Senator from Kansas can think of things like that. It continues to amaze and delight us and adds to the proceedings in this body.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the amendment is acceptable to this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 83) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Bradley amendment be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. HEINZ. For what purpose shall it be temporarily laid aside?

Mr. SYMMS. For the purpose of laying it on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (UP No. 14) was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT N° 84

Subsequently numbered amendment No. 558.

(Purpose: To provide that no social security cost-of-living adjustments be made in 1983 and 1984)

Mr. SYMMS. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask that it be tabled.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 84.

AMENDMENT N° 502

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

1-YEAR FREEZE ON COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENTS

Subsection (f) of Section 215(1) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(TMA) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, no increase shall be made under paragraph (2) in any benefit amount, primary insurance amount, or amount of monthly benefits based on any primary insurance amount for any cost-of-living computation quarter occurring during calendar year 1983.

"(B) For purposes of determining the extent to which the Consumer Price Index for the base quarter occurring in 1984 exceeds such index for the most recent prior cost-of-living computation quarter, the base quarter occurring in 1983 shall be treated as the most recent prior cost-of-living computation quarter.”.

Mr. SYMMS. Madam President, the amendment I propose tonight and will discuss tomorrow for those Senators who are in their office would move the COLA for the next social security COLA for 1 year, a 1-year COLA freeze, to put the social security recipients on the same basis that we are putting retired military, veterans, and civil service pensioners, and I think it is only fair and equitable. So it would change the COLA 1 year. Instead of December 1983 it would be moved over to the same time commensurate with what is proposed by the administration with respect to those other people.

Mr. BAKER. Madam President, I understand that this is the amendment that we will take up tomorrow and that Members do not wish to debate it further tonight.

I gather from the acknowledgement of the manager and the distinguished minority manager that that is the case.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, if the majority leader will yield, that is correct.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will resume consideration of the pending business, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the
The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the distinguished Senator from Idaho is prepared to offer an amendment. I am pleased to yield the floor for that purpose.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee.

AMENDMENT NO. 525

(Purpose: To provide that no social security cost-of-living adjustments be made in 1983 and 1984)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I believe the amendment is pending; is that not correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SYMMS. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be no second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I bring up this amendment that is pending at the desk which would in effect freeze the social security COLA that is scheduled in the bill for the upcoming year. It would not tamper with the COLA's for those people who are in the neediest of positions—theSSI beneficiaries. The neediest in our society would be held harmless by this amendment.

I am not going to belabor the point this morning, Mr. President, because yesterday during the discussion of my amendment to move the effective date of COLA stabilizer I spoke at great length on the issue of the cost-of-living adjustment.

Nevertheless, I want to make a few points about this amendment. I think that the principal underlying reason for Members to support this amendment is one of fairness and equity.

One of the great founders of this country, Thomas Jefferson, spent his political career making sure that everyone understood that we did pass laws that we tried to treat everybody in our society fairly and equitably.

Like Thomas Jefferson, I believe our primary responsibility is to insure that whatever legislation we pass is fair. If we are going to request one group of individuals to take a larger reduction or have to wait longer to receive a cost-of-living increase in their salaries or retirement income, then we should ask everyone to do so.

As I mentioned, in the fiscal year 1984 budget the President has requested that the COLA increases for civilian and military wages and retirement benefits be frozen this year. Last year the civilian and military workers and retirees received a lower cost-of-living adjustment than those receiving social security benefits. And the year before that we told the civil service and military retirees that they had to wait 6 months for their COLA adjustments. Now we are in the process of requesting that everyone else except social security recipients take a 1-year delay in the COLA adjustment.

Mr. President, this is simply unfair. This amendment would simply make an attempt to equalize the reductions in the increases—it is not going to reduce anybody's check, it is just going to change when the increases come—and we have asked of these good people to take what other people in our society are taking. Besides making this legislation more equitable, the amendment would help stabilize the OASDI trust fund.

I have found that Americans are willing to make sacrifices if they know that everyone else is making the same sacrifices. I can see this process of favoring senior citizens receiving social security benefits over and above every other group that is either getting a Government paycheck or some kind of a Government pension check. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment. It is an amendment which strikes right at the issue of equity.

I would like to share with my colleagues a comment that was made to me by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming, Senator Simpson, chairman of the Veterans Affairs Committee. He told me last year that every veterans group, including the Disabled American Veterans, said they were willing to take reductions in the future COLA increases if it was fair and equitable across the board, and applied to everyone.

The Commission, the Congress, and the administration have decided to ask for those reductions. We cannot change the formula that is used to determine how much money will be given to our military retirees or to military retirees that we have given to the social security retirees.

This amendment would save the OASDI trust fund about $50 billion to $60 billion. I think if all Senators would vote for this amendment, then they could support the Armstrong amendment which will be offered later. Then we might actually have a social security package that we could pass without massively increasing the payroll taxes that will be required of us if we take this package as recommended by the Commission.

I yield back to the chairman of the committee. I am prepared to go for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DOLE. Have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will take just a minute. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with the intent or purpose of the amendment. Again, we have crafted this compromise which may not be perfect, and obviously is not perfect, but I believe this amendment would go beyond the bounds of the agreement. Therefore, I hope the amendment will not be accepted.

There is no doubt about it that the Senator from Idaho has adopted a very constructive approach and it would have the result he has indicated. But as I look at it in the totality of everything we have considered in the Commission and the committee, it is not an amendment that I could support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the present legislation, the bill before us, is not difficult to assemble in all its parts. The distinguished chairman has said that it is the weakness of the individual parts that comprises the strength of the whole. I feel strongly that this amendment, while perfectly well-intentioned and certainly moderate in many regards, goes beyond our ability to faithfully represent the concerns that this amendment brings to the forefront. Therefore, I would urge my fellow Senators not to accept it. That is said without rancor or any sense that this is beyond the bounds of reason. It is not. But I still would not accept the amendment.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished Senators from Kansas and New York for their comments. I am sorry they are not able to support the amendment.

I would like to say one other thing and then we can go to the vote. The Senator from New York alluded to the fact that it is a well-intended amendment, a moderate amendment in its approach if one examines the substance of the amendment. However, due to the strength of the support for the Commission's proposal, there is no position to the amendment.

I would make one last appeal to my colleagues.

I know that some of the members on the Commission feel bound to stay with what the Commission has proposed. Being a politician, I understand that and appreciate it. I certainly respect the Senator from New York and the Senator from Kansas for their position. But I would just say that we are trying very hard, whether we be Republicans or Democrats, to see this end of 1983 come to a close. One of the reasons that we have had such a difficult time in having an economic recovery that will be sustained and lasting are the high interest rates. If any Senators have been noticing, the short-term rates have been creeping up slightly and long-term capital is almost nonexistent.

If the Congress, in its wisdom, could make a decision to adjust the rate of increases in the benefit programs across the board and the Federal Government, actually pass it and put it into law, I think we would find a response with respect to the long-term interest rates that would serve all of our constituencies very well. Capitalism cannot survive without long-term capital markets. Long-term capital markets are not going to be revitalized until the Congress controls our pension programs. Long-term capital rates are necessary so that the young married couples can afford to buy homes, and so that the industrial companies can expand plants and equipment and modernize. A robust recovery will not occur until long-term capital repair costs are restored and capital is available to borrow over the long term and at a reasonable rate of interest.

This amendment and the amendments I offered yesterday will, in the long run, be beneficial to all Americans including the senior citizen community. Economic revival will make life easier for all Americans, for all families, and for all the people who are receiving social security benefits, who also have children and grandchildren. You all have a vested interest in trying to see this thing put together the best way possible. This Senator reduced the goals he had in his amendment by 1 year, hoping that more Senators would recognize the moderation that is in this amendment and recognize that by this amendment being added to this bill, we will send a signal to the investors and borrowers in this country to start doing business over the long-term. If we can get long-term capital markets restored, we will see a revival of the steel industry, the automobile industry, the building industry, and many other industries, which I think is what we want to have happen in this country.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. Even if we have to give up part of it in the conference it will be a step in the right direction, whatever it may amount to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on going to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Michigan (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. CRAINSTON), the Senator from California (Mr. CRAINSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HAWR) and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) is absent because of illness in the family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PRESSLER). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 13, nays 80, as follows:

usage rates available to borrow over the long term and at a reasonable rate of interest.

(1) IN GENERAL—For purposes of sections 3103, 3111, and 3121(a)(1), if two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate such individual through a common paymaster who is not a qualified paymaster, each such corporation shall be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual only the amounts actually disbursed by it to such individual and shall not be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual amounts actually disbursed to such individual by another of such corporations.

(2) UNIVERSITIES AND EXEMPT ORGANIZATIONS.—For purposes of this subsection, (A) the following entities shall be deemed to be related corporations:

(i) a state university which employs health care professionals as faculty members at a medical school which is the officially designated medical school for more than one state.

(ii) a faculty practice plan qualified as an exempt organization under section 501(c)(2) which employs faculty members of such medical school; and

(B) remuneration which—

(i) is disbursed by such faculty practice plan to an individual employee by both such entities and shall be deemed to have been actually disbursed by such university as a common paymaster and not to have been actually disbursed by such faculty practice plan.

Mr. DOE. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, this amendment is necessary to avoid having the regionalized medical school for the States of Washington, Alaska, Idaho, and Montana pay approximately $600,000 annually in unreimbursable FICA taxes. The reason for this amendment stems from the unavailability of the so-called common paymaster doctrine to the unique circumstances at the regionalized school—the University of Washington School of Medicine. Professors of clinical medicine receive two paychecks—one from the university and one from the medical school practice plan—a 501(c)(3) organization. Both organizations would have to pay FICA taxes under the provisions of S. 1. Because this school uniquely functions as the State medical school for four States, with diverse Federal research funding and appropriations from four separate States, the doctrine of related corporations using a common paymaster is not available to avoid the double taxation of the unreimbursable employer FICA contribution.

In addition, Mr. President, a similar situation exists at the University of Colorado to that which affects us, and this would also care for concerns of the Senators from Colorado.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GORTON. I yield.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Washington for offering this amendment.
Mr. President, I support the amendment being offered by my colleague from the State of Washington.

The States of Alaska, Idaho, Montana, and New Mexico have organized the first and only regional medical school in the country. This regional medical school uniquely functions as a State medical school for four States, with diverse Federal research funding and appropriations from the four parts of the State.

The technical amendment being offered by Senator Gorton is necessary in order to avoid having that regionalized medical school pay approximately one-half million dollars more in unreimbursable FICA taxes.

The reason this amendment is necessary is because the doctrine or related corporations using a common paymaster is not available to them because the professors of clinical medicine receive two paychecks—one from the university and one from the medical school—and certainly should be corrected. I strongly support the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas has looked at the amendment, and it also has been analyzed by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long). We are prepared to accept the amendment, and I think I can speak for both sides. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 86) was agreed to.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I want to associate myself with the remarks of my colleague from Washington. This is a double taxation matter, and it certainly should be corrected. I strongly support the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky has looked at the amendment, and he also has been analyzed by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Bradley) to be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment (UP No. 86) was agreed to.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORTON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to an amendment of the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Bradley) to be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment (UP No. 86) was agreed to.

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHAFEE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STROMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STROMS. Mr. President, I believe that a rural classification is an injustice which unfairly and incorrectly penalizes Newport Hospital and its patients. I join with Senator CHAFEE in urging the Senate to accept the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from New York, Mr. CHAFEE, has brought to my attention a problem faced by a hospital located in his State, a problem I believe may also be faced by other hospitals located in rural areas.

The problem which has arisen, one where a hospital has been designated as being located in an urban area then told it was in a rural area—and then back again to urban. Because of the design of the new medicare reimbursement system, which establishes separate rates for urban and rural hospitals, these hospitals may be put at an unfair disadvantage. I believe the amendment offered by Senator CHAFEE offers a reasonable solution to this problem, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. STROMS. Mr. President, I have no objection to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 86) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHAFEE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. STROMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STROMS. Mr. President, it was my intention at this time that I was proposing to offer an amendment which would establish a special security option account.

While the bill we are considering today does provide a long-term solution to the solvency problems confronting the social security system, the proposal I was planning to offer, would have provided a more secure and flexible retirement program for many working Americans, while at the same time provide tax relief, stimulate individual savings, protect capital formation and strengthen the long-term future of the social security system.

I wish to outline this briefly and have my remarks in the Record. The chairman of the Finance Committee and I have agreed to a study on the question so this might be considered by Congress at a later date.
Under the social security option account, individuals paying social security taxes would establish a retirement account through which they would receive a deduction from their income subject to social security taxes. The concept would work as follows:

First, individuals who pay social security taxes would establish a special retirement account and then deduct the annual contributions from their taxable income. The account would be similar to the current IRA's and Keogh's.

Second, tax deductions would be limited to 20 percent of the amount of income subject to social security taxes. Thus, the maximum individual deduction would be about $7,000-plus today.

Third, in return, individuals with SSOA's would forfeit one-half percent of their social security benefit for each dollar contributed to an SSOA in any year, the maximum annual rate of forfeiture would be 2½ percent plus. At this forfeiture rate, an SSOA would become attractive to working Americans in a broad range of age and income categories.

Fourth, upon retirement, individuals with SSOA's could receive benefits from their accounts, along with reduced social security benefits; if an individual had invested enough in an SSOA, he or she would forfeit all social security benefits. Keogh plans are available only to the self-employed individuals. IRA's have fairly low caps on contributions.

The SSOA's would represent an important change in direction for Federal programs. They would relieve the social security system from ever-increasing Government entitlements, with their uncontrollable demands on the Federal budget. It would help restore the long-term solvency of the social security system and return it to its original purpose of providing retirement benefits. Individuals will gain more responsibility for their own retirement planning. Moreover, SSOA's would link tax relief to spending restraint. Individuals would become accountable for their future retirement benefits. SSOA's would fill the gaps in the Nation's retirement system and return to the original purpose of social security, private pensions, and the Nation's retirement programs. It would be to prevent any increase in the social security tax burden, which, for more than half of all families, now exceeds their income taxes. Third, efforts should be made to mitigate the effect of present demographic trends on the fiscal integrity of the trust fund, perhaps by encouraging people to rely less on the system in their retirement planning and saving.

Fourth, Government actions should reinforce people's confidence that the social security system is strong and will provide a minimal floor of benefits for their retirement. At the same time, however, the public should understand that social security is not a comprehensive retirement program and that it must be supplemented by individual retirement planning and saving.

Most importantly, security in retirement requires policies that retard inflation, stimulate productivity, create new jobs, and foster growth. Because a significant portion of the Nation's GNP is dedicated to retirement programs, these resources should be used, where possible, to stimulate rather than retard economic productivity. Private retirement programs are, and should remain, our primary source of capital formation. Moreover, because high taxes retard economic growth and thus indirectly burden retirement programs, tax relief is an essential element of comprehensive Federal retirement policy. Furthermore, to the extent possible, retirement policy should contribute to full employment, high wages, and new jobs, because these factors will widen the economic base upon which retirement programs must rest.

The social security option account contributes to these public policy goals. It allows individuals who pay social security taxes to choose an alternative means of providing for their retirement. They may establish a fund to pay their future retirement benefits by deducting from their Federal income tax their annual contributions to this fund. Deductions would be limited to 20 percent of their social security wages—that is, the amount of income subject to social security taxes.
In return, individuals who establish SSOA's forfeit a portion of their social security retirement benefits. They continue to pay social security taxes, but, in effect, trade future social security benefits for a present income tax deduction. The amount deducted must be paid into an SSOA, a tax-free, private account similar to an individual retirement account or Keogh plan, from which an individual may draw funds when he or she retires. Thus, an SSOA does not diminish revenues from flowing into the social security trust fund, but enables people to rely on private pension sources instead of social security payments in their retirement. By reducing future outlays from the trust fund, it strengthens the social security system. By linking public and private roles in retirement planning, it creates an opportunity for individual retirement planning based on specific contributions that is available to the vast majority of working Americans, encouraging them to save and changing their savings into investment into the Nation's economic base.

The problems facing our Nation's retirement system are closely interconnected. Low productivity, inflation, and high taxes make it difficult for individuals to save for retirement and diminish the value of their savings. Because social security benefits levels have risen substantially and are indexed to the Consumer Price Index most workers have little incentive to save for their retirement. A lack of savings, in turn, increases their reliance on social security. To meet increasing expectations from social security, benefits and taxes are raised further—as is being done in the legislation before us today—thereby discouraging savings, deterring capital formation, and dampening productivity. Thus, each problem aggravates the others.

We must take these interrelated concerns into account when choosing solutions to the problems facing the Nation's retirement system. Proposals to change the social security system, retirement programs, or the tax structure should address the broader goals of creating a productive and predictable economic climate in which individuals have the flexibility to plan their retirement efficiently, the incentive to save for their future, and the opportunity to invest in the Nation's future. Dealing with broader goals will lead to integrated solutions that address the myriad problems confronting Americans in retirement. The legislation before us does not take an integrated and comprehensive approach toward solving the problems of the social security system and that is exactly why I believe my amendment would substantially alter these conclusions. Thus, while workers age 40 in an SSOA's less attractive, they would do well if the prevailing interest rate fell below 7 percent, or the wage growth rate increased beyond 10 percent.

Higher interest rates would mean greater accumulated earnings in the SSOA account and thus higher SSOA benefits levels. Higher wages, however, would mean that individual accounts would qualify for relatively higher social security benefits which are indexed to increases in wage levels. If the workers marginal tax rate after retirement remained at 50 percent, they would also find SSOA's less attractive. The effect of these variables upon individual would depend on their particular situations.

Moreover, the individual assumptions about the economy would also affect this determination. Concern about a poor or risky investment climate could lead people to seek investment in SSOA's. On the other hand, if people believed that the social security program would not pay adequate future benefits, the SSOA would be attractive regardless of tax bracket or wage level.

Studies have indicated that a 0.5-percent forfeiture rate would serve the public goals of encouraging savings and stabilizing the social security system as well as the private objectives of income security in retirement and flexibility in retirement planning. It would appeal primarily to young and middle-aged workers in middle to high tax brackets.

I yield to the distinguished chairman.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I have discussed this amendment with the distinguished Senator from Idaho, and I think he has an excellent idea, but it is a matter that I have not been able to focus on because of the work of the National Social Security Commission and working on the bill itself in the Finance Committee.

I have suggested to the Senator from Idaho that he may be willing to replace or substitute an amendment that would direct the study by the appropriate agency, that would be very helpful. I am not certain whether he has had an opportunity to do that.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 87
(Purpose: To direct the Secretary of the Treasury, or his delegate, to conduct a study on the feasibility of implementing social security option accounts)

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment for a study by the appropriate agency and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho (Mr. SYMMS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 87.
Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of Title I, insert the following:

(a) The Secretary of the Treasury, or his delegate, should conduct a study of the feasibility of implementing "Social Security Options." Such accounts would have the following characteristics:

1. Individuals who pay social security taxes could establish a special retirement account and thus deduct annual contributions from their taxable income. The account would be similar to the current IRA's and KEOGH's.

2. Tax deductions would be limited to 20 percent of the amount of income subject to social security taxes. Thus, the maximum individual deduction would be about $7,000 plus today.

3. In return, individuals with SSOA's would forfeit one-half percent of their social security retirement benefits for each $1,000 contributed to the account. For example, if the maximum amount to an SSOA in any year, the maximum annual rate of forfeiture would be 3 percent plus. At this forfeiture rate, an SSOA's income tax is approximately $300 for each $1,000 contributed in a broad range of age and income categories.

4. Upon retirement, individuals with SSOA's could receive benefits from the account along with reduced social security benefits; if an individual had invested enough in an SSOA, he or she would forfeit all social security benefits.

(b) The Secretary of the Treasury should submit to the Congress a report on the results of the study conducted under section (a) by June 30, 1984.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, the amendment simply states that Treasury do a study on the concept of the amendment that I originally intended to offer and report back to the Finance Committee by June 30, 1985. It would be 16 months.

I beg to move.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Idaho.

The proposal to allow employees to establish a special retirement account similar to an IRA (with tax deductible contributions) in place of a portion of their social security benefits is an interesting concept and is worth study. It would undoubtedly have the potential for increasing the private pool of capital and encourage individuals to take more responsibility for their own retirement.

Such a program could take some pressure off the social security system by encouraging those who can to save for retirement rather than relying primarily on social security.

However, this is a major change in the role of social security and tax incentives to encourage retirement savings. It is appropriate to require a thorough study of the proposal before Congress is asked to enact it into law.

For instance, we need more information on whether these accounts will be attractive enough to gain widespread acceptance as a partial substitute for social security benefits, and we need to analyze the impact on general services.

As Senator SYMMS outlined, his original proposal would allow employees to establish a special retirement account similar to an IRA.

I think this has a lot of potential and a lot of merit, and I do believe that this approach now taken will give us an opportunity to take a look at it because it is a major change in the role of social security and tax incentive to encourage retirement savings. It is appropriate to require a thorough study of the proposal before Congress is asked to enact it into law.

I can assure the Senator from Idaho that we will do what we can to make certain that the study in the real sense of the word and it can come back to us within a year.

Mr. SYMMS. Within a year, a year and a few months.

Mr. DOLE. So we might then have full hearings and take another look at it.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished chairman and I thank the distinguished Senator for his indulgence of the amendments that this Senator has offered.

I note that although they have not passed, still think there is a great deal of merit for study, and I think that we will be back revisiting social security within the next 2 or 3 years and so most likely we will have the opportunity to offer a broader choice for the American people and to some things that would encourage more savings to help revitalize our needed capital market, and this would be one way to do it.

It would not affect everyone, I must admit, but it would be an option that some people might take and they would still be paying the social security taxes but they would have the opportunity as I perceive that they would help keep the contract or would not hurt the system as far as the fiduciary ability of the social security to pay its part of the contract that it has with the American people but it would give those people who were able to do so an opportunity to have their own retirement in exchange for social security benefits.

I call for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho.

(Putting the question.)

The amendment (UP No. 87) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside so that I may present an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SYMMS outlined his original proposal would allow employees to establish a special retirement account similar to an IRA.

I think this has a lot of potential and a lot of merit, and I do believe that this approach now taken will give us an opportunity to take a look at it because it is a major change in the role of social security and tax incentive to encourage retirement savings. It is appropriate to require a thorough study of the proposal before Congress is asked to enact it into law.

I can assure the Senator from Idaho that we will do what we can to make certain that the study in the real sense of the word and it can come back to us within a year.

Mr. SYMMS. Within a year, a year and a few months.

Mr. DOLE. So we might then have full hearings and take another look at it.

Mr. SYMMS. I thank the distinguished chairman and I thank the distinguished Senator for his indulgence of the amendments that this Senator has offered.

I note that although they have not passed, still think there is a great deal of merit for study, and I think that we will be back revisiting social security within the next 2 or 3 years and so most likely we will have the opportunity to offer a broader choice for the American people and to some things that would encourage more savings to help revitalize our needed capital market, and this would be one way to do it.

It would not affect everyone, I must admit, but it would be an option that some people might take and they would still be paying the social security taxes but they would have the opportunity as I perceive that they would help keep the contract or would not hurt the system as far as the fiduciary ability of the social security to pay its part of the contract that it has with the American people but it would give those people who were able to do so an opportunity to have their own retirement in exchange for social security benefits.

I call for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho.

(Putting the question.)

The amendment (UP No. 87) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SYMMS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table. The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside so that I may present an amendment.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I stand corrected.

Mr. DOLE. The Senators from Kentucky, Senator Ford and Senator Humphrey have amendments, so I think it would be helpful if we notify them that the amendment is pending and give them an opportunity to come to the Chamber. We can take it up whenever they can be here. Senator Kennedy has a couple of amendments as has Senator Nickles. By that time perhaps they can be here.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Does the Senator from Kansas expect to go right through the noon hour?

Mr. DOLE. Yes. I would not expect a roll call vote on this amendment.

Mr. METZENBAUM. No. But I wonder if I might suggest to those who have an interest in it that they could be in the Chamber at 12:30. Does that sound all right?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Under those circumstances, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily set aside, that it retain its place on the calendar, with the understanding that on about pending, depending on what is pending at that time, that we return to further consideration of this amendment.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 89

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for it immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

The bill clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) proposes an unprinted amendment number 89.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

"By January 1, 1985, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to the Congress concerning the feasibility and desirability of applying a prospective payment methodology to payment by all payers for in patient hospital service. Such report shall specifically include consideration of the extent of cost-shifting to non-federal payers, and the impact of such cost-shifting on health insurance costs and premiums borne by employers and employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to setting aside the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, today marks an historic occasion in the evolution of Medicare. After 28 years, we are finally going to move away from the wasteful, inefficient method of paying for health care—cost based, retrospective payment.

For over a decade, I have urged the Congress to adopt prospective payment, as the only way to control health care costs. In the early 1970's, we began by assisting the development of HMO's. HMO's are the model of prospective payment—and they have more than proven the value of this approach to controlling health care costs. With this approach, we will begin to recognize the important contribution made by State-based prospective payment systems.

Now at last, we are prepared to put Medicare on a prospective basis. I applaud the committee for an important step in the right direction. But at the same time, I must raise certain important reservations. I believe that we should immediately adopt an "all payers" approach to prospective payment. If prospective payment is limited to Medicare only, much of the benefit will be lost. The reason is simple. If all programs are subject to prospective limits, hospitals must either reduce their costs or suffer the consequences. But if Medicare alone is subject to these limits, the hospitals are free to make up the difference from other payers.

This cost shifting goes on under Medicare today. Some have estimated that as much as $6 billion in costs were shifted to employees and employers in 1982—under the medicare only proposal. By that time, that number might reach $12 billion by 1985. Whatever the magnitude—cost shifting undercuts the benefits of prospective payments, adds billions to employers' costs and billions more to worker health insurance premiums.

I have introduced legislation (S. 814) that provides for an all-payer approach to prospective payment. It would put an immediate halt to runaway health costs, for all Americans—not simply for the Federal Government. It would then allow the States to devise programs suited to their own needs. It would protect the elderly from rising out-of-pocket costs. It is not my intention to offer this bill as a substitute for the provisions in the bill before us. I believe that my proposal is a more effective way to deal with health costs, and hope that my colleagues will take the time to study it—so that we can discuss these issues in the months to come. But I do believe that the only way to solve the problem of cost shifting that will arise under the Medicare only proposal.

As the chairman knows, this bill contains a provision requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to study the feasibility and desirability of applying the prospective payment methodology to all payers of in patient hospital services. My amendment is similar to this provision, except that it would require that this report be made to Congress by January 1, 1985, and would specifically require the Secretary to determine the extent of cost shifting, and its impact on private hospital insurance premiums as they are paid by employers and employees. In this way, we will be prepared with the information needed to make a responsible and speedy decision on expanding the reach of the prospective methodology to private as well as public payers.

Mr. President, I have long been a believer in prospective budgeting. The provisions in this legislation concerning Medicare, are helpful in trying to solve the very difficult challenge we are going to face in the future—the increase in costs of health care.

My concern is that as we put prospective budgeting with regard to Medicare into the law, we are going to see an increase in costs outside of the Medicare system.

All I want to do in this particular amendment is to have a review of the effect of the prospective budgeting and a report concerning the nature and extent of cost-shifting and have a report come back to Congress by early 1985 so that when we will be in con- stration and we will be dealing with the problems of health care costs. It will make available to the Finance Committee information that will permit us to address this concern.

It will provide important additional information to the Senate and to Congress in order to try to deal with the problems of increased health care costs, and it will address what I believe is going to be a cost-shifting effect of prospective budgeting, if we just limit it to the medicare proposal.

I hope the committee will accept the amendment.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am pleased to support this proposal to reform the way medicare reimburses hospitals. While I do not ordinarily like to see increased Government regulation of any kind, this prospective payment proposal for medicare is appropriate, though not flawless, mechanism to address the double digit inflation currently experienced in the health care industry.

I applaud the administration for the swiftness with which it responded to the Congress in drafting this legislation. I applaud the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Mr. Dole and his committee staff for their efforts in rapidly addressing this important issue. I also applaud the hospitals in this country for not opposing our efforts to bring some control to the escalation of health care costs and the concurrent dramatic yearly increases in the Federal Government's medicare budget.

As a result of prospective payment being applied to medicare, I am confident mechanisms within the marketplace of a competitive nature will develop which will help to limit the rise in overall health care costs. These mechanisms will occur with only a minimal amount of Government regul
It is one thing for the U.S. Government to act as a price-purchaser of health care in a competitive marketplace; it is quite another thing for health care providers to be required to accept as payment in full from all private citizens and third-party payers rates dictated by a Federal Government agency. This has the effect of replacing the marketplace.

If this were not repugnant enough, I understand this amendment I am about to propose might prove prejudicial review from the Congress in the form of an amendment that would strip the Government's discretionary authority to establish the DRG system and payment methodology. Thus, it would vest in the Government the right to act arbitrarily and capriciously without accountability. Rather than functioning as the head of a Federal administrative agency, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be transformed into a Federal czar of national health with unbridled authority. Such a possibility threatens the health care available to the American people and thwarts efforts to make the health-care marketplace move price competition.

In addition, there is quite limited practical experience with the DRG-based payment system. Although a DRG-based experiment has been conducted in the State of New Jersey for a few years, the results of this undertaking are not final or conclusive. In recommending a DRG-based prospective payment system, the Secretary of HHS refers to what she characterizes as preliminary reports that the system worked in New Jersey.

Even if a preliminary indication in New Jersey is accurate, transposing the DRG system from New Jersey to a national level will require further state and national adjustments and changes. The administration of a program has to be fully developed; the propriety of the proposed methodology for establishing the DRG payment on a national level for Medicare patients still needs to be analyzed; the adequacy of the payment rates are in question, especially the 111 DRG's that the Federal Government does not have adequate, random sampling and now must find alternative sources for charge information.

In summary, the impact of the Medicare DRG system on hospitals nationwide is uncertain. Imposing a DRG payment limit for all payers of health care would compound these adjustments and risks permanently crippling our Nation's hospitals. For this reason, I support the proposal from the Senate Finance Committee requiring the Secretary to report to Congress on the appropriateness of the DRG system. At this time I would like to read Blue Cross-Blue Shield's letter in opposition to any all-payer proposal. They state:
Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, for the last 2 years, Congress has struggled to develop an equitable solution to social security. But that compromise has not been achieved at a discount. And now our debate has occurred in a highly politicized environment. Too often the fears of the most vulnerable in our society have been played upon in an effort to gain the upper hand politically.

Nonetheless, we appear to have found a solution to the social security problem, but our unwillingness to act early and the successful efforts by some to politicize the problem have exacted a huge price.

Another social security problem—medicare—sends us beyond the horizon. Actuaries in the administration and at the Congressional Budget Office predict that medicare will be insolvent in 3 to 4 years. We have the time to fix medicare; the question is, do we have the willingness? Can Congress avoid politicizing the medicare issue?

Already, some are playing off the fears of medicare beneficiaries. This is a cruel trick to play on beneficiaries. In correcting medicare, Congress will not abandon the beneficiaries. But an equitable solution cannot be achieved if everyone is running scared.

Today, as part of the social security compromise, we have included a major piece of medicare reform, a reform that will improve efficiency and allow us to get the most out of our medicare dollars.

As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's Health Subcommittee, I have been holding hearings since last summer on the issue of prospective payment. We have heard from States that have their own prospective payment systems; we have heard from insurance companies engaged in prospective payment; we have heard from physicians and hospitals; and we have heard from consumers, beneficiaries, and experts in the administration.

The prospective payment provisions crafted by the Finance Committee and included in this bill are exactly what the medicare program now needs. We have learned enough from our experience with cost-based reimbursement to know that it does not work. It wastes money, penalizes the efficient hospital, and encourages dangerous over-treatment.

We have taken the administration's proposal—which is basically a very good one—and made some changes; changes which I feel improve the proposal and ease the burden on hospitals as we move from the old system to a prospective payment system.

Prospective payment is not the final solution to medicare reform. Other changes will be necessary. We must also look at including physicians, skilled nursing facilities, home health agencies, and other providers in a prospective payment system. And we must move ahead in our efforts to expand private sector vouchers for the medicare population.

Under this proposal, beneficiaries will not pay any additional dollars out-of-pocket. But they will reap additional benefits. Efficient hospitals will be able to give beneficiaries more for the money, and that will fit the patients and taxpayers. Change is never easy. The change from a cost-based retrospective system to a prospective system will force hospitals and physicians to change behavior. But it is a change that is desperately needed. I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this important reform.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. Yes.

Mr. DOLE. I certainly agree with the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts. I am perfectly willing to accept the amendment. I have just asked the distinguished Senator from Louisiana and he has no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreement to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment (UP No. 89) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 90

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have another amendment which I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 90.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

"The Secretary shall provide that the amount which is allowable, with respect to costs of inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under this title, for a return on equity capital for subsection (d) of Medicare, (XJC) shall, for cost reporting periods beginning on or before October 1, 1986, and before October 1, 1986, be equal to the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B)) of the amounts otherwise allowable under regulations in effect on March 1, 1981. For cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986, the Secretary shall not provide for any such return on equity capital for such hospitals.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the bill before us today marks a major change in the way the Government pays for health care. As my colleagues know, since medicare was enacted, it paid for health care like the Defense Department paid for weapons--on a cost-plus basis. And the results were pretty much the same. Costs kept going up—but no matter how much the cost went up—there was always the plus—the profit.

With this bill, we are finally turning away from this wasteful way of paying for health care. I regret that this step is limited to medicare, since I believe that we can only control costs with an all-payers approach to prospective payment. Nonetheless, it is a step in the right direction.

Unfortunately, on our way to eliminating cost-plus in medicare, we have forgotten to eliminate the plus. Although for a fixed payment per case, the bill still requires the Government to throw in a sweetener for a small number of hospitals—the profit.

I simply cannot understand the reason for keeping in the profit—known in the jargon as “return on equity.” The whole point of prospective payment is to pay a fixed price. If hospitals are efficient, they get to keep the difference between the costs and the fixed payment. Is not that profit? Under this bill, we are going to pay a profit on top of the profit. And the second profit does not even have to be earned. It gets paid whether the hospital is efficient or not, whether it delivers good care or not. It just gets paid.

My amendment would address that issue. As prospective payment is phased, a first by 25 percent, then 50 percent, and then 75 percent, this amendment would phase out that additional profit item, the return on equity.

It is effectively the same concept that has been accepted by the House of Representatives. I do think it is a valuable and worthwhile saving. The estimate would be that there would be a $300 million per year savings when this is completely implemented.

Even under the current system, return on equity has produced unjust results—rewarding the well off, and pushing up medicare costs. Return on equity costs medicare about $300 million per year—not for expanded benefits for the elderly, or lower copayments, or lower deductibles. No—in fact the administration wants to increase costs for the elderly. No—this $300 million per year is pure profit.

According to CBO figures, for-profit hospitals account for only 9 percent of medicare costs. Excluding return on equity, they account for 11 percent of medicare capital payments—higher than their overall share. When you add in return on equity—the real story is told. For-profit hospitals account for 20 percent of medicare’s capital payments, more than twice their share of overall medicare payments. Medicare capital payments to for-profit hospitals are $7,170 per bed annually compared with $3,360 per bed for nonprofits.

Now, what effect do these payments have on medicare and on the health care system generally? Well, they certainly do not go to help pay for care for the poor and the uninsured—like the 16 million Americans who have lost health insurance since the Reagan recession began. Their own spokesmen have admitted that private hospitals skim well-to-do patients and leave the public hospitals to care for the poor and the lower middle class. But it does lead to a lot of unoccupied beds through acquisition and construction. For-profit hospitals have a 65-percent occupancy rate compared with the American Hospital Association average of 76 percent. And each unoccupied bed costs $112,000—a large share borne by medicare.

And for-profit hospitals are more expensive for medicare—primarily because of return on equity. According to a recent study, for-profit hospitals cost medicare about 13 percent more than comparable not-for-profit hospitals.

The result has been that return on equity has served to increase both capital and operating costs for medicare. It does no good to adopt a prospective payment system if we exclude from it the most unjustified inflationary component in the medicare system—return on equity.

Now, what do the opponents of this amendment will say. They will say: ‘Return on equity is a difficult issue. We need to study it before we act. We do not know what the effect will be.’ Well, prospective payment by diagnosis-related group is a difficult issue. We do not know what the effect will be. But it will be on public hospitals. But does the committee ask us to study first and then act. No. We are to act first. Ask questions later.

We do not know what the effect will be on urban hospitals. Or rural hospitals. Or most important, quality and adequacy of care for the elderly, the poor, and the sick. Does the committee ask us to study first and act later on behalf of the elderly and the sick. No. But when it comes to hospital profits, suddenly we are cautious. Suddenly we are unwilling to take the plunge. I say that is wrong. I say it speaks of administration policies that are too willing to sacrifice the neediest to save the profits of the well-to-do.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record several tables and articles.

There being no objection, the matter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

BIG HOSPITAL CHAINS CONTINUE HEALTHY SHOWING EYES AS LIMIT ON MEDICARE COSTS APPEARS CERTAIN

(Copyright 1983 by the Wall Street Journal)

Congressional efforts to curb medicare costs might be coming too late for the stocks of the nation’s big hospital chains, which derive 40% to 45% of their revenues from the federal program. Indeed, a couple of the stocks have been moving briskly upward recently. And yesterday, the hospital-management companies held their own in a downward market, even though it was investors’ first chance to react to Wednesday night’s passage in the House of Representatives of a Social Security measure containing medicare curbs.

Still, there is some surprising strength appears to be that the bill didn’t come out quite as badly for hospitals as some had feared. In fact, for hospitals that are run for profit, some analysts see distinct advantages in the way the House would change medicare payments.

The Senate Finance Committee began work on its version of the Social Security measure last night. And while there are no assurances that the final version of any bill would be exactly as the House passed it, there’s widespread feeling in Washington that a similar measure will be enacted into law.

Late yesterday, the Senate Finance Committee voted to include the medicare provisions in its version of the Social Security bill.

On Wall Street, some of the biggest hospital chains are already well on their way to recovery from fears late last year that the measure would be a bitter pill. Hospital Corp. of America, the largest hospital operator, has risen about 12% in the past two weeks. Humana is up about 10% over the same span. Others, who haven’t outperformed the market in recent weeks, reacted well yesterday to the news from Washington. They included American Medical International, up 31% to 39%; Humana, up 1% to 39%; and Universal Health Services, up 1% to 42%. National Medical Enterprises, another major player, is up 14% to 31%.

The bill passed by the House would set fixed medicare payments to hospitals for 467 categories of treatment. Under the current system, hospitals receive reimbursement on an all-payers basis, minus adjusted return on equity, currently about 7% to 8% on an after-tax basis.

Before all aspects of the House’s proposed legislation were clear, some had feared that the new “prospective payments” plan would mean that hospitals operated for profit wouldn’t make any profit when dispensing under medicare, an aid program for the elderly. What seems to have dawned on investors lately is that the payments system will enable hospitals to pocket the differing...
ence if they can provide services at less than the fixed payments.

The payment schedules are expected to be guided by the average costs for providing services of all hospitals within nine geographical regions established by the bill. John Hindelong, health-care analyst and director of research at A.G. Becker, believes that for-profit hospitals are much more efficient in providing services than nonprofit hospitals, and will be able to improve their profit margins in Medicare as a result of the new system.

Mr. Hindelong hasn't changed his earnings forecasts for the companies above because "I was expecting this legislation for awhile." He believes Hospital Corp. will earn $2.80 a share this year, up from $2.25 in 1982; Humana, $2 a share in the year ending June 30, up from $1.90; American Medical, also on an August fiscal year, $2 up from $1.60; and National Medical, $1.85 in its year ending May 31, up from $1.47 it earned last year.

But there isn't any consensus about the effects of the proposed payments schedule. Bill Hayes, who manages the $50 million Pitkin-Sipag mutural fund, believes that the hospital chains won't do any better under the new system. Nonetheless, he says he bought some of the two chains' stocks anyway because "I've been expecting this legislation for awhile."

Mr. Hayes said he expects the major hospital chains' profits will grow at least 20% a year for the next five years. Some of this growth, he reasons, will come from acquisitions, as it becomes increasingly difficult for nonprofit hospitals to make it. "The Little Sisters of the Poor... are going by the boards," he said.

From an investor's point of view, the stocks are already assuming big growth rates. Their price-earnings ratios, although not as high as some high-technology medical companies, range between 17 and 20, much higher than the market as a whole.

Perry Wyson, a Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., investment manager of tracks hospital management companies two ways. Mr. Wyson's medical-stock newsletter has done analyses that show the industry is "grow, grow, grow." The "Consensus of Insiders" report, which tracks corporate officers' stock sales and purchases in their own companies, shows heavy insider selling of Hospital Corp. of America and Humana in the past six months, enough to keep him from recommending the two issues.

Firms Find Hospitals Are Healthy Business

(By Don Kirkman)

WASHINGTON—The hospital that will open its doors in Crawfordsville, Ind., in 1985 won't be run by the customary group of physicians, nurses, and government. It will be owned and operated by a profit-making corporation. American Medical International of Beverly Hills, Calif.

Crawfordsville, Ind., is part of a trend in the United States and overseas.

Encouraged by multibillion-dollar federal health programs, private business corporations are building, buying, leasing or managing under contract thousands of health facilities that once were operated by municipalities, churches, physicans and small businessmen.

It's true of hospitals, nursing homes, diagnostic laboratories, artificial kidney treatment centers and doctor groups that offer prepaid medical plans.

"The health field is a heck of a growth opportunity for private corporations," said Michael Bromberg, executive director of the Federation of American Hospitals.

"Doctors are selling out or going broke. Catholic and municipal hospitals are turning over their hospitals to private corporations, and the large chains are coming in."

There are now more than 1000 privately owned hospitals in the United States (of 7,000 overall), and another 500 are leased or operated by corporations. Each year, the number is increasing.

The reason for the rapid growth of corporate-operated hospitals is Medicare. Bromberg said. With the government now guaranteeing payment for tens of millions of elderly patients, a hospital can make money if it's profitable.

Five large hospital corporations "are going wild," Bromberg said, continually opening facilities in the Sun Belt states and affluent suburbs throughout the country.

Most of the private facilities aren't large—usually 100 to 300 beds—and their staffs are smaller than those of municipal and sectarian hospitals of comparable size.

What they offer, however, is a great deal more personal attention per patient from physicians, nurses and staff. Bromberg said.

On a day-by-day basis, our private hospitals are a bit more expensive than public hospitals, but our patients remain in the hospital a day less than the publics, so their total bills are lower.

Bromberg acknowledges that the private hospitals "skim" well-to-do patients from public hospitals. He says simply that the main role of the public hospital is to care for the poor and lower middle class.

Bromberg said the biggest of the private corporations is Hospital Corporation of America based in Nashville, Tenn. American Medical International is No. 2. HCA owns or operates 381 hospitals and AMI 115. Three other firms own 100 and 100.

Paul Ginsberg, an economist for the Congressional Budget Office, says he's worried about the expansion of corporate-owned hospitals because their basic motive is to make money.

"I think they're a two-edged sword," Ginsberg said. "They're providing services for communities that need them, but they're also driving up health care costs. There's no incentive in those hospitals to reduce costs."

But Cameron Thompson, a spokesman for the FAH, says the private hospitals "have the capital to build modern facilities or improve existing facilities to have fine patient care and management expertise; and can recruit physicians for communities that are having a hard time attracting doctors."

"We think the systemization provided by corporations is the way of the future," Thompson said. "It's a good thing for Americans and provides better health care for them. But it costs a lot of money."

KENNEDY. I would like to have the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee and also the chairman of the subcommittee of the Finance Committee, both of whom have been extremely innovative in moving us toward real and effective cost controls, to hear out their views on this particular issue.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me suggest that I understand the point raised by the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts.

As he indicated, there is a cost saving of about $300 million, when taken overall.

Mr. KENNEDY. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. There is a provision, of course, in the House bill, a 3-year provision, and I would guess we would have some flexibility in conference.

Certainly the Senator from Kansas is aware of the problem. In fact, the amendment contains a provision that directs the Secretary to report back to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment on the method by which all capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, can be included within the prospective payment system.

So I do not believe I have any basic disagreement with what the Senator from Massachusetts wants to accomplish. But I hope he might give us the opportunity to work this out in conference. The bill now provides the basis for addressing that way.

I might also indicate I think the distinguished majority leader wanted to say a word on this, and maybe I could yield to the Senator from Minnesota while we are waiting for the majority leader.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. President, let me just add another dimension in the discussion of the issue, and compliment the Senator from Massachusetts for raising it.

First, perhaps by way of clarification of the issue, it is not necessarily a sweetener or a profit that is being added by this bill. It is a sweetener of sorts that has been present in the system since 1965.

As the Senator from Massachusetts indicates, this is the first time as long as we are addressing capital from the standpoint of the way we reimburse, a very appropriate time to address the return on equity issue, and I agree with him on that.
We have a strong concern, and we have had a strong concern, about the whole issue of how and what role we play in financing the access of for-profit, not-for-profit, and Government hospitals to capital in this country. We have come a long way from the old Hill-Burton days, the tax-exempt days, to some relatively unpredictable future, and it is a time in which compensations and sweeteners and things such as that ought to get out of the picture.

I think in this medicare reform we are taking the first step in the direction of some discipline on the whole decisionmaking process because, in effect, we are doing the financing the whole income area, and rather than saying to the hospitals, "Whatever you want to charge for a day in the hospital or for a particular procedure that is conducted in the hospital we are going to reimburse you for those costs," we are saying, we are going to reimburse you for so much money for each of 467 various types of diagnosis."

So right off the bat, the hospital corporations or the government units that operate these hospitals know they can only make so much money on the different types of inpatients in the hospital. That is the first essential discipline in this process.

The second is to go back behind that and to look at the various ways, other ways, that capital needs are met. Projects through the sale of bonds, the sale of assets, acceptances of gifts, Government aid such as the Hill-Burton guarantees, tax-exempt bonds, and the return on equity, a whole variety of ways, and that is why—and I know the Senator from Massachusetts supports this—we made the decision that in 3 years we are going to blend capital costs into the prospective payment system.

That is why we want return on equity and other capital expenditures over the next 18 months with a report back to us by the first of the year 1985 about what we ought to do about all of these issues as we prepare for that fourth year in this system in which we are no longer going to have these distinctions in the capital area.

So I say to the Senator from Massachusetts that I expect that I and many of us on the Finance Committee may ultimately end up supporting a phased-out return on equity and other methods by which the Government finances capital costs associated with health care.

I would indicate, as the chairman has indicated, that we have been given the advice of the President to come to the ends that I think all of us would agree need to come to.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished floor manager, the Senator from Kansas (Mr. Dole) for your kind words. I have the common position of supporting the chairman of the Finance Committee in his opposition to the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy).

This amendment, Mr. President, is similar to the language added by the House Ways and Means Committee. Quite simply, it would phase out compensation, under medicare, for return on equity to proprietary hospitals. The amendment does not, however, address any of the other costs of capital, such as interest on debt. Thus, passage of this amendment would provide real incentives to realignment toward incurring debt. I do not believe that it is good public policy. Mr. President, to effectively eliminate equity as a source of capital for hospital construction and modernization.

Furthermore, both the House-passed and Senate-reported bills contain a requirement for the Department of Health and Human Services to conduct a study on the role of compensation for all capital costs. I think that it is only proper that any changes in the present computations wait until that study is completed. At that time, we can better evaluate the appropriate compensation for all types of debt through the medicare system.

Given these considerations, I would urge the Senator from Massachusetts to consider withdrawing his amendment, which I understand he is inclined to do. I would also urge the chairman of the Finance Committee to hold the Senate position in conference. I believe that it is premature to address the issue in this legislation.

Again, I thank the Senator from Kansas (Mr. Dole) for yielding.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as I had other discussions both with the chairman of the Finance Committee and the chairman of the subcommittee, I know they are aware of this issue.

This is an appropriate time to address it. The fact remains, as we have effectively phased out the whole planning process, we see an increasing number of proprietary hospitals with increasing capital expenditures. Once that capital investment is actually made, it remains then for the succeeding generations to end up paying for it. So this is an important time to act. I do think it is an important matter in terms of long-term savings. I welcome both the interest and the attention that the Senator from Minnesota and the chairman of the committee have given to it.

I hope that they would give additional attention in the conference with the House of Representatives on this issue. I am quite willing to see that matter considered in the conference. We will have an opportunity to review it down the line, in any event. But I certainly would hope that the disposition of the chairman of the committee and the chairman of the subcommittee.

With those assurances, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to withdraw his amendment. The amendment is withdrawn.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 91

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I have another amendment that I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Bradley amendment will continue to be set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 91.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 215, after line 16 insert the following new subsection:

"(x) Section 1903(s)(3) of such Act is amended by—

2. (1) ("i") after "the Secretary" in subparagraph (D), and

3. (B) after "the fiscal year" in subparagraph (D), striking the period and adding the following new clause:

"or (II) in the case of programs established after January 1, 1983, is satisfied, based on assurances made by the State, that the annual rate of increase in aggregate hospital inpatient costs per capita or per admission (as defined by the Secretary in the 2 calendar years during any subsequent calendar year) will be at least two percentage points less than the annual rate of increase during that calendar year in such costs per capita or per admission for hospitals located in the States (excluding from such computation any State which has in effect a qualified hospital cost review program during that entire calendar year)"

Mr. KENNEDY: Mr. President, as my colleagues know, the Reconciliation Act reduced medicare payments States are entitled to by 3 percent in fiscal year 1982, 4 percent in fiscal year 1983, and 4.5 percent in fiscal year 1984.

States which had comprehensive hospital cost containment programs in place, July 1, 1981, were entitled to a 1-percent reduction in the reduction rate if they could demonstrate their rates of increase in hospital costs were 2 percent below the national average increase.

Only seven States—Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and Washington—noted the deadline—had programs in place on July 1, 1981.

These seven States will get a 3½ percent reduction in their medicare payment next year. Every other State in.. the country will have its payment reduced by 4½ percent—even if it has adopted a cost-containment program.

As the West Virginia Legislature last week was abolishing the requirement that the State program be established by July 1, 1981. Under my amendment, any State that enacts a qualified hospital cost review program and can satisfy the Secretary that its program will reduce the rate of increase in hospital costs by at least 2 percent below the national average would receive the 1 percent reduction.

Mr. President, runaway health costs are bankrupting our business and industry, disrupting Federal, State, and local budgets, and imperiling the security of our citizens. No State can be immune from the ravages of health inflation, but its impact is harshest on the most vulnerable in our society—the young and the old, the sick and the poor, the struggling family, and the working American. Rampant inflation in health care costs continues unabated.

While we have failed to face head on the need to control health care expenditures, a number of States have taken the initiative and developed all-payer prospective payment systems. They recognized that only by including all payers could they finally put the reins of their health care system—by shifting those costs—dollar for dollar—to the elderly, the sick, and the working American. The increases, for example, in hospital costs in the States that have adopted effective cost containment have been significantly below those that have not had cost containment. In the current legislation, we have provided a financial incentive to the States that have taken that action by providing an additional point of matching payment under the medicaid program. This has served as an incentive for those States which have an effective cost containment program.

This amendment would offer that same opportunity to other States that, in their wisdom, make the decision to move toward cost containment. It is an encouragement to those States to move in that direction.

I think if it was totally implemented, if all the States had a cost containment program, it would cost $150 million, but the savings would be in the billions of dollars.

So what we are trying to do with this particular proposal is apply that encouragement to the States in the future that adopt cost containment programs as we have for the States that have already enacted it.

It seems to me, Mr. President, it is only fair. It does again, address the issue of trying to limit the very substantial escalation of health care costs, which now are three times the rate of inflation. I am mindful, Mr. President, that, for example, West Virginia last week adopted a cost containment program. West Virginia, however, because it did not have a program in place in the summer of 1981, would not qualify for the bonus point. This amendment would basically correct this inequity by removing the requirement that the State program be established by July of 1981.

Clearly, any State that implements an effective cost containment program is going to be saving the Treasury tens of millions, probably hundreds of millions of dollars. Over the period of years, this amount would come up into the billions of dollars.

So I hope, Mr. President, that we would try to encourage the States. This is a very modest proposal, but it does seem to provide some carrot to the States if they will move toward an effective cost containment program. It seems to me those States ought to be treated equally with those States that have already adopted the program.
We acknowledge the fact that at the State, local, and community levels the savings as well as the quality can be best preserved. We do not know how to do that end of it all that well, but we believe that the national commitment to the needy in this country in the health care system. It is through that hearing process that we intend to start in late spring and early summer that we hope to find the most appropriate answer where you can get a saving at the State and local levels while we provide that necessary financial commitment to every person in this country so that they do not have to vote with their feet in order to find health care that they need.

I can certainly make that commitment to the Senator from Massachusetts, that the issue that he is trying to resolve here hopefully we can resolve with the help of the States through this process of defining our role versus the States' role in providing health care to the needy.

I would encourage the Senator to consider those arguments and, if he can find it within his heart to do so, to withdraw the amendment.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I gather from the response of the Senator from Minnesota he is not prepared to indicate support for the concept even when we consider the medicaid later this year. If he would accept it at that particular time, I would be willing to see us delay. I do think this is an appropriate vehicle because this legislation has very significant provisions in it to encourage States to move toward cost containment.

The judgment of the Congress in 1981 was that if States have a cost containment program, it will yield savings not only to medicaid but to all health care providers. They do not get this real incentive unless they hold the rate of growth below the national average. So they repay many times over in terms of savings to the Federal Government. It does seem to me that if it made sense in 1981 in terms of equity it would make sense now.

If it is a question about the vehicle, I am glad to wait until we consider it later on. If it is a question of the concept, I am prepared to move now.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Let me say in response to that, that from a personal standpoint it may be a combination. I suspect if we discuss our differences in concept on the right vehicle, this Senator may be more susceptible to the arguments being made by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I do think that the reason for this proposal is really quite compelling.

I am grateful for the openness of the Senator from Minnesota, but I would just as soon let the Senate have an opportunity to speak on this issue. I am prepared to move to a vote.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART), and the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 92

(Purpose: To provide that benefits no longer be paid to aliens not authorized by law to live and work in the United States)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I have an amendment which I send to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. NICKLES), for himself, Mr. MELCHER, Mr. BOREN, Mr. EAST, Mrs. HAWKINS, Mr. BOSCHWITZ, Mr. ASDENOR, Mr. ARMSTONG, Mr. GOLDWATER, Mr. BURDICK, Mr. WARNER, Mr. PRESSLER, Mr. MATTINGLY, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. HUMPHREY, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 92.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows: At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

Section 202(n) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following section:

"§ 234. Prohibition of benefits to illegal aliens

"(a) An individual can only receive benefits if at the time such individual files his or her claim for benefits, such individual can show that he also—

"(1) is a U.S. citizen, or

"(2) was once a U.S. citizen but had voluntarily relinquished such status, or

"(3) is an alien who was legally admitted to work, or

"(4) was once an alien who was legally admitted to work but had voluntarily relinquished such status.

"(b) Subsection (a) applies only with respect to individuals who first become eligible for benefits after December, 1983.

SUSPENSION OF BENEFITS TO ILLEGAL ALIENS

Sec. 3. Section 202(n) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following section:

"(3) Notwithstanding any other provisions of this title, no monthly benefit under this section or section 223 of such Act shall be paid:

"(A) to an individual for any months for which the Attorney General notifies the Secretary that such individual is subject to

"(i) a final order of exclusion entered under 8 USC 1252, or

"(ii) a final order of departure entered under 8 USC 1252, or

"(iii) a voluntary departure in lieu of deportation under 8 USC 1254(f); and

"(B) on the basis of wages or self-employment income which were earned by an individual during any period for which the Attorney General furnishes information suffi-Second, a former U.S. citizen who voluntarily gave up their citizenship and left the country.

Third, an alien who has been legally admitted to work in this country, either initially or through amnesty.

Fourth, an alien who was formerly living and working in this country legally but has since left the country.

In addition, the amendment would allow SSA and INS to share information on those aliens who have been deported or have voluntarily left the country. The effective date on this second provision is January 1985, although current enforcement measures that INS and SSA are involved in are to continue.

The reason for the effective date being 2 years away is that this is when SSA and INS will have the computer capabilities to cross check cubic manner than is currently being done.

I urge my colleagues to support this measure. Perhaps no other change that we have contemplated for social security has the unanimous support which this has. Although it is a small measure, I believe that this is an important one for restoring confidence in Congress ability and willingness to make commonsense changes in the laws which govern Americans.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield.

Mr. BRADLEY. Did the Senator vote for the immigration bill that was reported by the Senate last year?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BRADLEY. In that bill was a provision that forgave those people who were in the United States illegally until the time that bill was passed. Can the Senator tell me what would be the effect on these people if the legislation adopted last year would thereupon become a legal alien, legally admitted?

Mr. NICKLES. If that is what Congress should pass in the immigration legislation, then those aliens would be legally entitled to receive the benefits under this amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. They cannot have been legally admitted. Has the Senator's proposal provided for these persons? The purpose of the Senate was to allow the people to remain in the United States and to continue working and legalize their status. But it cannot legalize their entry. They entered at a past time.

Mr. NICKLES. If they are living in the United States legally, then they can receive benefits.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I see.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate the Senator's questions.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President. will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Let us assume the case of an alien who came here 30 years ago and has been through this process and has been a good citizen in the community but never became a citizen, never really gained any legal status. Now it comes time for that individual to apply for social security benefits. Under the Senator's amendment, would that individual, who had
Mr. NICKLES. Let me make sure I understand. Did the Senator say that the person was working illegally in the country for 30 years?

Mr. METZENBAUM. No; it would not be illegal. The person had been working in the country for 30 years. I do not think that during that period he would have been violating any laws for having worked, and he had been under social security rules. Nobody had raised any question with him. He was just one of those persons who had not seen fit to take out citizenship papers. Maybe he even served in the war. What happens? He is now 65 years of age. Do we say to him, “You can’t have your benefits because one afternoon, on the floor of the U.S. Senate, the Senate adopted an amendment, and you had no knowledge of it and most other people did”?

Mr. NICKLES. I think the question was answered.

The Immigration and Nationality Act provides that if a person is not a U.S. citizen, then in order for an alien to work in the United States they actually have to receive from the Department of Labor, a green card. If an alien has this card on other documents stating his or her legal status in this country, then they would receive the benefits.

However, if they were working in the United States, under the example from the Senator from Ohio, for 30 years, with a suspect or a false social security card and under false circumstances, they would not receive benefits.

Mr. METZENBAUM. If they had not received that green card, even if their entry had been illegal, but it would not be possible under some circumstances to get a green card making it possible for them to work.

Mr. NICKLES. If they received the green card, that is the Department of Labor and if they were legal for their work, then they would be qualified to receive benefits. Even if they had not worked legally but worked illegally for 30 years and the amnesty provisions were passed, they would receive benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, let me try to be specific with the general question I asked earlier.

Let us assume someone has been in the United States working illegally, as an illegal immigrant, for 3 years. The Simpson-Mazzoli bill is passed and provides amnesty for that category of worker.

Under the Senator’s amendment, would that worker be eligible for social security benefits that were accrued during those 3 years that he or she was an illegal immigrant?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct. They would receive those benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Senator alluded to a GAO study. Could the Senator tell me when that GAO study was published?

Mr. NICKLES. I mention in my statement that that report is in the process of being published. It is expected to be released at the end of March.

Mr. BRADLEY. And the Senator has obtained the information from the GAO as to what is in the study prior to its release?

Mr. NICKLES. That is correct.

There is a draft report that has been circulated which I would be happy to give to the Senator. As a matter of fact, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record the report with my comments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. BRADLEY. How many illegal immigrants did the GAO study state were now receiving social security benefits?

Mr. NICKLES. The report provides only rough estimates, based on a number of studies which have been done. Estimates range from 1 million to 12 million, the most accepted range being 3.5 to 6 million.

Mr. BRADLEY. The Senator used some number $5.4 billion. What is that related to?

Mr. NICKLES. That was a figure which GAO arrived at by calculating the annual cost to the trust fund if 25 percent of the illegal aliens working in this country were to receive social security benefits.

Mr. BRADLEY. So, according to this GAO report, which will be published and preliminary information the Senator has, if there are anywhere from 1 million to 12 million illegal immigrants in the country and anywhere between 25 percent of 3 million to 5 million of those illegal immigrants are now receiving social security benefits, to the level of $2.4 billion, is that what the Senator is asserting?

Mr. NICKLES. Yes, Senator. GAO came up with estimates and said that if 10 percent become vested which is probably a minimal number, about $900 million in benefits would be going out annually, and if 25 percent were becoming vested, it could be as much as $2.4 billion.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Let me put two questions if I may.

First, we have not seen this GAO report which evidently says they cannot prove what they do not know, but they can maybe. But is the Senator aware that the Inspector General of Social Security recently ran a random sample of 80,000 social security checks and found 2 to be irregular? Out of 80,000, 2, which really would be a remarkable performance for any large system. And I do not want to imply what we know from the Inspector General that does not seem to jibe with what we hear that we are going to hear from the GAO. I just make that point. I do not want to go beyond that.

But the distinguished author of the immigration legislation that we adopted last year is in the Chamber, and the Senator from Wyoming might wish to comment.

Do I understand that if the legislation granting amnesty were not to pass, then we would be denying social security to a large number of persons who have worked and earned it? We have proposed amnesty, but if it should happen, as it did not happen last time, would they be denied that?

Mr. NICKLES. If a person applies for social security, then they would have to say, “Yes, I am a U.S. citizen,” or “I worked legally in the United States,” one or the other.

Second, we would allow Immigration to contact the Social Security Administration when they find someone who is working illegally in the country so that they could stop payments to them. Present law does this, when illegal aliens are deported.

When Immigration notifies Social Security and says “We are deporting an individual, he has been working in the United States illegally,” then social security stops his benefits. That is present law. However present law also provides that if Immigration contacts Social Security and says, “We found this alien working illegally,” and that alien leaves the country voluntarily, then that illegal alien can continue to receive benefits even though he worked in the United States illegally.

It is a large loophole through which a large percentage of illegal aliens can receive or continue to receive benefits. I might add, according to this GAO study, the volume of benefits received versus the dollars contributed by aliens is enormous, basically because an individual contributes for a relatively short period of time.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. That is because of automatic raises in the system.

Mr. NICKLES. No; but because the alien works only half as long as an American beneficiary and then returns to his home country, where additional dependents are added who collect benefits for a long period of time. The ratio is about 23 received in benefits for every dollar contributed into the system. It is quite a drain on the social security system.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I wish to see the GAO report.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Washington.
Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I have a question which is in the same general area as the question of the Senator from New York. I did wish to inquire about the relationship between the Senator's amendment and the bill sponsored by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming which, of course, would grant legal status, eventually citizenship to a large number of people who are now illegal aliens.

Do I correctly understand this amendment, to the extent that any such person is granted permanent resident status in the United States and/or becomes a citizen, that person would be required to show proof of citizenship even though the entire status determination is after December 1984 because Immigration has requested adequate time?

Mr. NICKLES. That is part of the difficulty that might be envisioned by some of the questions asked by individual Senators, but to create the mechanism of showing that those who are not citizens have either derived their rights by way of the blue card or the green card, that is the green card from Immigration that it is OK to try to stay and receive a job or the blue card from the Department of Labor authorizing them to be able to work in a certain position.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy to yield for a question.

Mr. MELCHER. As one of the co-sponsors of this amendment, let me say that the intent is not to create a barrier that might be envisioned by some of the questions asked by individual Senators, but to create the mechanism of showing that those who are not citizens have either derived their rights by way of the blue card or the green card, that is the green card from Immigration that it is OK to try to stay and receive a job or the blue card from the Department of Labor authorizing them to be able to work in a certain position.

Mr. NICKLES. The amendment simply attempts, to close the drain off of Social Security for those who have not complied. It does not, I do not believe, attempt in any way to or create a restriction for somebody who was a citizen but who legally worked in the country, had a job and diligently performed that work for years. There is nothing to prevent that individual from receiving benefits.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy to yield for a question.

Mr. CHAFEE. I appreciate the sentiment in which this amendment has been offered by the Senator from Oklahoma, who has been concerned and has given a lot of attention to these matters, and justifiably so.

Let me just say about the amendment, that this is the type of amendment that if squared away completely, if we had hearings on it, if we completely understood it and the concerns that have been voiced here on the floor were taken care of, this is the type of amendment that would pass. In other words, I do not think it is necessay to have this amendment attached to the social security bill in order to have it passed. It could be deferred, and we would have a chance to review it and have hearings on it in the Finance Committee, and then come up, after careful consideration, and take care of the problems that were voiced on the floor.

But let me just say to the Senator from Oklahoma this whole area is fraught with difficulties. I am amazed that the Commissioner wrote the Senator this letter on March 18, because the Commissioner appeared before our committee on a simpler matter; namely, the payment of benefits to legal aliens. In this legislation that is before us on the floor, it provides that legal aliens who return overseas, in other words do not remain residents in the United States, can only collect for benefits what they have put into the fund plus interest. In other words, they cannot even collect from their employer's contribution.

Mr. Sahan was present when we were considering this and certainly did not take a position in favor of it. He voiced some concerns about the administrative problems. But the administrative problems that are involved in the Senator's amendment are far more difficult.

It seems to me, if we should adopt the Senator's amendment on the floor today, which I hope we will not and I hope the Senator will not press it, we are going to cause, I think, considerable hardship and unfairness to a host of people who are unable to prove certain facts going into the distant past.

It is a fact there has never been a hearing in the Finance Committee or, I believe, in the House Ways and Means Committee—and I cannot testify to that—on this matter. As a matter of fact, when this came up before the Ways and Means Committee, it was deferred on the insistence or the urging of Mr. Pickle, because they then had hearings on this matter. So it is not in the House bill.

In the Senate bill it was brought up and many of us felt—we are dealing solely with legal aliens and the payment to them overseas—and many of us felt that it was improper to proceed without more consideration with the difficulties involved.

Now the Senator is coming forward on the floor of the Senate with this amendment which, as has been pointed out by the Finance Committee, and I am anxious to hear what the Senator from Wyoming, who has worked long hours on this in connection with his immigration measure, has to say. Here out of the blue comes this measure. I think we should do great hardship to a host of potential beneficiaries.

Let me also say this: Never before, as I understand it, in the social security system, have we provided that they will get their benefits. That may be right. Perhaps it is correct. Perhaps in this group of illegal aliens, I cannot see that you make any provisions for those who come in illegally who subsequently become legal. But set that aside, maybe we want to take that step. But I think it is a much heavier step than only take after careful consideration and hearings on it.

It may well come out the way the Senator wants or a slight variation, but this is the type of amendment that can be added elsewhere separate from this bill and will certainly have a good deal of attention and I believe support normally from this body.

So I hope the Senator will not press his amendment.

(Mr. DURENBERGER assumed the chair.)

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the Senator yield for a comment on the point just made?

Mr. NICKLES. I will be happy to yield the floor unless the Senator has a question.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will put it in the form of a question.

As the Senator from Rhode Island indicated, the committee dealt with the problem of noncitizens who are not residents receiving social security benefits. In the legislation now pending before the Senate is a provision that limits the benefits paid to aliens who are not residents of the United States to the amount that they paid into the system plus interest. It is, I believe, applicable to aliens who were in this country legally or illegally. There is no distinction between them.

Therefore, that provision already in the legislation appears to take care of the principal concern expressed by the Senator from Oklahoma of an illegal alien who is discovered by the Immigration Service and is ordered to leave the country and subsequently leaves—and the Senator has expressed a legitimate concern and then, going back to the country of origin, receives benefits the same as other social security beneficiaries. That results in a return far greater than the amount of taxes paid.

I ask the Senator: Since that concern is already addressed in the legislation, is there any other reason to pursue this particular amendment? As I understood it, that was the Senator's principal concern in response to the questions raised here today.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate the Senator's question. The Lugar amendment—the existing language—that the Finance Committee has done in adopting the Lugar amendment—the existing language that is in the bill that is before us.

However, we would go a step further. Our amendment—where Immigration finds a person working illegally, and that那个人 would notify the Social Security Administration and say, "This person is working illegally and should not be entitled to these benefits." It gives them plenty of time to coordinate their computers. The amendment tells Immigration to work with Social Security. And, by January 1, 1986, the two agencies would be able to coordinate their efforts on this matter.

Let me go into this a little further. Currently, an alien can receive a social security card. They receive it for purposes that they type on the card, not for work purposes, but they can use it for credit cards, etcetera. However, Social Security has found that people use this social security card, even though they are not entitled to work legally in the United States, to earn and receive social security benefits. Now Social Security will be able to coordinate better with Immigration and say, “We have a person working illegally in the United States,” and they can contact SSA.

Mr. MITCHELL. I understand what the Senator is saying, that he wishes to extend the limitation on benefits to aliens who have been in this country based upon what their alien status is, whether they are legal or illegal. All I am saying is that the argument that the Senator has been using this afternoon in response to questions—that is, that we have to close this loophole that exists because when illegal aliens are discovered they then leave and go back to their countries and continue to receive benefits—is not a valid argument because that loophole is already closed in the provisions in the bill.

You have other reasons, and I understand that. The Senator wants to go beyond the bill.

All I am saying is that it does not seem to be a valid excuse as an argument for your amendment to choose a loophole that is already closed in the bill.

Mr. NICKLES. If I can go further, Immigration can find someone working illegally, and can contact Social Security. Presently, however, Social Security would keep sending out checks if the individuals did not leave the country. Those checks would still be received.

Mr. LEVIN. Would the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I am glad to yield.

Mr. LEVIN. If at the time a person applies for benefits they are here legally, and at the time they worked they were not here legally, would they receive benefits?

Mr. NICKLES. Yes. The answer to your question, Senator, is yes.

Mr. LEVIN. The amendment says the individual can receive benefits if at the time they can show that they are an alien who has been legally admitted to work but had always been illegal during that work time, now they are a legal resident though not a citizen.

Mr. NICKLES. The answer to your question is if they were not working and are not currently legally in the country, then, no, they would not.

Mr. LEVIN. The Senator is saying that he would deny benefits to persons who are legal residents of the United States who contributed to the social security fund, perhaps for 30 years, because they were not legal when they contributed even though they are legal residents.

Mr. NICKLES. We mention one of two things: If they are U.S. citizens or if they worked legally. I see where the Senator is trying to crowd somebody between those two things, but I do not see it as a likelihood.

Mr. LEVIN. I think it is very likely to work for 30 years and build up an account with the social security system. They then may very well want to become legal residents of this country so they could receive benefits from which they thought they were entitled.

For legislative history, however, this amendment would not permit benefits to persons who were legal at the time they apply if they were not legal at the time they worked, or otherwise entitled to benefits.

Mr. NICKLES. Again, I think the Senator is not interpreting my amendment correctly. If they were U.S. citizens or if they have legally been admitted to work, then they would receive benefits. The Senator is saying that they were not legal when they worked, that they worked 30 years illegally and 2 days later they applied for social security after they had become legal. If legal means they have American citizenship or have been granted amnesty or something other than American citizenship, then I intend that they would be able to apply for and receive benefits.

Mr. LEVIN. But that could be 5 or 10 years after their work life has been completed. They are now here legally but for the 30 or 30 years that they worked they were illegally.

Under this amendment, somebody who is legally a resident of the United States could be prohibited and would be prohibited from receiving benefits if at the time they worked in the United States they were here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. No, I do not think that is the case. Maybe this will help clarify the record, however.

Mr. LEVIN. One other question: I understand the Social Security Administration will accept money from people who are here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. The Social Security Administration right now has criteria for citizenship, legal or illegal. Mr. LEVIN. So they do accept money from people who are here illegally.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. Under this amendment, even though they accept money from folks who are here illegally they will not pay out any money unless they became citizens or became legal before they retire.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Let me refer again to the GAO study. GAO talks about the benefits paid out in relation to contributions paid, a ratio of about 23 to 1. In other words, 23 times the benefits received for every $1 contributed. That compares to a U.S. citizen of about $5 received for every $1 contributed. So we are still talking about a massive drain on the social security trust fund.

Mr. LEVIN. On that point, if the Senator will yield for a further question. Does the Senator provide that they would return to these folks the money contributed to the system if they do not get the benefit?

Mr. NICKLES. No. If an individual is working illegally, under present law they do not get their money returned and neither would they in this legislation.

Mr. LEVIN. If the Senator will yield for one further point, the legislation says that a person is otherwise entitled to benefits will not receive them unless they meet this test. My question is, if you are going to take away a benefit, to which a person is otherwise entitled, which they earned, do not at least want to return to that person the amount of money they contributed to the system? Is that not minimal fairness, if you take away benefits a person would otherwise be entitled to?

Mr. NICKLES. I will answer the question in the negative. How can a person earn a benefit if he worked illegally? It is against the law for the person to work in the United States. They are breaking the law.

Mr. LEVIN. Is it against the law to take his money into social security?

Mr. NICKLES. The person should not have the job and should not be contributing to the system in the first place.

Mr. LEVIN. But is social security breaking the law by taking his money.

Mr. NICKLES. There is a thought.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Will the Senator yield for a comment?

Mr. NICKLES. I would be happy, but I would like to present some concluding remarks.

Mr. MECHNER. Would the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. NICKLES. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. MECHNER. I think it is clear that Social Security takes the money, the contribution of both the employer and the employee. I reject the presumption that they are working legally. If we want to stipulate the social security should examine all of the employees and the employers to make sure they are legal, we can do so. But that proposition has not been presented. Social Security simply takes a contribution from the employee and the employer on the presumption that they are here legally.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, could I speak briefly? The Senator from Wyoming wants to speak also.

If I may say, it comes with little grace and ill-behoves the Social Security Administration to suddenly endorse this proposal with respect to illegal aliens, unknown quantity, unknown numbers, unknown locations, when this very Administration was lashed by its own testimony in the House Senate conference the actions of this Senate declaring that the Social Security Administration should produce a tamper-proof social security card, a card which would not be purloined on any street corner in El Paso, Texas, as it were. "No," said he, "we will not have anything to do with that."

He prevailed upon the House conference to turn down the position of the Senator in this regard. He could not care less about counterfeit cards.

Now along with this matter which I have to say, in my view, represents a violation of the 14th amendment’s rights, even of illegal aliens; it is confiscating property. I know the Senate Finance Committee, as the distinguished Senator from Rhode Island said, would be happy to have hearings on this. We would be happy to have the GAO come forward and tell us what they know, have people comment on it, listen, think about the constitutional issues, think about the whole range of effects which we do not now understand.

I would now like to cease in order to hear the Senator from Wyoming, who, I hope, will speak.

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I was just thinking how opportune it might be to unprint an amendment consisting of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983. This might be a dandy time to do that. But I shall not do that.

I am fascinated to hear this very serious debate, and it should be. I have heard phrases like "fraught with difficulty," "What are we really doing," and "What will be the impact." The good Senator from Michigan outlined some serious questions. The Senator from Nevada, in a fascinating statement on the social security system. There is much truth in there; much truth in what the Senator from Rhode Island says as well as the Senator from Montana, and particularly the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. President, I remain absolutely intrigued and fascinated by the debate, because it is with a strange sense of irony that I recall last year’s debate when we had the Supreme Court decision on who should bear the cost of training the children of illegal aliens. The Social Security Administration supervises of Los Angeles County came to the subcommittee to share with us that two-thirds of the children born in their largest hospital are born to illegal alien mothers; and the Los Angeles County supervisors are asking, who will bear that cost?

And now, today, we are justifiably concerned about the burden on our social security system created by benefit payments to undocumented workers. It is so much stuff in this one that I just say, welcome to the fray.

We already have laws that say if you are deported, there will be no benefits; but there is no way for the INS, with its present methods, to handle the immigration proceedings for the illegal aliens they apprehend. They do not have the personnel to deal with the numbers. The Chula Vista sector last week had 5,000 apprehensions in a single week, 60 miles south of our Mexican border. That is double any kind of activity like that ever happened in the history of that sector. That is the situation in the United States right now.

All of these concerns so ably addressed by so many various persons and philosophies just scratch the surface of the problem that has been created in this country by a singular national failure. The first duty of a sovereign nation is to control its borders, and we do not.

The other irony is the only other nation on the Earth that does not control its borders is the United States of Mexico. The problem on their southern border matches ours.

If we had had the courage to address the problem of immigration reform in Congress during the last 10 years, to follow the only possible solution, which is employer sanctions against those who knowingly hire illegal, undocumented workers, and to provide some form of employment verification which is not carried on the person but only available at the time of new hire—then the real issue is not how much do they leave on the table, how much do they take off, do they do work that American workers will not do—we would not have to address these issues today. The issue is this: When fake social security card and with that fake green card you receive a valid social security card, a valid AFL-CIO card, a valid Medicare card, a valid driver’s license and valid unemployment insurance coverage, you have gimmicked the systems of the United States and the systems were not built for that kind of gimmickry. They are not actuarially able to handle that kind of gimmickry.

The Social Security Administration testified one time that they are not really concerned about how many fake cards are out, because at the time someone sought benefits, they would have to show up as a live human being in front of a live interviewer. I said, "Well, that is one way to run a railroad. It is not exactly the way I would do it."

But we have developed some interesting things. These things and this matter we grapple with here are the wholly unpleasant situations that result from illegal immigration. They would not be facing us today, nor would we have the national disgrace of a forlorn, fearful, exploitied, illegal subsoilty of human beings numbering millions extant in these United States right now if we faced up to the root cause of the problem—loss of control of our borders.

Mr. President, we must adopt measures which are not nativist nor mean nor racist but we must reform what is asked the answer, cumbersome and unworkable immigration laws.

I thought I would get up and make that little plug for the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983 because she is legislation soon. Markup is coming at the end of this month. I call upon my colleagues to carefully examine the bill, which would solve this situation before us today.

There is never a good time for immigration reform. That I can assure my colleagues. But the discussion and debate on amendments to such as this because the strains on our society, the totally inappropriate results that will take place if we continue apathetically to do absolutely nothing and pretend uncontrolled illegal immigration is going to disappear. I trust congressional action to amend such as this bill, because the matter will be before us and will be pressed upon us again and again and it will never go away.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, Members of the body, I think the appeal by the Senator from Wyoming to look at the bigger picture is well in order. On the other hand, I am supporting this amendment, and have in cosponsorship from Oklahoma’s amendment.

I do not know what the Senator from Kansas will do when he wants to dispose of the debate on this amendment and the bill. I shall leave that to him. But I think the effort by the Senator from Wyoming to look at the bigger picture needs to be applied specifically to this amendment as well. The amendment is not offered solely in the vein that we want to save money from the social security funds, that we want to make it more sound, even though it will have that impact, according to the GAO report.

The broader picture is this: There are many law-abiding citizens of America, people who spend their whole lives abiding by the laws in this country, they also have the oddity that they expect other people to abide by the law in this country. They see efforts of people who are not law-abiding citizens to dip into the till and to threaten the financial soundness of a system that they pay into, and they do not like it.

I think their concern goes even beyond that and points to something that ought to concern us. That is the necessity of reestablishing credibility in the social security system. People who are working today, paying into the system, paying high taxes—every one of them would ask us who are out at the grassroots, is there going to be any money there for them to draw from?

It is the same way with those citizens who are retired today, drawing out of the system. They, too, wonder about the soundness of the system. It is not as credible a system with them as it was one, two, or three decades ago. People who are illegally in the country who have, legally or illegally, been paying into the system is not the point. The issue is that some are illegally in this country drawing out of that system, affecting the soundness of it, bringing about a lack of confidence in it, and that is something we must deal with. That is a broader picture we have to deal with. This amendment by the Senator from Oklahoma just deals with a very small portion of our effort to reestablish credibility in the system.

As you think about the people you meet on the streets of the little towns and rural areas of your State, stop to think how many times you have been asked about people who are illegally in the country drawing out of the system and whether it has been a plan that is a stop to be put to practice. This amendment does not deal with the situation totally, but it deals with it to some degree. If we would respond affirmatively to this problem, as we have tried to do with other provisions in the bill now before the Senate, then we would help reestablish that credibility. That is the greater concern that we all ought to have. The immigration problem, reestablishing control over our borders, is a major concern that we also must consider. We have the great deal to do with the credibility of our political system and our boundaries and with our institutions in responding to those concerns. It is pretty much the same way with the social security system.

This system was established 40, 50 years ago, and it is a very integral part of the social fabric of America. We want to maintain it as such. A necessary part of that is to help everybody have more confidence in it. So it is in that vein that I am supporting this amendment, not because it deals in any way with the financial soundness of the social security system.

A broader, more encompassing provision is included in the social security package reported from the Senate Committee on Finance which limits the greater concern that we all ought to have. The specific recommendation adopted by the committee and included in S. 1 would significantly tighten eligibility requirements for aliens living abroad. The bill denies benefits to alien dependents of alien workers who were added while outside the United States. This specific provision gets at the very heart of the problem where alien beneficiaries acquire a tremendous number of dependents after they have left this country. The bill also recognizes several sensitive and complex policy issues by paying benefits to workers who are citizens of a country with which the United States has a reciprocal social security coverage arrangement.

For those aliens who continue to qualify for social security benefits, the individual would receive benefits until such time as he had received an amount equal to what he paid into social security plus interest.

The need for such legislation has become increasingly evident over the past few years. And has been amplified by the previously mentioned GAO study outlining the phenomenal magnitude of this fraud. Let me briefly summarize some of the startling findings of that report. 34 percent of all dependents abroad were added to the social security rolls after the wage earner became entitled to benefits. And approximately 84 percent of such dependents were aliens.

GAO also discovered alien retirees have worked less time in covered employment and have paid less social security taxes than the average American worker. Of the 313,000 social security beneficiaries living abroad in 1981, GAO estimated 194,000 were aliens. Perhaps the most startling finding was that where U.S. retirees receive about $5 for each dollar paid into the system, the average alien receives $23 in benefits for every tax dollar paid into social security. It is truly disgraceful when the laws of this Nation allow us to treat aliens better than we treat our own citizens. Congress has this opportunity to tighten up one area of glaring mismanagement in the current system. It is only appropriate that during the consideration of such a monumental reform package as S. 1, we include this measure which does not affect a single U.S. citizen. I hope my colleagues in the House will also see fit to embrace this long overdue change.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record a letter from the Commissioner of Social Security.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Hon. Donald L. Nickles, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Nickles: As we have discussed, I agree with your amendment to deny Social Security benefits to illegal aliens. We will work closely with the Immigration and Naturalization Service to identify new Social Security applicants who are illegal workers and in effect save the country under threat of deportation.

The kind of amendment you are proposing represents an important first step in the process of dealing with this serious and growing problem.

We look forward to working with the Congress after the pending legislation is enacted to find ways of dealing with the broader issue of payment of Social Security benefits to noncitizens and nonresidents.

Sincerely,

John A. Swahn, Commissioner.

EXHIBIT I

DRAFT OF A PROPOSED REPORT—SHOULD SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFITS BE PAID TO ALIENS ABROAD AND ALIENS WHO WORKED ILLEGALLY WHILE IN THE UNITED STATES?

(This document is a draft of a proposed report of the General Accounting Office. It was prepared by GAO's staff as a basis for obtaining advance review and comment by those having responsibilities concerning the subject discussed in this draft. It has not been fully reviewed within GAO and is, therefore, subject to revision.

Receipents of this draft must not show or release its contents for purposes other than official review and comment on circumstances. At all times it must be safeguarded to prevent publication or other improper disclosure of the information contained therein. This draft and all copies thereof remain the property of, and must be returned on demand to, the General Accounting Office.)

In this report GAO examines the circumstances under which Social Security benefits are paid to alien retirees and dependents abroad. GAO also questions the propriety of continuing to allow aliens, who work in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act, to earn social security credits.

The first issue centers on a set of Congressional concerns that have been voiced from time to time since the Social Security Act of 1935. Congress alter the pending legislation is enacted is designed to curtail benefits to aliens abroad, GAO also questions the propriety of continuing to allow aliens, who work in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act, to earn social security credits.

The Social Security Act does not restrict benefits to citizens or to only people living in the U.S. However, when social security benefits began in 1940, there were only 100 beneficiaries abroad who received $12,000. In 1981, the number of beneficiaries abroad who received $1 billion. Of the 313,000 beneficiaries, 194,000 (62 percent) were aliens and most of these were alien dependents.

GAO found that 34 percent of all dependents abroad were added to the social security rolls after the wage earner became entitled to benefits. About 84 percent of such dependents were aliens. (See table G-1.)

Over 1,000,000 beneficiaries abroad received nearly $1 billion. Of the 313,000 beneficiaries, 194,000 (62 percent) were aliens and most of these were alien dependents.

In 1986 the Congress enacted legislation designed to curtail benefits to aliens abroad, but because of the many exceptions included in the legislation, it has had little effect.

working in the U.S. was discussed during hearings before the House Subcommittee on Government Operations in November 1973. A member of this Committee stated, in part, that it seems unfair to the American and other law-abiding citizens that aliens could participate in illegal activity—working in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act and earn social security benefits. If their work had indeed been legal, they would not have been permitted employment; instead they might have been deporting aliens who are formally deported for illegal work in the U.S., they do not earn benefits. The member of Congress asserted that these wages/earnings were, in effect, illegally obtained with regard to the Immigration and Nationality Act. He further stated that if the employment upon which the entitlement is based was illegal, the law should require that the benefits be disallowed.

If legal resident and employment status were required in order to earn social security credits, we believe SSA could enforce these requirements during the two-phase process. In the first phase, SSA could delete any earnings and credits derived from such earnings when it discovers that an alien has reported earnings while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act.

The second phase of the enforcement process could be applied when aliens or the alien's employment file appears to be illegal for benefits. At that time, SSA could require that sufficient evidence be provided by the claimant that the wage earner was in legal and authorized employment when his social security credits were earned. Otherwise, no credits would be allowed for earnings during any calendar quarter when the wage earner was in violation of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Conclusion

The Social Security Act does not prohibit aliens from earning entitlement to Social Security benefits based on earnings derived from covered employment in the U.S., even if the individual was a legal resident, or engaged in unauthorized employment.

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act, both types of aliens may be deported if discovered to be illegal residents or violating their immigration status by engaging in unauthorized employment.

There is a gap between the provisions of the Social Security Act and the Immigration and Nationality Act, which enables unauthorized aliens to earn entitlement to Social Security benefits while violating the Immigration and Nationality Act. Consequently, millions of aliens both legal and illegal may have engaged, in unauthorized employment and earned entitlement to Social Security benefits. If the alien is a wage earner, payment of these workers could have on the trust funds depend on their numbers and benefit levels.

The Congress may wish to consider whether aliens who work illegally in the U.S. should be allowed to earn entitlement to social security benefits for such work. If the Congress decides that aliens should not earn credits for illegal work, it could require proof of legal immigrant status before benefits are paid.

Mr. MATTLINGLY. Mr. President, I am pleased to support the efforts of the Senator from Oklahoma which rectifies inconsistencies in current law concerning social security payments to individuals who have worked in America. The National Security Act’s amendment will give the Social Security fund administration authority to stop payment of benefits or credits from going to any alien who is in violation of U.S. employment and resident laws. In addition, it would require the wage earner or dependent to provide sufficient evidence to the Social Security Administration that they were working and living legally in the United States.

Time and again throughout the past few weeks, as I have discussed the crisis the social security system is facing with citizens from Georgia, they have expressed their frustrations over misuse and abuse of the program. Often, they have mentioned this very issue, that benefits to illegal aliens. The citizenry of America realize that those who operate outside of the laws of this Nation should not be allowed to reap the benefits of Federal programs designed to aid our citizens. I believe recognition of this fact and action by the Congress is long overdue. Again, I am pleased to co-sponsor the amendment of my colleague from Oklahoma.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, as a co-sponsor of this amendment, I rise to urge my colleagues to adopt its provisions. I previously co-sponsored the Senate version of Oklahoma’s legislation, S. 595, which would accomplish the purposes of this amendment, and would also reduce benefits to aliens living abroad. The average alien abroad has been receiving $23 dollars for each month estimated, compared to the average American wage earner receiving $5 for each $1 contributed.

The purposes of the latter aspect of S. 595 was adopted by the Senate Finance Committee in their recommendations for this bill. I commend Senator Lugar and those members of the committee for this action.

The Government Accounting Office estimates that illegal aliens in America may be receiving from $900 million annually in social security benefits to $2.4 billion annually. When Americans are asked to make the sacrifices we are asking in military service, a government program to package to save the social security system, how can we allow aliens who have worked illegally in this country, who have perhaps prevented American workers from receiving gainful employment during this time of high unemployment, to skim possibly $2 billion from the depleted social security coffers?

I applaud my friend, the Senator from Oklahoma, for introducing both the legislation and this amendment to resolve glaring inequities in the current law. These inequities no doubt evolved unintentionally, but they are inequities which I am sure most Americans will want corrected now.

Mr. LIECHTENSTEIN. Mr. President, I want to voice my opposition to the amendment offered by Senator Nickles from this which would eliminate social security benefits for some individuals who worked and contributed to the social security system while they were in this country illegally.

I share the Senator’s concern of not encouraging or rewarding illegal immigration into this country. However, I could not support his amendment because it was overbroad and confiscatory.

I can understand why someone might want to stop the payment of social security benefits to individuals who are in this country illegally at the time that they are receiving the benefits.

But it is unfair to deprive an individual of social security benefits who has paid into the system for a number of years and who is now in this country on a legal basis, because they were here illegally when they were working. For example, under the amendment it would be possible for an individual to come into this country illegally and work for 40 years. During that entire time, they could have paid social security taxes. They could then go back to the same country for a few years, and then be readmitted to the country legally based on family bonds which may have been established earlier. Under the Nickles amendment, this individual would be ineligible for receiving social security benefits. The amendment specifies that benefits could only be collected if the individual can show that he is a U.S. citizen, or was once a U.S. citizen but has relinquished that status, or was once an alien who has legally admitted to work but gave up that status, or is now an alien who has been legally admitted to work. In the example just given, it is possible for an individual not to meet any of these criteria. Specifically, although the 70-year-old individual may be in this country legally now, she or he was admitted because of family bonds and not admitted “to work.” I find it hard to believe that the authers of this amendment intended this effect, but it is the effect, nevertheless.

Also, this amendment is confiscatory because it would prohibit the payment of any social security benefits which are based on those working periods during which they were in this country illegally. In this case, the individual would not even be able to receive that portion of the social security benefits which were made up totally of their earlier contribution into the system.

I, therefore, oppose the adoption of the Nickles amendment, even though I share some of the frustration and anger of people with the present system and believe we should find equitable ways of avoiding rewards or encouragement for illegal immigration.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I cannot speak for the Committee on Finance, but I certainly know the sentiments of its members and that this is a serious subject. We have major provisions in the current law with respect to illegal aliens residing abroad and receiving benefits, one which involves in effect taking from them their employer contributions, which were certainly a property right as fas as I am concerned, but we did anyway. There is much to be learned. The Senator from Wyoming has spoken eloquently and calmly about the complexities. We will address those complexities in hearings and in orderly legislation which this body will not fail to take up, I am sure. Therefore, Mr. President, without prejudice to the provisions of the amendment as such but because we do not know enough about the subject and must learn much more, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) is necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) is absent due to an illness in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. BUMPERS), the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON), the Senator from Colorado (Mr. HART), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. FOLLIS), and the Senator from Georgia (Mr. NUNN) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) is absent because of illness in the family.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 58, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Oklahoma, Amendment No. 90.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for 1 second?

Mr. MEETZENBAUM. I yield. Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas understands first the Senator from Ohio, Senator MEETZENBAUM, has an amendment pending. That will be modified by an amendment by Senators Finken, Dixon, and Levin. When that is completed—and I understand the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma will speak in opposition to the amendment—we have an amendment from the distinguished Senators from Kentucky, Senator Finken and Hyneman. That will be followed by a colloquy between myself and the Senator from Kentucky, Senator Finken. That will be followed by an amendment by the distinguished minority leader, to which I am not certain there is no objection, followed by an amendment of my own from Kansas.

I think, depending on the length of debate, if we can just stay on this area we might take care of a lot of the unemployment matters now.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 88, AS MODIFIED

Mr. MEETZENBAUM. Mr. President, I have an amendment pending at the desk and I now ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to send a modification of that amendment to the desk with the understanding that the Senators from Illinois and the Senators from Michigan may be permitted to reinsert the language which will be deleted from my amendment and without modifying or amending any of the language that I am dealing with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COCHRAN). Is there objection to the request? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MEETZENBAUM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senators RIDGE, and Levin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will report the amendment, the modification.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Ohio (Mr. METZENBAUM) proposes a modification to his amendment numbered UP 88.

Mr. MEETZENBAUM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

On page 236, line 7, strike out "30" and insert "25%".

On page 236, line 9, strike out "40" and insert "35%".

On page 237, line 9, strike out "30" percent, 40 percent, 50 percent, and insert "25 percent, 35 percent, 50 percent".

On page 237, line 12, strike out the quotation marks and the second period.

On page 247, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

(9) Any interest otherwise due from a State during a calendar year after 1982 may be deferred (and no interest shall accrue on such deferred interest) for a grace period of not to exceed 9 months if, for such calendar year in which the interest was due, the State had an average unemployment rate of 10 percent or greater.

Mr. MEETZENBAUM. Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment and the modifications which are to be suggested, which are to be offered, in a second degree by the Senator from H-
The severity of the State's employment problem brought Governor Thompson to Washington to testify earlier this month before the Finance Committee to ask for some temporary relief from the interest and penalties being placed on Illinois. He requested that the 10-percent interest on new net borrowing be reduced, and subsequently asked for my help and the help of Senator Dixon in eliminating the compounded interest on this debt. My preference would be that we do as Governor Thompson suggested and make both of these changes.

The pending amendment seeks to cover only the elimination of compounded interest. We have discussed this in great detail with the distinguished manager of the bill. We recognize the problem, because we do recognize all incentives for fixing the States' unemployment systems. In providing these interest incentives, however, we must be sure not to place burdens on the States which would place them beyond the point of no return.

Over the last 10 years, the Federal unemployment trust fund has been strained by State borrowing attributed to two causes: A series of economic downturns in the last decade which have hit some States harder than others; and the inability of many States to either raise taxes or reduce benefits to their unemployment systems. It soon became clear, however, that Senator Doi's efforts to encourage States to put their unemployment systems in order. For this reason, I oppose attempts to eliminate the compounding interest on this debt. My preference would be that we do not allow these provisions to go into effect.

The Senate has passed the amendment. It is silent as to the Senator from Ohio, who has been added as a cosponsor of the pending amendment. The amendment is as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from Ohio add the following:

On page 235, lines 12 through 14, strike out "Interest shall accrue on such deferred portion immediately preceding the date on which the interest is otherwise due. A State would qualify for Interest due October 1, 1983, the change would have to affect benefits and employment in the calendar year 1984.

The committee bill is silent as to the calendar year the States' action must affect in order to qualify for deferral. I now address this comment to the manager of the bill. If I may have his attention for just one moment, if I could have the attention of the manager of the bill for one moment, Senator Doi— I apologize to the Senator from Nevada— it is my understanding that in determining if a State qualifies for interest deferral for interest due Octo- ber 1, 1983, you look at the effect of the benefits and the tax changes in calendar year 1983, and I believe that my interpretation of that conforms with the staff on that subject. Would you confirm that for me, please.

The interpretation is a proper one. 1983 would be the base year used for a determination on deferral of the interest owed in that year.

Mr. METZENBAUM. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Now, another part of my amendment would provide that a State with high unemployment would be able to qualify for a 9-month grace period in which to remit the interest charges which are due. A State would qualify for this relief only if it has an average adjusted unemployment rate of less than 13.5 percent for the 12-month period immediately preceding the date on which the interest is otherwise due. I hope the Senate will see fit to adopt the amendment but I believe there are two other portions of my amendment that I very strongly support, and it is now my understanding that the Senate from Illinois on behalf of himself, Senator Dixon, myself is prepared to offer that language that was originally in our amendment and has been set aside in order to accommodate the Senators from Illinois.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague and my fellow midwesterner from Ohio for yielding for this purpose.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 93 TO UP AMENDMENT NO. 88 AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To provide that deferred interest shall not be subject to further interest.)

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I send an amendment which shall accrue on such deferred interest in the same manner as under paragraph (3)(C), and Insert "no interest shall accrue on such deferred interest"

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, the pending amendment is that I have at the desk I offer on behalf of my distinguished colleague, Senator Dixon, who is the principal cosponsor. I wish to state that he has worked on every aspect of this problem with me. His vast experience in the Illinois government has been substantial in the States' responsibilities to reduce benefits and increase contributions so that we can meet the problem faced by the State.

We are joined by Senators HEINZ, HUMBLESTON, FORD, RANDOLPH, BOSCHWITZ, GLENN, and SPECTER as cosponsors.

Mr. President, I would also like to express my appreciation to Senator Doi for working so closely with us on this amendment as I have at the desk. I offer on behalf of my distinguished colleague, Senator Dixon, who is the principal cosponsor. I wish to state that he has worked on every aspect of this problem with me. His vast experience in the Illinois government has been substantial in the States' responsibilities to reduce benefits and increase contributions so that we can meet the problem faced by the State.

We are joined by Senators HEINZ, HUMBLESTON, FORD, RANDOLPH, BOSCHWITZ, GLENN, and SPECTER as cosponsors.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I also wish to urge the conferees on this bill to consider reducing the interest rate, as well.

Let there be no mistake about it, I support Senator Doi's efforts to encourage States to put their unemployment systems in order. For this reason, I oppose attempts to eliminate the compounding interest on this debt. My preference would be that we do as Governor Thompson suggested and make both of these changes.

The pending amendment seeks to cover only the elimination of compounded interest. We have discussed this in great detail with the distinguished manager of the bill. We recognize the problem, because we do recognize all incentives for fixing the States' unemployment systems. In providing these interest incentives, however, we must be sure not to place burdens on the States which would place them beyond the point of no return.

Over the last 10 years, the Federal unemployment trust fund has been strained by State borrowing attributed to two causes: A series of economic downturns in the last decade which have hit some States harder than others; and the inability or unwillingness of many States to either raise taxes or reduce benefits to keep their systems in balance. Because borrowing was interest-free until last year, there was very little incentive for States to make the maximum efforts to reduce their own liabilities in order.

In 1981, Congress faced the problem of attempting to balance two conflicting needs. It was our responsibility to make sure that the Federal trust fund remains fiscally sound so that it can continue to service the urgent funding needs of high unemployment States. Unnecessary borrowing was to be discouraged and States were to be given new incentives to tighten up their own systems. It soon became clear, however, that the States with the greatest debts to the Federal trust fund were States with continuing high rates of unemployment and severe economic conditions.
problems which made them least able to repay their debt in the foreseeable future.

In the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981, Congress enacted a legislation calling for 10 percent interest payments on new net borrowing which was intended to decrease borrowing from the Federal Government.

In addition, some relief was made available to States with high unemployment problems by allowing employers to, voluntarily, under certain conditions, for a cap on the so-called penalty tax.

When the legislation reached the Senate floor, I offered an amendment, along with my colleague ALAN DIXON, to enable the State of Illinois to qualify for this relief, and the issue was ultimately resolved on the floor.

Since that time, economic conditions in my State have deteriorated. The 1982 unemployment insurance deficit in Illinois was $800 million and, even if the State had paid benefits at the level of the national average, our high unemployment rates could have caused a deficit, estimated to be about $545 million. This is in spite of a substantial effort to reduce the costs of the State system by enactment of a $500 million package in 1981 of increased taxes and reduced benefits.

Senate colleagues, the speed of illness, and many similarly situated States, is intended to decrease bor-al Government for unemployment insurance.

As we all know, there are many reasons for these debts, and the solution to solving one. I wish to say to my distinguished friend from Louisiana, who has been kind enough to listen to my concerns in regard to this problem in my State and many similarly situated States, that through the leadership of our Governor and the State legislature, along with other business leaders, we are working on the final details of a package of $1.151 billion in tax increases and $777.3 million in benefit cuts to shore up this system.

Now, that is a pretty bitter pill to swallow. It will be introduced as an amendment to House bill 227, which is currently before the Illinois State Labor and Commerce Committee. This is in addition to $500 million in reduced benefits and increased taxes in 1981.

This is a major change, Mr. President. But it is necessary in order to show the Federal Government that our State is making a substantial effort to meet a very substantial problem. I do not want to leave the impression that Illinois has been irresponsible, for we have not. Our tax effort is not only as well—27 percent above and 12th in the Nation to be exact. But we are also third among 10 large States in unemployment, with a 13.5 percent rate in February. The length and depth of this recession is something that was never figured into our unemployment insurance system. It is designed to have some surplus in good times to carry States through during the bad. But the bad times have endured longer than that system could support.

I believe that any assistance that the Federal Government can offer to the 31 borrowing States should be, in effect, a partnership of responsibility.

The States should show a goodfaith effort at making change in their systems which will contribute to improving the economy and reducing the national problem—it is not the sole responsibility of States and local areas.

Our economic difficulties affect each State, and have an impact on the world economy as well. Therefore, it is right for the Federal Government to be involved in aiding States to pay back their debts.

We are not asking for forgiveness of these debts. We are asking for a rea-sable way of allowing us to pay them, a way which will not jeopardize the overall recovery effort. If we tax businesses to the point where they lock their doors and lay off more people, rather than hiring those already out of work, unemployment will increase, and unemployment solvency pro-lem will be exacerbated. If we cut benefits to the point where people cannot meet even their most basic needs, then the system is no longer doing what it should.

The amendment proposed by Senator Percy and myself, as well as others, would accomplish the reduction of interest being proposed by the Fiance Committee. It would eliminate the accrual of interest on the interest payments being deferred under the plan. This will mean a savings of that interest on interest of $30 to $40 million for Illinois, over the 5 years.

Again, I commend my friend from Louisiana, the ranking member, RUSSELL LONG; and my colleague from Ohio, who has accommodated us.

I earnestly hope that the Members of this body will support us in this effort to help those very tragically affected major States of this Union which have suffered under a terrible burden of high unemployment for a great many months.

Mr. HEINZ, Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the amendment of Senator from Illinois, Senator Percy.
I agree with him in every respect in his excellent analysis of the situation of States like Illinois, Pennsylvania, and others, that are bar-dened heavily with the costs of this recession, which have been forced out of work for longer periods than we have experienced in our recent memory.

His amendment will eliminate the interest on the interest, the com-ounding. Frankly, in my judgment, it is a very small step we should take to improve the Finance Committee packages.

I particularly want to emphasize his point that it would be extremely helpful to States like Pennsylvania, Illinois, and other of the urban, industrial States that are having to set their houses in order, if the interest that is being involved in aiding States to pay back their debts.

It is my understanding—and I would like the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee if he would be so kind as to respond—whether in 1983 there would be a revenue loss or additional borrowing to the Federal Government somewhere in the neighborhood of between $230 million and $320 million. Does the Senator from Kansas know if that is approximately correct, depending on the number of States?

Mr. DOLE. I am advised that is approximately correct.

Mr. HEINZ. In 1984 there would be a favorable impact on the Federal Government in the way of reduced borrowing of somewhere between $700
Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, first, let me say to my distinguished colleague that I have listened attentively to his concerns. I very much appreciate his willingness not to object at this time. As a former Governor, I think he can walk in the shoes of Governors of States such as Illinois that have such a tremendous influx of immigration.

We have a problem unlike Oklahoma's, in many respects, where we have the problem of unemployment. We do stand 10th, because of the very high cost of living, among States in benefits paid, whereas Oklahoma, because of its more favorable conditions, is 49th in that regard and owes no debt whatsoever. Illinois' debt is a crushing $2 billion.

In answer to the specific question of whether we should sunset this in 2 years, I think it would cause some real concerns. The compounding which I think he is speaking of, would not have kicked in until 1985. But anyway, thus, a 2-year sunset would provided little relief. I assure my colleague that our Governor and State legislature, as testified to by my distinguished colleague (Mr. Dixon), are doing everything conceivable to face up to this situation—reduce benefits, increase the income to this fund, and reduce this debt—just as rapidly as they possibly can.

"Twelve years may simply be too soon. This compound interest compound the problem, obviously. Emotionally, as I explained privately to my distinguished colleague, this has been a source of great agitation and concern."

I think this step alone—I hope in conference, we can look at the rate we actually do charge. Even with adoption of the amendments before us, Illinois will have $70 million in interest alone added to its debt owed the Federal Government. Compounding of this interest would place excessive and unnecessary burdens on a State already under tremendous strain. Given these factors, I hope we would not eliminate compounding for only 2 years.

Mr. BOREN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. PERCY. Yes.

Mr. BOREN. There is not a provision like this in the House bill, is that correct, at this time?

Mr. DIXON. There is not.

Mr. BOREN. Therefore, in terms of the proposal we are talking about now, there would be no possibility that the figures would come out of the conference any less stringent; the least possible stringent standards that would come out would be the standards in this bill. However, I do think that we should take the position that we are so locked into what we have done in the past that we shall not consider the suffering that is going on in parts of this country right now.

I know the people in my State have been fortunate. We are one of the two most fortunate States in this category. It is also partly because we have had the most massive changes in our unemployment compensation laws. That is part of it, too, at the States level. We have completely rewritten our law in the past decade.

We do have a strong feeling that we are a part of this country and that we cannot stand by and see others suffering in other parts of the country without, its next year, Compounding on our own people. We do want to be helpful to those in other parts of the country.

Mr. President, I shall just say I am not going to lodge any objection. I shall not oppose this amendment. I appreciate the sensitivity that my colleagues have expressed to the need to keep the system stringent so that we do not just open the doors so widely that States no longer have the incentive to take action. I hope that we can hold this at this point now and that we shall not see further attempts in the future to weaken the standards.

I appreciate the time of my colleagues, but I do think it wise that we have an airing of this. I can say to all of them that they have been very persuasive and forceful in the arguments that they have made. I am sure the people in their States appreciate the efforts which they have made here, on the floor, in the committee.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I think we are going to concur on this matter. I think there is pretty general agreement that it is a good amendment. Do I understand the Senator from Michigan, Mr. Levin, wishes to be recognized to speak on this matter on which he is a cosponsor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, let me just thank my friend from Oklahoma for his usual reasonable approach on this. As he knows, we spoke on this in private and after this amendment is accepted and adopted, I shall be offering an amendment which does the same as the earlier act, avoiding compounding the interest on the tougher act, which would have been months ago—just as the Percy-Dixon-Metzenbaum amendment would avoid compounding it on this act.

I just wanted the Senator to know that I shall be offering that. I do thank him very much for his position.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments that my colleagues have made. I did come to the floor because I am concerned. As I say, we have made such progress in the Committee on Finance on this subject, I think it is something we do not want to engage in a massive retreat from. At that time, I do not think that we should take the position that we are so locked into what we have done in the past that we shall not consider the suffering that is going on in parts of this country right now.

I know the people in my State have been fortunate. We are one of the two most fortunate States in this category. It is also partly because we have had the most massive changes in our unemployment compensation laws. That is part of it, too, at the States level. We have completely rewritten our law in the past decade.

We do have a strong feeling that we are a part of this country and that we cannot stand by and see others suffering in other parts of the country without, its next year, Compounding on our own people. We do want to be helpful to those in other parts of the country.

Mr. President, I shall just say I am not going to lodge any objection. I shall not oppose this amendment. I appreciate the sensitivity that my colleagues have expressed to the need to keep the system stringent so that we do not just open the doors so widely that States no longer have the incentive to take action. I hope that we can hold this at this point now and that we shall not see further attempts in the future to weaken the standard.

I appreciate the time of my colleagues, but I do think it wise that we have an airing of this. I can say to all of them that they have been very persuasive and forceful in the arguments that they have made. I am sure the people in their States appreciate the efforts which they have made here, on the floor, in the committee.

March 18, 1983

S 3367

about the business of reforming the State systems.

I understand that a number of Senators are cosponsors of this amendment, including Senators DURBERGER, BOSCHWITZ, FORD, HUGGOLDTON, and RANDOLPH. I have been discussing with Senator Pacy why we cannot change the interest charged on State borrowing. We have made a reduction, in cases where the States have made big changes. But the interest rate charged the States on new loans is the same interest rate that the Federal Government pays the solvent States with respect to their unemployment accounts deposited in the U.S. Treasury. The interest charged to the States is capped at 10 percent. Thus, the States are charged a fair interest consistent with the interest rate paid by the U.S. Government.

So I would say to Senators that I realize that they are going to have inquiries from their Governors and others as to why we cannot get the interest rates down.

Well, we suggested to the Governors that we could pay them less interest on the reserves and charge less interest on borrowing, but that did not seem to ring the right bell.

I want to assure everyone that we believe we have provided some relief to the States who face a difficult time and serious unemployment problems. At the same time we have not gone overboard on relief. We know there are other States watching what we do to see if we are discriminating against States who refused to borrow but chose instead to tighten their programs.

The Finance Committee reported a responsible loan and interest relief provision which is deserving of the support of the full Senate. The committee developed a plan which will allow a State to spread the interest it owes on borrowing from the Federal Government over a 5-year period. The State can also qualify for a reduction of 1 percent in the interest rate charged on borrowing. Additionally, a State which does not qualify for the full cap on the loss of Federal unemployment tax (FUTA) credit may now qualify for a partial cap. This is good on the State’s part for this relief is, of course, necessary. The Finance Committee proposal requires States to make progress toward solvency of 50 percent the first year, 40 percent the second year, and 50 percent the third year to qualify. Senator METZENBAUM’s amendment changes those levels to 25 percent and 35 percent. If the State makes an effort to reach solvency which increases those percentages to 50, 60, and 90, the interest on the borrowed funds will be reduced by 1 percent.

This limited relief will have a Federal budget impact. The loss of interest paid to the Federal Government could total as much as $319 million in fiscal year 1983 and $483 million in fiscal year 1984. The partial cap of the FUTA credit loss will also have an impact—$145 million in fiscal year 1984 and $290 million in fiscal year 1985. However, the committee recognized the fact that the current recession has been deeper and more prolonged than we expected in the summer of 1981 when the interest requirement was enacted. Therefore, the committee was ready to make some temporary changes in the current law. In order to allow States extra time to enact the necessary State law changes to bring their programs closer to solvency.

Some background may be helpful to put this whole issue in perspective. Twenty-six States, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands have totally exhausted their unemployment benefit reserves. These jurisdictions have received Federal loans of over $16 billion. How much more borrowing is certain. The account in the Federal unemployment trust fund from which loans to States are made is insolvent and general Treasury borrowing has become necessary. In total, over $1.5 billion has been loaned to the States over the last 10 years.

Obviously, the current insolvency of the unemployment trust fund is not a new development. In fact, in the early and mid-1970’s, 25 States and jurisdictions depleted their trust fund reserves and received loans from the Federal Treasury. Many of the debtor States repaid their advances. However, 11 of the 25 States have been in debt continuously since then, and 4 others have repaid loans only to borrow again relatively short time later. Obviously, a number of States did not permit reserves to build up in their trust funds during the recovery years as is the purpose of the account system. Some States, such as Pennsylvania, instead use the brighter economic picture as an excuse to lower taxes and increase benefits.

Under the law in effect in the 1970’s, it made good fiscal sense for a State to borrow from the Federal Government to meet benefit costs. After all, the loans were interest free and repayment was not required for up to 2 to 3 years after the loan was made. A State’s employers were supposed to experience a loss of the credit against the Federal unemployment tax, but Congress and the IRS allowed a delay of the offset. Credit reductions were not imposed for loans outstanding from 1973-80. Finally, credit reductions were enacted and, as of January 1, 1983, 16 States and jurisdictions are experiencing reductions which will cost them $250 million for the 1984 fiscal year.

Congress recognized that the brakes had to be applied to unlimited State borrowing. In the 1981 Reconciliation Act, we enacted the interest and loan reform provisions which a number of States are seeking to implement this year. First, interest of up to 10 percent is now charged on loans made after April 1, 1982, except those classified as ‘‘cash-flow.” Second, States are allowed to ‘‘cap’’ the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met. Since the enactment of these provisions, some 22 States have made changes in their State laws to qualify.

A number of States have made truly remarkable reforms—Michigan and Louisiana are the primary examples.

Other States have, unfortunately, chosen not to take the high road. Instead, those States have continued to borrow and to incur large interest liabilities. Some have expressed the view that Congress will ‘‘bail’’ them out by eliminating or ‘‘forgiving’’ the interest liabilities. Some States even believe that the Congress will forgive old loans and reschedule payment of new loans. We have heard some States say that they will simply refuse to pay and that the Federal Government will be unable to enforce the interest charges. Other States threaten to increase the taxes on employers in the State to pay the interest shares.

Few States have been willing to make the reforms necessary to eliminate or at least reduce the need for borrowing.

What does State borrowing and the failure to repay loans mean to non-borrowing States? In essence, it means an increase on every citizen in the solvent, responsible States. The Federal Treasury does not borrow in the private marketplace interest free. The cost of Federal borrowing contributes to the deficit and is thus passed on to every taxpayer.

The Finance Committee proposal responds to the needs of the debtor States, but it does not ignore the solvent States. Further changes which may be proposed on the floor or suggested in conference could upset the balance which the Finance Committee attempted to establish. Allowing States to escape interest charges is not just the right thing to do. The Administration has attempted to establish standards for the States with fiscally sound programs to subsidize States that fail to balance benefit expenditures against tax revenues.

Providing relief to States simply on the basis of unemployment rates higher than the national average ignores the fact that a number of States with high unemployment—Oregon and Alaska, for example—have not borrowed and have instead reformed their programs to bring outlays and expenditures closer into balance.

I urge my colleagues to support the Finance Committee loan and interest provision modifications with no further changes. We are close to the point at which the administration may just refuse to approve loan and interest relief at all. Let us not jeopardize what we have accomplished.

Mr. SPECTER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SPECTER).

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Kansas and the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma for their comments in support of these amendments which will provide significant relief for States like Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, and Ohio.

After listening to the debate on the subject this afternoon, I should like to briefly comment that there is more involved in this issue than the reform of unemployment compensation programs. The central problem arises because very high unemployment levels in States like Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, and Illinois. That is the central issue for which we have not yet found an answer.

Two months ago, when the unemployment rate nationally declined from 10.8 to 10.4 percent, the unemployment rate of Pennsylvania increased from 12.9 to 13.7 percent. We truly face a national problem. The unemployment rate in Pennsylvania turns significantly on the serious situation that can steel imports which is compounded by the problem that the Government has taken ineffective stands against dumping by foreign importers. The International Trade Commission shows that subsidies of British steel were in the range of $250 million, but compromises were worked out on that issue largely in recognition of foreign relations between the United States and Great Britain and the implications of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The impact of automobiles turned on relations between the United States and Japan. This is truly a national problem where some States as a result of a great many factors have incurred great disadvantages.

The central factor of this unemployment compensation problem is the unemployment rate itself. So that when the distinguished Senator from Kansas relates to the comments about the laundry list that the Governors of North Atlantic Treaty Organization. This penalty adds another $25 million to the bill.

The amendment now being offered would partially relieve States like mine, by eliminating the requirement that States pay interest on the interest charged them. This will save Minnesota several million dollars.

And I also am strongly supportive of the amendment of the Senator from Illinois? I believe that the Finance Committee's efforts, along with this amendment, will go a long way toward putting State UI programs into the black. Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise as a co-sponsor of the amendments offered by my colleagues from Michigan and Ohio. These amendments constitute modest but important relief for high-debt States devastated by the recession.

I believe that the Finance Committee's efforts, along with this amendment, will go a long way toward putting State UI programs into the black. Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I rise as a co-sponsor of the amendments offered by my colleagues from Michigan and Ohio. These amendments constitute modest but important relief for high-debt States devastated by the recession.

Nowhere have the disastrous effects of this recession been felt more keenly than in my State of Michigan. Michigan has suffered double-digit unemployment for 38 consecutive months. In order to pay unemployment benefits to its jobless workers, Michigan has incurred a debt to the Federal Government that exceeds $2.3 billion. Michigan is forced to pay over $21.6 billion per day in interest charges alone. Estimates indicate that Michigan will owe almost $275 million in interest charges during 1983-86. Michigan is a proud State struggling to recover from the economic agony that it has suffered as a result of major reforms in its unemployment insurance laws to accelerate the repayment of its debt. The staggering interest charges it faces, however, make its recovery exceedingly difficult. The interest relief embodied in the Metzenbaum and Levin amendments will help speed the recovery in Michigan and other industrial States.

The Metzenbaum amendment provides a 9-month grace period for interest payments due on October 1 for those States whose unadjusted employment rate for the prior 12 months equals or exceeds 13.5 percent. This provision will benefit the States that continue to experience excessively high unemployment by granting them more time to raise additional revenues. While it does not forgive the interest payments due, it provides needed relief for high unemployment and high debt States such as my own. Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. As I originally indicated, this amendment was a part of the original amendment. It originally has good support on the floor. We appreciate the consideration given to it by the Senator from Oklahoma. I am prepared to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 93) was agreed to.

Up Amendment No. 94 to Up Amendment No. 88 as Modified (Purpose: To provide that no interest shall accrue on any deferred interest.)

Mr. LEVIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

Mr. FORD. Parliamentary Inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This is an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
The Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN). I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 237, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following: (c) Section 1202 (b)(3)(C)(i) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out the matter that follows clause (1) and inserting "No interest shall be assessed on deferrals that we are allowing today."

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this is a second-degree amendment to the Metzenbaum amendment, and I believe it is acceptable to the committee and acceptable to Senator Metzenbaum.

A few months ago, Mr. President, we agreed to defer interest under certain circumstances on loans from these funds. Today we are agreeing to defer interest under other circumstances for other States for loans from these funds. We have just agreed to the Percy-Dixon-Metzenbaum modification which, I am sure, some of those who talked at an earlier point, I am happy to accept his amendment to my amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Michigan is consistent with what we have just agreed to in regard to the Percy amendment. The amendment should be adopted. We support the amendment.

I was just explaining to the Senator from Michigan that if anybody does not understand what has happened in his State, they should take a look at loan projections based on the President's budget assumptions and provided by the U.S. Department of Labor, dated March 15, 1983. These projections indicate that Michigan is the kind of Draconian measure that the State will be required to adopt in order to send a strong and loud message to the State legislature in December 1982 under the leadership of then Gov. Bill Miliken.

These DOL figures are based on assumptions, but they do indicate the magnitude of the changes made in that State. They also provide an indication of why we believe we are justified in providing some relief for States like Michigan, which have made such drastic changes.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 94) was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT. Is there further debate on the amendment?

The amendment (UP No. 88), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Mr. President, I had omitted one matter. I ask unanimous consent that the name of my colleague from Ohio, Senator GLENN, be added as a cosponsor of my amendment.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 95

(Purpose: To change the date after which a State solvency action must have been taken)

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment on behalf of myself and my colleague, Senator HUDLESTON, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, the Bradley amendment will continue to be set aside.

The amendment of the Senator from Kentucky will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky (Mr. FORD), for himself and Mr. BRUNSTOLON, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 95.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 235, line 23, strike out "October 1" and insert "March 31".

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, this amendment that I and my colleague Mr. BRUNSTOLON, are offering is of a technical nature. It moves back the effective date from October 1, 1982 to March 31, 1982, for board would go a long way to restoring public confidence in the social security program. When the original Social Security Act established a Social Security Board as an independent agency, it was clear to the public that this program would be managed and maintained as a separate social insurance program with its own tax contributions. This Board had no matters competing for its attention and its resources other than the efficient management of this important program. Workers could clearly understand the relationship between their tax payments and their eventual entitlement for benefits. There was no confusion about how the tax revenues were being used or why changes were made in the program.

I wish to highlight why this is a necessary approach.

Over the years, the Social Security Board has been subsumed under other administrative units and has become only one part of the confusing array of agencies and programs provided by the Federal Government. In the process, the operations and objectives of the social security program have been obscured, both within the Government and to the view of the general public. This process of absorption began in 1939 when the original Social Security Board was subsumed under the Federal Security Agency. In 1953, the Social Security Administration was made a part of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. In 1977, as part of the reorganization of the Department, Medicare was separated from the Social Security Administration and placed, along with the Medicaid program, in a new Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA). Several public assistance programs, including aid to families with dependent children and child support enforcement programs were at that time shifted to the Social Security Administration. Today there is no clear distinction in either the organization or the administration of the Department’s programs between those programs which are financed with general tax revenues and those which are based on the pay-roll tax contributions of workers.

Not only is the present organization confusing and distressing to those in the public who are contributing taxes today in the expectation of receiving benefits in the future, it is also counterproductive to the efficient operation of the social security program. In recent years, the Social Security Administration has shown increasing signs of difficulty in administering the social security program. A turnover in leadership at the Department and the agency level has made it difficult, if not impossible, to establish consistent policy priorities in that very important agency.

A clear consequence of this ever-fluctuating policy has appeared in the failure of the agency to develop a consistent plan to upgrade and revise its computer system which can survive long enough to be implemented. As a result, the Social Security Administration is now operating a computer system barely able to keep up with the maintenance of earnings records on hundreds of millions of workers and the regular computation of benefit checks for over 35 million beneficiaries.

As one of the operating divisions within a conglomerate Cabinet-level Department, the Social Security Administration has been saddled with responsibilities for programs unrelated to social security which place an added burden on its already overcommitted staff and computer resources. In addition, as part of a broader Department, the agency is apportioned both program and administrative budget reduction targets based on overall departmental needs and without regard to social security’s unique management or operational needs. This mathematical apportioning of resources and responsibilities is interfering with the ability of the Social Security Administration to manage the social insurance program it was intended to administer.

While the Social Security Administration’s resources are stretched to the limit, the separate administration of the Medicare and cash benefit programs has led to duplication of staff in budget, policy planning, and administrative services between these two agencies and the Department as a whole. This duplication is both a source of added overhead cost and a source of problems in coordination of activities and policy.

From our perspective, the most distressing side effect of this administrative confusion is that our constituents are finding it increasingly difficult to get decent service from the Social Security Administration. Increasingly constituents with errors in their checks are demanding answers but having to seek redress through their Congressmen’s district office because the Social Security Administration is slow or reluctant to respond to their concerns.

The confusion in the general public about the social security program and its administration is a major source of declining public confidence in the program. In the last few years, confidence in the future of the social security program--among younger people in particular, the proportion of those with little or no confidence in the program has risen from one-half to three-quarters. I see this confusion about the financing and administration of the program in the letters I receive from constituents. Many younger people believe their payroll tax deductions are used tofinance welfare programs.

I have people come up to me every time I am in a town meeting in the State and they say: "Senator, you have just to get these welfare programs out of the Social Security Administration. They are robbing us of our retirement."

Of course, we all know there are no welfare programs in the social security program. It is the old age and survivors program. There is the disability insurance program. There is the health insurance program, Medicare. Each of those programs have their own tax rate to pay for those programs. There are no welfare programs in social security.

Others believe that changes in the program are made only to reduce budget deficits or to finance increases in other Federal Department except the Department of Defense. This is an agency that dwarfs the rest of the Department of Health and Human Services, and yet it is only as one of several divisions in that Department. I believe it is time the Congress clearly indicated its intention to consolidate and separate the operations of the social security program so that its important mission can be accorded the special attention it so badly needs.

I recognize that the separation of this agency raises a number of difficult questions about reorganization. Quite rightly these questions should be the subject of a careful study to develop the details of a reorganization plan. But I hope we will not be deterred now by these questions from expressing our intent to develop a strong Social Security Administration with a clear set of responsibilities, strong leadership, and the resources to manage this important program effectively. It will take a strong administration from the Congress to once again to this American people once again that this earnings-related program is unique and separate and is not simply another of the many discretionary programs this Government operates from time to time.

I think, Mr. President, we are only going to really clarify that question for our constituents when we have a separate Social Security Administration. We are only going to run it right when there is a separate Social Security Administration, and that is why I want and hope that my colleagues will accept this amendment.

I might add that later on this afternoon I will offer an amendment to take one of the other steps which I believe is necessary to restore to the social security old age and survivors and disability insurance programs financially from the unified budget, but that is not what this amendment seeks to do.
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment by the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from New York (Mr. MORTON), has been discussed too much, and also has been modified so that it now is a study. I think the idea has a great deal of merit.

The one concern we had with the original amendment was that it be carried out in such a manner if nothing were done by a certain date. It now appears to me that the chairman and others that it is a good amendment and we hope that it might be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania.

The amendment (UP No. 99) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 99

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY) will continue to be set aside.

The clerk will report the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 99.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

 Penal Code of 1954 (relating to certification of such State's unemployment fund, until such interest is properly paid,') inserting therein the following new paragraph:

The amendment (UP No. 99) as it is simply good business policy to require payments in a timely fashion of debts. The Federal Government hopefully will never have to utilize this provision, but it should be available if necessary.

I urge my colleagues to approve this amendment as it is simply good business policy to require payments in a timely fashion. The Federal Government hopefully will never have to utilize this provision, but it should be available if necessary.

I think this amendment has been discussed with the minority manager of the bill. It is a strengthening amendment, and I hope there is no objection to it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the amendment?

Mr. LONG. I do not object. It accomplishes the purpose it has in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kansas.

The amendment (UP No. 99) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. HUDDLESTON) has an amendment which goes in the process of review, and perhaps while he is discussing it we can take a look at it.
first day of the earliest calendar quarter which begins on or after the first day of the sixth calendar month before the date on which the church wishes such election from the taxes imposed by section 3121.

(c) The election made by this section shall apply with respect to service performed on or after the first day of the first calendar quarter which begins after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. Mr. President, the amendment I am proposing to the pending social security legislation would bring consistency and equity to the social security payroll tax system for members of our Nation's clergy. I am pleased that the distinguished Senator from West Virginia (Mr. DANFORTH), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. RANDOLPH), Senator Forb, my colleague from Kentucky, and the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. PELL) have joined me as cosponsors of this amendment. As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, Senator DANFORTH has devoted a great deal of time and effort toward the social security issue and, therefore, I believe, has a unique perspective on the problem addressed by our amendment.

Current law requires that clergy members be considered self-employed for the purposes of social security taxation. This means that they must pay taxes on their wages based on the rate applied to the self-employed, a rate measurably higher than that paid by employed individuals.

The inconsistency arises out of the fact that in the vast majority of cases, the clergy member's salary is not self-generated, but is actually paid by the church or synagogue just as that of all other individuals serving that house of worship.

The church, therefore, is withholding income taxes from clergy salaries as employees of the church, but at the same time is not paying the employer portion of the social security tax for its clergy based on current law which deems these individuals self-employed.

The situation as it now exists requires one Government agency, the IRS, to recognize clergy members as employees of their church or synagogue, while another (SSA) insists that, for social security tax purposes, these individuals are self-employed.

The amendment I am proposing would relieve this inconsistency by providing the option for churches and synagogues to contribute the employer's portion of the social security tax on behalf of their clergy. Briefly, it would permit duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed ministers to enter into voluntary agreements with the IRS, to recognize clergy members as employees of their church or synagogue. In essence, it would be a mutual decision arrived at between the two parties involved.

Mr. President, I believe this approach to be both purposeful and compromising; it restores a balance to the method by which we tax these respected members of our community, while allowing those churches who believe their members have a particular objection to this change to simply opt against implementing it.

The language I am proposing merely provides the vehicle for change, and allows the final, sometimes delicate employment classification of clergy to be made by those directly affected by it.

It is important to point out that my amendment does not tamper with the actual revenue inflow to the social security trust funds, since it simply shifts responsibility for a clergy member's social security payroll taxes from one source to another.

I am submitting for the Record a letter from the National Council of Churches indicating their support for my amendment.

Mr. President, I believe my amendment adequately addresses a problem which is in great need of correction, and I urge my colleagues to join Senator DANFORTH and I in support of it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the letter to which I referred be printed in the Record.

The being read, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE CHURCHES OF CHRIST IN THE U.S.A.

Hon. WALTER D. HUDDLESTON, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator HUDDLESTON: On behalf of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, I write to commend your efforts in relation to the question of Social Security coverage for clergy.

I support the amendment you are offering today, which would allow clergy the option of being treated as employees for purposes of Social Security.

Since some religious groups may not wish to have their clergy treated in this way, we especially appreciate the fact that, under your amendment, the election to be covered by an employee would be completely optional.

Thank you for the leadership you have provided on this issue.

Sincerely yours,

JAMES A. HAMILTON, Associate General Secretary and Director, Washington Office.

Mr. HUDDLESTON. I would be happy to respond to any questions the manager of the bill or the distinguished ranking member might have at this time.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with Senator HUDDLESTON in offering this amendment, which offers a compromise with quite an interesting history. Under the Social Security Act at present, members of the clergy can only be considered self-employed persons. This means that they bear a larger social security tax than an employed person, who pays one-half the full social security tax. Many clergymen and women would, for the purposes of social security, prefer to be considered employees of their churches. Similarly, churches properly interested in providing a decent standard of living for their ministers, would gladly pay the employer share of the social security tax in order to reduce their ministers' social security tax burden.

More is at stake in this question than mere dollars and cents. The root question is more than a financial one. Some ministers could never consider themselves the "employees" of a church. Likewise, some churches could never agree that they are in an employer-employee relationship with their ministers or priests.

It is for this reason, as I understand it, that an employer-employee relationship has been avoided for purposes of social security.

The beauty of this amendment is that a clergyman or clergywoman and his or her church, by a voluntary and mutual agreement, could consider themselves in that relationship of employer and employee. Under such an agreement, the clergyman would pay the employee share of the social security tax, and the church the employer share. Again, the amendment mandates no such change—it merely allows such a change if both parties agree.

Happily, the amendment is revenue neutral. It will not affect the social security trust funds.

I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Huddleston-Danforth amendment would allow ministers to be treated as employees for FICA tax purposes if both the minister and his church elected such treatment.

There would be no adverse impact on the trust funds and no adverse impact on general revenues by the adoption of this amendment since our bill equalizes the SECA rate and the combined employer-employee social security tax rate.

My only concern would be whether the affected ministers and churches would agree that this is an appropriate amendment. It is my understanding that there is no problem so long as the president, who is also the minister, and his church elected such treatment.

Mr. LONG. I have no objection.

Mr. HUDDESTON. I move the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRIBBLE). Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment (UP No. 100) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, we are waiting for the arrival of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Dominici).

We have disposed of 10 or 15 amendments since noon, so we have made good progress.

I do not believe there are that many amendments left. We have an amendment by the distinguished Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Heinz), the Senator from Louisiana, and other amendments relating to that one topic. If there are other amendments, I would say to Members who may be in their offices that we would like to continue to dispose of amendments this afternoon. I think that is the hope of the majority leader; is that correct?

Mr. BAKER. That is correct.

Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DOLE. Yes, Mr. President, we really need to do as much as we can this afternoon. I congratulate the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the committee, and others for moving along as expeditiously as they have been doing.

May I ask the manager of the bill whether or not he thinks that we can be usefully employed this afternoon for another hour or so, so that Senators can be on notice?

Mr. DOLE. I would say probably another hour, maybe an hour and a half. I would like to get to third reading if we can, and, if we cannot, to do as much as is possible to do in any event so that we can finish this bill on Monday.

Mr. DOLE. There may be one additional rollcall vote today.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the chairman.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum while we await the arrival of the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, it had been my intention to offer my amendment to remove social security from the unified Federal budget this afternoon, but Senator Chiles, the ranking member of the Budget Committee, and Senator Dominici have travel arrangements that, were I to offer the amendment at this time, would prevent them from fully engaging in debate. What I shall do instead is discuss the amendment this afternoon. I shall send the amendment to the desk not to be taken up and to be considered, but I shall simply have the amendment printed and printed in the Record at this point but not as if for consideration.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I, insert the following: 'REMOVING SOCIAL SECURITY FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET

Sec. 1136. (a)(1) For the fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1984, and ending before October 1, 1988, the President shall, in accordance with the second sentence of section 1104(c) of title 31, United States Code, establish a separate category for requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and the Federal Supplemental Medical Insurance Trust Fund, and a separate category for estimates of revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended, in the unified Federal budget.'
lays and revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and at the time the President submits the budget under section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, establish a rate category for revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, shall use the categories established by the President pursuant to paragraph (1).

(3) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, shall use the categories established by the President pursuant to paragraph (1).

(4) For the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1988, and the succeeding fiscal years, and in accordance with the second sentence of section 1104(c) of title 31, United States Code, establish a rate category for revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(5) For purposes of this section—

(a) the term 'budget outlays' has the same meaning as in section 3(1) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974;

(b) the term 'budget authority' has the same meaning as in section 3(2) of such Act; and

(c) the term 'budgetary resources' has the same meaning as in section 3(4) of such Act.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, let me take my colleagues' time to consider what I view as a very important choice before the Senate.

The amendment we shall take up on Monday, that I shall offer then, would separate the operations of the social security trust fund, first, as a distinct functional category in the next congressional and Presidential budgets, and then would remove social security entirely from the unified budget beginning in fiscal year 1989. Specifically, under this amendment, the operations of the old age and survivors insurance—OASI—the disability insurance—DI—the hospital insurance—HI—and the supplemental medical insurance—SMI—would be separated from functional categories 550 and 600 and displayed as a separate function in the President's and the congressional budget effective with the fiscal year 1986 budgets.

In addition, the operations of the OASDI and DI trust funds would be separated from the President's budget and the congressional budget and exempt from any general limitation on spending of the U.S. Government, effective with the fiscal year 1989 budgets.

Mr. President, so that there is no misunderstanding of what this amendment would achieve, I ask unanimous consent that a section-by-section analysis of it be printed in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT TO REMOVE SOCIAL SECURITY FROM THE UNIFIED FEDERAL BUDGET BY SENATOR HEINZ—SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

(a) For fiscal years 1985 through 1988, the President's budget would contain a separate functional category for the budget authority and outlays of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance (OASI), the Disability Insurance (DI), the Hospital Insurance (HI), and the Supplementary Medical Insurance (SMI) trust funds; and a separate category for the earnings of the worker and the trust funds would not be classified in any other categories. Budget authority, outlays, and revenues for these trust funds would still be budget totals.

(2) Budget resolutions for fiscal years 1985 through 1988 would use the categories established by the President in specifying budget authority, outlays, and revenues for the OASI, DI, HI, and SMI trust funds. These trust funds would not be classified in any other categories, and would be included in the budget totals.

(b)(1) For fiscal years 1989 and beyond, budget authority, outlays, and revenues of the OASI and DI trust funds would not be included in the unified Federal budget submitted by the President. However, when the President sends the unified budget and mid-year revisions to the Congress, he would send, in addition, a separate statement on the operations of the OASI and DI trust funds.

(2) Concurrent budget resolutions for fiscal year 1989 and beyond would not include outlays and revenues, any amount attributable to trust authority, outlays, or revenues for the OASI and DI trust funds.

(3) Concurrent budget resolutions, and amendments to the Senate conference reports on concurrent budget resolutions would not include reconciliation instructions to Committees which relate to the OASI or DI trust funds, effective for fiscal years 1989 and beyond.

(c) The OASI and DI trust funds would be exempt from any general limitations on outlays and revenues, any amount attributable to budget authority, outlays, or revenues for the unified budget.

(d) For fiscal years 1989 and beyond, the SMI and HI trust funds would be included in the unified budget but would be treated as a separate functional category in the budget.

(e) This provision simply restates that limitations on what can be included in concurrent budget resolutions are part of House and Senate rules and not a matter of statute, and can be changed as such by either House.

Mr. HEINZ. For the sake of emphasis and clarity, let me say again that the amendment insofar as it affects the congressional budget process, including reconciliation, would only be with respect to the two cash benefit trust funds—old age and survivor’s insurance trust funds—and in that sense it is those two and those two only that would be removed from the unified budget beginning in fiscal year 1989. Therefore, it would not remove the two medicare trust funds, HI and SMI. The medicare trust funds would remain in the budget as a separate functional category.

There are two reasons for leaving the two medicare trust funds in the budget. First, although one of these—HI—appears on the face of the proposal, there really is no relationship between the earnings of the worker and the benefits provided under the program. Once an individual is entitled to medicare, they have full access to the ben-fits of the program, no matter how many quarters they worked beyond the minimum of 40 quarters, and without regard to the earnings they had in this period. So in this regard, the sense of having earned the benefits is really quite different than it is with regard to the cash benefits.

Second, and more important in my mind, is that the medicare program is facing serious financing difficulties beginning in a few years and extending into the foreseeable future. These financing problems are so severe that they call into question our ability to continue medicare as it is currently structured. Medicare’s financing problems are only a signal of far greater financing problems in the general area of health care. With hospital costs rising at twice the rate of inflation, we are not only facing alarming increases in medicare expenditures, we are facing a substantial erosion in tax revenues as well through our income-tax treatment of private health insurance. These are problems we will have to address broadly in the budget. The solutions to them might involve a restructuring of medicare financing making it inappropriate to have this program outside of the unified Federal budget. So I do not believe this is the proper time to address the issue of how we should treat medicare financing in the unified budget.

Mr. President, I would like to contrast the financing problems we have in medicare with those we have been experiencing in the cash benefit programs, because I think this reinforces the justification for separating the cash benefit programs from the unified budget.

Mr. President, I believe the time has come to stop discussing that question. We have given it a tremendous amount of study. I believe the time has come to act.

We have before us today a social security financing bill which will do a great deal to restore public confidence in the social security program. It will provide $165.5 billion in additional financing in the shortrun and totally eliminate, under current forecasts, the longrun financing deficit. Despite its success in providing new financing, it would completely sidestep the issues of declining public confidence, namely, cynicism about the way the Congress develops social security legislation.

I have been in a number of forums where the work of the Finance Committee and of the Budget Committee has been misunderstood. Any time somebody proposes to try and put social security on a firm financial footing so that we may assure the elderly that their benefit checks are going to out, someone will get up and say: "These changes are being proposed to help the budget. Let’s think of the rest of social security recipients.”

How many times we have heard that in the last 2 years are too numerous to count. Whatever the reasons, there is a general misunderstanding in the public of the way social security is fianced, and of its relationship to the rest of our Federal programs.

Many people honestly believe that the Federal Government uses social security funds for other purposes and that the current financing problems have resulted because the Congress has repeatedly raided the trust funds.

Mr. President, I do not know of a single Member of this body who wants to be accused, even to let it be thought, for a moment that they want to make a single change, no matter how modest, in the social security system if it is for the purpose of balancing the budget, or for that matter for the purpose of helping finance the defense budget, or any purpose other than maintaining the solvency of social security itself.

But I must say, I think the fact that we have had to deal with social security in the annual congressional budget debate in the last few years is largely to blame for this growing public skepticism. Congress has given the American people the impression that payment of social security benefits is conditional upon the status of the overall Federal budget, and not solely upon the financial condition of the trust funds. Annual quick fixes in social security, made in the rush of repaying the excessive insurmountable deficit, have flown in the face of the fact that this is a social insurance program dependent on long-term commitments by workers and the Government. Its inclusion in the budget process has made it look more like discretionary spending than a revenue producer. Mr. President, the need to restore public confidence in the long-term stability of social security is of overriding importance. In the last few years, while the Congress has been debating whether to put social security in the unified budget, the public, particularly younger workers, has lost faith in the future of this program. In 1978, surveys showed that nearly half of all workers between 18 and 49 had confidence that they would receive benefits from the program when they retired. Today, fewer than one in four of these workers believe they will receive benefits. Mr. President, that is not a reversal. It is a wholesale loss of public confidence. It is a serious problem because the whole structure of the social insurance program rests on a moral commitment to future generations. Younger workers today pay taxes to finance benefits for today's retirees in the expectation that future generations will also be willing to pay taxes when it is their turn to retire. Such growing doubts about the future of social security threaten to undermine the willingness of workers to support the payroll tax upon which the entire system rests.

The bill we propose will begin the process of restoring public confidence in social security. In part, we will do this through the financing measures we adopt here. But we will also need to reassure the 115 million contributing workers and 35 million social security beneficiaries that these measures are being adopted to improve the financial foundation of social security. To do this we must remove the social security trust funds from the unified Federal budget.

Restoring public confidence in social security is one good reason for removing social security from the budget, but it is not the only reason. If we look at this question from a budget perspective, it is even clearer that social security does not belong in the unified budget.

Mr. President, the social security program is a very different kind of program than those we generally find in the budget. It is a program which has its own dedicated taxes and its own financing reserve. This reserve is intended to provide resources to the program, cushioning it from the ups and downs of economic cycles. When social security runs deficits, it draws on its reserves; when it runs surpluses it builds the reserves back up. As part of the program, however, social security's deficits add to the budget deficit and its surpluses mask budget deficits that might otherwise be more apparent. But social security is not a program which should be continually adjusted to correct these temporary effects on the overall budget. It is a program which should be set on a sound financial basis and, to the extent possible, left alone to weather economic and demographic fluctuations with its own resources.

If we make the mistake of leaving social security in the unified budget, I think we are going to have tremendous difficulty in the future managing the social security program in a consistent manner. None of us can know for sure what the future will hold, but there are a few events which we know have a high probability of occurring. One of these which has the potential to have tremendous effects on social security financing, is the inevitable aging of the baby-bom generation. Like a rabbit swallowed by a snake, this generation will advance slowly through the age groups—first swelling the ranks of workers, and then, after 2015, swelling the ranks of retirees. This demographic pattern will result in annual surpluses for social security from the 1990's for about 25 years—in other words through about 2015—followed by annual deficits for social security after 2015. It seems to me, if we can gaze into the crystal ball for a moment, that this will lead to two kinds of problems in the context of the unified budget.

Mr. President, the charts behind me indicate that when social security will be in surplus and when it will be in deficit. As my colleagues can see, there are very large yellow areas between the years 1990 and 2015 that represent both annual and accumulated surpluses. After the year 2015, there is a large area of red that diminishes over time to a greater or lesser degree, depending on assumptions, that represents deficits, both annual and accumulated, that the system will experience.

Let us look at one of the surplus years. Take the year 2010. Under present law in that year, the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance trust funds are going to receive in revenues an estimated $80 billion in 1982 dollars, today's dollars—not the dollars of the future some 30 years hence—they will receive $80 billion more than they will spend in outlays, adding this to a trust fund of more than $500 billion, again 1982 dollars, not future dollars.

If we do nothing, if we do not act, this surplus could run as high as $125 billion in that year, and the trust fund itself might total as much as $1 trillion that year.

It seems to me that if we have annual surpluses as large as this there will be enormous pressures for excess Government spending in other areas since this excess spending could occur without generating or creating a budget surplus. This is a dangerous situation.

Now let us gaze still a little further ahead into the future, and what we see is a very different problem for social security and, indeed, for the country. This time let us look at the year 2025. Now the OASDI trust funds are spending under current law about $100 billion more than receipts in revenues, and it is beginning to draw down on its reserves of more than $320 billion.

If H.R. 1900 is enacted, the deficit would be somewhat smaller, perhaps only $50 billion, and trust fund reserves would be quite a bit larger. But the general problem will be the same. The large deficits in the unified Federal budget will put tremendous pressure on the Congress to either cut spending in other Federal programs or cut spending in social security, despite the fact that social security will have adequate trust fund reserves to meet its own needs through the 2050's and beyond.

These pressures to cut more or spend more because of the fluctuations in social security appear substantial when we look into the future. But we can see similar, though less intense, pressures even today. The Congress today, in fiscal year 1989, when President Johnson first included the operation of the social security trust funds in the unified budget, it had the side effect, because social security was running surpluses in those years, of making the spending on the Vietnam war look smaller, and obscuring its impact on the budget deficit. By contrast, in recent years, social security deficits have intensified the overall budget deficits and increased the pressure to cut spending. On at least one occasion, these pressures have led the Congress to make cuts in social security that were, in my opinion, hasty and ill-advised.

The mismatch between social security and the unified budget is only too clear. The horizon of the budget process is 3 years, and so congressional attention focuses on program changes which can go into effect quickly and produce either immediate savings or immediate increases in revenues. On the other hand, the horizon of social security is a generation, individual's working life to retirement. Its trustees project the actuarial balance of the system over a 75-year period. To consider social security only in terms of its financial condition in the next year or so is not only shortsighted but can be extremely dangerous for the long-run integrity of the system.

Some have suggested that my legislation would take social security off budget and hide it somewhere in the murky gloom of unknown and uncontrollable off-budget agencies. This is ridiculous. I do not think anyone would seriously believe there is any danger of losing a program the size of social security in the shadows. We will always know where it is and what it is doing.

It is interesting to note that even before social security was thrown in with the rest of the budget, the role of social security spending as a part of overall Federal spending was abundantly clear to the Congress. Prior to the submission of the first unified budget, there were two separate Federal budgets: a trust fund budget and an administrative budget. Though these budgets were presented separately, they were combined in a single table for use in assessing the overall impact of all Federal spending programs on the economy. The amendment I will offer on Monday would not hinder in any way the ability of the Congress to evaluate the economic effects of social security spending. What it would do is separate the issue of social security solvency from other budget issues which are substantively unrelated.

Mr. President, the time has come to clarify for the American public that social security is an independent and separate program which must survive on its own basis and not be continually adjusted to respond to budget pressures. I ask my colleagues to support this method of dealing responsibly with the issue when we address it on Monday.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Andrews). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have just conferred with the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator Dole, who is on the floor. He indicates to me that there are one or two, maybe three, other amendments that can be disposed of this afternoon. I hope so, because we need to do as much as we can. It does not appear that those amendments will require rollcall votes.

In view of that, and in view of the number of absentees on both sides of the aisle which have developed by this hour, I wish to announce that there will be no more rollcall votes today. We will continue on this bill, however, and do as much of it as we can without further record votes today.

I urge Senators who have amendments and are willing to take them up today to come to the floor and make that known to the two managers.

Mr. President, so much has been done today that I feel we all should offer congratulations to the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member, who have done their usual excellent job of moving this bill along. I believe that we are now in striking distance of finishing on Monday.

I announce, Mr. President, that Senators should be prepared to stay late on Monday and finish this bill, because it is essential, in my view, that we get this bill to conference as soon as possible.

The adjournment resolution that will come to us from the House of Representatives will provide for the adjournment of the Senate over for the Easter recess on Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday.

I need not belabor that point, except to say that the sooner we get the social security bill out of the way and get to conference and get the jobs bill out of the way, the sooner we will be able to adjourn and perhaps improve the schedule for the Easter recess by a day or so.
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, in view of and following what the majority and minority leaders have discussed, I would indicate that we are not encouraging any more amendments. We have still some to deal with. I know that the amendment by Senator Bradley, if he pursues that amendment, will be a record vote because there is strong opposition, including opposition from the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Finance Committee to that amendment.

Senator HAWKINS, the distinguished Senator from Florida, has an amendment which would cost about $2 billion. We do not have $2 billion. That would be objectionable.

And as far as I know at this point, then the budget issue will probably require a roll call vote. I am talking about Monday.

Others, if they pursue the amendments, could require roll call votes.

Senator THURMOND on Monday the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Senator LONE), will have an amendment which will be amended and that will require some roll call votes.

So there probably will be a number of roll call votes. I doubt any would be defeated.

I know we are waiting. Senator BENTSEN has an amendment.

Would he be willing to add Senator THURMOND as a cosponsor to his amendment? Mr. BENTSEN. I am delighted to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey will continue to be laid aside.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 101
(Purpose: To treat nonqualified deferred compensation in the same manner as other elective deferred compensation for social security purposes)

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an unprinted amendment which I send to the desk and ask that it be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas (Mr. Bentsen), for himself, Mr. Thurmond, Mr. Zirinsky, Mr. Durenberger, Mr. Lugar, Mr. Symms, Mr. Baucus, Mr. Sasser, and Mr. Bradley proposes an unprinted amendment number hundred and one.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Section 1. Strike lines 3-19 on page 104 and strike lines 20-25 on page 105, and lines 1-11 on page 107 and in each place insert the following new paragraph:

"(A) In general.—Any amount deferred under a deferred compensation plan shall be treated for all purposes of this chapter as of the later of

"(1) when the services are performed, or

"(ii) when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture of the rights to such amount.

"(B) Taxed only once.—Any amount taken into account as wages by reason of subparagraph (A) shall not thereafter be treated as wages for purposes of this chapter.

"(C) Deferred compensation plan.—For purposes of this paragraph—

"(I) Any amount deferred under a plan described in sections 330A(a)(1) and 330A(b)(1), as added and as provided in clause (ii), the term "deferred compensation plan" means any plan or other arrangement for deferral of compensation other than a plan described in subsection (B).

"(II) Exception for certain governmental plans.—In the case of a governmental plan within the meaning of section 414(d), the term "deferred compensation plan" shall include only a plan described in sections 415(a), 457(e)(1), 457(e)(1)(B), 457(e)(2)(D), and 457(e)(2)(E).

Sec. 2. Strike lines 1-4 of page 110 of amendment 101 and insert the following:

"Any amount deferred under a deferred compensation plan (within the meaning of section 331(a)(2)(C) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1984) shall be taken into account for purposes of this title as of the later of when the services are performed, or when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture of the rights to such amount. Any amount taken into account as wages by reason of the preceding sentence shall not thereafter be treated as wages for purposes of this title."

Sec. 3. Effective date.—Sections 3321(a)(2) and 3306(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as added by this section, shall apply to services performed after December 31, 1983.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I have an amendment to correct what I believe to be an unintended result reached by the Finance Committee.

Many employers, particularly small employers, use nonqualified deferred compensation arrangements as a method of providing retirement income for their employees. Under current law, amounts deferred under these nonqualified deferred compensation plans are not subject to FICA and FUTA taxes when received as retirement payments. The blue ribbon Greenspan Commission did not recommend a change in this treatment. Likewise, the House of Representatives did not subject these deferred amounts to FICA or FUTA taxes.

Unfortunately, the Finance Committee has chosen to subject these nonqualified, deferred amounts to FICA and FUTA taxes when actually paid as retirement payments. The amendment is as follows: When amounts are deferred and the services are performed, the amount deferred shall be treated as wages for purposes of the Revenue Code of 1954, as added by this section, shall apply to services performed after December 31, 1983.

the Recom, with the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Senator Thurmond, on this same subject.

This amendment is further clarification, and, as the Senator from Texas indicates, it is a conforming amendment in many respects.

Essentially, the Bentsen-Thurmond amendment will conform, as closely as possible, nonqualified deferred compensation arrangements to the FICA tax treatment, section 401(k) plans as agreed to by the Finance Committee. It is fair to treat all deferred compensation equally for FICA purposes.

There may be additional areas such as nonqualified deferred arrangements which may have to be worked out in conference, but this amendment goes a long way toward equalizing the FICA tax treatment of qualified and nonqualified deferred compensation arrangements and should be adopted.

If you wish to accept the amendment, as I understand the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is willing to accept the amendment, I am happy to yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to thank the able manager of the bill.

We feel this is a sound amendment, and I hope the Senate will accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Texas.

The amendment (UP No. 101) was agreed to.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, are there other amendments that might be disposed of without record votes?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, may I inquire of the distinguished chairman of the committee if there are other amendments that appear available to us? If not, I intend to ask the Senate to have a period for the transaction of routine morning business.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know of no other noncontroversial amendments. There are some that may become noncontroversial, but at this point, they are still in the negotiation and discussion.

So I think that is about all we can do today.

Mr. BAKER. I thank the Senator. Mr. President, it has been a good day, and the chairman of the committee and the ranking minority member should be commended for their good work this day.

TREATMENT OF DEFERRED EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION UNDER THE SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS TEST

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I wish to have a brief colloquy with the distinguished floor manager of the social security bill concerning the bill’s treatment of deferred employee compensation under the social security “earnings test.”

I have been advised, as reported from the Finance Committee, the social security bill apparently would have had the unintentional effect of causing thousands of retired recipients of deferred compensation to lose all or part of their social security benefits.

This would occur as a result of the interaction between the revised definition of “wages”—which would include certain types of deferred compensation—and the “earnings test,” which causes social security benefits to be reduced if the retiree has earnings in excess of the allowable limit. Since another provision of the bill completely eliminates the retirement earnings test by 1994, an objective which I strongly support, I am sure that it is not the intent of the committee to bring under the earnings limitation a large group of individuals—retired recipients of deferred compensation—who heretofore have not been subject to it in respect to that deferred compensation.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator’s observations are well founded. This was simply a drafting error which we will take care of through a committee technical amendment. The amendment reflects the intent of the committee that the receipt of income by a retired employee under a deferred compensation plan will not be counted as earned income for the purpose of the earnings test.

Mr. THURMOND. I thank the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee for recognizing and taking care of this problem.

Mr. BURDICK. I say to the chairman, I hope we can clarify a concern I have about the diagnosis-related groups, or DRG’s. I am concerned that the proposed system will not take into account institutions which have research costs associated with the care of their patients.

As you may know, the Senate Appropriations Committee on which I serve, has a long history of supporting community-based cancer centers. In fact, the Labor-HHS Appropriations Subcommittee has included report language in 2 of the last 3 years directing the National Cancer Institute to continue these efforts. As a part of this effort, the Institute is establishing closer links between local community physicians and hospitals and the larger cancer centers. Two examples of this outreach are the regional cancer research groups under the community clinical oncology program. These kinds of programs are allowing patients at the local level to participate in and benefit from NCI research. In the upper midwest, we have a fine program with community-based physicians and hospitals involved in their patients in cooperative research programs which benefit not only the patients, but the larger body of medical knowledge. This research does not involve excessive additional costs, but it sometimes requires a greater intensity of care, more careful monitoring, additional testing, or slightly longer hospital stays.

I feel strongly that this kind of cooperative, community-based research should continue so that citizens from all parts of the country can share the benefits of NCI research. I would hate to see the prospective reimbursement system limit this or reduce the opportunity for participation for medicare patients. I would hope that the Secretary will have the flexibility to recognize the additional research-related costs that may be involved in these cases and that she or he will have the authority to make appropriate adjustments for them.

Mr. DOLE. I fully understand your concerns about this and share your belief in the importance of community-based research. We have no intention of discouraging legitimate research from taking place. Under the terms of our bill, the Secretary will have the authority to take the intensity of these cases into consideration in making adjustments to the standard DRG’s.

Mr. BURDICK. I thank the Senator for clarifying this matter.

Mr. DeCONCINI. Mr. President, I see that judicial and administrative review are not available for the initial rates for each diagnosis related group (DRG) and the DRG classification system itself.

I wish to clarify that, subject to the present jurisdictional requirements for review by the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB), judicial and administrative review are available for matters relating to updating the rates, including the composition of the composite basket, and the Secretary’s decisions on the advisory panel’s recommendations.

Mr. DURENBERGER. That is correct. The exclusions from judicial and administrative review are those items necessary to maintain budget neutrality during fiscal year 1984 and fiscal year 1985. In addition, the establishment of specific DRG’s and their relative weights are not reviewable. Matters affecting aggregate expenditures and the DRG rates in subsequent years of review are reviewable.

Mr. DeCONCINI. Are subsequent additions or subtractions from the initial list of DRG’s reviewable?

Mr. DURENBERGER. I do not believe so.

Mr. DeCONCINI. Then the Secretary could cut the number of DRG’s in half, or double the number, or do anything else he wanted at his total discretion. He could also refuse to change the relative weights of the DRG’s, even though it was absolutely proven that given DRG was under- or over-weighted. This is particularly significant because, as I understand it, a relatively small number of DRG’s account for the majority of all hospital discharges. The Secretary could make all these changes at his total discretion regardless of their impact on hospitals and patients. This is a very broad grant of discretionary authority, and one that I believe my prove unwise.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the concerns of my colleague from Arizona have some merit. We have attempted to address these concerns in part by establishing an independent commission of experts whose responsibility it will be to work with the Secretary in determining the changes that need to be made in and among the various DRG's. In addition, I expect to hold hearings during the second session and into the future, and to consider any reasonable changes to the legislation as become necessary as we learn more about the new system. I invite my colleague from Arizona to share with me his specific recommendations.

Mr. DeCONCINI. I thank my friend from Minnesota for his generous assistance and continued able leadership in the health area. I look forward to working with him next session.

Mr. WALLOP. Mr. President, one of the most important pieces of legislation to be enacted into law this century is the Social Security Act of 1935. It is an act of Congress that affects virtually every American, providing protection against destitution, assistance during ill health, and dignity in retirement. The program has been enormously successful and popular. During the almost 50 years of its existence, the social security program has expanded both coverage and benefits. Funding for the program has followed Franklin Roosevelt's decision to use the payroll tax rather than general revenue. The number of covered workers has increased, the ability of workers to finance this pay-as-you-go program has diminished because of a weak economy.

The social security system is faced with a funding crisis. This crisis has two parts, the short term and the long-term phases. Earlier this year, the National Commission on Social Security Reform presented a series of recommendations to the Congress which would keep the program solvent for both the short and long term. Merely reaching an agreement on recommendations was a major achievement for the Commission. The members represented many different perspectives on social security. However, the severity of the problem forced a concensus. As I said last month, there are provisions in the package with which I agree and other provisions with which I disagree. But, this is a time for realism, and I realize that we all must swallow hard and do what is right. I joined as a cosponsor of S. 1, the social security reform bill. I also cosponsored S. 76, a bill to resolve the remaining long-term funding problem by raising the retirement age.

Last Thursday, the Senate Finance Committee approved the reform package by a vote of 18 to 1. I strongly support the package. The committee bill improves on the Commission recommendations by including a sensible solution to that portion of the long-term funding gap not addressed by the Commission. The Finance Committee rejected higher taxes over the long term. Instead, the retirement age will be increased to age 66 by the year 2012. And, initial benefits will be reduced by 5 percent beginning in the year 2000. Though the benefit calculation will be reduced, benefit levels will continue to grow as the wage level increases. This will avoid any hardship caused by the 5-percent reduction.

The Finance Committee also approved other sensible changes. The retirement earnings test would be eliminated. Thus, the penalty on work would be removed for those who have reached the retirement age. We also improved the tax credit to offset the burden of increased payroll taxes for the self-employed. Last, the committee agreed to changes in the treatment of spouses and former spouses to improve the treatment of women. For instance, two dropout years would be allowed for child bearing without losing entitlement to benefits.

This is a good package. The advancement of this program demonstrates that our political process does work, that the Congress can successfully deal with major problems. I urge my colleagues to support the Social Security Amendments of 1983.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business will be stated.

The acting assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the Medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I shall take a minute to notify Senators, who are in their offices, or their staffs, that we wish to immediately start work on the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

There are a number of amendments that I understand will be brought up; some may require rollcall votes.

The pending amendment is the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY). We are certainly willing to proceed with that amendment.

The distinguished Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) has a couple of amendments. We are willing to proceed with those amendments. The Senator from Florida (Mrs. HAWKINS) has an amendment. We are willing to proceed with that amendment.

But I hope that we can have the cooperation of Senators so that we can move this bill along and hopefully finish it this evening because we have at least six or seven amendments which may require rollcall votes.

So, Mr. President, I hope that those who have amendments will come to the Chamber at the earliest possible time so we may dispose of these amendments in a timely fashion.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, when the Senate convened today, I indicated that there were a number of absentees and it would appear to be very difficult to anticipate final passage of this bill today, with the likelihood that we would have to go over until tomorrow. For a change, I have good news, Mr. President. I have to report that our absentee list has shrunk to less than half the size reported to me earlier today.

While we have an agreement and understanding that there will be no votes prior to 2:30 p.m. this afternoon, I urge the managers of this bill to get on with the matter at hand and see if we cannot finish this bill today at a reasonable hour or, if we cannot finish it, at least make substantial progress toward that goal. I am prepared to stay as long as the managers want to stay, but so that Members may make their plans—and I know a good number may have to rearrange or remake their plans based on the schedule today—I also ask that we get an appraisal soon of how much we can do, whether we can finish, and to what time the managers would like to go.

With that, Mr. President, let me recind the statement I made earlier. We may be here later than I had thought. We may be able to finish the bill. That is still a fond hope, perhaps, but I think it has improved considerably by the reduction in the number of absentees that had been reported.

AMENDMENT NO. 520

The amendment is as follows:

On page 100; between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

DISABILITY RETIREMENT BENEFITS

SEC. 234. (a) Every individual who—

"(1) meets the criteria for entitlement to old-age insurance benefits which are specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of section 202(a) (but only if he first meets the criteria specified in paragraph (2) of such section in or after the calendar year 2000);

"(2) is under an occupational disability (as defined in subsection (c) of this section); and

"(3) has filed application for disability retirement benefits, shall be entitled to a disability retirement benefit for each month beginning with the month so he would be so entitled under clause (A) or (B) of section 202(a) if such benefit were an old-age insurance benefit, and ending with the month preceding whichever of the following months is the earlier: the month in which he dies, or the month in which he attains retirement age as defined in section 216(1).

2. Provided in section 202(a)(12), an individual's disability retirement benefit for any month shall be equal to his primary insurance amount (as defined in section 215(a)) for that month, reduced by an amount equal to the following:

3. The term "occupational disability" with respect to any individual means the inability of such individual, by reason of any medically determinable physical or mental impairment (as defined in section 223(d)(3)), to engage in substantial gainful activity of the type primarily performed by such individual during the 10-year period immediately preceding the onset of such inability (or, if such individual has not engaged in any one type of such activity for 2 years or more during such 10-year period, the inability to engage in substantial gainful activity requiring skills or abilities comparable to those of any gainful activity in which he has previously engaged with reasonable regularity and over a substantial period of time).

4. (d) The Secretary shall by regulations prescribe the criteria for determining whether or not an individual is under an occupational disability; and an individual shall not be considered to be under an occupational disability unless he furnishes such medical and other evidence of the existence thereof as may be required.

5. (e) Except as otherwise specified in this section or in other sections of this Act, the provisions of this title shall apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits in the same way they apply with respect to old-age insurance benefits.

6. (1) Section 201(h) of such Act is amended by inserting "or disability retirement benefits," after "226(2)."

7. (2) Section 202(a)(3) of such Act is further amended by inserting "or disability retirement benefits," after "226(2)."

8. Section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(12) Paragraph (1) of this subsection shall apply with respect to disability retirement benefits payable under section 234 in the same way it applies with respect to old-age insurance benefits, except that paragraph (A) of this subsection shall apply to an individual applying for or receiving disability retirement benefits, the reduction period and adjusted reduction period for any such benefit shall be determined under subsection (7) as though retirement age (as otherwise defined in section 216(1)) were 62.

9. (4) Section 226(b)(2)(A) of such Act is amended—

(A) by inserting "or 234" after "benefits under section 202" in subsection (a)(1)(A); and

(B) by adding after "or" at the end of subsection (b)(3)(A) the following new clause:

"(a)(4) disability retirement benefits under section 234, or.

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to benefits for months after December 1996.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the pending amendment is the Bradley amendment, is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from New Jersey, as I recall, did briefly discuss the amendment last Thursday. At that time, I suggested to the distinguished Senator that he give us an opportunity to look at it, because it is an area that the Senator from Kansas had not had a chance to focus on. We have since had that opportunity.

The amendment would take effect until the year 2000, so I hope we shall not have to rush in to do something today that is not going to take place until the year 2000. We have not had 5 minutes of hearings on this in the Finance Committee. It liberizes the eligibility for disability benefits for older workers in the year 2000 when the increase in the retirement age becomes effective. It would cost something like $600 million a year in 1983 dollars, which is .04 percent of the taxable payroll in the long range.

The proposal would work, as I understand it, that people age 62 or older who are not disabled enough to qualify for benefits under the regular DI program would be eligible to receive regular DI retirement funds if they were "occupationally disabled." This would include people who could no longer perform the major occupation they held during the preceding 10 years. Such people would then receive benefits financed out of the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund at a rate equal to the amount payable to early retirees under present law. In other words, they would not receive full benefits—as they would if they met the regular DI eligibility requirements—but they would suffer the full penalty for early retirement that would be in effect under § 1 after the turn of the century.

The majority of the National Commission on Social Security recommend that the retirement age be increased.

As it is now, a worker can opt to retire at age 62 and receive 80 percent of his benefits. Under the Finance Committee bill, once the retirement age is reversed, that benefit would drop to 75 percent of his full retirement benefit if he chose to retire at age 62. Likewise, at age 63, under current law, if a person chooses to retire because his profession is exceedingly taxing, he or she may be able to cut to 72 percent of the full retirement benefit. Under the bill pending before the Senate, that benefit would be reduced to 80 percent.

Because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality, Congress should assume that the disability program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

It is not that I am not sympathetic to the idea of the Senator from New Jersey. It just seems to me it is an area we ought to look at carefully before we suggest adopting it on the House program. It is not in the House bill. I had a chance to work on this proposal. Again, I see no great urgency, since we have some time before we reach the year 2000. Some have much more time than others.

I support the approach in the House bill of studying our options carefully. We have the time. As I have said, the retirement age does not change for another 17 years, then only a month a year.

The House bill (H.R. 1900) would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report to Congress by January 1, 1986, with a comprehensive study of the implications of raising the retirement age for people in physically demanding jobs and those with health problems. Such a report may contain any recommendations the Secretary finds necessary or desirable.

On that basis, Mr. President, I hope we might reject this amendment.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, this amendment is a very important message to send to that small group of workers American may be facing with the action of the Senate with regard to retirement age and conclude that, while indeed, life expectancy has increased, their ability to work longer has not increased commensurately with that raisin ging the retirement age would not benefit from improvements in mortality, Congress should assume that the disability program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

sions—in professions in which manual labor and occupational strain and occupational safety are very real threats to their physical well-being—if they choose to retire at age 62, they should have the same rights and benefit levels as they do under current law prior to the proposed changes in the social security retirement age. That is all this amendment says. It will be characterized by some as an enormous new disability program. It is not. It simply holds harmless those people who are out there today who would qualify for the retirement and disability programs—those people of the social security benefit.

I say let us not cut him back arbitrarily to 75 percent of their full benefits. Why 75? Why not 85, why not 70, why not 80? What is the rationale for 75 percent?

Mr. President, this amendment is, I think, a prudent amendment because it has a much smaller eligibility pool than the disability program. There are about 100 million workers in the United States today, and all are potentially eligible for disability benefits, but there is an eligibility pool for people helped by this amendment is not all 100 million workers. It is, rather, about 6 million workers—those people who are between the ages of 62 and 68.

So this is not a new large disability program that 100 million people will be eligible for. This is a very narrow program that attempts to hold harmless those people who themselves have had very dangerous work experiences and deserve the same retirement benefit as they would receive under current law.

Another point, Mr. President, is that the cost per award for this new program is significantly smaller than the regular disability program. The average disability worker with a family will receive under current law about $35 to $50 a month. That is all. For our program, the average increase is an additional $800 a month per worker. It says to those 6 million workers between the ages of 62 and 68 that if they, indeed, are in a line of work that is adverse to their health, they should have the right to get the same retirement benefits they would receive under current law, which means an additional $35 to $50 a month.

Mr. President, to say to someone who has had a very dangerous occupation, someone who has worked in a steel mill for 30 years, or someone who has worked in an asbestos factory or in a coal mine, or whatever, "Yes, you can retire at age 62 but if you retire, you can only get 75 percent of your benefit instead of 80 percent," is, I think, the wrong message to send to a large number of American workers.

Mr. President, the growth in the disability program, indeed, has exceeded expectations and the question has to be asked: Will the same thing happen to this program? Mr. President, I say no for two reasons. First, we have a smaller eligibility pool—not 100 million workers eligible but only 6 million workers eligible. And, second, the cost per award is much smaller—$841 per month but $35 to $50 per month.

Mr. President, this amendment is primarily addressing a very critical issue—the long- and short-term stability of the social security system. We should not neglect what a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission itself said about the need for this kind of amendment. Mr. Senator, indeed, a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, including Senators Dole and Hart, recommended that the retirement age be raised, that is true. In addition, these same members recommended a liberalization of the disability program for those aged 62 or above, and I quote from the Commission report:

Disability benefits are now available under somewhat less stringent definitions for those age 60 to 64. However, because many of those persons in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and be able to work longer, we assume that the disabled worker program will be improved prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problems of those between age 62 and the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

Mr. President, that is not the Senator from Iowa speaking. That is not the Senator from Louisiana speaking. That is not the Senator from Iowa speaking. That is a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, composed of that wide spectrum of American political life, that came together and gave us a solution in very difficult political times to the long- and short-term financial concerns of the Social Security system. The recommendation I have just read comes from the Commission, not from any one Senator, and it says very clearly, "Let us do something about those who will have their benefits reduced if they, indeed, fall under, as they will if we do nothing, this change in the retirement age of the Social Security system."

So, Mr. President, it finally comes down to a question of timing. Do we pass an amendment such as this that clearly expresses the intent of Congress to hold harmless these older workers in ill health who are in dangerous occupations? Do we provide for these people the right for an early retirement benefit or do we simply conduct a Commission study and say to these people, "Your day will come in the future, maybe."

Mr. President, I think that my conclusion is put to the Senator from Iowa, it is important for us to include this amendment in this bill to say to that group of Americans that they still count, and that they will be protected. Mr. President, I prefer to act now and tell these people out there who are working that we are going to be able to hold them harmless against charges in the retirement age. The Secretary still has 17 years to devise regulations that will answer the worry of every Senator about the possibility that this program might be abused, which, as I have said, because of a smaller eligibility pool and a smaller increase in benefit, is highly unlikely.

Mr. President, I do not think that that is too much to ask, and that is, indeed, why I have offered this amendment. It comes again at the time when we are proposing to raise the retirement age from 65 to 66—the House has raised it to 67—and, indeed, the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Bradley). The issue of raising the retirement age is one which certainly cannot be taken lightly. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey sufficiently addresses serious inequities which would exist if the retirement age were simply raised without regard for those who find that they no longer can work past a certain age.

I have had grave reservations over raising the retirement age above 65 because of its adverse effects upon the early retirement benefit formula. For many workers, particularly those in stressful or physically demanding occupations, it is important to keep the option to retire early open. Very simply put, there are many individuals who cannot work past the age of 62.

The amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey sufficiently addresses serious inequities which would exist if the retirement age were simply raised without regard for those who find that they no longer can work past a certain age.

Supporters of raising the retirement age point to demographics: longer life expectancy rates and labor supply shortages in the coming century. These statistical calculations, however accurate, fail to take into account workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be unable to work or will be unable to find employment when they are older. The Bradley amendment would establish a new program that will allow a limited group of workers aged 62 up to the "normal retirement" age to qualify for "disability retirement" benefits. Workers qualify for these benefits if they can demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held during the 10-year period before the onset of their disability. The costs of the program are minimal, estimated to be 0.04 percent of payroll, and benefits would be paid out of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund.

With this amendment, I believe it would be very hard for many of us here to support raising the retirement age to conform to the Senate Finance Committee recommendations. Thus, I urge my colleagues to join me in lending support for this needed amendment.

THE DISABILITY RETIREMENT SAFETY NET

Mr. GLENN. Mr. President, I am pleased to cosponsor the disability retirement amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. BRADLEY), which would provide a measure of fairness to the provision of the social security bill which raises the retirement age for full benefits.

If we increase social security's retirement age, we need to have a safety net for older persons, who for health reasons, cannot continue working. This amendment provides that a limited number of workers between the ages of 62 and 66 would receive a "disability retirement" benefit if they are unable to continue working because of poor health. These benefits would be paid according to the current law retirement benefit formula.

The disability retirement amendment's purpose is to provide financial protection for those older workers who cannot keep their jobs because of poor health, yet cannot meet the stringent standards of the regular disability insurance program. It would allow these workers to retire with dignity and security. Older workers would be eligible for benefits if they can show they can no longer perform the major type of work they did before the onset of health problems. This is of particular importance for manual laborers.

The savings provided for in the Finance Committee bill slightly exceed those estimated as necessary for the long-term solvency of the social security system by 0.08 percent of payroll. Since the amendment is targeted to help a specific group of workers—an estimated 10 percent of future retirees—it would not significantly add to the long-term cost of the program. Rough calculations show its long-term cost to be relatively low—0.04 percent of payroll—which can be accommodated by the bill's savings.

Overall life expectancy has increased since the 1930's. This has not been at issue in the debate over increasing social security's retirement age. One of the major questions has been whether there will be parallel improvements in the job market and the ability to work, and whether certain groups of people will be unable to participate in a trend toward longer working life.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform had two witnesses who testified on the impact of increasing social security's retirement age. They were Dr. Jacob Feldman from the National Center for Health Statistics and Dr. Robert Butler, formerly Director of the National Institute on Aging. Their testimony supported the conclusion that an increase in retirement age would have a disproportionate impact on some future retirees.

Dr. Feldman testified that the downward trend in mortality for men aged 50 to 60 has been matched by increases in the incidence of disability. For men aged 60 to 64, Dr. Feldman said that during this past decade the rate of longevity has improved 10 percent, but during this same time, the disability incidence rate has increased 26 percent. Dr. Butler told the Commission that minority citizens in physically demanding jobs largely retired before age 65. Unfortunately, at this time, these citizens still endure poorer health and mortality rates nearly double of other workers. They suffer the addition burden of a higher unemployment rate.

Dr. Butler's testimony is consistent with data from the Department of Labor's national longitudinal survey, which has shown health and one's employment history tend to interact to cause retirement from the labor force before age 65. A study published just a few months ago in the Social Security Bulletin, "Medicare and Retirement," offered additional analysis that workers seeking retirement at age 62 were more likely to suffer health problems and higher death rates than other workers.

Additional evidence demonstrates that workers who retire early for the reason of poor health tend to be the recipients of lower social security benefits. Many of them spend a lifetime in physically demanding jobs. These are the people who cannot afford significant reductions in their social security checks and are most in need of full, early retirement benefits.

I commend Senator Biwley for his work on this amendment and for raising the issue for the Senate's consideration. I urge my colleagues to vote for the pending amendment.

Mr. LONG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I regret that I cannot support the amendment.

Dr. Feldman testified that a significant number of people that were handicapped, who were partially disabled but not totally and permanently disabled.

We have a program today costing about $18 billion in social security alone because of disability. In terms of percent of payroll, about three times what we estimated that program would be costing us at this point.

I am not here to look with scorn on those judges and the administrative personnel who have handled this matter down through the years. I believe that with regard to many of these people who obviously had a severe disability, looking at it personally, they would be inclined to be sympathetic toward the applicant. In many cases, the applicant would know that he was able to go on disability if he could persuade others that he was disabled. He would start out by persuading himself he was disabled, and then persuade others that he was disabled, including the persons who had the responsibility to handle the administrative appeals.

I can just picture a judge, having revised the people in the Department who found that this applicant was not disabled, saying to himself: "Well, I think I will sleep well tonight. I know that the person was not really disabled, but we are permanently disabled, but I felt sorry for that man and his family. They need the income, and that fellow probably couldn't find a job anywhere else. So, thanks to my decision, he will be taken care of, at the taxpayers' expense, from this day until the good Lord calls him home. While I know that is not what Congress had in mind, I don't feel bad about it. I feel good about it. I'll have a good night's rest by deciding that case in that person's favor."

I have no doubt that is the way a lot of judges looked at it when they were restoring to the rolls those people who had been found not to be totally and permanently disabled and who were never intended to go under that program.

We are having great difficulty trying to get the genie back into the bottle, and so far we have not succeeded in doing that.

I think that if Congress at this point voted a benefit for occupational disability, which would obviously be intended to be a liberalized standard of disability, this would indicate that Congress is not really serious about staying to the strict definition of disability that is in the law.

Things have happened in recent years to give signals to those who are trying to administer programs for us out there, tough though it may be to reject people who are severely handicapped, but not totally disabled. The signals coming from Congress have not always been as clear as they are today. For us now to put into the law a program for occupational disability can only be construed by those who read the law in the field, trying to see what Congress intended—and that is to provide disability benefits only where somebody is so disabled that the person is incapable of holding any job, incapable of earning any substantial income from gainful employment of any sort—that Congress is retreating from the position it took.

Mr. President, if this provision is to be approved by the Congress, I have no doubt that if it becomes the law, long before the effective date of this provision, there will be other amendments triggering more benefits to persons who are occupationally disabled; and I have a lot of sympathy with that.

It was my father, as a young lawyer, and his brother, a more senior lawyer to him, in the State of Louisiana, who played a major part in winning the suits to have a person construed in our State has being totally and permanently disabled when a person was occupationally disabled; this is, disqualified to do the job that person had done previously.

The State law had provided that there would be a certain benefit schedule if a person lost a hand, and there would be a larger benefit schedule if he lost two hands, and a still larger benefit schedule if he were totally disabled. In the case of my father and his brother, they were successful in persuading the court that if a person had been a switchman on a railroad and had lost one hand, that one is a steelworker. He reaches 62 and he was totally disabled if he lost one hand. I find much sympathy for that type of proposal because it runs in my family tradition.

However, Mr. President, must we do this now, understanding that during the next 18 years this will be setting the stage for large increases in disability payments in other programs, totally unrelated to this?

It challenges the imagination to think of the many different situations in which one can urge that this precedent be used to advance disability coverage to others. If we put this into the law, how can anyone contend that, once having provided a special benefit for one program, upon an occupational basis at age 62, we should stop at age 62? Cannot Senators understand how a Senator in the future could appear with his amendment and say, "The Congress has already agreed that this person ought to receive retirement benefits for occupational disability at age 62. That is agreed in the law. Having agreed to that, why should he have to be 62? Why not 60? Why not 56? Why not 52? Why not 50? How can you be so cruel? This person is disabled from doing that job, and he is 49 years old."

Mr. President, from what begins to be a small acorn, a giant oak grows; so that the taxpayers, in due course, are picking up the tab for all this.

That has been the history of many of these spending programs, particularly in the social security area. Some one thing and with something, makes an eloquent appeal, such as today, and in due course he sells Congress on it, without Congress thinking about the ramifications and what happens further down the road.

I know there is no particular joy to me—and there is no particular joy to the Senator from Kansas—to stand here and oppose more and more benefits, to advocate that we tighten up on programs rather than loosening up on them. But that sort of duty besets one whom a position of responsibility.

It was a degree of pressure this Senator never experienced before, when he became the ranking member of the Finance Committee and at one time the chairman of the committee, to have all these proposals that were going to do many things for many people, at great expense—some of them at not such great expense—knowing that we do not have the money to pay for them.

But, Mr. President, this would do no good for anyone for the next 18 years. As the Senator from Kansas, the distinguished chairman of the committee has pointed out, if this is right we have plenty of time to do this during this next 18 years. If it is not something we can afford, we would be unwisely creating a precedent that would lead to a great deal of additional cost in other areas that the mind of man cannot fully anticipate at this moment.

I hope that the amendment will not be agreed to at this point and that this proposed liberalization, along with others that will be suggested, will be reserved by the Senate for hearings on future social security and public welfare bills, because this is an area that we will continue to explore. This is an area that in time we may want to liberalize. But I submit that the time is not yet here.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I appreciate the comments of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. Indeed he found himself in very difficult positions when he was chairman of the Finance Committee in the Chamber arguing against expansions of the disability program. I understand his long record of responsibility. Some spending policy, and I understand it is not easy to do what he has done over the years.

But I would argue to the Senator from Louisiana that this is a different kettle of fish—that the pool of potential eligibles for this new program is not 100 million workers as it is under the disability program. It is only about 6 million workers who find themselves being under the age of 62. The proposal, if this is passed, would allow—is it not possible to suggest that in the years to come under the disability program it might be possible to expand it? It may be. Mr. President, I understand how the Congress can say that it is very difficult to know whether someone is really disabled when he is there before a judge with his human case. Indeed, judges possibly allow more people on the disability program than Congress intended—and that is human factor.

Same paragraph but under my amendments, that human factor is limited by one thing, and that is demographics. There are only a certain number of people between the ages of 62 and 66 who are eligible for any any program other we will lower the age from 62 to 60 and then 55. I think it is important to remember that it was in 1956 that early retirement for women was put into the law and 1961 that early retirement for men was put into the law. So, Mr. President, I argue that it would be unlikley that we would do anything irrationally on the retirement age since we have not done anything since 1961 for men and 1956 for women.

I think the best way to get at the modesty of this amendment is to take a human situation and look at what the law is today, what it would be under the bill presently pending, and then what it would be if this amendment is passed.

Mr. President, right now let us say that this is a steelworker. He reaches age 61 or age 60 after working 30 years in the steel mill. He has problems breathing. He has gone to work every morning before dawn for 30 years. He realizes that his health will not allow him to continue to work to age 65. He would like to spend some time with his family. So this person under current law decides he will opt for early retirement at age 62 and accept 80 percent of the benefit that he would receive if he worked until age 66.

That is the calculation that the worker makes today: 'I am in bad enough shape that I will retire early and take 80 percent of what I would get if I continued to work until age 65.'

Mr. President, all this amendment does is to say that this person will continue to receive 80 percent of his benefits if he retires at age 62. If this amendment is adopted, there is no greater incentive to retire at 62 than at 64. The only possible incentive there is simply no greater incentive because the person would still only get 80 percent of his benefits. Right now the
Mr. BRADLEY. Yes, I would prefer an up-or-down vote.

Mr. DOLE. If you can assure me you would lose. (Laughter.)

Mr. BRADLEY. It depends on how many of my colleagues indeed want to address the problems of the person in ill health who has been out there in a very hard physical job for 30 years at the same time that we are addressing the issue of the raising of the retirement age.

I hope we will have an up-or-down vote.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas is willing to have an up-or-down vote. I know the Senator from New Jersey feels strongly about the amendment. It would have been my hope that he would have made this very persuasive argument and then withdrawn the amendment and then allow us to have a chance to have an appropriate hearing.

It would seem to me this should be a fair and clear test on whether we should literalize a program 17 years in advance, which does not make much sense to this Senator, and I hope my colleagues will reject this amendment, give the Senate Finance Committee an opportunity to take a look at it before we make any such change.

Mr. DOLE. I mentioned that the Commission recognized this problem, and, as the Senator from New Jersey properly pointed out, the Senator from Kansas was a member of that Commission. But I would like to have the amendment voted on so that we can get on to other amendments and maybe pass this bill, although I must say there are rumors around that there is another withholding amendment to be attached to the social security bill. Apparently, the American Bankers Association, not having been successful in attaching the withholding amendment to the bill on the jobless and the homeless, want to attach withholding to the social security bill. I hope that is not the case. The American Bankers Association has a lot of money and not much else to do, and this looks like another good target for the strategists in the American Bankers Association.

I am prepared to vote on this one and, hopefully, get onto something else.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I would like to add Senator Rusk as a cosponsor of this amendment, and I ask unanimous consent to do so, and to just clarify for my colleagues who are listening that this amendment does not deal with interest withholding. This amendment deals with withholding and, in fact, there are many people who have worked hard for 30 years in the steel mills and are forced to retire because of poor health.

Mr. BRADLEY. It is going to mushroom into some gigantic spending bill that right now you do not find people stumbling over themselves to retire and to take any more of their benefits. They continue to work.

Mr. President, under the bill before us, this person's benefits would be cut to 75 percent. Why cut it to 75 percent? Keep it where it is now at 80 percent.

Again, there is no more incentive for this person early with my amendment than there is under current law.

Finally, Mr. President, I want to address the cost issue. The Senator from Kansas said that according to the social security actuaries the cost will be $600 million a year, or one-hundredths of 1 percent of payroll. I personally find it very difficult to determine what costs are going to be. I can see the outward limit but I find it difficult to see what costs are precisely going to be. I would agree with this is that there is a surplus in this bill over what the long-term needs are, of $1.2 billion a year, or eight-one-hundredths of 1 percent of payroll, and all this amendment would do is to cut that surplus in half.

Mr. President, I think that the least we should do is send the right message to those sick people who have had very hard work lives and should be able to retire at age 62 with 80 percent of their benefits, as under current law, instead of 75 percent of their benefits, as under the bill before us.

Mr. President, if the Senator has concluded, I am prepared to ask for the yeas and nays unless the Senator is going to accept the amendment.

Mr. DOLE. No; I would like to but I cannot.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am not certain there is going to be any surplus. We had all these actuaries working up the long-term and the short-term estimates, and 0.04 percent is half the projected long-term surplus. But there are other amendments going to be offered, in fact one by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. That is, go ahead and we will see if he is successful because we are advised by the actuaries that, if in fact the Federal employees are not included, we are going to lose 0.28 percent of payroll, which is a substantial amount. That long term, and that would more than take care of any surplus which is probably only hypothetical in any event.

But I urge the Senator from New Jersey to agree on this. I do not quarrel with any of his statements, but I do not understand why with a program that would not even take effect until the year 2000, when we are trying to rush and pass this program to save the social security system we have to act on his program right now.

I understand there has never been a hearing, not 1 minute, not 1 hour, not 1 day of hearings on this particular statement, the other things that should be done in addition. We may decide the program does not have any merit or very little merit, but at least the matter ought to be heard and, therefore, it would seem to me, as I said earlier, that the House took the appropriate course in asking that the Secretary of Health and Human Services report to Congress by January 1, 1986, with a comprehensive study about the implications of raising the retirement age for people in physically demanding jobs and those with health problems.

The Senator from Louisiana has had much more experience in this area than the Senator from Kansas. We watched the disability program grow between 1970 and 1980, where the cost of the disability program rose fivefold, from $3.3 to $15.8 billion. Between 1970 and 1977 alone, the number of disabled workers on the rolls almost doubled, from 1.5 to 2.9 million.

As my colleagues are aware, a series of events in recent years, including the periodic review of continuing disability and generally tighter administration, have led to a recent decline in the number of people on the DI rolls.

Today the program spends about $19 billion on 4.4 million beneficiaries, including spouses and children. Twenty-two percent of the DI worker beneficiaries are 62 or older; 10 to 12 percent of new awards are made to people 62 or older.

So it just seems to me that we ought to proceed with caution when we start this every year and, while we are deciding, for instance, what should be done in addition. We may decide the program does not have any merit or very little merit, but at least the matter ought to be heard and, therefore, it would seem to me, as I said earlier, that the House took the appropriate course in asking that the Secretary of Health and Human Services report to Congress by January 1, 1986, with a comprehensive study about the implications of raising the retirement age for people in physically demanding jobs and those with health problems.

Mr. BRADLEY. It depends on how many of my colleagues indeed want to address the problems of the person in ill health who has been out there in a very hard physical job for 30 years at the same time that we are addressing the issue of the raising of the retirement age.

I hope we will have an up-or-down vote.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas is willing to have an up-or-down vote. I know the Senator from New Jersey feels strongly about the amendment. It would have been my hope that he would have made this very persuasive argument and then withdrawn the amendment and then allow us to have a chance to have an appropriate hearing.

Mr. BRADLEY. This amendment deals with withholding and, in fact, there are many people who have worked hard for 30 years in the steel mills and are forced to retire because of poor health.
Mr. DOLE. I think we ought to withhold judgment on it until we have had hearings. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senator ROELE will be added as a cosponsor.

Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll. Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DONNICI), the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. PESSLER), the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE), the Senator from Texas (Mr. TOWN), and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. WALLOP) are absent due to death in the family. I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) and the Senator from Colorado (Mr. COWIN) are absent due to death in the family.

The Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. HEINZ) proposes an amendment numbered 102.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is as follows:

On page 100, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following: (d)(1) The 1987 Quadrennial Advisory Council on Social Security appointed pursuant to section 706 of the Social Security Act shall study the effect of raising the normal retirement age, and shall recommend to the Congress changes in the supplemental security income program, disability insurance benefits, and employment opportunities which may be necessary to meet the special needs of individuals between the ages of 62 and 65, effective in the year 2000 who are unable to work because of poor health or lack of employment opportunities.

(2) In order to adequately address the issues described in paragraph (1), the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall appoint to such Council representatives of organized labor, and experts on the problems of older workers, disability and employment, and the labor market. Such experts shall be appointed subject to the approval of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance and the chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, the amendment I am offering would direct the House Committee on Ways and Means to participate in those sessions had the National Commission on Social Security appointed pursuant to section 706 of the Social Security Act, and shall recommend to the Congress changes in the supplemental security income program, disability insurance benefits, and employment opportunities which may be necessary to meet the special needs of individuals between the ages of 62 and 65, effective in the year 2000 who are unable to work because of poor health or lack of employment opportunities.

Today nearly two-thirds of those who retire under social security receive benefits which are reduced for early retirement. While many of these people are receiving reduced early retirement benefits by choice, as many as one-third of them had to stop working for health reasons. Workers who have spent 40 years in back-breaking labor frequently find it impossible to continue in the line of work by the age of 65. With few other job opportunities, older workers who have to stop working in one job stand little chance of finding employment in another line of work.

In addition to those no longer healthy enough to work in the same occupation, there are those in hazardous jobs demanding physical skills such as balance and timing which cannot be relied upon in later years.

While the average worker of the future may choose to delay retirement, there will still be those in stressful or hazardous jobs who will need to maintain the option to retire early. There will continue to be workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be unable to work or find new employment when they are older.

For those who can live longer, raise the retirement age gradually to 67, beginning in the year 2000, is a part of the concerns which have taken place and are expected to continue to occur in life expectancy. Over the last 40 years, life expectancy at age 65 has increased among men by 2 years, and among women by 5 years. By the year 2000, we fully expect that our older citizens will not only be living longer, but that they will want to and be able to work longer as well. Demographers today project that toward the end of this century there will be proportionately fewer younger workers in the labor force, leading to labor supply shortages and an increasing demand for older workers. In addition, today's older worker, who entered the labor force later, has developed a higher level of education and skills, and has worked in less physically demanding occupations than their elders, may prefer to work longer than the current generation of retirees.

For those who cannot continue working past age 62, improvements should be made in disability insurance (SSI) and unemployment compensation to assure that those unable to work longer are not unfairly or unneccessarily punished for events which are fully beyond their control.

Madam President, I do not believe we know yet what kind of improvements should be made in these programs to respond to the special needs of these workers. Instead, I believe we have the time to develop solid legislation to complement the increase in the social security retirement age, since this increase is not scheduled to go into effect for another 17 years.

This amendment will charge the next quadrennial council, already scheduled to convene in 1987 to study programs authorized under the Social Security Act, with the responsibility of reviewing all programs and making specific recommendations to the Congress. By the end of the decade, I am confident we will have a clear sense of how to proceed to assure those who will have to rely upon early retirement will not be unfairly penalized by the increase in the social security retirement age.

Madam President, the amendment I am offering would simply direct the 1987 Quadrennial Social Security Advisory Council to study the effect of raising the normal retirement age in social security, as we do in this bill and, for that matter, as the House does in their bill, by 1 additional year, and to report to the Congress on changes which should be made in the supplemental security income program, the unemployment compensation program, which was the subject of Senator Bradley's amendment, and the unemployment compensation program, to assure that the needs of those who will be unable to work longer indeed are met.

Madam President, I will not explain the amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. Those wishing to have conversations, including those on the sofas in the back of the room, will retire from the chamber.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I shall not take the Senate's time to explain the need for this amendment. Indeed, it attempts to answer the very real questions that Senator Bradley very persuasively raised in offering his amendment. Let me say that, although I happen to oppose the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, I have a deep sympathy for it. I originally had intended to support it, but when we got the additional cost estimates of some $800 million a year, I decided that now is not the time to start liberalizing some additional benefits, which we have 17 years to make the changes to do so.

It so happens that there is a careful and thoughtful way we cannot only meet the objectives of the Senator from New Jersey, but address, rather than in a piecemeal fashion, the problems that we shall encounter in the other programs that we use to take care of the special needs of not just working people who are relatively well off, but those people, for example, who are not well to do but who are covered by the SSI program or, for that matter, those people who become unemployed and have to rely on the unemployment compensation program.

There were not specific features of the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, even though I salute the objective and the principle that he had in mind, which is to recognize, quite simply, that there are people who are simply going to be unable to work longer, who despite Congress would like them to.

For that reason, Madam President, I offer this amendment. I hope that it is adopted by my colleagues. I have discussed it somewhat with the managers of the bill, and I hope they will accept it.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, this has been discussed, and I think it is a responsible alternative. Again I am sympathetic with the efforts of not only the distinguished Senator from New Jersey, but the distinguished Representative from Oregon, who has been working on this for some time. This will give us an opportunity not only to outline what the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania has just stated, but also have some hearings in our committee. We still have ample time, it seems to me. This will be an appropriate approach.

I am willing to accept the amendment. I know there is no objection to the study on the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. LONG. Madam President, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 102) was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HEINZ. Madam President, I thank the sponsor of the bill for his support of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

"DELAY IMPLEMENTATION OF WITHHOLDING ON INTEREST AND DIVIDEND INCOME"

SEC. 308A of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out 'June 30' and inserting in lieu thereof 'December 31.'"

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, as I understand, this is a sense-of-the- Senate resolution but one which I hope the Senate will not agree to. It is a second shot by the American Bankers Association to not only hold up the jobless and the homeless but now all those who depend on social security. I hope we do not spend a great deal of time on this. I shall move to table the amendment at an early time.

I know everybody wants to get into the act because this is very popular. It is easy to be on the side of the bankers. They are flooding us with mail. We learned yesterday from the Washington Post that they had two-way mirrors out in the office so people could find out how to proceed with this scheme before they set it in motion, a sort of "bankscam" so they could find out how to proceed with this campaign. I think it shows a new low the American Bankers Association reached when it kicked off this campaign.

I hope we shall keep our eye on social security.

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. As soon as I finish, I shall. I am probably going to be here for some time.

What we are trying to do is carry out what I consider to be the most important piece of legislation we shall have for a long, long time in this body and in the Congress itself. I know that everybody wants to be on record as being with the banks and the financial institutions and the power in this country and the big PAC's and all those things, but we are talking about benefits to 36 million Americans and 115 million to 116 million people affected who are paying into the social security system. I hope we might get on with the social security bill but if, in fact, there is going to be a debate, we may as well start it now rather than April 15.

It is this Senator's feeling that we had agreed in this Chamber that we would debate the merits of withholding on interest and dividend income commencing April 15.

The Senator from Kansas learned when he left the floor that day that we had withholding on interest and dividend income back in 1862. I shall be discussing that at greater length starting on April 15, but this is not something that has not been around before.
As I understand the Senator’s amendment—we do not particularly need to understand it fully, but it is injecting withholding back into this debate. If that is the intent of the Senators on the floor, we ought to find out right now, because that will change how long we stay tonight and how long we stay the rest of the week.

I am prepared to yield the floor.

Mr. MELCHER. Madam President.

Mr. MELCHER. I think perhaps, from the kind remarks of the Senator from Kansas, he misunderstands the amendment. The amendment is not a sense-of-the-Senate resolution; the amendment goes directly to the implementation date of the withholding tax on savings and interest. It would move that date from July 1 to the end of the year.

For all the reasons that have been debated on the floor concerning the Kasten amendment, which would have required withholding tax provisions on interest and dividends, it is clear that there does need to be further consideration, as the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Committee on Finance, has often stated, and complete and thorough discussion as the Senator from Montana rightly stated regarding the Kasten amendment to repeal withholding. To accomplish that purpose, Madam President, I have introduced this amendment. This will give time for Congress, both the Senate and the House, if they are so inclined, to look at the proposal, to look at whether or not the withholding of taxes should go into effect is reasonable.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MELCHER. Yes, Madam President.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator said withholding tax. It is not a tax.

Mr. MELCHER. Withholding of the tax on dividends and interest. I thank my friend from Kansas. We want this to be clear. We want this to be thoroughly understood. I know this is not a new tax.

If there is any doubt in the minds of the taxpayers just what the advantages or disadvantages of this are for the Nation of the withholding of taxes up to 10 percent on interest and dividends. It should be thoroughly and completely reviewed by Congress. It was clear that the Kasten amendment for outright repeal created some problems, although I support repeal.

It was clear that the Kasten amendment created some problems for the administration. Treasury strongly objected to it. Some of the members of the Finance Committee of the Senate very vigorously disagreed with it.

So this amendment I am offering today is to give us time for a thorough consideration of the question. The Senate has agreed by unanimous consent to debate the issue on another bill starting April 15.

The chairman of the Finance Committee, the Senator from Kansas, my good friend, has stated that it will require more discussion at that time. The Senator has frequently stated that whatever the discussion of the matter, it should be thoroughly aired and that it can be thoroughly aired and he hoped defeated at that time.

Recognizing the feelings and the overwhelming vote for repeal that occurred on the Kasten proposal when we had the vote on cloture, it seemed to indicate a rather strong feeling for consideration of the matter, for thorough debate of it and thorough discussion.

Mr. HELMS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MELCHER [continuing]. The withholding provision in the tax bill of 1982.

Yes, I yield to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. HELMS. Looking at the amendment of the Senator, it is not a sense-of-the-Senate vote, is it? I thought I heard reference to “sense-of-the-Senate.”

Mr. MELCHER. I thought I heard also from the Senator from Kansas, but it simply is not a sense-of-the-Senate amendment.

Mr. DOLE. I might just say that we had not been furnished a copy of the amendment. We understood there was going to be a sense-of-the-Senate amendment. We also understood some others were drafting different amendments. We now know it is not a sense-of-the-Senate amendment; it simply delays the effective date.

If there is any hope that the banks were serious about implementing it on that date, that might be worth discussing but has been taken for a ride by postponing it for 6 months in the first place on my motion in the conference, I think all we are doing is providing another 6 months to kill withholding, which we can discuss when the Senator from Montana finishes.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MELCHER. Yes, I yield to the Senator from Louisiana for the purposes of a question.

Mr. LONG. Do we understand that the amendment of the Senator is not a sense-of-the-Senate amendment?

Mr. MELCHER. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. LONG. He would defer withholding until January 1 or December 31 of this year? Is the date December 31 or January 1?

Mr. MELCHER. Not before December 31. If anything is done, then the withholding provision would be in effect on January 1.

Mr. LONG. So if the amendment of the Senator becomes law, then withholding would start on January 1, not before?

Mr. MELCHER. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. LONG. It will be on January 1, 1984, not prior to that time?

Mr. MELCHER. That is right.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator.

Mr. MELCHER. That is absolutely correct.

The reason we are in this box is this: The provisions in the tax bill of 1982 had a number of tax increases which affected telephones, airline tickets, food fuel, in reporting by people who worked in food and beverage establishments and hotels, a tax increase on some forms of insurance provisions and deductions of health costs.

For instance, if you cut the allowable deduction in the health care or health insurance the taxpayer is allowed, that resulted in a revenue gain for the Treasury, but it also included within that package this provision, that on unearned income from interest and dividends would start withholding income taxes at 10 percent of the amount of the payments.

Now, that in itself is surely, as the Senator from Kansas has very aptly described, not a tax increase. It is a collection of the tax, somewhat after the Rum provision in 1943 of withholding taxes on wages and salaries of individual taxpayers, which is a wartime measure that was very much needed because the Treasury needed to get additional revenue and individuals would be very important by a great number of Americans across the country.
remember, have picked up that argument and been very persuasive about it. They insisted that Treasury and Congress consider it. We have just never done it. Indeed, during the debate the Senator from Kansas reported to us about a note that he received from off the floor from the United Food Workers signed by Arnold that said, "Anything we can do to help?" And it portrayed the intensive interest that labor has had on making everybody pay their share of taxes, closing what they figured was a big loophole.

Well, we have had a long history of attempting to establish withholding on unearned income, but during that long period of time much has changed about collecting the income taxes due on interest and dividends. One of those changes was the requirement for these institutions paying interest or dividends to withhold 10 percent. There is no way to receive them if we have any income at all on interest or dividends, and even holders of insurance policies get a 1099 form.

While my experience with this type of income is not all that great, I think in our house my wife and I get probably a half dozen 1099 forms every year from institutions saying, "Well, here is what you received from us on income; report it on your income taxes." That goes a long way for everybody underwriting that indeed that is income and they had better pay their taxes on it, because there is a form sent to you, as an individual taxpayer. You get that 1099 form and the IRS gets it, too. So it is known. Maybe that gap is closed. But there are other steps to be taken.

In the tax bill of 1982, the question of reporting interest from Treasury notes as well as from other types of bonds was taken up, and the requirement for that type of reporting by the people who are owed the interest was raised, so that now in the Congress it is a requirement of collecting all the taxes, it simply says 10 percent will be withheld. Ten percent of dividends and interest will be withheld as if it were a tax obligation. That is not a new tax. That is just paying part of your taxes that way.

It is claimed by IRS, Treasury, and the chairman of the Finance Committee that this will be a net gain of approximately $4 billion per year in revenue. Part of that is early collection of taxes. For fiscal year 1984, it would be more than $4 billion, if the figures are correct, because it is really early collection in that particular year; but in subsequent years, the early collection part of this is just a fraction. What they really feel is that about $3 billion a year from years after 1984 as a revenue measure, that would go from taxpayers who simply are not paying what they are supposed to pay on interest and dividends.

The IRS states that for $85, on an average, they can track down a nonfiler. That is the biggest area in which the tax money is collected and that 99 percent plus of the people who report are the people who pay taxes on interest and dividends. But there is a way to tell, and that is by matching up the 1099 with the amount actually paid in taxes and seeing whether or not all the taxpayers paid what they were supposed to pay. It is not complete checking.

The IRS assures us that at present, with the computer ability they have currently, they cannot do that; but they project that sometime in the future, perhaps next year, that would be possible, but very costly. They say there might be some errors anyway. Of course, there might be some errors. What we are after is cheaters, and the errors are both ways. Some people overpay, never get it back, do not realize they have overpaid. An audit might show that they had some money there they were not supposed to have. But if the audit showed that they had not paid their taxes, those individuals would be identified and they would get their dun plus the penalty from IRS to pay it up.

What does this provision in the 1099 tax bill accomplish? It is a ploy of the American Banking Association; they are the people whom we represent in this body. Indeed, during the March 21, 1983

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

There was a reason for a lot of people asking us this simple question: Why not go after the cheaters? I ask that question, too. Why not? Is it too costly? Certainly, $85, on average, to track down a nonfiler is not too costly. That seems to me a very good business for the Treasury Department and the IRS to engage in.

The people who ask that question, ordinary taxpayers, are asking it because they know that they pay their taxes. They are asking it, too. They say, "What is this new requirement in the law that forces upon us a new method of collecting taxes?" Many of them state in their letters to me—and I assume to every other Senator—that they do pay their taxes; they do view it as income and report it. They attach their 1099 forms to their tax form at the end of the year, the 1040 form. They know they are paying it. Why put another level on this?

I might say this, in sort of rebuttal to what has been said here previously when we are discussing the Kasten amendment for repeal. There is the feeling that we should take too lightly the complaints of these taxpayers. That is No. 1. I think these taxpayers are legitimate in saying to us in their letters: "Why is it necessary to have a new requirement placed on myself and my wife when we have been reporting all of the interest and dividend income that we receive? Is not another intrusion or another layer of IRS regulations upon us? And what good is it?" Those complaints or statements are simply inquiries. I do not think we should take those too lightly because we must be able to justify why this is in the law that is going to deal in the law. They are the people who provide the money for the Treasury. They are the people whom we represent and the people who are really in a representative form of government supposed to be heard and listened to.

I am not too much impressed by the counterargument that anything dealing with this—the Kasten amendment for an outright appeal or my amendment now for simply a delay in implementation of withholding provisions in the law—is a ploy of the American Bankers Association. I do not believe that has had much effect on me individually. I cannot recall ever a time when I became really concerned about what the American Bankers Association had to say on tax matters that affected individual taxpayers.

I look to the banking association to give me a viewpoint of banking law, but I am not overly impressed either by whatever they have to say on this particular provision of law or by any counterargument that says "Well, all you are doing is just another layer of intrusion or action to the American Bankers Association position is."

I think that that probably holds true for all the Senators of this body. I think it probably holds true for all the...
I think that it is worth noting right here that the Treasury Department's Office of Tax Analysis in connection with this issue in 1980, when President Carter proposed an withholding proposal, indicated taxpayers would be able to offset this increase through legitimate adjustments, and the Treasury's Office of Tax Analysis in 1980 said approximately 95 percent of the acceleration effect of withholding on dividend income would simply be offset by adjustment.

For the individuals who estimate their taxes due and do it on a quarterly basis, whether they are salaried or self-employed or farmers or ranchers or partnerships, they can also, according to law, change their estimates of what their taxes are due under existing law, and after July 1 it is reasonable to believe that when they make those quarterly estimates they are going to adjust those quarterly estimates.

What I really believe is that what we are experiencing now is a true form of representative government, where a lot of people all at the same time are zeroing in on something that they feel is not a good tax provision that affects them personally because taxes, after all, for a taxpayer are a very personal thing whether or not you are bearing your share or whether or not you are burdened with a new form or whether or not you put a new requirement of filling out and see how you pay your taxes. They simply seem to be saying to me they do not feel that this particular provision has merit and they have had too much of this. They want to get rid of some of it.

I do not believe it serves any purpose to glibly overestimate what this particular tax provision would gain in revenue for the Treasury. I think there has been overestimation, and the reason I think there has been overestimation is that I think it has been unwise in providing many people with actual readjust their tax payments because of withholding on some of the interest and dividends that they receive.

Why do I say that? If it is an ordinary wage earner or salaried individual who has a certain amount of withholding out every month or every week or every 2 weeks out of every paycheck and he, after July 1, finds that there is additional withholding or standing on the interest that he has, then he is going to make an adjustment, and that is, our course, provided by law. It is required. It is one of the provisions. How else would it be fair, unless on the same basis of tax the individual tax payer may or may not be correct, plus severer doubts that this provision will really generate much additional revenue.

It seems to me that if there is that many people who are evading taxes, cheating on their income tax returns, and so forth, there must be a way of getting them and making sure that they pay their taxes.

This was pointed out to us as very obvious: What does the 10-per cent tax on dividend or interest payment actually mean in the tax obligation for someone who is cheating? Treasury says if they are nonreporting, if they are just one of those millions of people—and they say 5 million, and I find that a little difficult to believe, because I asked them for a sale of argument right now—I will just concede it is 5 million—they are going to pick up a lot of people who have never reported and really owe taxes.

Well, we have already done over that a few individuals and that method of doing it. Just go out and search for people who are nontaxpayers, nonfilers of the 1040 form, and the Treasury, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation, says that costs about $85 per individual.

The other method is to compare the 1099 form with the taxpayer's statement and see whether or not he really did file and look for that. We have the 1099 form, and look for that individual and see whether he has got a 1040 form, because surely there ought to be a matching 1040 form.

So people are saying, "Well, you know it is pretty hard to believe you can get away without paying taxes and without really being an out-and-out crook, and being a very determined crook." I think there is a lot of merit to that simple statement and there is a lot of truth to it. So the may. "What is that burden?" First of all, it is a withholding provision that would start to come out of their payments on interest and dividends. Then, second, if they do not think they really should be covered at all, they can file what is called a W-6 form. That is just something else they can file. They file that with each institution.

Well now I have already stated that while in our household my wife and I receive about half a dozen of these 1099 forms per year, we are not very big in this field and there are a lot of elders who say, "Well, I really think, after paying my income from different institutions than what is represented in our household, of my wife and me. So let us say many of those households have about 10 different 1099 forms. So they can file a W-6 form and then they are not exempt, they can file that W-6 form with each of those institutions and then they are exempt. Those are filed presumably also with the IRS by the institutions. We are told that that figure might be as many as 200 million W-6 forms.

So you begin to understand the magnitude of what this complaint is about. It is about paperwork. It is about additional forms, and it is about really wondering, when it is all over, about that number of forms, about that number of individual transactions with the institutions, with the individual tax payers and then relate it to whether or not the IRS really comes up with any additional revenue.

I happen to believe the estimates for this gain in revenue for the Treasury has been overestimated by the Treasury, by the IRS. But even if it were not overestimated I would say to Treasury, I would ask them the same simple question that is asked in so many letters I receive from taxpayers of Montana and that is, why not go after the cheaters then? Why not match up these forms and go after them and collect the money from them, gather them right into the tax paying fold where they belong?
Mr. DOLE. Does that require unanimous consent?

Mr. MELCHER. No, it would not. The amendment is so modified.

Mr. MELCHER. So we are at the point where we are really questioning whether all the paperwork is necessary and whether it is really going to bring in the amount of revenue that it is projected to bring in.

Madam President, I would suggest that is the reason for my amendment because there are legitimate questions, there are unanswered questions, there is really some concern about this being just another batch of forms to be filled by individual taxpayers without really benefiting anybody very much, and particularly not benefiting the country and the Treasury with additional revenue.

Why? Because, No. 1, how much does it cost to handle all the paper, just to file to be exempt? That is No. 1. We do not have the answer to that. If you ask the Treasury Department, if you ask the Joint Committee on Taxation, if you ask the Senate Finance Committee what does that cost, you will get an answer that is honest and very short; they do not know. They have no idea.

The next point is, what does it really cost to the individual taxpayers? Well, there is a cost, sure it is. It is the cost the individual taxpayers? Well, we have no idea. They do not know. They have no idea.

Let me point out what we are trying to do in this very sick economy of the United States is to get additional revenue for the Treasury so the deficit is not as large as it is, and also to encourage savings. And the reason we want to encourage savings is because we realize that the amount of savings per individual in America is lower than any other industrial country, and that is one of the reasons which prevents us from bringing down interest rates as rapidly as we would like to see them brought down.

We have done a lot in the last year or two around here in encouraging savings. Individual retirement accounts come to mind immediately and it is a very sound mechanism, a very sound provision in our tax law to encourage savings, and it is having some advantages.

Now, this, if this is viewed by individuals who have savings as a bad piece of tax law there may be some inadvertent discouragement for greater savings, for individual savings. That will be counterproductive if that happens to be the case and that should be thoroughly evaluated so that all taxpayers understand "Well, really this is something that does not bother me very much" or "We established this indeed as something that does bother me as an individual Senator and I think your point is well taken," and I think we ought to reconsider this.

Our amendment would do that and allow us time for that reconsideration. Is there a need to consider this proposal if this method gains net dollars for the Treasury? In all candor and in all honesty, I would have to state that it is my judgment that this is the crux of this particular law. If this really gains much in dollars for the Treasury, we have to be very sure that if it is going to be repealed, it is going to be considered that there is some offsetting revenue gains.

Now, I did not happen to vote for this particular bill in 1982. I objected to this provision in it and several other provisions in it and thought it was a rather poor tax revenue bill. But that is just my judgment.

But I felt the proponents of a tax bill that I opposed, had merit to the argument that additional taxes were necessary; that the economy was at a very fragile stage; that further increase in the deficit over and above what was projected would be very damaging to an economic recovery.

So part of the consideration I believe must be given to this issue is indeed what the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Finance Committee, has so correctly stated. If it is going to be revised, where is the revenue lost going to be made up?

That presents two points, of course. The first is, what will be the revenue loss? I voice my judgment that revenue gain, as indicated by the Treasury, is overestimated; that there simply is not that much revenue gain for the reasons I have outlined and perhaps for others that I have not noted. That can be better addressed, I suspect, in the next couple of weeks when we review not only the updated presentation of the Treasury but also updated points that will be made by the opponents of this and see what the merits of the argument are.

But we are going to be looking at a lot of different tax revenue measures.
I think that is a fair proposal to make. I think it is obvious with such a provision, so long as it is so vigorously opposed, even though it seems on its face to be very fair—opposed by the chairman of the Finance Committee and also the administration—it is fair to attach it to a bill of some note, of some importance, that might have a consequence of its way through both this body and the House and then down to the President’s desk to be signed into law.

Since it only is a delay for further review and does not do much damage to anybody’s peace of mind on the merits or demerits of this particular withholding provision in our Tax Code—it simply says let us look at it again before it goes into effect and see whether it is worth it, and if it is worth it, it is justified—I would hope we can accept it. I do not in any respect want to abuse my bank in quick passing of the bill. I simply believe it is a method for accomplishing the purpose which we are all here to do, to be fair in the matter of taxes. It does become a very personal point and is very much on the minds of the individual taxpayers. With evidence that it is on their minds, I think it only just and wise that we heed that evidence and allow for time for a thorough consideration of this provision before it goes into effect in 5 months. This amendment would accomplish that.

Credit Union National Association, Inc.

Hon. John Melcher,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Melcher: The Credit Union National Association, Inc. (CUNA) supports repeal of withholding of taxes on interest and dividends in favor of more reasonable, less costly measures to improve taxpayer compliance in this area.

Before we argue against withholding, we would like to make you aware of what CUNA has been doing to educate credit unions about compliance with its new withholding law, and that interest is in repealing the law, but our obligation is to obey the law; so we proceed on both fronts. On November 15, 1982, the day IRS issued temporary withholding regulations, CUNA published a “Special Withholding Edition” of its newsletter, devoted entirely to educating credit unions about withholding.

CUNA has conducted six seminars on withholding, one of which Senate Finance Committee staff helped secure appropriate IRS staff to explain the regulations to us. For that we are grateful.

CUNA has published a 153 page compliance manual and over 5,500 manuals have been ordered to date.

A 90-minute compliance video tape program has been distributed to state credit union leagues as part of our educational video network.

Another six national seminars are being conducted in April 1983, with hundreds of compliance seminars being conducted by credit union leagues and chapters throughout the country.

Quantitative Arguments

Table 1 and 2—Cost to Credit Unions

Our data suggests that for the first full year of compliance credit unions will have to spend $78 million in order to comply with the new withholding law and regulations.

Table 3 and 4—Value of Float to Credit Unions

The provision for a 30-day float provided by Congress to compensate financial institutions for the start-up costs of withholding 10% of interest and dividend earnings is woefully inadequate. A credit union in the $2 million to $5 million asset category is expected to experience an average cost of $4,000 to be in compliance with the law during the first year. Use of the float for 30 days (really 18 banking days) will provide the credit union only $189.00 during that same year.

Totals indicate that the $78 million first year cost will be reduced by only $3.6 million in costs associated with the withholding. Credit unions will therefore have to absorb a $72.2 million operating cost increase the first year in order to collect and deliver withheld taxes to the Federal government. This is 92% of the withholding.
Sure, the withholding law exempts certain people from the withholding requirement, but implementing this system will be complicated, costly and confusing to credit unions and members alike. The smaller the credit union, the more expensive it will be to put the law into effect, as a percentage of earnings.

The cost of implementing the withholding program will, of necessity, be passed on to savers and borrowers. This is especially true for credit unions — non-profit, cooperative, member-owned institutions. Figures supplied by the Credit Unions National Associations' Economic and Research Division reveal that the net result will approach $700 million in the first year alone.

At a time when federal tax policy is trying to encourage people to save more of their money, withholding of taxes on interest and dividends appears to be a puzzling deviation, as savers and investors may be financing some of their own tax cut next July.

On July 1, 1983 paychecks will be larger as taxes on withholdings are reduced to 10 percent. But, on that same day, 10 percent of the interest earned from savings and stock dividends will begin flowing to the Treasury, and the national savings and investment pool will be depleted by some $28 billion yearly.

Credit unions, which paid $5.29 billion in dividends to members in 1981, will see a $314 million drain in liquidity as a result of withholding. Sinking growth in credit union balances will thus be slowed by the loss of 10 percent of the dividends.

Besides withholding, TEFRA did a great many things to tighten compliance not the least of which was to get the Treasury to begin reporting interest and dividends on all billions of U.S. Government obligations. All of the compliance tightening positions in TEFRA should be given a chance to work, and evaluated before withholding should be considered. We are not so far from a high compliance level that abandoning the voluntary compliance system is warranted. In October 1980, IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz testified before a Congressional subcommittee on the "IRS Administration of the Tax Laws; (Income Information Document Matchings):"

"Document matching for information returns is done through the Information Return Program (IRP). The purpose of this program is to increase the Service's ability to enforce the tax laws equitably and thereby foster a high degree of voluntary compliance. The goal of IRP is to identify income reporting discrepancies or nonfilling of tax returns, and to correct any such discrepancies by collecting any additional tax or re-funding any overpayment. IRP is a priority program which complements the Service's other compliance programs."

"Finally, I would like to discuss several aspects of the draft GAO report on our computer capabilities for income matching. The Service's existing computer system is adequate to accommodate a 100 percent documentation matching program. We are now beginning a 3-phased plan for replacing and improving our computer capabilities. Our new computer system will have the capability for 100 percent matching even if there is an annual growth in workload of 8 percent. We believe this provides a sufficient margin for both growth under existing requirements and new programs that will increase the number of documents received."

"The draft GAO report did conclude that inefficient design of the information returns processing system and mismatches between job orders and computer resources are limiting the productivity of the IRS computers. Several IRS study groups have analyzed these problems and made recommendations that are now being made to implement some of these recommendations but we cannot immediately undertake the total redesign of the system."

This statement leads CUNA to the conclusion that IRS has the ability to do its job with some help, without creating a new federal bureaucratic system.

Make no mistake; credit unions, and all of our members, welcome simple and just tax laws which ensure that all taxpayers pay their fair share. But the withholding law enacted last year will punish the honest majority of savers and credit union members.

We stand ready to work with the Senate Finance Committee, the Department of Treasury and the IRS in arriving at interest and dividend compliance improvement measures that will more deliberately preserve the goals of a fair, efficient and voluntary tax collection system.

Sincerely,

JAMES C. BARR, CAE.

Total: 529,290. 472,713. 419,103. 341,819. 42,385.3. 33,962. 27,345.4.

Note: From the data found in Table 6, we can estimate that the earnings available to the Treasury from the early receipt of credit union withholding would total $27.3 million when adjustments are made to the expected withholding. For credit unions with assets of under $1 million (12,449 credit unions) Treasury earnings would total $532,890. (The estimate would be $1.83 million if Treasury were assumed to receive the unadjusted withholding at the beginning of the year.)
Mr. DOLE. I thank the distinguished Senator from Montana for what I consider to be an objective discussion of this matter, one of the few I have heard recently. I commend the Senator from Montana for his thoughtful approach to this whole issue. Again, it is a matter that has to be debated at great length. I am prepared to do that if necessary.

Mr. President, I know the distinguished Senator from West Virginia would like to speak on an unrelated matter. I wonder if I might ask unanimous consent to yield to the Senator from West Virginia for that purpose without losing my right to the floor or recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I will be speaking on social security. I will drop back 48 years and give, I think, some interesting comments about the measure passed at that time. I am the only Member of the Congress serving today who was here in 1935. I supported the measure and, of course, voted for it as a Member of the House of Representatives.

I am very grateful to the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) for permitting me to step back for almost a half century, not just to be nostalgic, but to give some of the reasons why social security came to passage almost a half century ago.

I am very grateful also to the manager of the bill on the Democratic side, the Senator from Louisiana (Mr. LONG) for the type of consideration being given this important legislation over considerable time here in the Senate.

I have listened, of course, with a process of learning—I am always trying to learn—to the able Senator from Montana (Mr. MELCHER), who has been talking on a specific subject related to the possible inclusion of an amendment relating to withholding on interest and dividends during the consideration of this measure.

The social security program, Mr. President, does have a special significance for me because it was my privilege, yes, it was my responsibility—as a Member of the House of Representatives of the United States to actively support and to vote for the original legislation 48 years ago this April. I point out the date, August 14, 1935, when Franklin Roosevelt signed this monumental bill, a breakthrough bill, into law.

I recall it vividly on April 19, 1935, when the House, after a long, arduous, oftentimes very spirited 8-day debate, approved the social security package by a vote of 372 to 33.

The Senate, on June 19, passed the measure by an impressive vote of 77 to 6.

At that signing of the bill on August 14, 1935, there were certain words spoken by the President of this Republic. I quote these words from Franklin Roosevelt. He said:

We can never insure 100 percent of the population against 100 percent of the hazards and vicissitudes of life, but we have tried to frame a law—said the President thinking in terms of the Congress—which will give some measure of protection to the average citizen and his family against poverty-ridden old age.

Mr. President, I believe the program has been extremely successful during the years. I think it is an example of a Government program that has worked and fulfilled its original promise.

From a simple premise of assuring our citizens that old age would be free of financial anxiety to a complex program of this very hour that provides tens of millions of Americans with monthly checks as well as health care. Approximately 36 million Americans are now receiving, as we know, monthly checks.

Mr. President, I recall for our colleagues a statement I made on April 15, 1933, during the debate which perhaps is pertinent as I speak today.

We have passed through the worst, and we now have it behind us; but there are millions of worthy older people in this country who now and in the future will face a real cause of fear a hundred times greater than the fear of depressed business.

Ingratitude is among the more reprehensible human vices.

Let us not be ungrateful for our delivery from the fear of poverty, and let us demonstrate our gratitude for this blessing by help. The Congress is reacting to the problems, frankly, and that is understandable, of this system. We need to provide and we will provide a strong answer to the financing concerns of not only the American people, but I have no doubt that the membership of Congress, regardless of party, regardless of the occupant of the White House, that all of us working on Capitol Hill and downtown can plan for social security—there is no doubt that many of the situations which are very, very troublesome at this hour.

Mr. President, what we are doing today will go a long way toward correcting the present financing of the program. There is much, remaining to do. I know Senator DOLE and Senator Long, the two managers of this important legislation, are in a position to improve and can improve it, with their expert handling of measures of this kind over the years. I think that Congress will not renge on the basic promise of 48. Changes, yes, will be made. Provisions will be modified.

Mr. President, I am gratified to have voted for the original legislation. I believe that it has served the country well. I am sure that out of the work on Capitol Hill now, in both bodies, we shall be able to make necessary improvements. I think, however, we have to come to grips with the financing changes which are necessary in the bill that is before us. We cannot pass them by.

The package that will come out, I say to the managers of the bill, will not be a perfect package. The compromises have already been made, in part, and on subsequent votes will, perhaps, be further made. I am not discouraging my colleagues from another on a pending amendment or amendments. I am only saying that, in my opinion, it is absolutely necessary for the Congress to pass a measure coping with the problems of social security as it exists today, and that the President of the United States be in a position to sign the measure that comes to him from Capitol Hill.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia (Mr. RANDOLPH) for his eloquence. I thank the distinguished Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair.

Mr. RANDOLPH. I thank the Senator from West Virginia (Mr. RANDOLPH) for his eloquence. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. MOYNIHAN thanked the Senator from New York. It is a great blessing to possess riches, but It is a great blessing to possess riches, but It Is a great blessing to possess riches, but It Is a great blessing to possess riches, but Ingratitude is among the more reprehensible human vices.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia (Mr. RANDOLPH). I think it is remarkable that he is standing here today, reciting personal experience with reference to the first Social Security Act. It is another indication of the Senator's commitment and dedication.

I advise the Senator that we are going to do our best to keep our commitment, without getting into the merits or demerits of the pending amendment, as the Senator from West Virginia stated, I deeply appreciate the Senator's statement. It should demonstrate to all of us the seriousness of what we are about and what we should do—hopefully before this coming election. I thank the Senator very much for his eloquence.
absolute last minute they can have this statute on the books such that they have the authority to make the changes is May 7.

We will come back on April 5. There are 4 short weeks, as I count them, during that 28-29 days in which this legislation has to become statute. If anything lets it slip by today or, at the very most, noon tomorrow, prospects of Congress recessing with the House, of getting a final bill—it is a large bill; it is not as long as many, but it is a bill filled with details, not just dealing with social security—and getting it to the President, who now expects to sign the legislation as it has passed the House and comes out of the Finance Committee, that is, nonetheless, fraught with the kinds of delays that are natural to the legislative process—if we delay by an extended debate on any extraneous issue, we are putting at peril this entire enterprise.

I do not wish to exaggerate, but I do not think what has been done here can be done a second time. Already the strains on the alliances are showing, and to give up that opportunity to show that we can govern, that what we have created we can preserve, seems to me reckless and not in the public interest. In order that I not urge that we speed along, it seems to me I ought not to talk at too great a length myself, but I wanted to make clear that we have a deadline and we are beginning to fritter away that opportunity.

I hope Senators will understand what could be the consequences. It would be ruinous of our reputation and it would be detrimental to the stability of our people, and their confidence in us would be gone.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New York. I certainly share the views expressed by the Senator.

I want to agree on a date to debate withholding. It is difficult to be restrained in talking about this lobbying campaign by the ABA, particularly when you read yesterday's Washington Post. I hope we can finally determine the extent of how this campaign originated and how they picked those who were engaged in this campaign. But I understand that the American Bankers Association borrowed a technique commonly used by marketeers and conducted "focus-group" sessions with customers. They discovered that once people were aware of the law they were "af-fronted" by it. That, the lobbyists admit, is just what they were hoping to discover.

Then they took that latent anger and manipulated it into a public wrath that buried Congress beneath a mountain of mail, gummed up the floor of the Senate for a week, generated a flash of telegenic anger from President Reagan and provoked threats of retaliation from Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan and Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert J. Dole. The whole effort also touched off an argument over what the boundaries of fair play are when an interest group sets out to mobilize—critics would say inflame—public opinion.

This is how they did it:

In the focus-group sessions in Chicago, put together by the American Bankers Association, people assembled around a table and probed for their attitudes toward government, taxes, savings and banks. They were paid $25 apiece for 90 minutes of their thoughts. They were not told who paid the

We want them to tell what come out of the focus groups. What we do not have—and I hope that somebody will now tell us—is what these people were told. We have been saying for days on this floor that this was an underhanded campaign.

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. Later, because I want to keep my thoughts here—that this was an underhanded, heavy-handed campaign by the American Bankers Association. We will have now what the American Bankers Association would have been called this "focus group," where you put people in a room and you use two-way mirrors to get their reaction, what questions they were asked about withholding. What they were told about withholding. I just assume from the ads that I have read from the American Bankers Association they were probably told it was a new tax. That is what the credit unions told everybody: "Against this withholding tax.

People were told by the American Bankers Association that we were going to loot the savings accounts of their depositors, we were going to pick the pockets of their customers, and that their savings were going to disappear. In the Senate.

Now, I will say, to his credit that the Senator from Montana said very clearly this is not a new tax. It is not a new tax, but I must say that I begin to wonder just how far the banks may have gone because today I received a letter from a man in Chicago. Of course, I guess that is where all these shenanigans started. But he said, "Attached is a copy of a letter to Congressman Sidney Yates which I thought might be of interest to you." It is addressed to Congressman Yates, in a friendly of mine on the House side who happens to be a prominent Democrat.

He said:

Dear Congressman Yates: This week I received a card from you acknowledging receipt of a letter from me opposing the withholding of 10 percent of interest and dividend income.

You may have such a letter bearing my name and address but let me assure you that neither my wife nor I wrote or sent it. Does this not reflect Senator Dole's contention that the purported massive public opposition to this measure is not truly public but a strong initiative on the part of service interests, such as the banking lobby?

That is only one letter, but I am wondering how many thousands of letters have been mailed to Senators saying that they have been signed by some of our constituents. This was another part of the bankers' heavy-handed campaign to mail in fictitious letters, or take the list of their depositors and flood us with mail and say, "All these people are opposed to withholding."

To me, I think it is disgraceful. Here we are, having just passed the jobs bill—we have not even finished it yet—and now the social security bill—I am almost finished last week, had it not been for the American Bankers Association gearing up the Senate and trying to repeal withholding.

The so-called Easter recess starts on Friday or Thursday of this week, and we have an effort. I assume the American Bankers Association is gearing up again because now they have the old people hostage. Now they want them to wait while they tie up the Senate.

The social security system is about to be bankrupt. We are talking about $165 billion that we need to infuse into this system in the next several years.

But some seem to be saying, oh, no, we cannot do that. We cannot worry about the senior citizens in America. We first have to take care of the American Bankers Association and their interests. They almost beat the bill to relieve the homeless and the jobless, and now they are after relief for the senior citizens. I wonder to what lengths the American Bankers Association: yes, the Savings and Loan League; yes, the credit unions; go.

We set a time for a debate on withholding, April 15, and we said we will have a full and complete debate. I thought they would be satisfied with that. But it seems to me that there is no way to satisfy the American Bankers Association lobby.

I wonder how long some of the bankers in my State and other States will put up with this kind of campaign. The American Bankers Association position does not reflect the view of the bankers in my State or in the State of Montana. This is a shameful campaign, carried on in an unfair way, by a lobbying group known as the American Bankers Association.

I thought it was rather interesting that Time magazine, on this week's cover, should have highlighted "Tax Cheating—Bad and Getting Worse." That is what we are suggesting is the problem.

Does somebody want to stand up and support tax cheating? It is said, "How are we going to pay for eliminating withholding? We will take it away from the third year of the tax cut, take it away from the working people instead of those who are paying their taxes.

If we have to debate withholding on social security, we will debate withholding on social security.

I will suggest tonight that we table this amendment and get on, because I share the view of the Senator from New York. There are a lot of other things to concern us around here rather than a mail campaign that has many Senators quaking in their boots. I believe that once we have the full story of how this campaign was started and generated and how it was sustained, many Senators who now have the pro-bank position will suggest that maybe you cannot really support a campaign of that kind.

A lot of people say, “Bob, you can’t take on the bankers.” The Senator from Kansas is not taking on anyone. The Senator from Kansas is supporting the President of the United States, who in his 1983 budget said we should have better control of taxes, less shifting of taxes, and a fair system. It is not a new tax. It is a collection of tax.

There are 20 million Americans who do not report all their interest and dividend income. That is a substantial number. I do not suggest for one moment that it is because they are dishonest. Much of it is inadvertent and honest mistakes. But what is wrong with collecting taxes that are due? I think that is the issue.

There was another story that appeared in the Washington Post this morning by Jane Bryant Quinn captioned “The Truth About Withholding, Minus Tall Tales From Banks,” which I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

THE TRUTH ABOUT WITHHOLDING, MINUS TALL TALES FROM BANKS

NEW YORK—You may have been misled by the widespread disinformation campaign that the banking industry is conducting against the new tax withholding system on interest and dividend income.

Big headlines in ads are scaring savers, by saying that “Congress wants a piece of your savings,” or “that 10 percent of the money you earn in interest is going to disappear.”

The truth is that only those Americans owe taxes on their interest income, and the government will be trying harder to collect the legal taxes due. But the truth is that many savers, especially the elderly, into thinking that the government is grabbing something extra.

Even President Reagan criticized the banking industry last week for the sound and fury of its campaign.

Congress created the new tax-collecting system during its desperate search for revenue. Congress did not get where it is today by saying that the budget deficits were getting much worse. An estimated 10 percent of the people who owe taxes on their interest income don’t pay—either because they cheat or because they forget. Taxes are also evaded by an estimated 18 percent of the people who earn dividends.

The most efficient way to collect income taxes is to withhold them automatically at the source. That is what’s done for the taxes due on wages; they are deducted from every paycheck you receive.

Withholding on dividends and annuities began this year. And starting July 1, there will be automatic withholding on the income you earn from your retirement accounts and your savings.

Some of the banks collected signatures and mailed the cards themselves. Some provided stamps. Altogether, they generated more mail on a single issue than most legislators can remember. Cards have been pouring into the Senate Finance Committee at the rate of 30,000 a week.

The banking institutions object to the cost of tax withholding, which will be paid either by their customers (in higher fees) or by their shareholders (in lower profits).

A majority in the Senate and House of Representatives now backs a bill to repeal tax withholding on interest and dividends. But the leadership of both Houses opposes repeal, as does the White House, with the biggest vote of all. Reagan announced last week that he would veto the jobs bill if it came to him with a rider repealing interest and dividend withholding. And the House Financial Services Committee finally passed the jobs bill Thursday after the withholding amendment’s sponsor was persuaded to withdraw in return for its consideration on the floor April 15.

The government estimates that automatic tax withholding will pick up an extra $4 billion to $5 billion in taxes next year.

To straighten out the disinformation you have been getting, here is what’s scheduled to happen July 1:

Ten percent of your interest and dividend income will be withheld toward your income taxes due. This is not a new tax. It is simply a new way of collecting the present tax.

The government is not withholding 10 percent of the interest and dividends people believe. It is withholding 10 percent of the interest earned on your savings which, for most taxpayers, is less than the actual tax due.

When the taxes are withheld monthly from your savings account, you will have a little less money earning compound interest. The banks have been making a great deal of this, claiming that withholding is “looting” your savings. But the cost is small. At 9 percent interest, tax withholding will cost you 50 cents a year on each $1,000 in savings. And you need not even lose that. Banks are allowed to withhold taxes all at once, at the end of the year, which would leave all your money free to compound all year.

All low-income people and most of the elderly can exempt themselves from tax withholding. You are exempt if you paid no income tax last year ($1,000 on a joint return); or if you are 65 or older and paid no more than $1,500 in federal taxes last year ($500 on a joint return). This means that 87 percent of the elderly will not be subject to tax withholding.

But to get your exemption, you must file a return. The Treasury estimates that automatic tax withholding on savings will increase the number of tax returns filed by 500,000 to 600,000 for 1984.

Withholding is the backbone of our self-assessment system, which brings in more than half of what the IRS collected in 1982. Yet it has been under frequent attack throughout our tax history. At the same time, its soundness has been proven by the long experience both in England and in this country dating back to the 19th Century. It is hard to conceive of a sound income tax system that does not include a reasonable withholding procedure.

Tax withholding on dividends and interest was first introduced in the United States by the Revenue Act of July 1, 1862. It applied at an initial 3 percent rate to interest and dividends paid by all railroads, banks, trust companies, fire, marine, life inland, stock and mutual companies. In 1864, the withholding rate was increased from 3 percent to 5 percent and was extended to include interest and dividends of canal, turnpike and canal navigation companies. Only the salathink all we can do is discuss withholding. It would be a budget loss. The amendment is subject to a point of order under the Budget Act, because the loss in 1983 is $1.1 billion, and in 1984 it would be about $0.3 billion. So there is a point of order to be made under the Budget Act.

I know there has been a big question about who is going to be first. There have been meetings on the Republican side of the aisle today, the Steering Committee, trying to find who is going to offer the first withholding amendment. The Senator from Kansas knows that it is popular politically and that you will get a lot of fan mail if you repeal or delay withholding. But that does not mean it is the right thing to do.

The Senator from Kansas is fairly sensible and reasonable, but I really believe she is going to be the first. In the Senate when we finally learn how this campaign was put together and how it has been sustained.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. I will yield for a question.

Mr. MELCHER. The Senator has asked how the campaign was put together. I wonder if he would mind my stating—before I ask my question—that in the case of one taxpayer, who happened to be the wife of the aide who sits in this chair—he is out for a cup of coffee right now—who is a schoolteacher, she received this form, notice 662-A, to which the Senator from Kansas referred, last week, I believe, from the Treasury Department.

This is a form that goes out with every tax refund that is being mailed from the Treasury Department. This is a form that goes out with every tax refund that is being mailed right now. It say, “Attention, recipients of interest and dividends. New withholding program begins July 1.”

So far as that individual taxpayer is concerned, she was the wife of the aide, who is a schoolteacher—that was the first she heard of it. The first thing she did was buttonhole my aide when he got home that night, and she said to him:

Have you seen this notice? Now do you know what they are going to do to us? They are going to start withholding tax on interest and dividends. Why do you not say something to Senator Mr. Dole, to see whether he can do something about that, to block it?

I daresay that millions of other taxpayers are going to find out about this withholding to become effective July 1 from the explanation mailed to them either with their refund checks or, as the Senator from Kansas pointed out several days ago, in the 36 million checks which are going to be mailed out to social security recipients on April 1. They are going to learn of it for the first time.

Can the Senator tell me does not the reaction of this schoolteacher wife of my aide, just learning of it through the Treasury Department, by receiving this form from the Treasury Department with the refund check point out that there are a lot of people who are completely unaware of it and whatever this big campaign has been, do not necessarily get the word out? Is it not apparent that the IRS is doing their duty? They are now getting the word out. Would it not also be fair to say that a great number of taxpayers are going to have the same reaction as that schoolteacher did who objects to it?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me to answer the question, I cannot believe the schoolteacher did not know it beforehand if she teaches in this area because it has been rather widely reported and the banking lobby has not missed many. I do not know if they have been into the schools, but they have been everywhere else. I am certain if she had had an account she has gotten a notice in the bank account. If you walk into the bank or bank with one of these forms to fill out.

But I would also assume they withhold from her check, if she has withholding on her wages as a schoolteacher, and I do not know whether she is objecting to that also, but that is another matter.

Mr. MELCHER. I think that is the point. I think the point of further withholding is what she is objecting to.

Mr. DOLE. The point the Senator from Kansas makes is why should we withhold from the working people on wages and salaries?

Mr. MELCHER. She is working. These are working people.

Mr. DOLE. I said why should we.

Mr. MELCHER. I am giving the Senator a fair reaction. I am giving him a fair reaction of a taxpayer.

Mr. DOLE. If the Senator wants to broaden the amendment and change withholding on wages and salaries, we might be able to do business. I do not know why he wants to favor the rich and keep zapping the working people.

Mr. MELCHER. This is not the rich.

Mr. DOLE. If we are going to have withholding we should have withholding. If we are going to have special exemptions because the banks are powerful, the savings and loans are powerful, the banks have the power to fight, so the banks are powerful, we should have the exemptions for the working people, the people out there working with their hands every day.

We have had withholding. Withholding has been around for a long, long time, and I know a lot of working people would like it if we did not take it out of their checks every 2 weeks. They could put that aside and earn interest on it and do it the next 2 weeks, the next 2 weeks, the next 2 weeks. At the end of the year next April they could pay their taxes.

The banks are arguing that we are not letting people keep money there for investments.

What about the millions and millions of working people who should have the same right?

I wish to say again. Just to include in the Record a few editorials—here is one from the St. Petersburg Times: “Baloney from Banks,” which I thought made a lot of sense. It talks about this campaign and how they give you a little example here.

It has been 40 years since Uncle Sam started taking his piece of every pay check.

If the Senator wants to keep the same happiness that’s been the guide, that’s how long income taxes would have been withheld from bank interest and stock dividends also. Here for money is earned, it ought to be treated alike.

It takes more than fairness, unfortunately, to make Washington tick; in this case, it took the lengthening shadows of $200-billion budget deficits. The reforms that Congress passed last year, when fully effective, will mean some $64 billion a year in new revenue—nearly all of it representing taxes that are already being paid by people who “forget” their dividend and interest income when filing their 1040’s.

It went on to say:

The bankers, it seems, are not good losers. Sympathy would come more readily for their valid points, such as the extra paperwork. But, if they were to start disputing their real stake in the issue. Corporations and pension plans are also newly subject to withholding, but few are protesting. Why the banks? The complaint is that corporations are accustomed to paying out dividends quarterly while the banks are accustomed to retaining and using and investing their credit.

Savings deposits, market funds, time deposits and other interest-bearing accounts pay household depositors some $220-billion a year, using the industry’s own figures. Most of it is credited directly to those accounts, where it remains on deposit, enlarging the banks’ portfolios; raising their lending reserves and potential profits. At the uniform 10 percent quarterly withholding rate, that’s an average of $11-billion a year less on the banks’ government’s accounts. Much of that, of course, eventually would be paid by depositors who are honest with the IRS regarding their interest income. Wage-earners have no choice in the matter of withholding, why should anyone else?

And that is the $64 question. I have not seen the banks up here pleading that we should repeal withholding on those who work in their banks. What about the people who work in their banks? What about all the depositors who work for a living and have their taxes withheld on their wages?

So if the banks want to make a uniform, balanced presentation, then we can listen to those arguments.

But there are literally dozens and dozens of editorials. Once the truth comes out, the people will understand why they want to favor the rich, why they want to help the rich, why they want the banks to make a profit.

vince nearly everyone with one side of the argument. If I tell 10 people in the room that this is a new tax, I assume 10 people might believe it is a new tax. If I tell 10 people that this is going to pick your savings or reduce your savings, I imagine 10 people would believe that.

That is how this campaign was generated. So we owe a debt to Paul Taylor who reported that in yesterday's Post about the bank's psychological ploys to stoke the savings rebellion. They have stoked the rebellion already. They have stoked a rebellion—no doubt about it. The genie is out of the bottle.

Now we must be treated with this issue every time a bill comes up to help someone or carry out the President's program, or to carry out the bipartisan Social Security Commission effort, which was endorsed by the President, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and by a vote of 18 to 1 in the Finance Committee, Democrats and Republicans. We have to lay that aside now so we can debate this for 2 or 3 days. Social Security should have been passed last week. But no, we could not do that. We had to take care of the bank interests. We should have passed the jobs bill early last week. But no, we could not do that. We had to take care of the bank interests because they are the town and sending letters and calling on the telephone and flooding you with mail.

They may eventually win, but not on this bill. If we are going to have a social security bill, it is not going to have this amendment on it.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DOLE. I yield for a question.

Mr. CHAFEE. I wish to say to the Senator from Kansas that coming into the middle of this debate after the weekend gives one a horrible feeling that it is a long day's journey into night. We were through this all last week.

Am I not correct in asking the distinguished Senator from Kansas that the Senator from Kansas and the majority leader have promised to those proponents of this legislation that in April the Senator will give these folks who do not want an increase in taxes, those who do not want the Federal employees included. Am I not correct in suggesting that this very, very delicate and important compromise is liable to become unraveled the longer we wait around and deal with what I might say are extraneous amendments, not going to the substance of the Social Security Act?

Mr. DOLE. Yes. In fact, we decided to take it up on April 15. We thought that was an appropriate date. That is the date for filing deadline for tax returns, on April 15 because that is on a Friday. We would not want to delay anyone's travel plans on Friday. But I think within 2 or 3 weeks after that we might get to a vote.

Mr. CHAFEE. So, in effect, they are going to have their day in court sooner or later, as I understand it.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator is correct.

Mr. CHAFEE. I do not understand the reason that the proponents have brought this legislation up now. We threshed around, for a whole week last week, and finally got it set aside while we went to the jobs bill, and now we are on one of the most important pieces of legislation we will consider in this Congress, namely saving of the social security trust fund. I personally believe we are going to pass this. We are running up against deadlines. Not only are we running up against deadlines, but we have a series of other serious amendments that are going to come up.

Am I correct in asking the Senator from Kansas—there is a major amendment going to be proposed on the floor dealing with social security; is that not correct?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator is correct.

We still have about a half dozen amendments and the distinguished Senator from Louisiana has a major amendment.

Mr. CHAFEE. I do not know whether we have reached time agreements on those amendments or not.

Mr. DOLE. No. The Senator from Kansas is not willing to give anyone a time agreement for the reason we are now here. But we have made a time agreement, the Senator from Kansas would be locked into voting on this amendment within 30 minutes or 1 hour or 1 day or 2.

Mr. CHAFEE. So we have a real problem here in getting on with this legislation, getting it passed, and I think I would be correct in saying to the Senator from Kansas that if this social security legislation is not passed within, say, 2 or 3 days, then it has to go to conference, it has got to come back and be passed, and if that does not happen, we cannot move to the end of the Easter recess, which is 10 days or so away after that.

Meanwhile pressure will be building up from every group that does not want to be in it, those who do not want to postpone the COLAs, those who do not want the Federal employees included. I am not correct in suggesting that this very, very delicate and important compromise is liable to become unraveled the longer we wait around and deal with what I might say are extraneous amendments, not going to the substance of the Social Security Act?

Mr. CHAFEE. There is no doubt about it. This amendment plays right into the hands of the Federal employees who do not want the bill to pass in the first place, do not want to come under the bill. I find this rather strange, the ABA and the Federal employees unions working together. But you are right to point out this area, and I am not unsympathetic to the Federal employees, do not misunderstand me. I am not particularly sympathetic to the ABA.

Mr. CHAFEE. Am I not correct in saying that we have a jobs bill conference report to come back here?

bill, so that is not the issue—but there is not a nongermane amendment in it since we tried to limit this bill to social security, unemployment, and medicaid, and there has not been a single amendment brought to my attention that would violate the spirit of that. At least I hope we can get through this Chamber of the Senate without offering any amendment that did not affect either employment, medicare, prospective payment, or social security.

This is one of those, too, but that again does not mean that the Senator cannot offer it. As I have indicated, this is subject to a point of order under the Budget Act, and as to that we are expecting the Senator from New Mexico to arrive at any moment. I think he is still in Chicago. They have had a bad storm there, but at least he is on his way.

There are others that we will need in the next debate, and perhaps need these again, too.

In no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Bankers Shortighted on Tax Withholding

(By James J. Kilpatrick)

WASHINGTON | When it was all over at Archibald, back in 775 B.C., and the sun was setting on the battlefield, an aide came up to General Pyrrhus. "Well," said the aide, "we whumped the Romans this time."

Pyrrhus looked at the bloody field. He had lost two-thirds of his army. He looked at his aide and uttered the sentence that now became the battle cry, "Another battle will be won over the Panama Canal. Says Carroll Hubbard, who represents the First District of Kentucky, "It's awesome."

The same day, the speakers of the House and the president of the House, the speaker of the House and (4) the president of the Senate, passed a resolution, and there have been more than half of each chamber in support of their repeal bill, it looks as if the bankers may win. If they attempt to sell the repeal bill with other legislation the White House sorely wants, such as Social Security, they may even push the president into a corner where he has to sign the measure before Victory! They will have whumped the Romans.

Under the withholding law, scheduled to become effective in July, banks and corporations would be required to treat the payment of interest and dividends in somewhat the same fashion that all employers treat wages and salaries. Periodically, 10 percent of the dividend and interest income would be withheld and paid over to the Treasury. This is not a new tax in any sense. Subject to certain exemptions, income from dividends and interest is taxable.

The trouble is, according to Sen. Bob Dole, Republican of Kansas, that about 11 percent of interest payments and 15 percent of dividends never are reported on individual tax returns. The withholding law, he says, "will cut these non-compliance rates in half, and raise almost $4 billion each year."

I may be in a small minority, but I see nothing wrong with the act. On the contrary, I see much that is right. To listen to the bankers propaganda campaign, you might think that millions of little old ladies in tennis shoes, Baloney! The act provides a simple mechanism by which old folks in low-income brackets may exempt themselves from the tax.

The banks also are cultivating the impression that the act will cost them "untold billions" in paperwork. This too is baloney. Banks and corporations already are required to compile and report their payments of interest and dividends. In all but the smallest banks, the transfer of withheld taxes can be accomplished in the flicker of a computer's eye.

The repeal campaign has put some old fellows in bed together. In the House, such conservatives as Kemp of New York, Paul of Texas and Edwards of Oklahoma are co-sponsors with such liberals as Mikulski of Maryland, Simon of Illinois and Conyers of Michigan. The states of Nevada, Carolina and Texas of New-Carolina are walking hand in hand for repeal. Both Republicans and Democrats see an opportunity to put themselves on the side of the little old ladies, which politically speaking, is a nice side to be on.

But the act is not aimed at the little old ladies. It is aimed at those who have large incomes from dividends and interest and cheat on their income tax returns. Once this truth is grasped, the political advantage will shift.

In a speech to the American Bankers Association on Feb. 17, Senator Dole denounced the bankers advertising campaign and said they were making a Pyrrhic victory, the kind of Pyrrhic victories, one pays a heavy price.

[From the Newsday, Long Island, N.Y., Jan. 25, 1983]

An Unconvincing Case Against Withholding Taxes

The way bankers all across the country are howling about the prospective withholding tax on interest and dividends, it might appear that they and their customers are soon to be subjected to some exotic torture. But withholding a portion of income for taxes is hardly new, as every wage earner knows. Federal, state and even some local governments take a bite out of every paycheck. So does the Social Security system. And as taxpayers also understand, if they owe any additional tax beyond what was withheld, it has to be paid by April 15, if the government is to avoid forcing them to pay interest and dividends on accounts yielding more than $150 a year.

Bankers all around the country, led by the American Bankers Association, are leaning on their senators and representatives to repeal this withholding requirement. The banks are also trying to generate opposition to it among their customers, warning that the new rule will allow the government to "stand over your bank teller so it can reach directly into your bank account." Aside from the financial loss involved, the bankers are using the new rule to tarnish the confidential relationship between a bank and its customers.

That reasoning argues not only for the retention of the withholding requirement but for the expansion of the withholding system. After all, if the bankers are right, presumably the government is now standing over every payroll clerk each time a paycheck is issued.

Yet there's no reason to suspect that the relationship between wage earners and their employers has been adversely affected by the current withholding system. The bankers have failed to make a convincing case against the new withholding tax and neither the public nor Congress should be swayed by their arguments.

[From the State Journal-Register, Springfield, Feb. 1, 1983]

Interest Withholding Not Subversive

The banks in town have done a good job of getting people all up wound about interest withholding.

It's a master stroke. You can't walk into a bank lobby in Springfield without seeing the little petition cards to sign and send to your congressman or senators urging repeal of the withholding system. And their customers are obediently filling out the forms so the banks can send them in.

These are the same banks that charge you when you give them your money to use. As far as I'm concerned, when the banks say they're looking out for me, I start checking it out.

The interest and dividend withholding. Idea was part of the tax bill suggested last year by President Reagan and adopted by the whole package, which included tax increases and efforts to improve compliance, was an attempt to close the federal budget gap, something the banks said they wanted.

The provisions require banks and others to withhold 10 percent of the interest earned in accounts that generate at least $150 a year.

Realize this withholding is not a tax increase for you and me. We have been taxed on our interest earnings for a long time. But what Congress did was that 11 percent of the people failed to report interest income, and 15 percent failed to report dividend income. And you can bet the non-reporters weren't the ones with just meager savings.

Because it takes the tax money up front, in contrast to savings accounts which have not paid their fair share. What we keep hearing from the banks, however, is that withholding is something subversive.

Withholding taxes from one's income is not a sin. We aren't giving up the privilege of earning before spending. If you don't want to do that, there are savings accounts. The banks warn us. Defiled interest robs us of some of the benefit of compounding interest, the banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is aimed at those who don't want to do that, the banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding deprives taxpayers of earnings that they would have earned if they had not withheld their taxes. The banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is something subversive.

What prompts this disingenuous behavior?

Surely no real concern for the convenience of depositors. As a matter of fact, bankers opposed the exemption provisions for elderly and low-income people when the law was being drafted. But the banks would still have you believe that any new change in their depositors' status robs them of some of the benefit of compounding interest, the banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is something subversive.

But the thing about untold billions is that the usual one about they are untold is that telling them would require using numbers with several zeros immediately to the right of the decimal point. Somewhere a number like $.001 trillion in 1981. In last year's tax bill, Congress has done, that banks now pay notoriously low taxes. If Congress unwisely decides to tax these exempted interests, the banks will have to raise their fees. And the banks will say this is a hardship on small investors. Taxpayers over 65 can avoid withholding if their 1982 income was $34,700 for a single and $15,300 for a couple. There will be no taxes withheld on accounts paying dividends or interest below $150 a year. Finally, employed persons who face dividend and interest withholding can offset the new deduction of having less withheld from their paychecks. These exemptions, the Treasury says, will exclude from withholding provisions fully 60% of those who receive interest and dividends.

The banks are understandably agitated about this. They are elderly or have modest incomes are among the people Congress intended to reduce by about half what the Treasury says it would be getting if it could be sure that all taxes due on interest and dividends were paid. Still, $4 billion uncollected taxes due is a worthwhile start. Lending institutions have been lobbying vigorously to get the withholding provision repealed. They say the costs for banks and corporations could run as high as $1.5 billion a year, with those costs passed on to investors in the form of service charges and lower yields. The Treasury responds that the real cost of withholding would in fact be only about one-tenth that figure, meaning a highly favorable revenue-to-cost ratio—$4 billion raised on $150 million spent—of 25 to 1. Further, the Treasury says, the interest lost by investors on withheld money would be very small. Equity pretty clearly requires giving the new withholding plan a chance. Payroll tax withholding is a proven means for assuring that taxes due are paid. The same rule ought to be applied to dividend and interest withholding. The banks will say the campaign is financed and orchestrated by the American Bankers Association. It is flooding its thousands of members with letters and fliers. The Treasury responds that the real cost of withholding is covered by the interest, before sending it on to the IRS. Revenue responds that the real cost of withholding is covered by the interest, before sending it on to the IRS. Service estimates that evasion of taxes due on these earnings cost the Treasury $8.2 billion in 1981. In last year's tax bill, Congress moved to round up some of that missing revenue by subjecting interest and dividends to 10% withholding, beginning July 1.

At the same time, Congress provided certain small investors some tax relief. The banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is something subversive. The banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is something subversive. The banks warn us. Defiled interest withholding is something subversive.

But protesting bankers also know that it is easy to confuse people about tax law changes. So instead of preparing to put the law into effect, they have bought ads, and given speeches alleging that Congress is "looting" savings, and mailed misleading fliers to their depositors with form letters to congressmen enclosed.

Like the tax tactics launched upon an uninformed and frequently elderly public, these have had their effect. The form letters have poured into Congress. A substantial number of letters have been received from elderly people who, alas, are frequently no better informed than their constituents—and are said to be considering repealing the withholding provision.

course of a year, withholding would take about $8. If the withheld funds were left on deposit, they would earn less than the interest. That's not much of a loss. Moreover, most elderly and low-income taxpayers are exempted.

The second argument is that withholding is unnecessary; the Internal Revenue Service already gets reports on dividends and interest from the corporations and financial institutions. The IRS, however, doesn't have the same power to demand securities and bank accounts with the owner's name on them, but not for "bearer" securities registered in no name. In any case, Senator Dole says the IRS has a duty to report each dividend or interest report with each taxpayer's return. Withholding what's owed currently is surer, swifter and easier than trying to do it afterward.

The case in favor of withholding is overwhelming. The Government, faced with gaping deficits far into the future, needs more revenue. Withholding will yield revenue that is already owed. Without it, some other tax would be necessary. Senator Dole, the wiry chairman of the Finance Committee, suggests it might just as well be a tax on bank accounts. Isn't that an interesting thought?

The Nation's financial institutions have initiated a mammoth campaign to influence Congress to repeal, before it ever takes effect July 1, the withholding on interest and dividend income law enacted last year.

Members of the House of Representatives and Senate are being swamped with letters and postcards from irate depositors and investors. Some lawmakers are receiving as many as 1,000 pieces of mail a day requesting rescission of the withholding law, if news was accurate.

Congress commits untold follies, but surely it will have the sense not to annul, less than a year after passage, legislation that has never been given a chance to prove itself.

Contrary to claims from bankers, it wasn't to hurt small investors and small depositors—to take away from them an opportunity to earn considerably more money than they're earning interest for their bank. When bankers begin braying about the costs, it remains opposed.

The latter was authorized to make it more efficient method of making sure the taxes are paid. Some people are afraid they will be deprived of interest earnings by paying the government quarterly rather than at the end of the tax year. The Treasury Department has prepared a chart showing exactly how much a person would lose, if he had $10,000 in a savings account earning 12 percent interest on December 31, 1983, he would lose a little over $5 in compounded interest for the year and an additional 50 cents on every thousand. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan says that 85 percent of the elderly will be exempt, and won't even lose the 50 cents. They just have to fill out a simple form.

The banking industry has a different complaint. It is true the banks must program their computers to withhold 10 percent of interest and dividends paid. Some individual taxpayers complain that the law is unfair and it will cost them money to have their taxes withheld. Much of the alarm, we suspect, is exaggerated.

Those people who think it is wrong for banks to act as tax collectors need look no further than the millions of employers who withhold wages. Or, the gas stations that collect taxes on gasoline, or the retail stores that collect sales taxes. That's been going on for decades, and it has proved an efficient method of making sure the taxes are paid.

Some people are afraid they will be deprived of interest earnings by paying the government quarterly rather than at the end of the tax year. The Treasury Department has prepared a chart showing exactly how much a person would lose, if he had $10,000 in a savings account earning 12 percent interest on December 31, 1983, he would lose a little over $5 in compounded interest for the year and an additional 50 cents on every thousand. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan says that 85 percent of the elderly will be exempt, and won't even lose the 50 cents. They just have to fill out a simple form.

The banking industry has a different complaint. It is true the banks must program their computers to withhold 10 percent of interest and dividends paid. Some individual taxpayers complain that the law is unfair and it will cost them money to have their taxes withheld. Much of the alarm, we suspect, is exaggerated.

Those people who think it is wrong for banks to act as tax collectors need look no further than the millions of employers who withhold wages. Or, the gas stations that collect taxes on gasoline, or the retail stores that collect sales taxes. This is not a new tax. It is simply a way for the Treasury to collect taxes more promptly and more completely. It will impose no intolerable inconvenience on either you or your bank, and it will help the economy by reducing the annual budget deficit by several billion dollars.

All of this being so, you may wonder what the bank or savings institution is really saying in its message. Could it be suggesting that you work at it. There is nothing complicated about that; no secrets revealed. It's almost as if the banks were trying to help make withholding work smoothly, as well they should.

That makes the point.

The W-6 form is what they are mailing out and, of course, it is not complicated. But, you see, the banks are in a blind alley. They have been telling people about all this complicated redtape, all this Government redtape, Government intrusion, and all the time they have got people in their banks whose wages have been withheld for the last 40 years, 30 years or even longer on how long they have worked there, and I do not suggest that they are telling all these people that we ought to repeal withholding on wages and salaries. I have not heard from a single banker who wants to repeal withholding on wages and salaries. That is earned income. They just do not want any withholding on unearned income.

Again I want to underscore that it is not a new tax. I notice the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin has a little red tape of his own which goes on to say that we have to repeal this new tax. The Senator from Wisconsin knows it is not a new tax. The bankers know it is not a new tax. But if you write and tell them you are going to have a new tax they say, "We are opposed to it." If you write to somebody and say, "Do you think you ought to pay your taxes?" They answer, "Yes, we ought to pay our taxes." But somehow 20 million Americans do not, and fail to report their dividends and interest income. Some of them do not report any at all.

Some of it is because of errors and some is wilful evasion. But we are not here to argue that point. We are told we can quarrel about the IRS and quarrel about Treasury figures. We are talking about $1 billion over the next 3 years from lost revenue. Again, to the Senator from Montana's credit he recognizes that. It is one thing to stand up and say, "Repeal withholding." What do we do about the addition to the deficit? We are told we ought to bring deficits down, bring interest rates down if we keep the deficits down. I do not want to add $20 billion to the deficit over the next 5 years, and that is what we do if we repeal withholding unless we replace it with other revenue or some spending cuts. I have yet to hear a single proponent of repeal of withholding stand up and say:

OK, the Senator from Kansas is right. We are going to lose so many billions of dollars, and this is how I suggest we get it.

- We get it through new taxes. We get it through new spending. We take away the tax cuts for the working people in the third year of the tax cut. We defer Indexing.

It seems to me, once we understand what the options are, unless we are going to have it both ways, as some would have it, then I think we have to be very careful in what we do.

The Senator from Kansas has talked about the W-6 form, the so-called complicated redtape that the banks and the S&L's advertise. The credit unions, I must say to their credit, make only one mistake in their little postcard by calling it a tax. They know it is not a tax. But, beyond that, they have the fair and honest thing in their lobbying efforts as has, I might say, the savings and loans league.

But even if the banks did not fill in advance the name and address and the account number, which they do when they mail it out, you would have to fill out the name, address, check number, Social Security number, and account number, and make one check and sign your name. And it is a permanent exemption. You just say:

My tax liability for last year was $600 or less.

If that is the case, you are exempt.

I am 65 or older, and my tax liability for last year was $1,500 or less.

You are exempt.

I or my spouse or both are 65 or older, and we filed a joint income tax return last year, and our tax liability was $2,500 or less.

You are exempt.

I was (we were) not required to file an income tax return for last year.

You are exempt.

That is all you have to check. If you fit in any of those categories, you make one check. You do not even say which one, so you do not reveal anything about yourself. You say that in one of those five instances you are exempt. You make the checkmark. You have all there is to it.

Let me say that the President of the United States is not known to be looking for more ways to interfere with the lives of the American people. I think we have had a lot of good regulatory reforms. The change was in the President's budget for 1983. The Senator from Kansas and others talked to the President directly about withholding interest and dividend income. We knew how it would create a firestorm, but never in our wildest dreams did we believe they would cook up something in a closed room and pay people $25 to do sort of market testing on what to say to stoke a rebellion of their depositors. And they have been successful. They have been successful.

Every office in this Congress is filled with postcards. Some may not have been mailed by the people whose names appear thereon, as is evidenced by the letter I have from the gentleman from Chicago. But somehow we have a lot of mail to answer. We estimated in our office that it is going to cost the taxpayers $300,000 just to answer all the postcards that have been sent in by banks, S&L's, and credit unions. In addition, you have to put more personnel.

Someone said, "Don't answer your mail." If you do not, people will write back and say, "Why don't you answer your mail? If you say the banks are wrong, what is your reply?"

So we are in the process, in my office, of writing two-page letters, with enclosures, to everyone who has written us about withholding. Right now it is about 500,000 letters. We are up to 20,000. We have answered 20,000. They are coming in, the mail has leveled off, but the rate I think is still about 3,000 a week a week ago, but it is beginning to drop off.

I know the Senator from Montana has no intention of withdrawing the amendment. I will, at the appropriate time, or the majority leader will at the appropriate time, offer to table the amendment so that we can get on with social security. I am not a member of the American Bankers Association. I know of no one in the Senate unwilling to sit down with representatives of the American Bankers Association, but I know of no one in the American Bankers Association who even wants to talk about withholding.

I hope some of the bankers across the country will take a look at some of the ads and some of the campaigns that they have been paying for; I assume they have been paying for, somebody running for Congress. I do not know how many millions of dollars it is, when you add the cost of postage. And most banks pay the postage. Most postcards and all the mail we have received was paid for by banks and in some cases run through their meters. So I do not imagine anybody who mailed in any card is out any expense.

But when you run ads that say, “Ten percent of your money is going to disappear,” which is an outright misstatement, I can understand why you might excite the fears and emotions of somebody who is 65 or 35 or 25 years of age.

I would just remind my colleagues that this is the President's budget for fiscal year 1983. This is where withholding comes. It was not plucked out of the sky.

It has been recommended by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, by President Kennedy, by President Nixon, by President Ford, by President Carter, and now by President Reagan. You may not like any of them, but I have to believe that, overall, they were trying to do what they could to make certain that people who owed taxes paid their taxes. It was not in any President's interest to hold the banks of America or to take on the savings and loans, nor was it in President Reagan's interest to do that and that was not the purpose of suggesting withholding.

We are told by the IRS Commissioner that there is still $100 billion out there in taxes not being collected, and much of it in the private sector. Yes, some is in drugs and some is in prostitution and some in gambling, but the large part of it is in the private sector.

If we had $100 billion in undeclared income now, we would not have the deficit we have and interest rates would be a lot lower. But we do not collect all of our taxes, and we never will. I would just refer to the Time Magazine story today. On the cover of Time Magazine, it says, “Tax Cheating, Bad and Getting Worse.” As the article points out, it is getting worse. And why is it getting worse? Because so many people do it and they are not caught, so other people do it. I do not know where it is going to stop.

The commercials say that people out there working for a living is 99 percent--99 percent. The compliance rate for interest and dividends is around 86 percent. Now, why should this not be 99 percent? It is not 99 percent.

Somebody was quoting a study. It was not from a bank on interest and dividend income. It was only a study. If you met three conditions, the rate was 97.6 percent. I will recite that for the Record in a moment.

I do not particularly enjoy railing at the banks. I would like to pass the social security bill. The Senator from Kansas spent a year on the Social Security Commission along with the Senator from New York. We have had hearings in our committee. It has passed through unanimously by a vote of 18 to 1. The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the chairman of the subcommittee, Congressman Pickle, did an outstanding job, along with Congressman Conally and others, of getting the bill passed through the House, with the Speaker's assistance. And we had a lot of very touchy issues in social security. We have some left. The Senator from Louisiana wants to delay bringing in Federal employees a year, which is another way of not bringing in Federal employees at all. That is going to be a hotly contested amendment.

I do not know why we have to spend 2 or 3 hours or 2 or 3 days debating withholding again. As the Senator from Rhode Island just pointed out, we just finished that debate last week. I do not rest happy with the interest of the bankers of this country to hold up every piece of legislation, to hold legislation hostage, to hold the next piece of legislation hostage until we just cave in to the bankers.

The Senator from Kansas has no intention of doing that. The Senator from Kansas may lose, but if I thought I was mistaken or if I thought this was a new tax or if I thought we were penalizing senior citizens or the handicapped or low-income Americans, then I would be on the side of the Senator from Montana.

But this may be an irritation to the banks. They do not like it. They do not have to like it. They have a right to oppose it.

But I wondered what had happened. We passed this last August. We did not hear a word in September, October, November, or December. It was not until until the threat of deception was unleashed, in January, that it really started to hit us in February.

This study, the IRS study, reports a high compliance rate of 97.3 percent where information returns were matched against selected individual tax returns. That is the story we get from a lot of people. "Why don't you just match that 1099 against the taxpayers, then you don't lose any money at all?"

Believe me, if we could figure out any way to do that, the Senator from Kansas would drop this whole thing like a hot potato. But I have not been convinced, and the IRS says it is not possible. The 97.3 percent study that has been quoted on this floor cannot be extrapolated to all interest and dividend payments because the study excludes—here is what the study excludes—the estimated 5 million to 6 million individuals who do not file individual tax returns, taxpayers who fail to supply correct identification numbers to financial institutions, and taxpayers who fail to supply correct identification numbers to the IRS.

We have a 97.3 percent compliance, excluding all these things.

This is why the Treasury and the Joint Committee on Taxation estimate this to cost $12 billion a year. It is the cost of interest and dividends can only be substantially improved by the withholding system. Indeed, the joint committee estimates of revenue losses from withholding would be $11 billion in fiscal 1984 through 1986. They take into account the improved collection which result from the major improvements in information and reporting passed in 1982.

I would assume the amendment of the Senator from Montana does not mean we will have withholding next January. Have the bankers said, “OK, just get this amendment and we will try to help the Government collect taxes.”

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. MELCHER. I think I have made it clear that it is the bankers and taxpayers in Montana who are talking to me. I would not prejudge the action of the Senate or the House, the final action of the Congress, on this proposition. I simply believe that it is really getting around to the point where people are beginning to wonder whether this is the imposition of another layer of bureaucracy or whether it is really worth it. I think the question is here in the Senate and I hope the amendment carries so that we will have time between now and the end of March for the Congress to properly debate it, the same as happened in the House.

Mr. DOLE. I might say I am waiting for the majority leader to arrive.

I would say that few of the Members of Congress who were concerned with the proposal to withhold tax on dividend interest, the tax refunds, contained in the Revenue Act, and this is going back to 1962, realize that their predecessors in Congress 100 years before were debating similar legislation.
Early in the Civil War, the Revenue Act of July 1, 1862, was enacted. This act for the first time in the history of the United States applied the principle of tapping revenue at the source, which had first been used by the British in 1803.

The law imposed a tax of 3 percent on salaries and other income over $600 and under $10,000, and 5 percent on income over $10,000. The 3 percent tax was also levied on certain corporation dividends and interest. Applying the withholding system for the first time, the bill required that the 3 percent tax on salaries received by all persons in the civil, military, and naval services of the United States—including Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress—after August 1, 1862, was to be withheld by all paymasters and other Government disbursing officers at the time of paying the salaries.

The disbursing officer was also required to send a certificate stating the name of the officer or person from whom such deduction was made, and the amount thereof, which shall be transmitted to the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and enter the name of the officer or person from whom withheld within the office of the Comptroller of the Internal Revenue.

That is pretty much about the 1862 form. Maybe that is where Don Regan thought of that.

The withholding system was also applied to the tax on interest and dividends paid by all railroads, insurance companies, and so forth, to 5 percent. Deduction of tax at the source was also extended to include a 5-percent tax on the interest and dividends of any canal, turnpike, canal navigation, or slack-water company. Paymasters were required to withhold 5 percent on salaries of Government employees over $600 a year. A corporation engaged in a slack-water navigation would dam or impede a stream by erection of dams or locks to produce stretches of deeper water for navigation, in case anybody has a deep interest in that.

The withholding of tax on salaries of Government employees, and on interest and dividends continued until the end of 1871, as the Revenue Act of 1864 expired by limitation in 1872.

The very limited and very limited application of the stoppage-at-source tax principle is of great significance in the development of the present tax system, which relies heavily on tax withholding as a means of revenue collection.

The Revenue Act of July 1, 1862, has been called the basis of the present internal revenue system, both as regards objects taxed and organizations for collecting the taxes. It is interesting to note that this act also provided the first use of tax withholding in this country, and that is the value of this method of tax collection.

I am reciting this so that we know this is not something that just happened or just been talked about. It was around long before the President put it in his 1983 budget.

The act of 1894, based almost entirely on Civil War legislation with a few important exceptions, also contained provisions for withholding. Again, tax was collected at source on certain corporation dividends and on the salaries of Government employees. Residents of the tax system have noted that an extension of the withholding system at this time would have been a powerful check against evasion.

THE 1913 INCOME TAX LAW

The 1913 Income Tax Law, enacted October 3, 1913, saw the most extensive application up to that time in this country of the collection-at-source method. The principle of stoppage at source, used so successfully in England, was applied wherever possible, to secure maximum revenue and to prevent evasion.

The normal tax on individuals was to be collected at the source as far as possible. A corporation, employer, or other source of income was required to deduct the tax and pay it to the Government, provided the income was regular, definite, and amounted to $3,000 or more. Interest, rent, salary, or any other form of fixed annual income was covered by withholding.

I can debate this greater detail if it would become necessary, but I would hope that now that we have an agreement to debate this fully we might get on with the business at hand. When the majority leader comes to the floor I am suggesting that we can move to table the amendment.

I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. GARN. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. President, I rise in opposition to this amendment. It is not because I do not collect tax on interest and dividends. I do believe, as the Senator from Utah pointed out, that this would be a proper debate, had we not had an agreement, to put the repeal amendment on the reciprocity bill. There is no doubt in my mind that sooner or later, there is going to be a vote on the repeal of withholding in the Senate and in the House. I assume if the repeal of withholding gets a majority in Congress, the President will veto it and it will come back and we shall vote on whether to override the veto.

That is probably the procedure we are going to have to follow. Nevertheless it seems to me there ought to be a full debate. Those who favor withholding, including the President of the United States, ought to have some options, either to win enough of trying to simple repeal amendment or in some other way pick up the revenue or cut spending.

I do not really know what will be gained by holding up the social secu- rity bill. Critics of withholding should have had enough of trying to deceive the American people. They have been effective. I assume there is a lot of grassroots misunderstanding. The Senator from Kansas had a lot of mail from his state indicating, “You have gone too far on this issue. I do not care whether President Reagan is for it, you are for it, or Tip O'Neill, you have gone too far.” Then they want to tell me about this new tax on their interest income.

Some go so far as to say it is unconstitu- tutional to collect taxes on interest income. There are some of the people who have not paid their taxes on their interest income or on their dividend income.

I do not know what the answer is. If we just keep taxing the middle class, just keep taxing the workers, and do not bother about the people who have, if not just keep taking it away from the workers to pay for all the extravagances and excesses in Government spending then we have reached a sorry state of tax policy.

This Senator believes if we are going to have fairness, we ought to have it up and down the line.

Mr. MELCHER. Would the Senator yield briefly?

Mr. DOLE. I just want to have printed in the Record a letter from the American Council of Life Insurance in which they reiterate their support for the withholding provision in the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act.

I ask unanimous consent that that be done, Mr. President.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

AMERICAN COUNCIL OF LIFE INSURANCE, Washington, D.C., March 14, 1983

Mr. DOLE. I have a letter from Common Cause. I shall read just a portion of that letter and ask that it be made a part of the Record.

The first two months of the 98th Congress have witnessed the introduction of hundreds of bills to create new tax preferences and expand existing ones. Certainly such proposals are not unusual in the opening weeks of a session. However, the symbolic importance of a regrettable retreat from the example set in last year’s tax Act, which eliminated several tax preferences and restricted a number of others. Every important special interest attacked on one of the 1982 Act’s most important provisions, which would improve taxpayer compliance through withholding on interest and dividend income.

Common Cause strongly urges you to protect this feature of the Act, and to continue the work begun last year to reduce inequitable tax preferences.

That is the general thrust. I think it is worth noting.

The letter continues:

Common Cause is especially concerned with current efforts to repeal withholding on interest and dividend income. According to the Joint Committee on Taxation, withholding will raise nearly $20 billion over the next five years and increase taxpayer compliance on interest and dividend income—compared to 99 percent for wage income, compared to 99 percent for wage income.

Withholding is justified. It treats interest and dividend income in the same manner as wage income by withholding taxes at the source, as income is paid, rather than col- lecting them at the end of the year. It also promotes equity among income groups because those who receive substantial interest and dividend income are disproportionately upper-income taxpayers.

I might also state we now have end-of-year withholding on interest and dividend income.

It goes on to say, “Unfortunately”—and I think it is unfortunate—

Unfortunately, financial institutions are not treating withholding as an equitable instrument of compliance. Unwilling to help the government collect taxes—a responsibility most employers and retailing businesses have voluntarily undertaken—financial institutions have mounted a massive campaign against withholding. Using such deceptive slogans as “ten percent of the money you earn in interest is going to disappear * * *”,

I shall just put this ad in the Record, although it will not show up in the Record the way it did in all the newspapers across the country. You could read “APP,” but you cannot read “EAR.”

That is going to scare anybody, to say 10 percent of their money is going to disappear. I imagine a lot of people would reach for their pens to write their Congressmen a letter. Common Cause continues:

They have implied that withholding will deprive depositors of substantial income beyond what they already owe the government, and may even drive them to financial ruin. That, of course, is not true. It is worth noting.

It is not Senator Dole suggesting it is not true. This is an independent, outside group saying it is not true. And it is not true.

The letter continues:

The Treasury has estimated that the actual cost of withholding to taxpayers—the additional companion interest—will be one-half of one percent of the interest they would otherwise have earned, or about 50 cents on a $1,000 account.

I ask unanimous consent that the entire letter be printed in the Record, and the advertisement I mentioned.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

DEAR SENATOR: The first two months of the 98th Congress have witnessed the introduction of hundreds of bills to create new tax preferences and expand existing ones. Certainly such proposals are not unusual in the opening weeks of a session. However, they symbolize a regrettable retreat from the example set in last year’s tax Act, which eliminated several tax preferences and restricted a number of others. Every important special interest attacked on one of the 1982 Act’s most important provisions, which would improve taxpayer compliance through withholding on interest and dividend income. Common Cause strongly urges you to protect this feature of the Act, and to continue the work begun last year to reduce inequitable tax preferences.

This is no longer to pretend that tax policy is not important. It is part of achieving government objectives. They reduce revenues and cause much of the inequity in the tax system. Therefore, Congress must carefully evaluate every tax break and elimi- nate many unjustified entitlements. Those deemed absolutely necessary must be recognized as a form of government spending. The resulting revenue losses reviewed periodi- cally and recovered elsewhere if growing deficits are to be contained.

Common Cause supports changes in the federal tax system that would broaden the tax base, and greatly reduce the number of tax preferences. Last year’s tax Act—the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (TEFRA)—made important progress in this direction. While it did not solve all of the tax system’s problems, it reduced several of the most inequitable tax preferences. In doing so, the Act has slowed the growth of the tax base and accretion of deficits that previous tax measures—partic- ularly the 1981 tax bill—had exacerbated. In addition, several important features of the Act have encouraged greater compli- ance, especially among those taxpayers who have escaped paying their fair share through the use of tax shelters or receipt of non-wage income. Together, these provisions constituted an important first step in rebuilding a tax system too often perceived as benefiting the wealthy and influential at the expense of the average taxpayer.

Unfortunately, there is a danger that Congress will ignore the change of direction that TEFRA held out for the public. Al- ready, legislation has been introduced to estab- lish new tax breaks for fraternity houses, firearms purchases, retirement income, domestic automobile purchases, gasoline purchases, stock pur- chases, and cigarettes. Legislation has also been introduced that would expand an exist- ing tax break by shortening the holding period for long-term capital gains. These tax breaks are directly antithetical to the philosophy embodied in TEFRA: that we should help to reduce deficits by improving tax compliance and restricting tax preferences. Congress should not retreat from this philosophy.
The sponsors of this law have told us it was designed to catch a small minority of Americans who evade taxes on their interest and dividends. It is the law penalizes the great majority of America’s savers and investors who pay their taxes faithfully. What’s more, the federal government is now receiving all the necessary information through bank records.

Though the law does include exemptions for some low income and elderly Americans, if they go through the red tape of filing an application, most savers and investors will forfeit some of the money they could earn in compounded interest.

We urge you to join our efforts by writing letters to your representative in Congress and to the two senators from this state. Tell them you want the 10 percent withholding tax repealed, because it would impose an unfair penalty on savers like yourself.

For assistance in contacting your representative and senators, please ask any of our bankers. If we all act now, Congress will get a clear message from the voters back home, and they will work to repeal this needless law.

Mr. Dole, Mr. President, that is another indication that once the people have been alerted and once there has been an opportunity—that is all we ask, an opportunity to stand up and debate the issue of withholding.

Talk about frightening those out in our State. I think you have frightened a number of Members of Congress who voted for the withholding and the tax bill last year into rushing to repeal withholding.

The Senator from Kansas is willing to support the President on this issue, and I think it is right for me to say to my friends in the American Bankers Association, in the banks across the country, the S&L’s, and the credit unions, if there is any willingness to discuss this issue, then we ought to discuss it. The Senator from Kansas does not detect any willingness to discuss the issue.

When you put millions of dollars into a deceptive campaign, you want to see it work. That investment did not come out of the bankers’ salaries, I bet. It probably came from their depositors.

They have a right to oppose it, but they ought to tell the truth. We had ads in the Topeka Capital that cost $4,000 to run, showing Uncle Sam dripping with diamonds, saying, “This time they have gone too far.” Then they want to talk about the withholding tax. It is not a withholding tax, it is withholding of taxes on interest and dividend income that you owe.

The Senator from Kansas does not underestimate the power of the American Banking Association. They have it. They know how to use it. But I am willing to warn others on this floor, if we see all of these efforts of this powerful lobby, just get ready for the next one because, if the banks can send in a million pieces of mail or a half million pieces of mail to one Senator, I bet there is somebody out there who has more money than the banks. I cannot think of anybody offhand, but somebody out there probably has more money and a bigger lobby than the bankers of this country.

I do not want to get into the effective tax rates banks pay, but it is not very much. The 20 largest banks paid an effective tax rate of about 2 percent. Some banks have negative tax rates. Our new $1 billion credit unions paid no tax on their worldwide operations.

If you looked at the chart in the New York Times a few days ago, it showed all these companies and the taxes they paid. Most companies paid 20 percent, 25 percent, 40 percent. Individual people paid 20 percent. What do the banks pay, the 10 largest banks? Two percent. So they have a lot of money to spend for lobbying activities, and they spent a lot on this activity. But if they do it and get away with it, as they are trying to do, then I think we must get ready for the next mass mailing.

Others who disagree with me on the merits of this issue join me in criticizing this lobbying blitz.

Senator Garn favors repeal of withholding, but as chairman of the Banking Committee he issued a statement last week saying he did not agree with the massive campaign the American Bankers Association was undertaking.

I think the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, the minority leader, indicated he was not totally pleased with this massive mail campaign, although he, too, favors repeal of withholding.

Now, in the Washington News is a comment that I think deserves notice, but the Senator from Kansas, whenever the majority leader arrives, is willing to yield to him.

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield briefly?

Mr. Dole, I want to put this little bit in the Record. I would not want to forget it.

The credit unions have a little magazine called Washington News. CUNA Supply printed 8 million statement stuffers, 4 million response cards addressed to Senator Robert Dole and Representative Daniel Roszerkowski, and 0.8 million response cards that CU members can send to their own Members of Congress, so we are in the privileged class. I get 8 million statement stuffers and 1 get 4 million response cards. That amounts up to 12 million.

I am not certain how somebody can answer that mail. But if we do 2,000 or 4,000 a day—I have 4 years left on this term—we might be able to start answering some of that mail—8 million. For the credit unions are tax collectors. They do not pay any taxes. Even though we have credit unions of almost a billion dollars in assets, with worldwide operations, they pay zero taxes. It bears noting that even the commercial bankers pay slightly more tax than the credit unions. So they can afford to have 8 million stuffers, whatever they are, and 4 million response cards.
Now, it seems to this Senator that we ought to answer this question: If the banks and the others are so concerned about their depositors losing 50 cents, or less, on $1,000 accounts as they have indicated they were in all their eulogies, then why would the S&L's and others, "If that is the case, why can't somebody walk into their bank and buy a money market fund for $500?" They cannot, of course; they have to have at least $2,500.

The reason is simple. If you do not have $2,500, you lose your money in passbook savings and that pays 5.5 percent. The bankers are making a lot of money because they keep the money market certificate high, which keeps out most working people who must keep their savings in passbook accounts. The banks make high profits because they loan out that passbook money at 8 or 9 or 10 or 11 or 12 percent. I know banks want to behave as the banks really want to help, I would be willing to delay this for 6 months. In fact, if the motion to table fails, we have a bargain that we think you will want to be aware of. It would be my hope that the motion to table the repeal amendment passes, but if not, then the Senator from Kansas would hope to offer a second degree amendment. We would go along with that delay. We would delay the implementation of withholding and we would amend section 308A of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982:

by striking out June 30 and inserting in lieu thereof December 31: Provided, however, the foregoing delay shall take effect only if the average prime interest rate charged by the Nation's 10 largest banks is 6 percent or less on June 30, 1983, and that delay shall remain in effect only as long as that prime rate remains below 6 percent.

It would seem to me, if you really want to help the American people and the economy, you may even want to accept this amendment. Then we can really talk about what banks can do for the American people.

We have been told for a long time that there is no reason for the prime rate to be 12, 13, and 14 percent and a lot of people can buy homes and a lot of people can buy cars if the banks would lower their interest rates.

The inflation rate is 4 percent, and the interest rates are still 12, 13, 14, and 15 percent. Someone is making a lot of money at the expense of a lot of American taxpayers. If we are so concerned, as I know the banks are, then I think we ought to couple with this delay a real incentive for the banks to eliminate withholding. The banks advertise all these incentives for savings. This would be a real incentive.

So if the motion to table fails, as I hope it will not, then I would hope, if I can be recognized, that we might offer a second-degree amendment that would really help the bankers and the American people, because I do not think we just want to help one special interest group with a multimillion-dollar media campaign and multimillion-dollar political action committees.

I would like to find out some day how much money the 14,000 commercial banks and savings and loans association campaign. I bet it is staggering. Incidentally, none of those expenses are deductible. I doubt it could ever be computed how many millions of dollars were spent by the banks at the direction of the American Bankers Association on this thing that is only a fraction of the claimed $3 billion.

I am certain the Senator from Montana wants to lower interest rates. I think every Senator wants to lower interest rates. Those who want to delay withholding certainly want to lower interest rates. The Senator from Kansas is even willing to delay withholding until we get the prime rate down to 6 percent. We might even make it 7 and really give them an edge. But if we could do this, then we really have made a contribution to the banks and S&L's and credit unions and, above all, the taxpayers, and the people out here paying those high interest payments, people who cannot buy a home. People are being driven out of business, and there are record numbers of bankruptcies, because of high interest rates.

That is another item I should like to discuss more fully when the starting debate starts on April 15.

But while I am waiting for the majority leader:

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield briefly while he is waiting for the majority leader?

Mr. DOLE. We hear all these things about costs, the banks saying this is too costly, even though they privately tell you that cost is not even a problem if you can just call a float. They get to hang on to the with-held money long enough to recover their costs. They earn interest on the money they hold. We hear all these exaggerated claims about $2 billion of cost, according to the Treasury. If that is the case, why can't we make you think that this is going to cost more than will be collected through the withholding process.

I should like to include in the Record a letter I received from Treasury Secretary Regan dated March 15 in which he says:

I am concerned about certain exaggerated claims about the costs financial institutions may incur to institute withholding on interest and dividends. It is true that some smaller banks that will be Incurred are not available, some of the figures that have been discussed can be clearly shown to be exaggerations.

Estimates of the total startup costs of $3 billion are greatly overstated. Such estimates are accounting cost allocations rather than estimates of genuine incremental costs that would be incurred even without the new withholding law. True incremental costs will be significantly below cost estimates that include all allocated costs.

We banks, ranging in size to very large institutions, have informally and confidentially supplied the Treasury Department with their estimates of the administrative startup costs of withholding. We have far too little data to constitute a useful sample, but for those banks on which we have figures, true incremental startup costs averaged less than $2.10 per account. If this small number of banks is representative of all payors of interest and dividends (including banks, savings and loan associations, mutual savings banks, and credit unions), total startup costs would be approximately $000-$700 million. These costs would be offset by the extended float allowed on withheld amounts and by the income tax deductions available for such costs, since we have so little data, we cannot be certain that total startup costs are within this range. Nonetheless, it does appear certaining that startup costs are only a fraction of the claimed $3 billion.

If enough resources were allocated to the Internal Revenue Service to provide the same improvement in compliance and to collect the same additional revenues as will be collected under withholding, the costs to the government would be well above the estimated $600-$700 million in costs to financial institutions to institute withholding. Small increases in IRS enforcement efforts may recoup relatively high revenues per extra dollar of IRS costs. The enormous increase in IRS audit activity that would be needed to raise $3 billion (an increase in audits of over 200 percent) could result in much lower additional revenues per dollar of IRS costs. Indeed, the incremental IRS costs required to raise the almost $3 billion a year in revenues gained from withholding would be well above $1 billion, perhaps as much as $2 billion. Further, this additional effort would involve such a dramatic increase in IRS staffing that it would take several years for the IRS to add and train the needed agents.

It must be remembered that attempts to reduce noncompliance through greater IRS efforts involve significant cost to the IRS. These arise from the burden more than two months of work required this winter in taxpayers' time and resources. Inevitably these audits will inconvenience many taxpayers who have correctly paid their taxes. Paying on interest and dividends only requires those taxpayers who correctly pay their taxes on interest and dividend income to pay some of those taxes during the year rather than at the time that they file their returns. Requiring those who receive interest and dividend income to pay some portion of their taxes as promptly as wage earners pay is, in my view, unfair.

I recognize that banks must incur some costs to institute a system of withholding on interest and dividends. As I stated above, those costs have been frequently exaggerated. Nonetheless, there is legitimate concern that the amount of interest and dividend income that will be withheld will impose a burden on taxpayers' time and resources. Inevitably these audits will inconvenience many taxpayers who have correctly paid their taxes. Paying on interest and dividends only requires those taxpayers who correctly pay their taxes on interest and dividend income to pay some of those taxes during the year rather than at the time that they file their returns. Requiring those who receive interest and dividend income to pay some portion of their taxes as promptly as wage earners pay is, in my view, unfair.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, first of all, I point out that the provision in the 1982 bill for this withholding of taxes on interest and dividends passed by a vote of 49 to 48, a very tight vote, and absences indicated that they had been present and voting, they would have voted against it, which would have defeated it, and it would have been removed from the bill.

The purpose of what we are going to do on April 15, when the Kasten amendment for repeal is brought in the Senate, is rather simple—what the final outcome of that would be if the Senate would adopt it as a part of an extraneous bill and send it to the House. It is not clear that the House would agree to it all or, for that matter, that the House even would take it up. As a matter of fact, its future on April 15 is very obscure, no matter what the Senate would do at that time.

The purpose of this amendment is simply to allow a longer period of time than April 15 to see what really happens and to give both the Senate and the House some chance of action on this before it is locked in, perhaps forever—not just locked into the procedures of withholding these taxes. Once they are withheld, there is a tendency to leave them alone.

It is bad enough trying to repeal something we did just last summer, without contemplating what might happen after the whole procedure got in motion.

It is clear that there would be $1.1 billion lost in fiscal 1983 from revenues if my amendment were to be adopted and accepted by the House and become part of the law. In other words, a delay of 6 months is going to lose, for fiscal 1983, $1.1 billion in revenue; but during this time, we will have the chance to decide whether this was wise and whether there are better ways of gaining revenue that is needed.

I am advised by the Joint Committee on Taxation, which states that today the Treasury Department agrees with the figure of the loss in revenue, that in fiscal 1984 the figure would be $300 million.

It is not my contemplation and it is not my purpose in offering the amendment that we lose revenue. It is merely my purpose in offering the amendment that the Senate and the House have sufficient time to discuss this very thoroughly and consider it and see whether we want to reconsider it, possibly repeal it, or modify the provision.

The third point I should like to make is with respect to the question of whether banks—this whole purpose has been on this amendment. I simply do not know. I believe that most of the large banks, what people refer to as large banks—such as Bank of America, Chase-Manhattan, and Citibank of New York—are in favor of repealing this COI provision. They are not for repeal, so far as I know. It is my understanding that they are against repeal. So I do not believe we are hearing from them with fictitious or false advertising or any influence on Members of the Senate or the public at large, saying, "Let's repeal it." I do not think that is their position. I think their position is that we should retain it.

Fourth, the point has been made about W-6 forms. This is the form that a person who wants to be exempt from withholding must fill out and file with their institution. We have inquired in Montana whether they are available at the banks, savings and loans, and credit unions—those three groups—and we are advised that, as of last Friday, they are not available.

So it points out the fact that this is a process that takes a lot of paperwork and a lot of time and a lot of delay. I think my amendment has some merit just for their sake in getting out the W-6 forms. Who is "they" but the Treasury Department, in sending out the W-6 forms? If we do not reach them in the next 30 days, maybe the time will be a little short for sending them out by July 1.

Finally, the point has been made by the Senator from Kansas, very eloquently, that he is supporting the President in this endeavor to block any delay of reconsideration. I will read into the Record a portion of the Republican platform of 1980:

We also oppose Carter proposal to impose withholding on dividend and interest income. They would serve as a disincentive to save and invest, and create needless paper work burdens for government, business, industry, and the private citizen. They would literally rob the saver of the benefits of interest compounding and automatic dividend reinvestment programs.

I have received a lot of letters, and evidently they are from Republicans who are following the Republican platform, because some of these letters almost repeat what this platform statement says. I seldom receive a letter saying, "I am a Republican" or "I am a Democrat" these days. I do not even try to determine that a lot of people writing me are Republicans. They are saying exactly what the Republican platform said in 1980.

Also, point out that the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Finance Committee, very profoundly stated, in a consideration of last year's tax bill:

S 3502 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE March 21, 1983
I would like to note at the outset that these proposals generally do not substitute a mandatory withholding system for a working information reporting system and does not do so in particular with respect to interest and dividend payments. I believe that such proposals may be premature until we have seriously tried to improve our information reporting system.

It is a fine system, and it was true. I think it is obvious that our reporting system has not been addressed adequately.

Mr. MELCHER. It was the statement of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I did not get whose statement that was.

Mr. MELCHER. It was the statement of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. In reference to the compliance bill we introduced, the Senator is correct—that did not include interest and dividend withholding. We included some compliance measures. It was a separate measure that the President included in his budget.

Mr. MELCHER. It was on the taxpayer compliance improvement of 1982. The Senator is correct. It was said in March 1982, a few months before we adopted this provision in the tax bill. The Senator is correct.

It is not really my intention to hold up the social security bill. I should just like to have a vote on this. It is not an earth-shaking amendment. It is a delay as to when the withholding will take place on interest and dividends, a voluntary withholding. It tracks what the Treasury Department has already announced, the delay they are going to have on the reporting of interest payment from Treasury notes and Treasury bonds and from some other bonds that are handled by States and for that matter other groups that sell bonds.

So it is not meant at all to hold up this bill but is merely an opportunity to make sure there is time for a proper review of the question.

I trust that the Senate will accept my proposal or at least consider my proposal for delay as a fair method of representing taxpayers.

Mr. MELCHER. It was in reference to the compliance taxpayers that I am thinking about are those who already paid all their taxes and are having the taxes withheld from their wages or from their salaries and who know they pay them all and many of whom are ready to go bankrupt and we want to make sure there is time for a proper review of the question.

As to 75 percent of those people, I am told, there is already over withholding. In other words, more is withheld than is due and they have to file for a refund.

That is exactly to the point of the taxpayer of this particular person to whom I referred earlier who is the wife of my side, who is sitting right with me, and who is a schoolteacher who learned that there would be a withholding program when she received her notice from the Treasury Department with a refund check.

The notice on a 862A, which explains that recipients of interest and dividends will be faced with a new withholding program which begins on July 1.

That happens to be the first time that she was aware of the actual proposal. It will go into effect July 1, and she says to my side, her husband:

Can't you get Senator MELCHER to do something about that because I have already paid more than I should and this will be something more that was added to it that will be withheld and I will just have to refile for that much more?

That is one group.

The second group that are particularly concerned, judging from the comments I received and the letters I received, are to be the elderly. I will read this short letter which is typical.

It says:

Would you please work to repeal the 10 percent withholding provision of the "Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982"?

The net result of this provision is to cheat the small investor out of his money for up to 1 1/2 years at a time, while waiting for a tax refund and believe me, I don't like being cheated.

My wife and I scrimp and save each month so we can put money aside for retirement. We need to be able to compound our interest so that when we do retire there is enough to live off of.

My wife and I fully realize that by the time we retire, the Social Security system will be bankrupt, and we will get little or nothing back that we put in. I've read that Congress doesn't trust Social Security for its retirement program and frankly I don't either. American savings ethic and they asked, particularly, that could look at the numbers and figure that out for himself.

So please—allow us—the little guys to keep one opportunity to save for ourselves and provide for ourselves.

Please repeal the 10 percent withholding provision of the "Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982."

Of course, he appears to be elderly. I am not sure. They say they are saving for their retirement. But, nevertheless, they are thinking about earning from interest and what it would mean if some of their taxes are withheld. They could file and get them back, this is true, and I am not trying to apply that they are not going to get their full credit for their money. They certainly are.

These points lead me to believe that the amendment is sound, fair, and equitable to all and above all fair to the taxpayers who are writing these letters so that we can be sure that we have given them adequate consideration.

I hope the Senate can agree to the amendment. I realize the constraints of time, and I hope that we can have a resolution of this problem very quickly.
$5 billion more a year in taxes that aren’t being paid now, and also make use of the money sooner, which is what it already does on income taxes."

She said this more or less squared with the facts, yes.

"So why are so many people sounding as though they thought they’re about to be disempowered?"

"If you want to be unpopular," she said, "tell the people you think this dividend withholding is OK. From all the calls we’ve gotten from our tax clients, a lot of them are feeling that they’re being deprived of one of their rights."

But their right to what?

A large amount of creative amnesia in the filing of income tax reports is not exactly unheard of in this country.

Still, most citizens try to report accurately.

One of their hovering suspicions and worries is that the next guy might not. Worse, he might be getting away with it.

The income tax withholding eased one of those suspicions and made the income tax substantially more democratic.

What’s different about dividends and interest?

The banking industry is arguing that it’s a bleeding shame because, in the language of one of the form letters it has put in the mail to its customers, "it’s unfair to those of us who have always paid our taxes on interest."

It’s a piece of work, sure. But sols paying an average of 2.7 percent on income taxes, I said. "Only the paper and ink are paid."

But here we are again, with the jobs bill unless some of the congressional lions rediscover their backbones.

The point of it is after you talked to the banker, the banker really did not have that much objection, and I think that is essentially the case.

Mr. President, I have a lot of other things I’d like to say but, hopefully, will not have the opportunity to say on this bill.

- Mr. HATCH. Everyone knows that I am very much in favor of repealing the withholding of dividends and interest language. However, since Senator Kasse is working out the new tax that makes it sound as though this is actually a new tax. I will support it. As a matter of fact, if we’re getting into a debate about dividends and interest, I think it is a more democratic change to really get rid of the withholding of dividends and interest. In other words, I think the income tax withholding eased one of our taxes on interest, but it’s not as fair to those of us who have always paid our taxes on interest."

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, we really should get on with this bill if we can. I have been out a time or two with Senator Kasse and the Senator from Louisiana, the managers of the bill, that I still entertain the hope that we can finish this measure tonight. But to do so we will have to move with more dispatch than we have so far. In order to facilitate that and move things along, I move to table the Melcher amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Tennessee to lay on the table the amendment of the Senator from Montana. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Vermont (Mr. STAFFORD) and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. WALLOP) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD) and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS) are absent due to a death in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from California (Mr. CRAINSTON) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there Senators who have not voted who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 58, as follows:

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. I yield to the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. ANDREWS. I move to table the Melcher amendment."

So the motion to lay on the table Mr. MELCHER’s amendment (UP No. 103), as modified, was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I think while most Senators are here, we ought to just take a minute to understand where we are not going if this amendment is not eventually disposed of. That is, we are not going to finish any social security legislation this year. Maybe this is a bad judgment because we are coming back April 6. But it was the understanding of this Senator that we agreed to debate withholding on April 15, a free-standing debate where everyone would have the chance to debate, offer motions and modifications, and we could then dispose of that issue.

But here we are again, with the jobs bill having been held hostage for several days, and now it is the social security package. I would just suggest that I will stay here as long as it takes to defeat this amendment. If you are not concerned about social security, if there is not any real urgency—we have only worked for a year or year and a half to put this package together—

The PRESIDENT PRO Tem. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 104.
March 21, 1983
S 3505

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted in an unprinted amendment 103 insert the following:
“Delay Implementation of Withholding on Interest and Dividend Income. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out ‘June 30’ and inserting in lieu thereof ‘December 31,’ provided, however, the foregoing delay shall take effect only if the average prime interest rate charged by the Nation’s ten largest banks is 6 percent or less on June 30, 1983, and shall remain in effect only as long as that average prime rate remains below 6 percent.”

Section 204(c)(1) of the Depository Institutions Deregulation Act of 1980 (12 U.S.C. 3503(c)(1)) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following: “The Committee shall not establish or maintain a minimum balance requirement higher than $300 for deposit accounts authorized by this subsection.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if we are going to help the people of this country, here is the way to do it. You can help your bankers in the process, and you can help the consumers well. For those people out there who want to invest in a money market fund but cannot do it because they do not have $2,500, this amendment will lower that to $300. The amendment will allow individuals to take their money out of passbooks savings, the 5.5 percent that banks never talk about in their ads, put it into the money market funds at 8 or 9 percent.

I cannot think of anyone on this floor who would not want to do that for their constituents. This is part of the second-degree amendment. I cannot think of any of us who want the high interest rates to stay up there, particularly those running for high office, even the U.S. Senate.

This amendment presents a deal that should be hard to resist. We will delay withholding, as the Senator from Montana wishes, if the prime rate decline to 6 percent. That ought to be a real incentive for the banks to reduce interest rates in loans. We know they are not holding up the rates artificially, at least they tell us they are not holding up the rates artificially.

I think we ought to debate this amendment, unless my colleagues are prepared to adopt it now.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote, vote.

Mr. DOLE. Would the Senator be willing to accept the amendment?

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, I can only answer the question by saying that I personally think it is impossible to get the rates down that fast, but I would like to hope so.

Mr. DOLE. Well, let us try. We tried everything else.

Mr. MELCHER. I think this sort of belles a statement that we want to get on with the bill. Let us get the vote over.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote, vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there debate? If not, the question is on the amendment of the Senator from Kansas. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. MURKOWSKI (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. D’AMATO (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Vermont (Mr. STAFFORD) and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. WALLOP) are necessarily absent.

I also announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MARCHANT) and the Senator from Oregon (Mr. PACKWOOD) are absent due to a death in the family.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from Florida (Mr. CHILES) and the Senator from Georgia (Mr. CRAINSTON) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 57—as follows:

Amended by adding at the end thereof the following: “The Committee shall not establish or maintain a minimum balance requirement higher than $300 for deposit accounts authorized by this subsection.”
If anyone is going to insist on putting it on the social security bill, the Senator from Kansas has to protect his rights and protect the social security provisions and try to defeat it somehow. If it cannot be done tonight, we will try tomorrow. If it cannot be done tomorrow, maybe, Wednesday or Thursday. Maybe sooner or later the Senator from Montana will be successful, but I must oppose his efforts.

We still have a number of social security issues—by the Senator from Florida, the Senator from Colorado, the Senator from Louisiana, and the other Senator from Montana. We thought we had five or six amendments on which there would be rollcall votes. But until we set this matter aside, we cannot proceed on the social security bill.

Mr. President, I do not want to bore people with recounting the reasons why we should not be doing this on the floor. I am chairman of the Banking Committee and who supports repeal of withholding tax, or whatever you want to call it—Andy Baker, himself in the quiet of some room or, after you want to do it, I am going to leave it. I am going to go back to the Senator from Wisconsin when it can be done in a proper, orderly manner.

I yield to the statement. Let us get back to being a deliberative body, instead of parading for the press in here.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the Senator from Utah. I do not want to get all the credit for this. I know there is enough to go around. I do not see anybody else claiming it. I do hope, however, that the administration will come in more actively in supporting the President's 1983 budget.

I must say that I do not quarrel with the right of the Senator from Montana to offer the amendment. I have not had any mail from any banks. I do not have a stock in a bank. My brother is a director of a bank. I have an interest in the American Bankers Association. I am a stockholder of a bank. My brother is a director of a bank. I have not had any mail from any banks. I do not even get checks from them any more.

I have not changed my mind. There is no Senator in this body more opposed to the substance of getting rid of it than I. But I am not going to be part of the demagogery games for press purposes, when we can do it on April 15, 3 weeks away.

I will continue to support the Senator from Kansas on procedural issues until we get to that date, and I am going to leave it. I am going to go back to the Senator from Wisconsin when it can be done in a proper, orderly manner.

Mr. GARN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kansas yield?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Utah, who is the chairman of the Banking Committee and who supports repeal of withholding, stood on this floor about an hour ago and said he did not think it belonged on this bill. I thank the Senator for his support. We have an agreement to discuss this issue, up or down, on April 15, and he stated he would support me at this time, even though he does not agree with my views on withholding.

If we are not acting in good faith, if any of my colleagues think we have reached the April 15 agreement, that would be one thing. But I can assure my colleagues I am prepared to uphold that agreement. I must say, however, that I am going to do all I can to frustrate the withholding amendment to this bill; and if it is necessary to put off social security, I will do the best I can to do that.

I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. GARN. Mr. President, I want to repeat what I said before we came to this vote. We totally disagree on this issue. I am in favor of repealing. I have always opposed withholding at source. It is another example of Government asking the private sector to do its work for them. I will vote for repeal when we get that opportunity. When we get to April 15, I will vote with Senator KASTEN, and I will vote with him procedurally, and I will do everything I can to repeal withholding. I supported him last week, not only the substance but also on the procedural votes on cloture. I voted with the Senator on his cloture motion.

We had a unanimous-consent agreement worked out by the leadership. I have been here only 8 years, and this is a relatively brief period of time, but I think we have seen the Senate at its worst demagoguery tonight, because what I have seen is political positioning against an avalanche of mail. To hell with the Senate or any routine procedure for social security. We have to be on record for a 6-month delay; and when it is going to lose, we see a bunch of people down there trying to get on the side of the angels. It is absolutely disgusting, in light of the agreement to debate this issue separately.

Nobody can be more against withholding than I, because I am chairman of the Banking Committee. A lot of those letters think it is JAKE GARN'S fault and not BOB DOLE'S.

Mr. DOLE. I do not think I deserve all the credit.

[Laughter.]

Mr. GARN. I say it is a revenue issue, not a banking issue. But I have received it.

This is not the right place nor the right time to play political demagoguery. We have our opportunity. I said before to the Senator from Kansas that if we did not have an agreement, I would have needed the Senator from Montana tonight. If we had not worked that out, I would do every procedural thing I could to repeal withholding. What is the matter with that?

I used to read about how the Senate worked. Now, on every issue that comes to the Senate, nobody wants to get in the press to report what they are doing. I hope the press will report tonight what is going on and let the American people know there is an agreement to discuss this issue, up or down, on April 15, and that some of us will do everything we can to see that the Senator from Wisconsin prevails and that we repeal—not just a 6-month delay, but repeal. But here we have to play with it now on social security and delay that. I do not understand; I really do not. I have frustration and I have no idea of the political game which goes on on this floor.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GARN. I will be happy to yield. The Senator from Kansas has the floor.

I do not understand. It is the easiest political issue in the world to go home and explain: I voted to table that because we have a unanimous-consent agreement to debate it on April 15.

If we have not got the guts to explain to our constituents that we have an agreement and we will have an opportunity to try to defeat the procedural motions of the Senator from Kansas at that time—but, no, on March 21, we have to delay the Senate so that the President can get in the press report over and over and over that there was an agreement, by unanimous consent, to bring this up on the recoupability bill, prejudicing everybody's rights. In fact, it put us in a better position to sit down and defeat it at that time. But we have to play games with it tonight.

I suggest to my friend that maybe he should sit down and counsel with himself in the quiet of some room or, if the moon is up, maybe out under the moon, and maybe decide that his tactic is not working.

Mr. DOLE. I say to my friend from Arizona that I do not question his integrity or logic when he is debating issues, and I do respect his questioning mine, but that is a right he has. I will say, as long as I have breath to say it, that I am going to fight to retain withholding on interest and dividends because it is a good position to have the taxpayers help to pay the deficit. I do not have to agree with you, but, if not, you should agree that we should not have withholding on wages, either, and that repeal of both will make the tax laws fairer. If you are going to talk about earned income and earned income, you can.

I am going to spend my time on the Senate floor to preserve this provision.

If you have not had any mail from your banks, you have missed a great treat, because some of our offices are literally covered with mail.

I have had some over to the Senator from Arizona if he wants some mail. The Senator from Kansas has lots of mail.

I do my best to accommodate Senators in this Chamber, and I do my best to accommodate the President. If the President calls me and says, “Senator, forget about withholding,” I would not be offended. It is not a personal matter with me.

I just repeat again that this is a part of the President's 1983 budget. I think it has already been made a part of the Revenue Act. We could all get personal about these things, and I hope that we do not succumb to that, but it is not very easy to try to retain this provision, in the face of this campaign of prohibited post cards. I do not care whether any of us were elected just to respond to the this sort of mail.

I know the Senator from Arizona would not do that. When I supported him in 1964, it was for that reason. You could stand up sometimes even though it may not be the popular thing to do.

However, I would emphasize again that withholding was included in the President's budget of 1983. It was not dreamed up by the Finance Committee chairman, and it is not going to be frittered away by the Finance Committee chairman.

The Senator from Kansas may lose on this issue, but I will continue to criticize the banks in our State that are frittering away the savings institutions for a deceptive campaign, and they know it is deceptive.

If you read the Washington Post yesterday, you know it is deceptive.

The Senator from Arizona would not condone that kind of tactic, and no one in this Chamber would.

It is a deceptive, shameless campaign by the American Bankers Association. That does not mean it is being carried on by the banks, but I think that, despite the association's ads, some of my bankers are beginning to understand that we are not picking anyone's pocket, that we are not loot-ing their savings, that this is not a new tax, that people's savings are not going to disappear.

I would say that when the Senator from Kansas and the Senator from Montana referred to a tax compliance bill last year, we did not include withholding. In fact, the Senator from Montana referred to a statement I made at that time about an hour ago. We knew that if we did not have withholding and dividends we would create a firestorm.

What we tried to do is what everyone else is now suggesting that we should do. We tried to put in enough other compliance measures to collect the revenue. But the IRS, the Treasury, and the revenue estimates from the Joint Tax Committee staff told us that our compliance bill would not collect the taxes we were trying to collect.

But withholding was in the President's budget at that time. I recall him telling Treasury Secretary Don Regan that we would have a hard time enacting withholding. But we had a tough decision in 1982. The Senator from Arizona did not support it, but it was a tough decision. We had galloping deficits, we had galloping interest rates. We had a sick stock market, and the President said we had to do something to get the economy moving again. So we enacted $100 billion in taxes recommended by the President, not the chairman of the Finance Committee, and we got to that revenue number for the most part not by adding new taxes, but by collecting taxes already in the law from people who have not been complying with the tax laws.

I am not going to defend people who do not pay their taxes. I do not care whether they are bankers, lawyers, Senators, or anyone else.

If that is being stubborn, then I guess I will just have to be stubborn. What is at stake here is a social security check, it is not just to take care of those who are not paying their taxes. To me, that is not a very efficient spending reduction.

So we will have to debate it awhile. It is not because the Senator from Kansas has anything personal at stake, but I would hope if you have a conviction and if you have a responsibility you will fight to carry out that responsibility. That is what this Senator intends to do.

The Senator from Arizona may be correct that there is a majority who would like to get rid of withholding. We could all write back and say, “Well, this was a bad thing to do.”

But I have not yet been convinced that, if it is so bad to have withholding on unearned income, why is it so good to have withholding on wages and salaries? Can no one tell me why, if it is so good to take it out of the worker's check, it is not right to withhold on your own check? Why should it not be taken out of interest and dividend income?

And I may say those who pay out dividends are not complaining. The corporations are not complaining. They are simply complying with the law.

It is the savings institutions and the banks who have led the charge, and maybe we should give in. I guess that is the way you get ahead around here; just cave in and say, “Well, I cannot stand the heat. My colleagues are upset. They want to get rid of withholding. It is causing a lot of pain and a lot of grief.”

But I just suggest I must be convinced of two things: First of all, if we had this delay and the bankers said, “OK, we did the best we could.”

But I believe, and I can see it in my own mail, that the tide is starting to turn. Many have listened to one side only. We have been covered up with hundreds and thousands of postcards from people who did not understand the law at all. We have cards saying, “You are taking away my savings and I am frightened; I am 65 years of age,” or “You should not take taxes on my interest.”

That is not even the issue. IRS collects taxes on interest and dividends income with certain exceptions. I do not know what the answer is. The answer as far as this Senator is concerned is not a personal one. The answer is to debate it, to keep the agreement we made last week to bring it up on April 15, and then try to have it out.
It is going to be a freestanding debate. The Senator from Kansas has his rights and every other Senator has his rights, but we cannot just govern by veto. If we have to start everyone adopting the popular thing around here, I think we should repeal everybody adopting the popular thing.

We do have veto power. But if we do not have the Constitution right, but we cannot, we cannot govern by veto. If we have to start everyone adopting the popular thing around here, I think we should repeal everyone adopting the popular thing.

Let us not pick on the working people. Most of them, like me, do not care who owns stock in banks. They do not own any stock in banks, or intend to own stock in banks. I do not own any stock in any bank. I do not have much interest income from the banks. I do not care if they withhold on that interest.

So I would just say I have a feeling this debate is starting to heat up, and I would hope that we could stick with the jobs bill.

We came here prepared to dispose of the social security package last week. It should have been done, but no: we could not do that because we all had to cringe because of the bankers, and we still have got five or six amendments which are going to be debated, then the Senator from Kansas will welcome the idea. But I do not intend, just because one Senator criticizes me, to walk off the floor. I do not want to discuss bills in this body. I do not want to displease any Senator in this body, but I do want to make my point, and once the point is made, some may change their view. Let us take a look at this Kiplinger Tax Letter. That is a fairly respectable letter. It is something I did not talk about earlier that might be of interest. I kind of believe if we ever have an issue, and it is very important, I would rather have somebody up fighting for what he thought was right than yielding to pressure.

This is what the Kiplinger Tax Letter said on February 25:

First, withholding. It is not a new tax . . . or an extra tax, as some opponents have said. Nor does it make 10 percent of savings disappear.

That is what they are saying in the banks. We do not know whether you have ever seen the bank ads. Are your savings going to disappear? That is not my answer, that is Kiplinger's answer. "Small savers are exempt." It goes on:

The amount of tax that is withheld does not disappear. It is used to reduce what you owe when you ante up in April...or you can trim your estimated tax and payroll withholding during the year.

Your account needn't be reduced by the 10% tax. Your bank can tap your checking account for it or you can deposit that much more.

Withholding is aimed at tax cheaters...to make them pay something instead of having their share picked up by hiking taxes on honest folks.

I do not even agree with that last statement. I think a lot of it is inadvertent. Most taxpayers are honest, but we are told by IRS that there are 20 million Americans who do not report all their interest and dividend income, and I have to believe most of it is inadvertent and not dishonest.

What do we say? Do not worry about it, we will get it from the workers? We will get it from somebody else? It just seems to me if there is a principle involved here, it is tax fairness.

I have heard a lot of speeches on tax fairness. A lot of people have introduced a flat-rate tax proposal, to make everybody pay, no exemptions or no deductions or a few exemptions or no deductions. That is tax fairness, and withholding is one way to make sure everyone pays their fair share.

So, Mr. President, I hope there will be some resolution of this, something that will satisfy those who want to leave to fight another day on this issue.

I can tell the Senator from Arizona or anybody else that I do not get any great pleasure in coming over here every day and fighting withholding. There are a lot of other things in our committee we ought to be addressing, things like unemployment, medicare, trade, a lot of issues that affect a lot of States that we cannot get to because every day we have to come over and fight withholding. So from a personal standpoint, the easiest thing to do would be to say, "Get rid of it and let the President worry about it."

So, Mr. President, I would like to yield to the distinguished Senator from Idaho for a motion without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—

Mr. LONG. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, has the Senator been given consent to yield without losing his right to the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has not been given such consent. Is there objection?

Mr. LONG. I object.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not know what the motion was, but it was in some way to end the impasse and get on with the social security bill. But if that is not going to be permitted, then I think we will either offer additional amendments—

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator will yield for a question without losing his right to the floor.

Mr. MELCHER. Yes. If the Senator will yield for a question, and I thank the Senator for so doing, this would properly be described not as a debate, but it would most properly fit into the category of a filibuster; is that correct?

Mr. DOLE. Not yet. But I think it could be properly classified at some point. I do not make any bones about it. If this amendment has to be on the bill to get social security, then it is a filibuster. I am making the choice we have to make particularly since we have agreed to debate it later on. I may have to yield on that someday. I am not suggesting I can hold the floor that long, and I am certain a lot of people are eager to get up here and help me, but they are a little slow about it, but it will come.

I think the more we discuss this issue, the more people—a fairly respectable million-dollar campaign. You can define the banks all you want to, but you cannot define them on this issue, and the Senator from Kansas has defined the banks, and I think my record is as good as that of a working person with the banks. But I do not have to stand here and accept a deception or have my integrity questioned by the banks or their ads or some of those who contact you who have no idea what even some of the bankers think—and I cannot believe that they would enter into a campaign like this, one as though you were getting ready to market tomatoes or gasoline or automobile horses; a room where you can look through a one-way mirror and see what their reactions are. The only thing we do not know is what questions were asked and what information they were given.

I will bet that I know what information was given. I will bet they told the people that this is a new tax, and the response from the participants was, "I don't want a new tax." This Senator does not want a new tax either. I will bet the bankers told them they were going to take money out of your savings accounts, maybe even that the Government was going to loot those accounts, and were told, in turn, "We wouldn't want that" and I would not want it either. We do not know what the bank lobbyists told the participants, although they had this marketing seance and they paid each $25. They questioned them a while, and then probably concluded, "we can really rev this thing up. We can really frighten the people, and in turn, frighten the U.S. Congress."

It has been very effective. I just read a while ago where the credit unions themselves are going to send me 12 million pieces of mail, 8 million stuff-
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me explain the amendment. The Senator from Kansas offered a similar amendment earlier—maybe the interest rate appeared too low, maybe everybody does not believe you can get it down to 6 percent, so we reduced it to 8 percent. If that happens then, of course, you delay withholding, as the Senator from Montana wishes to do, for a 6-month period.

Apparently Members here do not want small-savings depositors or people who buy money market funds, so we raised it from $300 to $500. The minimum now is $2,500. I hope that, with this change, again we can focus on the real issue.

Now, if we are concerned about delay and if we are concerned about depositors, let us make it clear. You cannot put your $500 savings in a money market insured account. It has to be at least $2,500. Why can you not delay less in a savings account? Because that means that most of the money will come out of the passbook savings which pay only 5.5 percent.

This would make it possible for people with only $500, which would be most Americans, to go in and get a money market fund rate of interest, to receive 9 percent rather than their passbook savings rate of 5.5 percent.

It is a serious amendment. If, in fact, you are concerned about the delay of withholding, as the Senator from Montana is, then I believe this would tie it to that and would make it feasible.

So, Mr. President, I hope that at the appropriate time we might act favorably on the amendment.

Mr. LONG. On the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I would like to make clear for the record that there are many of us who were here when the agreement was reached with Mr. KASTEN that his amendment would be considered in connection with a trade bill at a future date.

Mr. President, I was here at the time that unanimous-consent agreement was made. I made it clear at that time that I personally would object to including in that unanimous-consent agreement a stipulation that would preclude any Senator from offering either the Kasten amendment or anything that has to do with withholding on the social security bill.

I did not have in mind at that time offering such an amendment, Mr. President. I was aware of one Senator, not Mr. McCLURE, but another Senator who was thinking about offering such an amendment, basically the Kasten amendment, on the social security bill.

And with that Senator being absent from the Chamber, I thought it was my duty to protect his rights. So far as I know, he has not chosen to offer such an amendment.

I think it should be clear, Mr. President, that if there was some agreement with Mr. KASTEN or with some of his supporters that they would not vote for a withholding amendment on something other than the trade bill that Mr. KASTEN had an agreement about, that did not apply to many of us. I know it did not apply to the Senator from Louisiana, and I am not aware of anybody who would need to be foreclosed from offering an amendment dealing with withholding on some other revenue measure.

It was my view all the time that Mr. KASTEN, in complete good faith and complete sincerity, made a noble fight for the position that he believed in. He carried on that fight with a great deal of adverse publicity from a daily newspaper here in Washington, D.C., and with some perhaps unfair presentation against him in other areas of the media to suggest that he was not within his rights or he was doing something improper by offering that amendment on the jobs bill.

Mr. President, I would have had some difficulty supporting Mr. KASTEN if a point of order was made that his amendment was legislation on an appropriation bill, because the Senator from Montana and I would have argued that the Chair is right. Generally speaking, he knows the Chair is ruling after getting the advice of the Parliamentarian and so, in most cases, the Chair is right. Certainly, in most cases, the Chair is completely sincere when the Senator from Louisiana feels an obligation to support the Chair when he believes the Chair is right. I may have deviated from that on occasion, but very seldom.

I had advised Mr. KASTEN that, in my judgment, the jobs bill was not a good bill on which to offer the amendment, because I would not be able to vote with him on a point of order of germaneness if that point of order was made on that bill. The Senator from Montana and I argue that the jobs bill is not the best revenue measure to offer or not vote for a withholding amendment on some other measure.

So, I did not believe in a statement to suggest that he was not within his rights or he was doing something improper by offering that amendment on the jobs bill.
a bill, a comparison to a rider on a horse. For an amendment that has the opposition of the chairman of the Finance Committee, has the opposition of the opposition of the Speaker of the House, has the opposition of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, in order to get that type of revenue amendment to the President's desk and have any chance of being written into law, that rider has to be on a big, strong horse. It cannot be on a very weak horse because, otherwise, it is not going to go anywhere.

Mr. KASTEN was persuaded to agree to debate his amendment and offer it on a trade bill, a bill that is favored by the administration, but a bill that has not even passed the House of Representatives. The bill would be subject to a constitutional objection in both Houses in that revenue bills must originate in the House of Representatives; and, certainly not pass the House of Representatives. The Senator from Louisiana has felt all along that if this matter was to be acted on favorably, it would have to be added to a very significant measure, something that was headed for the White House. I am sorry to take that position, but I can appreciate the position of the chairman of the committee. He feels strongly about the matter. I have no doubt that he is just as sincere as everybody else who has taken part in this matter. I realize that he is making a noble fight for his position as the good Lord gives him the light to see it.

But, Mr. President, I do not think the chairman of the committee, or any single Senator charged with a parallel responsibility, over a period of time can stand in the way of major measures under consideration that have the responsibility of passing through this body and sending over to the other House for the House of Representatives' judgment, and on down to the President.

I have been accused of filibustering some measures when I was managing on occasion. From my point of view, it was not a filibuster. It was a very informative, well-considered debate—because over a period of time I got my way about the matter, and it is on a Senator. If by delaying the matter and prolonging it, whoever is the manager of the bill proceeds to have his way about the matter, that is not a filibuster. That is very effective debate in the best tradition of the Senate.

So, in a way, one might say it is the other guy, it is the fellow who was just sitting there and listening, who was doing the filibustering. Because if you win, it is not apparent on the face of it that the speaker convinced the audience to see it his way.

But I do think, Mr. President, that the record should be clear that there are a lot of us here, and I think perhaps a majority—I will see whether it is a majority, but certainly a lot of us—who have taken the position that we will vote to repeal the withholding provision. Having done so, we believe it our duty to vote to do so at every opportunity.

To make that stick you cannot vote to do it on this bill but you can do it on that bill. You cannot afford to take the attitude: "Well, you see, we tried this time, but we led off on the left foot and we should have led off on the right foot. So we cannot vote for it this time. We have to wait to start off on the other foot."

You simply have to be consistent in taking the view that this matter ought to be changed, and that the amendment and it be offered on a significant bill, not just one bill, but just keep offering it on significant bills up until you finally get it on something that is going to the House of Representatives. If the House of Representatives, for some reason, escapes over there, then offer it on something else headed that way.

I do not believe, Mr. President, that those of us who happen to agree that it was a mistake to enact withholding and that the matter should be repealed ought to be made up to apropos on the House of Representatives' judgment. I would say to him, you keep offering it on significant bills and see what we think of it. I am not sure anybody wants us to do that. We are voting as we think we should on this occasion.

Would you have the opportunity to vote on the amendment?

I do not challenge the right of the chairman of the committee to do what he is doing. He has every right to debate the matter at length, to offer amendments, and to carry on in every way he may resist, an effort by those who would like to change something that he thinks is very good law and thinks should remain in the law.

But I do think that he and all of us in due course will, and I think should, agree that this is a matter which has sufficient support in both Houses. The majority of the U.S. Senate thinks this provision ought to be repealed. A majority of the House of Representatives thinks it should be done. In the name of democracy, why can we not vote on that measure? Why should we not be permitted to have a vote?

This Senator knows how to delay matters. He has done it many, many times. I want to assure that I will do it again between now and the time the good Lord calls me. I think it is in the best tradition of the Senate that one who feels strongly against the view of the majority should make himself heard for what he believes in. So I applaud the Senator from Kansas for the fight he is making. But I do think, on behalf of the rest of us, if we in the majority have told people we are going to vote to repeal this—and I have answered those 50,000 letters telling them that I will not vote to repeal it—if we are sincere ourselves, then it seems to this Senator that we have no business being weak in our resolve, that we should steadfastly support the position to which we have committed ourselves until such time as we have a third of the Senate as we send it to the House of Representatives to see what the House will do on the matter.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with my distinguished friend from Louisiana, but even though there might be a majority on this position, a majority here and a majority in the House, as I indicated earlier the President could still veto any measure which passed, and I require a two-thirds vote to override that veto.

I cannot speak for the President on the social security package, though I know he wants this very badly. I may speak long enough to find out from the President, to find out if he intends to veto the social security package if this amendment is on it. We might as well find out so everybody knows what the ground rules are. If that is what we want to do, then I think that is the choice we have to make.

I can recall—and I do not want to get into a question as to whether the Senator from Louisiana or the Senator from Arizona or anyone else—I remember on the windfall profit tax, they wanted to tax royalties, and the Senate had 70-some votes, but he would not stop talking. I supported the Senator from Louisiana. Do not give me that line about a majority. The point is when you think you have a majority. That took several days, as I recall. I supported the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Missouri stood there with 20 votes over there. There is a clear majority on the windfall profit tax vote. I tucked that in my mind for the day when someone would say, 'I have a majority against it, why not everybody give up?'

Mr. LONG. May I say to the Senator, if I had known I had 70 votes, I would not have been talking so long.

Mr. DOLE. Well, the Senator had a pretty good whip check. I think he was off by one.

I do not quarrel with the Senator from Louisiana. Some issues depend on who has the responsibility of leadership. The Senator from Kansas has that responsibility in this Congress. If I did not have the responsibility, if I were not in the majority, maybe I would not be supporting withholding. I have been guilty of a lot of game playing over the years, and I have been on both sides of the withholding issue—I voted with the Senator from Louisiana for withholding in 1976, I put out a strong statement in 1980 that it was a bad idea, I am now finding out it may not be a very good idea as I hear my colleagues discuss it and discuss me in the process. The point is it is the law since 1942 for wages and since 1982 for interest and dividends.

I might also say that it is in the law in Japan, where 20 percent is withheld on interest and dividends; in the law in Germany at 25 percent on dividends; 35 percent to foreign countries. If you read the major proposals, I even asked if anybody would be of help to them. The answer of the major proposals was offered further that when the unanimous-consent agreement was offered and agreed to was scarcely any offer at all because the reciprocity bill on its face is unconstutional. It is never going anywhere. A vote on that would be absolutely meaningless.

Mr. HELMS. I simply want to pay my respects to the distinguished Senator from Kansas and to assure him that insofar as I know, certainly speaking for myself, I have only the highest admiration for him for fighting the fight that you have told. I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from North Carolina. I hope the record shows that even last Christmas the Senator from Kansas was not one of those who was seeking to limit any Senator's rights because this Senator happened to be on the other side of an issue. In fact, as I recall the debate, I think I said, "Well, this has gone far enough." Many were critical because they wanted to go home for Christmas. The tax problem, as I heard the comment, to vote in the middle of all. But in the end, for well over 100 years. I will be happy to yield to the Senator from North Carolina for a question.

Mr. HELMS. I do not have a question, Mr. President, but I wonder if the Senator will yield with the understanding that he would not lose his right to the floor.

Mr. DOLE. I will be happy to yield but not for the purpose of any amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Carolina. Mr. HELMS. I thank the Senator from Kansas for a question.

Mr. President, I do not agree on this issue with the distinguished Senator from Kansas, but unless I misread this Senate, he need have no concern about many Senators not admiring the fight he has made. I know from some small experience it takes a little bit of guts to stand up against a difficult proposition. As a matter of fact, I had a confrontation with "Rudolph the Rednosed Reindeer" last December, and now the Senator from Kansas is apparently going to have one with the "Easter Bunny."

But, Mr. President, I do admire the Senator even though I do not agree with him on this particular issue, though I may later on with the pers-spective powers which he has.

I do want to refer to a comment made earlier that it was demagoguery, as I heard the comment, to vote in favor of repeal or delay in the implementation of the withholding on dividends and interest.

It is not demagoguery. I would say furthermore that when the unanimous-consent agreement was offered and agreed to, I specifically asked the leadership of the I shall exclude. It is matter being considered on the social security bill. The answer of the majority leader, of course, was it would not. I even asked if anybody would be offended if the repeal were to be considered, and the answer to that was in the negative.

I will say that in my judgment, Mr. President, the offer that the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin accepted and agreed to was scarcely any offer at all because the reciprocity bill on its face is unconstitution. It is never going anywhere. A vote on that would be absolutely meaningless.

There is something I'd like to talk with you about that's part of the tax legislation passed this year. This part of the new tax law did not receive a lot of attention, but I believe it's a consumer volcano that is about to erupt.

It was not about to erupt when this speech was drafted, but put a few million dollars along with the speech and you can get anything to erupt.

A part of the new law due to go into effect in July of next year requires to make a mandatory interest-free loan to the government.

That is a little overstatement. I imagine the working people of this country feel a little concern about that. They have been making interest-free use of your money. It means you and I and the other Americans who earn interest on dividends will lose a lot of money.

What about all the wage earners? They lose a lot of money all year, because we are withholding it on a weekly basis, every 2 weeks, every month:

Savers and investors will lose an estimated $1.5 billion in reinvestment and compounding on their earnings.

On July 1, 1983, the government will cut taxes by 10 percent. On the same day, the government will reach into your savings account to withhold 10 percent of your interest earnings.

The obvious ploy is that you did not get a tax cut; we are going to take it all back, because you are going to pay taxes on your interest. Most people pay taxes on their interest and I assume most people pay taxes in any event.

Then they go on to talk about the Government's purpose in this law. Then they say:

But let's look at the facts. According to the Treasury Department, Taxpayers are already paying taxes on 95 percent of their interest and dividend income that is subject to reporting.

That is not accurate. They know that is not accurate. That study was based on three conditions that have to be met. I shall come back to that.

When you consider that approximately 75 percent of individual tax returns submitted are with refunds, it is pretty obvious that instead of real income to the Treasury, there will be a surge of unreal new money in 1983, most of which will have to be returned to the taxpayers the following year.

Then they went on to talk about dis-incentives to savings. I think that was probably fairly accurate. They did point out that there were exemptions. I must say the bankers thought we added too many exemptions. That is one objection they had. Maybe we did. Maybe it made it difficult for the banks. Maybe they had to put two computer buttons on instead of one.

While I am thinking about it, not all the big banks are for withholding. Citicorp and Citibank is a strong opponent of withholding and it is a fairly substantial bank. The make a lot of loans to foreign countries. They have urged other banks not to seek a resolution of this issue. The procedure for getting an exemption brings up a major privacy concern.

Then they go on to make it appear that you are going to have to reveal a lot of facts about yourself and your income when you want an exemption certificate. That is a flatout mistake. All you have to do is fill out boxes to say you fit in one of five categories. You do not have to say how old you are, but put your name, your State, your account number, and you sign. That is all you have to do.

How would you like your bank teller who may be your neighbor or a member of your church, to see how much tax you pay? All you have to do is fill out boxes to return last year. You do not have to and I are both 65, we filed a joint tax liability was $600 or less, that you distrust and doubt, saying, "Oh, you all you have to do.

Here they are planting the seeds of distrust and doubt, saying, "Oh, you count number, and you sign. That is pounding, advance withholding will cost the $1.5 billion in lost reinvestment and com•

And besides costing savers and investors 1.5 billion in lost reinvestment and compounding, advance withholding will cost the Treasury the additional $1.5 billion on earnings on taxes payable on those earnings. That is not true, either. There is no expense at all because we have a float built into the law, which says to banks, whether they are big, small, or medium-sized banks, you are going to receive interest enough from the float to pay your expenses.

Then they say the Government will be literally picking the taxpayers' pockets. This will give the Government permission to what? To loot your savings account, they say.

That is the American Bankers Association speech. They sent it out to people all around the country. According to them, we are going to be picking their pockets and we have permission to get into their savings account.

If you listened to that speech and you were 65 or 45 or 25, you would be mad. You would be outraged. You would be very willing to fill out a few cards and send them to your Congressmen with the banks pay the postage. All you have to do is sign your name. In some cases, you do not have to sign your name.

Mr. METZENBAUM. Will the Senator from Kansas yield for a question? Mr. DOLE. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Ohio. Mr. METZENBAUM. The Senator from Ohio is perplexed as to how the banks have been able to send in so many thousands of pieces of mail or cause them to be sent in. Obviously, they have been printed up. I have before me the Tax Code, which provides that provisions of paragraph 1 shall not be construed as allowing the deduction of any amount paid or incurred in connection with any attempt to influence public or legislative matters, elections, or referenda.

My question is, have the banks been able to figure out a way in which they can deduct from their expenses all of the costs which they have incurred in connection with this lobbying campaign when the code specifically spells out that that is not permissi•

What steps, if any, will be taken by the IRS to cause the banks to pay out of their own funds these dollars? As I see it at the moment, it appears that the taxpayers are actually subsidizing this lobbying campaign to influence the results of this vote that is on the floor of the Senate at the moment. I wonder if the distinguished Senator from Kansas, chairman of the Finance Committee, can explain how the banks are able to do this at the taxpayers' expense?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I appreciate the question. We have been wondering about that ourselves. I must say in fairness to the banks, I do not believe many banks are going to try to deduct this, and I do not believe the taxpayers are actually subsidizing this lobbying effort on their part.

But I assume it is that some bankers, after they read the speech, refused to use it. The point is it was distributed all over the country. The preparation of the speech that the bankers sent out to their constituent is a misrepresentation. All the Congressmen, and I'm speaking specifically of saying we had authorized lobbying—that is what the bankers said, lodging of savings and picking pockets—they wanted to issue a challenge to:

Ask your Congressmen and Senators to commit themselves on this issue. Let them know that this issue is important enough to sway your vote.

And on and on. I do not really quar•

Well, again "a piece of the savings" is a misrepresentation. All the Congress wants, all the Government wants, all the people ought to demand—in fact, if I were a taxpayer, I would demand it—is that the Congress not give in on this issue. If I were paying my fair share of taxes, I would not want my neighbor, or my neigh•

Member of this Senate; the Senator from Kansas plans to be here awhile. I understand they have informed the American people. I have to believe that people in my State trust me for the most part, and I really believe that those who have written letters that were less than friendly, if they really focused on the issue and if they are paying their taxes—and most of them are—will say: "Well, we made a mistake." In fact, I will bring letters to read on the floor tomorrow, or the next day, or the next day where people who have the facts apologized for sending the postcard. There are a lot of those people out there. They are good people. They are like anybody else; however; if you tell them something long enough, they will believe it. If we take money out of their savings, they ought to come back and talk to us.

We ought to set the Record straight and we have to have both sides of the argument. I know it is difficult to take on a powerful lobbying group, and I am certain others have done a better job than this Senator in other issues at other times and know the same will pass. But unless it passes, the Senator from Kansas is going to make every effort he can to make certain that the law is not repealed or delayed unless we can assure the depositors across this country that the banks are going to cooperate in lowering interest rates and permitting people who do not have $2,500 to buy money market funds and some other basic changes.

We may not succeed in that. I am almost convinced that the bankers may be too powerful for any change at all.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, first let me say that I congratulate the Senator from Kansas. I not only agree with him, but I admire him for the courageous stand he is taking. I think he is correct, and I think time will prove that he is correct. MEDICARE STUDY ON IMPACT OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT METHOD.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, my good friend and colleague, the Senator from California (Mr. Cranston), has asked me to ask the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee (Mr. Doles) a question regarding section 303(a)(2)(C) of S. 1 as reported. That proviso in the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct and report to the Congress on studies related to the advisability of making changes in the diagnosis-related group prospective payment method in certain situations.

The Senator from California's question pertains to the scope of the study and required under section 303(a)(2)(C) of 5.1 as reported. That is whether these DRG modifications would take account of the proportion of severely ill patients that hospitals serve, the proportion of high-intensity care that they provide, and the proportion of severely ill patients that they provide complex care. More specifically, the question is whether the Secretary is intended to study and report on whether hospitals typically large urban hospitals—treat disproportionately large numbers of severely ill patients, and provide complex or highly intensive care in a disproportionately large number of cases receive equitable levels of payment under the new system and, if they do not, what changes in the payment methodology should be made to ensure they do.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I assure my good friends, the distinguished Senators from Tennessee (Mr. Long) and from California (Mr. Cranston), that this study proviso definitely is intended to require an evaluation of prospective payment system on tertiary care institutions providing complex care and having a high case-mix intensity. The study is also intended to focus on what, if any, remedies would be appropriate to insure that they receive equitable treatment under the new prospective payment system.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from California and myself, I thank the very able chairman for that very helpful clarification.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas has been questioned by the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Mattingly) and others about the effect of the Finance Committee proviso clarifying the effect of dictum in the Supreme Court's decision in Rowan on the issue of the taxation of fringe benefits. I would like to assure each of my fellow colleagues that this proviso which clarifies the effect of the Rowan case is not intended to change the law on the issue of the taxation of fringe benefits either for income tax or social security tax purposes.

Some employers have argued by analogy that the Internal Revenue Service regulations under IRC section 61—defining gross income—or Internal Revenue Service regulations under IRC section 3401—defining wages for purposes of income tax withholding—presume that employer-provided benefits from inclusion in the social security wage base of employees.

When the Supreme Court decided Rowan Companies, Inc. against United States, which held that the value of meals and lodging which are excludable from the gross income of an employee are also excludable from the social security wage base of the employee, it also stated that the definition of wages for social security tax purposes and the definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes should be interpreted in regulations in the same manner. This dictum has been interpreted by some employers as supporting their exclusion of employer-provided benefits from the social security wage base of employees.

The provision in the Finance Committee bill states that:

Nothing in the regulations prescribed for purposes of chapter 24 (relating to income tax withholding) which provides an exclusion from "wages" as used in such chapter shall be construed to require a similar exclusion from "wages" in the regulations prescribed for purposes of this chapter.

This provision does not require that employer-provided benefits be included in the social security wage base of employees and no inferences can be drawn that this provisions expands the authority of Treasury to include employer-provided benefits in the wage base of employees.

When the committee included this proviso it was only reversing the dictum in Rowan by providing that the determination of whether or not amounts are includible in the social security wage base is to be made without regard to whether such amounts are treated as wages for income tax withholding purposes. There was no discussion of the fringe benefit issue and no intent to express an opinion on whether or not any employer-provided benefits should be included in an employee's gross income or social security wage base. The provision merely decouples the definition of wages for income tax withholding purposes and the definition of wages for social security tax purposes. No inferences should be drawn from this provision concerning the issue of including or excluding employer-provided benefits from the social security wage base of employees.

Congress has enacted a moratorium prohibiting the issuance of regulations on the inclusion of fringe benefits in gross income of employees. This moratorium expires on December 31, 1983. Hopefully, we will address this issue before the moratorium expires and settle the issue and any future provision in the Finance Committee bill on the Rowan case does not imply any opinion on whether or not fringe benefits are includible in an employee's gross income or social security wage base. These issues are still open for Congress to address. S 3513
Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, if we could dispose of the Melcher amendment either with adoption of the second-degree amendment or with the quorum call, I think we could finish the session today. That may be somewhat optimistic. The Senator from Kansas has no idea how we are going to dispose of the Melcher amendment.

As I looked over the amendments on social security, there are only about four or five that would require rollcall votes and there is a strong desire by the President of the United States, by the House leadership which already passed the social security bill, and by the Senate leadership, at least on this side, to try to pass the social security bill and go to conference and pass the conference report by Thursday evening.

In order to do that, we have a lot of work to do.

Mr. President, I would think within the next few minutes there would be no move made to resolve the impasse. In the meantime, I suggest the absence of a quorum by the request of the chairman of the Finance Committee. I just hate to do that. We could suggest that that amendment be voted upon with a voice vote and be dispensed with. We could suggest that, instead of putting a point of order against my amendment, we could suggest a motion to waive the budget rules concerning the amendment, pass it, and get on.

Are we to be lambasted here, those of us who feel very seriously, very objectively, and very sincerely that this is a provision that ought to be passed by the Congress and ought to be signed into law by the President so that the Senate can reconsider what, in my judgment, and probably in the judgment of other Senators, was very wrong taxing the interest in the Tax Act of 1982, last summer?

If the House does not like my amendment, they are going to knock it off. But the House must like it or the Senator from Kansas would not be on the lobbyist against his own bill. If the President does not like it, he has a chance to veto the bill, but I do not think he is going to veto this bill. That is a good reason for having this very serious provision in this particular bill, because this is one that the President is probably going to sign.

These people who write in to us should not be glibly described as if they do not know what they are talking about, that they are just responding to what a banker told them to do or suggested they do. I never take the letters of my constituents lightly. I take their letters seriously.

We receive letters that say:

This is the first time I have ever written to a Member of Congress, but I want to let you know what I think this is too much. We are already paying all of our taxes and here is another withholding tax on savings. The IRS is going to remove a portion of the interest due to us as a 10-percent tax. They are going to use it for up to a year.

Here is a typical letter on that very point:

I have never written an elected official in the past but at this point I feel compelled to express my opinion. I feel that the 10 percent withholding tax on our savings should be repealed because it imposes an unnecessary and unfair burden on savers. The current laws requiring the reporting of interest income are burdensome enough to one's savings institution but it should be adequate to assure that interest income is being reported to the Treasury Department. A nonbank financial institution is facing a tremendous problem in financial reporting and withholding from savings accounts seems like a relatively painless way to insure that the flow of interest is reported in a smooth and uninterrupted. However, the approach taken by this new withholding law in effect punishes those who are helping to finance new jobs and capital construction by reducing the amount of return they can receive, having 10 percent of their savings removed and given to the Government.

It goes on to say that they object to it and hope that something will be done.

That is a letter "written by hand." That does not seem to me to be something generated at the request of a bank, or the request of a savings and loan, or, for that matter, a credit union. For those of us who take the position that something should be done about it, I do not think it serves any good purpose simply to say: "Well, this has been caused by the bankers lobby." Personally, I have never found a bankers lobby that had influence with very many Senators to hold up a process here for consideration of something that they dearly want.

I have observed, over my time in Washington, both in the House and the Senate, that when people really zero in on a point that they think they are being abused on, they do get the attention of Congress, both the House and the Senate. In my judgment, I know it has captured my attention. It has captured, I think, the attention of the vast majority of the Senate. It is because these people write to us, or call us, or buttonhole us, or get us on the telephone and say this is just too much.

I am particularly sympathetic to the elderly who write in and say they depend upon their savings. The interest from their savings, for part of their monthly bills. But I would have to say that I am also very sympathetic to the ordinary wage earner who has withholding out of his paycheck and knows that he is paying all that is due. I am advised by the Treasury Department that 75 percent of those taxpayers pay more than is due and at the end of the year get a refund. So I think it is apparent to that group, when they know that on withholding they are paying a little more than they should be, is particularly objectionable to them when they find out that there is going to be money withheld on their savings accounts from the interest that is due them. I can well understand their frustration. They are saying: "If you are after cheaters, why do you not zero in on them?"

As a matter of fact, in discussion with members of the Committee on Finance during the past couple of days, it has been brought to my attention that, even though this provision was locked into the 1982 tax law very quickly, without hearings, some of the members of the Committee on Finance, after the fact of its getting into the bill, went to the Treasury Department and said: There before you believe there are taxpayers who are paying their just taxes, their lawful taxes on interest from savings and dividends." They were told that it was impossible or their questions almost disregarded, shoved aside, and the Treasury Department said: "We really can't identify all of those and this procedure will help it."

When they were asked why the 1099 form, that form that every savings institution, or every insurance company, or other such institution must send out to all of the recipients of interest income, dividends, or other income was not matched up with the 1040 form, it was very brusquely explained to them that it was not possible.

I think it is perfectly logical to respond to the constituents who are taxpayers, and taxpayers may have an idea as to what is the particular provision in law should be either repealed or delayed, either repealed or modified so that it is really zeroing in on those people who escape paying their taxes, rather than burdening everybody. As this constituent letter that I read stated, while it may seem a relatively painless way of securing more revenue that is needed for the Government, why must it become a burden on all, and particularly take away some of the interest income or dividend income from those who use it during the course of the year to pay their bills?

Yes, Mr. President, we can get on with this social security bill any time. We can certainly show some progress with this social security bill any time.

The question of taxation is a matter between the taxpayers and Congress primarily. I think this was a bad move last summer, this particular provision. That is my judgment. I would have to say that, based on the letters I have received, it is the judgment of the majority of my constituents that it was a bad move. But I think what is extremely important in this issue and should not be ignored, or forgotten, or shoved aside is that taxpayers are very interested in the methods of collecting taxes that involve them directly.

I am going to repeat that, Mr. President. Taxpayers are resigned to having their taxes, whether you like withholding or not. They know that, that is their money. They know who is entrusted to paying them. They know that. They understand that. And they know who is going to pay that. They are going to pay it. They are going to get less in interest because that savings institution has some of that money. They know they are going to get less in interest if their practice is to let the interest income accrue to the principal rather than withdrawing it upon payment. If they do withdraw their interest income for living expenses many resent having the 10-percent tax withheld.

If the interest accrues and allowed to compound, as many of them do, at least a portion of it, they know that the early collection of taxes will take some of the money on that compounded principal which would generate more interest payments for them.

But they also believe that this is just added paperwork and that, after all, the form 1099, which reports all the interest earned to be adequate; that if something else needs to be done to close the gap for those who are not paying the taxes they should pay on interest income, then there should be other methods of collecting that, without involving them. It is in their judgment a poor method of collecting taxes, because they are already paying their full taxes.

So, first of all, although my amendment would decrease revenue for this fiscal year by $1.1 billion, which is 0.6 percent of what is projected as a budget deficit, less than 1 percent, I strongly feel that we must find a better way and collect the money and make up the revenue that would be lost. I think it is our constituents are writing to us about.

That is far removed from just a simple attaching a banking label to the income. Any Senator who dares offer an amendment to either repeal it or to delay the implementation of it, in order to look at the method again and reconsider it. Labeling that attempt as just something that represents the banking lobby is not doing justice to the issue involved.

Mr. President, I do want to make proceed the record. I am the chairman of the Budget Committee on the floor now, and I should like to expedite proceedings. The chairman of the Budget Committee desires to make a point of order against my amendment as being outside the budget waiver of the bill. He made that point, under section 904(b), to waive the relevant section contained in titles III and IV of the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is debatable.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, while the chairman of the Budget Committee is perfectly ready to discuss this matter, I point out that, for all the reasons we have been citing for the consideration of this amendment to delay interest withholding and recognizing that it would deplete revenue by $1.1 billion for the remainder of the fiscal year, if it is possible to close to $300 million for the first quarter of the succeeding fiscal year, I believe it is still obvious that there is a strong feeling throughout the country that this matter should be reviewed, thoroughly thought through, and considered to make it a better method for the collection of taxes.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am sorry that I had to leave the Chamber briefly.

Again I say to the Senator from Montana that he is debating the issue, and I commend him for it. He has indicated many times what I consider to be accurate statements concerning whether you like withholding or not. He has fairly said many times that it is a collection procedure, not a tax; and that debate, or course, is helpful.

Before the Senator from New Mexico speaks, I just want to say that the unemployment implications in this bill are significant. Without going through all the States, if we do not take action this week, it is going to affect about 28,000 people in Alabama, 6,000 in Alaska, 209,000 in California, 14,000 in Colorado, 46,000 in Florida, 48,000 in Massachusetts, 92,000 in Michigan, 89,000 in Illinois, 57,000 in Indiana, 131,000 in New York, 78,000 in Ohio, 99,000 in Pennsylvania, 58,000 in Texas, 38,000 in Wisconsin, and 31,000 in Washington.

So I think it is fair to say that this social security bill does contain an urgently needed extension of the Federal Supplemental Compensation program that is due to expire at the end of this month. The problem is that we are not scheduled at this time to be in session next week and will not be here at the end of the month.

The PSC program provides extra benefits to the long-term unemployed who have exhausted their right to benefits under the regular State unemployment program (normally 26 weeks) and the Federal-State extended benefit program (13 weeks). Although there are slight differences between the House and Senate bills, both of them would provide $2 billion or more in unemployment relief to the jobless over the next 6 months.

As the Senator from Louisiana said, if you lose, it is a filibuster. If you win, it is a debate. So I hope we will have a period of informed debate; that eventually right will prevail; that we will not deny unemployment benefits to the jobless while we try to take care of a special interest group, particularly since we have already set a debate, starting April 15. a freestanding debate, with everybody having a chance to modify and otherwise offer amendments, and to debate this whole question of withholding. I certainly would expect the distinguished Senator from Montana to be an active participant.

Someone suggested that we have not had hearings, but I am reminded by staff that we did have hearings, a year ago today. We had hearings on the income tax compliance gap, in the Senate Finance Committee, and we had a discussion of withholding as alternatives to withholding. The Dole-Grassley bill did not contain withholding, but did contain what we thought were tightening procedures, it would require more reporting, and its provisions would be enacted as part of the act. But we were told by IRS at the hearing, very honestly, that it was not enough, and that withholding was also needed.

I read a statement of Mr. Chappotin, Assistant Treasury Secretary for Tax Policy. This is what he said in reference to our bill:

While improving and extending the information reporting network is clearly desirable, particularly to the extent that U.S. Government and corporate obligations would become subject to reporting, we believe that the tax gap has grown too large for us to continue to take limited incremental steps toward improved taxpayer compliance in the interest and dividend area. For that reason, as you know, Mr. Chairman, the administration has proposed withholding on dividends and interest at source, and we hope the committee will give serious consideration to the desirability and feasibility of instituting withholding with respect to interest and dividends.

Mr. President, there have been a lot of quotations from letters, and I did not bring all the favorable letters—but I did pick up a sample of letters that have been written since the people have begun to understand what the real issue is.

That has been the point that the Senator from Kansas has been trying to make for the past several days. Until the people know what the issue is, how do they know what the answer is? We are in advance, but most people would like to have the issue defined.

Here is a letter from New York, from Robert A. Jacobs. He said:

I write you as a student and practitioner of the tax law, concerned with the integrity of our tax system. I am particularly concerned that the recent attack being mounted by our banking community and its grass root constituents on the withholding tax on interest and dividends will weaken our tax system.

At dinner last evening my mother-in-law informed me "that on July 1 they were going to tax my small savings balances with the banks." When I assured her that there was no new tax that would be levied on her small savings, that she could apply for an exemption that would be available to withholding and, in all events, any monies withheld would be credited to her tax liability, she responded by saying "Oh, that's what Hilda is concerned about, she doesn't pay tax on her interest and never has been caught."

I do not know who Hilda is. But that is only one letter. Maybe Hilda will be identified later, particularly if we have withholding.

Here is another one:

I want to apologize for a letter I mailed to you the other day with an article cut out of the paper. After reading more information on it I have come to the conclusion that the small investor will not be hit nearly so hard as the high-income people. It seems to me they can find some loopholes to get out of paying their share.

Another letter says:

Thanks for the explanation on withholding. Now that I understand it, please disregard my earlier letter.

Another letter:

On February 1, I wrote you protesting the enactment of the tax on withholding by Congress. However, since reading more about it, I now realize that the normal effect it will have for us, we wish to reverse our previous position and support you in upholding the act.

There are a lot of letters. Here is another:

My thanks to the President, you, and Secretary Regan for standing up to the massive lobby campaign and saving the savings and loan industries and in their efforts to force Congress to repeal the recently enacted law which requires them to withhold on savings and dividend income earned on investments. There is no doubt about it. Now I doubt even among the most money grabbing bankers if you could find one who would endorse that proposal but fair is fair.

So I just suggest that we can all bring a lot of letters to the Chamber, and I would not want to bring all the other letters to the Chamber. If I did, I would like to see my colleagues. But I can bring all the favorable letters to the Chamber. The others we can weigh and give you the weight on a daily basis as to how many pounds are coming in.

But another letter from Wichita, Kan.:

As one who pays a considerable amount in the 10 percent withholding on dividends, I urge you to stand firm and see that this destructive legislation is kept on the books. It is a considerable inconvenience to me to pay this withholding and I lose a good deal of interest, but if this is the way to catch tax evaders who fail to report this type of income, I support it.

And so forth.

Another letter says:

I am still applauding your remarks to the members of the American Bankers Association on the interest and dividend withholding provisions.

And so forth.

I cannot remember what I said, but someone else does.

I have a letter from Wilbur J. Cohen, former Secretary of HEW in the Johnson administration, and it about C. Fleming, former Secretary of HEW in the Eisenhower administration that says:

As members and officials in organizations representing senior citizen groups we wish to inform you that we wholeheartedly support your efforts to retain withholding of interest and dividends as provided by existing law. We do not think this is a burden on low income elderly persons or is an unfair arrangement for higher income persons. We do not believe that the programs which serve the need of the low-income elderly should be cut back when enforcement of existing laws would yield $20 billion in additional income tax revenue.

We believe much of the tax on the withholding law is erroneous and unwarranted.

Then a letter from a prominent CPA firm, Seldman & Seldman:

Americans believe that they have a higher degree of moral tax morality than other peoples of this world which places us in good standing in us by a higher authority. The fact of the matter is that the great FDR through the system of withholding tax on wages and salaries instilled tax morality in this world which presumably was instilled in other peoples of the world. It would seem that you have a higher degree of tax morality than other peoples of the world. I am sure that you do. I am sure that you have a higher degree of tax morality than other peoples of the world.

The system of withholding tax on wages and salaries would be a great system if it were not for underreporting of interest and dividends when government statistics prove that at least 25 billion dollars of this income is not reported for tax purposes.

And he goes to support withholding.

The Senator from Kansas would not say that if the people who have sent in bank postcards against withholding had all the facts they would all come to a different conclusion, but it is pretty hard to persuade this Senator that Congress passed a new tax, that it is a valid judgment or objective judgment if you have barely heard one side. The only side that most Americans have heard on this is the lobbyist side, those who want to repeal withholding, those who tell you it is a new tax, those who tell you it is going to take away your savings, and believe me, if a report came over the radio that Congress passed a new tax, I assume it would get your attention.

So, Mr. President, I just believe that we should go on with this. Again I can have this debate. It is already scheduled for April 15. We can debate it in a full, free, fair debate. Everyone will be on equal terms. So we can pass the social security bill now. In addition to the urgency for the unemployment provisions there are 35 million or 37 million social security beneficiaries who want us to pass this package. There are about 116 million people who pay into the system, many of them want us to pass this package. It would just seem to me, after working for a year or more on social security and having it passed in the House. of Representatives in a timely fashion, that the Senate says, "Well, we cannot do it because we have to deal with the special interest amendment."

We have time for the special interests, and I believe the elderly are a special interest, and I believe the unemployed are special interests. I hope that today we can turn our attention to these special interest groups and try to pass the social security bill by midnight tonight.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator from Montana had not moved to waive the Budget Act, I would have raised the point yeaterday, and the Senate's amendment. If I had raised the point of order the distinguished Senator could have moved to waive. So we are right back in the same postures of voting on a waiver of the Budget Act under section 311.

The distinguished Senator from Montana had inquired, his amendment clearly violates section 311 of the Budget Act. For that reason he has moved to waive it.

This amendment violates section 311 because it reduces revenues in the point yeaterday, and we are free to do that. With repeal of withholding we would lose about $20 billion in revenues over the next 5 years.

We are talking here about a principle, and I will discuss that in a little more detail. In addition, it is obvious to me that this amendment is merely an interim step toward repeal of the entire withholding and I think that revenue losses will be much larger. With repeal of withholding we would lose about $20 billion in revenues over the next 5 years.

I understand that argument could be made against section 311. I know that the budget resolution that we now have on the books is out of date. I know that fiscal year revenues must be revised very soon to take into account that the economy has not performed quite as well as we thought.

But, Mr. President, as far as policy changes are concerned I do not think that the President and the Secretory of Treasury and the President, and the President's budget proposal for fiscal years 1983 and 1984 will make room for a tax cut. Quite to the contrary. We are almost certainly going to provide for some tax increases. The President asked for a few billion dollars. On the other end of the spectrum, of course, the House of Representatives is asking for $30 billion. I do not think that is very practical when we are just beginning to see the full blessings of the recovery, but I will challenge anyone to say that the new policy is going to provide for significant tax reductions and, therefore, this procedure that we are talking about is not very relevant.

(Mr. PRESSLER assumed the chair.)

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question at this point?

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to yield.

Mr. LONG. Is it not true this very bill right here now is here because of a compromise that was made by the Senate's committee, and does not that waiver include a waiver of $2,070,000,000 in spending for unemployment purposes over the Budget Act?

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LONG. If we are talking about being wrong, the way the Budget Act was waived we are already wrong. We have a bill here which is already $2 billion over the Budget Act to begin with, and the Senator recommended that waiver.

Mr. DOMENICI. That is correct. I recommended that waiver and it is obvious to this Senator that there is a tremendous distinction between waiving the Budget Act when you have unemployed people in our country who are not going to get their unemployment benefits and we have to do something to make sure that they do. That is a clear emergency.

There is nobody who can tell us that this social security bill itself is not an emergency, coupled with the unemployment compensation that we wanted to extend, but which costs money for which we waived the 1983 budget targets. Nobody can say that is not an emergency. There is no emergency on the Senator from Montana's amendment. Quite to the contrary, the U.S. Senate clearly plans to contemplate it, debate it, and vote on it. Everybody has their procedures. The Budget Committee has its procedures and I am told that the distinguished Senator from New Mexico that as a matter of principle this is precisely what the Budget Act had in mind.

We can take a clear look and say "Do we want every time something like this comes along, that is plenty of time and does not belong on this bill, do we want to waive the Budget Act?"

As I indicated, I would have made a point of order. I did not make one on the basic bill. Quite to the contrary. If I were authorized to do that, I would have, and I think that as far as policy effects are concerned the agreement that was made by the distinguished Senator from New Mexico that as a matter of principle this is precisely what the Budget Act had in mind.

We have a different situation here, very different from the standpoint of policy and from the standpoint of procedure. We can vote on withholding another time; we cannot vote on unemployment compensation 2 or 3 weeks from now. It will be too late. I just note that in our small State like New Mexico we are talking about 5,000 people running out of unemployment compensation if we do not pass this bill. In other States it is many times more than that. That is what makes this situation different from the amendment that the Senator from Montana has here. Twenty-six thousand unemployed people in Louisiana will not get their unemployment benefits if this bill is not passed.

One might say, "Well, what about all those people who are being adversely affected by the withholding?" I think I have addressed that. There is already a procedure with reference to that. We will all have our opportunity to look that one squarely in the face without the unemployed people of the country losing benefits without the social security compromise coming unraveled, and all of the other things that have been said here on the floor.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to.

Mr. LONG. In view of the fact we have been informed by the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee that Treasury proposes by regulations to put the withholding off to the year-end rather than to make it withholding prior to the end of the year, can the Senator tell me how much revenue the Treasury would lose during the remainder of fiscal year 1983?

Mr. DOMENICI. I am informed that that which the Secretary of the Treasury proposes to do by regulation was already taken into consideration in the basic bill, and that the only change was in NOW accounts which came into existence afterward. This will have some effect on the total revenues, but the Secretary of the Treasury indicated that that is a relatively small amount. In terms of the issue that is before the Senate, if the law provided for that they are free to do that and, as I understand it, the estimates took that into consideration.

Mr. LONG. Can the Senator give us his estimate what difference it makes to start withholding in 1983 rather than 1984?

Mr. DOMENICI. I submitted it for the RECORD a couple of days ago, it is about $1.1 billion for the remainder of fiscal year 1983, I think the Secretary of the Treasury probably upwards of $1 billion. If the Senator looks at the numbers he will see that this is not an issue of the out years. Since the Senator from Montana's amendment addresses only a year, the loss is $1.1 billion in revenue using the same CBO estimates and Joint Tax Committee experts on both the original estimates and the case.

Mr. LONG. Is this not true, Senator, that the Budget Act with regard to the issue of waiver makes no real distinction between waiver for emergency purposes or waiver because Congress for some other reasons might regard it as necessary?

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. LONG. I thank the Senator.
Mr. DOMENICI. I think I made that point, and certainly appreciate his clarifying it for me. I do not intend to indicate that the clause left over from these considerations or qualities or quantities. It is just clear that this one violates section 311 of the Budget Act, and the Senator has asked for it to be waived. I suggest this is an opportunity for us to avoid the discussions, all the time they have been helped on and to do what we ought to do, to say it does not belong on this bill, and the budget provides us with an excellent vehicle to keep it off. Unless the Senator gets a majority of the votes here, he cannot get a waiver, and the precision will not be on this bill. I think that is something that is helpful to everyone here. If we vote against the distinguished Senator in his waiver, we are not voting on the issue. We are voting on whether to reduce the revenue base of the country when we have huge deficits. Everybody says we cannot get along unless we get a handle on our deficits. I did not find anybody proposing that we get rid of this $20 billion over the next 5 years. I did not hear anybody say "Well, I have a new tax to take its place or I have $20 billion in medicare changes or other cuts to take its place." We are just here dealing with $20 billion as if it does not matter on the deficit side. We just wipe it out and nobody ought to be worried about it. We have received a lot of letters. We have a way of working our will and how we are together, and we will provide some way to continue the deficit reduction. But we will have done it thoughtfully, without just wiping away $20 billion over the next 5 years from the omnibus budget bill that reduced deficits and started us on this road to recovery.

Mr. President, there is no doubt in my mind that while there may be various reasons for waiving the Budget Act. We have discussed a couple of them here today. However, the urgency of unemployment compensation, the good fortune of time that we arrived at a social security solution with the fine cooperation of the President, the Speaker and the blue-ribbon Commission, that that occurred at the end of a budget cycle and therefore we have to do this bill, that there is no doubt that those are the kinds of things that would be overwhelmingly supported here.

But there is no doubt in my mind that there are not going to be further tax reductions in 1983, and 1984, and 1985. We have to produce a new budget resolution. It will have some new policies. It will talk about all the main issues, everything from defense to taxes. But can anybody really stand up here and say they expect the policy is going to move in the direction of cutting more taxes in the 1983, 1984, 1985, 1986 cycle? That is basically what we are doing here today and that is why I feel confident in opposing the amendment, the motion to waive, and why I think Senators ought to think very carefully before they do it.

You know it almost strikes me that we go through this job of reconciliation on the tax side, we make some tough decisions, and we provide $98 billion over the next few years, we reduce the medicare costs, we reduce some other expenditures in the budget and then, before the ink is dry, we come up to $20 billion to $200 billion of that $98 billion, we just want to wipe it out and add $20 billion to the deficits."

We ought not be concerned about it. Some would be saying: "We ought to grant this waiver just like nothing is at stake. Senator Melcher is right, waive the Budget Act."

I hope I have convinced the Senators that this is an appropriate procedure that the Budget Act prescribed. It ought not be waived cavalierly and it ought not be waived here this afternoon. Quite to the contrary, we ought to get on with the business of passing this bill and, in due course, taking up the issue that is raised in part, not in totality, but in part by the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Montana.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I am informed that the Treasury regulations to provide for year-end withholding would cost us $50 million in revenue in fiscal year 1983 and would cost us $200 million in revenue in 1984.

Now, that is the revenue loss because the regulations reduce the amount that we would collect otherwise by that amount. This compares with the Melcher amendment which, in the main, involves whether you collect the money sooner, within the next few months, or whether you collect it after the end of the year when people file their tax returns.

Now, the Treasury, in my judgment just in order to try to reduce the opposition to the withholding, brought out these Treasury regulations which will cost us $250 million in 1983–84 with no further consideration. They just thought it would be a good idea to strengthen their position in trying to put the withholding on interest and dividends into effect. So the Treasury makes that change without budgetary consideration; just does it to increase the strength of their argument in trying to maintain the system of withholding on interest and dividends.

They can do that without any process. I have not heard a soul here on the Senate floor protest about the loss of the $250 million by the Treasury changing their regulations to try to pick up some votes in the Congress.

When the Senator proposes a measure that would defer taxes—and most of what is involved in the budget impact is mainly deferring the collection of something from the third quarter of this year over into April of next year—we are told, "Oh, my goodness, that is going to cost us some money." The practical matter of that is most of it is deferral of tax collection to a future point.

Mr. President, I believe we ought to look at some of these things in perspective, rather than to contend that those who agree with one are carrying on a holy crusade and those who disagree with one are bad people engaging in conduct unworthy of Americans.

For example, Mr. President, I heard so much conversation on the Senate floor to the effect that the bankers have done something unworthy of us in making a case against withholding. I had little choice but to respond to the Constitution of the United States to see if they had some support for their position. I find the first amendment of the Constitution relevant. That is an amendment that says that Congress shall pass no law prohibiting the exercise of free speech or free press, or the right of people to assemble peaceably.

Let me quote these next words: "And to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

Now, there is the same amendment which so correctly protects the freedom of speech, freedom of press, and freedom of people to assemble. And there is the right of people to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. They thought enough of the right of people to protest that they actually wrote it right there in the Constitution and sent it out for the States to ratify in the Bill of Rights.

To chastise and scorn people for exercising their rights under the Constitution, Mr. President, is just contrary to American traditions, and we ought to stop that.

Furthermore, we ought to stop pretending that all the righteousness is on our side and all the evil is on the other side. Let me read a proposal out of the 1980 Republican Party platform, which, in my judgment, was sincerely placed there. I just have difficulty believing that those on the other side of the aisle are not as sincere as those on my side of the aisle. Let me read this language:

We also oppose Carter proposals to impose withholding on dividend and interest income. They would serve as a disincentive to save and invest and create needless paperwork for government, business, industry, and the private citizen.

Mr. President, listen to this vitriolic language: "They would literally rob—" that is not my word, Mr. President, that is the 1980 Republican platform—"They would literally rob the saver of the benefits of interest compounding and automatic dividend reinvestment programs."

Mr. President, we have been told that an article appeared in the Washington Post exposing the improper behavior of some bankers. I had to go get a copy of that article. I read it every now and then you find something in the Washington Post that is very thoughtful and well done, and you cannot tell whether it is good or not until you read the article.

So, Mr. President, I went and got this article that the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), the distinguished chairman of the committee, referred to yesterday.

I wish to congratulate the person who wrote the article on Sunday, March 20, Mr. Paul Taylor. It was worthy of reference by the chairman of the Finance Committee.

Let me just read what the author said on this subject:

"One ad that especially annoyed Dole read: "Warning: 10 Percent of the Money You Earn in Interest is Going to Disappear," with the word "Disappear" fading to white.

That ad was held up for us to see yesterday, and I saw it.

Misleading? Perhaps. But the body of the ad makes it clear that this is a withholding scheme, not a new tax, and that therefore the 10 percent is a payment against taxes that will not be refunded.

The ad notes there are exemptions for the poor and elderly, although it objects to the red tape.

A more inflammatory treatment—

This is the writer to whom I complimented for writing in the Washington Post—

A more inflammatory treatment comes from a sample speech distributed by the ABA to member banks: "Literally, the Government will be picking the taxpayers' pockets."

Now, that is a strong statement, Mr. President. I doubt if I would go as strong as the American Bankers Association.

"Literally, the Government will be picking the taxpayers' pockets." The Government will be able to " Loft your savings account," it says.

That compares with a passage in the 1980 Republican campaign platform, which opposed President Carter's withholding proposal: "They would literally rob the saver of the benefits of interest compounding."

Now, I leave it up to any fair-minded person, who is being the stronger in overwriting his pocketbook, to find the bankers who said that they would pick the saver's pockets or would it be the Republican Convention which said they would rob him?

"Robbing" suggests that someone is breaking and entering feloniously at night, or stealing from one's wealth at the point of a pistol or a knife.

Mr. President, it is difficult to choose who was the more vitriolic in that regard. I suggest that we stop this thing of the pot calling the kettle black.

Now, Mr. President, to go further, the Senator from Louisiana had lost all interest in the matter some years ago when a majority of the Senate brought in a resolution taking the position that the Congress should under no circumstances engage in withholding on interest and dividends.

That was Senate Concurrent Resolution 92, 96th Congress, 2d session, June 12, 1980. This was reported on July 23, the legislative day of June 12, 1980.

Mr. President, the resolution was reported by Mr. LONG as chairman of the Finance Committee. The Record will show Mr. Long did, not sponsor this resolution. He had nothing to do with it. It came from others. Let me just read the resolution:

"Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that the enactment of a withholding tax on interest and dividend payments would be detrimental to the economic well-being of the United States."

I confess, Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana reported that resolution to the Senate. It was not his resolution. Whose resolution was it? The principal sponsor was Mr. CHAFFEE. For himself and who? Mr. Dole, Mr. Lugar, Mr. Goldwater, Mr. DeConcini, Mr. Hart, Mr. Kashebaum, Mr. Stafford, and so forth, Mr. President, 60 Senators in all.

I ask unanimous consent that the cosponsors be printed in the Record, Mr. President.

There being no objection, the cosponsors were ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

LIST OF COSPONSORS
Mr. Dole, Mr. Lugar, Mr. Goldwater, Mr. DeConcini, Mr. Hatch, Mr. Durkin, Mrs. Kassebaum, Mr. Stafford, Mr. Tower, Mr. Humphrey, Mr. McClure, Mr. Cochran, Mr. Church, Mr. Helms, Mr. Pressler, Mr. Ford, Mr. Garn, Mr. Randolph, Mr. Danforth, Mr. Hayakawa, Mr. Thurmond, Mr. Pryor, Mr. Zorinsky, Mr. Hatfield, Mr. Mathias, Mr. Wallor, Mr. Young, Mr. Schmitt, Mr. Cohen, Mr. Heinz, Mr. Roth, Mr. Laxalt, Mr. Durenberger, Mr. Baker, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Warner, Mr. Armstrong, Mr. Stone, Mr. Packey, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Nunn, Mr. Bumpers, Mr. McGovern, Mr. Teegens, Mr. Schellenger, Mr. Hart, Mr. Eagleton, Mr. Boren, Mr. Metzenbaum, Mr. Mandel, Mr. Thurmond, Mr. Williams, Mr. Levin, Mr. Gravel, Mr. Nelson, Mr. Riegel, and Mr. Bentsen.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, that is a majority of the U.S. Senate, ably headed by the ranking member of the Finance Committee, Mr. CHAFFEE, for himself and Mr. Dole, who was at that time the ranking member of the minority side, and who serves with great distinction as chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. President, here is a statement that I read off the wire, indicating that President Reagan charges that a compromise on social security legislation is being held hostage by a "selfish special interest group and its congressional allies are attempting to make this vital economic security bill a legislative hostage."

Reagan met with congressional Republicans today and blasted the banking lobby for its tactics, according to Senator Robert J. Doole, D-Kan.

"Ad the meeting, Doole told reporters.

"The President, in one of the rare times I have seen him really disgusted, threw his glasses down and said he's had it up to his black."

Because of the fight over the withholding amendment, it appears unlikely Congress will be able to meet its deadline of completing legislation before President Reagan leaves for a European trip. Because of the fight over the withholding amendment, it appears unlikely Congress will be able to meet its deadline of completing legislation before President Reagan leaves for a European trip.

Let me just read what the author said on this subject:

"Misleading? Perhaps. But the body of the ad was held up for us to see yesterday."

In my statement, Reagan said he would have gladly signed the social security legislation "to relieve legitimate worries about the economic security of so many."

"Now, however, a selfish special interest group and its congressional allies are attempting to make this vital economic security bill a legislative hostage," the President said.

A amendment to repeal withholding—

"based on a campaign of distortion and designed to prove that the banks and other financial institutions can still have their own way in Washington—has no place in the bill pending before the Senate," he said.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I find myself asking that if one is in error, why must he be so self-righteous when he changes his mind? Why should he change his mind? Why should he change his mind? Why should he not concede that these are matters about which honest people differ? Some people might feel strongly one way, some might feel strongly the other way, and there is a lot to be said for both sides of the argument.

I, for one, Mr. President, am not convinced—with all the mail I have received, 58,000 communications at last count, many thousands of them handwritten—I am not convinced and I cannot believe that the people of Louisiana who sent me those communications are ignorant, stupid, or incapable of knowing what they are talking about. It just seems to this Senator that people are very well informed on this subject. They are very well informed by both sides. I cannot believe that they do not know what they are talking about.

Furthemore, Mr. President, when the Senator made reference yesterday to the so-called two-way mirror, this Senator cannot find any basis for getting upset about that. What it appears happened was that a public relations firm, seeking to determine how best to pursue their effort to convince the public, or persuade the public to their point of view, paid people $25 each to sit down and talk about matters of the day. Incidentally, that is good pay to talk about matters. Most people are willing to sit around a cracker barrel and talk about something for nothing, but here they are paying $25 per head to sit down and talk to you, telling you what they think about matters. It seems to me that it is a pretty nice proposition. People get my opinion all the time without paying, and I pick other people's minds for time to time without any pay. I see nothing wrong about that technique.

I should think that advertising firms might decide whether to recommend that their clients should put out purple hose rather than brown hose, or green hose rather than white hose. They might pay somebody, and I think that would be a generous thing to do, to pay somebody $25 to sit down and give their opinion. One beautiful lady walks in with purple hose, and then a lovely lady walks in with lavender hose. Then they ask, "Which hose do you think is the more attractive? Which do you think would more attract the customer?"

Chances are, the person interviewed would naturally answer the question based on the shape of what was in the hose. But, Mr. President, if they brought in two identical twins, then I think one might get an unbiased opinion as to which hose would be more attractive on a young lady and would be in a better position to suggest to his client which he would recommend.

I find nothing improper about that, Mr. President. It just seems to me to be one of prejudging his own position to say that there is some evil about someone seeking to test public reaction by paying somebody $25 to talk to them about matters and recording it.

I would be willing to bet if you went out on the street right now and you asked, "How many people can we find who would be willing for $25 an hour to talk about matters and give their judgment about matters, well understanding that somebody is going to be paying them $25 to talk about running a printing shop, or a two-way mirror (a two-way mirror might not help very much) if you said it was a new tax, and asked "What do you say about this?" they would say "I am against it." They would throw more raw meat into the cage, claiming that the law will be taking away savings, or hurting the elderly, you can stimulate people pretty well.

There is no doubt in my mind that these are experts. They demonstrate how good they are. I hope we can get the name of this marketing group because if they can sell this to the Congress and the American people they can probably sell almost any candidate.

Maybe even those running for office who look to up this group. I would just suggest that if these people can market repeal of this law, which is nothing but collection mechanism, they may have a knack for selling candidates.

I do not really think that is the way to bankers in my State would deal with their grievances with the law. I do not believe there is any banker in the State of Kansas who would bring people into a room and peek at them through a mirror while somebody was feeding them some "raw meat," some inflammatory misinformation, in an effort to stimulate a proper response. I do not think that would happen—I am certain that would not happen in the State of Kansas.

I have heard a lot about the Republican platform. I have heard that Republicans had much interest in the Republican platform. That is the first time I have heard it mentioned in a couple of years. I am not even certain the Republicans have much interest in the Republican platform. Now we are getting all this bipartisan interest in the Republican platform. But there was a significant difference between the Carter proposal and the proposal that is on the floor today.

The Senator from Montana read with some enthusiasm a reference to the Republican platform. But there was no provision that there were general by not available under the Carter proposal. Thus, the proposal criticized by the Republican platform was very different from that of last year.

I am sorry to see the Senator from Montana leave. I was planning to read a statement he made on June 30, 1976. I voted with the Senator from Louisiana, he was so persuasive. The Senator from Louisiana said:

In 1967 the House passed a proposal very similar to what the Senator is proposing now. President Kennedy worked very hard to try to get us to agree to that. I was one who held out against it and would not support that time to place a very heavy burden on the banks to do all the bookkeeping and handle this. I have had friends who are in the banking business tell me that with these new computers, and they say it confidently—they are part of a fraternity and want to work together. It is really not much of an administrative problem so there is no problem for the banks to comply with this withholding.

Furthermore, they have perfected the mechanics to be used. But in a situation where literally millions, perhaps 5 million and maybe even more, of taxpayers are successfully avoiding paying their taxes on interest and dividend income to the Government. As the Senator said, it is not a matter of closing a loophole, but this is just a mater of catching tax cheaters. When we lets as many as 5 million taxpayers chisel and cheat on the Government it is bad for taxpayers’ moral. People feel they can cheat on their taxes and get away with it. So I would hope the amendment would be accepted.

We have been under pressure to pick up some revenue to pay for the tax cut in the bill. We have had some pretty bitter fights and I was faced with high interest rates, we were faced with a falling stock market. The President of the United States, Ronald Reagan, said, “We have to take some tough action.” One of the things he suggested was a $99 million—some say $100 million—tax cut. I have not quarreled with those opposed to it. Mr. President, I do not cite that to disagree with the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. We can all, as he says, stand here and say someone was on this side, someone was on your side. The broader point is that in 1982 we were faced with growing deficits, we were faced with high interest rates, we were faced with a falling stock market. The President of the United States, Ronald Reagan, said, “We have to take some tough action.” One of the things he suggested was a $99 million—some say $100 million—tax cut. Certainly, the people have a right to petition Congress, a right to redress their grievances. I suggest they ought to do it in an appropriate way. They ought to lay out the facts and give their reasons to derive from our American people. They should not say it is a tax when it is not a tax. That is the quarrel we have had, plus it does bother the Senator from Kansas a little bit, I guess, because it was this Senator who, last year, made the motion to delay withholding for 6 months so the banks could work it out. I now believe that they have used that time going to be extended even more? I might point out that the Treasury Department today issued this statement and said they are flexible on that. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with those opposed to it.

I have said on this floor a half dozen times the very thing the Senator from Louisiana said. Certainly, the people have a right to petition Congress, a right to redress their grievances. That is the quarrel we have had, plus it does bother the Senator from Kansas a little bit, I guess, because it was this Senator who, last year, made the motion to delay withholding for 6 months so the banks could work it out. I now believe that they have used that time going to be extended even more? I might point out that the Treasury Department today issued this statement and said they are flexible on that. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with those opposed to it.

I have said on this floor a half dozen times the very thing the Senator from Louisiana said. Certainly, the people have a right to petition Congress, a right to redress their grievances. I suggest they ought to do it in an appropriate way. They ought to lay out the facts and give their reasons to derive from our American people. They should not say it is a tax when it is not a tax. That is the quarrel we have had, plus it does bother the Senator from Kansas a little bit, I guess, because it was this Senator who, last year, made the motion to delay withholding for 6 months so the banks could work it out. I now believe that they have used that time going to be extended even more? I might point out that the Treasury Department today issued this statement and said they are flexible on that. Mr. President, I do not quarrel with those opposed to it.
March 22, 1983

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 3585

Would we even consider the revenue loss there? Of course we should, if we are going to be totally honest and fair and complete about what we are talking about in raising revenue.

I point out that what is being done does cost Treasury money. The 90,000 employees IRS has on the payroll, paid for out of Treasury funds, have work to do in connection with this particular withholding provision in the law.

There were requests for a delay in the areas I have mentioned. The Treasury Department has established the delay, but it has established it under their own regulations. They have done so because they cannot get ready before then. In order to get ready for the rest of it, affecting ordinary taxpayers what they are doing is sending out with every tax refund the Form 662-A. Again, if we were to make a 24-hour, 365-day-a-year effort, they are going to start doing in connection with withholding on interest and dividends beginning July 1, if there is no change in the law. I advised that 50 million of these forms are being tucked in with the refund checks. I am told by the Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Finance Committee, that everybody who receives a social security check on April 1 will also have one of these forms inserted into the envelope along with the check. That is another 36 million. Yes, they are busy preparing these forms in order to be able to explain the collection of the taxes withheld. That costs money. There is no budget waiver on those. They have been busy preparing this brochure I have here. It is on a pretty good grade of paper. They probably cost about 6 or 7 cents apiece. The questions and answers in this Treasury Department brochure deal with withholding on interest and dividends. I will read only the question and the answer. The question: "Why couldn't the Government simply strengthen the information reporting system in order to accomplish the withholding?" The answer: "Much nonreporting is due to inadvertence, forgetfulness and failure to keep records. Any attempt to reach this unreported income through information reporting and audit procedures would require millions of telephone calls, letters, and visits. Even the small amounts of tax, which inevitably would have been regarded as "harassment" of taxpayers." Treasury Department March 2 press release described the area in which they are going to wait for January 1, and they are going to send out these forms to the rest of the taxpayers and start collecting on July 1.

I think that is the answer as to why we are getting the letters we are receiving from constituents complaining. They see through the IRS method of collection of additional taxes. People feel it is harassment. People feel it is unnecessary. People feel it is just some more redtape. People feel it is just another step by the IRS, and they do not really believe that the cost of doing it really nets out much revenue gain.

I agree. I think in the revenue estimate by Treasury the revenue gain is overstated. But I use their figures in stating my case. Those figures are $1.1 billion.

My motion is for a budget waiver on the amendment and hopefully it will be a favorable vote so we can get on to the real issue of voting on the amendment itself, pass it hopefully, and then get on with the rest of the amendments to the social security bill and final passage.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I will not take very long because I agree it is time for this issue to come to a head. But before we vote, I wish to make an effort to establish an historical perspective on where we are now, and how we got here.

I can recall more than a year ago, a year and a half ago, I had the opportunity to meet with President Reagan and my colleague and cohort on the other side of the Capitol, the minority leader, Congressman Michel, and a few others. When we were talking about social security at that time it was about minimum benefits. That encounter was one of what has now grown to be a list of several cases in which I was required, according to the dictates of my conscience, to tell the President that I did not think he should do what he had proposed to do in respect to social security and minimum benefits because, as I pointed out then, I thought and I think now that social security is such a political explosive, and such a devastatingly important issue that unless we can drain some of the heat and energy out of that issue, Congress will be immobilized and find it impossible, or virtually so, to do the necessary reform to the system as a whole.

At that time I felt that there was the imminent danger that social security would become the No. 1 political football of this century. Perhaps it should. I do not know many issues that affect as many people as social security does. Many people are dependent and have no other means to a livelihood and subsistence except for social security. It is a devastatingly important issue. I thought last year and I think now, Mr. President, that on occasion the political system of the United States recognizes in its own unique and perhaps peculiar way that some issues are so important that they must not be politicized, that we simply have to rise above the usual and necessary partisan political conflict and address the issue at hand on a bipartisan basis. It is not often that we act in such a manner, but when we do, I think they are the best moments of our political system.

It was in the wake of my conversation with the President and his advisers and in the wake of subsequent developments that the President sought the establishment of a bipartisan commission to consider this question. It was an attempt to depoliticize it, an attempt to form a commission modeled after the Water Quality Commission which was chaired by then G. Nelson Rockefeller, that commission produced a series of recommendations which in late 1981 acted into law and were the result of a bipartisan effort that was widely celebrated and cheered.

The President proposed that he would appoint part of the Social Security Commission, that the Speaker of the House of Representatives would appoint part and I would appoint part. Indeed this was done in collaboration with my friend and colleague, the minority leader of the Senate, and the Speaker invited the minority leader of the House Representatives to participate. So the Social Security Commission on Social Security was constituted, the latest embodiment of an effort to rise above partisan political advantage to address an issue of burning, compelling importance.

And how well I recall reports of that Commission's deliberations on how pessimistic the Members were that any agreement could be reached and how their hopes were buoyed up and then dashed on the rocks of disappointment. But finally, Mr. President, the Social Security Commission produced its report and recommended fundamental and important and vital changes in the social security system on a bipartisan basis, and those recommendations were reported to the House of Representatives and to the Senate.

I recall at that time, Mr. President, that many politically seasoned observers remarked at that time, "Well, this is a good recommendation but it will never hold together, the package will fly apart because bipartisanship will once again emerge and destroy the best efforts of this Commission." But those remarks proved to be false, Mr.
President; indeed, the package was enacted by the House of Representatives without amendment, and that is a tribute to the ability of Republicans and Democrats in the House of Representatives to rise above partisan political advantage and to address a basic need of the Nation.

So now the bill reaches the Senate, and now the change rests with us. Are those who predicted that the package will fly apart because of partisan consideration or personal political advantage correct? Or is the Senate going to continue the tradition that was begun by the President, extended by the Speaker of the House of Representatives and by the bipartisan Commission on Social Security, and confirmed by the House of Representatives and laid before the Senate for the final challenge? Are we going to fail? The effort on the part of the Senate to realize this most important fundamental political issue? That is precisely what we are confronted with at this moment.

The perspective I would propose to suggest to the Senate is this: Against that background, let me suggest that the motion to waive the provisions of the Budget Act made by the distinguished Senator from Montana in layman's terms is the following: Senator MELCHER is saying in so many words, "I ask the permission of the Senate to add an extraneous measure to this bill, this social security package, which was not recommended by the Commission, which makes a fundamental change and probably will blow this package apart. And that I recognize that it is not in order because the Budget Act prohibits it unless the Senate will grant its consent."

That is the perspective. Will the Senate grant its consent for an amendment to be offered to this package that the House of Representatives would not accept, that the Commission did not accept, and which will threaten and endanger the fundamental aspects of a bipartisan effort to cure important defects in the Social Security System?

That is what we are being asked to do, to give consent of the Senate to do what the House of Representatives declined to do, what the Commission declined to do, and what the country does not want done.

Mr. President, I am not here to argue the merits of withholding of interest and dividends. Nor do I think the legislation has to be done in this way.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, "Does the motion to waive the provisions of the Budget Act made by the distinguished Senator from Wyoming (Mr. SIMPSON) necessary."

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from California (Mr. CRANSTON) and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES) are necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, "Should the Senate consider a motion to waive the provisions of the Budget Act?"

Mr. MELCHER. I thank the Senator for doing that. I merely want to emphasize to the Senate that a great number of the amendments that have been accepted, already accepted, do have a budget impact, and points of order were not lodged because it was agreed by the Senate to vote on the issue itself, the issue contained in the amendment.

The same point of order or the same requirement, the same procedure of insisting on a motion for a budget waiver on a particular amendment was not made. And in this case, I just emphasize that we are voting on is the issue itself. A vote against the budget waiver was a vote against the amendment to delay starting up the withholding of taxes on savings and dividends until January 1.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to table the motion to waive the provisions of the Budget Act.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that table on the motion.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. DOMENICI. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. Does this amendment violate section 311 of the Budget Act?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It does.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I raise the point of order against the amendment under section 311 of the Budget Act.

Mr. MELCHER addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. MELCHER. Mr. President, I wish to debate the point of order.

Mr. MELCHER. The point of order is not debatable except at the sufferance of the Chair.

Mr. DOMENICI. Has the Chair ruled on the point of order?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has not ruled. The Senator may be heard.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. MELCHER. I thank the Chair. The vote which just occurred, while a procedural vote, is, nevertheless, a vote on the substantive issue. As such, it was a denial on the procedural vote of getting to the final vote on the amendment. The motion for the budget waiver was made by me and was not made with full knowledge that a point of order would be raised on the amendment as conflicting with or violating the Budget Act, and I did not receive the waiver. Those waivers are generally granted by unanimous consent and indeed, sometimes not even unanimous consent is asked for a budget waiver. A vote is just taken on the amendment and the amendment is voted up or down. That is the will of the Senate as a result and the budget waiver requirement is ignored.

There are perhaps six—am I advised several—probably six amendments already accepted to this bill that impact the budget and would be subject to a point of order, requiring a waiver of the budget rules.

The usual procedure of the Senate is to vote on the issue and as far as I am concerned, that has already occurred prevents a vote on the issue, making the vote on a procedural motion which is ordinarily granted without debate and sometimes, as we find even with this bill before us now, a waiver from the budget is not even asked for. Amendments have been accepted and are part of the bill now.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair very much for recognizing me. I wish to inform my colleagues in the Senate that I have no intention whatsoever, and I doubt whether anybody else would have any intention, of further taking up the time of the Senate by, for instance, appealing the ruling of the Chair, which the Chair is about to make. I do so with the firm belief that, having taken a vote, procedural or otherwise, unless it is on the merits of the amendment itself, there is no need to prolong the debate. The vote has been cast. The decision has been made, and the Senate will work its will as it should.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the point of order is well taken. The amendment falls.

The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, first, I wish to thank the Senator from Montana. I indicated for the Record earlier that the Senator from Montana has been conducting debate on this issue—

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, may we have quiet here? I would like to hear what the Senator has to say and I think others may, too.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas wishes to note for the Record that I complimented the Senator from Montana privately. I also wish to do so publicly because he has carried on this debate in a very high-level manner. I am willing now to move very quickly to finish the social security package. I think we can do that. I would appreci-
"(c) the recommended level of Federal revenues required under section 310(a)(4) of such Act for such fiscal year, any amounts attributable to budget authority for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for such fiscal year or any amounts attributable to revenues for any such Trust Fund or specified outlays for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 1310b, and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year.

(3) Any concurrent resolution on the budget received under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1988, or any amendment thereto or any conference report shall not contain any specifications or directions described in the second sentence of section 310(a) of such Act which relate to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, or revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(a), 3101(a), and 3111(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 for such fiscal year.

(4) The budget outlays of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending after September 30, 1988, shall be exempt from any general limitation imposed by statute on budget outlays of the United States, including any limitation on net lending.

(d)(1) For the fiscal year beginning on October 1, 1988, and the succeeding fiscal year, the President, in accordance with the second sentence of section 1104(c) of title 31, United States Code, establish a separate functional category for revenues from payroll taxes and estimated payments for outlays for the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund and a separate category for revenues for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401(b), 3101(b), and 3111(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

(2) The term ‘budget authority’ has the same meaning as in section 3103 of such Act.

(c) The budget outlays of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund for the fiscal year ending after September 30, 1988, shall be exempt from any general limitation imposed by statute on budget outlays of the United States, including any limitation on net lending.

I wish to be very clear about this, Mr. President: the amendment I am offering would remove social security OASI and DI from the budget reconciliation process.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, first, I want to make clear to my colleagues that this amendment would remove the operations of the OASI and DI trust funds from the President's budget, from the concurrent resolution on the budget reconciliation process, effective with fiscal year 1989. In that respect, it tracks the House amendment that is in the House bill, H.R. 1900. Some have suggested that we should separate OASI and DI from the unified budget but keep it in the reconciliation process. Leaving OASI and DI in the reconciliation process might remove it from the budget on paper but it would leave social security in the budget process in fact. Legislative changes as part of the budget reconciliation process is, in my opinion, very unsatisfactory regardless of which piece of paper you use to account for its operations. With social security subject to reconciliation, it seems to me we would still be forced to debate social security changes in the context of annual to reduce budget deficits. And we would be forced to do that this year, next year, and the year after because, as we look at those horrendous budget deficits, they show no signs of disappearing on any horizon that this Senator is able to see. Furthermore and most importantly, Mr. President, I believe the greatest source of public confusion and public cynicism about social security financing comes from the fact that we have been talking about the financing problem and our tremendous budget deficits in the same breath. How is anyone out there supposed to know that we are not balancing social security on the backs of the elderly, as some say, or not raiding the trust funds to finance the defense budget as some have accused us of doing? We have all of these judgments at the same time each year as part of the budget process?

I want to be very clear about this, Mr. President: the amendment I am offering would remove social security OASI and DI from the budget reconciliation process and require Congress to address the budget and social security as separate issues.

Why do I think we ought to treat social security separately? For one thing, it used to be separate. It was only in 1968 that we combined it with the rest of the Federal budget. It has always been a very distinct kind of Federal program. That is why I think it should be separate now.

What kind of a program is it? Unlike any other kind of program, it is a social insurance program. It is not welfare, it is not even like the medicare program, where the benefits bear no relationship to the amount of contribution. This is a program that is financed by its own worker tax contribution quite apart from the income tax we use to finance most other Federal programs. It is judged over a far longer period of time than most other Federal programs in the Federal budget process. The Congress reviews fiscal policy with a 1-year, or a 3-year, or, maybe, on the rarest of occasions, a 5-year horizon. Most changes made in spending or taxes through the budget process take effect within a year or two—usually a year or less—with very little warning to those affected.

On the other hand, the social security program has a horizon that is 75 years. We cannot and we do not, in this solvency bill, cut benefits in the program quickly, because those now retired made a lifetime of payments in the expectation of receiving benefits, benefits that we do not want to change quickly, because that would force them to change their retirement plans significantly.

By the same token, those working today in expectation of receiving benefits in 20 or 30 years need adequate, fair warning to adjust their retirement plans. That is why we change the retirement age, we do it in the next century, some 30 years from now, before it becomes fully effective.

So in this social insurance program, they review this financial status with the help of actuaries not over a 3-year or a 20-year horizon but over a 75-year period.

To consider social security only in terms of its financial condition in the next year or so forces Congress to make changes on short notice to achieve immediate budget savings and destroys the notion we have tried so hard to create, that social security is a retirement program that younger workers today can count on tomorrow.

Until social security financing is separated from the annual search for some way to improve the budget figures in the budget process, and that is that the immense size of this program makes it an irresistible target for budget cuts, whether or not those cuts are needed to finance the program.

With $200 billion a year in budget deficits facing us for as far as we can see, absent a good deal of action, and social security accounting for $1 out of every $6 we expect to spend in that budget, sooner or later somebody is going to come along in the search for budget cuts and latch onto social security. Even though we do not think that is going to happen today or next year, mark my words, that is what is going to come along.

Social security is a tempting target, because, with 35 million beneficiaries and 150 million contributing workers, a very small change in the program can result in substantial revenues or substantial savings in outlays in a very short period.

I have seen on this floor some very small changes made in the last 3 days that, frankly, will result in tens of billions of dollars in difference in the next several years on what is in—on in this case, not in—the social security system. Some of my colleagues did not even know what was happening at the time, I suspect.

On the other hand, social security is out of the unified budget and the annual budget process, can we assure ourselves and the public that changes made in the program are to improve the financing of the program and to inspire confidence and that they are not there to eliminate our budget deficits.

Mr. President, some of our colleagues are concerned that social security spending will rise uncontrollably in the future, and they feel that only keeping social security in the budget will force Congress to exercise fiscal discipline in this program. In my opinion, social security is an amazingly stable program in the long run. That is contrary to the conventional wisdom, but the statistics belie the conventional wisdom. OASI outlays are expected to fluctuate, roughly, between 4 percent and 6 percent of GNP over the next 75 years; but 75 years from now, they are expected to be about where they are today—about 5 percent of the gross national product.

It seems to me that having its own dedicated payroll tax clearly identified as such on payroll stubs is the best source of fiscal discipline for this program. I cannot imagine, for the life of me, how mixing this financing with financing of every other program helps Congress control the cost of this program. It seems to me that the more we mix in, the more difficult it is to control anything. The more apparent the separate financial condition of the program is, the more exacting Congress will be in assuring that it is financed adequately.

If you look back at the last 2 years, 1981 and 1982, I think you will agree with my case. In 1981 and 1982, the Budget Committee came along and said we need $40 billion or $20 billion or $10 billion to make the social security system solvent.

No, I, not only did we believe that was enough to make the system solvent—those of us who have a little knowledge of the system—but also, the American public did not believe that those changes had anything to do with social security, just were needed to make the President's budget look a little better.

If you look at the financing for the OASI program over the next 75 years, that even though the program is expected to be financed adequately as a result of the measure before us, it will present serious problems of a magnitude we cannot fully realize now to the budget process.

I have a chart behind me, Mr. President. The chart I have here has been prepared on the basis of the bill reported by the House Ways and Means Committee. Unfortunately, that bill, which is far different from the one that the House passed and sent us, included a hefty tax increase that we do not have in our bill. We chose to restrict the growth of benefits instead. Nonetheless, the chart shows us quite clearly that after the year 2010, the social security system is going to develop some very, very large surpluses, and that sometime after the year 2020, social security will start spending those surpluses as a result of experiencing a number of years of very significant annual deficits.

As I think my colleagues can see on the second chart, OASI trust fund reserves will begin to grow quite steeply starting in 1990, very steeply indeed, until about the year 2015 or 2020, when they will reach a peak of nearly $3 trillion. In 1983 dollars, not 2020 dollars, $3 trillion is a very large number.

What does that mean? What it means is that we are going to be under more temptations than Adam and Eve ever dreamed of to spend those reserves on things on which they should not be spent.

By the time we wake up to that problem, and wake up to find that we have created a whole new set of funding programs, about that time we are going to start finding out that we are running huge deficits in the social security programs as we now know we are going to do and as we have promised, and we will not have the money to pay our social security benefits that we are promising people today.

Mr. President, unless we separate social security from the budget it is absolutely inconceivable to me that we will be able to finance social security in any kind of a rational way in the long run, even though spending in this program is expected to be relatively stable in relation to the economy.

Left in the unified budget there does not seem to be something we are going to be able to do except spend social security surpluses on other programs in the surplus years and cut social security in the deficit years.

Mr. President, that clearly is bad and irresponsible budget policy, and it is irresponsible and destructive social security policy.

So I ask you, Mr. President, what assurance can we provide young workers that retirement benefits are going to be there if we know right now we are going to slash benefits beginning in the year 2010? Without some assurance, this program will be treated like the social insurance program that it is, how can we expect young workers who are paying into social security today, nearly 100 million of them, to trust that the benefits that they pay in taxes are going to be there when they retire 30 years from now?

The answer is unless we separate social security as I provided, I do not think we can. The only answer is for this Congress to take strong action to restore public confidence in the social security program before the broad-based public support for this program begins to unravel.

This bill before us, as amended by the Finance Committee, with in 1980, is a very good bill in that respect, that not everyone likes everything in it, but it does do the job that we have been saying should be done, namely, to either raise the revenues or slow the growth of benefits so there will be a social security system for young people and their children when they eventually retire.
But if we just leave it at that, if we do not take the second step, if we do not insure that the surpluses we produce from passage of this legislation will be protected we will be back here on this Senate floor—perhaps 20 years from now, if we do not look carefully to ourselves, "I thought those fellows back in 1983 solved the mess, but look at the mess we are in now."

Mr. President, we do not have to be in that kind of mess 20 or 30 years from now. Announcing our intention by this amendment today, to treat this program responsibly with an eye to the long-term commitment that underlies it, is the way to address that concern.

So I ask my colleagues to join me in assuring that social security will be treated responsibly by separating it from the unified budget and the annual budget process.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield briefly to me?

Mr. HEINZ. I am pleased to yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. STENNIS. Let me commend as well the Senator for a fine explanation here of this highly important amendment. It shows thoroughness, completeness, and represents a lot of work on his part. He has rendered a real service here in preparing and delivering that speech.

I did not get to hear the first part, but I understand this is an unconditional and complete separation from what I call the general budget and sets all of these funds for this particular purpose up in the budget of its own.

Mr. HEINZ. The Senator is correct.

Mr. STENNIS. I do not think the Senator could have chosen a more important subject with reference to the entire strategy that we have this year.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may be joined as a cosponsor, one of the sponsors of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unanimous consent is extended.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, if the Senator has completed, I wish to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. RIEGLE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my colleague from Pennsylvania, Senator H滋n, in offering this amendment which would remove social security from the unified Federal budget.

I think it is important to know that Senator Stennis served in a distinguished way on the Social Security Commission and the Social Security Commission has made this recommendation.

The amendment that he and I and the other cosponsors are offering today is an amendment that had the endorsement of the Social Security Commission, which included other distinguished Senators, including that of the Senator from Kansas, Senator DOLE, and Senator MOWRY.

I do not think the Senator could have chosen a more important subject with reference to the entire strategy that we have this year.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield briefly to me?

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from Mississippi for his very kind remarks. I am honored to have him as a Senator.

Mr. HEINZ. Not everyone can make that statement.

I thank my good friend from Mississippi.

Mr. STENNIS. Again I thank the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. HEINZ. I was here when it was separated. Very few knew when it happened.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator for a fine explanation.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, if the Senator will come to the floor, I shall yield to him.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with my colleague from Pennsylvania, Senator H滋n, in offering this amendment which would remove social security from the unified Federal budget.

I think it is important to know that Senator Stennis served in a distinguished way on the Social Security Commission and the Social Security Commission has made this recommendation.

The amendment that he and I and the other cosponsors are offering today is an amendment that had the endorsement of the Social Security Commission, which included other distinguished Senators, including that of the Senator from Kansas, Senator DOLE, and Senator MOWRY.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield briefly to me?

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator for a fine explanation.

Mr. STENNIS. Again I thank the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. STENNIS. The amendment we are offering today would first require that in fiscal year 1984 the three social security trust funds, the old age and survivors, disability, and hospital insurance trust funds, all of which are funded through separate payroll tax, be included in a separate functional category in the Federal budget. The revenue we included in this separate budget function would be the Federal supplementary medical insurance trust fund which is mostly funded from general revenues. In the fiscal year beginning 1985, the old age and survivors and disability trust funds, which are payroll financed would be removed entirely from the unified budget, while the hospital insurance and Federal supplementary medical insurance trust fund would be retained in its separate functional category.

As a member of the Budget Committee, I am particularly concerned that any changes that are made in the social security system are considered for reasons relating to social security and not become tied up in the endless debate on other Federal budgetary considerations. As recently as last year the administration proposed budget included $40 billion in unspecified cuts in social security. The cuts which were recommended at that time had the appearance of helping to reduce the Federal deficit but offered no assurance that social security benefits were not being cut beyond what was necessary to preserve the social security system by itself as a free standing entity.

One need only review the events of the last 2 years to see the justification for this statement. In May 1981, the Reagan administration unveiled a package of massive and unprecedented cuts in social security, whose magnitude went far beyond anything reasonably needed to protect the safety of the social security trust funds. The administration's proposal would have built up substantial reserves in the social security trust funds which would be applied toward helping the administration meet its other objectives in the Federal budget. That same year we saw the reconciliation bill—an attempt which is the vehicle for elimination of the minimum social security benefit and making other reductions in the program. Also, last year during consideration of the budget resolution, further attempts were made to enact unspecified cuts of $40 billion out of the social security system. These cuts would have produced budget "room" for other Federal spending categories without any assurances that social security benefits would not be cut beyond what is absolutely necessary to preserve the system's financial integrity.

So I think it is clear what ought to be done here is what the Social Security Commission named by the President has recommended, namely we separate these funds from the unified budget, and that we handle them on their own basis.

We are taking the other steps to insure their integrity in terms of new outside public participants on the board and by the financial steps that we are taking to put the system on a sound financial footing from an actuarial point of view. The particular recommendation of the Commission we are now considering is fully in keeping with that set of moves, and I think the best and surest way for us to eliminate the temptation to go in, and, as the Senator from Pennsylvania says, try to latch on to those social security reserves in future years as those reserves build up. What we are doing here is to take and move those reserves in a category where we cannot get at them in the budgetary framework and where the financial integrity of social security and the revenue-benefit relationships will be maintained solely in the manner that it is now right and protected in that fashion.

Mr. President, in addition to concerns what social security should not be part of the political forces which are part of the budget process, we must remove the temptation to use social security trust funds to disguise the extent of the deficit in the rest of the budget. Fluctuations in trust fund balances are cushioned by trust fund reserves, but as long as social security revenues are below expenditures, the trust funds appear to pay benefits out of reserves and thereby paying benefits out of the annual deficit or surplus, which provides misleading information of the actual budget deficit.

Over the past few years, social security reserves have been used to pay the federal deficit and thereby paying benefits out of the reserves in the trust funds. This made it appear that the Federal Government had to borrow less to meet the budget deficit. As long as social security revenues were met by using surpluses in the social security trust funds to disguise the annual deficit, the budget would be in a much better position to protect this money. For this reason, I believe the Congress should have the knowledge that the social security trust funds are going to be treated in their entirety. As I say, and I do not think it can be overemphasized, the trust funds must be kept in reserve for the rest of the year, and only refer to their written statement: "trust" implies a special fiduciary arrangement, and by separating this out in this fashion we will be in a much better position to protect this money, to see the integrity of the system exists over a longer period of time and, I think, restore the confidence of the American people.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I do not want to take a lot of time but I understand the distinguished Senator from Florida desires to speak on this subject and he will be here shortly. I will take a few minutes though.

I would like to remind the Senate that the bipartisan panel on social security reform was established to provide the Congress with a set of recommendations to close the funding gap in social security. The Social Security Reform Commission was not established to review Federal budgetary practices. There was such a panel about 15 years ago, the President's Budget Concept Commission, and that Commission recommended that a budget council be established to provide the Congress with a set of recommendations to close the funding gap in social security. The Social Security Reform Commission was not established to review Federal budgetary practices. There was such a panel about 15 years ago, the President's Budget Concept Commission, and that Commission reviewed the accounting principles and made a number of recommendations to improve the social security arrangements in this country. The President's Budget Concept Commission recommended that a budget council be established to provide the Congress with a set of recommendations to close the funding gap in social security. The Social Security Reform Commission was not established to review Federal budgetary practices.

Finally, a commission might include representatives of the groups affected by the change. What would the largest group of retirees, the American Association of Retired Persons say? Again we do not have to speculate. We need only refer to their written statement: "From the perspective of good budgeting practices, the proponents of the proposal that represent about one-quarter of all Federal spending are inadvisable... It is comprehensiveness, and integrity of the unified budget."

I ask unanimous consent that letter be made a part of the Record also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 2.)

Mr. DOMENICI. Dr. Rivlin states at one point in her letter: "From the perspective of good budgeting practices, the proponents of the proposal that represent about one-quarter of all Federal spending are inadvisable... It is comprehensiveness, and integrity of the unified budget."

I ask unanimous consent that letter be made a part of the Record also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 3.)

Mr. DOMENICI. I do not mean at all to denigrate the action of the Social Security Reform Commission on the budget issue. But this Commission, not even a Federal budgetary organization, did not recommend Social Security be removed from the "unified budget." We do not spend every dollar that is in that trust fund every year. It is accounted for. If you Another argument sometimes made for removing social security from the budget is that public understanding of the budget and social security would improve. This is simply not the case. It would, instead, make it appear that Congress wants to avoid the realities from the American people. The media and the public would justify accusations of Congress of sweeping its problems under the rug.

There exists a great misperception that removing social security from the budget would somehow help resolve the financial problems of the system. Let me lay that myth to rest. Removing social security from the budget does not contribute $1 to social security solvency.

In fact, it may increase the future financial problems of the system by making it more difficult to arrange temporary or permanent infusions of general revenues. This may be a particular problem for Medicare, given its bleak financial future.

I want to commend my colleague from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the Committee on Aging from Pennsylvania, for alerting us about the problems of dealing with the large surpluses expected to build up in the retirement trust funds in the years beyond 1989. It is critical to allow those reserves to accumulate so that we have funds to pay for all benefits when the baby boom generation retires.

We must not be tempted to use those reserves to pay for deficits in defense or welfare or any other Government programs. We must, instead, ensure that the reserves are not used to cover the massive deficits we face in the Medicare program. We must also ensure that these future surpluses do not tempt future Congresses to increase social security benefits for short-term political gains.

There are a number of issues problems, and I am sure my colleague from Pennsylvania will help us find a way to insure that the large reserves do not lead us into temptation.

Mr. President, I recognize that the effort to remove social security from the budget is intended only to help the social security program. Unfortunately, the arguments in favor of removing it are weak.

Social security programs, like all other programs, must be reviewed constantly to assure that they are fulfilling the basic objectives of providing a timely and adequate income for our Nation’s retirees, survivors, and disabled. Removing social security from the budget process would only make such review more difficult.

EXHIBIT 2

Hon. PETE V. DOMENICI, Chairman, Committee on the Budget, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

In response to your request for my comments on the advisability of removing the Social Security accounts from the budget. From the perspective of the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, we would be more than willing to remove accounts that represent about one-quarter of all federal spending is certainly inadvisable. In 1968, when Social Security and other trust funds were combined in the unified federal budget on the basis of recommendations by the President's Commission on Budget Concepts, the principal reasons were the need to make it clear that measure of budgetary balance to ensure sound fiscal practice. Those needs are no less urgent today.

The situation Social Security would confuse public understanding of the government's fiscal impact. The unified budget is constructed to show clearly the flow of cash going into and out of the government. Decisions made on spending programs on or tax revenue can be easily translated into increases or decreases in the deficit and in the government's need for or surplus. The bottom-line data will be needed no matter how Social Security is posted on the books. Current budgetary practice highlights the need for the government's in a straightforward and clear manner. By contrast, removing Social Security outlays and receipts from the budget will be confusing.

To arrive at the current term's budget deficit or surplus. To some extent, this conclusion already exists because of current off-budget entities, but putting one-quarter of federal activity in the latter category would worsen the public's appreciation. Discussions of the "size of the federal sector" would be similarly confused, since many are familiar with the fact that the federal government's contribution to the gross national product (GNP) and seven of those percentage points would disappear with removal of Social Security.

The absence would be as inclusive of federal activities as possible. In order for the Congress to make informed decisions on how to allocate public monies, it is essential that the basic document underlying those decisions include all federal programs, so that comparisons can be made and tradeoffs can be explicit. This argues for a comprehensive budget, indeed one that would incorporate currently off-budget items and a more satisfactory treatment of federal credit and tax expenditures, not one that excludes a major portion of federal activity.

Social Security is, of course, different from most other programs. Because it is the heart of the social insurance system and because it embodies a long-term contract between the people and the government, Social Security should not be treated as an annual disregard for its long-term spending option. But inclusion in the unified budget in no way commotes such a disposition. In the long-term, more, the Congress to ask the right question: How much can the nation's economy afford for social insurance given competing claims on the economy and given the willingness of taxpayers to pay? Making Social Security a separate entity would unnecessarily narrow this question into "How high a level of benefits can payroll taxes support?"—a question that ignores competing claims, alternative tax sources, and the burden of other taxes.

Exclusion of Social Security from the budget would establish a bad precedent. Within recent months, I have read proposals to remove from the budget a number of accounts based on many of the same arguments now advanced for removing Social Security. For example, some have advocated off-budget treatment, on the principle that their revenues, like Social Security's, are dedicated, all federal retirement programs (because for one thing they should not be an item political football), and national defense (because it is too important to be hostage to cyclical problems). Social Security's removal might lend support to such proposals. In the end, we could have a proliferation of federal sub-budgets, completely eroding the usefulness of the budget as an economic and allocative instrument. More importantly, trust funds projects to be in substantial surplus over the next five years, and these surplus accounts are removed from the budget, the budget that remains will be larger deficits.

The courageous and hard-fought compromise on Social Security involves real changes in the Social Security system and, more important, confidence in the system's future. It would be unfortunate if the measure to remove Social Security from the unified budget undermined confidence in the promises.

As the Congress struggles with serious problems in both the social insurance programs and in the overall budget, it is critical that it maintain a clear sense of the use, value, and integrity of the unified budget be maintained.

Sincerely,

Alice M. Rivlin,
National Commission on Social Security Reform, Chairman.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This is in response to the request from the members of the Commission on Social Security Reform. The National Commission on Social Security Reform was established to solve the social security problem, not substantially alter the federal budget process.

We are sympathetic to the desires of the members of the Commission to ensure that social security is not used to improve or to mask the overall budget picture. There is a simple and honest way to do this. Social security should be displayed within the present unified federal budget, in a separate budget function, apart from other income security programs. This would clarify the trust fund nature of the program while retaining its impact within the federal budget. We would be willing to work for such a change in catar- ification if the Commission believes it would increase public understanding of the relationship between social security and the rest of the budget.

We commend the members of the Commission for the hard work and bipartisan spirit that have brought this difficult task. We believe that a viable and responsible plan for Social Security will depend on a comprehensive economic strategy. We agree that the Social Security system faces very serious and unsolved problems, and that the efforts of the Commission are aimed at the strongest possible terms, that you not be stamped into supporting any legislation that would remove social security from the unified budget. Such a move would suit the stage for precipitous and drastic short-term benefit cuts or large increases in payroll taxes.

The social security system faces very serious short and long-term financial problems which must be addressed and soon. The removal of the Social Security programs from the unified budget and the absence of public understanding of the consequences available for dealing with those problems. Given the magnitude of the payroll tax increase legislated in 1971 and the adverse economic impacts which were later legislated payroll tax increases would have in the short term, this option is bad public policy and within current parameters.

Short-term reductions in benefits for persons who are already on the rolls (i.e., reductions in cost-of-living adjustments or reductions in underlying benefits) for persons who are about to come on the rolls (i.e., new beneficiaries) are equally bad and unacceptable. Such reductions would amount to a further violation of the promise people after the game is over and would certains drive up the incidence of poverty among the elderly very substantially.

By leaving social security's programs where they are—within the unified budget—a far greater number of options are available to provide the system with whatever may be needed to maintain the system's contingency reserve funds at levels sufficient to assure the payment of benefits at levels represented on a budget.

We know that some have argued that social security should be removed from the unified budget as a means of insulating the system from benefit cuts. The problem with this reasoning, however, is that the system does face serious financial problems. (It is not unreasonable to conclude that social security will need, as the Senate Budget Committee indicated in its Resolution, some $40 billion over the next three years to assure the system's continued ability to pay benefits on time.) We are sure that those who espouse this particular line of reasoning and who are opposed to short-term benefit cuts would not opt for billions more in payroll taxes. But with the system outside the unified budget, there are no other options (other than an annual appropriation subsidy—something unlikely to happen). It would be illogical and inconsistent to argue that the social security system should be removed from the unified budget to prevent reductions in benefits but be included in the budget in terms of billions of payroll tax revenue (i.e., general revenue).

Others, who support removal of the social security programs from the unified budget, argue that the debate over social security has become much too politicized and that removal of the programs from the budget will facilitate the development of a bipartisan solution. Unfortunately, the historical fact is that social security cannot be immunized from the political aspects of the legislative process: no matter where the social security system is located for 11—the legislative process no matter where the debate takes place; and that the system's serious financial problems will need, as the Senate Budget Committee indicated in its Resolution, some $40 billion over the next three years to assure the system's continued ability to pay benefits on time.

The Associations are clearly on record as supporting an automatic infusion of non-payroll tax revenue into the programs, if financial and accounting purposes. Social security programs are located for 11—the legislative process no matter where the debate takes place; and that the system's serious financial problems will need, as the Senate Budget Committee indicated in its Resolution, some $40 billion over the next three years to assure the system's continued ability to pay benefits on time.

Mr. HEINZ. Will the Senator yield? Mr. DOMENICI. For a question?

Mr. HEINZ. Yes, for a question.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I would like to ask for the floor at this point for four minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield the floor?

Mr. DOMENICI. I have the floor and the Senator from Pennsylvania wanted to ask me a question and I yield for that purpose.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator from New Mexico for yielding.

Mr. President, I wanted to know if he could clarify a point that he made in his presentation. The point that he made that I refer to is that he says that we will be taking social security and budget. Does the Senator suggest that the receipts and the expenditures of this trust fund will be in some way hidden the way off-budget programs are hidden? Is that what the Senator is suggesting?

Mr. DOMENICI. Well, I did not use the word "hidden." Some off-budget items might be hidden to some people: some of the loan programs of our country that are not on budget, people might perceive that they are hidden. But if you want to dig them up, you can dig them up, so there is no conspiracy to hide them. That really was not my point.

My point was that social security is such an important part of Government, and if you have a budget that is supposed to reveal facts about Government, the percent of taxes versus GNP and all of those relationships, then you really have a very good picture of what is going on. You would have to pull social security back on for purposes of observation at least—so why go through that kind of an episode?

Mr. HEINZ. Will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. DOMENICI. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. HEINZ. Prior to the consolidation of the trust funds in the administrative budget, there was a solution to this problem which the budget in 1968 and in previous years had. Is the Senator suggesting that, prior to 1968, when the budget was displayed, that it was not possible to get a clear idea of the overall macroeconomic impact on the budget? Is that what the Senator is saying?

Mr. DOMENICI. Well, I say to the Senator, as I indicated in my opening remarks, the blue ribbon Commission on Social Security, as I view it, was that the social security system should be removed from the unified budget. I think it is inevitable that they operated in the timeframe the Senator is asking about. They concluded that we had too many budgets and, therefore, social security and all other operations should be on one budget.

My own experience tells me that, but that is the only answer I have to the Senator's question. A commission 15 years ago thought that it should be on a budget.

Mr. HEINZ. If the Senator will yield further: Is he aware that prior to fiscal 1969, the problem of identifying the overall effect of Federal financial receipts, expenditures, and other operations was solved by publishing a consolidated summary of the administrative budget and trust fund budget?

I have here, page 41 of a document entitled, "The Budget of the United States Government for Fiscal Year 1968." I ask unanimous consent that page 41, which sets forth the way in which this was achieved, and, as I envisage, might be achieved in the future, be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I would further repeat my question to my good friend from New Mexico, whether or not he would agree that the consolidated summary that appears there would, in fact, quite fairly represent the combined fiscal operations of the Federal Government.

Mr. DOMENICI. I can look at this sheet of paper that he is talking about, the budget of the U.S. Government for 1968, and it looks like it does what it is supposed to do.

But I am reminded that this Commission reviewing budget concepts completed their work in October of 1967. It was ratified in 1969. This material is from 1968. It was not something that would, quite fairly represent what It ought to do.

Mr. HEINZ. Yes; the Senator is correct. That represented the way we budgeted prior to the implementation on the National Commission on Budget Concepts.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would only read the bold black print, from the report of the President’s Commission on Budget Concepts, The Commission’s major recommendations during this timeframe to which the Senator alludes as being an adequate way to show the budget states in part:

The Commission’s most important recommendation is that a unified summary budget statement be used to replace the present three or more competing concepts that are both confusing to the public and Congress and deficient in certain essential characteristics.

So rather than go back to 1968 and in 2 minutes look at this, I would conclude that the Commission’s major recommendation found great fault with this as a part of our budgeting practice.

Mr. HEINZ. I thank the Senator for yielding and for answering those questions. I appreciate them very much.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania. I yield the floor.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate very long now. I am very much interested in the practical side of the point involved here, Mr. President, because I was here and have a distinct recollection of what happened here when the budget was all merged or put together.

This is beyond my special work and I do not have any special knowledge of the subject.

I remember we were working with the Appropriations Committee and the Armed Services Committee somewhere in there, and all of a sudden a big question came up about the merging of the budget. I do not think anyone knew at the time, or many of us did not know at the time, just what had happened. It was in dispute. But at the same time—and I have forgotten what the amount was—a very small black budget showed up. I think less than $1 billion—and I am sure it was—and that was the last black budget we had, by the way. It was part of the workings to change the arrangement of the budget.

I think there would have been a big upheaval about it then, but people were not conscious about the security, the carelessness, and so forth of the budget money, and how much it meant to them.

Things rocked along and no one objected to having a balanced budget. Things rocked along in that way. Speaking for myself, it was not common sense as I saw it to be putting all those great volumes of money into the regular live, regular budget when the due date for it was way down the line.

I am glad to see this brought up and straightened out. I am not critical at all of the Senator from New Mexico. He spoke of the high regard as well as appreciation that I have for the work he does. But one of the big things that will come out of this bill, if we are able to pass a bill, will be a correction of this situation. When it has $2 trillion or $3 trillion in it, somebody else will have to do the same job of making corrections, changes, and everything else. I do not believe our successors will let that much money lie around and be untouched.

Anyway, as part of being a sound plan, sitting in its own bottom, with the people knowing where their money is, what is happening to it, with none of it being paid out except under the regular social security law, so far as those things are concerned, and they are the ones I have dealt with, they will be a lot better off in their own mind and, actually, they will be better off, too, in the way it will come out. I hope we can pass this. I believe it is just essential as a step in reform at this time.

I yield the floor, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I am opposed to this amendment that would take the social security and disability program out of the unified budget.

I always said, and will continue to say, that we should not cut social security benefits to make up for deficits in the rest of the budget. That is the stated intent of the amendment, and I agree with the goal. However, I do not think this amendment is necessary to achieve that goal, and I think it would have two serious side effects. First, it would destroy our ability to make national fiscal policy. Second, it could lead to greater Presidential power over Federal spending levels. I want to say that.

Our primary concern with social security is to keep the trust fund sound, so that full benefit payments can be assured. But that does not mean that on a month-by-month or a year-by-year basis, the trust funds take in as much as they pay out. During periods of strong economic growth, when most people are employed and paying taxes, the trust funds run a surplus and build up revenues. During recessions, fewer people are paying taxes, and more people take early retirement, so that the system draws down revenues. This is fine for balancing the trust fund, because it should even out over time.

However, when we consider fiscal policy, I am concerned with the total impact of the Federal deficit on inflation and on the credit markets. For those purposes, what counts is the total amount of cash the Government puts out in spending, compared to how much it takes back in taxes. If spending exceeds taxes, then fiscal policy is stimulative, whether that spending comes from general revenues or from trust funds. If taxes exceed spending, then fiscal policy is restrictive. Inflationary pressures are restrained, but so are growth for economic growth and employment.

Now I am not saying that fiscal policy concerns should dictate social security benefits. Certainly they should not. I am saying that we have to know what fiscal policy is. We need some mechanism to add up all spending and all taxes and see how they compare. If we did not call it the unified budget, then we would have to call something else.

The proposed amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania says: Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget under this title shall not include in the provisions for the appropriate level of total new budget authority and total outlays required, the estimates of total new budget authority and total outlays for each major functional category or for the recommended levels of Federal revenues required under this section, any amounts attributable to budget authority for fiscal year old age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund. That says to me when we are considering fiscal policy, "Stick your head in the sand." You cannot find out. You cannot total up how much you have spent.

I guess we will have to walk around the back door. I guess we will have to pass slips of paper in code because we cannot have a total unified budget.

How in the world are we going to ever be able to say that we know something about fiscal policy?

We go back to these arguments about 1967 and 1968. Who in this Congress was concerned about total fiscal policy at that time on anything more than maybe a 1-year basis? We did not look at the numbers in 1967. We did not look at 3-year numbers; we did not know or talk much about stimulative policy; we did not talk about macroeconomics. We also were building in the mechanisms for these tremendous deficits that we have been running ever since 1967.

We have been trying to unwind that. One of the ways of unwinding it is to at least provide ourselves with all the information we need to have to make rational decisions which we have to make to determine whether we have a stimulative policy or whether we have a restrictive policy.

My goodness, to say that we are going to have all this money as a surplus in social security, and that it is going to tempt us, I can say to my distinguished friend from Michigan, that this is a beautiful argument, but the argument, prior to the time we had these new figures, was just the other way. The argument was that we needed to take it off budget because if we do not take it off budget we were going to find people trying to cut social security to balance the budget.

Now we are reversing, and now we are saying: "My gosh, we do not want to put it on budget because we will be tempted to spend all this extra money." I wonder how many of our really believe there will be all of these surpluses in social security between now and the year 2010. I wish I did.

I wish I believed that we were not going to have to revisit social security again as we have already revisited it since 1978. I am afraid we might well have to, because some things can change.

We know that when we are really talking about what we are seeking here, we are seeking to make ourselves face up to the need for responsible fiscal policy. And remember this: the House has taken medicare off budget and left medicaid on. How in the world are we going to be able to relate policy changes and differences in what we are doing with that kind of situation? That is the temptation. If we are going to take old age and survivors insurance off, why not medicare? Medicare—the fastest-growing program we have in the Federal budget today, the next crisis that is waiting to blow up on us—are we now going to take medicare off budget?

It certainly can be tempting. We can make the same kind of arguments as to why we should take social security off. We do not want to see people affecting medicare policy and the health of old people just because it might be affecting the budget. Certainly, it does. Certainly, we need to know what that effect is.

Are we going to say on medicare we cannot use those totals anywhere, as the Senator from Pennsylvania has said here: "you cannot include that in the budget."

My goodness, Mr. President, I hope that the Senate—that has tried since we have put the Budget Act into place—will be working to put things back on budget. The thrust in the Budget Committee, as my distinguished friend from Michigan knows, by many members of the Budget Committee, is to take some of the items that have managed to get themselves off budget, some of the agricultural credit programs, and say those need to come back and be on-budget, and that we need to be able to count those because that is borrowing authority.

My friend from Colorado is always talking about having items out there that are always drifting around, that are affecting policy, that are affecting what interest rates are going to be, that are affecting how much credit is out there in the market, and that are off budget. But here we are talking about reversing that. I think the Senate has been working very hard on, to put items back on budget.

We started it with the adoption of the Budget Act. We have tried to continue it, to make these items come into the budget. Now we are going to take medicare off—and I say giant—step backward, because we say social security will be off budget. We shall stick our heads in the sand. We will not allow ourselves to look at how much we are taxing, how much we are paying out, how much the Government is taking from people, to add that number with the general revenue tax and with every other tax we have to determine what is going to be the overall effect on the growth of our economy, on the amount of savings that will be available, on the amount of capital that we are trying to create with all of those items.

I think this would be a giant, giant step backward for the Senate and the Congress to take. I certainly hope it is a step that we will not take.
The proposed amendment would prohibit us from counting social security revenues and outlay in the totals and spending we put into the budget resolution. Those totals are the only place where Congress addresses fiscal policy. We have no other mechanism to add up taxes and spending and what it does to the economy. The public would not believe us if we published a deficit each year, but did not include huge portions of Federal taxes and spending. It has already become common knowledge that there is about $17 billion a year of off-budget spending that adds to the Federal deficit. All the experts that we have heard from at the Budget Committee tells us that we ought to be putting the remaining items into the unified budget, not taking more things out.

Most people are aware that social security is a trust fund, and it is the largest one. But most people are not aware how much of the Federal budget is paid on a trust fund basis. A quick look shows at least 13 separate trust funds, involving everything from Social Security to unemployment insurance; to inland waterways, and hazardous substances. Programs funded in this way cost almost $300 billion a year, or more than one-third of the budget.

In a letter to the Chairman of the Congressional Budget Office, points out in a recent letter, there have recently been proposals to put various of these trust funds off-budget. There have been other proposals to make military spending a trust fund, or put it off-budget, to keep it out of the annual political arena. Any time you talk about putting one-third or one-half of Federal spending off-budget you have destroyed our ability to make Federal fiscal policy.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Dr. Rivlin’s letter appear in the Record at this point. There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I mentioned a moment ago that putting social security off-budget could lead to greater Presidential control over spending. Let me explain that point.

Many people forget that the Budget Act was born in the impoundment crisis of the early 1970’s. It is formally titled the “ Congressional Budget and Impoundment Act of 1974.” As someone who was actively involved in the fight against impoundment, I remember the circumstances pretty well. One of President Nixon’s main arguments for impoundment authority was that only the President had the ability to judge fiscal policy. If Congress passed its various tax and spending bills separately through the course of the year. At no point did we have to add it all up, look at the bottom line, and vote on the deficit. While the Budget Act makes us go through the painful act of voting on deficits, it also lets us tell the country that we have examined all tax and spending proposals, we have examined unemployment, inflation and interest rates, and exercised our constitutional responsibilities. And we spend, not the ability to judge fiscal policy.

In the long-term, moreover, inclusion of Social Security into any comprehensive budget, indeed one that would incorporate currently off-budget items and a more satisfactory treatment of federal credit, not only excludes a major portion of Federal activity.

Social Security is, of course, different from most other programs. Because it is the heart of social insurance, and because it embodies a long-term contract between the people and the government, Social Security benefits should not be treated as a separate spending option. But inclusion in the unified budget in no way contravenes such a disposition. In the long-term, moreover, inclusion of Social Security forces the Congress to ask the right question: How much can the nation’s economy afford for social insurance given competing claims on the economic resources of taxpayers to pay? Making Social Security a separate entity would unnecessarily narrow this question into “How high a level of benefits can payroll taxes support?”—a question that ignores competing claims, alternative tax sources, and the burden of other taxes.

Exclusion of Social Security from the budget would establish a bad precedent. Within recent months, I have read proposals to remove the number of accounts based on many of the arguments now advanced for removing Social Security from the unified budget.

Exclusion of Social Security from the budget would result in lower government revenues and lower government spending. It would make it more difficult for the government to budget, balance, and vote on the deficit. While the Budget Act makes us go through the painful act of voting on deficits, it also lets us tell the country that we have examined all tax and spending proposals, we have examined unemployment, inflation and interest rates, and exercised our constitutional responsibilities. Mr. President, let me speak to the issue of Medicare. While this amendment does not put Medicare off-budget, the House version does, so it is part of the problem we open up if we adopt this amendment. While Medicare is authorized under the Social Security Act, and paid for by a special payroll tax, it is quite different from Social Security. Benefits are not linked in any way to contributions.

Any person who contributes gets full benefits, no matter how much or how little that contribution is. And those benefits are about to exceed those contributions.

The Medicare hospital trust fund is facing massive deficits in a very few short years. The system itself will be out of money sometime in 1987 unless we make some changes. Deficits in the
Mr. CHILES. If I still have the floor, I shall yield.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I beg the Chair's pardon. Will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me briefly?

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to yield.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I just want to congratulate the Senator from Florida on his statement and to associate myself with his remarks, every jot and tittle. He is 100 percent right on every count. I am quite less than a master in this area, and I am not in business, but the Senator has made a persuasive plea. My impression is that we are not facing a choice between the Supplemental Medical Insurance Program and the Medicare program, but we are facing a choice between a public and a private program for health care. I think we are faced with a choice between a publicly provided and a privately provided system. It would be a public policy but a private service. The Senator from Florida describes a system of our own; the President's description of a system that is not ours. We can take the system and the President is trying to force us to take the system he is offering, or we can choose our own.

Mr. CHILES. I thank the Senator from Florida. I introduced a bill (S. 3598) that is to take a fourth of the Federal budget and exclude it and put a curtain around it and say, do not look at that when you are making your policy, do not look at that when you are trying to determine your overall policy and considered, there is going to be enough money; just exclude that. I have not found that.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Will the Senator from Florida yield to me briefly?

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

March 22, 1983

I think we should be guided by the advice of the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Florida.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I raise the point of order against the amendment.

Mr. HEINZ. Will the Senator from New Mexico withdraw his point of order, which I shall be happy to let him make if I may speak for just a few minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. I shall be happy to do that. May I make the point of order and have the Chair yield to the Senator?

How much time does the Senator desire?

Mr. HEINZ. The Senator from Pennsylvania would like to speak for about 3 minutes. I have no intention of preventing the Senator's making his point of order, but I prefer to make my remarks before the Senator makes his point of order.

Mr. DOMENICI. That is fine. I yield the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. HEINZ addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New Mexico for his forbearance, and I shall not take a great deal of time on the part of my colleagues. I do want to set the record straight on a few things. The Senator from Colorado, who I note is also a member of the Budget Committee, is correct that this was a recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It is correct that this was a recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It is correct that this was a recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It is correct that this was a recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

In Fiscal Year 1969, the operations of these four trust funds were included in the Unified Budget. Before then, the operations were listed separately from other Government agencies, and thus they did not affect the overall balance of the Federal Budget. The inclusion of the operations of these four trust funds in the Budget has brought me to this point because of these trust funds in the Budget has been criticized by some persons because of what they believe to be the artificial effect that they may have on the balance of the Federal Budget. For example, in Fiscal Year 1969, the excess of income over outgo in the OASI Trust Funds had the effect of "balancing" the Budget recommended by President (which, otherwise, would have shown a deficit). The 1981 National Commission on Social Security recommended that the operations of these four trust funds should be removed from the Unified Budget.

If such action were taken, it is important to note that any transactions involving payments from the General Fund of the Treasury to these trust funds (such as interest on the invested assets, reimbursement for military service wages credits, or employer OASDI-HI taxes with respect to covered civilian employees or military personnel) would be shown in the Budget as outgo items.

I think we should be guided by the advice of the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HEINZ. Second, this subject was analyzed at some length by a variety of persons interested in the total borrowing demands of the Government, and I appreciate that clarification.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, would the Senator agree, however, that the Chair yield to the Senator?

Mr. HEINZ. But they may have been in the other direction, I say to my friend.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, would the Senator agree, however, that the consideration of this matter by the National Commission which met, I believe, for approximately 13 days of hearings or of meetings, that it was a relatively brief time on two occasions, perhaps totaling 30 minutes in all? It was not an extended discussion, nor were there outside witnesses heard or anything of that kind.

Mr. HEINZ. I would agree that the formal discussion was about the length the Senator said. The informal discussions were, indeed, quite hot and heavy because I had numerous discussions with the Senator from Colorado and virtually every other member of the Commission, and the Senator from Colorado, I might add.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Fair enough, and I appreciate that clarification.

Mr. HEINZ. Provided to the members of the Commission on September 8, 1982, memorandum No. 53, I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that that memorandum be included in the Record at this point.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SEPTEMBER 8, 1982.

MEMORANDUM No. 53
To: Members of the National Commission
On Social Security Reform.
From: Robert J. Myers, Director.
Subject: Inclusion of Operations of Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds in the Unified Budget.

This memorandum presents the pros and cons with regard to the removal of the operations of the Social Security and Medicare trust funds (OASI, DI, HI, and SMI) from the Unified Budget.

In Fiscal Year 1969, the operations of these four trust funds were included in the Unified Budget for the first time. Before then, the operations were listed separately from other Government agencies, and thus they did not affect the overall balance of the Federal Budget. The inclusion of the operations of these four trust funds in the Budget has brought me to this point because of these trust funds in the Budget has been criticized by some persons because of what they believe to be the artificial effect that they may have on the balance of the Federal Budget. For example, in Fiscal Year 1969, the excess of income over outgo in the OASI Trust Funds had the effect of "balancing" the Budget recommended by President (which, otherwise, would have shown a deficit). The 1981 National Commission on Social Security recommended that the operations of these four trust funds should be removed from the Unified Budget.

If such action were taken, it is important to note that any transactions involving payments from the General Fund of the Treasury to these trust funds (such as interest on the invested assets, reimbursement for military service wages credits, or employer OASDI-HI taxes with respect to covered civilian employees or military personnel) would be shown in the Budget as outgo items.

PROS WITH REGARD TO REMOVING OPERATIONS OF TRUST FUNDS FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET
(1) Benefit, coverage, and financing changes would not have an effect on the Budget. If the operation of the trust funds were outside of the Unified Budget, any changes which were recommended or enacted would be on the basis of program considerations. It could not, therefore, be argued that the underlying purpose was to balance the Budget. However, any reductions in the rate of growth of benefit outgo could not be said to "balance the Budget on the operation of Social Security." Even if the operations of the trust funds were removed from the Unified Budget, persons interested in the total borrowing demands of the Government could still make the desired analysis by adding together such operations with those of the Unified Budget. (It should be noted that, at present, certain, substantial Federal programs are "off budget").

(2) Reductions in administrative expenses for program operations would not be made solely for the effect on the Budget. Current-ly, staff reductions or limitations on personnel levels for the Social Security (and Medicare programs) can be made for budgetary purposes without regard to program requirements. This might not be the case. Several trust funds had excesses of income over outgo that could readily meet necessary administrative expenses. If the operations of the trust funds were outside of the Unified Budget, such reductions or limitations on personnel would not affect the Budget, but rather only the operations of the trust funds. In addition, the personnel expenditures of the programs should be determined so as to provide high-quality service to the claimants and beneficiaries and so as to assure efficient operations.

(3) A better picture of the effect of payments from the General Fund of the Treasury would result. If the operations of the four trust funds were removed from the Unified Budget, any payments thereto from the General Fund of the Treasury would appear as an outgo item in the Unified Budget. Under the Budget procedures, such items are of a "wash" nature and do not affect the Budget. At times, this could be very misleading; for example, under a proposal to "bolster" the General Fund by a transfer of very large sums from the General Fund, if this were done, no effect on the Unified Budget would be shown at the time.

(4) Public confidence will not be eroded by the erroneous belief held by some people that Social Security and Medicare taxes are placed in the General Fund of the Treasury and are used for other purposes (such as financing the Marshall Plan, the Korean war, the Vietnam war, or welfare payments). Such persons conclude that the trust funds are now having financial problems because the money was spent for other than program purposes.

CONS WITH REGARD TO REMOVING OPERATIONS
OF TRUST FUNDS FROM THE UNIFIED BUDGET
(1) The operation of the four trust funds is a major part of the Federal financial activities. Accordingly, the Administration and the Congress should consider these operations within the context of the entire Budget, and not when they are removed. Otherwise, economic policymaking could be confused and hindered.

(2) The operations of the trust funds are treated separately from most other policy and governmental expenditures to be operated independently. All governmental programs should be operated under the controls that are now a part of the Budget process. The operations of the four trust funds are such a significant portion of total governmental expenditures that they should not be exempt from the necessary scrutiny which all programs receive under the general budget process.

(3) Inclusion of the operation of the trust funds in the Unified Budget allows for simpler and more straightforward budget presentation. Continuing the operations of the four trust funds in the Unified Budget makes the full scope of Federal financial activities easier to comprehend, especially the proportion of the total spending allocated to each activity—e.g., national defense, health care expenditures, and income maintenance.

ROBERT J. MYERS.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, the point has been made by members of the Budget Committee that we should defer consideration of this so the Budget Committee has time to study it. Well, Mr. President, this is not the first time this recommendation has been made. Yes, it was made by the National Commission on Social Security Reform in one report of 1983, but it was also made 2 years before that by the National Commission on Social Security which reported in 1981. Frankly, I do not know that the Budget Committee has ever held a jot or tittle’s worth of hearings on this since 1981, I expect they have not.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Let us tell them to get on the ball.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, if they are on the ball, they should have been on the ball 2 years ago, not here on the floor.

Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico has been extremely courteous. I reiterate once again that we are not taking social security off budget. It is not going to be the Federal Financing Bank operating in the hands of the executive branch. We are not going to hide it. This particular canary weighs about $225 billion at the present moment.

Now, no one suggests even Caspar Weinberger can hide the defense budget, defended about the same size. He would like to, I gather. But, Mr. President, nobody’s sleight of hand is going to hide the social security program, no matter how big and heavy that hand.

I must say I would find a point made by the Senator from Florida, who I have enormous respect for, to be amusing and ironic, if it was not aimed at this amendment. His point is that the way to keep the hands of the executive branch—and we know that their fingerprints have been around from time to time—the way to keep the hands of the executive branch off of this is to keep it in the budget. I find it immensely ironic that the chairman of the Budget Committee said, when he rose to defend his opposition amendment, and I have here a letter from Dave Stockman who supports the position of the Senator from Florida and the Senator from New Mexico."

Now, the last time I looked, Dave Stockman was in the executive branch. I think he is down at the Executive Office Building. I think he works for the President. I think he has something to do with the executive branch budget process.

Mr. President, I am sure my colleagues that one of the reasons Dave Stockman may not like this amendment is that it is not going to be possible for him to, I think the Senator from Florida used the word, “revisit” the social security trust fund.

Mr. President, I hope that is absolutely right; I do not want any Director of the Office of Management and Budget to revisit social security for social security’s sake. That is the main idea behind this amendment.

I think the Senator from New Mexico, frankly, understands the problem we are dealing with here. I know that this is fundamentally a turf issue. I understand that because I am in my committee, and we in the Senate Finance Committee are as jealous of our turf as anyone. We go to considerable lengths to protect it. I do not disagree with the motivations of the Senator from New Mexico or any other members of the Budget Committee, and they are numerous, who are on the floor. They are all looking out for their turf, and I would all do the same for ours. But in looking out for the turf of one’s committee—and we all do it—I think we still have to put the interests of the country ahead of that in this sense: We have to address the issue which I made on Friday and which I made, if the Senator will remember, with the Senator from New Mexico back on July 29, 1982, on which date the Senator and I, to my mind, had a very important colloquy on the balanced budget amendment.

Mr. President, it occurs to me, as I think about how such a procedure going to work, that there are going to be some serious consequences for social security financing if the Congress does not enact special provisions for handling this program.

Some have suggested that Senate Joint Resolution 58 needs to be amended to exempt social security from the provisions of the balanced budget amendment. However, in looking over the Senator’s amendment and the projected context of the implementing legislation, I think it would be more appropriate to see resolved in later legislation is the problem of how to handle social security.

Mr. President, it occurs to me, as I think about how such a procedure going to work, that there are going to be some serious consequences for social security financing if the Congress does not enact special provisions for handling this program.

I would like to take a moment to review the difficulty I see in lumping social security with other programs in the balanced budget amendment, and the projected context of the implementing legislation. I think the place to spell these details out is in statute. Some have suggested that Senate Joint Resolution 58 needs to be amended to exempt social security from the provisions of the balanced budget amendment. The surpluses could run as high as $120 billion to $125 billion a year. It seems to me that if we have annual surpluses this large there will be enormous pressures to spend these monies in areas where no surpluses in social security. My friend from South Carolina was serving in this body in those days and he well remembers that Congress will be thinking of over $100 billion and will have, if they are not to be allowed to accumulate, trust fund reserves of more than $230 billion. If Congress could not stop the Social Security Administration from spending these funds to cover deficits, then could not be matched against outlays in the deficit years, when social security is actually using them to pay benefits. Now I would like to ask the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee, Mr. Dommenici, if he would comment on how the Congress could decide to change this around? Would the Congress have the authority to exclude these "excess receipts" from the definition of the excess surpluses, and include them in the definition in the deficit years when they are actually being spent?

Mr. Dommenici. My amendment gives the Congress the authority to decide through legislation on the definitions for terms used in the constitutional amendment. I am confident a way can be found to deal with the balanced budget amendment as described—either through defining receipts as you suggest or through some other accommodation. I am certainly prepared to take a careful look at the Senator's suggestions when we consider implementing legislation.

When the time comes to draft legislation defining these terms, we can take a closer look at how this can actually be accomplished. But I appreciate the Senator's suggestion. I don't think Congress will have to address this problem in statute. I believe, then, that most of my concerns about the problems for social security in the balanced budget amendment can be resolved at a later date through statute.

I thank my colleague from New Mexico who has been extremely responsive. With the amendments in the legislation we can be sure we can solve this problem through the proper enabling legislation.

Mr. Dommenici. Let me just add again that if you refer to the description which the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee, Mr. Dommenici, has described. With that description, I think that the constitutional amendment will have the authority to adopt accounting procedures which specify that OASDI and trust funds reserves be treated, and balanced, separately from other U.S. Government outlays and receipts?

Mr. Dommenici. I believe the Senator may be correct, although it is quite likely that there would be considerable political pressure against digging the Federal Government into that type of hole.

Mr. Heinz. I appreciate the Senator's comments. I would like to ask my colleagues to look back at the period after 1975. By that time, it is likely that substantial proportions of the accumulated trust fund reserves on hand to offset the deficits that will begin occurring as the first of the "Baby Boom" generation retires. Again, this is based on the studies that were done, and the balanced budget amendment is going to create problems for social security when it begins to experience these annual deficits. In 1982, when we look at the expenditures in 1982 dollars—in the context of a Federal budget—if it is still about 22 percent of GNP—or close to $2 trillion. In that year, OASDI will have a deficit of over $100 billion and will have, if they have not been accumulated, trust fund reserves of more than $230 billion. If Congress could not stop the Social Security Administration from spending these funds to cover deficits, then could not be matched against outlays in the deficit years, when social security is actually using them to pay benefits. In terms of accounting definitions accept the approach in social security. Whatever manner which do not permit us a strict pay-as-you-go approach in social security. No matter which assumptions, current law or proposed, one accepts. Therefore, we have to have a method of dealing with the programs which, for good reasons, are not pay-as-you-go programs. I trust that is an answer to the Senator's inquiry.

Mr. GORTON. I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I think we all remember the balanced budget amendment. The colloquy shows that the Senator from New Mexico was, indeed, sensitive to the very problem I described in these charts. The problem was, 'How could you make the balanced budget amendment operate if you had these kinds of deficits operating in the budget from the Social Security Trust Fund?'

Now, I do not wish to put words into the mouth of the Senator from New Mexico, but my reading of our colloquy is that he had some real concern about that issue back last year. And I think, Mr. President, that the real issue is how are we going to address that concern today. I do not know how we can have rational budgeting, how we can control the Federal Government in the proper way, if we insist on keeping the tremendous surpluses and deficits that will cycle through the social security program in the so-called budget deficits. That does not mean that we cannot display a consolidated budget. Indeed, we can. That is what we did in 1968, 1967, and in previous years.

Mr. President, I say to my good friend from New Mexico I have concluded my remarks. I appreciate his courtesy, and I understand he has a little message he wants to deliver to the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Pennsylvania for his participation. I think he has contributed immensely.

I have a couple of responses I should like to make, but in the interest of time, I will not do so, other than to respond to the Chair.

I hope nobody really believes this is a turf battle. Frankly, it is not. I do not see how you could have a budget resolution and a Budget Committee charged with doing what it is supposed to do and take social security and put it off on the side. If that is turf, it is in a sense different from coveting turf in a sense different from coveting it for some purpose to affect it or for any other purpose. If that is turf, it is my turf. If that is turf, it is turf of mine on the side. If that is turf, it is turf that is mine. And voting, the Senator from Illinois (Mr. BURKETT) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERRY) would vote "nay."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBAZ) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire the floor?

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

With that, I raise a point of order against the Heinz amendment on the ground that the amendment violates section 306 of the Congressional Budget Act.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I move to waive the Budget Act.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. What is the issue here or the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question before the Senate is the motion to waive the Budget Act.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to table the motion to waive the Budget Act, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second?

The yea and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the motion to waive the Budget Act. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Nevada (Mr. LAXALT) and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERRY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERRY) would vote "nay."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBAZ) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire the floor?
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to table the motion.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I raise a point of order against the House amendment on the ground that it violates section 306 of the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before the Chair rules, I recognize the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I asked for recognition at this point to inquire of the distinguished majority leader, if he will, to indicate what the plans are for the rest of the evening.

Mr. BAKER. Yes, Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for that. I think we are making good progress on this bill now, and I share with the distinguished manager of the bill on this side the hope that we can finish it yet tonight. Therefore, my first answer to the minority leader is I would expect this to be a reasonably late night because we have still got a conference, and the social security bill.

We hope we can finish social security tonight, and if we cannot we will go back on it in the morning. We are going to do the jobs bill conference yet tonight, which should not take very long, and the chances now of getting out Wednesday look slim; the chances of getting out on Thursday look good.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has raised a point of order.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask the Chair to recognize me further, and I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished majority leader that we can canvass this side of the aisle to try to get some indication of how many amendments remain and as to whether or not those who would offer such amendments would be willing to enter into a time agreement. That may not be the point of the distinguished manager to enter into any time agreement. He may feel that better progress can sometimes be made without a time agreement on amendments.

I understand Mr. LONG has two amendments, Mr. LEVIN has two amendments, Mr. LEVIN has one amendment, Mr. BOREN has one amendment, Mr. MATSUZAGA has one or two amendments, Mr. BRADLEY may or may not have an amendment, and Mr. DeCONCINI may or may not have an amendment.

Mr. RIEGLE. I have an amendment.

Mr. BYRD. And Mr. RIEGLE.

Mr. BAKER. That is very helpful. I was speaking with the distinguished manager of the bill and have something further to say about it. If we can lock in that no other amendments may be in order, it may be much easier to enter into time agreements after we have identified those amendments.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico raises the point of order—

Mr. RIEGLE. May I be heard on the point of order before the ruling is made?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I have referred to the Senator from Michigan, and I have waited for a long time. Mr. RIEGLE. I understand. I asked for a chance.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair has some rights, too.

A point of order has been raised, and it is not open to debate.

The amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania would affect the concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974. This is a matter within the jurisdiction of the Budget Committee, and since the amendment is not offered by that committee, it violates section 306 of the Budget Act, and the point of order is sustained.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Chair.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 106

(Purpose: To require separate functional categories in the budget for the Social Security Trust Funds)

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I have an amendment I send to the desk, and while we have colleagues on the floor I ask first that it be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Michigan (Mr. RIEGLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 106.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I, insert the following:

"SEparate Functional Categories in the Budget for the Social Security Trust Funds"

Code, for each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1984. The budget submitted under such section for each such fiscal year shall not classify requests for new budget authority and estimates of outlays and revenues for such Trust Funds and estimates of revenues derived under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to this paragraph.

"(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for a fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1984, shall use the categories established by the President under paragraph (1) in specifying the recommended level of budget authority and budget outlays for the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, or the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund and in specifying the recommended level of revenues derived under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. A concurrent resolution on the budget considered under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any such fiscal year shall not classify the appropriate levels of new budget authority and budget outlays for such Trust Funds and revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 under any functional category other than the categories established by the President pursuant to paragraph (1).

"(b) It shall not be in order in the Senate or the House of Representatives to consider any concurrent resolution on the budget under title III of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 for any fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1983, or any amendment thereto or any conference report thereon if such concurrent resolution, amendment, or conference report contains any provisions described in the second sentence of section 310(a) of such Act which relate to the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund, the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, or the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund or revenues from taxes imposed under sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.

"(c) The provisions of subsections (a)(2) and (b) are enacted by the Congress—

"(1) as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the House of Representatives and the Senate, respectively, and as such shall be considered as part of the rules of each House, respectively, or of that House to which they specifically apply, and such rules shall prevail over other rules only in the extent that they are inconsistent therewith; and

"(2) with full recognition of the constituencies of each House to the obligations under Sections 1401, 3101, and 3111 of such Act; and

"(d) For purposes of this section—

"(1) the term 'budget outlays' has the same meaning as in section 3(1) of the Congressional Budget and Impoundment Control Act of 1974; and

"(3) the term 'concurrent resolution on the budget' has the same meaning as in section 3(4) of such Act."

Mr. RIEGLE. Let me just say while we have a good attendance here that I think on an issue of this kind which represents a recommendation from the National Commission on Social Security, which is the proposal that Senator J., Senator J., and Senator J. put forward, and which we have just had a procedural vote upon, when that same recommendation has been adopted within the House bill, that by any reasonable measure of common sense that issue ought to be one we ought to have a chance to vote on up or down on the merits.

Now I understand the effort by the Budget Committee to prevent that happening. It is very much a turf struggle here, and I say that as a member of the Senate Finance Committee. The Budget Committee wants to retain the authority here, if it can, to keep this matter fully within the budget.

The amendment that I have just sent to the desk would be different in this respect. It would not recognize the inclusion of social security within the budget, but it would not allow the Budget Committee to include social security within the reconciliation process. That is the key issue.

I hope to bring forward whatever recommendations it wishes to make.

But in the past what has happened is that the legislative committees have been bypassed by means of the reconciliation process, and you have a situation where it is the Budget Committee serving as the master committee of all the committees of the Senate. It is not a good process, and I think now is the time to break away from it.

So my amendment differs in that respect. It will leave social security in the budget process, although I think it ought to come out. But it would say that social security, that function, would not be included within the reconciliation process. I yield.

Mr. CHILES. Well, I think if you really want to look at the next crisis that we have, it is medicare. Medicare is a little different from social security but it would also prevent any reconciliation of medicare.

Mr. RIEGLE. That is correct.

Mr. CHILES. Well, I think if you want to look at the next crisis that we have, it is medicare. Again it takes this whole body to determine that.

Here we are debating a bill in which we are talking about making the social security system sound—and that is very necessary—and we are going to, while we are doing that, tie our hands behind our back so that we will not be able to have the tools necessary to make medicare sound.

Medicare is not sound today. All of us know that. It is a crisis ready to just explode or to be discovered, concerning what the costs have been and the way the costs have accelerated and the way they continue to accelerate.

Now you are going to say by this little amendment here that the Budget Committee cannot make a recommendation to this body that we should include savings that should be done to perfect or protect medicare. It takes the body to do that, not the Budget Committee.
Maybe it is a good thing not to have that responsibility, not to have to point out what the problems are in that and to bring those problems to the Senate. But I think it would be sort of a bad day for the Senate if we started chopping away at the Budget Act, which I do not intend to. We are not going to recommend a cut in Medicare, because we all know the problem that is there in that regard. It would seem to me, if we are going to do something like this, we ought to hold hearings, we ought to determine, through the Committee on Governmental Operations, which is the committee that created the Budget Committee—and that committee is going to hold some hearings on the Budget Act now—we ought to be looking at that before we determine that we want to say that we are going to take away Medicare.

CBO says Medicare is going to be broke in 1987. Medicare costs are projected to double from $57 billion to $112 billion in the next 5 years—in 5 years those costs are going to double. What we ought to do is to say, to see if we can get a little amendment, a little nice little amendment is: "Budget Committee, don't look at that. We don't want to hear from you on that. Don't have anything to say on that. Don't recommend to the Senate that we do anything about that." Mr. RIEGLE. If the Senator would yield at that point, is that is what he says. The Budget Committee is free to make a recommendation any time it wants to on this issue. The difference is it is not in a position to mandate legislative changes.

Mr. CHILES. But I say to the Senator from Michigan, the Budget Committee does not mandate, the Senate mandates. It is only when you have a vote, a majority vote, in this Senate, that it can mandate. The Budget Committee just recommends. That is all it does. It takes a majority of the Members of this Senate to make any reconciliation.

Senator Riegle says the reconciliation Committee has the right to change social security. All the Budget Committee does is say to the Finance Committee, "Save a certain number of dollars." Again, it is up to the Finance Committee to determine where to save that money. We cannot tell the Finance Committee whether to do it off of social security, off of Medicare, or anything else. We just project to them to save a certain number of dollars. It is still up to the Finance Committee to determine whether they are going to save it. Mr. RIEGLE. If the Senator would yield, he is certainly aware of the fact that if social security is one of the funds, if Medicare is included in there, then that becomes part of the mandate as to where the savings can come from.

Mr. CHILES. No, it is not binding.

Mr. RIEGLE. What I am suggesting is we do not turn over the process to the reconciliation process so there is not any ambiguity about it. Let us treat social security and the trust fund on their own bases. Let us keep those to the side in terms of reconciliation.

The fact of the matter is by including them, you make them targets. That is precisely what you do. And you can obscure it any way you want. If we want to look at social security or the other trust funds, it is the Budget Committee. They are going to be the target. The fact of the matter is what happens and people do not want that any more, and the Social Security Commission does not want it any more.

Mr. CHILES. The fact of the matter is I want to face it very directly. I think Medicare is going to have to be a target. I think Medicare is going to have to be looked at and examined by this Congress and by this Senate to determine what in the heck we are going to do about a program that is going to double in 5 years, a program that is going to go bust in 1987. And if you are going to say to the Budget Committee, "Get out of that act, don't have anything to do with that, don't look at that," then, my goodness, you might as well decide that the Budget Committee better not look at anything.

That is the most drastic problem that is going to face the Congress in the next year. As soon as we finish this one, we better be working on that next one. Because that is the biggest problem we have on the block and the biggest problem we have for those old people out there that are the recipients. How are we going to pay for it? How are we going to continue to try to cover it? And you are going to say, "Don't look at it in the Budget Committee." Mr. RIEGLE. If the Senator will yield, I have seen both sides. The fact of the matter is that the Budget Committee wanted to be able to keep track of this, for broad macroeconomic policy reasons and considerations, was really not the fundamental argument being advanced by the other side. The fact of the matter is that they want to look over these trust funds under the reconciliation process. It is a far more questionable, disturbing purpose, on the part of the Budget Committee in this particular instance.

This is precisely what the National Commission on Social Security recommended. That is that this issue should not be locked into the reconciliation process coming out of the Budget Committee because what happens is in order to finance other areas of the Federal Government one raid after the other, it is not a broad macroeconomic policy or the other trust fund activities, whether they be Medicare coverage or whether they be the early retirement benefit or what have you.

Systematically, time after time after time, an effort was made to reduce Social Security or the other trust fund activities, whatever they be Medicare coverage or whether they be the early retirement benefit or what have you. Mr. CHILES. The Senator hears what he wants to hear, but I must say that the Budget Committee is certainly not the Committee of primary jurisdiction, but it is the committee that looks at the fiscal condition of the Nation. It looks at the fiscal policy. If you say we will not be able to look at Medicare, an area that is going busted in 5 years, an area that is going busted under the CBO in 1987, and to say we are going to exclude that from the province of the Budget Committee, we are not going to consider that and kind of man to mandate to the Senate as to what should be done, to me you might as well do away with the Budget Committee because that is the biggest problem that we have on the block.

We are saying we are taking away from that problem, and we are doing it in a handwritten amendment with no hearings on the amendment, no consideration by the Commission on Medicare, and no consideration by anybody. We are writing that down and we are about to do that at this late date. I think it would be a tragic, tragic thing if we do.

I yield the floor.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I think now this amendment really sort of strips the debate right down to its essentials. That is that it is clear, I think, to anybody who is following the debate. The fact is that the Budget Committee does not want to be able to keep track of this, for broad macroeconomic policy reasons and considerations, was really not the fundamental argument being advanced by the other side. The fact of the matter is that they want to look over these trust funds under the reconciliation process. bottom line of reconciliation, the trust funds will be set aside from the reconciliation and treat the Federal budget as an entity without those trust funds being figured in reconciliation.

I am not surprised that the Budget Committee squawks about that. They want the power, as a matter of fact. Every other legislative committee in the Senate knows that. Everybody has jumped into the Budget Committee at one time or another on issues of this kind.

We are not equipped in the Budget Committee, in my judgment, to make the kind of substantive program decisions that, in a sense, are required when making major alterations in spending in the social security trust fund programs. To come in and, in a sense, lock in those requirements through a reconciliation process is the wrong way to proceed.

The committees of jurisdiction ought to retain that jurisdiction. I am surprised that they are not here fighting harder for it, rather than just surrendering it to one all-powerful committee which is prepared to do all the thinking for all the legislative committees around here. I do not think that has helped the Senate. I think the suggestion that has ended up getting us into trouble.

We have seen that in social security. That is why we have the recommendation before us from the President's Commission, 10 of whom were selected by the White House and 5 by the opposition party, saying that it is time to take the politics out of social security, to take it out of the reconciliation process, and restore the integrity of this money, to put it into a situation where it can be handled as wisely as it cannot become the subject of budget manipulation or any other kind of manipulation. That is the issue here. It is that simple.

People understand it. Polls have been done that show people think that social security and the trust funds ought to be taken out of the Federal budget, put on a freestanding basis, monitored more closely with outside public participants on the board, which is a recommendation which we also adopted in the package here, in order to see that this money is not taken and diverted for other purposes. That is precisely what is happening under reconciliation.

I hope that I can speed up the process by moving to table the amendment without offending the Senator from Michigan. I do not have an open mind on what the Senator from Michigan has outlined but I would prefer not to try to resolve it this evening. It is my hope that we can move quickly on this and other amendments and still finish tonight. So I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. DOLE. If, in fact, we are going to start to amend the budget process, then I would like to be a part of it. I know that the body has several concerns with the Budget Committee and with the process itself in its relation to the Senate Finance Committee. I would rather amend the budget process in a broader sense than this amendment would provide.

I certainly compliment the distinguished Senator from Michigan. I think he is, in effect, trying to protect our jurisdiction.

As he properly pointed when we wanted to address social security, we took members from the Finance Committee. That is our jurisdiction. I certainly sponsored a Commission on Medicare. I am certain it would go to the Finance Committee, if there are public members.

I hope that I can speed up the process by moving to table the amendment without offending the Senator from Michigan. I do not have an open mind on what the Senator from Michigan has outlined but I would prefer not to try to resolve it this evening. It is my hope that we can move quickly on this and other amendments and still finish tonight. So I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator is absolutely correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to lay the amendment of the Senator from Michigan on the table. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Penczy) is necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri (Mr. Eagleton) and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Sarbanes) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 68, nays 29, as follows:

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will take just a few seconds to explain the amendment. The amendment has been discussed with the staff. It simply provides, by adding language which already appears in the bill.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I thank the Chair, and I thank the Senator from New York.

Mr. President, the bill, as it comes from the Finance Committee, provides two additional dropout years when computing benefits for a worker who leaves the work force to care for very young children while at home. I offered this amendment in committee and was pleased that it was adopted. However, when the legislation was drafted following the committee markup, some of the full import of the intent was not included in the actual drafted language, and therefore this technical amendment is necessary.

As the provision now appears in the Finance Committee bill, it would be operative in only a relatively few cases. The reason is that the child care dropout years provided are applied after selecting the years to be used in computing the non-wage earner's average earnings instead of before selecting those years, as is done for the regular 5-year dropout applicable to all beneficiaries. The actuarial cost estimates assumed that it would be fully operative and this is allowed for in the funding of the bill.

This is purely a technical amendment, and unless there is further discussion, I will call for the question on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas confirms what the distinguished Senator from Colorado has just stated. We did adopt the amendment in the committee. However, it was called to our attention that we need a change in the wording of the amendment to do what the Senator from Colorado intended. That is precisely what the Senator has done.

Under the 1980 disability amendments, up to 3 child care dropout years were provided for persons applying for disability benefits who had years caring for a child under age 3. In the final bill, however, the person could have no more than 2 child care dropout years. Child care dropout years are computed after determining regular dropout years in the benefit computation.

The committee amendment contains a provision which allows up to 2 additional dropout years for persons applying for retirement, survivors or disability benefits. The same eligibility requirements as under current law in the case of young disabled workers. That is, the wage earner must have had a child under age 3 in his or her care and the wage earner would not be able to return to work by the end of that year. As under present law, if after dropping 5 years of low earnings, the wage earner also has extra years of no earnings, he or she may be able to claim 1 or 2 child care drop years.

The amendment would change the computation of child care dropout years so that those dropout years are determined before providing the regular drop years now in the law for all workers. This would insure that women—men—who stay out of the work force to care for a child actually receive some advantage over present law.

I understand from the social security actuaries that this amendment would not increase the short- or long-range cost of the proposal in the committee bill.

This is a good amendment, and I think it should be accepted.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado is quite correct in his statement.

I will take just a moment to call attention to the amendment he offered on child care years and to remind Senators that there are more than a few provisions in this legislation which liberalize the system and get rid of inequities—in this case, for working women and particularly older women as well.

This is not just an unalloyed bit of castor oil. There are many positive aspects, and one of them is precisely to be ascribed to the efforts of the Senator from Colorado, for which I express my appreciation.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I am grateful to the Senator from New York for his observation, particularly his words about my role in presenting this amendment. He is correct. There are throughout this bill a number of provisions which liberalize benefits. I thank him for his observation and for his encouragement in this amendment and the to all Senators, as it is to our constituents, because I think most of us believe that we are just beginning to see an economic recovery which will eventually bring unemployment rates down to some kind of halfway acceptable levels. But we are not going to have that recovery and if people are going to go back to work, I suggest that it does not make sense to increase payroll taxes.

I approach this from a very simple point of view, and it is that if you tax something, you are going to get less of it. The last thing we want to get less of at this critical moment in our history is jobs. We want more jobs.

In 1977, the last time we increased payroll taxes, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that the then tax increase would cost some 500,000 jobs. I do not think it is a coincidence that since that massive payroll tax increase we have seen a growth in the problem of chronic unemployment.

So the first reason I urge my colleagues to support this amendment is that it is the policy of the American people.

Second, I would suggest to you the higher payroll taxes simply are not there. Counting both the employer and employee contribution, the average working man and woman in this country pays more in payroll taxes than they do in Federal income taxes. Think of it. A tax which was originally expected and intended to be a very, very modest small tax has now grown to be larger than the basic Federal income tax for more than half the workers of this country.

One of our colleagues pointed out to me just within the last 15 minutes that when he first went to work he paid $40 the first year he worked in social security taxes, and he estimates that if he were to go back to the same job today at today's wages for that same job he would pay $2,200.

That is not a trend that is unknown to working men and women. In fact, many of them feel that this is a serious injustice, and I think they are right.

I am not bold enough tonight to suggest that we roll back the payroll tax increases of 1977, but I do suggest this is not the moment to further increase the tax as is suggested by this bill.

I wish to also point out to the Senate that higher payroll taxes are highly controversial with the people who pay them, and the tendency of raising taxes in order to finance the deficit in the social security system is precisely to feed the flame of what someone has called an intergenerational time bomb.

I do not perhaps think that is an entirely accurate characterization. It may be overemotional characterization of the concerns of younger workers have, but I do note that they are more and more reluctant to support the social security system, and if we are going to get out of the passage of this bill is a shoring up of public faith and confidence in social security and putting to ease the divisiveness that has characterized this to a large extent.

What is the Justice of it? Aside from how anyone feels about it, what is the real bottom-line justice of a payroll tax increase as compared to the benefit increases that we have seen in recent years?

Mr. President, I would suggest to you that there is no stronger reason than just fundamental justice not to increase taxes. We all know that the source of support, the principal source of support for social security is payroll taxes. Benefit payments to people under social security have risen very rapidly. As a matter of fact, during the last decade benefits for social security have risen nearly twice as rapidly as the payroll on which the tax is based; that is, the earning capacity of the workers of the country.

As a matter of fact, just to put it in an even clearer perspective, social security benefits have risen about 50 percent faster than the Consumer Price Index, while wages of working men and women have fallen behind the growth of the CPI.

So for all of these reasons and one which I wish to mention, I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The final reason to some may not be important, but for some of us it has a very great significance, and this is the question of the refundable tax credit which is built into the Finance Committee recommendation. We have had a principle of parity of treatment between employer and employee all these years back to the very beginning of social security. In the bill we violate that principle by providing a refundable tax credit for 1 year of the employer's portion of the payroll tax increase.

Now, that crosses two thresholds that I am reluctant to cross. One is the general fund financing threshold and the other is the parity between employer and employee. If we roll the suggested tax increase, we avoid the necessity for doing so.

For these reasons, Mr. President, I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MATTINGLY). The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Colorado expresses the judgment feeling that many of us have and none of us would in any way wish to do what this bill is doing with respect to payroll taxes if it were not an irony. We must raise 160-plus billion dollars in the next 8 years or our system will be defunct. If we do it we will go into a longer period of surplus which will surprise us but is there.

I fear to report that the amendment before us would cost more than $42 billion in round terms, one-quarter of the deficit that we seek, and without which we do not have a secure system, without which, Mr. President, we do not have legislation.
I would encourage all of my colleagues to join Senator Armstrong in supporting his amendment. I make one point. The President's own economic adviser, Dr. Feldstein, who took a look at these recommendations and made the point that it might cost as much as 2 million jobs in the United States to raise payroll taxes at this sensitive time of recovery. So, whether or not my good friend from New York is right, I think that it will cost $40 billion out of the future income to the trust fund, I think that is a debatable point. If we trigger more unemployment by excessively increasing payroll taxes, where people simply do not hire people because of this massive cost that it now costs on the front end to hire a new employee for a small business that hires most of the people, we may find out we get less money instead of more money.

We need to get people back to work in this country. If you take these provisions in the bill that will assure the solvency of the trust fund that are built into this legislation with amendments that the Finance Committee has already adopted and that are part of the legislation. So I think that is the way that we will take care of the solvency of the trust fund. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment. I yield back the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. Dole. Mr. President, accelerating the OASDI tax rate increases already scheduled under current law is a key part of the financial solvency package put together at such great effort by the National Commission. Dropping this element out of the package now, or modifying it in a significant way, could cause the compromise to unravel. Everyone knows that this entire bill represents a series of measures that no one is particularly happy about. The virtue of the package, however, is that every group shares somewhat in the burden of preserving social security, and no one pays an extravagant price out of proportion to the others. If the payroll tax acceleration is eliminated, it just means that some other group will have to take a bigger hit to meet our financing targets. In any event, we are not talking about new taxes: The acceleration provisions generate more revenues to the trust funds simply by moving up the effective date of the payroll tax rate increase schedule for 1985 to 1984, and part of the increase scheduled for 1986 to 1988. This does, of course, raise the payroll tax burden: But it does so in a gradual and predictable way, in conjunction with major benefit restraints such as the 6-month COLA delay and lower earnings base. While the payroll tax rate acceleration do raise $40 billion between now and 1990, a significant portion of that is offset: In 1984 employees will get a dollar-for-dollar credit for the rate acceleration, and employers will be able to deduct the increased employer payroll taxes. So the real impact on employers and employees will be considerably less than the gain to the trust funds.

Mr. Jepsen. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Colorado, (Mr. Armstrong). His leadership and thoughtful debate on the social security issues have been helpful and appreciated. I believe all Senators owe Senator Armstrong a debt of gratitude for his decision to raise some important issues, despite the controversial nature of some of them.

I have been very concerned about the acceleration of tax increases ever since the Commission indicated that it was seriously considering such a proposal. My colleagues will remember that it was not too long ago that social security taxes were raised, constituting the largest single peacetime tax increases in our Nation's history.

Mr. President, whoever said that if you want to get less of something, tax it, surely had the social security tax in mind when the statement was made. If it is the Senate's intention to retard the recovery, stifle employment, and increase the unemployment rolls, then Senators should support the acceleration of the tax rates for social security for surely this will be the result.

Social security taxes are a tax on work. If you work, you pay the tax. Employers pay the tax and employees pay the tax. Consequently, raising the tax increases the cost of having employees.

In addition, because of the fail-safe provisions in the bill, repeal of the tax increases would not increase the likelihood that social security would be in serious financial difficulty. In the latter part of this decade. Some adjustments in the cost-of-living adjustments might be necessary, but even then, those at the lowest end of the income scale would not be affected. I urge my colleagues to join the Senator from Colorado in his efforts. Otherwise, the economic recovery we are all hoping for might never occur.

Mr. Mathias. Mr. President, I rise to support and cosponsor the amendment offered by the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong). This amendment will simply strip from the proposal the accelerated payroll tax increases, one of the most onerous provisions of the social security package.

I support the Armstrong amendment for a number of reasons. First of all, higher payroll taxes will mean fewer jobs. Second, higher payroll taxes are not fair, because employer and employee contributions are already so high that the average worker is now paying more in social security taxes than in Federal income taxes. Finally, raising payroll taxes on workers means reducing the real income of those whose income has barely kept pace with rising prices. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Colorado.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, did the Senator from Colorado ask for the yeas and nays?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I have not, but I am glad to ask for them now. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I shall just take a minute.

If we want a social security package then this amendment has to be defeated.

I do not quarrel with the Senator from Colorado. This is one of the many unpleasant parts of the package. We have Federal employees circulating the Capitol. They do not want to be into the program. We have people who do not want the COLA delay and some who do not want the acceleration of taxes. These are not new taxes but acceleration of existing provisions.

The Senator from Colorado made an outstanding contribution to the Commission. We made a number of changes in our bill through the efforts of the distinguished Senator from Colorado who is not only a member of the Commission but chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee. I would like to know how the Senator would offset the revenue loss of $40 or $42 billion?

Is that a part of the package you are offering?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, the information furnished my office indicates that it would be something less than that, but not to quibble over the amount, the Senator knows there is a provision in the bill which the Senator from Idaho has referred to in the bill which in effect tailors the cost-of-living adjustments in the future to available revenues.

Now, again, to explore the justice of it, we are projecting at the present time benefit increase cost-of-living adjustment of $259 billion between now and the end of the decade as a result of COLA’s. The Commission plan will have a delay savings of only $39 billion.

It is the expectation of my amendment that in the event that the $39 billion in revenue which would be lost as a result of this amendment puts the trust fund in a position where it could not only maintain the COLA the other provision of the bill adopted by the Finance Committee would simply scale back very modestly future COLA increases.

Of course, I recall, as do other Senators, that we have included a hold-harmless provision for those at the lower benefit levels which is by the way one of the most important provisions of the bill so if some additional COLA restraints were required it would be applied only to those who were the best able to withstand such restraint.

Again I point out to the Senator from Kansas and others social security benefits have gone up nearly twice as fast as have the wages and salaries on which payroll taxes are based and at about 50 percent faster than the cost of living.

So if the result were to be some COLA restraint, and I hope it is not, but if it is that would not be unjust or bad policy, in my opinion.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, for the reasons stated, I do not quarrel with the Senator. If we could have a perfect package and if he or someone else could have written the package, we might have avoided any acceleration of taxes, but as a practical matter that does not happen. We did the best we could. The package came out of our committee by a vote of 18 to 1 with this provision. I hope the amendment will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DENTON), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PERCY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DENTON) would vote “yea.”

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Missouri (Mr. EAGLETON), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. HUNDELESTON), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARASANES), and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. GLENN) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 67, as follows:

(Yeas—27)

Armstrong  Boren  Borchers  Cochran  East  Garn  Goldwater  Hatch  Hawkins

Nays—67

Abdnor  Andrews  Baker  Baucus  Benton  Biden  Bingaman  Bradley  Bumpers  Burdick  Byrd  Chafee  Chiles  Cohen

Mettetalbaum  Mitchell  Robbman  Murkowski  Packwood  Presler  Proxmire  Pryor

Randolph  Riegle  Thomas  Sasser  Simpson  Specter  Stafford  Stennis

So Mr. ARMSTRONG’S amendment (UP No. 108) was rejected.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. ARMSTRONG, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following Senators be added as cosponsors to my last amendment: Senator HUMPHREY, Senator JERZEN, and Senator JAMS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we are moving along rapidly. It is going to take some time, but we are making steady progress.

There is not any set order, but there are Senators who have been waiting 1 day or 2 days, such as Senator HUMPHREY, Senator HAWKINS, Senator BAUCUS, Senator QUAYLE with one amendment which I believe we can agree to, an amendment by Senator MATHIAS, and an amendment by Senator LEVIN.

I am not certain, but I think we can have a vote about every 15 or 20 minutes, hopefully.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. I yield.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, this Senator would agree to a time agreement of 10 minutes on each side on each amendment and then have an up or down vote, with no point of order being raised against either amendment.

Mr. LONG. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield? I would like to explain my position.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I yield.

Mr. LONG. I do not want to agree to a time agreement until we have a chance to check with our minority leader (Mr. BYRN). I personally have no objection to a time agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 109

(Purpose: To move up two years the phase-out of the earnings limitation for beneficiaries who have attained retirement age).

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.
The bill clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Florida (Mrs. HAWKINS), for herself, Mr. AHNOR, Mr. ARMSTRONG, Mr. D'AMATO, Mr. DeCONCINI, Mr. GARN, Mr. HECHT, Mr. JEPSEN, Mr. NICKLES, Mr. ROBB, now recognizes an unprinted amendment number 109.

Mrs. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 44, beginning with line 14, strike out through line 6 on page 45 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(II) $750 for each month in any taxable year ending after 1987 and before 1990;

(III) $500 for each month in any taxable year ending after 1988 and before 1990;

(IV) $1,000 for each month in any taxable year ending after 1989 and before 1991; and

(V) $1,250 for each month in any taxable year ending after 1991 and before 1993."

On page 46, line 3, strike out "1994" and insert "1993."
The President asked in his state of the Union address for retired teachers to come forward and teach our children math and science. They can do it, and they get a bill instead of a check for coming back to the working place.

For many elderly, the decision to return to work is not voluntary. They do not return to work out of choice but out of necessity. Many people who retire quickly feel the financial pinch of living on a fixed income when the prices of life supports are rising faster than the inflation rate. Consider these figures. The cost of electricity has gone up 1 percent faster than the housing and heating your home has gone up 12 percent faster. Cost of food has gone up 7 percent faster. Bus fare has gone up 50 percent faster. And gasoline has gone up twice the rate of the CPI. Telephone rates for local calls have gone up up to three times within 3 years. Water and sewer providers are asking for large increases all over the country.

What happens when the elderly get their electricity turned off when they debt their electricity bill? I will tell you what happens. They have to pay twice their monthly consumption in cash. Utility companies will not take a check once you have been cut off for missing a payment.

Should we penalize people for doing what they cannot afford to retire after all? Instead, they have to keep working just to pay for a minuscule electricity bill? I will tell you what happens. They have to pay twice their monthly consumption in cash. Utility companies will not take a check once you have been cut off for missing a payment.

The studies showed that if the limit was 4 or 5 years ago. The later action in this area. I am not sure about penalizing those who incur enormous medical bills when their spouse or parent from a catastrophic illness that medicare does not cover? The average person who is on medicare does to that neither Medicare nor Social Security will grow to $89 billion. And the 1990's will be even better; positive cash flow is expected to exceed $400 billion in that decade alone. If the doom and gloom forecast is used, then the 1988 and 1989 year-end surpluses are $13 billion and $1.3 billion in 1990. That means it costs less than 1 percent of 1 percent of taxable payroll. Even this modest amount is an understatement if you believe the studies that were presented before comprehensive hearings held by the House Committee on Retirement Income and Employment, during the 96th Congress, 1980.

The studies showed that if the limit were removed people would go back to work, and thereby return up to 85 percent of the cost for repealing the test in the form higher income and social security benefits. This administration campaigned as did many Senators—that together we were going to reward work, and now we have said we are going to penalize you if you are between 65 and 70 and choose to do so. Someday soon, perhaps sooner than we think, for this reason many of us will be called upon to answer why we did not want to retire immediately, instead of starting in 1988 age discrimination against the elderly; forced financial reasons back to work. I wonder how persuasive our answer will be that we decided to look away and wait until 1995 before justice was done.
Mr. DOLE. I thank the Senator from New York.

I really believe that if in fact we are going to have these big surpluses, and Congress is going to meet in 1984, 1985, 1986, and 1987, then it would certainly be appropriate for the Senator from Florida to offer the amendment and I would join her in that amendment, assuming we are both here in 1984 or whenever that time comes.

Mr. President, we have thought about taking the amendment. We tried to find out some way we could squeeze it into the package, but it seems to me that finally the bottom line is: Can we take it? Do we have the money to take it? The answer is no. Therefore, I would hope we would reject the amendment.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I reluctantly vote against the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida to accelerate the phaseout of the earnings limitation for social security recipients. Under current law, this limitation is $6,600. Income earned above this amount results in social security benefits being reduced by $1 for every $2 that are earned.

The committee has proposed phasing this limitation out by 1985. The amendment being offered would phase it out by 1993. I believe that we should phase out or raise the earnings limitations so that it is at least high enough to allow an individual to earn an income which can supplement their social security benefits, and thereby provide the necessities of life. But early total removal of the limitations may weaken the solvency of the system.

While I can support the phaseout by 1995 it has been carefully crafted to avoid any additional reduction of social security benefits to pay for it.

We had best leave it that way.

Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, there is nothing I would add to the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Kansas except our appreciation to the Senator from Florida for drawing the attention of the Senate to the fact that it may well be, if fortune smiles, that we could afford this toward the end of the decade. We do not think we can.

As time goes by, if it turns out we can, the amendment can be offered and, as the Senator from Kansas said, he will support it, and I will support it. But for the moment we have very little keel room in this legislation, and a billion here and a billion there as someone once said in this Chamber, and pretty soon you are talking about real money. And it is real money we are trying to raise. I would ask Senators on both sides if they could stay with the Finance Committee's measure in this regard. It is made up of small items. If we start taking small items out, we do not know where we will be.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Florida and the managers of the bill will let me intervene just for a moment to bring in the conference report on the jobs bill.

Before I do that, however, may I say that I do not intend to call up the conference report now. However, after the Hawkins amendment is disposed of, it is my intention to ask the Senate to turn to the consideration of this measure.

Mr. President, once again, after the Hawkins amendment is dealt with, it is the intention of the leadership to ask the Senate to turn to the consideration of the conference report, which is privileged. It is hoped that it will not take an unduly long time to finish consideration of this measure, and then we will return to the social security package.

I express, once again, our hope that we can finish both the conference report and the social security package tonight.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DENTON), the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. DURKIN), the Senator from Arizona (Mr. GOLDFARBER), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. FERGUSON) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DENTON) would vote "nay."

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Texas (Mr. BRATTEN), the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. HEDDEN), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBADES) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 44, nays 49, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE
So Mrs. Hawkins' amendment (UP No. 109) was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I indicated earlier that as soon as we finished this vote we would go to the conference report. The chairman of the committee, the manager of the conference report on this side, needs a little more time to examine the nature of an amendment sent to us on one of the items in disagreement with the House.

I understand Senator Dole and Senator Quayle are prepared to proceed now on another amendment to the social security package which will not require a rollcall vote. I hope the members of the Appropriations Committee and arrange for the agency issued by the Secretary under this title II of the Social Security Act, and

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I am sending to the desk an amendment which will permit the long-term unemployed to withdraw their contributions to individual retirement accounts without incurring a tax penalty.

We all know that this Nation faces a large problem of workers who have been and who will continue to be permanently dislocated from their current employment. These workers must gain new skills before they can reenter the productive mainstream of the American economy. It seems to me that it is just a matter of commonsense to let workers withdraw their IRA contributions without penalty when they are faced with the need to make a fundamental change in their working career. There is no sense in having funds locked up in a long-term savings account when the workers' needs are immediate and now.

This amendment permits withdrawals for those who have, in fact, been handicapped by the changes in our economy.

Mr. President, this amendment is very direct and very simple. It involves the individual retirement accounts and forbears the tax penalty for withdrawing to those who are dislocated workers.

This amendment, I am pleased to report, does have the support of the Treasury. It has been slightly modified. I might point out, from the version that was printed in the Record on March 16 in order to achieve a greater simplicity.

Basically what it does is just to allow a withdrawal without penalty from an IRA account for those people who are dislocated workers and seeking employment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand from the Senator from Indiana that the Treasury does support this amendment. As I understand what it permits is if somebody is disabled they can—it is similar to the situation with respect to the disabled. They can withdraw from the IRA without penalty.

Is that the essence of the amendment?

Mr. QUAYLE. That is the essence. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. Does the Senate have a revenue cost estimate?

Mr. QUAYLE. Obviously in fiscal year 1983 there will not be any because they would not be paying the penalty until the following year, so any kind of revenue loss would not be in fiscal 1983 but in fiscal 1984.

Mr. DOLE. Has the Senator talked to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana about this amendment?

Mr. QUAYLE. We have had from the minority side for a considerable amount of time no opposition. This is really not a noncontroversial amendment. I am going to tell you it has been over there with the Senator's staff for clearance, and we have had no objection to it.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I might say to the distinguished Senator from Indiana, I was filling in for Senator Long. I was in Senator Long's office. I wonder if we could have an accommodation until he gives his acceptance or possible disapproval of this, and so I wonder if we might lay this aside temporarily until the Senator from Louisiana returns.

Mr. DOLE. I think that is a good suggestion. I wonder if we might not temporarily set this aside until we check with Senator Long.

You have an amendment that has been cleared with Senator Long, the one you discussed with him?

Mr. QUAYLE. I have discussed the conference amendment with Senator Long, I have not yet had clearance with him. I thought I would wait for clearance.

I was under the impression there would not be any problem with two of the amendments, but I would be glad to accommodate the minority.

I have been printed in the Record, it has been well established for a couple of days, and I have heard no objection. As a matter of fact, one day we had accommodations we had made in response to a number of people who have been on this amendment before it.

Again, it is just foregoing a penalty on withdrawal from IRA accounts of dislocated workers. I can hardly imagine that that is going to be a hugely controversial issue. We are talking about the Federal government sensibility and unemployment compensation. This would certainly be a way, without having any drain on the Treasury, to provide some comfort for people that are dislocated and find themselves in a very unfortunate circumstance.

I will be very surprised if, in fact, there is any opposition. But I would be willing to accommodate the minority in any fashion that the manager of the bills sees fit.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, once again, in regard to the amendment of the Senator from Indiana, I certainly cannot speak for our side on this particular issue. I would like to ask, respecting if the Senator from Indiana would temporarily set aside the amendment until our side has had an opportunity to examine the amendment.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this amendment be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.
MR. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 334, after line 23, insert the following:

TRAINING

Sec. 404. Section 602 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1981 is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(g) The payment of Federal supplemental compensation shall not be denied to any recipient (who submits documentation prescribed by the Secretary) for any week because the recipient is in training or attending an accredited educational institution on a substantially full-time basis, or because of the application of State law to any such recipient relating to the availability for work, the ability to perform such work, or the acceptance of work on account of such training or attendance, unless the State agency determines that such training or attendance will not improve the opportunities for employment of the recipient.".

MR. QUAYLE. Mr. President, this amendment deals with the Federal supplemental compensation benefits and allows a different procedure for whether an individual may be available for work.

Under present law, these beneficiaries are disqualified from benefits unless their retraining has been previously approved by the State employment security agency. As a matter of record, these agencies have rarely approved training courses unless the agency has itself arranged for the training.

Under my amendment beneficiaries would not be disqualified from benefits unless the State agency determined that the training would not improve the beneficiary's prospect of employment.

So we are reversing the process on determining whether an individual would be available for work. The presumption is to try to get individuals to seek training instead of waiting.

At the request of the Department of Labor, I have included some modifications from my original amendment in order to avoid potential abuse of this provision. First, I have provided that the beneficiary, the person receiving unemployment compensation, must submit appropriate documentation to the State agency concerning his retraining so that the State agency will have adequate evidence on which to base its determination.

Second, I have made the provision applicable only to training that is taken on a substantially full-time basis to prevent the possibility of someone being excluded from job search requirements just because he is taking training for 1 hour a week.

With these modifications, I understand that this amendment will be acceptable. Let me summarize. What we are doing is putting the burden on the employment security agency to determine that he is not receiving or she is not receiving adequate training. Right now the procedure is very cumbersome. Individuals find it very difficult at times, because of the administrative hurdles placed before them to get certification that they have been taking training to enhance one's skills and, therefore, enhance one's employability.

I believe this amendment certainly is a step in the right direction. The employment security agency sees that the individual is taking advantage of it or they do not provide proper certification, then, in fact, they would not be available for work and, therefore, they could not go ahead and seek this training.

Mr. President, I just want to emphasize one point. This amendment goes to what is going to be the second phase of the jobs bill. Later on tonight we are going to be debating the jobs bill. A number of people that supported me, including the Senator from Indiana, did that because it is a short-term solution. It is not a long-term solution. The Federal unemployment compensation is in there. It is a matter of dire necessity for every State, including my own, that we pass that.

But, beyond that, the real jobs legislation is not first of all, going to mean economic recovery. Second, and this is the challenge that we have, how are we going to train and retrain our surplus labor in this country? How are we going to take those individuals that have been displaced and displaced and matched up with future jobs? How are we going to take somebody that has been employed for a number of years and develop new skills and, therefore, new opportunities?

What this amendment does is to say: "Look, what we are going to do is encourage training and we are not going to deny benefits to somebody that is seeking proper training and trying to get ahead in life and to move a step forward.

It is not going to be open-ended because there is going to have to be certification. Just like under the GI program, certain certifications that if you were taking courses, you should be certified and receive training, they are also certifying that they are going to elevate one's skills. There was a potential abuse we corrected.

Somebody would say that maybe they will be able to certify they are only getting 1 hour a week and, therefore, that would not be right. So we put in substantially full-time employment; in other words, it has to be basically full-time training that they are seeking. Therefore, once the employee or the recipient or beneficiary determines that they are going to enhance their employability, the burden of proof is now on the Department to say, "No, they are not."
Mr. DOMENICI. I compliment the Senator. I ask him if I may be added as a cosponsor.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI) be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, again, we are working for the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) to come to the floor so he will have a chance to examine the amendment.

As I understand, the amendment has been modified, but it is still hard to determine that somebody is looking for work if he has had hearings on, or essentially the same thing we have had hearings on, in the Finance Committee.

As I understand, there are still a number of questions to be resolved, and I would hope that we might delay that amendment for another time.

Mr. QUAYLE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator has not offered the amendment yet. The more I heard about it, the less enthusiastic I am about the voucher. I would hope the Senator would not press that amendment. It is the type of thing we have had hearings on, or essentially the same thing we have had hearings on, in the Finance Committee.

As I understand, there are still a number of questions to be resolved, and I would hope that we might delay that amendment for another time.

Mr. QUAYLE. Will the Senator describe the amendment which has been cleared all the way around?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI) be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, again, we are working for the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) to come to the floor so he will have a chance to examine the amendment.

As I understand, the amendment has been modified, but it is still hard to determine that somebody is looking for work if he has had hearings on, or essentially the same thing we have had hearings on, in the Finance Committee.

As I understand, there are still a number of questions to be resolved, and I would hope that we might delay that amendment for another time.

Mr. QUAYLE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator has not offered the amendment yet, but I understand he may do so. I just want to indicate I have no objection to the first two amendments. I feel after discussing the third amendment and learning more about it, I would prefer not to have to address that at this time.

The Senator is certainly at liberty to offer it.

Mr. QUAYLE. Let me tell the Senator that when we started out with the voucher proposal, there were a lot of people who we had been working with who expressed the same concerns as the Senator from Kansas, that maybe we should not be doing that at this particular time, or they had certain questions on the amendment.

After working with particularly a number of people in the administration this past week and this week, the Department of Labor, the Department of the Treasury, and OMB have basically signed off on this amendment and they are now supporting it.

I would hope that we might be able to support it in the Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over this matter, as well as the Labor and Human Resources Committee, to work this out. Maybe as time goes on, the Senator from Kansas might like this amendment that I would like to offer later on. It does have the support of the administration. I think it is a good amendment. Nobody really knows how these vouchers are going to work.

This is an extension of the Federal supplemental compensation. This is a good place to offer it. There may be some debate on it, and there may be some questions that we could answer. We have taken a considerable amount of time and contacted a lot of people who had a lot of reservators to begin with. We have made a lot of accommodations on it, and I believe it is really a good amendment.

Mr. DOLE. As I say, I just happened to focus on it, and it may not be fair to the Senator to say that because I have really not had a chance to examine it. I would hope, as a matter of fact, that the Senator would not offer it at this time and that we would temporarily set aside the other two amendments until the Senator from Louisiana comes to the floor. I do not see any problem with those two.

Mr. QUAYLE. I appreciate the Senator's comments. The other two amendments were definitely not controversial, and this one should not be too controversial. It may become a little controversial as we go on. I will certainly accommodate the chairman on that and work with him. I will also work with the ranking minority member as the evening goes on. We have the jobs legislation to pass yet tonight. Maybe by tomorrow we can get this worked out.

Mr. QUAYLE. I might say I do have an amendment which I believe has been worked out on all sides on section 1122. What I will do is offer that one, which I believe we have everyone signed off on, and then we can set those aside as the more controversial. Then when the Senator from Louisiana returns, we can perhaps accept those three en bloc.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, will the Senator describe the amendment which has been cleared all the way around?

Mr. QUAYLE. The amendment on section 1122 basically provides that on section 1122 hospital construction of over $600,000 they simply submit for the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund and inserting "the general fund in the Treasury".

(c) Section 1122(g) and 1861(z)(2) of such Act are each amended by striking out "$100,000" and inserting in lieu thereof in each instance "$600,000."

(c) Section 1122 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

"(1) A capital expenditure made by or on behalf of a health care facility shall not be subject to review pursuant to this section if 75 percent of the patients who can reasonably be expected to be treated in the facility will be expected to pay a fee for service. The Secretary may determine how expenditure is for services and facilities which are needed by such organization in order to operate efficiently and economically and are not otherwise readily accessible to such organization."
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand this is the amendment which the Senator from Indiana has just explained.

Mr. QUAYLE. Yes, and I have a further statement.

Mr. President, by the administration's own admission, there is a little more that needs to be done with regard to their Medicare prospective payment legislation before it can be 100% efficient for every single dollar spent on the rising cost of health care.

I believe that the proposed "pass through" for capital expenditures under the prospective payment proposal will stimulate unnecessary capital expenditures and defeat the cost containment purpose of the legislation.

We must act carefully if we are to discourage capital expansion that has not been demonstrated. It is needed.

Medicare prospective payment offers an alternative to our present cost-basis reimbursement system. It has not provided the incentives to hospitals to be efficient. Clearly, changes are needed in the way we pay for health care. While moving forward on a prospective payment system for hospitals is a step in the right direction, we should not take that step without attempting to link prospective payment systems with systems for restraining unnecessary capital expenditures.

As long as capital expenditures are passed through, there is the potential for the pass-through becoming a flood. Passing through capital costs will continue to inflate hospital costs because new capital expenditures will result in increased supply, utilization and cost. It is clear that every dollar invested in capital, it generates a 30-cent increase per annum in operating costs.

Not only does the current proposal fail to address the explosive component of health care cost escalation by encouraging hospitals to make new capital expenditures as quickly as possible. The administration is quite clear in stating that capital costs will eventually be included in prospective rates.

My amendment will do several things: it will require hospitals to submit their 3-year capital expenditure plan to either the State planning or section 1122 agency. My amendment will also raise the threshold in the current 1122 legislation from $100,000 to $600,000—expected expenditures over $600,000 will trigger the need for submission of the capital expenditure plan. In addition, section 1122C is amended to prevent Medicare funds from being used to pay for any cost that the State may incur from implementation of 1122, rather funds would be made available from the general revenues.

The administration is very concerned that the steps will insure the States can continue to monitor the capital expenditures planned for their communities, and it is hoped the States will not approve those that are unnecessary.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be temporarily set aside with the other two Quayle amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 113
(Purpose: To modify certain provisions relating to the establishment of the Commission on Medicare Prospective Payment Assessment Commission. In the bill, that commission is established to make sure that the DRG's and the beneficiary payments are adequate, neither excessive nor insufficient.

My amendment will also raise the threshold from $100,000 to $600,000—expected expenditures over $600,000 will trigger the need for submission of the capital expenditure plan. In addition, section 1122C is amended to prevent Medicare funds from being used to pay for any cost that the State may incur from implementation of 1122, rather funds would be made available from the general revenues.

It is the purpose of the amendments I am proposing to prevent Medicare funds from being used to pay for any cost that the State may incur from implementation of 1122, rather the funds would be made available from the general revenues.

The administration is very concerned that the steps will insure the States can continue to monitor the capital expenditures planned for their communities, and it is hoped the States will not approve those that are unnecessary.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that these steps will insure that these steps will not be approved by the States. My amendment will do the following:

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment of the Senator from Montana (Mr. BAUCUS) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 113.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 137, line 1, strike out "", at least every five years" and insert in lieu thereof "from time to time, and at least every three years".

On page 137, line 6, strike out "adjustments to be made" and insert in lieu thereof "the need for adjustments".

On page 142, line 15, strike out "Commission of independent experts," and insert in lieu thereof "Prospective Payment Assessment Commission, composed of independent experts".

On page 142, line 17, strike out "to review" and insert in lieu thereof a comma and "which Commission, in addition to carrying out its functions under subsection (d)(4)(D), shall review".

On page 146, line 25, strike out "and" and the first place it appears.

On page 146, line 1, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma and "and individuals having expertise in the research and development of technological and scientific advances in health care."

On page 148, line 13, strike out "and".

On page 148, line 10, strike out "(iii)" and insert in lieu thereof "(iv)".

On page 145, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following new matter: "(iii) national organizations representing manufacturers of health care products; and

On page 148, line 15, strike out "and".

On page 148, line 19, strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a semicolon and "and"

On page 148, between lines 19 and 20, insert the following new matter:

"(iii) adopt procedures allowing any interested party to submit information with respect to medical and surgical procedures and services (including new technologies and treatment modalities), which information the Commission shall consider in making reports and recommendations to the Secretary and the Congress."

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this is a technical amendment in fact, not in theory. It has been cleared all around.

It is a clean amendment.

Essentially, it simply excludes in the Medicare portions of the bill two minor changes in that portion of the bill which deals with the prospective payment assessment commission. In the bill, that commission is established to make sure that the DRG's and the beneficiary payments are adequate, neither excessive nor insufficient.

These two amendments are simple. One is to make sure that the DRG's are reevaluated every three years instead of every five years, and, second, to make sure the commission can draw on other groups in its membership.

That is what it is. It is clear. I thank the chairman for letting me introduce my amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I can state in this case that the amendment has been cleared. It is technical in nature. I think it is an improvement. I am prepared to accept the amendment. There is no objection on the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 113) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 114
(Purpose: To require appropriations with respect to certain provisions of section 143, 144, and 145)

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator Stennis of Mississippi and myself and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Quayle amendment is laid aside.

The amendment of the Senator from Oregon will be stated.
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oregon (Mr. HATFIELD) for himself and Mr. STENNIS, proposes an unplanned amendment numbered 114.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 85, line 5, before the period insert ", to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts".

On page 85, line 13, before the period insert ", to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts".

On page 85, lines 18 through 19, strike out "There are hereby appropriated into such Trust Funds such sums as may be necessary to reimburse such Trust Funds for the amount of currently unnegotiated benefit checks.".

On page 87, lines 4 and 5, strike out "of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983" and insert "on which funds were appropriated".

On page 87, line 9, strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert ", to the extent provided in advance in appropriation Acts".

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Finance as well as other Members of the Senate to three troublesome provisions in the Finance Committee bill. These sections are 143, 144, and 145.

Section 143 of the committee bill appropriates "such sums as may be necessary" into social security trust funds to credit the amount of social security checks drawn on the Treasury but never negotiated. The committee report indicates that this provision would provide a one-time appropriation of about $800 million. Under present law, uncashed checks benefit the Treasury, not the trust funds. Further, the bill gives the Secretary of the Treasury extremely broad and vague authority to continue to credit unnegotiated Treasury checks to the trust funds. The committee report indicates this would be done regularly.

Sections 144 and 145 provide lump sum appropriations to credit the trust funds with an amount equal to the anticipated costs of military wage credits. Reimbursement to the trust funds is currently provided annually in the general appropriation bill for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies. The committee provision does not change the formula for calculating these credits, but rather accelerates payment of anticipated credits to the present, so that the present becomes a one-time transfer from general revenues estimated in the committee report at $18.4 billion.

I ask the chairman of the committee if he can inform us of the circumstances leading the committee to propose these extraordinary provisions.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

The extraordinary circumstances are simply the funding crisis facing the social security system. As the Senator knows, in 1981, the Congress permitted interest and dividend accumulations to continue, but the Federal old age and survivors insurance fund until Congress could work out a more durable solution to the OASI problem. The interfund borrowing authority expired in December 1982. We still face a serious and continuing funding shortfall, and the committee has endeavored to find funds for the system to prevent default in the near term. Sections 143 through 145 of our proposal would infuse the trust funds with a total of about $19.2 billion, within 30 days of enactment of the bill.

The system of annual appropriations for the military wage credits has worked well in the past, and will continue to be the vehicle for adjustments to these credits. However, the crisis facing the system led the committee, as well as the Bipartisan Social Security Commission, to recommend a one-time change in the existing system.

Regarding the crediting of uncashed social security checks to the trust funds, there has been a longstanding anomaly in this system. Since the checks are drawn on the trust funds, it is only logical and proper that the trust funds, not the general fund of the Treasury benefit if the checks are not negotiated.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for his remarks. I certainly support the chairman's efforts to insure the solvency of the social security system. While I personally oppose the direct appropriations in sections 143, 144, and 145, and believe that an amendment for these funds should be submitted by the President for action by the Appropriations Committees, I understand the importance of immediately assuring our senior citizens that their benefits are secure. Therefore, my amendment does not touch section 145, which will infuse the system with $13.2 billion within 30 days of enactment of this bill. Sections 143 and 144, however, add another $6.8 billion to the trust funds, and there is no reason why these funds could not be provided in the normal manner in my opinion. I wonder if the Senate from Kansas would respond to that observation.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee. While the Senate from Kansas is correct. With the almost immediate funds to the social security system will gain from section 145, there will be no harm in providing the funds made available by sections 143 and 144 in the fiscal year 1983 supplemental appropriation bill. Therefore, I decline to make objection to the Senator's amendment.

The Finance Committee believes that the Congress should adhere to the conventional authorization/appropriation process whenever possible. Reluctantly, however, the urgency and high priority of the social security crisis led the committee to recommend the departure from the normal procedure embodied in these sections. I might say as an aside that I certainly understand, as chairman of a major committee, the importance of playing by the rules. The distinguished chairman of the Appropriations Committee that we do not intend to depart from the normal procedure. It was done in this instance only because of the urgency of the matter. I urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 114) was agreed to.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. HATFIELD. Mr. President, I shall yield to the Senator from Mississippi if he has some comments.

Mr. STENNIS. I thank the Senator.

First, Mr. President, I want to commend highly the Senator from Oregon, the chairman of our Committee on Appropriations, for the scrupulous and diligent way in which he follows through these special duties that has to keep the bill clean of legislation and keep other bills in line, and for maintaining that principle for the Appropriations Committee.

I know this was all done in the usual good faith and as the legislative committee. Nevertheless, there just has to be a standard and we have to have someone who will follow it up and see that that standard is maintained. This might be just an ordinary matter along any important to us, but this goes to the very heart of the principles upon which we operate. I am very proud to see him, again and again, maintain this balance of requirements and get results.

I am delighted to support him in all this endeavor and in the amendments, each one of them.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. HATFIELD. I thank the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. President, the Senator from Mississippi is a valuable member of our committee and has certainly been stalwart in maintaining the integrity of the appropriations process. I have always appreciated his willingness to do battle at times when it is necessary. Therefore, I would also like to call the attention of the chairman of the Finance Committee to section 339 of H.R. 1900, as passed by the House of Representatives. This provision establishes a joint study panel on the Social Security Administration (SSA) to determine whether SSA should become an inde-
Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) asks unanimous consent that reading of the following new section be dispensed with:

"Sec. 44H. Contributions to individual retirement security account.—For purposes of this section, the term "individual retirement security account" shall have the meaning given to such term by section 130(c)(1).

(2)(A) Subsection (b) of section 6401 of such Code (relating to excess credit is treated as overpayment) is amended by inserting in lieu thereof "39, 43, and 44H (relating to contributions to individual retirement security account),".

(3) In prescribing the forms by which any individual liable for an tax imposed by the title a of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 may claim the credit allowed under such section on any such form.

(4) The table of sections for subpart A of part II of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 relating to credits allowable against tax is amended by inserting before the item relating to section 46 the following new item:

"Sec. 44H. Contributions to individual retirement security account."

(5) The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.
"SEC. 130. INCOME FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.

(a) In general.—No income does not include income which—

(1) accrues on amounts contributed to an individual retirement security account, and

(2) A is withdrawn from such account before the taxpayer attains age 62 for the purchase of life insurance, health insurance, or other insurance for the taxpayer.

(b) Account Exempt From Tax.—Any individual retirement security account is exempt from taxation under this subtitle.

c) Definitions.—For purposes of this section—

(1) INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNT.—The term 'individual retirement security account' means an account—

(1) which is established by the taxpayer with a qualified fiduciary;

(2) which may be withdrawn therefrom before the taxpayer attains age 62 for the purposes specified in subsection (a)(2)(D), and

(3) which the interest of the taxpayer in the balance of this account is not forfeitable if the taxpayer makes contributions, in order to ensure the taxpayer an adequate retirement income upon attaining age 62.

(2) Qualified fiduciary.—The term 'qualified fiduciary' means a bank or other person who demonstrates to the satisfaction of the Secretary that the manner in which he will administer the account will be consistent with the requirements of this section. An account shall not be disqualified under this paragraph if it is established by a person other than the fiduciary so administering the account may be granted, in the instrument creating the account, the power to control the investment of the account funds either by directing investments (including reinvestments, disposals, and exchanges) or by disapproving proposed investments (including reinvestments, disposals, and exchanges).

The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

(3) Definitions.—For purposes of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(1) For purposes of determining old-age, survivors, and disability insurance benefits based upon the wages and self-employment income of an individual with respect to whom contributions are made to an individual retirement security account, such primary insurance amount shall be reduced by an amount that bears the same ratio to such primary insurance amount (as determined with regard to this subsection) as the IRA offset amount described in paragraph (1), (a) which is about to be concluded to-overnight.

Mr. President, millions of Americans have waited patiently for Congress to come up with a plan to rescue social security. They watched as a 15-member, blue ribbon commission studied social security's funding problems and then offered a solution that fell pitifully short of its mark. While the panel's plan might or might not have bridged the $200 billion short-term deficit, it provided little relief for social security's whopping $2 trillion long-range debt.

Then Americans looked on as Members of Congress debated solutions to the system's long-term funding crisis. Members of the Senate sought to address the problem by making working men and women stay in the work force beyond the present retirement age. Still others suggested we reduce future benefits to our senior citizens or enact standby tax increases in excess of those contained in the bill before us.

Mr. President, these patchwork efforts just will not work. Fundamental problems with social security remain unsolved. They cannot be patched. We will be deceiving ourselves—and the American people—if we do not face up to the seriousness of the problem and offer something better than the reform bill now before us.

Population growth patterns show that fewer than two workers will be supporting each retired person early in the next century. Is there any wonder so many Americans have so little confidence in social security? A recent Washington Post-ABC News poll revealed that 68 percent of workers under 45—and 70 percent of those under 30—believe social security will not even exist when they retire.

For one, believe Americans deserve more than the current retirement system, which is subject to the whims of politicians. That is precisely why I am offering this amendment—to provide working men and women a supplement to the present accounts would allow each working American to save and invest for his or her own retirement security. For the first time ever, there would actually be a trust fund.
Mr. President, I propose these accounts be set up in banks, savings and loans, and other lending institutions appropriate differences, however. In the private sector, the capital pool created by these accounts would provide an enormous stimulus to our economy. These IRA's would encourage savings and investment, create jobs, help lower interest rates, and in the process create strength and vitality to our economy.

Some Senators perhaps are thinking that IRA accounts sound quite a bit like the present IRA accounts. Well, they are very similar. There are some important differences, however. Instead of the income tax deductions allowed individuals who set up IRA's, my amendment provides a tax credit to encourage IRA's. The tax credit would equal 20 percent of the amount an individual invests in an IRA, subject to a limit of 20 percent of the individual's payroll tax liability for that year.

There would be no limit on the amount that could be deposited in IRA's. Interest, dividends, and capital gains accumulated in the IRA's would be tax exempt, and annuities withdrawn from the IRA, and any retirement payments from it upon retirement anytime after age 62 would be tax free. Funds held in an IRA account could be used tax free by a worker before age 62 to acquire life insurance, health insurance, or disability insurance. The individual would participate with his fiduciary in managing the IRA as a fully funded individual retirement program.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table be printed in the Record at this point. There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the preceding table reflects the huge amounts of money that will be invested in the private sector at various rates of IRA participation.

For example, let us assume that 1 percent of social security participants set up IRA accounts in 1984; $894 million would be left in the economy for the creation of jobs and so forth. If you will look down the table, 10 percent participation in 1987 would result in $12 billion left in the private sector. Go all the way down to 1993 and the total amount of money with 38 percent of the work force participating would be $271,401 million invested in the private sector.

For example, if you make a calculator handy the total amount invested over the next decade would be in excess of $271 billion, which is one whale of a lot of money.

Mr. President, sooner or later, a plan such as the one I am proposing is in the best interest of this country because as fewer and fewer workers support more and more retirees the system we now have will simply fold under the financial strain.

My plan, however, is completely voluntary, and I simply want to offer these IRA's to the working men and women of this country as a supplement to social security.

Let me emphasize they certainly are not mandatory and more importantly they do not take one penny away from the payroll taxes so vital to the present social security system.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I have indicated earlier, and I cannot remember which day—we have been on this bill sort of off and on—the distinguished Senator from North Carolina, the Senator from Kansas, was kind enough to come before our committee and discuss what I consider to be a very innovative idea and then he discussed it later in the Chamber when he offered his proposal, and now this is the so-called IRA part of his total package. As the Senator pointed out earlier about 11 of the 20 provisions in the Senator's bill have now become a part of the package before the Senate. So there is more than 50 percent of what the Senator was trying to achieve in the package. The ERA concept would provide some additional capital for the private sector. There is some question as to how many people will contribute to an IRA to IRSA if it will reduce their social security benefits.

As I understand the statement just made by the Senator from North Carolina it is intended to be supplemental.

Mr. HELMS. That is correct.

Mr. DOLE. Whether or not that approach would have any reduction the Senator from Kansas is not certain from a cursory reading of the amendment.

The problem that concerns the Senator from Kansas is whether or not there is any revenue impact, and we have not had an opportunity with the joint committee to make any revenue estimates. Maybe the Senator from North Carolina has some estimate.

Mr. HELMS. I do. If the Senator will yield, I perhaps moved too rapidly in discussing these provisions. The ERISA concept would provide some additional capital for the private sector. There is some question as to how many people would contribute to an IRA or make more of an interest in their own retirement.

Mr. HELMS. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOLE. I assume that more responsibility and concern are probably the underlying bases for the amendment.

Again, I am not prepared to accept the amendment. I am certainly willing to work with the distinguished Senator from North Carolina. It is a good idea. If we could have some time I am willing to work with the Senator from Kansas and any other appropriate agency to take a look at title I of the Senate's amendment and to give us some response as far as costs, what they think what percent of people might use it, what the impact might be on retirement, might be on individuals, and how it mixes with the private pension plans as well as the social security program and any other thing that the Senator thinks we might want to include in that request, and we are certainly most willing to do that.

Mr. HELMS. I think that is a good idea and I express my appreciation to the Senator from Kansas.
Congressional Record — Senate

Let me make this suggestion: that his staff, and mine, and perhaps the staff of Senator Symms, because he is also interested in it, consider the problems of a package of a number of things and submit them to the Senator. Then he can proceed with the Treasury Department. We can eliminate what is not workable, and pick it up from there. With that understanding, I would see no point in having a rollover; I would rather work with the Senator because I know of his interest in trying to free this incentive for a private retirement system.

Mr. DOLE. I might say to the Senator there is a great deal of interest in our committee and pretty widespread in the Senate on both sides of the aisle in trying to beef up the IRA program, and this is another aspect you might consider. Our problem is where we find the revenue to offset the loss if we do that. But the Senator from Kansas is willing to do whatever he can because it is a good idea and it should be explored.

Mr. HELMS. All right.

Mr. DOLE. And it will be explored.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Kansas. He is always thoughtful and always helpful, and I think we might be onto something, as the saying goes. Let us work in that direction.

With that in mind and with that understanding, I withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the Senator from North Carolina.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 116

(Purpose: To index the base amount for the taxation of social security benefits)

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, I seek unanimous consent to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Indiana is temporarily set aside. The clerk will report.

The bill as amended, is as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. HUMPHREY) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 116.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 59, strike out lines 4 through 14, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(”c) Base Amount.—For purposes of this section—

(1) in general.—The term 'base amount' means

(A) except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, $25,000,

(B) $32,000, in the case of a joint return, and

(C) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—

(i) is married at the close of the taxable year (within the meaning of section 144) but does not file a joint return for such year, and

(ii) does not live apart from his spouse at all times during the taxable year.

(2) Indexing Adjustment.—

(A) in general.—The base amount which applies for any calendar year beginning after December 31, 1984, shall be the amount determined under paragraph (1), adjusted by the appropriate index factor for such year.

(B) Index Factor.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the index adjustment factor for any calendar year shall be equal to the wage adjustment for such year.

(C) Wage Adjustment Defined.—For purposes of this paragraph, the 'wage adjustment' for any calendar year is the percentage increase in average wages for the period from January 1 to September 30 of such calendar year, and

(i) the average of the total wages for the preceding calendar year, exceeds

(ii) such average for 1983.

(D) Determination of Average of Total Wages.—For purposes of subparagraph (C), the average of the total wages for any calendar year shall be determined by—

(i) in the same manner as such average is determined for purposes of section 9113 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1984.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, as my colleagues know, the social security bill before the Senate contains a provision taxing social security benefits. The Finance Committee has constructed a system of thresholds above which beneficiaries will find their social security benefits, half of the benefits, subject to taxation. Those thresholds chosen by the Finance Committee are $25,000 for a single taxpayer or $32,000 on a joint return.

I am not dissatisfied with the issue of the equity of taxing social security benefits is the matter of the thresholds themselves. This Senator has serious doubts at these relatively low levels of $25,000 to $32,000 that they represent the equitable threshold but even apart from that contention, Mr. President, I know a good number of my colleagues share the concern that because these thresholds are not indexed to inflation, in the language of the bill, that over a period of years, as inflation creeps, it allows approximately $4 billion of bracket creep.

I believe the Finance Committee constructed a system of thresholds which beneficiaries will find their social security benefits, half of the benefits, subject to taxation. Those thresholds chosen by the Finance Committee are $25,000 for a single taxpayer or $32,000 on a joint return.

We see the social security equivalent of bracket creep at work in the chart which I have constructed.

I know the Finance Committee will object to the amendment on the grounds that it would cost the Treasury some billions of dollars, I believe the figure the committee cites is about $4 billion if the Senate adopts the Humphrey amendment to index these thresholds.

I suggest to my colleagues that whether the figure of lost revenue is $4 billion or some other figure, higher or lower, those are ill-gotten dollars because they will be gained through, you might say, bracket creep in the social security system.

There are many who consider the taxation that occurs through raising of taxes, that occurs through bracket creep, to be a dishonest form of raising taxes and many say if Congress wants to raise greater tax revenues, it ought to have the courage to increase tax rates or tax increases directly and not permit bracket creep to work secretly, silently, and viciously. That is a great argument and that is why the Congress adopted indexation of the tax rates, IRS tax rates, for 1985, and that is why the President, including many others, including the chairman of the Finance Committee, I believe, are committed absolutely to retaining tax indexation as part of the President's tax package.

I wholeheartedly support them in that, and it is only fair to agree if we want to raise taxes we ought to have the courage to do it up front and in a straightforward fashion.

Likewise we should not seek to raise taxes through the means of the social security benefits through the means of bracket creep and that is precisely what will occur if the Senate does not index by any stretch of the imagination, but more and more taxpayers of modest means, not well-to-do by any stretch of the imagination, but more and more taxpayers of modest means, will find their social security benefits subject to taxation.

Mr. President, I believe the amendment makes a very modest assumption that, and find their social security benefits will count ourselves lucky if inflation remains that low over that span of years over the next 10 years. I think we see the social security equivalent of bracket creep at work in the chart which I have constructed.

Without indexation, as I have pointed out, the value of this threshold will steadily decline and more and more beneficiaries will find their social security benefits through the means of bracket creep and that is precisely what will occur if the Senate does not index by any stretch of the imagination, but more and more taxpayers of modest means, not well-to-do by any stretch of the imagination, but more and more taxpayers of modest means, will find their social security benefits subject to taxation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HUMPHREY. I will reestablish the floor at this point, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I want to thank the Senator from New Hampshire for bringing up this amendment. I just hope it does not pass. I know precisely what the amendment does. It is something we considered in the Commission, but as with all these other great ideas floating around, they cost a great deal of money. This one costs about $6 billion between now and 1989 and I understand about $4.2 billion every year thereafter.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Will the Senator from Kansas yield for a question at that point?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Let me back up. Is it not correct that the Senator from Kansas, along with the President, supports retaining indexing of the IRS tax brackets?

Mr. DOLE. Yes; I view that a little differently, yes; I strongly support indexing.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Yes; I am glad to hear that and I find my understanding reconfirmed.

Does not the Senator from Kansas agree that—any—the Senator from Kansas contends this amendment will result in a loss of revenue but that revenue to be lost, is that not ill-gotten revenue in that it results from bracket creep with respect to these thresholds?

Mr. DOLE. You mean we lose revenue?

Mr. HUMPHREY. Yes; the committee contends in its opposition to this amendment that we will lose some billions of dollars in revenue and I do not count that so that revenue lost is ill-gotten revenue if it is derived from the bracket creep.

Mr. DOLE. Let me say to the Senator from New Hampshire so far as indexing the Tax Code the Senator from Kansas and the Senator from Colorado and the Senator from New Hampshire, and I hope the majority of the Senate, will do all we can to retain indexing starting in 1985. But again I do not feel as parallel to this.

Second, if, in the event that inflation is based on the Senator's "Dear Colleague" letter, and I do not quarrel with that, if it moves that quickly, we can adjust the threshold for inflation, and we can do it without risk to the trust funds.

Again, it is a matter we discussed. It is not a matter we did not think of in the Commission. In fact, as I recall, maybe the Senator from Kansas raised this in the Commission hearings, and other Senators did also. So when we got all finished up and added up how much revenue we were going to have between now and 1999 and how much we were going to need, we did not have any more room. And whether it is $6 billion in the next 5 years and then $4.2 billion a year, I think it is a matter of some concern.

That does not suggest if we have more money in the trust fund we could not index the thresholds. Very honestly, there are some, this Senator not included, who believe there should not be any thresholds, that you should tax the benefits period. That is not the view of the Senator from Kansas.

So again I am sympathetic with the amendment. But if we index the threshold we will have to make payroll taxes or cut benefits to make up the difference. So I think we have a choice. If we want to index the threshold, which is probably maybe a good idea down the road, but I do not believe it is a good idea now, then we have to be prepared.

I hope the Senator would be willing to offer another amendment which would either raise taxes or cut benefits to pay for it, because we really are in a tight bind.

I do not quarrel with the Senator from New Hampshire. I think it is a great idea—do not misunderstand me—but we are just not prepared to do anything about it because we are out of money.

Mr. HUMPHREY. If the Senator would yield, of course he is aware, in the event the trust fund falls below a certain floor, that a mechanism comes into play to provide the COLA's of living allowances, for beneficiaries while holding safe lower income, that is social security benefits with a lower range of values. So it is not absolutely correct to say that passage of this amendment is going to result in some kind of crisis because that COLA mechanism will come into play.

Mr. DOLE. I say to the Senator, he is correct. But I would also say when we adopted these fail-safe provisions, we were under the impression in our committee report that indexing the threshold, we might have provided another fail-safe mechanism. The fact that we index the rate structure does not mean that we index every fixed dollar amount in the Tax Code.

I know the Senator wants a vote on this amendment. I hope we can persuade him not to have a vote. He is certainly entitled to a vote. It is an idea that deserves consideration and I appreciate the Senator offering it. I only wish we could accept it.

Mr. HUMPHREY. Mr. President, to conclude, briefly, let me state that I am perfectly willing to stack the vote or to handle it in whatever way it is convenient to my colleagues.

I find myself, unfortunately, in disagreement with the Senator from Kansas. Any revenue loss attributed to this amendment would be revenue dis-honestly gained in the view of this Senator because it will result from bracket creep. It will result from more and more taxpayers of modest income finding their social security benefits taxed.

As I pointed out, my table shows that with a 4-percent rate of inflation, which is modest, the $25,000 threshold would fall in value to $18,682 over 10 years, expressed in 1984 dollars; the $32,000 threshold will fall to $21,622. So more people will find their benefits taxed. Tax revenues will rise, of course, because of that, but those will be ill-gotten gains and not straightforwardly secured type of revenues. So it is an apples and oranges deal especially in light of the taxation of IRS tax brackets which should apply the same mechanism to these thresholds.

Mr. President, if the leadership wishes, I would be happy to stack the vote.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if the Senator would yield to me, I think we are ready to vote. I believe that after this vote we will indeed be ready to go to the jobs conference report.

So if the Senator from New Hampshire wishes to vote, I have no objection to doing it at this time. I appreciate his offer, however.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate on the amendment?

If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. Humphrey). The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DEXRON), the Senator from Arizona (Mr. Goldwater), and the Senator from Illinois (Mr. PSCY) are necessarily absent.

Mr. BAKER. The Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. DEXRON) would vote "nay."

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from California (Mr. CANSTRAWER) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES OF COMMISSION
On December 16, 1981, President Reagan proposed Executive Order 12315, which established the National Commission on Social Security Reform. The National Commission was created as a result of the convening of a Select Committee of the House of Representatives (the “Consensus” Committee), to agree on a comprehensive solution to the financial crisis facing the Social Security and Medicare programs.

The Executive Order provided that the National Commission should:
1. . . . review recent long-range trends in the cost and long-range financial condition of the Social Security trust funds; identify problems that may threaten the long-term solvency of such funds; analyze potential solutions to such problems; and that will both secure the financial integrity of the Social Security System and the provision of appropriate benefits; and provide appropriate recommendations to the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the President, and the Congress.

In carrying out its mandate, the National Commission met ten times, on approximately a monthly basis. Because of the brevity of the time in which to complete its work, the National Commission held no public hearings. However, it reviewed the testimony of the many hearings, studies, and reports of other public bodies, including Congress, the 1979 Advisory Council on Social Security, and the 1981 National Commission on Social Security. The National Commission on Social Security Reform sought the advice of a number of experts and thoroughly examined a wide variety of alternative approaches.

The Commission agreed that there was a financing problem for the Old-Age, Survivor, Disability and Health Insurance programs, both the short run, 1983-89 (as measured using pessimistic economic assumptions) and the long run, 1983-2056 (as measured using moderate economic assumptions) that action should be taken to strengthen the financial status of the programs. The Commission recognized that, under the international cost estimate, the financial status of the OASDI program in the 1980's and early 2000's will be favorable (i.e., income will significantly exceed the annual cost) but recognized that, under the international cost estimate, the financial status of the Hospital Insurance program becomes increasingly unfavorable from 1990 until the end of the period for which the estimates are made.

The Commission studied a large number of reforms that would solve the financing problems of the Social Security program, both short-term and long-range. These are summarized in some 55 pages of its report.

The Commission reached a con-consensus for meeting the short-range and long-range financial requirements, by a vote of 12 to 3. The Members of the Commission voting in favor of the “consensus” package agreed to a single set of proposals to meet the short-range deficit. They further agreed that the long-range deficit should be reduced to approximately zero. The single set of recommendation would meet about two-thirds of the long-range financial requirements.
Seven of the 12 members agreed that the remaining one-third of the long-range financial deficit would be met by a deferred, gradual increase in the normal retirement age, while the other 5 members agreed to an increase in the contribution rates. 2012, the normal retirement age would be automatically (on a phased-in basis) so that the ratio of the retirement-life expectancy to the potential working-life span (from age 20 to 65) is adjusted (on Annual additions to the trust fund are approximately $25 billion a year (in 1983 dollar terms), and providing additional financing through some form of revenue increase. Current and future beneficiaries should be assured by the bipartisan consent of the House and Senate committees that social security is an important and vital program that must be preserved.

With these accomplishments under our belts, in Congress are in a strong position to solve the problems of legislation in the early months of the 98th Congress. The expiration of interfund borrowing and the likely inability of the retirement program to pay full benefits in July make prompt action essential.

The financing problem

While the commission report accurately reflects the size of the social security financing problem, perspective may be provided by some additional data. If, for example, without prompt action, the social security retirement program will not be able to pay benefits on time, beginning in July. In fact, it was for the same reason that our proposal, not now expired (as of December 31, 1982), July is when all of the money borrowed from the other two trust funds—$75.5 billion in total—finally runs out.

Reauthorizing interfund borrowing cannot not help the retirement program for long. The retirement program is so large—and has large future deficits—its spending—and its borrowing demands are so heavy, the rest of the system could be insol-

Our judgment, $150-$200 billion is the amount required to keep the system (excluding medicare) solvent through 1990. Over the very long term, the next 75 years, the needs of the system amount to about $25 billion a year (in 1983 dollar terms) over and above currently scheduled tax income. Only a year ago, partisan lines were drawn between those on the left and did not believe there was any financing problem at all before the year 2000. In addition, the National Commission provides important new views on social security. With the able leadership of Chairman Alan Greenspan and with the expert assistance of Executive Director Robert Myers, members of both political parties were able to work together in studying the social security financing problem and options for financial reform. The interests of the elderly, organized labor and business, and the general taxpayer were all well represented. In recent years, we had intensive negotiations which were, to a large extent, absent of the political partisanship that so seriously damaged efforts for re-

We believe that the commission’s recommendations are significant in that they narrowed the range of realistic options for closing the deficits. Realistic options were discussed in the context of proposals to reduce or eliminate benefits for people now on the roles. Op-the growth of benefits in future years and providing additional financing through some form of revenue increase. Current and future beneficiaries should be assured by the bipartisan consent of the House and Senate committees that social security is an important and vital program that must be preserved.

will be to decrease the ratio of taxpayers to beneficiaries from just over 3:1 today to 2:1, helping to generate the enormous long-term deficits we now foresee.

According to the social security actuaries, the long-term balance of the social security programs is 1.8 percent of taxable payroll. This is the figure adopted by the National Commission. To translate it means that over the next 75 years, the actuaries project that beneficiaries will outstrip payroll tax income, in dollar terms, by about $25 billion per year, or $2 trillion in total (expressed in 1983 dollar terms).

A second issue is the size of the reserves, the long-term deficit has been estimated at 7.01 percent of taxable payroll, or nearly $8 trillion in total.

How much does the system need?

How much the system needs in additional financing depends on how we expect the economy to perform in the years ahead and how much of a “safety margin” is accumulated in reserves. Each set of forecasts provides a different view of the needs of the system, as illustrated in the table below.

1 Additional resources required to bring OASDI reserves up to certain level.

The commission settled on $150-$200 billion as the amount required in the years 1983-89 to ensure the solvency of the system through 1990. This is roughly consistent with achieving a reserve ratio (reserves relative to annual outgo) of 15 percent by 1990, under the 1982 Board of Trustees’ pessimistic assumptions.

Several points are worth noting in this regard. First, planning for a low growth decade is prudent in light of the experience in the past 5 years. The failure to anticipate, both in 1972 and 1977, that prices would go up far more rapidly than wages, and therefore benefits would grow more rapidly than tax income, is why we are in the situation we are in today. Second, a reserve ratio of 15 percent means, in and of itself, an “ideal”. At this level, reserves would be lower than at any point in history. Accumulating considerably larger reserves is desirable, although the public would be difficult to do very quickly. We believe we can express the views of all members of the commission when we say that it is not that the economy will perform better than we assumed when we made our estimates and that a larger reserve cushion will accumulate. Finally, if the medicare program were desirable, additional attention as well, the reserve needs of the system would be considerably higher.

Not a new problem

Given the partisan debate that raced over social security in 1981, some people may have lost sight of the fact that the financing crisis is not a new problem. Trust fund reserves have been on a down-hill course for years. As the table below indicates, prior to 1970, there were always reserves in the table below indicating the balance of a year’s worth of benefits of more—that is, reserves equal to 100 percent or more of annual outgo. By 1976, reserves had fallen to 57 percent of outgo, and today, the combined reserves of the system stand at about 15 percent of annual outgo, only 8 weeks worth of benefits. The situation is even worse, at least today, when medicare is excluded.

The time for action is now

There is no denying that we have a big job ahead of us in Congress. We face many difficult decisions as to the details of the legislation, and the adequacy of the measures proposed. The balance of the long-term deficit will also have to addressed. In our view, arolution to this problem will involve bringing the cost of social security into line with the ability of our working population to finance the system. The burden is too heavy for the confidence of young people critically low. As reflected in the additional views, a majority of commission members recommend increasing the retirement age, for people retiring in another 20 or 30 years, as an equitable way of reducing long-range costs.

The American people—the 36 million people receiving benefits as well as the 116 million beneficiaries of the system—deserve more than another “quick fix” that holds the system together until the next crisis comes along. They deserve the speedy transmission of this commission’s recommendations. Confidence in the long-term viability of social security will only be restored by enacting measures that put the system on a sound basis, thereby reducing public anxiety about its future.

Given the natter of weeks, the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee will begin the task of weighing the options and then drafting social security financing legislation. We feel confident that the essential elements of the reform package we now recommend, as endorsed by President Reagan, Speaker O’Neill, Majority Leader Baker and others. The staffs of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee will do without imposing an unrealistic tax burden on present and future workers.

Within the matter of weeks, the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee will begin the task of weighing the options and then drafting social security financing legislation. We feel confident that the essential elements of the reform package we now recommend, as endorsed by President Reagan, Speaker O’Neill, Majority Leader Baker and others.

Among other public groups to report in the last 5 to 10 years, the social security advisory councils of 1975 and 1979, an expert consultant panel of actuaries and economists, reporting in 1976, and President Carter’s Commission on Pension Policy and the National Commission on Social Security, both reporting in 1981, all underscored the seriousness of the short- and long-term financing problem. Social security’s financing problem dates to the early 1970s and even earlier, when Congress increased benefits and expanded eligibility without facing up to the cost of doing so.

Mr. Myer’s extensive knowledge of social security was invaluable to the work of the Commission and the people who helped to its success in completing its assignment. The Senator from Kansas is pleased that Mr. Myers is continuing his service to social security by currently serving as a consultant to the Commission on Finance.

The Senate from Kansas also wishes to take this opportunity to express his appreciation to the professional staff of the Commission for their success. In this great and successful endeavor, the staff labored and excellently in providing the members with data and with comprehensive explanations of the complex issues involved and the possible methods of solving the financing problems.

The staff members were as follows: Executive Director; Robert J. Myers. Professional Staff: Nancy J. Altman, Morton C. Bernstein, E. Annette Coates, Suzanne B. Diik, Renato A. DiPentina, Susan Given, Elizabeth T. Duskin, Timothy J. Kelley, Eric R. Kingon, Edward F. Moore, Virginia P. Reno, Bruce D. Schobel, and Carolyn L. Weaver.

Mr. BENGTSEN. Mr. President, I think that it is important to bring to the attention of my colleagues that the provision of the social security reform legislation that is placed in the re-66 will widen the gap between when airline pilots retire and when they are eligible to receive their social security benefits. Airline pilots are the only group in private industry that Federal regulations require to retire by the age of 60. The Federal Aviation Administration established this regulation in order to protect the safety of the American public, and I hope that my colleagues will bear this situation in mind as we are debating the social security reform measure before the Senate today.

Mr. JEPSEN. The distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee yield to me for a few questions about the self-employment section of the bill.

Mr. DOLE. I would be happy to do that.

Mr. JEPSEN. As the manager of the bill knows, there are many farmers who are very concerned about the increase in the self-employment tax. What with farm prices so low and interest payments so high, I have been contacted by many farmers who are worried that the proposed increase could put them out of business. Could the chairman just take a minute and briefly explain the increase and how the tax credit will work to offset some of the tax rate increase?

Mr. DOLE. Under the bill reported by the Finance Committee, the OASDI and HI taxes paid by the self-employed would be conform to the combined rates already paid by employers and employees. This means that the OASDI rate for the self-employed will rise from 7.5 percent to 15 percent of the employer-employee rate, and HI rates for the self-employed will rise from 50 percent of the employer-employee rate. The result of this will be in 1984, to increase the combined OASDI rate paid by the self-employed from 9.35 percent to 14 percent.

I would add that conforming the OASDI self-employed rates to the combined employer-employee rate was a major part of the bipartisan agreement which came out of the National Commission. In conference, the combined-employer-employee rate, the Finance Committee was following the lead of the House-passed bill. The main difference in our bill is the amount of the credit against the self-employed taxes that we allow: Our credit is more generous in each year and goes further in offsetting the effect of the self-employment tax rate increases.

Mr. JEPSEN. Now, could you give us some idea of what the actual increase would mean for an individual farmer who has a net farm income of $15,000? By this, I mean, could you tell us what the social security taxes would have been under current law, under the House-passed version of the bill, and under the Senate-passed version?

Mr. DOLE. Yes, and I think that comparison speaks well for our version of this legislation. Under current law, a self-employed farmer whose self-employment income of $15,000 in 1984 would pay $1,478 in self-employment taxes and $1,801 in income tax. Under the House-passed bill—which provides a 2.1-percent credit against self-employment tax in 1984—the net tax increase for that individual would be $307 in 1984. But under the Finance Committee bill, the net increase would only be $187. That is a significant difference, $120, and it results from the fact that the Finance Committee provided a 2.9-percent credit for the self-employed in 1984.

Mr. JEPSEN. Now how this tax credit, unlike the one that employees will get in 1984, it will continue, is that correct Senator? Can I have the assurance of the distinguished chairman that he will work in conference to make sure that the Senate's version of the tax credit is the one which is finally adopted?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator is correct. We have provided a permanent credit against self-employment taxes, defined as a percentage of self-employment income subject to those taxes. The percentage varies: 2.9 percent in 1984, 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, 2.1 percent between 1987 and 1989, and 2.3 percent in 1990 and after. I can assure the Senator that the members of the Finance Committee were very much concerned about the problems these higher tax rates cause for the self-employed. This package does call on everyone to sacrifice a bit, but we did not feel the self-employed should be asked to give up more than their share. I am confident that our version in conference will be adopted.

Mr. DOLE. My version is adopted here, and will work with me to preserve the Senate's position in conference.

Mr. JEPSEN. Suppose a farmer had no net farm income during the tax year, something that is all too common nowadays, would the farmer have to pay any social security taxes?

Mr. DOLE. No, the farmer would not have to pay any social security tax.

Mr. JEPSEN. A number of farmers have indicated to me that because of the high income tax rates these farmers pay, they would prefer corporate status. With regard to this portion of the social security tax, there is a strong incentive in this bill for farmers to incorporate and operate their farms as corporations rather than as self-employed businessmen and women. Could the chairman comment on this. Is it your opinion that the proposal with regard to the self-employed constitutes a strong incentive to incorporate?

Mr. DOLE. It may be true that farmers who pay taxes in the upper brackets—where the deduction for the employer's share becomes most meaningful—there may be some reason to prefer corporate status. With regard to lower and moderate income farmers, I think this is a problem. In fact, the reason both the House bill and our bill adopted the SECA credit approach was to equalize the tax relief among different income groups, which the deduction proposed by the National Commission would not have done. In any event, I would say to the Senator, if there is such an incentive it already exists under present law: I do not know that there would be many situations where the increase in self-employment taxes per se would provide a strong additional incentive to incorporate. Certainly that is not the intention of our committee, nor was it the intention of the National Commission.

Mr. JEPSEN. What about the tax break an employer receives relative to his portion of the social security tax. Does not that have a tendency to discriminate against the self-employed businessman because he cannot take advantage of that tax break?

Mr. DOLE. As the Senator may know, the original proposal by the National Commission was to allow the self-employed a deduction for half of the social security taxes they pay, to be taken for income tax purposes. We, like the House, have provided a credit instead of a deduction that is more equitable and more generous to the self-employed. Therefore, I would not agree that the Finance Committee bill, in this regard, is less generous to the self-employed than the House-passed bill. After all, employers do not get the credit against social security tax that we have provided for the self-employed.

Mr. JEPSEN. I appreciate the responses of the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee. With his answers will help many farmers have a better understanding of what this proposal will mean for them so they can plan accordingly.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I take this opportunity to comment on a small and perhaps little noticed provision of the social security bill. The provision, which embodies a bill I introduced earlier this year, disallows social security benefits to incarcerated felons. My thanks go to Chairman Dole of the Senate Finance Committee for his efforts to incorporate my bill in the finance committee package.

Section 123 of S. 1 places limitations on social security payments to prisoners by making inmates of penal institutions ineligible for social security benefits. It should be noted that an individual's right to the benefits would be restored upon parole, pardon, or completion of the sentence. Furthermore, benefits for any eligible dependents would continue to be paid. It is not my intent to take such dependents off of social security's role and place them on welfare roles.

This measure is an extension of legislation adopted by the 96th Congress which tightened up eligibility requirements for prisoners receiving disability insurance. However, it goes a step or two further by eliminating the loophole whereby incarcerated felons could receive disability insurance if they were enrolled in a rehabilitation program; and also by halting retirement payments to prisoners.

The basic goal in adopting such a law is not to generate revenues. While we cannot become so accustomed to talking about billions of dollars that we forget to pick up a million or two when given the opportunity, the thrust of this provision is to restore confidence in the social security system. Such public confidence is sorely lacking among today's workers and retirees. I am sure all of my colleagues have heard comments from their constituents maligning the fact that prisoners are receiving social security benefits. Such a discovery does not set well with Americans who are already paying hard-earned dollars though their taxes for the support of such prisoners. It is inconceivable that Congress can consider increasing taxes, or can consider slowing the growth in benefits for future retirees, without addressing such an obvious inequity in the current system.

The inclusion of this change will send a much-needed signal to Americans that Congress is serious about preserving the integrity of social security. One issue that has surfaced again and again throughout the consideration of social security reforms is the lack of public confidence in social security. We can begin to restore such confidence and a sense of fairness with provisions such as this.

Again, I thank the chairman for his assistance in seeing this provision included in the final Finance Committee report. Our efforts to eliminate similar aberrations in the social security system should not stop here. We should continue in this vein to halt the draining of scarce social security funds to such unintended recipients.

Mr. PACKWOOD. I would like to ask clarification of a point raised by S. 1, the social security bill. Section 150 of S. 1 adds to the Internal Revenue Code new sections 3121(r)(1)(B) and 3306(v)(1)(B) which include in the definition of wages for social security and unemployment tax purposes any employer contribution to a cafeteria plan which includes a qualified cash or deferred arrangement to the extent the employee had the right to choose cash, property, or other benefits which would be wages for those purposes. I understand this to mean that, if a cafeteria plan does not include a qualified cash or deferred arrangement, employees who elect benefits such as day-care assistance, which are not otherwise subject to social security tax or unemployment tax, will not be subject to those taxes solely because they could have chosen cash, property, or other benefits that would have been subject to those taxes.

Mr. DOLE. That is also my understanding of the meaning and intent of these provisions.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Regarding these same provisions mentioned by Senator Packwood, I understand that a cafeteria plan will not be considered to include a cash or deferred arrangement unless the cafeteria plan contains provisions whereby contributions to the plan may be applied to provide benefits under the cash or deferred arrangement or vice-versa. In other words, these provisions will not apply solely because an employer offers a cafeteria plan with cash as one of the benefits and also offers a separate qualified cash or deferred arrangement.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT
AMENDMENTS OF 1983

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the unfinished business.
The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the Baucus amendment.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, Senator Baucus, I understand, is on his way to the floor and has not yet reached the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary of the Senate proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. SPECTER. Yes.
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the distinguished majority leader indicated earlier that we still have a number of amendments. It is my hope to move very quickly on this measure. I hope that Senators who have amendments will come to the floor and maybe we can, on an amendment-by-amendment basis, if there is any indication or inclination, have a time agreement. Otherwise, maybe we can move very quickly without time agreements. It is the hope of the Senator from Kansas that Senators will not spend a great deal of time on their amendments. We understand their amendments.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I see the Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) is on the floor. I wonder if we might take up his amendment while we await the Senator from Montana.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I thank the distinguished chairman.

Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will take unanimous consent to set aside the Baucus amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will state the Moynihan amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 120.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill add the following new section:

SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS

Sec. 205(c)(2) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) The Secretary shall issue a social security card to each individual at the time of the issuance of a social security account number to such individual. The social security card shall be made of banknote paper, and to the maximum extent practicable, shall be a card which cannot be counterfeited."
(b) The amendment made by this section shall apply with respect to all new and replacement social security cards issued more than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall report to the Congress on his plans for implementing the amendment made by this section.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, this is an amendment identical in language to that which the Senate passed 2 years ago which was, unfortunately, rejected in the conference. It simply provides that, 193 days after the enactment of this legislation, which is to say half a year, the Social Security Administration begin to issue social security cards on banknote paper which, to the maximum extent practicable, cannot be counterfeited. The costs involved are modest but the cost of the failure to do this, according to the General Accounting Office, is enormous. They have estimated that fraud, involving fraudulaent identification papers issued by the Federal Government, most particularly the social security card, costs upwards of $3 billion a year.

The card we use today, if I may say, is still the same pasteboard card of 50 years ago. Just recently, I asked for a card I had lost to be replaced. It is no more than a simple bit of cellophane paper, readily counterfeited; indeed, available on street corners in most ports of entry of the United States of America. And the paper with which it is made is very little more and last much longer. It would not be counterfeitproof. At great cost and effort, you can counterfeit them as you counterfeit hundred-dollar bills, but in the main, it is not a successful venture and does not very much occur.

This is a modest amendment, Mr. President, a matter long overdue. The Social Security Administration has indicated its intent to do this but has never done it.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this Senator has no objection to the amendment. In fact, I believe it is a good amendment and should have been adopted before. I am prepared to accept the amendment. I know it has been cleared with the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. LONG. I have no objection, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 120) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 935

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary of the Senate called the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, when the Baucus amendments are disposed of, the Senator from Kansas will then offer a series of technical amendments. We believe that they have been at least explored by staff on both sides. They are important. It is important that they be adopted. When we conclude work on the Baucus amendments, the Senator from Kansas will then offer the technical amendments.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.
Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have an amendment prepared which I am going to offer, but I will wait just a few minutes while the amendment is being modified in accordance with an agreement that we have just reached with the chairman of the committee.

Let me just say a few words about the amendment while it is being modified. The modification should not take more than a few minutes.

The general thrust of the amendment is to provide a credit to small businesses for the increase in social security payroll taxes in 1984 that employers will have to pay under the committee's bill.

As you will recall, Mr. President, the national commission recommended, and the House and the Senate Finance Committee have agreed, that the payroll tax increase scheduled to go into effect in 1985 will be accelerated to 1984. In addition, employees will get a full credit against their income taxes for that increased tax. The amendment that I am offering will provide a similar credit to small businesses.

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) yesterday offered an amendment to repeal the proposed acceleration of payroll tax increases in this decade. This body did not agree with that amendment. This Senator, in fact, voted against that amendment because such an amendment would, in my judgment, jeopardize the national commission's package, which I think in the main most of us want to support.

AMENDMENT NO. S35, AS MODIFIED

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, at this time I send the amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is so modified.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The modification is as follows:

MODIFICATION TO BAUCUS AMENDMENT NO. S35

On page 4 line 17 substitute the following line:

(1) Shall not exceed $300.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I do not know if the version of the amendment at the desk contains the modification or not. I will read the modification if it is so appropriate.

On page 4 line 17, substitute the following line: (1) Shall not exceed $300.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator send the modification to the desk?

Mr. BAUCUS. I do so. Mr. President. Mr. President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I will not take much time because we have reached agreement on this amendment with the chairman of the committee.

Let me say at this point that the amendment I originally planned to offer would have provided for a $500 cap on the tax credit. That is, no employer would be entitled to receive more than $500 in credits during the year.

The amendment also provides that the credit would go to only those firms with 50 or fewer employees.

In discussing the amendment with the chairman of the committee, we were somewhat concerned about the cost of this amendment. The estimates are approximately $900 million with a $500 cap. Like the credit being given to workers in 1984, this money comes from general revenues, not from the Social Security trust funds. Employers will simply take this credit into account when they make their regular FICA payments.

It seems to me, Mr. President, that because this amendment is designed for small business it is reasonable to lower the cap to $300.

This is a small business amendment. It is especially targeted to provide full relief for our very smallest businesses—those with 10 or fewer employees. We all know the importance of small business in our country. We also know that increased payroll taxes tend to adversely affect small business more compared to big business. Even though all businesses as employers will have to pay the increase in payroll taxes, big business is more easily able to accommodate those increases because bigger businesses generally can more easily pass on those costs in terms of the products they sell. In contrast, the nature of small business is such that it generally is in less of a position to pass those costs along.

Mr. President, small business is our most productive and, at the same time, most hard-pressed economic sector. They need this relief. Although this proposal represents a modest draw on the Treasury, we believe that this amendment will encourage and assist small businesses as they begin to expand production and employment during what we hope will be a period of economic recovery in 1984. This amendment is all the more important since we look to our small business community as a key force in creating new jobs. According to recent studies, small business accounts for more than half of all new jobs in America. It would be counterproductive for us to impose higher regressive payroll taxes on the same employers we are depending on to hire our unemployed.

If any sector of our economy deserves special consideration within the context of the social security debate, it is the small business community. These employers ought to be given at least the same relief that we have extended to their employees.

The value of this credit to our small business community is immense. In fact, the National Federation of Independent Business has called this amendment "The most important small business vote of the 98th Congress to date."

I favor the National Commission's package. I think most of us do. I do not want to offer an amendment or support an amendment which, in my judgment, will break open the package. This amendment does not do so. It does not break open the package. The revenue loss, not to the trust funds but to the general fund, will be significantly lower than $900 million. Estimates at the time of the amendment were approximately $900 million plus a cap of $300.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. BAUCUS. I am delighted to yield.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Will the Senator add me as a cosponsor?

Mr. BAUCUS. I would be very happy to.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. Boschwitze) be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this amendment has broad support from many Members and from many small business groups. In addition to Senator QUAYLE and Senator BOSCHWITZ, cosponsors of this amendment include Senators Nunn, Sasser, Gorton, Pryor, Huddleston, and Abdnor.

I want to compliment particularly the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) who has worked with this Senator in drafting this amendment and made some helpful suggestions. We have included those in this effort, and I think this body should be aware of his help.

I also want to pay particular tribute to the chairman of the committee, the Senator from Florida (Mr. quayle) who has worked with us and suggested this compromise, which I will agree with, which is to lower the cap from $500 to $300 per employer.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following four letters from supporting small business organizations be included in the Record, as if read.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF WHOLESALE-DISTRIBUTORS.

Hon. MAX BAUCUS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Senator Baucus: This is to express the strong support of the National Association of Wholesale-Distributors 121 member national associations and their 45,000 member companies for your proposed amendment to include a one-year employer tax credit for 1984 to offset the substantial increase in FICA payroll taxes mandated by the social security bill now on the Senate floor.

Increased payroll taxes are not only a disincentive to job creation, they are a significant drain on the cash flow of closely-held wholesaler-distributors at a time of economic recovery.

Moreover, the social security compromise includes a one-year tax credit for employees and self-employed for 1984 to alleviate their increased tax burden.

Parity dictates employers should also be given the same consideration.

Sincerely,

John H. Hitz, Jr.,
Vice President,
Government Relations.

NATIONAL AUDIO-VISUAL ASSOCIATION, INC.,
Fairfax, Va., March 22, 1983.

Hon. Max S. Baucus,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR BAUCUS: On behalf of the 800 members of NAVA, the International Communications Industries Association, I am writing to urge your support for my amendment to S. 1, the Social Security Refinancing bill, which will give small employers a credit for the 1984 increase in FICA.

The sharp increases in Social Security payments by both employees and employers have been burdens which have fallen most heavily on small firms. In our case, the combination of the severe economic downturn, high interest rates, the steep rise in FICA taxes, and the rise in the cost of doing business have resulted in losses for many firms.

Companies which have been hurt by productivity gains resulting from the Federal government through taxes are unable to pay due to losses. Capital that could have been invested has been drained away.

We share your concern for strengthening the Social Security System. We are well aware of the need to ensure that the burdens are carried in an equitable way along the path to restored stability in the system.

With most of our member firms having well under 50 employees, we strongly support the amendment which will assure that the burden of the 1984 increase will be lightened for small businesses in a very modest but effective way. We are pleased to join the American Small Business Association in supporting your amendment.

We wish you every success in getting this amendment passed.

Sincerely,

Kenton Pattie,
Senior Staff Vice President.

SMALL BUSINESS UNITED,

Hon. Max S. Baucus,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR BAUCUS: Small Business United, a coalition of sixteen regional, state and metropolitan trade associations representing over 50,000 small businesses nationwide, supports your amendment to the Social Security reform package, providing a tax credit for payroll taxes paid by any business with fewer than 50 employees.

We urge your amendment to make more equal footing with their employees, and as such it is a fair amendment. Payroll taxes are a tax on jobs and not on profits. The amendment would help small firms from hiring the nation's unemployed. We would have preferred the amendment be applicable to small concerns with 500 or fewer employees (the Small Business Administration's size standard for small firms), but we believe the amendment as currently drafted still represents a significant improvement in the reform package.

Thank you for offering it.

Sincerely,

G. THOMAS CATO,
Washington Counsel to SBU.

NATIONAL SMALL BUSINESS ASSOCIATION,

Hon. Max S. Baucus,
Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR BAUCUS: The National Small Business Association strongly supports your amendment to provide a one-time tax credit for small business employers who are being subjected to a speed up in Social Security payroll tax payments.

Your amendment, which limits the credit to a maximum of $500 per employer with 50 or fewer employees, will certainly assist these small employers who are paying inadvertently high payroll taxes.

We thank you for your efforts on behalf of the small business community.

Sincerely,

Jerome R. Glas,
Vice President,
Government Affairs.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, the amendment I offer today with Senator Baucus would provide small businesses with some tax relief in 1984, a year in which we hope that these businesses will be able to provide our people with expanded job opportunities as we enter a period of economic recovery.

While the amendment involves a short-term, 1-year cost, it represents an investment that will be greatly appreciated by small firms now trying to expand their production capacities.

Mr. President, the current social security system places a very heavy burden on small businesses. A vast number of businesses pay more in social security tax than they pay in income tax. The cost of social security taxes to small employers is one factor which makes it difficult for them to consider expanding their levels of employment; the employer payroll contribution per employee is a high cost to small profit, small work force business.

I think we should not forget that small businesses in America are just emerging from their most difficult year since the 1930's. Bankruptcy rates reached their highest levels since those difficult days of the Depression. New hires are at anemic levels, and profit margins are very low. Now is clearly not the time to increase the tax burden on our small businesses. Small business is historically the sector where new jobs are created, and we should not do anything to discourage the growth and expansion which will take people off the unemployment rolls.

Mr. President, the purpose of this amendment is to assist small business out of its recent and current state of decline. The cost of adding capacity and new employment for small business is made worse by the operation of our social security system which requires employers to pay significant amounts of tax for every employee they hire. Small business, which can be expected to create a very large proportion of new jobs in the current recovery, is particularly sensitive to increases in the social security payroll tax rate. Every employee added is a more expensive investment for the employer.

We hope and trust that fiscal year 1984 will be a year of expansion and prosperity for all Americans. For this to happen, small business must be able to expand and provide new job opportunities. New positions must be made available for young people and for mature workers who have lost jobs in this period. A tax credit of $300 is a small investment, that would counteract the proposed tax increase; it is a 1-year (fiscal year 1984), one-shot expense—but would go into effect at the right time—when business is expanding and creating new jobs.

Our amendment would provide employers with 50 or fewer employees a tax credit in the amount of $300 for the year 1984. This would offset the 0.3 percent OASDI tax increase scheduled to go into effect for employers next year.

We have decided to target this benefit to employers with 50 or fewer employees because of economic and equity considerations. We do not believe it is economically useful to extend this credit to firms with a greater number of employees. The potential job creating or preserving impact of this measure will be, as I mentioned earlier, among smaller businesses. Many large firms may not even bother to claim the credit in the first place. Additionally, we do not believe the positive impact of the savings will be felt by firms with more than 50 employees which historically do not alter their hiring plans, nor see their profit margin eroded in any significant degree, because of the schedule increase.

All told, over 95 percent of all employees in the country would qualify for this credit. This represents over 4 million of the 4.2 million firms in the United States. Only very large companies, which do not need the relief, will be ineligible for this 1-year credit.

Mr. President, the cost of this amendment will be approximately $600 million from the General Treasury. This represents a very small cost, in view of the other major changes we are now considering for our social security system. The effect of this amendment will be to relieve, for 1 year only, a burden on a part of the business community which really needs tax relief. Furthermore, it provides this relief at a crucial time in the current recovery when the potential job-creating impact should be uppermost in our minds.
As we have repeated several times, we are advancing this idea as a small measure to ease the burden of the increase in the employer contribution next year on this Nation's small businesses. We all know that the economic and regulatory burden on small businesses because of Federal statutes can often make the difference between success and failure.

Our amendment allows qualified businesses to take a $300 credit against their social security taxes, and defines qualified small businesses as those with fewer than 50 employees. It is not our intent to generate a new set of reporting requirements or forms for certifying eligibility for this credit. For a credit this size, especially for very small businesses which often have no more than one or two employees, such an addition to the paperwork and reporting requirement would be contradictory to the intended purpose of the amendment. So let me just insist that we intend that a simple self-certification of eligibility would be sufficient to establish eligibility for this credit, and that no new reporting requirements be imposed as a result of this amendment.

Mr. President, I urge all of my colleagues to support this amendment as a small yet much needed measure of relief to the small businesses which are leading us in the emerging economic recovery.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have no other points to make at this time, since we have reached an agreement.

Mr. President, before the Senator from Montana modifies the amendment to lower the cap to $300, I would point out that this was not part of the amendment recommended by the National Commission. We felt employers could already in good faith represent to the other body the opinion of this body.

If the chairman will fight hard for this amendment in conference, I will not ask for a rollcall vote.

Mr. DOLE. We did some checking in advance and found there was a lot of support for this. So I can safely say that had it not been modified, in my view, it would have 60 or 65 votes; and with the modification, I think it has substantially every vote.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAUCUS. I think the Senator from Kansas has the floor.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I want to say that a 99-to-0 vote is trivial compared to the good will and energetic advocacy of the Senator from Kansas. So I congratulate the Senator from Montana on his prudence.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I rise today as a cosponsor to the Baucus/Quayle amendment which provides small business relief from the 1984 payroll tax increase contained in this bill.

This amendment is rather modest in its scope but provides the type of relief that is urgently needed in the small business sector. The increase of social security costs to employers contained in this package will prove most burdensome to our Nation's small firms. This amendment decreases the economic shock of this increase without jeopardizing the basic funding structure set forth in the social security package.

We need to take this type of action because of the role small businesses play in our economy. This is our most productive segment of our economy. It is a source of economic innovation in our country and unfortunately it is the hardest hit segment of the economy during this recession.

In Tennessee, 58,922 firms out of a total of 77,328 firms have fewer than 10 employees. The amazing fact about these small establishments is the impact they have had on employment in Tennessee. Between 1979 and 1981 overall employment in the State decreased by 0.2 percent. However, those firms with fewer than five employees saw a 16.8-percent increase in employment for this same period.

In addition, firms with less than 100 employees constitute 80 percent of the manufacturing companies, 80 percent of the construction firms, 61 percent of the wholesale operations, 98 percent of the service companies and 99 percent of the finance, insurance, and real estate operations in Tennessee. These small firms contributed about 45 percent of the State's total payroll last year while producing roughly half of Tennessee's $59 billion in goods and services.

The sad truth of the situation Mr. President is that these firms, which mean so much not only to the economy of Tennessee, but also to our Nation's economic well-being, are not receiving their fair share of tax breaks. The Internal Revenue Code is full of items that benefit our large businesses, but there is little in the Tax Code that serves as an incentive to or comes to the assistance of small business.

The amendment we offer today seeks to remedy that situation at least in regard to this social security bill. The small businesses and women of this country are willing to support the social security compromise so long as it is an equitable solution. The Baucus/Quayle amendment takes a large step in that direction, and I strongly urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 535), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE, Mr. President, before the Senator from Montana offers the next amendment, I wonder if we might take up a couple of noncontroversial amendments. It will take about 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the Quayle amendment.

Mr. DOLE. I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my name be added as a cosponsor of the Baucus amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 121 (Purpose: To provide that payments to FRO's shall be treated as the same as payments for benefits for purposes of transfers from the trust fund)

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota (Mr. DURENBERGER) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 121.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:
On page 154, line 12, strike out "budget approved" and insert "rate per review established".

On page 154, line 10, strike out "but" and insert "and (i)".

On page 154, line 12, after "Secretary" insert "(ii)" shall be transferred from the Trust Fund, without regard to amounts appropriated in advance in appropriation Acts, in the same manner as transfers are made for payments directly provided to beneficiaries, and (iii) shall not be less than an amount which reflects the rates per review established in fiscal year 1982 for both direct and administrative costs, adjusted for inflation.

On page 141, line 10, before the comma insert "(excluding payments made under section 1866 (a) (1) (F))".

On page 141, line 17, before the semicolon insert "(excluding payments made under section 1866 (a) (1) (F))".

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the amendment I offer goes beyond setting out our intent to establish utilization and quality control peer review. Our intent was made clear when this amendment was adopted during the peer review provision contained in TEFRA last year. This amendment goes as far as possible to insure that the TEFRA provision is implemented.

With this amendment, it is possible to fund peer review organization activities without the uncertainty associated with the appropriation process. The costs of peer review, both direct and administrative, are deemed to be costs incurred in providing inpatient services under part A. While not included in the prospective rates, the Secretary, on behalf of the hospital, would be required to pay for these costs out of the hospital insurance trust fund. In addition, as a minimum, hospital insurance trust funds would be paid to PRO's at rates no less than the rates per review established for fiscal year 1982 for both direct and administrative costs adjusted for inflation.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, the amendment has not been cleared with the distinguished Senator from Louisiana. I know of no objection to the amendment, but I do want to clear it with the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I suggest that the Senator be kind enough to have the amendment laid aside, and I am sure we can clear it up within the next 45 minutes. The Senator from New York is in full agreement.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 120, line 7, strike out "and".

On page 120, line 4, after "the" insert "and (ii)".

On page 120, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:

"(E) the Secretary determines that the system requires hospitals to meet the requirement of sections 1862(a)(14) and 1866(a)(1)(G)."

On page 121, line 15, insert "and (E)" after "(D)".

On page 123, line 2, strike out "(D)" and insert "(D), and (E)".

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, this amendment closes a loophole in the situation where States are granted a waiver to establish their own hospital cost control systems. That loophole makes it possible for hospitals under a State system to shift costs by unbundling their services. For example, laboratory tests for hospital inpatients may be billed by an outside lab and paid as part B services, thereby allowing a hospital to circumvent the cost controls imposed by a State system.

Except for a provision already incorporated in the bill by the Finance Committee, this same loophole would be created if the repeal of the prospective payment system is not included. It is necessary to take the same action with respect to State systems established under the waiver authority contained in this bill. As long as we allow the States to establish cost control systems we must take the same action with respect to these systems.

Mr. President, with the understanding we had on the previous amendment, I ask unanimous consent that this amendment be temporarily laid aside.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, before that order, the Senator from Kansas has no objection to the amendment. They are both good amendments, but I do not see that the Senator from Kansas is in full agreement.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Under those circumstances, it would be appropriate for the Senator from Kansas to proceed with these amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is laid aside.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas has been looking over a list of amendments. I hope that it is the complete list. We have disposed of five amendments this morning, so we are making some progress.

Senator BAUCUS will be returning in a moment to take up his second amendment. I also have on the list at least one amendment by Senator Lemke which, if approved, will authorize the Senator from Minnesota to exclude tax-exempt income in the determination of taxable benefits; an amendment by the distinguished President Pro Tempore, Senator PRESSLER, liberalizing the earnings limitation for the blind. We have been trying to determine some way to accommodate the Senator on the amendment, but we have not been able to do that as yet.

There are two or three amendments on the coverage of Federal employees which, in the view of the manager of the bill, should be treated or discussed all at about the same time.

There will be an amendment by the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ARMSTRONG) covering nonprofits and the Senator from Hawaii, Senator MUSMAGA, may have an amendment dealing with certain people who retire in the next 10 years who are now included in the aliens provisions.

There may be an amendment offered by the Senator from Kansas with reference to health care coverage. But so far as the Senator from Kansas knows, there are no other amendments. If we do not go to conference this afternoon and complete the conference sometime between now and tomorrow morning, then I assume it will be most of tomorrow in conference. If we know we shall be treated or discussed all at about the same time.

So we are prepared, where we can, to try to accommodate Senator. We can negotiate their amendments. If not, we certainly would like to have them offered and brought to a vote.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this is a purely a technical amendment and clears up a lot of drafting errors. This has been cleared on both sides of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 123) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Mr. PRESSES., Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 121

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, pending are two amendments offered by the distinguished Senator from Minnesota (Mr. DURENBEEGER). They were temporarily laid aside while we cleared the amendment with the distinguished ranking minority member, Senator Long.

I am now authorized to announce that these amendments have been cleared and we are prepared to proceed to the adoption of the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments en bloc of the Senator from Minnesota.

The amendments (UP No. 121 and UP No. 122) were agreed to en bloc.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were agreed to en bloc and also move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 534

(Formerly UP Amendment No. 111.)

Mr. DOLE. What is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) is the pending business.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I know the Senator from Montana is about ready to offer an amendment, so I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.
We are in the last hours of this enterprise, and the sense of urgency about it seems all but to have evaporated. There is a real crisis where, perhaps, others had been created, if I may make that play on words.

May I offer my gentle encouragement to the chairman's more firm request that Members come to the floor with their amendments so that we might conclude this matter in good time?

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I wish to say to the managers that Senator Boren is on his way to the floor.

One of the problems we have is we have scheduled an informal roll call and we should have objected to committees sitting today. But Members are torn between their responsibilities to go to committees and their responsibility to be here, and I have seen this happen before.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, and we will soon have a Senator who will have an amendment.

I was asked if I should put in a quorum. I said it was not necessary, we will just take the Senate roll along. But it seems not a bad idea if I suggested the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BAKER. We could yield back all the time.

Mr. BYRD. Those words have a familiar ring to them.

I support the absence of a quorum unless the majority leader has something else in mind.

Mr. BAKER. No, I support that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The acting assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would take unanimous consent to set aside the quayle amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the quayle amendment be temporarily set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 124

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Boren) proposes an unprinted amendment No. 124.

On page 116, in line 7 strike "$25,000" and insert in its place "$20,000." On page 116, in line 8 strike "$32,000" and insert in its place "$36,000."

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, this is a very simple and straightforward amendment. It really is an issue of philosophy more than anything else because it is revenue neutral. In other words, the provision does not change at all the current status. It is being raised in terms of benefits and additional revenues for the social security system. Simply eliminates the marriage penalty imposed by thresholds for the taxation of social security benefits.

H.R. 1900 sets the threshold for taxation of social security benefits at $25,000 for individuals and at $32,000 for couples. In other words, we will begin to tax one-half of the social security benefit after an individual has income of $25,000 or more and after a couple has income of $35,000 or more. This approach imposes a very significant penalty upon married couples.

It is clear that if you had two single individuals living in the same household, they would be able to jointly have $50,000 of income before any of their social security benefits would become taxable. But in the case of a married couple, they would only be allowed, under the present package, to have $32,000 of income. So we are dealing with a very significant marriage penalty.

To alleviate this problem, the amendment which I have offered proposes to set those thresholds at $20,000 for individuals and $36,000 for joint filers, keeping the rates the same. This change, as I have said, will generate the same amount of revenue as would the thresholds in H.R. 1900, and the amendment is thus revenue neutral.

But, more importantly, however, eliminating the marriage penalty will remove the disincentive for marriage among recipients of taxable social security benefits.

Mr. President, I realize that this amendment is not totally without some controversy. It would mean lowering the thresholds for individuals if we are going to keep it revenue neutral, and I believe that is the only responsible way to do it so that we do not upset revenue figures of this package.

We have set the figure at $20,000 for individuals. With the changes that have been adopted by the committee to avoid the notch problem, it is possible that there would be some very slight amount of taxation at levels slightly below the $20,000 under the sliding scale which has been adopted.

I simply think that we should not have another area of law where we again write in a marriage penalty. We worked for many years now to try to remove the marriage penalty as much as possible from the income tax law.

In fact, this suggestion came to me in a series of public meetings which I held in my own State shortly after the first of the year. They were the vast attended meetings that I have ever had. It was a philosophical issue of a series of public meetings. He raised a very serious question had been asked in a number of meetings. He raised a very serious question, and it is not possible, to avoid going below the $20,000 figure as a threshold for the taxation of benefits, and also those figures were chosen so that we could be sure that we wrote this amendment in a form that would make it revenue neutral. It would not impose an additional revenue burden on the taxes which have already been worked out.

I think that pretty well explains it, Mr. President. There is certainly room for a difference of opinion on this. I would not philosophically think it is important that we not go into another area of law and begin by having the marriage penalty as a part of it. I think this is a matter appropriately that the Senate should at least consider and make its own judgment up.

I believe I have adequately explained the provision. There should not be any necessity, at least on my part, for a prolonged debate on this matter.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma. He did discuss this in the committee and he did indicate that this question had been asked in a number of meetings. He raised a very serious philosophical question. I think the problem that we had at the committee level, and also when we discussed this problem at the National Commission level, was that the amendment would create wide differences between the benefit taxation threshold for singles and couples in order to reduce the marriage penalty effect while still raising the same amount of revenue for the trust funds.

The Senator is correct, this revenue is neutral. This does not do anything to individuals who do not have the income. We have in the trust funds. However, we are advised that the effect for singles is to begin taxing at income levels of around $16,000, significantly lower than the $19,000 threshold recommended by the National Commission.
We are also advised that because of the differences in demographics between the group affected by the benefit taxation and the group affected by the general income tax marriage penalty that there will be more single-filing widows or widowers under this provision.

What I certainly think, as the Senator has indicated, it should be considered by the Senate, we struggled with the thresholds for a long time. The present threshold, as the Senator outlined, is $25,000 for singles and $32,000 for couples. Under his proposal, it would be $20,000 for singles and $36,000 for couples.

While this Senator can understand the reason to try to correct the marriage penalty, which we focused on in the 1981 tax bill—we did not do it all but we did go part way—I would hope that the amendment would not be accepted, though I understand the problem, because it would create this rather wide variance between singles and couples and would, as I have indicated, probably permit or authorize the tax benefit for singles at income levels over $16,000.

For those reasons, I hope the amendment will not be accepted.

Did the Senator want a rollcall?

Mr. BOREN. Mr. President, I would like to have a rollcall on this amendment.

I appreciate the comments of the distinguished chairman of the committee. I do understand the argument he makes. The truth of the matter is that neither way is the right way. We cannot be exactly perfect. I do hope that if for any reason this amendment is not accepted, we will come back to this point at a later time and try to work on it. I do think this is an important enough philosophical question in terms of the taxation benefits that we should vote on it.

I would point out that any taxation on income below $20,000 would be very minimal because it is simply a phase into the $20,000 figure to avoid the problem.

Mr. President, I think the issue has been pretty well clarified. I do ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Oklahoma. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. ANSCHUSS) and the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DEWREY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Alabama (Mr. DEWREY) would vote “nay.”

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) would vote “nay.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. KASTEN). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 62, as follows:

So Mr. BOREN’S amendment (UP No. 124) was rejected.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To prevent double payment of Social Security taxes on compensation paid to medical school faculty members)

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to laying aside the Quayle amendment?

Without objection, the Quayle amendment is laid aside.

The amendment of the Senator from Washington will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington (Mr. GORTON), for himself and Mr. JACKSON, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. SVOMS, and Mr. mcCLure, proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 125.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

Sec. 2. Teachers of Medicine—Section 5102 (c) (relating to concurrent employment by two or more employers) is amended to read as follows:

(1) CONCURRENT EMPLOYMENT BY TWO OR MORE EMPLOYERS.

(A) Necessity. For purposes of sections 3102, 3111, and 3121 (a)(1), if two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate such individual through a common paymaster which is one of such corporations, such corporation shall be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual only the amounts actually disbursed by it to such individual and shall not be considered to have paid as remuneration to such individual amounts actually disbursed to such individual as remuneration by another corporation.

(B) Exemption Organizations.—For purposes of this subsection—

(i) a state university which employs health care professionals as faculty members at a medical school; and

(ii) a faculty practice plan qualified as an exempt organization under section 501(c)(3) which employs faculty members of such medical school; Provided, however, that 30 percent or more of the employees of such plan are concurrently employed by such medical school; and

(B) remuneration which

(i) is disbursed by such faculty practice plan to an individual employed by both such entities, and shall be deemed to have been actually disbursed by such university as a common paymaster and not to have been actually disbursed by such faculty practice plan.

Mr. Gorton. Mr. President, on March 18, last Friday, this body adopted an amendment numbered 85, offered by myself and the Senators from Alaska, Washington, and Idaho, relating to the common paymaster doctrine and the joint employees of State medical schools and faculty practice plans.

That amendment was technically deficient in one or two minor respects and did not cover the situation of the University of Colorado, which I had represented it was designed to cover at that time.

I ask unanimous consent that the amendment I have just proposed be substituted for amendment No. 85.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 126.

Mr. Long. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Without objection, the Quayle amendment is laid aside, and the Senator from Louisiana is recognized.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 9, strike out lines 13 through 15 and insert the following:

"(c) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983, if, prior to such date, there has been enacted into law a civil service retirement system program for Federal workers hired after such date which the Congress may determine to be appropriate to coordinate coverage under the Federal Civil Service Retirement System with the coverage of such Federal workers under title II of the Social Security Act. If no such program has been enacted by such date, the amendments made by this section shall not become effective until (and with respect to remuneration paid after) the last day of the month ending at least 20 days after the date of enactment of such a program, as provided in the preceding sentence, and all references to "December 31, 1983" in section 210(a)(5) of the Social Security Act and section 3121(b)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1984 shall be deemed to be references to the last day of such later month. Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subsection, the amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983 in the case of service described in clauses (1), (ii), or (iii) of section 210(a)(5) of the Social Security Act as amended by this section and the preceding sentences of this subsection shall not apply to such service.

Mr. Long. Mr. President, the amendment I have at the desk is the same amendment, with a modification, in which I have been joined by more than 20 cosponsors, and I invite other cosponsors to add their names to this amendment.

Mr. Cranston. Mr. President, will the Senator add my name, please?

Mr. Long. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the name of the Senator from California (Mr. Cranston) be added as a cosponsor of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. Long. Mr. President, if other Senators would like their names added, I will do so.

The Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) has not included the names of the cosponsors of my original amendment at this point is that I have modified the amendment to make clear that Members of Congress, in voting for this amendment, are not seeking any advantage for themselves.

As first drafted, the amendment would simply have postponed the section that would include Federal employees under social security until such time as Congress can see what the supplemental civil service program will be. In order that there can be no misunderstanding about our intention, I have modified the amendment so that no postponement in social security coverage would not apply to Members of Congress, to the President of the United States, to the Vice President of the United States, or to the National Commission on Social Security.

That being the case, Mr. President, Senators who vote for the amendment can understand that they are not voting anything for themselves, or any advantage so far as Members of Congress are concerned. They are voting to do justice to the Federal employees as the good Lord gives us the light to see it.

Mr. President, I am proposing an amendment to the social security financing bill which will assure Federal employees that the stated purposes of that bill are carried out. The Finance Committee bill states in its title that it is a bill to implement the consensus recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. In recommending that Federal employees be covered under social security, the Commission said that "an independent supplemental retirement plan should be developed for the Federal new hires, which would be part of the civil service retirement system."

My amendment makes the coverage of new employees dependent upon accomplishing both parts of the Commission's recommendations.

Dr. Alan Greenspan, the Chairman of the Social Security Commission, explained what the Commission intended when he testified before the Finance Committee. Senator Bradley asked whether the Commission intended that Congress should devise a civil service retirement system that would supplement the social security benefits of new employees when they retire, so that their benefits would attain total levels equivalent of the civil service benefits present employees receive. Dr. Greenspan's response was:

"That's implied in much of our recommendations, although we do not specifically stipulate in any considerable detail what the Congress should do. I think a large number of us could have very explicit assumptions which pretty much go in that direction."

Mr. Robert Ball, former Social Security Commissioner and member of the National Commission, stated in a letter his intention on this matter:

"The combination of social security coverage and newly designed benefit provisions within the civil service retirement system for new employees should be set up in such a way that, overall, the combination will provide as good protection as the present civil service system does alone. There is no intention to diminish the protection of new employees as compared to the presently employed."

Mr. Robert Myers, the Executive Director of the Commission, told the committee that such a plan could be easily developed.

The pending amendment simply assures Federal employees that what we now say should be done, and what we now say can be done, will be done. It says that the coverage of new Federal employees under social security will become law. But it will take place only when we live up to our part of the bargain—when we put in place for those employees an independent supplemental retirement system which will make them also participants in a modified version of the civil service retirement program.

How current employees are affected

Those who oppose this amendment have argued that current Federal employees are not affected by the Commission bill. The pending bill before us covers only new Federal employees and should not be of concern to those already in the system.

There is much confusion in this matter, but the heart of the matter is simple. There is a clear community of interest between current and future Federal employees. The fate of the civil service retirement program for future employees is intimately tied to the fate of that system for current employees. Federal employees are well aware of that.

If there were any doubt that current Federal employees have grounds for concern, that doubt has been removed by the testimony of the administration. If the printed record of hearings were available to Senators, I doubt Members would read the administration's testimony without concluding that Federal employees rightly feel that the security of the existing program is threatened.

Mr. Donald Devine, the Director of the agency responsible for the civil service system, appeared before the committee on February 23. He used the occasion to spell out the administration's plans in detail.

This is not the legislative context to debate the substance of what administration proposes, but their testimony leaves no room for doubt that Federal employees have grounds for concern. Mr. Devine spelled out plans for benefit reductions of such a magnitude that they would cut the costs of the civil service program by 37 percent. Moreover, the administration further plans to require an increase of over 50 percent in what Federal employees pay to support that reduced program. Changes of that order are clearly a matter of Federal employee concern.

The administration proposals relate to both present and future Federal employees.

Why is it that Federal employees are not satisfied with depending on the expressed good will of Congress? The answer is that once this bill is enacted we may not be in a very good position to make good on our intentions.

In a letter from the chairman of the subcommittee that deals with the civil service program, Senator Stevens acknowledges the validity of their concern by stating:

The Civil Service Retirement Trust Fund could eventually experience serious financing problems if new Federal employees were not permitted to participate in the Civil Service Retirement System.

The Senator from Alaska goes on to assure that he does not intend to cut their benefits.

No one doubts Senator Stevens' sincerity, but Congress cannot ordinarily enact laws without the consent of the President. The President has already announced his position on how he would cut back the civil service retirement program for both present and future Federal employees.

If new Federal employees are covered under social security before a supplemental plan has been enacted, the President will have considerably more say about what that legislation does to existing employees. This is precisely the situation that worries Federal employees.

This situation is not of the Federal employees' making. It is not their fault that Congress feels constrained to act on social security before it is ready with its plan for civil service. It is not the Federal employees who wield the threat of a veto—it is the President. My amendment maintains their ability—and the ability of the Congress—to work out this matter in an atmosphere of legislative neutrality.

This amendment does not change the basic thrust of the bill. It endorses the commitment of the Congress to not undermine but rather reaffirms the concept of covering new Federal employees under social security. The amendment provides that such coverage can be effective as early as the bill now proposes—January 1 of next year. It does not undermine but rather reaffirms the commitment of the Congress to this important change in public policy. But it recognizes that this policy change is part of a bargain. One side of the bargain is social security coverage; the other side is a new supplemental retirement plan. This amendment marries the two sides.

My amendment as originally drafted simply provided that the committee provisions relating to coverage of Federal employees would take place at such time as the supplemental plan is enacted. I have modified the amendment to provide that the coverage of Members of Congress will not be contingent upon further legislation but will go into effect on January 1, 1983. The supplemental plan has not yet been enacted. This change would also apply to the committee provisions which cover the President, Vice President, and Commissioner of Social Security on that date.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the names of the following Senators be added as co-sponsors: the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Savage), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Glenn), the Senator from Michigan (Mr. Riegle), the Senator from Montana (Mr. Baucus), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. Sasser), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Tillman), the Senator from Virginia (Mr. Warner), the Senator from Arkansas (Mr. Pryor), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Mathias), and the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. Huddleston).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, will the Senate yield for a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. LONG. I yield.

Mr. GOLDWATER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be listed as a co-sponsor of this amendment.

Mr. LONG. I am happy to ask that the Senate be added as a co-sponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I further ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. deConcini), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Boren), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. Dixon), the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr. Proxmire), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Bayh), and the Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Matsunaga) be added as co-sponsors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MATSUNAGA. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me to make a brief statement in behalf of the amendment?

Mr. LONG. I yield the floor at this point.

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Senator Long—I am delighted to join as an original cosponsor of the new version; I was a sponsor of the old version—to delay bringing new Federal employees into the social security system until such time as Congress has provided a modified Federal retirement system which coordinates benefits with the social security system and protects the integrity of the Federal retirement system.

Because I believe that existing and future Federal employees should receive reasonable assurances that their retirement will be adequately guarded. I have withheld my support from Social Security Reform Package until those of us concerned about Federal employees have had an opportunity to seek to defend their interests.

I think it is unfair to present employees of the Federal Government to ask them to risk their civil service retirement system and unfair to future employees to ask them to give up their retirement system without an opportunity to participate in the design of a new system to supplement social security.

That is what is involved here—simply fairness. And that is why I am very pleased to cosponsor the pending amendment. It is a serious, realistic effort to provide Federal employees a fair opportunity to share in the design of a revamped retirement system.
The amendment retains the compromise worked out in the Commission on Social Security Reform. It does not violate the terms of that very important agreement. Rather, it responds to the Commission’s recommendation that Federal employees be afforded the protection of a supplemental civil service retirement system and the assurances to the Finance Committee by both the Commission Chairman, Alan Greenspan, and Executive Director Robert Ball, that such a supplemental plan could be easily designed.

I say “fine, let us get on with that job,” but it is totally unfair to ask present and future Federal workers to buy a pig in a poke.

What is more, the pending amendment leaves intact the decision that new Federal employees will indeed be covered by social security. No one is trying to reverse that decision by this amendment. What is provided by the amendment is a reasonable amount of time, under conditions which are fair to Federal employees and postal workers, for Congress to act to put in place a coordinated supplemental retirement program, before coverage under social security begins.

Federal workers’ retirement benefits are part of the incentive offered to encourage talented people to pursue careers with the Federal Government.

Many aspects of the Federal retirement program are not duplicated in social security. The two are not equivalents and were never intended to be. Rather, civil service retirement is the counterpart to the pension program of a private enterprise.

Placing Federal employees under social security would have the effect of drastically reducing the total benefits they now earn under the terms of their retirement system.

Why does social security coverage of new Federal employees? Let us explore that question—because there is far more at stake here than just what kind of supplemental package, if any, will be designed and enacted.

First, as the numbers of Federal employees investing in civil service retirement declines, it becomes more and more easy to reduce the benefit structure and increase the worker contribution.

Second, this administration has demonstrated its tremendous hostility to Federal employees in a variety of ways—layoffs, RIF’s, pay freezes, health insurance reductions, expropriated defined benefit packages—and now has zeroed in directly on civil service retirement.

The President has made controversial recommendations for very harsh cutbacks in Federal retirement. Into the middle of this controversy has stepped the recommendation of the Social Security Commission to bring new Federal employees under social security. The Commission could not be expected to solve the problem of coordination of Federal benefits with social security benefits; that is a job for Congress.

And there is an enormous risk that this anti-Federal worker President, this anti-Federal worker administration, will try to ram through these kinds of major cuts in the Federal civil service retirement system in which so many millions of Americans have a vested, earned interest—ram them through without thorough and fair consideration—as the price for the administration’s support of any kind of supplemental package.

Given these circumstances, it is perfectly understandable why Federal and postal employees have resisted the recommendation of the Commission and strongly support the pending amendment.

This is a situation in which good faith is called for.

The Senate has an opportunity by appropriate amendment to demonstrate to employees of the Federal Government that it wishes to deal fairly with Federal workers and give them a fair chance to negotiate on supplemental and existing benefits without both arms being tied behind their backs.

Finally, Mr. President, the support of Federal workers’ unions for this amendment constitutes a tacit recognition—a tacit endorsement—that the Senate will approve bringing Federal workers into the social security system, as recommended by the Social Security Commission.

Their is a realistic and most constructive concession. It gives us an opportunity to move forward fairly, by adopting the Long amendment and then approving the social security reform package in a manner that avoids a totally coercive decision.

I urge the Senate to adopt our colleague’s sensible and fair amendment. It will permit the opportunity for a successful outcome on the matter of revising the Federal retirement systems.

I thank the Senator, Senator Long, for his leadership in this matter.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for just one question?

Mr. CRANSTON. Yes. Mr. STEVENS. Does the Senate know of any Government employee union that has endorsed the statement he just made that they would support inclusion under social security? If the Senator has led the Senate to believe that Senator Long’s amendment is carrying out the recommendation of the Social Security Commission and that Government employee groups have welcomed coverage under the social security system, assuming the Long amendment passes, I would ask the Senator whether any Government employee union that has endorsed coverage under social security for Government employees?

Mr. CRANSTON. No, and I did not say that. I said they have even given tacit support to this amendment as a better approach than what is presently proposed for them.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CRANSTON. Certainly.

Mr. LONG. Let us just make a good faith proposition. If those who sponsored this bill will bring their supplemental plan in here, I will withdraw the amendment—just being the plan in place as to what the new Federal employees are going to get, and add it to the bill right here.

Mr. STEVENS. I would be happy to bring the bill I introduced last year, and we will have it in 5 minutes. It was opposed by every employee organization because they were screwed the Long amendment was going to pass, and they will not be included.

Let us just say Government employees will not be included in social security. That is the effect of your amendment. But you are leading the Senate to believe that somehow if we pass the amendment Government employees are going to be happy to be included under social security.

I have been involved in this thing—and I have respect for the Senator with regard to the Finance Committee’s operations—more so, with the exception of the Senator from North Dakota, who left the Civil Service Subcommittee just 2 years ago. I have been dealing with this thing more than anybody in the Senate.

I want you to know, my good friend, if your amendment passes, Government employees will never come under social security, and we ought to just pass that amendment instead of yours because we are leading the Senate to believe we are going to accept the Social Security Commission’s recommendations.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, basically what the Senator from Alaska is saying is that he needs to separate the Federal employees from their existing program so as to have the leverage over them to make the kind of 50 percent increase in contributions or 35 percent benefit cuts the administration is recommending.

If he will bring in a program that would be as favorable to the employees as the one they have now, so far as this Senator is concerned, we should add it to this bill. But that is not what the Senator is talking about. He is talking about offering an amendment to say something different from that. I will come up with an amendment that will assure Government employees are going to have as good a supplemental program as they have right now, as far as this Senator is concerned, I will not insist on my amendment.
have it become law. It is a better system than we have now because today, whether we realize it or not, the Civil Service Retirement System's unfunded liability is over $500 billion. We formed a Presidential commission, and we are dealing with social security that has an immediate liability of $79 billion.

The trouble is the Senate and Congress are not ready to tinker with the civil service retirement system as part of the social security reform. I have opposed that from the very beginning. But what the Senator is doing is assuring that we will never deal with it because until the employee organization groups—and I have great respect for them—are willing to accept the fact that they are going to be covered under social security—new employees will be—there will be no new system, and I think the employees have won the fight already, I say to the Senator from California, by virtue of the fact that the framework of the Commission did not include existing Government employees.

The original proposal was all Government employees would come under social security, including those now employed by the Federal Government. The proposal is that new Federal employees be covered in the system. My amendment, which I will discuss later, I will say to the Senator, would go further than the Senator's amendment does. But the Senator should not—and I do not believe that the statement the Senator from Louisiana made, but the Senator from California led the Senate to believe that if the Long amendment is adopted we will be carrying out the Social Security Commission's recommendations, and that is not true. It cannot happen and we will not have a new system until we do decide that question of should new Federal employees be included in social security. I do not think we will tell the Senate, I do not think they should. But until we decide whether they should or not we will not have a new system.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator from Louisiana yield?

Mr. SARBANES. I wish to commend the Senator from Maryland. Mr. SARBANES. I wish to commend the Senator from Louisiana for offering this amendment, and I am pleased to join him as a cosponsor. What the amendment seeks to assure is that if the employees are brought into the social security system, the supplemental retirement system to be provided will be in place to accomplish this by linking those two actions together. Without this amendment the employees will have no notion what the supplemental retirement system will be for the new people. How can we be sure that the new supplemental retirement system will not be completely transformed from the current system—benefits sharply cut, contributions significantly increased. That is the proposal the administration has submitted to the Congress with respect to the current retirement programs. It is not therefore as though there is no reason to be concerned about this matter.

The amendment of the Senator from Louisiana makes extremely good commonsense. Anyone would ask for the same fair treatment—ask to know what it is that is being done to them before it happens. There is nothing unreasonable about that. In fact, just to the contrary: It is extremely reasonable.

The Long amendment simply says that their inclusion under the social security system will occur—is it 20 days after the enactment?

Mr. LONG. It will occur in the month after the enactment of a supplemental civil service program. Or, for that matter, if Congress between now and the first of the year will adopt the supplemental program—and I do not object to that—social security coverage will go into effect on the day the committee had in mind to begin with.

But why would you want to put the Federal employees in a position where you are legislating to destroy their existing program and then going to take place. Then they are in a position where they are going to be left without the protection that they had before and they will be in a position of trying to seek a supplemental plan where the administration might oppose it. For all we know, the President would veto it and say, "Well, until you cut those benefits by a third and raise the taxes by 50 percent, I am not going to sign anything." We all know the President can be stubborn.

And I am not criticizing him for that. I respect him for it.

But these employees will have much less opportunity to defend their position and will go into effect immediately. For instance, when you separate the new ones from the old ones so that their numbers diminish, and two, when you cut off the money coming into the fund from the new hires who would be contributing to help support it and put their money into the social security program instead.

Mr. SARBANES. It is constantly ascertained that, since the committee's proposal is only going to apply to new hires, it will not have an effect on existing employees. I think there are two ways that it can have an effect on existing employees. One way it can affect them is if the supplemental system developed for new employees represents a sharp cutback in benefits and then the continued support for the retirement system is going to be diminished with respect to the existing employees.

The other thing is, if you set up a separate supplemental retirement system for new employees which contrasts sharply with what existing employees have, it will not be long down the road before there will be pressure to conform the existing system to what the new system is if the new system represents a savings to the Government in terms of what it is contributing toward the retirement of its employees.

Having a good retirement system for Federal employees is an important reason for having a civil service. But if the administration comes in, and there is every indication that this administration wants to do so, with a greatly reduced and diminished retirement system and puts that into place for new employees, in a few years when will be prepared to conform the retirement system of the existing employees to that lower benefit retirement system. You mark my words, I make that as a prediction.

Now what the Senator's amendment at least would insure is that before any of this goes forward the supplemental plan has to be in front of everybody, it has to be passed so everyone knows what it is and can provide for contingencies. People can have a sense that they are being dealt with fairly and justly, instead of being put in the position where they are, in effect, going to have a pig in a poke imposed upon them. Who knows what this supplemental retirement system is going to look like? No one knows what it is going to look like. We should not move down this path without establishing that up front.

The Senator's amendment simply requires that it be established up front and that everyone know exactly what is happening. It gives us the opportunity with a whole range of potential problems and contingencies.

Mr. LONG, Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Maryland that if I wanted the Senator to sell his home and I asked him to sign a contract to sell his home, he would like to know what he is going to get for it. No lawyer would advise a client to sign a contract unless it says what the person gets or what he is losing. And the Federal employees, certainly in good faith, would like to know what he is going to get for it. The proposal would give them an absolute guarantee and put it in the position where they are, in effect, going to have a pig in a poke imposed upon them. Who knows what this supplemental retirement system is going to look like? No one knows what it is going to look like. We should not move down this path without establishing that up front.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I would like to make a couple of points here. The Senator from Maryland has spoken with eloquence, as usual. This point has been brought up several times, and that is the threat that the lack of new funds coming into the civil service retirement system might have on the retirement of those present employees and retirees of the civil service. In other words, despite what might have been said around here, we want to make it very, very clear that we are only talking about those present employees and retirees of the civil service. In other words, despite what might have been said around here, we want to make it very, very clear that we are only talking about those present employees and retirees of the civil service.

Well, let us get something straight right here. It is great to talk about the civil service retirement fund as though somehow there is a pool of money that the civil service retirees have set up and that is where their pensions are coming from. The truth of the matter is that the pensions of civil service retirees are currently funded from $4 billion contributed by the civil service employees, $44 billion by matching funds of the Federal Government matching their employees, and $14 billion from the General Treasury of the United States.

That fund is bankrupt and we might as well acknowledge it. That fund is dependent upon the votes of this Congress from the general appropriations to provide for the retirement benefits of present retirees from the civil service.

There is no question but what the U.S. Congress will continue those appropriations, just like we have the appropriations every year for the military retirees. Does anybody suggest that somebody in this Congress is going to cut the benefits of those retirees who are receiving pensions? Of course not.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. So that is good oratory and it flies well, but the trouble is the facts are not there to support it.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. CHAFEE. I will be glad to yield.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator has, in effect, misstated my contention. I am not asserting that the current system is completely self-financed. But as the Senator himself indicated there are significant employee contributions into the system that help to provide some of the money needed to pay the benefits. What the Senator is missing is that if you are going to maintain the benefits levels, then you are going to have to find the additional money from somewhere else or else the pressure to diminish the benefits will increase.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator asserts no one proposes to cut the benefits. The administration has submitted a proposal to the Congress that represents sharp cuts with respect to the existing retirement system.

Mr. CHAFEE. I am not saying there will be no money coming in from the newly hired, but if you set up a system that is more restricted and limited, and no one knows what that system is going to be, then the flow of revenues will be diminished.

If you are going to maintain the benefits, the need for a general fund payment will be increased. If you do not want to increase those general fund payments, the pressure to cut the benefits will be increased.

That is what the problem is. The fact remains that it would still have an impact as we look down the road.

Mr. CHAFEE. I have presented the analogy, and we do not need to dwell on it all afternoon, of the military retirees. There is no fund for the military retirees. The military retirees from the military service are paid by appropriations made by the U.S. Congress. Those appropriations are made every year and so they will be for civil service retirees.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Senator yield on that point? I would like to take issue on it.

Mr. CHAFEE. I will let the Senator take issue in a moment.

Mr. WARNER. On that point, if the Senator will yield, I would like to clarify the point on using the analogy of military retirees. The military retirees as a group is, by and large, treated the same way, and is thus an ever constant number. However, under this proposal for other Federal employees, there would be a steadily diminishing number of Federal employees in the currently structured civil service retirement system. The new Federal employees will be under a different system. If this proposal passes, consequently, the Congress of the United States has an additional responsibility to insure the solvency of the civil service retirement program.

Mr. CHAFEE. I am not sure I get the point.

Mr. WARNER. I will clarify it later. Mr. CHAFEE. If I might continue, we have all met with Federal groups. They have come in and they have been eloquent. But I do not think anybody needs to kid themselves. They do not want to come into the social security system. They do not want the new hires in it. If this proposal, the package that we have here, does not include funding the civil service, I seriously question—and there are a good number of others who question—whether they will ever be included.

I know the Senator from Louisiana has a program that as soon as the supplementation program kicks in they will come in. That supplemental package will be fought tooth and nail every inch of the way. I think this is the floor of the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana. The floor, as I see it, it will not happen. The civil service new hires starting in 1984 will never come in under social security if we do not include them now. This is what we might call a last clear chance.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes.

Mr. SARBANES. The Senator does not know whether it will be fought tooth and nail because the Senator does not know what the program will look like, can the Senator tell me now if the Long amendment is not accepted, what the retirement package for a new hire will be?

Mr. CHAFEE. We know perfectly well that the specifics of that program are not here.

Mr. SARBANES. They are sure not.

Mr. CHAFEE. The Senator has a great vehicle to ride. I know the State he comes from. Judging from the people who have flocked into my office, I was wondering who was tending the store. Every single one of us have undergone the same thing. The Federal employees just do not want future hires to come under this system.

Mr. SARBANES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CHAFEE. As I say, this is our chance to accomplish this. If we do not then I think we will say it just plain will not happen. I think the prospects of this total package becoming unraveled become very imminent.

Mr. SARBANES. I simply say to the Senator if it is not fair it ought not to happen. The Senator and the Senator from Louisiana would assure that everyone would know exactly what was being done and be able, therefore, to make the judgment as to whether indeed it was fair. The Senator from Rhode Island has just admitted that he cannot tell us what the package is going to be because the package is not here.

The Senator from Louisiana is saying, "Let us have the package, so we know exactly what is being done before we vote against it." The Senator from Maryland knows perfectly that once this horse is out of the barn we will not see that social security cover for those new hires. We are not affecting anybody who is in the present Federal service. If we do not pass the package, then people do not have to come to work for the Federal Government. Who is representing the people of the United States of America? Those of us in this body and in the other body. If we do not pass a package that is satisfactory enough to attract to the banner of service in the United States, we will not get people. So there is no question that Senator has an adequate supplemental program.

Who are we affecting? We are not affecting a single person who now works for the Federal Government. If, by January 1, 1984, we do not have on the books a new program to go with the social security coverage, then nobody has to come and work for the Federal Government. That will get our attention if nothing else does.

Mr. HEINZ addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana. I do so with great respect for my friend and colleague and the ranking minority member of the Finance Committee. But notwithstanding that fact, I must tell my colleagues, having been a member of the National Commission and involved in the Finance Committee on this matter, that in this Senator's judgment we would be making three mistakes if we adopted the Long amendment.

The first mistake would be that we would not fulfill the agreement among the Speaker, the President, the majority leader, and the members of the National Commission, to make this a balanced package and we would run the grave, indeed in my judgment the almost certain, risk of destroying the fragile consensus that took us over a year to put together.

Mr. President, I submit that if we lose this fragile consensus, it would be like trying to put Humpty Dumpty back together again to get any agreement again.

Among those who agreed to the package, which explicitly included social security coverage for new Federal hires, were a number of people with very good credentials looking out for the working people, including Mr. Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO.

He supports this package. He is a friend of the working man. I doubt seriously that he would support a package that he felt was detrimental in any way, shape, or form to a very significant membership group of his organization.

Mr. President, the second reason I believe the amendment before us is dangerous is that it will have the effect of insuring substantively that we never bring new Federal employees under social security. There is broad public support for covering new Federal hires, were a number of people with very good credentials looking out for the working people, including Mr. Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO.

1. meet our commitments to our existing civil servants under the civil service retirement system. I intend to see that additional supplemental pension package that we all are so concerned about, that Senator Long is concerned about. We will be better able to afford the supplemental pension coverage that we all are concerned about, that Senator Long is concerned about. We will be better able to afford it and, therefore, we are going to have a better package if we defeat the Long amendment. And we are going to insure that the three out of four Federal employees who are going to have a supplemental pension package in the future that do not retire in that system, will have something more tangible than they have today.

Now, one of our colleagues, Mr. President, made the point that no one could predict what the retirement package that was designed is going to look like. I would be the first to say that I cannot predict exactly what it is going to look like. But I can tell you this: It would be very shortsighted, indeed, for us to design a package that was not flexible with the kinds of packages provided to those who have good jobs in the private sector.

The fact is, Mr. President, that we are going to have a supplemental pension program for the new Federal employees which will be a competitive package which will be a good package. The demands of the employment marketplace will insure that we have one.

In conclusion, the sooner we pass the social security package, the sooner we are going to have a supplemental pension plan until the coverage issue is settled. So I join with my colleagues who are so minded in hoping that the Senate will reject the Long amendment.

Mr. SARBANES addressed the Chair.

Mr. HEINZ. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, while the Senator from Pennsylvania is still on the floor—

Mr. HEINZ. I will not be able to stay.

Mr. SARBANES. I just want to say that I think the position of Lane Kirkland, which the floor has just adopted, is going to change. That is, if we do not do this now, before we pass the Social Security bill, I am going to go into the Record on the first part of his supplementary statement. The Senator from Pennsylvania asserted Kirkland's support on this issue, and it is the floor's now before us. I quote a part of his supplementary statement on mandatory coverage of public employees:

I cannot support the Commission's recommendation for mandatory social security coverage of newly hired federal and postal employees. The many complex issues involved make it difficult to protect federal and postal employee rights under the best of circumstances. This is even more difficult at the present time since the proposal is being put forward in the context of a search for additional sources of revenue and Congress is asked to decide the issue solely on its own merits.

I could not support coverage unless all of the following conditions were met:

1. No reduction in the level of pension benefits now available to government workers.

2. No additional financial burden on government employees as a result of commensurate adjustment in benefits.

4. No diminution in the opportunity for these employees to improve their retirement systems.

The Commission cannot know in advance whether the pension rights of present and future employees will be adequately protected if Congress enacts mandatory coverage. Federal and postal employees should have the right to know and evaluate in advance the details of any proposal before they are asked to take this step.

Discussions are going forward to try to develop a concept for the future which will strengthen and reinforce both the Social Security System and the Civil Service Retirement System. Those discussions ought not to be hampered by unacceptably or impracticable recommendations of this Commission. The Commission should not recommend nor should the Congress act when the coverage details are unknown. There can be no assurance that they meet criteria essential for assuring equity to those affected.

It seems to me the Long amendment is seeking to assure equity for those affected by being certain that the coverage details will be known, not unknown. That is the essential thrust of the amendment. It is a fairness and equity amendment, and I hope the Members of the Senate will support the amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SARBANES. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. I join the distinguished Senator from Louisiana in his amendment, and I commend my colleagues and I, who are seeking to do here is an eminently reasonable and commonsense proposal.

Mr. WARNER. I concur with the Senator from Maryland. I can find nothing in the Commission's record that indicates that at any time they wanted the Federal employees to pay one cent more of their salary into the social security system and at the same time 7 percent into the civil service retirement program. It is that double penalty that, in effect, we are trying to avoid with the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. President, perhaps the distinguished Senator from New York, who was very active in the Commission's preparation of this recommendation, will respond. Does he think that at any time the Commission envisioned that an employee should pay both of these fees?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. No. The Commission envisioned that the Federal employees would come into a dual system such as is common in private employment, which is social security as the first tier of a retirement system, plus a supplementary system.

Mr. WARNER. I understand that. But, in effect, that supplementary system will not happen until Congress acts. What guarantee can be given that Congress will act in a timely fashion?

Mr. MOYNIHAN. No guarantee, any more than a guarantee that Congress would act in the time remaining before next January, but those of us who are in the Senate awhile, my colleague from Maryland somewhat longer than I, recognize that this might not be an eventuality that will come to pass. Therefore, what we are doing is acting within the framework of the legislative history of the intention of the Commission to protect the Federal employees.

Would my colleague care to comment?

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I really do not want to get into an attempt to refine the intention of the Commission. What we are seeking to do here with the Long amendment is practice fairness. I quoted at length from the Kirkland statement simply because the Senator from Pennsylvania had represented the Long amendment, that Lane Kirkland had taken a position that would be contrary. Obviously, that is not the case. It seems to me, whatever the intention of the Commission, that what we are seeking to do here is an eminently reasonable and commonsense proposal.
I am aware of no other employer, public or private, that demands such a high payment. In fact, Congress should first make provision for a supplemental retirement to cover new Federal employees. This is in keeping with retirement packages for employees in the private sector.

Without this amendment, do you think equity can ever be established for new employees without at least a supplemental retirement plan which is routinely offered in the private sector? I do not think it is the objective of the National Commission on Social Security Reform to punish new Federal employees by forcing 14 percent of their salaries to be deducted. I do not think it is the objective of the Commission to damage in any way the fiscal integrity of the civil service retirement program.

I do think it is the objective of this amendment to address both concerns. We all want to promote efficient and effective Government service. We want to continue to attract and retain good, qualified people to serve the taxpayers.

Yet, there is a plethora of recommendations by both the executive and legislative branches of the U.S. Government which, taken together, can have far-reaching and perhaps unintended effect on the civil service system.

Before we attempt to enact varied recommendations on the Federal personnel system dealing with different issues—from procedures for reductions in force, to pay, to COLA's, to retirement benefits—for example, let us examine the impact of these proposals to the civil service system as a whole. Several colleagues and I introduced legislation to direct a centennial review of the civil service. As a consequence, an amendment to the President and the Congress, would be charged with making recommendations to the Congress which would address problems with civil service, while insuring the provision of a strong, viable Federal work force.

I hope that, in the near future, Congress will establish this commission, so we can resolve the issues which are keeping Government employees in constant turmoil and uncertainty.

In the meantime, however, we are faced with the problem of new Federal employees paying 14 percent of their salaries to both civil service retirement and social security beginning in January 1984. This amendment says that new Federal employees will contribute to the social security system no sooner than the Congress enacts a supplemental retirement program for these public servants.

I believe this amendment is a reasonable and fair way to resolve an inequity, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, there are only three or four Members of the Senate on the floor and not many persons paying attention, so I will indulge a few moments of reflection on what is involved here.

What is involved, in my view, is a very painfully evolved conflict between two of the great traditions that we associate with the New Deal. On the one hand is the tradition of trade union organization and labor organization and the recognition thereof by employers, and the other tradition of social insurance which, independent of organizations, provides Government guarantees against the kinds of events that the human condition is exposed and susceptible to.

I believe without asking too much of an indulgence from the Senate, I say that there is a personal poignancy I feel in this matter. I have been much involved with trade union matters over a lifetime. I am one of the few Members of this body who last year had a 100-percent COPE voting record. It is ironic and pleasing to see how many people with 20-percent COPE voting records are rising to the defense of organized labor.

With particular regard, I have been involved with the proposal for the Federal employee union which organized, in the case of postal workers, in the late 19th century and had to wait until almost the late 20th century to become recognized.

In 1961, I was made staff director of the Task Force on Employee-Management Relations in the Federal Service, a task force appointed by President John F. Kennedy. I was at the time assistant to the Secretary of Labor. I later became Secretary of Labor. I know of no one else in this body who has ever served in the Department of Labor.

On November 30, 1961, we issued our report which resulted in Executive Order 10988 signed by President Kennedy on January 17, 1962, which gave union recognition to the Federal employee union which organized, in the case of postal workers, in the late 19th century and had to wait until almost the late 20th century to become recognized.

Mr. President, I was staff director of that task force and in the largest measure I wrote that Executive order.

That was the beginning of union recognition for Federal employees. It came a generation after the Federal Government mandated it for employees in private service.

So I think I need not assert further my commitment to and concern for these persons. I am not only committed to them, I think I can say I did something for them. I helped transform their condition from that of an unrecognized group of persons to those who have formal negotiated bargaining contractual relationship with their employers, without which a trade union is only a protest move.

Yet social security is as much a concern of mine as it is to be of anyone in this Chamber. And perhaps more than that, in the Federal Government...
I have been involved with efforts to extend the social security program. I think legislation has been instrumental in having proposed by the President ended up as supplementary social security income, SSI.

I do not know that there are many others in this body who have such a relationship with an actual extension of the system.

But here we are in conflict, and I have a sense how this conflict is going to come out.

But I would like just for my own understanding and for the classic condition that Loyal of Cornell University called interest group liberalism which he has declared is a system of government that cannot function and will ultimately collapse in a condition of stasis.

We are not going to include Federal employees in this bill today in the Senate and if this is the way the bill ends up they will never be included in social security. I put that down as part of my record. Perhaps it is not a perfect forecast, but they will not be included in social security and they know it will not happen.

The consequences of this are, among other things, that two-thirds of the persons who enter Federal employment will never gain any social security protection nor will they have in retirement any Federal civil service retirement system benefits.

More than a third, 37 percent, will never be covered at all, even by disability or death benefits, survivor benefits, because they leave the Federal employment before 5 years of service, during which time they might acquire almost half the time in the quarters, as we say, that would be required to give them social security benefits and during which time very quickly they get their pay and very quickly they get survivors benefits.

Social security is in its early period for a person in his beginning years of coverage a more generous system than the civil service retirement, which is not made with perhaps a sense of recognizing the legitimacy of liberal interests.

This is interest group liberalism producing stasis and the prospect eventually of a political civilization collapsing.

For what it is worth, it is an increasing situation, something of consequence that it will be seen as worth fighting, such as the decline in confidence that goes with the paralysis that we see.

Title I of this act says with respect to the current employees of the Federal Government "Nothing in this act shall reduce the accruing entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

Nothing could more state the will of Congress, the intent of Congress and nothing could more describe the decline of the prestige of this institution and the competence of our Government than that this statement of law and we be regarded as having any significance whatsoever.

We have heard in this Chamber the proper distress expressed by Members that the word of the majority leader and the minority leader, once a binding commitment, is no longer seen by people or by Members as sufficient.

Well, statutes are no longer seen to represent good faith commitments that will be kept, as the President end up as supplementary commitment that depends utterly on confidence in the behavior of others collapses so readily. The history of the world is the history of confidence in governments collapsing.

The rarest thing in history is the onset of stability, which happens in very rare occasions, centuries ago. The easiest thing is the onset of its opposite, and we contribute to that today. We do not know that we are doing it.

May Madison and Hamilton forgive us and may we thank our stars they are not here to watch us conduct ourselves in the manner that we have followed today.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, this is an extremely difficult and complex issue, and I would again say to my good friend from Louisiana that I have great respect for his service in the Senate and for his intentions here. There is a basic incompatibility in what the Senator's amendment seeks to do, in my judgment, and the best interests of the people who do work and will work for the Federal Government. That incomparability comes from the fact that through the years there has been a substantial change in the relationship between actual pay while working for the civil service, for the Federal Government in a civilian capacity, and retirement benefits.

One has to really study the total ramifications of the bill to understand my objections to the Senator's amendment. Let me point out for the Senate just, for instance, in the period since 1970 there has been a consumer price index change of 164 percent, there has been a change in Federal civilian pay of 118 percent, there has been a change in private sector pay of 139 percent, in Postal Service pay there has been a change of 163 percent, in the military 172 percent, and we see that the Federal civil servant has been really left behind in terms of pay adjustments. Congress, in compensating for that, has built a civil service retirement system that is very valuable.
The Long amendment will break down the offered solution for social security. The Senate, unlike the House, does not limit amendments to any bill. Under those proposals, destruction of the present Civil Service Retirement System, proposals to change the Federal Employee Health Benefits program, and attempts to abolish the Private Express Statutes. The majority of NAPS delegates were received courteously, pleasantly and sympathetically when they met with their Senators or Representatives. Some members of Congress were unable to be there personally, and I assure the Senate from Louisiana that they do have an important constituency in the federal/postal community. Under those proposals, destruction of the present Civil Service Retirement System, and the Federal Employee Health Benefits program was a certainty. However, NAPS, along with other active and retired federal and postal employee organizations, graphically illustrated to Members of Congress that they do need the current Civil Service Retirement System, proposals to change the Federal Employee Health Benefits program, and attempts to abolish the Private Express Statutes.

The Long amendment would not destroy CSRS because the current federal and postal employees' Supplemental Retirement program was a certainty. However, NAPS, along with other active and retired federal and postal employee organizations, graphically illustrated to Members of Congress that they do need the current Civil Service Retirement System, proposals to change the Federal Employee Health Benefits program, and attempts to abolish the Private Express Statutes.

SUCCESSFUL EFFORT

Success must be measured in terms of what was accomplished by the whole campaign, not just with what happened on the day of the legislative conference. When President Reagan's budget became public, a bad situation went to worse. The proposals set forth by the Administration for the Federal and postal employee organizations, graphically illustrated to Members of Congress that they do have an important constituency in the federal/postal community.

ALL OUT CAMPAIGN

The NAPS legislative conference was but one part of a campaign waged by unions and other organizations through FAIR. An all-out public relations campaign was launched which included radio and magazine advertising, press conferences, teleconferences and the series of legislative conferences conducted by the NAPS.

Last December, FAIR decided that successive waves of lobbyists from different organizations would have a greater impact on the Congress than one mass lobbying campaign. A conservative estimate of the number of active and retired federal and postal employees who visited Capitol Hill was over 12,000. And, judging from some rumblings coming from Capitol Hill, quite successful.

OUR VOICES HAVE BEEN HEARD

There is no question that our letters, our advertising and our lobbying have been noticed by the Congress. On a number of occasions, the effort mounted by our group was mentioned by Members of Congress and witnesses who were trying to refute our facts. In January, Congressional staff members were telling us we were dead in the water on the social security fight and we might as well roll over and play dead. Instead of following the suggestion, we continued. Without the specifics of a supplemental plan, we still feared for our SCR financing and for the benefit levels for both new and current employees. If you don't think our effort was successful, then how do you explain the Long amendment being defeated? After the Long amendment and at this point, the vote is just too close to call. If the amendment is approved, we still have a shot at defeating the social security coverage provision because the vote is just too close to call. If the amendment is defeated, we will have a chance to work with the Administration to improve the social security coverage provision because the vote is just too close to call.
Suddenly, people on Capitol Hill were talking about federal and postal employees and what was happening to them—and, for the first time in years, not in a negative way. After the Reagan budget went public and the Director of OPM testified on their recommendations for a supplemental plan, the House issued a "Dear Colleague" letter intended to assuage our fears about social security coverage for new hires.

The letter was signed by the Speaker of the House, the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and the Chairman of the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. Basically, it stated that retirement benefits for those employees who are in the current retirement system will be comparable to the current retiree benefits, that they opposed the Administration's budget cuts in retirement, opposed the Administration's proposals to treat COLA's for CSRS retirees differently than social security COLA's, and that they would oppose any proposal that "would threaten or adversely affect the financial integrity of the present civil service retirement fund."

FUTURE OUTLOOK

What the future holds is anybody's guess, but things look much better now than they did in January. Most of our colleagues found that Members of Congress were well-informed about our views and positions. They expressed either support or at least sympathy for our aims. This is a far cry to several years ago when any mention of federal retirement met with blank stares or opposition.

There appears to be more support for preservation of our retirement benefit levels and for adequate financing of our retirement system. And, if extension of Social Security coverage is enacted into law, it will be done in such a way that retirement revenues will come into the Civil Service Retirement Fund and thus help to maintain the cash flow needed to pay future benefits to present employees.

THE KEY TO SUCCESS

Would this change in attitude have been possible without the personal efforts of individual federal and postal employees? Probably not. You and I, and have always been the needed ingredients to any successful effort. We may have lost a battle, but we are certainly not losing the war. But the social security battle should teach us one thing—let's not wait until the axe is inches from our necks. Let's make sure the Congress remembers who we are and what we stand for. Only you can prevent further cutbacks in your retirement and other benefits. The man in the White House may not be on our side, but we are at least beginning to see some subtle changes from the people who make the ultimate legislative decisions—the Congress.

Mr. STEVENS. The point is the people lobbying for the Long amendment do not assume, as the Senator from Louisiana does, that Government employees ought to be covered under social security.

The difficulty is that those of us who have the responsibility in this area in Congress have to intend to make the Long amendment pass and not pass to reform the civil service retirement system until those people who do conduct lobbying activities of this type are willing to accept the basic first point and that is that Government employees ought to be covered under social security. As long as that question is still in issue there will not be a reform of the existing civil service retirement system.

Our subcommittee, 3 years ago, that deals with civil service and the Postal Service undertook a study of the problem, and after a series of meetings with representatives of employee groups, went to Congress and presented a bill that recommended a new system for civil service.

The system was predicated on the assumption that the Social Security Commission's recommendations would be adopted, and new Federal employees would be covered under social security. Parenthetically, let me say that was a victory for Government employees because the first statement coming from the Commission indicated that Government employees would be included in social security. The proposal before Congress now is that only new civil service employees will be included under social security.

The proposal we made for a new system of retirement benefits for civil servants would produce a system that is better than the existing system. It would assume a first tier of social security, a second tier of a pension system to which the employee did not contribute, and a third tier of an individual retirement account to which the Government would contribute if the employee contributed a minimal amount. The pension system would be managed in the private sector.

The impact of this bill was that when it was reviewed by the employee groups, they were commendatory. They told us they thought it was a good job, but they disagreed with the basic assumption and told us civil servants will never be included in social security. And, therefore, they said our plan was faulty because the basic assumption is that it is going to happen.

The Senator asked for someone to come forward with a plan. I have it. It is S. 2905 in the last Congress. It has not been introduced in this Congress because it is the opposition from the very groups that are against the amendment that the Senator from Louisiana has offered. Their opposition is based on the fact, as I said, that social security coverage for Government employees will never occur.

Now, therein is the dilemma for our subcommittee and the House Full Committee on Civil Service problems. And I have discussed this at length with our colleagues in the House and the Senate. If the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana passes, Government employees will not be included in social security, even though that is not his intent, and I want to make certain that I repeat that because I understand his statement and I understand the distinguished Senator from Louisiana is trying to offer a proposal which will give the Government employees a fair chance of getting a better system.

But until the basic decision is made as to whether or not they are to be included in social security, we cannot commence—cannot commence—consideration of a plan for the future.

Mr. LONG. Will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. STEVENS. Yes.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, let me say to the Senator that I believe he takes me at my word. I do not believe I have ever deceived the Senator. As far as I know, I have not.

Mr. STEVENS. The Senator never has, or any Member of the Senate, to my knowledge.

Mr. LONG. I believe the Senator would accept my assurance, as a fellow Senator and a friend, that, as far as this Senator is concerned, I fully intend to support a supplemental plan worked out to meet this problem, and I favor covering under social security the Federal employees.

Representatives of the Federal employee unions are outside in the Reception room and perhaps might expect. I visited with them during the last half hour, and they assured me that they realize that they have a responsibility to help work out the supplemental plan and go along with social security, and they will welcome the opportunity for a compromise.

I am not saying that they advocate social security coverage for new Federal employees.

Mr. STEVENS. Neither did I. I did not advocate it, either. I say to the Senator from Louisiana—

But will they come to a date certain when social security coverage will take place? If they will, we do not have any problem, because once we make the decision, if Congress makes the decision that Government employees are going to be included in social security at some time, we can base our decision on that decision, although I oppose it, mind you, because, again, I say that the civil service system preceded the social security system.

We allow the State employees to opt out of social security, we allow Federal employees to have a pension system. My State has done that. We allow others to opt out of social security. The Congress exercised the option for Government employees and opted out of social security in the past.

We have a retirement system and it could work. But if the decision is going to be made that every Senator I believe wants to see made, we have to have a time when everybody knows it will be made. I would accept the Senator's amendment and I accept his comments in good faith, and his commitment to me is as good as gold.

But the problem is, we will have opposition. Some of my very good friends and colleagues have argued with me for 15 years. They tell me, "This is live or die for us, Stevens. You are either with us or against us on this one." I am talking about the Long amendment now.

The problem is I agree with them that they should not be in social secu-
Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I say to the Senator, in good faith, that he perhaps does not know the genesis of this amendment.

By way of background, may I say that the Senator from Louisiana did not start calling Finance Committee Democrats to meet in caucus until the Republican Members were meeting in caucuses for a long time, and that goes back even to previous Congresses.

Mr. STEVENS. On this issue?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I say to the Senator, and I am sincere about this; I intend to support the amendment with me who are not against social security coverage, but merely say by way of fairness that Federal employees are entitled to be heard and not be under the sword of Damocles that the present program fades out in the event that nothing happens.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, we have had long experience with the same people, and our subcommittee has been working with them every month of every year for the last 2 or 3 years, and warning them that this day was coming. In the last Congress, we had a series of meetings for these people and said, "The day is coming. Here is a plan." But they said, "No, we will not support it because the basic assumption is you make the assumption"—talking to me—"that the Government employees could be covered under social security, and that will never happen."

That has been the decision—it will never happen.

With the adoption of the Long amendment, we will be along 4 or 5 years from now still worrying about what we are going to do about saving the civil service system. It is now $500 billion underfunded. The Senator from Rhode Island says $14 billion, but it is $17 billion being paid from the Treasury into the civil service retirement system. The Senator from Louisiana and I fought paying any money from the Treasury into the social security system, and that is why this Commission was formed. We, in other words, have a situation where we have a terminally ill patient and you want a transfusion to someone who just died.

The social security system is not insolvent. It never was insolvent. It was in trouble. The civil service retirement fund is insolvent and is in trouble and the solution has to be reached, and in a very short period of time, with the support of the employees.

But the employees are supporting the Long amendment because they do not want social security coverage. I am going to offer the amendment and let the Senate decide: Do we want social security coverage or do we not? I think the Senator from Louisiana told me he would oppose the amendment, is that right?

Mr. LONG. I would expect to oppose it; yes. If the Senator offers an amendment, I think that Federal employees would not be covered by social security, I will vote against it and I will ask other Senators to vote against it. I feel that the new Federal employees should be covered by social security. That, may I say, is the view of the majority of Democrats who sponsor this amendment. We feel they should be covered. We intend to vote for coverage.

May I say to my able friend from Alaska, the Senator from Louisiana appreciates his position. When I first came here, my first assignment was to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee. I was made chairman of the subcommittee on retirement. It turned out, and I had to struggle around with the employee unions at that time because, as you might anticipate, they were very hopeful of getting some very large pay raises. While I was willing to go along with a pay raise but a reasonable salary to protect the Public Treasury, just as does the Senator from Alaska.

I know the problems the Senator is speaking to. But I have to say in fairness, we are not asking the social security beneficiaries to buy a pig in a poke. They say—what benefits are they going to get, and what sacrifice they are going to have to make in order to have their program continued and funded. I think in fairness the same thing ought to be done for the Federal employees. We ought to let them see what they are going to get before we enact legislation that prejudices for the future the continuation of the existing program?

Mr. STEVENS. All I can tell the Senator is that in my discussion with members of the Social Security Commission, with the leadership in the other body, I am convinced that what they are going to get if they upset this current solution for the social security problem is a lot of antagonism from the public as a whole. It is going to come right back down on the civil service retirement system and provide employees of the Federal Government with at least as good a plan, and I believe the plan we had last year is a better plan.

Do you know less than 30 percent of the employees to contribute to the civil service retirement system ever get any benefits out of it? Of those, I think less than a quarter are women. That means that most women who come into Government pay into the civil service retirement system and when they leave they only get back their contributions.

If these same women were working for a private sector, the employer would contribute and the employee would contribute and when they left the benefits of the plan would go with them. But that is not the system here.

We have a plan which would benefit those who work for the Government longer than the vesting period but not long enough to retire. We had a plan that gave a stimulus to private investment. We had a plan that gave management over the pension fund to the employees, and we could show them.

The actuaries agreed, our plan would deliver a better system.
But, again, the assumption was first year was social security. That first year of social security is opposed by every employee group that I know of. As I said, it has been a parting of the ways for this Senator and many of those groups of employees that they are unwilling to accept the advice I have given them, that it is going to happen.

I am going to offer an amendment to the Senator's amendment to say, "No, let us take them out entirely," because I doubt the Members will vote on that and make a record for these people to see how much support there is in the Senate for taking Federal employees out of social security, period. I think there are just two or three of us who believe that way.

I still believe we could have made even a better system than this one if the Social Security Commission had kept its hands off the Federal retirement system. All they have done is taken a transmutation from that patient, and it is probably terminally ill. We could have cured the illness of the system. We cannot anymore, once they are covered in social security.

We must reform the system. We must come up with a pension plan that assumes the existence of social security, something we would not have had to do otherwise.

I find myself in the strange position of disagreeing with the Senator's basic assumption. I do not see why the Senator should put those of us who have the duty to come up with a plan into this position. It will not be the Finance Committee but it will be the Civil Service Committees that will come up with some sort of plan. We must work with the people who oppose us because we are willing to go along with your assumption.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 127
(Purpose: To eliminate coverage of Federal employees for purposes of title II of the Social Security Act)

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its consideration. I will say to the Members, it is very simple so we will not have to waive it being read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Alaska (Mr. STEVENS), for himself and Mr. MATHIAS, proposes unprinted amendment numbered 127 to the Finance Committee bill, page 198, space 183 to 186.

At the end thereof add the following:

On page 4, beginning with line 3, strike out all through page 9, line 19.

Mr. STEVENS. My amendment excludes Federal employees entirely from the social security system. That is what they seek in the Long amendment. That is what I would seek, if we were starting afresh, not to include Government employees in social security. I propose that they are provided a vote on this amendment they will recognize that some of us believe we can reform the civil service system without having social security be the first phase of that system. It was not necessary to have to have the Government employees pay into social security.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand we have had enough debate on this amendment and we can probably vote on the amendment very quickly. I will just say a word and then we will start voting.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second. There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Which amendment did the Senator request the yeas and nays on?

Mr. LONG. On the Stevens amendment, and the underlying amendment as well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to ordering the yeas and nays on the underlying amendment? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays on the underlying amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. If this amendment fails, Mr. President, I do have a second amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second on the underlying amendment? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we hope to conclude action on this bill by 3 p.m. We will have to move rather quickly. In addition to the series of amendments with reference to the Long amendment, the Senator from Montana has another amendment that I hope will take long. The Senator from South Dakota and the Senator from Hawaii have worked out an amendment with reference to certain aliens that I understand can be accepted. Senator Levin has an amendment and Senator Long has an amendment on determining the threshold for taxing benefits. Perhaps there is another amendment by the Senator from Colorado.

We do not have many amendments left but about four of these will require roll calls. There are no other amendments being drafted while we are debating this amendment. That is one problem when you have staff doing nothing. They are drafting amendments and go to conference. I would suggest, however, that if we come out of conference without Federal employees being covered, it probably would not be a social security package which the President would sign.

We have been told by Harry C. Ballantyne, Chief Actuary of the Social Security Administration, about the actuarial cost estimates made on Senator Long's proposed amendment:

Because of the uncertainty of the development of a supplemental pension program for new Federal employees, we are unable to attach any estimates of short-range or long-range savings to Senator Long's proposal. Therefore, if the proposed amendment were enacted, with no other changes in the Senate Finance Committee bill, the long-range actuarial balance would change from a surplus of 0.08 percent of taxable payroll to a deficit of 0.20 percent under 1983 alternative II-B assumptions. Similarly, the proposed short-range balance in 1980-89 would be reduced by $9.3 billion.

That is a fact we must consider, Mr. President.

I also wanted to refer to a letter that I received from a distinguished member of the Commission, a former Commissioner of the Social Security system from 1962 to 1973, Robert M. Ball. I thought it was an excellent letter on why he believes Federal employees should be covered. I should like to read portions of that letter and have the balance of it printed in the Record.

First of all, he says:

I fully support the coverage of Federal civilian employees newly hired after January 1, 1984, as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform and the establishment for such newly hired employees of a benefit plan within the Civil Service Retirement system that would build on social security coverage, just as is the case with the pension plans of private employers. I would like to tell you why I take this position.

I spent most of my working career, 30 years, as a Federal employee, and although during the last 11 years of that period I was involved in pension reform and always thought of myself as a career civil servant. I believe that the business of the United States.
States is the most important and challenging business in this country, and we can have available to us in the long run the best minds and skills of this and later generations. The need for a government of skilled administrators, researchers, policy analysts—the need to fulfill the mission transcends one’s personal views about the proper direction for government. Whether one wishes to move the government in one direction or another, there is no doubt about the high competence in carrying out the tremendous responsibilities of the United States government.

He indicates that he would do nothing that would undermine the system. The senators, in the majority, he indicates, go on to explain why he believes that we should have coverage of newly hired—that are the two key words—newly hired Federal workers. There is no one currently in the Federal service now who is going to be affected at all by this provision.

I must say if they do not like the Federal system or the possibility of a supplemental program, they do not have to come into the Federal service. They have that option. We try to avoid forcing anything on anyone in the Federal service now. There was no intent to do that in anything the Commission recommended or in anything the Senate Finance Committee brought to the Senate floor.

Just to summarize Mr. Ball’s letter and the reasons he favors coverage:

One, in the long run, Federal employees will lose if they are perceived by the public for selfish reasons from the Federal system or the possibility of a supplemental program. We are only attempting to cover all employment for which it is practical, including military service.

I think that in itself answers that question. It also addresses the question raised by Senator Dole about the perception of all the people out there in my State and every other State who believe that Federal employees should be brought into the system.

Two, the combination of social security coverage and newly designed benefit provisions within the civil service retirement system for new employees should be set up in such a way that, overall, the combination will provide as good protection as the present civil service system does alone. There is no intention to diminish eligibility of social security benefits. The amounts paid for these risks are generally more favorable to low-paid employees than the present civil service system, and frequently social security is better for those who move in and out of Federal employment, since the possibility of missing eligibility for social security is protected against. Very important, full survivorship and disability protection is more quickly achieved under social security.

These are very important considerations, Mr. President.

And four, it is true that with extension of coverage to Federal employees, Federal employees will lose an unfair advantage which they now have over those covered by social security throughout their working lives. But this, I believe, should be the case. At present, about 73 percent of Federal annuitants who are age 62 or more are also eligible for social security, thereby providing social security protection under more favorable benefit-to-contribution ratios than are possible for most people.

That is another factor that should be considered.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the balance of this excellent letter be printed in the RECORD, because it makes a strong case for covering Federal employees—newly hired Federal employees—to take effect on January 1. If there is no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ROBERT M. BALL, Chairman, Committee on Finance, Washington, D.C., February 17, 1983.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I fully support the coverage of Federal civilian employees newly hired after January 1, 1984, as recommended by the National Commission on Social Security Reform and the establishment for such newly hired employees of a benefit plan within the Civil Service Retirement system that would build on social security coverage, just as is the case with the pension plans of private employers. I would like to tell you why I take this position.

I spent most of my working career, 30 years, as a Federal employee, and although during the period I was a Federal employee, I have always thought of myself as a career civil servant. I believe that the business of the United States is the challenge of building business in the world, and we must be able to attract to it the best minds and skills of this and later generations. The need for a government of skilled administrators, researchers, policy analysts—those are the need for creative minds—transcends one’s personal views about the proper direction for government.

I strongly believe that a Government in conservative or liberal directions, there is a need for high competence in carrying out the tremendous responsibilities of the United States government.

It follows, therefore, that I would do nothing knowingly to reduce the attractiveness of government service. On the contrary, I am appalled at the limits that have been placed on compensation so that Federal pay is becoming less and less competitive with the private sector. It is hurting our Nation when we make it more difficult to attract and hold the best people to work for us. If we are in the service or health care system and other fringe benefits have traditionally been a part of Federal government personnel policy. To bring these benefits have been made up for, frequently, lower wage and salary levels. I believe it is of great importance to continue the policy of fully adequate retirement and fringe benefits for Federal employees—those presently employed and those hired in the future—to make our Government work well. It is good that the Federal government has been a leader in personnel policy in this area.

I give the reasons why I favor the coverage of newly hired Federal employees below:

1. In the long run, Federal employees will lose the unfair advantage that they have been granted for selfish reasons from our basic, compulsory social insurance system that covers practically everyone else in the country. Social security, for its additional purpose of providing protection to make up for income loss because of retirement in old age, total disability, or the death of a wage earner in the family, is a compact between the generations in which all share the burdens and the benefits. It is anomalous, to say the least, that Federal civilians are the ones who do not take part in this national effort. For many years now, coverage has been extended to all employment for which it is practical, including military service. I have been a military person and I know how important it is to attract and hold the best people to work for us. If we are in the service or health care system and other fringe benefits have traditionally been a part of Federal government personnel policy. To bring these benefits have been made up for, frequently, lower wage and salary levels. I believe it is of great importance to continue the policy of fully adequate retirement and fringe benefits for Federal employees—those presently employed and those hired in the future—to make our Government work well. 2. The combination of social security coverage and newly designed benefit provisions within the civil service retirement system for new employees should be set up in such a way that, overall, the combination will provide as good protection as the present civil service system does alone. There is no intention to diminish eligibility of Federal employees to receive social security benefits. The amounts paid for these risks are generally more favorable to low-paid employees than the civil service system, and frequently social security is better for those who move in and out of Federal employment. The possibility of missing eligibility for social security is protected against. Very important, full survivorship and disability protection is more quickly achieved under social security.

3. For many new employees, this arrangement of social security plus a completely independent supplementary plan, as in private industry, would be better than the present civil service plan alone. Social security with its weighted benefit formula gives the Federal annuitant the advantage of the weighted social security benefit formula in the civil service system for new employees as compared to the presently employed.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I strongly support the amendment of the Senator from Alaska. I hope we can vote and proceed expeditiously.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I am not sure the Senator from Kansas realizes the amendment I have at the desk to the Long amendment is to take Federal employees completely out of social security. I have been advised by the Parliamentarian that there is a technical error. I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be modified to cover that point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the right to modify his amendment. The clerk will state the modification.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

In lieu of the language proposed to be inserted in section 101 shall be null and void.

Mr. STEVENS. The effect of that, I think we can still revive that portion of the features of the newly hired employees pay their money into the social security program—in any event, Mr. President, I think, may want to vote against it itself. It gives us an opportunity to demonstrate whether we are or against putting Federal employees be under that program.

The only difference is that we propose that Federal employees have an opportunity to see what they are going to get in return for what they are giving. It is that simple.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I am glad the Senator from Louisiana made that statement, because I want to assure the Senate that had we been left alone with the Federal civil service retirement, we would have had the same freedom to deal with that system as the social security system. We could have dealt with its system and we could have improved it. We could have made it responsive to the needs and wishes of our society. However, the social security question having come first and the proposal having been made to the Commission in order to solve the problems of the social security system, they have, as I said before, made the civil service system a terminally ill patient. I think we can still revile that system. It should be revived. I welcome the approval of this amendment.

What it will do, I admit, is send the social security system reforms back to the Commission for some solution to that portion of their insolvent problem that is related to the payments that would come from new Federal employees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified, of the Senator from Alaska. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) and the Senator from Masssachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Rudman). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

So Mr. Stevens' amendment (UP No. 127), as modified, is rejected.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 128

Purpose: To require the establishment of a Social Security supplemental retirement program for new Federal employees by October 1, 1985, and to provide retirement crediting for new employees during the period between December 31, 1983, and October 1, 1985.

Mr. Stevens. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The amendment proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 128.

Mr. Stevens. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of the language to be proposed insert the following:

"(c)(1) The amendments made by this section shall be effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983; "(2) For the purposes of this section the term 'new employee' means any individual whose service is employment under section 210(a)(5) of the Social Security Act (as effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983) and section 321(b)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (as effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983); "(3) Not later than October 1, 1985, there shall be established by law a retirement program that provides retirement benefits which supplement benefits payable under title II of the Social Security Act for new employees; "(4) Notwithstanding any other provision of law— "(a) new employees shall not pay into the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, and deductions shall not be withheld from the basic pay of any such employee for the purpose of paying into such fund; "(b) if a retirement program is established pursuant to paragraph (3) by October 1, 1985— "(i) each new employee shall, for the purposes of such program, be deemed to be in service for the period beginning January 1, 1984, and ending September 30, 1985, or, if earlier, on the day before the effective date of such retirement program; and "(ii) no payment of a contribution for such retirement program shall be required of such employee with respect to such service; and "(c) if no retirement program is established pursuant to paragraph (3) by October 1, 1985— "(i) each new employee shall, for the purposes of subchapter III of chapter 83 of title 5, United States Code, be deemed to be in service for the period beginning January 1, 1984, and ending September 30, 1985; "(ii) no payment of a contribution for the purposes of such subchapter shall be required of such employee with respect to such service; and "(iii) clause (1) shall not apply with respect to service performed by such employee under employment by the United States Government after September 30, 1985.

Mr. Stevens. Mr. President, this amendment, now that the Senate has gone on record that it does not endorse the intent of the Long Amendment is failed, my new amendment assumes that new civil service employees would be covered by law at the beginning of the year pursuant to the Commission report.

The problem that we have is dealing with the long amendment. The Long Amendment is backed by people who do not want to see civil servants pay into the social security. That is not the intent of the Senator from Louisiana but that is the intent of the people who seek its passage.

My amendment requires that a new supplemental pension for civil servants be enacted into law, as I said, by October 1, 1985. All Federal employees hired after December 31 of this year would not contribute to the civil service retirement system. Instead, they would be in the social security system and would be given credit in the new Federal Pension system when the date of the hire of the new employee without regard to when the system becomes effective.

In effect, it is a free ride for new employees in the new Federal retirement system.

If Senators vote for the Long amendment they are going to put social security coverage for civil servants in the political year of 1984 when it is going to become an issue in the Presidential campaign and it is not going to happen. It is not going to happen in a Congress that is divided politically as the Senate and the House has a great way in an election year.

Those of us who are on the Civil Service Subcommittee and the Civil Service Committee in the House of Representatives know we have a very difficult problem. It is worse, as I have said, than the Social Security problem. The unfunded liability of the civil service retirement system is more than twice as much as the projected liability of the Social Security system, and we are working hard, after a Presidential commission and all the work that has gone into it, to reform the social security system which has a lesser problem.

Since my amendment to exclude Federal employees from social security failed, my new amendment assumes that the new employees would be covered by law at the beginning of the year pursuant to the Commission report. But those new employees would not have to pay both social security and civil service retirement contributions. To do so would be quite burdensome.

So, Mr. President, I am hopeful that the Members of the Senate will now provide protection for Federal employees since that last vote indicated the Senate wishes to lower civil service employees under social security.

Mr. Stevens. I yield.

Mr. Warner. Under the previous amendment which was defeated, it was quite clear that Members of Congress would be taken out from under social security had the amendment passed. Will the Senator address that issue in this amendment?

Mr. STEVENS. I am glad the Senator mentioned that because it was not clear. It was not until after I offered the amendment that staff advised me that the staff had the impression that I had no intention under that last amendment to do so. This amendment does not affect Members of Congress at all. This amendment affects new Federal civil servants only.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield further, there was nothing personal intended in the question. As a matter of fact, I was one of those who came to the Senator after the vote started, and pointed it out.

Of course, our distinguished friend, the Senator from Louisiana, has amended the amendment, of which I am a cosponsor, which does not affect Members of Congress.

Mr. STEVENS. As long as the Members are here, we ought to discuss this because the staff advice I received from the House includes Members of Congress as employees within the social security system.

Currently those of us who have outside income beyond our Senate salary pay social security as self-employed persons, and we pay more. The House bill and the Senate Finance Committee bill save money for those people who have outside income. It punishes those who do not have outside income, new Members of Congress, those who do not take honoraria, who will have their social security contributions increased.

So we are going to get to that subject before the day is over, but I want to assure the Senator from Virginia that there is no intention in the amendment to deal with that question.

The Senator from Louisiana's amendment preserves the intention of the Senate Finance Committee and the House Ways and Means Committee. Members of Congress will be included as employees which, as I said, will save money for most Members of Congress who have outside income. That is the vast majority of the Members of Congress. Those who do not have outside income, it will increase their contributions because they will then pay as employees into the social security system and they will be the only Federal employees who are currently on the rolls of Federal employment who will be so treated.

I do think that ought to be addressed at a later time. This, however, deals only with new employees who continue in the civil service retirement system.

I do believe, and I hope Members will agree, that having decided that the Social Security Commission's recommendations that civil service employees pay into the social security system participants with a break in service of more than one year would be forced to pay 13.5 percent of their income—7 percent to go to the civil service retirement system and 6.5 percent to the social security system. The same contribution would be exacted from the Federal Government.

We all know the strains that have been placed on workers and employers as the result of recent increases in payroll taxes—they have served as a disincentive for hiring and have placed a greater burden on the work force—both at times when they can least be afforded. To require that the new Federal employee almost double the current contribution for retirement was more than a painful, inequitable and unnecessary financial burden on all new Federal workers.

In many cases, the benefits associated with a job may be the key factor in drawing well-qualified applicants for openings. This provision, as currently
Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I am pleased to be a cosponsor of the Long amendment. This proposal will simply delay enactment of social security coverage of new Federal employees until Congress has had the time to thoroughly review and implement supplemental legislation. It will not exempt Members of Congress and the President from coverage.

While we all recognize the urgency to enact social security reforms, we should not allow that urgency to stampede us into poor policy. And that is exactly the case if we accept the National Commission provision to bring new Federal employees into the social security system. We will, in essence, be gutting the civil service retirement system under the guise of saving social security. That to me is a very bad deal.

Mr. President, the proposal to bring new Federal employees into social security was simply not put out. For if it had been, it would never have been made at this time. The proposal's costs, in both financial and human terms, simply outweigh its benefits. First of all, there is little doubt that this is a poor financial bargain for both the taxpayer and the social security system. At the least, some or all of the $500 billion unfunded liability of the civil service retirement trust fund will have to be funded by the Federal Treasury. Exactly how much or how little is open to dispute. But the fact is that the taxpayers of this country—already carrying a large share of civil service retirement costs—could be accepting an additional $500 billion in debt over the next 40 years if we enact this merger. And at the worst, we may not only be accepting these new costs, but may actually be exacerbating social security's problems over the long run by bringing millions of new beneficiaries into this troubled system.

Second, bringing new Government workers into social security at this time would be one more signal to the Federal employee that he is really a second class worker. The civil servant is already lagging behind his private sector counterpart by 13½ percent in wages and he is possibly facing a total wage freeze this year. Health and other benefits have been cut back over the last 2 years and this spring the administration has proposed yet another radical set of changes in basic retirement benefits. And now to top all of that off, the Government worker is seeing the civil service pension system, which has existed since 1920, basically dismantled in the name of saving money and efficiency. The result, only, is the wrong signal at the wrong time because we have never needed a competent American Government more than today. And the only way to insure that competence is to have an effective, efficient, and fair civil service—not a demoralized work force under constant attack.

And third, this proposal is backed more by anecdotes than by facts. By that I mean that there seems to be a notion that the retired civil servant is somehow reaping unearned and astronomical benefits at the expense of social security—the old whipping boy called the double dipper. But what may have once been the case, is not necessarily so today. The civil servant needs to pay into social security for at least 40 quarters—10 years—in order to qualify for benefits. The minimum benefit, which did provide a supplement to retirement, for civil servants, was eliminated in 1981. The public pension offset, which we enacted in 1977, is scheduled to take effect this year. And, finally, other provisions of this bill will reduce any windfall a retired civil servant might reap by revising the so-called tilt in the social security benefit formula.

Mr. President, I am a realist and understand that this bill is going to be enacted despite my reservations. It simply has too many heavyweights supporting it from inside and outside the House. The President himself is the Speaker of the House. And it should be enacted because we simply cannot let social security go under. But we should not rush Pellmell into a mistake regarding the civil service pension system. And our amendment will give us time to avoid that disaster.

Our amendment simply codifies what is assumed in the bill—that a supplementary system will be enacted to protect the rights of Federal employees and the taxpayers. Instead of putting the cart before the horse by bringing civil servants into social security before we have enacted legislation to implement this change, we put the cart back where it belongs. This amendment will delay coverage of new Government workers until Congress has passed the necessary supplemental legislation. This will not only protect the civil servant but also the taxpayer from a possible fiscal folly. Once we are able to study this proposal—away from the crisis atmosphere that surrounds this bill—then we will be better able to analyze all of the potential costs and benefits. And if my analysis proves correct, I am confident that the fiscally shortsighted aspects of the potential merger will become very clear to all Members of the Senate.

In conclusion, Mr. President, there is no doubt that the civil service retirement system has been in need of reform. I have supported and sponsored a number of the changes we have enacted in the last few years and I will carefully review any reasonable proposals made in the future. But what the committee is suggesting today is not reform. Instead, it is what I like to call blind faith legislation. That is, we are asked to enact huge changes that will benefit the taxpayer, the social security recipient, and the Federal employee billions of dollars in the future—on the faith that all of these potential problems will be worked out after the law is passed. Well, I for one have seen the folly of that route in the past and do not want to see it repeated here. Our amendment will prevent that from occurring today and it will prevent Congress from ever rolling into enactment a shortsighted piece of legislation.

Mr. SASSER. Mr. President, I rise today to sponsor and express my strong support for the Long amendment to the social security bill.

The amendment, ably described by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, provides that new Federal employees will not be covered under social security unless and until legislation is enacted that would provide new Federal employees the full protection of a supplemental civil service retirement system.

This is an eminently fair amendment, Mr. President.

It recognizes the obligation of the Federal Government to both the social security system and the civil service retirement system.

It recognizes the fact that we must have a solvent social security system that will meet the need of the 36 million Americans who depend on social security for basic retirement, survivor, and disability benefits.

It also recognizes the fact that we have a solemn obligation to maintain the integrity of the civil service retirement system for the more than 1.7 million Federal retirees and survivors currently receiving benefits, and the more than 2.9 million Federal workers that are eligible for civil service retirement benefits.

This amendment enables the Congress to meet its obligation to social security beneficiaries and civil servant alike.

Now, Mr. President, we have been on a fast track on social security legislation.

We have moved on this legislation with breath-taking speed. The National Commission on Social Security made its final recommendations to the Congress on January 30, 1983. The House Ways and Means Committee reported this legislation on March 4, 1983, and it was passed by the House on March 9, 1983.

And here in the Senate we are on this legislation less than 2 months after its introduction.

I do not quarrel with the speed with which we are considering this legislation. We must have a social security bill in place so that social security checks can continue to be mailed in July of 1983 to social security recipients.

But it is a fact of legislative life that whenever this Congress moves a major bill on a fast track, there are bound to be flaws in the legislation.

That certainly is the case with H.R. 1900, as amended.

Unfortunately, the House of Representatives did not choose to have a fair and open debate about the issue of the coverage of Federal employees under social security.

A number of Congressmen implored the House Rules Committee for a rule that would permit an amendment dealing with the issue of coverage of new Federal employees under social security.

That proposed rule was denied, and the House of Representatives was not able to debate this issue in its consideration of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983.

Fortunately, Mr. President, we are able to rectify this event and consider a suitable amendment to deal with this issue.

And in that regard, I commend Senator Lugar for bringing this amendment before the Senate Finance Committee and before the full Senate today.

Mr. President, I support this amendment for several reasons.

First, there is a matter of basic equity. Federal civil servants are rightly concerned that coverage of new Federal employees would totally undermine the fiscal integrity of the current civil service retirement system.

Without new Federal employees making a full contribution to the civil service retirement system, it is estimated that the Federal retirement system will amount to some $640 billion by the year 2022.

In essence, passage of the current legislation without the Long amendment could result in back-door destruction of the civil service retirement system.

That is not fair, Mr. President.

I believe that one of the major attractions to Federal service is the civil service retirement system. We have a civil service retirement system for some 63 years. And the civil service retirement system has prompted, and prompted many, many fine people to come into Federal service.

And I can say that from personal experience, Mr. President, because my father was a dedicated civil servant.

We must not break faith with the Federal employee and undermine the civil service retirement system.

A second reason for my support of the Long amendment, Mr. President, is the fact that I believe we do not have the full facts of the fiscal impact of the coverage of new Federal employees on social security financing.

For example, when the Social Security Commission first broached the recommendation for the coverage of new Federal employees under social security, they suggested that we would add some $21 billion to the social security funds between 1984 and 1988. Later, in testimony before the Congress, Chairman Alan Greenspan reported that estimate downward to some $12.5 billion, and independent analysis of this problem notes that the funds transferred into the social security system would only be some $5.3 billion during that period.

If that is the case, Mr. President, the fiscal benefits of covering new Federal employees under the social security system has been oversold. Indeed, if the savings have been so overstated, it is difficult to believe that there can be any savings at all—such as paying for the administrative costs of the social security system out of general revenue for in-fusing additional revenues into the social security system.

We have not had a full debate over the fiscal savings of including new Federal employees into the social security system, and that is another reason for not going forward with the proposal to cover new Federal employees under social security.

Finally, Mr. President, I support the adoption of the Long amendment because as it stands now, in January 1984, new Federal employees will be subject to a retirement contribution of nearly 14 percent, because they will be covered by both social security and a civil service retirement system.

This is a fiscal burden which is far too great for Federal workers. It will most definitely make it more and more difficult to attract qualified workers into the Federal service. As a result all Federal services will suffer as the Congress further deliberates changes to the civil service retirement system.

Mr. President, we are on a fast track with social security legislation. But in this process we are proceeding to make major changes in the civil service retirement system which have not been the subject of extensive deliberations by the U.S. Congress.

Once again we are giving short shrift to the Federal employee. And lest we forget, the Federal employee serves us all. They are the ones that mail the social security checks every month. They are the ones that maintain our parks and forests. They are the ones that investigate and control communicable diseases. Indeed, Federal employees provide essential services that touch practically every facet of our lives, each and every day.

And I simply assure that we provide the Federal civil servant with a fair deal and eventually develop an integrated retirement system that does not bankrupt the civil servant and that retains the basic integrity of the civil service retirement system.

Mr. DeCONCINI. Mr. President, during the past 2 years this administration has conducted a sustained campaign against Federal employees. In 1981, the Reagan administration successfully eliminated the twice-yearly COLA. In 1982, the Reagan administration tried to cap COLA's for Federal retirees, but with mixed results. I opposed both of these moves, and I continue to be opposed to any efforts to undermine the integrity of the civil service retirement system. It is incumbent upon this Congress to protect the promised benefits to those who are now retirees or are presently contribu-
I reluctantly support those provisions of S. 1 which place newly hired Federal employees under social security. I have considered the natural imperative of preserving the social security system. However, Congress has an obligation to provide new Federal hires with a supplementary retirement plan before placing them under the social security system.

Mr. President, I was frankly disappointed that the Social Security Commission itself did not recommend a specific supplemental plan for new hires, and that the Finance Committee did not insist on such a plan before bringing this bill to the floor. However, I am proud to cosponsor Senator Long's amendment to correct this oversight. The amendment requires that new hires not be placed under social security until a supplemental retirement system for new hires is in place.

Federal employees are hard-working and dedicated public servants. And, if we pass this bill without Senator Long's amendment, the toll on Federal employees will be enormous. Besides, not to do so would be unfair.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting Senator Long's amendment.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I am very pleased to join my distinguished colleague Senator Long as co-sponsor of his amendment to defer social security coverage for newly hired Federal employees until legislation is enacted by Congress to provide for a supplemental civil service program for the affected newly hired Federal workers.

In my opinion, the amendment offered by Senator Long is reasonable and absolutely essential for the protection of both current and newly hired Federal employees. In this regard, it is important to emphasize that the National Commission on Social Security, while mandating coverage for newly hired Federal workers, specifically recommended that these same employees be afforded the protection of a supplemental civil service retirement system. Regrettably, no such coordinated coverage and protection for new Federal employees exists or has been proposed to Congress for consideration.

Equally important, the amendment proposed by Senator Long will not alter the essential task of responding to the critical social security financing issues addressed by the National Commission on Social Security.

Mr. President, when the President's Commission on Social Security recommended social security coverage for newly hired employees, I had serious reservations about this proposal, particularly because of the coordination with the other major proposals by the Reagan administration for changes in Federal workers retirement system. In my opinion, the sum total of all these proposals including the retirement age and contributions to the system would place an extraordinary burden on Federal employees.

Taken as a whole, these proposals including the coverage of newly hired Federal employees would clearly be structured in a way that threaten the future of the civil service retirement system. That would be a tragic loss not only to Government workers, but also to the public which depends upon qualified Federal workers for essential services.

Mr. President, in view of the administration's proposal to dramatically revise the entire civil service retirement system, and the uncertainty of any meaningful supplemental retirement coverage for new Federal employees, I am pleased to join Senator Long as cosponsor, and urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not.

Mr. LONG. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, this amendment does not reach the problem that prompted me to offer my amendment and my co-sponsors to support it.

Of these three possibilities we have facing us, the committee bill, the Stevens substitute, or the Long amendment, only the Long amendment would link social security coverage to the enactment of a supplemental civil service program. The Stevens substitute makes coverage under social security mandatory whether or not a supplemental civil service program has been enacted, and that is the problem with it.

Mandating social security coverage for new Federal employees means that the Congress will have to modify the civil service retirement program for those employees in order to avoid their paying 14 percent into two programs with similar protection. Present Federal employees are apprehensive that the need to enact a supplemental civil service program will provide the administration with an opportunity to press for its proposals to make substantial changes in civil service retirement for present employees. That would not be to the advantage of those employees. In other words, the purpose of the Long amendment is to seek to have the supplemental program legislated in a situation of legislative neutrality, where there will not be a Sword of Damocles hanging over the employees, where they will not be badly prejudiced when they undertake to press for a program which they link to their future.

The Stevens amendment would address that problem because social security coverage would be mandated even if Congress should fail to act on the supplemental civil service program. I believe, Mr. President, we have demonstrated by our vote that the majority of the Senate does feel new Federal employees should be under social security. If Congress did not feel that way, they had the opportunity to vote that way and so voted. Those who did feel that way had the opportunity to vote for it.

Now we have an opportunity to see how many Senators feel that there should be social security coverage, who want something about Federal employees. I think it is a question of legislative neutrality where Federal employees can see what they will get in return for what they are giving—or should it be in a situation where they are prejudiced, because they are going to be prejudiced under the Stevens amendment, and they should not be prejudiced.

I hope the Stevens amendment will not be agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana is correct in saying that we just demonstrated by a vote of 86 to 12 that Federal employees should not be exempt. I hope that message will not last on the House conferences when they go to conference on this bill.

I think we might just as well lay it all out on the table. In the House they took a lot of heat on whether or not to do anything about Federal employees, and they decided to stick with the Social Security Commission.

Let us face it, they are not too anxious to do that and have the U.S. Senate say, "Well, that was all right for the House, but we are in the United States Senate so we can just cut the ground out from under them." I want the conferences on the House side to know there was a vote of 86 to 12 not to exempt Federal employees, and I think we have laid that groundwork. The bipartisan vote was 86 to 12, so it is a strong indication where the sentiment in the Senate is. I want my House colleagues to know there is no backing off in the general sense by the U.S. Senate.

I happen to believe that the Stevens amendment is a good idea—I wish I had thought of it myself—but it is a good idea, and it does protect the concerns of Federal employees. Federal employees do have some legitimate concerns and they deserve to be protected. They are hard-working people.

I told some of the Federal employee leaders that I do not want Republicans all to stand up and vote against the Federal employees so that all the Democrats can vote for the Federal employees. But if that is the price of getting a social security package, then I guess we have to do the best we can. We have as much interest in Federal employees as anyone else, and I hope we have demonstrated that or will demonstrate that.

I believe the Stevens amendment as a compromise is a good one. It deals with the key criticisms leveled by the opponents of the National Commis-
I would say to those who do not like the Stevens amendment, the Senator from Kansas would prefer to go with what we have in the Senate bill and what we have in the House bill, but the Senate has not the choice we have. The Senator from Kansas believes that the Senate from Louisiana may have a majority. If he has a majority, then we have a problem. It may be a problem we can address in conference, it may be the end of the conference package, but we do not know that yet.

So I would suggest to those who say, "Well, this goes too far; we shouldn't do this much for Federal employees; they ought to be treated like everyone else in the system," I believe the Stevens approach is a moderate approach to try to solve the problem.

It is going to be fair to new hires coming into the system, it is going to be fair to those on the Commission, fair to the Congress, and others who have had to put this package together. I hope we might adopt the Stevens amendment.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I want to emphasize what the Senator from Kansas just said. We have had lengthy discussions with Members of the House on how to deal with the problems dealing with the civil service retirement system. We have a tentative agreement that, instead of looking for a Presidential Commission to deal with a future replacement for the current system, we will have a consultant or consultants jointly between the House and Senate committees, that we will have the system and its problems studied and it will be studied on the basis that social security will be the first portion of a civil servant's security for life after he or she leaves the Federal employment.

The difficulty with that is that we have no timeframe to work on, no real compulsion for the Congress to act, or no reason for the Government employees who work in the public sector to support any new system so long as they are assured that they will not be forced to save money or pay into it. The Senator from Louisiana may have a majority because he has no timeframe to work on, no real compulsion for the Congress to act, and no reason for the Government employees who work in the public sector to support any new system.

I am at a loss for words to explain how those of us who have the responsibility to deal with the subject can deal with it if the Long amendment passes. Because all they need to do is oppose the creation of a new system for retirement of civil servants and they will never be included under social security, notwithstanding that last vote of the Senate.

On the other hand, if, by October 1, 1985, the new supplemental system would receive the revenues foregone by having had new Federal hires temporarily excluded.

Finally, to those who are concerned that this amendment could jeopardize the social security system. Under this amendment, if a supplemental retirement system is in place by October 1, 1985, newly hired Federal employees would receive retroactive credit to the new system. Likewise, the new supplemental system would receive the revenues foregone by having had new Federal hires temporarily excluded.

On the other hand, if, by October 1, 1985, the new supplemental system has not been enacted, such retroactive credit and contributions would be made to the regular civil service retirement system.

I am not suggesting that the system should go without new income, only that if there is some temporary period during which new Federal hires are not contributing to the civil service retirement system, it will not go broke as alleged by some.
Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. STEVENS. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. Is the opposite point true, then, that the 12 Senators who voted for your amendment should then vote for the Long amendment?

Mr. STEVENS. It is a good point. The impact of the last amendment was to demonstrate that the Senate opposes the basic assumption of the Long amendment.

Mr. LEVIN. But the 12 Senators who supported the Stevens amendment and are opposed to employees coming under social security should all then vote for the Long amendment?

Mr. DOLE. If the others vote the other way, we will take that.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank the Senator for his rhetoric. I intend to support my own amendment.

Mr. LEVIN. I beg the Senator's pardon?

Mr. STEVENS. I supported the last one and I support this one. I do not think they are consistent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Alaska (Mr. Stevens). The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. MOYNIHAN (when his name was called). Mr. President, on this vote I have a live pair with the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy). If he were present and voting, he would vote "nay." If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea." Therefore, I withhold my vote.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Florida (Mrs. Hawkins) is necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. DeConcini), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Chafee). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 45, nays 50, as follows:

So Mr. Stevens' amendment (UP No. 12) was rejected.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I think, in conferring with the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, that he is agreeable to having a voice vote on this matter and I think we are. There is no point in taking the time of the Senate, I believe.

Have the yeas and nays been ordered on the Long amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the yeas and nays be vacated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I withdraw that request.

Mr. President, I renew my request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing none, it is so ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Louisiana.

The amendment (UP No. 128) was adopted.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAKER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

(Later, the following occurred:)

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the Senate earlier today agreed by voice vote to a Long amendment to include new Federal employees under social security only after the Congress enacts a supplemental civil service program for those employees.
Mr. President, I voted against the two amendments that were offered by Mr. Stevens intending to vote for the Long amendment. That vote was by voice vote.

I want the Record to show that, had it been by roll call vote, I would have voted for the Long amendment.

I ask unanimous consent that this statement appear immediately after the voice vote in the bill, and I ask unanimous consent that any other Senators who wish to make similar statements be permitted to put in the Record such similar statements at that place also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I want to express the hope that the conferees on the part of the Senate stand firm in support of that amendment in conference.

I want this statement to appear also immediately following the voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I should like to have my name recorded following the minority leader as one of those who would have voted for the Long amendment. As a cosponsor of the Long amendment I would have voted aye on a roll call vote.

I am pleased that the Senate approved this amendment because it provides "fairness" to the new public employees. I urge the Senator from Kansas to include this provision in the final conference report.

Mr. BYRD. I say for the information of others who may not have heard my request, I asked—and the Senate agreed—that any amendment that is made in the Senate may put similar statements in the Record at that point.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I should like to associate myself with the remarks of the minority leader and also add my hopes that our conferees when they meet with the House of Representatives on this issue will adhere to our wishes relative to the Long amendment. I, too, am a cosponsor, supported and would have voted for the Long amendment had it been a roll call vote.

I certainly appreciate the remarks of my colleagues who have those marks of the Senator from West Virginia and the Senator from Arkansas.

As a cosponsor of the Long amendment, I also voted against the two previous amendments because of my support for the Long amendment. I join in voicing the hope that the conferees will reflect the Senate viewpoint of strong support for the Long amendment, keeping faith with those in the civil service system who have been assured that we will put in place an appropriate supplemental system, having this action taken before we began the payment into social security by new civil service employees.

I strongly endorse the statements that have just been made by the minority leader and by the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. SASSER. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield?

Mr. PRYOR. I am glad to yield to a friend from Oklahoma.

amendments to use the minimum amount of time. We need to get to conference hopefully by 5 o'clock this afternoon. If we cannot make it by 5 o'clock, we will probably just postpone the conference until tomorrow.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. DOLE. Yes, I yield.

Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. President, I call up printed amendment No. 527.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Montana (Mr. Baucus) proposed an amendment No. 527.

On page 99 of the matter proposed to be inserted, beginning with line 19, strike out all through page 198, line 5.

Redeem the sections 148 through 152 of the matter proposed to be inserted as sections 148 through 151, respectively.

Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STAFFORD). Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. President, this amendment Is really quite simple. It is to repeal a mistake that the committee made when we considered this bill—that is, section 148.

Under present law, States are required to collect social security taxes withheld by local subdivisions on a monthly basis. That is, States must collect within 30 days after the end of the month, the withholding deposits of local governments attributable to the employers they have working for them.

The committee decided, late one night, with no discussion, no hearings, and no examination whatsoever, to accelerate that withholding so that there would be 15 withholding periods instead of the normal four. That Is the reason why we should strike that law.

The committee decided, late one night, with no discussion, no hearings, and no examination whatsoever, to accelerate that withholding so that there would be 15 withholding periods instead of the normal four. That Is the reason why we should strike that law.

The National Commission did not consider this. The House did not consider it. The Ways and Means Committee did not consider it. No committee of the House or of the Senate has considered the withholding provisions as they apply to State and local governments.

Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. President, I am about to offer an amendment that deals with the withholding provisions applying to State and local governments.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, let me say to my colleagues that I think all we would like to finish, but some of us are conferees. We do not want to stay here until midnight to accommodate Senators who have statements that can be put in the Record so that when we go back to the conference others get home to bed.

If Senators would like to have the conference meet this evening, they should let us try to expedite the process. We are well aware of the amendments. We are prepared to accept a couple of them and try to defeat the others.

On that basis, I think the Senator from Montana is ready to offer an amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am about to offer an amendment that deals with the withholding provisions... law, said, "OK, we will change the law. We will speed up the collection, but we will only go to a monthly basis." That is the present law. My proposal is that the only time there were hearings, the only time the country had the opportunity to know what was involved here, Congress very definitely decided to put provisions into the amendment that the House did not touch it. That is why the House did not touch it. That is why no one else here has decided to change present law, except for the committee, after a few moments of discussion, late at night, when the committee considered this bill. Probably the reason why the committee adopted the provision was that it picked up some additional revenue over a decade—$2.2 billion.

In my judgment, we should keep the package secure, and by keeping the package secure, let us not enact amendments that break the package. Similarly, let us not enact amendments which are not needed and which will cause unnecessary chaos.

Mr. President, this amendment obviously is supported by the States and by various municipal organizations—the National Association of Counties, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National League of Cities, and many others. I will not list all the other organizations that support this amendment.

Let me conclude this point by saying that this amendment is the only major departure that the committee has taken from the National Commission package. There are some minor variations, but this is the only major departure. I think, Mr. President, that we should correct that oversight, correct that mistake, correct that misguided action that the committee took that night. Let us stay with the package.
each agent designated by him who makes a return pursuant to section 3126 shall be deemed a separate employer.’’.

(Section 126 of such Code (relating to application of tax) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

‘‘(5) STATE Pi.orss.—For purposes of this section and section 3126 of such Code (relating to applicability in case of certain governmental employees) is amended to read as follows:

‘‘(B) STATE Pi.orss.—For purposes of this subsection, In the case of remuneration received during any calendar year from a State or political subdivision thereof or any instrumentality which is wholly owned thereby, the Governor of the State and each agent designated by him who makes a return pursuant to section 3126 shall be deemed a separate employer.

(5) (B) Section 6413(c)(2)(B) and section 6411(a)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenues Code of 1986, as such provisions were applied to the deposit of FICA taxes but rather each local government entity would deal directly with the Federal Government.

(b) STATE Pi.orss.—For purposes of this subsection, In the case of remuneration received during any calendar year from a State or political subdivision thereof or any instrumentality which is wholly owned thereby, the Governor of the State and each agent designated by him who makes a return pursuant to section 3126 shall be deemed a separate employer.

(c) Amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to services performed after December 31, 1983.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I shall undertake to explain the amendment.

At the present time, when those local jurisdictions which are covered by social security submit their social security taxes, they do so through their State bureaucracies. There is an element of injustice in requiring a more rapid deposit of the withholding proceeds when they have to run it through the States. It literally puts the States in the position of having to collect it faster than seems fair.

So the straightforward way to handle it would be as suggested by this substitute amendment, and that is to simply let the local jurisdictions report their social security taxes directly to the IRS, as they presently do the taxes which they withhold for Federal income tax. In other words, that is going to put the local jurisdictions, the municipalities, and so on, exactly the same footing as any private employer.

We should bear in mind that some of these jurisdictions are fairly small. A few of them may even be as small as the small businesses that are covered by the Social Security Act, and so it is important to recognize that earlier amendments which we have added to this bill do liberalize the treatment of small business enterprises and assuming the adoption of the substitute, which we have under the bill, local jurisdictions would benefit from the same kind of liberalized treatment. In other words, we are not trying to impose a severe duty upon these local jurisdictions with respect to their deposit of social security taxes. As far as we are going to do in the original amendment as the Finance Committee amended it and the substitute which I have sent to the desk is simply to say that municipalities which are covered should be on the same footing.

If we should for some reason fail to adopt the substitute and in turn adopt the Baucus amendment, we would restore the present situation which is to give more favored treatment to units of local government than we give to private employers.

This does not seem fundamentally just to treat the State and local jurisdictions, particularly since they tend to have greater financial resources and greater resources of administration and data processing and so on, are given a better break than we give to small business concerns. It just does not make sense to me to say, for example, that the local gas station has to report its social security withholdings and pay those into the Treasury faster than does, say, a municipality or State government.

So that is the issue involved.

To sum up, the substitute amendment would provide that the IRS, not the Social Security Administration, would collect FICA taxes from the State and local government units. The rules for the frequency of FICA deposits would be the same as those which apply to private employers, and those rules already apply to the deposit of withheld income taxes by State and local governments.

And as I pointed out a moment ago, they have been liberalized by an earlier amendment which we have adopted.

Finally, each local government could be treated as a separate employer for the purposes of deposit of FICA taxes at the option of the Governor of the State.

With that word of explanation, I urge adoption of the substitute amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate?

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I understand the good faith of the Senator from Colorado. I think that the States would not collect withheld taxes but rather each local government subdivision, each local government entity would deal directly with the Federal Government.

Frankly, Mr. President, that is not even a baby step toward solving the problem. It does not meet the objections that I have. It would not meet the objections of the school districts, of the counties, of the cities, of the towns, of all the municipality subdivisions that are most directly affected by this amendment.

The main problem here is really that this is something that has to be worked out. Perhaps it could be phased in. We need some full discussion, not to debate it forever, but at least some discussion where mayors and officials from entities and subdivisions as small as school districts, talk to us, to both bodies on both sides of the Capitol, so we can work out something that makes sense to them.

We cannot do this here. We did not discuss it. We just enacted it, and there was no debate on it. Beyond that there is another point that has not been mentioned: For the next fiscal year these governments have to pay an additional payment. There will be 13 monthly payments instead of 12. Considering the desperate financial straits, that most States and most local government entities are in these days with the recession, and so I do not think this is a proper time to add this additional financial burden to them.

So what I am saying, Mr. President, is as much as I would like to adopt and agree with the Senator from Colorado, I cannot. If his substitute is adopted, then it is going to be according to the Parliamentarian, fails. All we will have done then is say keep the present provisions, section 148, except that States do not collect; everything else is the same.

As I say, that does not really go to the heart of the problem. That just touches the first little bit of the problem but does not go to the heart of the problem. So we have not really done anything. We are kind of wasting our time here. It is for those reasons that I must not agree to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. President, I therefore strongly urge that we do not adopt that provision. It does not go to the problem and I think that we should not agree to it.

On that score, Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the substitute amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator from Colorado as well as the chairman of the committee for helping to get the yeas and nays.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, unless there is something further, I think the issue is clear. The Senator from Montana has made some good points. It seems to me the most pernicious issue is we should not treat States and local jurisdictions differently than we treat private employers.

That does not dispute some of the points that he has made. It is just a question of how you feel about it. I feel everyone should be treated the same. So I am ready to vote if the Senator from Montana is.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I am except to say, yes, there is an equity argument here. Private employers have to pay as frequently as eight times monthly and they pay according to certain rules. Why should not State and local governments? That is the equity argument that has a lot of appeal.

The problem is we are going too quickly. We do not know what we are doing here. It is going to cause absolute chaos for all these little entities. What is the school district going to do? It does not know what is going on here. The school district and every other government entity is used to dealing with the State because under present law they submit to the States and they deal with the States, States, too, have 30 days within which to collect on the withheld payroll taxes that each of those local subdivisions provide.

Now, if we adopt the substitute amendment of the Senator from Colorado, States and particularly local subdivisions are not going to know what the world is going on here. They will have to deal with the IRS and deal with all the redtape and all the mess of the problems the employers have to deal with. I just suggest we possibly should ease into this, have a transition period.

The only way I know of doing that is to have a hearing on the subject. Let us address it and run out the kinks and the problems that obviously are going to arise because we know what happened in 1978 when a similar change was suddenly proposed.

We in the Congress looked at it, and said, “Yes, let us move it from quarter- to quarterly to monthly, but no so any further. Monthly collections by the States is what makes sense.”

As I said, that is also probably why the National Commission did not address this question because when Congress addressed it earlier it knew what the situation was.

Frankly, Mr. President, I am just here to try to talk a little common sense. I do not particularly carry water for local governments or for States, for that matter. Sure, we would like to add some more money to the trust fund, but let us be reasonable. Let us not be draconian, let us not be tyrannical, let us not be dictatorial. Let us try to keep that partnership with the local governments that we need to have in this country if we are going to work together and solve problems.

Frankly, as good as we would work with people, work with local governments, and then we will resolve that equity argument which the Senator from Colorado mentioned.

Therefore, I think we ought not to agree to the substitute. I urge my colleagues to agree to the underlying main amendment, hold the hearings, and let us get on with it so that we will solve the problem reasonably.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. The bill has been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIA5) is necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SPECTER). Is there any other Senator in the Chamber who wishes to vote? The clerk then announced—yeas 49, nays 48, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title I, insert the following new section:

STUDY OF INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNTS

Sec. . (a) The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall conduct a study of the feasibility of implementing Individual Retirement Security Accounts (hereinafter in this section referred to as "IRSA") or any similar alternative type of account.

(b) For purposes of this section, an IRSA shall be an account which includes, but is not limited to, the following features:

(1) Any individual who is required to pay tax under section 3101 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 may elect to make contributions to the account.

(2) An individual could make unlimited contributions to an IRSA and would receive an income tax credit equal to 20 percent of the amount of the contribution for any taxable year but not in excess of 20 percent of the amount of the taxes paid under section 3101 of such Code by such individual for such taxable year.

(3) To the extent that an individual elected to take advantage of the tax credit for a contribution to an IRSA, the Old Age and Survivors Insurance benefits of such individual under the Social Security Act would be reduced proportionately in a manner such that if an individual was allowed the maximum credit for 20 years, such individual's benefits would be reduced to zero.

(4) After the IRS system has been implemented, an increasing portion of the taxes imposed by sections 3101 and 3111 of such Code with respect to any individual would be transferred to such individual's account with a corresponding reduction in such individual's Old Age and Survivors Insurance benefits. Eventually all such taxes would be so transferred with an appropriate phaseout of the credit. The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall study 1 or more schedules for the increases in taxes phased in and phased out and submit to the Congress a report on the results of such study.

(5) An individual could withdraw funds from an IRSA only after age 62 without such amounts being taxed. If an individual withdraws funds from an IRSA prior to age 62, such amounts would be appropriately taxed unless used to purchase term life, health, or disability insurance.

(c) The Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate shall also study the feasibility of making IRSAs mandatory, with mandatory employee contributions contributed by the Social Security Administration by the employee or his delegate shall study the feasibility of making IRSAs mandatory, with mandatory employee contributions contributed by the Social Security Administration.

(d) The Secretary of the Treasury shall submit to the Congress a report on the results of the study submitted under this section before July 1, 1984.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, the able Senator from Kansas and the Senator from North Carolina discussed this amendment last evening when it was offered. I believe this has now been adopted by both sides.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, a discussion of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from North Carolina (Mr. HELMS) was held last evening. This amendment was drafted to conform to the Senator's request, and it has been cleared on both sides. We will accept the amendment.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (UP No. 130) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand the distinguished Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Matsunaga) has an amendment which we can accept.

SENEATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 20 MAKING TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS IN THE ENROLLMENT OF H.R. 1718

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I have a matter that needs to be attended to now, in connection with the jobs conference report which was sent to the House last evening. This has been cleared by the minority leader and by all responsible persons on this side, those who have a jurisdictional interest.

Mr. President, I send a concurrent resolution to the desk dealing with the typographical error in the conference report on the jobs bill and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 20) making corrections in the enrollment of H.R. 1718.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to its consideration.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, this concurrent resolution makes a typographical correction and adds two paragraphs inadvertently dropped from the Senate amendment to the target date of the jobs bill which the Senate passed last night. These corrections have been cleared with the minority and I know of no objection to adoption of this concurrent resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 20) was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate the House of Representatives concurring, That in the enrollment of the bill (H.R. 1718) entitled "An Act making appropriations to provide productive employment for hundreds of thousands of unemployed persons, to hasten or initiate Federal projects and construction of lasting value to the Nation and its citizens, and to provide humanitarian assistance to the unemployed for fiscal year 1983, and for other purposes", the Clerk of the House of Representatives is hereby authorized and directed, in the enrollment of the said bill, to make the following corrections, namely, after the word "unemployment" in paragraph (a)(b) in section 101, insert a comma; and at the end of section 101, insert the following:

"(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the head of each Federal agency to which appropriations are made under this title, with respect to project grants or project contracts in this section, shall expedite final approval of any project and provide relief from high unemployment, labor surplus areas, or in political units or in pockets of poverty that are currently or should meet the criteria to be eligible under the Urban Development Action Grant program administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development in order to allocate sums as required by this section. Nothing required by this section shall impede the rapid expenditure of funds under this section.

(f) Notwithstanding any other provisions of law, any agency rulemaking proceeding conducted in order to implement the provisions of this title shall be conducted expeditiously, and in no case shall an agency hearing on the record be required."

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

UP AMENDMENT NO. 131

PURPOSE: To provide that the provision limiting the payment of social security benefits to nonresident aliens shall not apply to aliens who initially become eligible for social security benefits within 10 years after the date of enactment of the social security amendments of 1983 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of an individual who has 80 or more quarters of coverage prior to such date.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I understand that the Senator from Hawaii is now prepared to offer his amendment, which has been agreed to. The Senator from Maine is on the floor. I know he has a direct interest in the amendment and the Senator from Iowa (Mr. Grassley) has an amendment at the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The amendment is as follows:

The Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Matsunaga) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 131.

Mr. MATSUNAGA. Mr. President, I have an amendment at the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Hawaii (Mr. Matsunaga) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 131.

Mr. MATSUNAGA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further consideration on the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 53, line 7, strike out the period. On page 53, line 7, strike out "as required by the Social Security Act Amendments of 1972" and insert "as required by the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983".

On page 53, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following new matter:

"(1) initially becomes eligible for benefits under section 202 or 223 before the date which is 10 years after the date of the enactment of the Social Security Amendments of 1983 on the basis of the wages and self-employment income of another individual, resides in the United States at any time before such other individual accrues 80 quarters of coverage."

Mr. MATSUNAGA. Mr. President, the provision in section 124 of the committee bill to limit social security payments to aliens residing in the United States raises for me a grave concern on a matter of equity. Except where required by an international obligation of the United States, section 124 would bar virtually all aliens abroad from receiving full benefits, if their initial eligibility becomes effective after December 31, 1984. Included would be alien workers, many of whom had legally worked and resided in the United States for their working lifetime and paid social security taxes on their earnings in this country. This provision is manifestly unfair to those aliens who have spent a major part of their lives working in the United States and contributing to our society and economy.

We have a situation in my State of Hawaii wherein section 124 of the committee bill could adversely affect a considerable number of alien residents who would be much better off if they returned to live in their homeland in their retirement years. Between 1907 and 1946, more than 120,000 laborers migrated from the Philippines to Hawaii. Many have already returned to their homeland. Many have died; nearly all of the survivors are retired elderly. The youngest of them have reached age 55 years. Most of these migrants have spent their working years in Hawaii without the support of family ties.

Many of these lonely, aging Filipinos look forward to returning to their homeland. Their extended families in the Philippines welcome back their aged members and provide them with love and care that are so essential to their mental, physical, and emotional well-being in their later years. The retiree is able to be reunited with not only his extended family, but his community and associations in the Philippines, where there is not the language and cultural barriers that exist for immigrant Filipinos in Hawaii.

In 1975, Father Jaime S. Neri, a Catholic priest, almost single-handedly, boldly undertook to address the needs of such Filipino retirees. With the support of his parishioners and the Hawaii State government, Father Neri was able to arrange for the return to the Philippines of a group of 41 men, ranging in age from 65 to 85, most of them lonely bachelors or widowers. This successful repatriation program is known as Balik-Bahay, meaning homecoming in the Filipino language.

An important aspect of the Bali-Bahay program is that it not only provides for better quality of life for the retiree, it also effects considerable savings in American taxpayers' dollars.

As Father Neri has repeatedly stated to the Social Security Administration in his effort to federalize his Bali-Bahay program, repatriation of many of these aliens at separation expense would result in savings to the American taxpayer. Most of the men seeking repatriation are receiving supplemental security income (SSI) benefits while they remain in Hawaii. In 2 years, from 1975 to 1977, the Bali-Bahay program saved the State and Federal Government a total of $74,000. This saving came from the cessation of SSI, food stamp, medicare, and medical aid payments and housing subsidies for these individuals. In 1978, it was estimated that more than $10,000 a month of public taxpayor costs are saved by the departure of the 41 men that were already sent home to the Philippines.

For example, a 74-year-old bachelor who was born in January 1910. It was costing the Hawaii Department of Social Services $1,084 a month to maintain him in a nursing home. Now, back with relatives in the Philippines, and with his U.S. social security check (earned legally through long years of labor) of $630 a month, he lives comfortably. His monthly social security check translates into about 1,650 pesos and is more money than the local physician makes.

This humanitarian and tax-saving program to help migrants who desire to return home to rejoin their families would be jeopardized by the proposal to limit social security benefit payments to aliens outside the United States. The migrants, who labored for many years contributing fully to the social security system would no longer be able to receive their full social security benefits if they reach eligibility after December 31, 1985, and returned to their homeland. They would be forced to choose between giving up hope of returning to their homeland on the one hand, and returning with little or no retirement income, on the other. The likelihood is that they would give up hope of returning to their homeland and draw welfare payments to supplement their meager social security benefits.

The National Commission made no recommendations concerning aliens even though it considered imposing a residence test on the payment of benefits outside the United States attractive to aid and survivors. And the Finance Committee proposal would not result in appreciable savings in the early years since it would only apply presumptions. The proposal does not, in any event, contribute to the immediate task at hand. There is no need to rush into what may be ill-considered action, which would lead to a small, or even negative savings for the social security trust fund, when there is ample time to deal properly with this issue in the months and years ahead.

My amendment would deny the implementation of the limits on the payment of hand-earned social security benefits to any alien outside the United States until 10 years after the enactment of this proposal, if upon the enactment of the committee provision the alien had contributed toward the system for 20 or more years.

Aliens coming to work in the United States after the enactment of the committee proposal will not entertain the expectation of receiving from the social security system more than what they will contribute into it, with interest. However, we should not change the rules of the game and penalize those aliens who are now in the system and have contributed to it in full expectation of the scheduled benefits upon reaching retirement age. Although they are not already contributing to the system it should be denied its benefits upon qualification, it is in the spirit of compromise. That I am offering my amendment, specifically for those aliens who have already spent at least 20 years in employment in the United States and will qualify for retirement benefits within 10 years after the enactment of the committee proposal.

The floor manager, the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee, is signaling me to wind it up, let me say, that is the essence of my amendment. It is meant to save the State and the Federal Government money, just as it was intended by the original section 124, while providing a comfortable retirement for deserving aliens who have contributed toward elevating the quality of living in the Aloha State.

I might in closing, point out for the Record, as was suggested by the Senator from Maine, that those who become dependents after the enactment of this act will not qualify as dependents of principal alien beneficiaries who reside outside of the United States.

Mr. President, I urge the adoption of my amendment. Before yielding the floor, I ask unanimous consent that Senator Inouye be added as a cosponsor of my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Maine is recognized.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. President, this amendment provides a transitional benefit for a widow or widow(er) whose spouse died while such widow or widower was between the ages of 50 and 60.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Michigan (Mr. Levin), for himself and Mr. DeConcini, Mr. Chiles, Mrs. Kashevaroff, Mrs. Hawkins, Mr. Ford,
Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

TRANSITIONAL BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN WIDOWS AND WIDowers

Sec. 202.(a) Section 202(c) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9A) Any individual who for any month—

"(i) would be entitled to a monthly benefit under this subsection for such month but for the fact that such individual has not attained age 60;

"(ii) had attained age 50 prior to the time of the death of the deceased individual on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income the widow or surviving divorced wife would be so entitled to a widow's benefit under this section; and

"(ii) is not otherwise entitled to a widow's benefit under this subsection, shall be entitled to a widow's benefit under this subsection by reason of the death of such deceased individual, or

"(i) the last day of the eighth month beginning after the death of such deceased individual, or

"(ii) the first day of the first month for which such widower is entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection other than by reason of this paragraph; and

"(ii) is not otherwise entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection other than by reason of this paragraph.

(b) Section 202(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9A) Any individual who for any month—

"(i) would be entitled to a monthly benefit under this subsection for such month but for the fact that such individual has not attained age 60;

"(ii) had attained age 50 prior to the time of the death of the deceased individual on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income the widow or surviving divorced wife is so entitled to a widow's benefit by reason of this paragraph and ending with the earlier of—

"(i) the last day of the eighth month beginning after the death of such deceased individual, or

"(ii) the first day of the first month for which such widower is entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection other than by reason of this paragraph."

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send this amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senators KASSENBAUM, CHILES, HAWKINS, DECONCINI, FORBES, BURANSCH, and RANDOLPH.

Mr. President, the amendment that we are offering would give a widow who is under age 60 and is, therefore, not eligible for social security as the survivor of her husband and a widow who is not working a chance to survive financially until she finds a job while looking for work after the death of her husband. In many cases, widows have spent most of their adult lives raising a family and need time to try to adjust their skills to the demands of the workplace. It is an unfortunate fact of life that women entering the labor force after 20 or 30 years can have a very difficult time finding a job.

Our amendment, therefore, provides for a transition benefit to surviving spouses caught in what has been called the widow's gap. I previously introduced legislation to deal with this situation on October 15, 1981.

Under present law, a widowed homemaker under the age of 60 does not qualify for any financial assistance from social security unless she is disabled or has a child in her care who is disabled or under 16 years of age. This causes a severe hardship for the many women who are widowed under the age of 60 and without a job.

My amendment provides this transition benefit to widows of workers covered by social security, if the surviving spouse is at least 50 years old at the time of the wage earner's death and is not otherwise immediately eligible for social security benefits for the month in which the death occurred. Thus, the transition benefit is for an 8-month period. The benefit would be for the same percentage of the wage earner's primary insurance amount as the replacement rate of his or her own primary insurance amount based on her own past work experience, whichever is higher. These benefits would also be subject to the social security earnings limitation.

Mr. President, coverage has not been made available to this group in the past under the rationale that these individuals can be expected to work and support themselves. But the fact is, Mr. President, according to a February report of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare entitled "Social Security and Changing Roles of Men and Women":

Lifelong homemakers (for women who have been out of the labor force for many years) who are widowed in late middle age may find it difficult to find a job. Even widows with job skills or younger widows may have difficulty finding a job immediately or may need a period of job training. For these reasons, widows under age 60 may find that a temporary transition benefit in their middle age, who have raised a family and who have run the house, a chance to look for work and not be left destitute during that process.

At this point, some may be thinking that this is a good idea, but can the package afford it. Certainly this is a concern of the chairman of the committee. I know of his prodigious effort to balance the need for safeguarding the fiscal integrity of the social security system, with the need for equity and compassion.

But I want to look at the commitment of my colleagues, and a report from the office of the actuary of the social security system that there is room for my amendment within a financially sound social security system, both in terms of the short and long term.

As for the short-term financing situation, the Office of the Actuary estimates that for calendar year 1984 our amendment would cost about $75 million. The Office of the Actuary calculates that the net increase in funds in the OASDI trust fund as the result of $75 million for calendar year 1984, the first year our amendment would be in effect. This amendment would not, therefore, jeopardize the solvency of the OASDI fund because the Office of the Actuary estimates that with the passage of S. 1 we still be $5 billion in the OASDI at the end of 1984.

As for the long-term financing question, the Office of Actuary calculates our amendment would cost 0.01 percent of taxable payroll. The committee's report indicates that the effect of passage of S. 1 would be to leave the OASI trust fund with a surplus of 0.07 percent, and the combined OASDI trust fund with a surplus of 0.09 percent. Therefore, the passage of my amendment with costs of 0.01 percent would not in any way jeopardize the long-term solvency of the system.

One final word, Mr. President. Throughout my statement, I have referred to widows. Our amendment would apply to similarly situated men as well. Although 90 to 95 percent of the individuals who would benefit from this provision would be women. It is estimated that between 30,000 to 50,000 individuals would benefit from this provision each year.

This amendment thus balances the same values of fiscal integrity and compassion which the committee's bill sought to balance, and I hope that all of our colleagues can support this modest amendment, again at a cost of $75 million, finally doing something to correct the very, very real and tragic problem of displaced homemakers who have given their lives to raising their children and to maintaining their homes and to then find themselves in their fifties suddenly widowed without work and without a pension. This amendment would close, in a modest way, that "widow's gap" at a very, very modest cost to the social security fund.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I always look with favor on amendments offered by the distinguished Senator from Michigan because he is very sensitive and very concerned about the needs of people. His amendment would provide 8 months of social security benefits for a widow or widower whose spouse died while the widow or widower was between the age of 50 and 60 and benefits would be paid at the rate for the widow or widower at age 60, that is, 71.5 percent.

I think the cost between now and 1989 would be about $1 billion, the long-run cost about 0.01 percent of taxable payroll.

As the Senator pointed out, the amendment would address a problem confronting lifelong homemakers who have been out of the labor force for many years and suddenly find themselves widowed in late middle age. This amendment would allow older widows to adjust to the loss of their spouse's income and give them a period of time to prepare to enter the work force.

We had some outstanding women on the National Commission and we believe we made some progress in the Commission in addressing the inequities facing women under social security. We did provide for benefits for divorced or disabled widows or widowers who remarry. We changed the indexing for survivor benefits to add the independent eligibility for divorced spouses. We increased benefits for disabled widows and widowers. We also changed the child care credit, through the amendment of the distinguished Senator from Colorado, which we adopted as part of a long-range package. It is not that we were not conscious or concerned or sensitive to discrimination in some areas of social security. The current package does contain several recommendations.

Our committee recognizes that more remains to be done on these issues and hopes to hold hearings later this year on a more comprehensive approach than the small individual problems offered in this package.

However, on this particular amendment, how do you hold the line on protecting a spouse from the loss of a worker's income only when he has died? Loss of income can also occur with divorce, separation, disability. Current disability benefits require a 6-month waiting period. A spouse, in particular, with no work history, can suffer loss of income in each of those situations. If we pick out only one, we have difficulty in discriminating against some other group.

I hope the Senator from Michigan will let us proceed with hearings which we will be holding this year in our committee. We know that there are other areas that need to be addressed.

On this particular amendment, however, I wonder how would we hold the line on protecting a spouse from the loss of a worker's income only when he has died? Loss of income can also occur with divorce, separation, disability. Current disability benefits require a 5-month waiting period. A spouse, in particular, with no work history, can suffer loss of income in each of those situations. If we pick out only one, we have difficulty in discriminating against some other group.

I hope the Senator will let us consider the amendment in hearings, because we do plan a more comprehensive approach.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the chairman stated it accurately. I fully join in his suggestion that what the Senator from Michigan proposes is compassionate and intelligent. The question is how to fund it.

We have undertaken a broad consideration of the inequities in the social security system which are not equitable to women, which discriminate against them, or where the system simply should be improved because of those circumstances.

Most important, I think, is the question of shared earnings. But the more of these issues involved, the more important our hearings will become. Shared earnings are probably a priority.

I hope we can put this matter over until that early date when we take up the large discussion that is necessary. We can not do it on this package. A billion dollars in the next 7 years is a small amount we dare not.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank my friends from Kansas and New York.

This is indeed an important issue. It is something which has been festering a long time. As I indicated, I introduced a bill on this subject a number of years ago. It is an inequity which has to be faced. It can be faced now, in this way, I think there is a misunderstanding that we can solve this problem now.

If we add up enough years, I guess we can get to a billion dollars. But the fact is, as we understand from the actuary, the cost of this is $75 million in calendar year 1984 and $100 million for each year from 1985 through 1987.

I do not know how many additional years beyond that the chairman went to get to the figure he identified.

He made a reference to one of the members of the Commission, Mary Fuller, and I want to read from her supplementary statement to this report. She said:

The effect on women of the Social Security program is a subject of major importance. And much analytical work has been done to identify and evaluate alternative approaches to correct the unintended inequities. In fact, the 1979 Advisory Council on Social Security spent more time on this issue than on any other. Unfortunately, our commission could not address this issue due to the urgent priority of restoring the solvency of the system. But we do admire and commend this effort from the importance of restoring the equitable treatment of women in today's world. The provisions of the bi-partisan package, while advantageous to certain groups of women, do not begin to address the fundamental, though unintended, inequities, that act to the disadvantage of all people except members of intact one-earner couples.

We have talked with her, and, by the way, I refer to that reference to this relates to inequities to women, not just the particular amendment I am offering.

We also talked to Martha Keys, an outstanding person, with great background in these issues. She told us that this is an excellent amendment, that the area we address is an area of extreme urgency.

We in the Senate all know about the widows' gap. We have let this go on. We know there are women by the tens of thousands in their fifties who are left with children now grown and are suddenly widowed and are thrown onto the job market, and they cannot get a job. We all know that.

This amendment is a modest transition amendment to say, "Here, for 8 months you will have this transition benefit so that you can survive." I say to the chairman of the committee that this is a very modest amendment in amount, in purpose, and in intent, and it is the kind of amendment we all can support.

We have taken action to help small business. We have taken action which costs $200 million. The trust fund is going to have to lay that out in 1984 to help small business. We think we can take action which will cost $75 million to help widows.

Mr. President, in closing let me just take a moment to thank Congresswoman MARY ROSE OAKAR, chairperson of the House Task Force on Social Security, and her staff for the assistance they provided in the formulation of this important legislation.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not want to quarrel with my friend from Michigan. He may proceed on it however he wishes.

We are concerned. We think we have demonstrated that our concern is real. This may be a gap as pointed out by the Senator from New York. It may not be classed as an inequity. We had a very difficult time saying no to many of the possible provisions. We had a little surplus earlier on today, but that has been wiped out, according to the actuaries, by adoption of the Long amendment. At one time, we had a little cushion, and this amendment might have been able to fit into that little cushion.

Mr. LEVIN. I would be happy to make the suggestion to the chairman that if the Long amendment survives intact in conference and if my amendment were adopted, I would be happy to see the conference adopt this amendment—if the Long amendment were kept intact in conference.

Mr. DOLE. They might be able to figure out something along that line. If the Senator would raise the age to 55 and reduce the time to 6 months, we might take it to the Rotunda or beyond.

Mr. LEVIN. Including the other part of the suggestion, about the Long amendment?

Mr. DOLE. I do not know anything about the Long amendment. (Laughter.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum, so that we can confer for a moment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send a modified amendment to the desk on behalf of the same cosponsors.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be so modified.

The modified amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following new section:

TRANSITIONAL BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN WIDOWS AND WIDowers

Sec. | A) Section 202(e) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9)(A) Any individual who for any month—

"(i) would be entitled to a monthly benefit under this subsection for such month but for the fact that such individual has not attained age 60; or

"(ii) had attained age 55 prior to the time of the death of the deceased individual (on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income the widow or surviving divorced wife is entitled to a widow's benefit by reason of this paragraph) and ending with the earlier of—

"(I) the last day of the eighth month beginning after the death of such deceased individual, or

"(II) the first day of the first month for which such widow or surviving divorced wife is entitled to a widow's benefit under this subsection other than by reason of this paragraph.

"(B) The period shall begin on the first day of the first month beginning after the death of the deceased individual (on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income the widower would be so entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection).

"(C) If the individual is not otherwise entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection, shall be entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection (subject to the same conditions as an individual entitled to a widow's benefit under reason of attaining age 60) for each such month during the period described in subparagraph (B) during which she meets the requirements of this paragraph.

"(D) The period shall begin on the first day of the first month beginning after the death of such deceased individual (on the basis of whose wages and self-employment income the widower would be so entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection).

"(E) If the individual is not otherwise entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection, shall be entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection (subject to the same conditions as an individual entitled to a widower's benefit under this subsection by reason of attaining age 60) for each such month during the period described in subparagraph (B) during which he meets the requirements of this paragraph.

"(F) The amendments made by subsections (A) and (B) shall be effective with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months beginning after December 31, 1983.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the modified amendment, which I sent to the desk, reflects the suggestion of my friend from Kansas that we start this benefit that I described as a widow's transition, at age 55 instead of 50 as in my original amendment and that it be for 6 months instead of the 8 months as in the original amendment. I, as always, am so grateful for the help of my friends from Kansas and Louisiana. I think the suggestion is a constructive one which gets on the books at least on this bill a provision which we have been struggling for so long to achieve. We have not recosted it, but I presume it would be something less than $75 million, perhaps in the area of $50 million in the first year, that divided by perhaps half because we are starting at age 55 instead of 50. So I presume it would be in the area of $25 million to $30 million.

I hope that my friend from Kansas and my friend from Louisiana will try to hold to this position in conference regardless of the disposition of the Long amendment in conference.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, let me assure the Senator I did not mean to connect the two. I am sure the Senator from Michigan did not. But I think with the modification mentioned before, the Senator from Kansas is willing to accept the amendment.

Again I will say that the amendment has a great deal of merit, but there are a number of others that probably fit in that same category. I am not certain what the reaction of the House of Representatives will be. I am certainly willing to test it.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank my friend from Louisiana and my friend from Kansas for their constructive suggestion and help and thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified, of the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment (UP No. 132), as modified, was agreed to.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SIMMS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SIMMS. Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered on final passage?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. They have not.

Mr. SIMMS. I ask for the yeas and nays on final passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 132

(Purpose: To disregard tax-exempt interest in the computation of adjusted gross income for purposes of the taxation of Social Security benefits)

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 115, beginning with line 15, strike out all through page 117, line 3, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(2) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—For purposes of this subsection, the adjusted gross income of the taxpayer for the taxable year shall be determined without regard to this section and sections 221, 911, and 931.

Mr. President, there is no doubt in my mind that the proposed inclusion of State and local bond interest in the tax base for calculating the tax on social security benefits is unconstitutional. We have debated that matter before in the Senate and I believe most Senators begin to understand the issue.

It seems that every year the people who want to tax State and local bond interest seem to find some new way of trying to do it. The problem is, no matter what the proposal is dressed up, taxing State and local bond interest still raises serious constitutional problems.

The proposal would not affect the taxation of higher income people. Let me explain that for a moment, Mr. President, because a lot of folks do not understand this.

This proposal in the committee bill does not apply to people who are making a lot of income. It only applies to people in the middle-income bracket. For example, if a person had, let us say, $50,000 of adjusted gross income and $100,000 of tax-exempt bond income, he would pay the tax on half of the social security benefits he receives anyway and it would make no difference how much he had in tax-exempt income. Whether he had $1 or $100,000 of tax-exempt income, once he has adjusted gross income he would lose any tax-exempt income in order to close an imagined loophole that does not really exist at all.

Let us just understand this, Mr. President: People do not benefit as far as investments are concerned by buying State and municipal bonds if they are in low tax brackets. The reason is that they lose anywhere from 20 to 40 percent of the income that they would get by buying instead a Federal bond, for example, or a AAA bond.

The problem with the provision is that it creates problems of constitutionality and complexity in order to close a loophole that does not really exist at all.

It is difficult to understand. The Senate assumed control and it was needed to close a loophole under which a person could convert his taxable income into tax-exempt income in order to avoid paying tax on some of his social security benefits. In fact, the potential tax savings from such a conversion would be very small and would be more than offset by the lower yield on the exempt bonds.

Furthermore, once a taxpayer had brought his countable income down below the $25,000 or $32,000 threshold, his marginal tax rate would be so low that the tax-exempt bonds would be a bad investment. That is, the tax savings would be much smaller than the amount the taxpayer would be giving up by investing in bonds with a lower yield. That is why the revenue estimators say that the revenue gain under this provision is too small even to estimate.

Mr. D’AMATO. Am I understandmg the Senator correctly to say that if you are on social security and have an adjusted gross income of $40,000 a year for husband and wife with $10,000 a year of that income coming from the Social Security Administration, the committee voted to put this on the statute books. This adds complexity to the formula for taxing social security benefits and it could raise very little additional taxes.

Now to support that statement, Mr. President, you do not need to go beyond the committee report. The committee report contains its estimate on how much money the bill raises together with all these provisions. This is what I regard as a clearly unconstitutional provision which unfairly affects old people—and then you look in the chart in the committee report to see what it is the idea is to raise by taxing the State and local government and what do you see? An asterisk. How much do they raise? An asterisk. You know what that means. An asterisk means that over the period less than $5 million will be raised. An asterisk.

The cost of administering it and the cost of the complexity, the cost of adding additional lines on the income tax returns of these dear old people—and it will put an asterisk on every one’s income tax return—completely offsets whatever might be raised with the provision.

In short, Mr. President, the provision in the committee bill creates problems of constitutionality and complexity in order to close an imagined loophole that does not really exist at all.

Mr. SYMMS asked the Chair.

Mr. LONG. Why did the Finance Committee adopt such a proposal? It was not in the Social Security Commission’s recommendations, and the revenue cost over the next 7 years is too small to be estimated.

Would you want to discriminate against these dear old people? Anybody else who buys those tax-exempt bonds will not be taxed on the interest. Why would you want to do that to grandma? Why tax her? Why?

Mr. SYMMS. Yes, I am.
from tax exempt municipal bonds, that that $10,000 would be calculated in the formula and thereby your social security benefits over and above the cutoff would be taxable; is that correct?
Mr. LONG. That is right. Half of it would be taxable.
Mr. D’AMATO. Now supposing, for example, you are 55 years of age and you have an income of $100,000 from tax-exempt municipal bonds, you pay no taxes on that, is that correct?
Mr. LONG. That is correct.
Mr. D’AMATO. Now, we are saying in essence that if you have $100,000 in municipal bond income and you are not qualified for social security, you have not reached retirement age, you pay no tax. But if you have $10,000 and you are on social security that can be the difference that raises your adjusted gross income to $35,000 maximum, husband and wife, and that will put you into a taxable status; is that correct?
Mr. LONG. That is absolutely correct.
Mr. D’AMATO. Is it further correct that the Social Security Commission recommended this?
Mr. LONG. No, the Commission did not recommend that.
Mr. D’AMATO. Well, they showed good judgment.
Mr. LONG. The House did not recommend this, either.
Mr. D’AMATO. Is there any revenue loss or gain that has been determined?
Mr. LONG. It will gain what revenue estimators call an asterisk, which means somewhere between zero and $5 million in revenue over a 7-year period. This excludes the cost of administration.
Mr. D’AMATO. If you had municipal bonds and were drawing social security and had an income of $10,000 from the municipal bonds, and if it would cut you in the middle position on your social security, and you were getting a 6 or 7, or 8 percent yield, would you not be wise then to convert them into a higher taxable yield, by selling those municipals because you would not have the tax advantage any more in holding them, and would you not have people converting from municipals into other bonds, and other people purchasing other bonds instead of municipals as a result of this?
Mr. LONG. Why, of course. In other words, the point is that in a great number of cases if people do happen to have a State or municipal bond they would just have to replace them with other investments.
Mr. D’AMATO. In the Senator’s opinion, drawing on all his years on the Finance Committee, what would that do to the municipal bond market? Would that raise or lower the cost of these bonds? For example, the Village of Island Park, in which I live, consisting of 5,300 people, goes into the municipal bond market to borrow, would it not cost that village more interest to borrow? Would not people expect a greater yield as a result?
Mr. LONG. Middle-income taxpayers drawing social security would go to a tax consultant to try to plan what to do with their municipal bonds. They go to a tax consultant and he says, “Let me see, unless you have $35,000 of income, the first thing you should do is to sell your municipal bonds.” This Senator knows that will hurt the market for State and municipal bonds in my community, Nassau County, Long Island, what the effect of this would be. After checking with various bond counsel he said they indicated that with time this provision could result, without gain to the Treasury, in an increase of as much as 200 basis points in borrowing costs.
When we are talking about borrowing of billions of dollars by State, county, city, village, town governments, we are talking about increasing the cost to local governments that need these revenues. They will then have to raise real property taxes on working middle-class families who, for the most part, support those governments.
But the thing I find to be incredible is that there is no revenue gain here. People you will find in many cases to dispose of these bonds depress the municipal bond market, resulting in their being less accepted. Consequently, there will be a higher cost to local governments passed on to the working middle-class families as well as those on social security.
Mr. D’AMATO. I believe the amount that is wrong about the amendment is that if someone wants to start a tax reform movement, to go after the so-called tax expenditures in the Internal Revenue Code and tax them, there are a number of them. The Congress passed Mr. D’Amato’s tax bill last year, and we had various types of income included in the alternative minimum tax base. But we expressly voted here in the Senate not to include the interest on State, and municipal bonds in this income base. And we concluded that they were sacrificing income by forgiving the payment of tax on them. We did include a number of preference items in the alternative minimum income tax base, so that they could be subject to a minimum tax.
Mr. D’AMATO. I concur with the Senator. It seems to me if we are going to talk about closing tax loopholes the place should not be on the social security bill.
I have heard since I have been here about how we want to close these loopholes. Why do we not develop a tax system that says people at a certain income have to pay a minimum tax, including the income that may come from tax-exempt bonds and municipal bonds? It would seem to me that would be a more appropriate way. It would deal with the real abuses that are with the middle-class people who have incomes in the hundreds of thousands of dollars, in the millions of dollars, who pay no taxes will be affected. But it is certainly not solving the problem to place a tax on middle-class working people, who worked all their lives and amassed small income and subject them to a tax with no revenue gain, especially when the local governments are going to wind up levying throughout this country millions of dollars more in real property taxes because the value of their bonds will be published.
I strongly support the Long amendment. It makes eminent good sense.
Once again we find ourselves faced with the situation where those people who propose these kinds of amendments really do not deal with the totality of the question. If they want to go after everyone, let us have a fair share, let us look at the entire code. Let us see to it that everybody, regardless of how much they may own in the way of municipal and industrial revenue bonds, no matter how much they may contribute to charities, will pay a certain minimum when they are above a certain income. It is unfair to have someone who is making a million dollars a year and who, as a result of purchasing revenue bonds, municipal bonds, and tax exemptions and as a result of charitable contributions and various writeoffs, pays no taxes.
I think the Senator from Louisiana agrees with me. We do not want to avoid the closing of a loophole, but let us do it the right way and not in the way that penalizes middle-class people.
Mr. D’AMATO. Is there anything else that is wrong about the amendment is that if someone wants to start a tax reform movement, to go after the so-called tax expenditures in the Internal Revenue Code and tax them, there are a number of them. The Congress passed Mr. D’Amato’s tax bill last year, and we had various types of income included in the alternative minimum tax base. But we expressly voted here in the Senate not to include the interest on State, and municipal bonds in this income base. And we concluded that they were sacrificing income by forgiving the payment of tax on them. We did include a number of preference items in the alternative minimum income tax base, so that they could be subject to a minimum tax.
Now, if one wanted to subject one-half of social security income to tax, then let us expand the tax base in a nondiscriminatory fashion and say, “Here are the items that are in the alternative minimum income tax base adopted by the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982.”
Mr. D'AMATO. Look at the basic advantages of it again. If you have only $10,000 tax-exempt income from municipal bonds and it pushes you over the threshold for social security purposes, in which my income benefits are taxed, that is one thing. But what about the person who has $100,000 in tax-exempt income from municipal bonds and is eligible for social security? So now that person is adding social security and does not pay one penny more on that.

Mr. D'AMATO. So to use this in connection with the formula for an adjusted gross income, which will put you over the threshold for social security purposes, in which my income benefits are taxed, that is one thing. But what about the person who has $100,000 in tax-exempt income from municipal bonds and is eligible for social security? So now that person is adding social security and does not pay one penny more on that.

Mr. D'AMATO. That is the way to do it, but not closing the loophole. It is counterproductive.

Mr. President, as I stated earlier, taxing State and local bond interest is unconstitutional. There are several cases in which the tax is unlawful. One case is Pollock against Farmers' Loan and Trust Co. There were actually two Pollock decisions: The first invalidated portions of the 1894 law on the grounds that the tax was a direct tax and was to be paid out of the State's income. This decision was reversed by the Supreme Court held that the Federal Government cannot, under our Constitution, impair this State and local borrowing power. The Pollock opinions make it clear that this is a separate and distinct rationale that would by itself defeat attempts to tax State and local bond interest. Although the second Pollock decision invalidated the remaining portions of the 1894 law on the ground that the tax was a direct tax and was to be paid out of the States, it did not withdraw the separate rationale applicable to State and local bond interest. In fact, Justice Brown's opinion in the second Pollock decision emphasizes that the question of bond taxation is not a question of apportionment, but is rather a question of total lack of Federal taxing power.

When the 16th amendment was taken up in Congress, the question of taxation of State and local bonds was not discussed and, as later events show, it was not contemplated that the amendment would permit taxation of State and local bond interest. When Charles Evans Hughes, then Governor of New York, raised the question during the ratification process of whether the 16th amendment would permit taxation of State and local bond interest, he was assured by Senators Borah and Brown, who played a major part of this process, that no such interpretation was possible. These comments may be found in the Congressional Record for February 10, 1910. The Record for March 1, 1910, contains similar reassurances in the form of a letter from Senator Elihu Root to a New York State senator. Congressional debate on a proposal made during World War I to tax State and local bond interest also shows the congressional view that such a tax would be unconstitutional. The Supreme Court, as does the fact that, in 1923, Congress considered adopting a constitutional amendment to permit taxation of State and local bond interest. The 1923 proposed amendment passed the House but did not pass the Senate.

The Supreme Court has held on several occasions that the 16th amendment did not extend the Federal taxing power to new subjects. In these decisions, the Court held that the amendment merely removed the necessity for an apportionment of the income tax among the states. These decisions confirm the view that the 16th amendment did not create a new Federal taxing power over State and local bond interest.

The precise question of taxing State and local bond interest has not been considered by the Supreme Court since the adoption of the 16th amendment. However, the Supreme Court has on several occasions, after the ratification of the 16th amendment, expressed the view that the Federal Government cannot tax State and local bond interest, citing the Pollock case as authority.
As a matter of fact, Mr. President, on later occasions, when Charles Evans Hughes, the Governor of New York to whom I referred, became the Chief Justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, in cases dealing with this subject, he made it his point to state by way of dictum, that the Federal Government had no authority to tax interest on State and local bonds. Justice Hughes was an individual who had a complete understanding of the entire legislative history of this matter. As the Governor of New York to whom I referred, he would say has been on the side of equity. Mr. President, let us set aside the arguments about revenue, the arguments about taxing tax-exempt bonds. That is not before the Senate this afternoon. We are solely discussing equity. Equity is clearly on the side of the measure that was adopted in the Finance Committee and is a part of this legislation.

Mr. CHAFEE. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MELCHER. Is it not the general case, almost the universal case, that these tax-exempt bonds carry a lower rate of interest return?

Mr. CHAFEE. That is the theory of it. That is the theory, that one shifts tax exempt and his income is reduced. It is not always so.

I have here a clipping from the Washington Post of last Friday: Try new investment formula, 10.13 percent; tax-exempt money market and municipal bond fund. Just $2,000 to an account, total liquidity—in other words, short term. Unlimited checking.

These are tax exempts. It says if you are in the 50-percent bracket, tax-exempt income is worth twice the yield; even in the 24-percent bracket, 10.13 tax-free is worth a taxable yield of 13.33.

While the theory is a lower yield, it does not always work out that way.

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield for a further question?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes.

Mr. MELCHER. Is it not the general practice that, for instance, school bonds are tax exempt, city bonds are tax exempt, in order to permit a school district or the city to be able to sell bonds in a little different market, with a little different attraction, in order to save the taxpayers of the school district or the city some tax money?

Mr. CHAFEE. Yes, that is the rationale for tax-exempt bonds.

Mr. MELCHER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, did I hear the Senator refer to an advertisement to buy tax-exempt bonds at 13.33 percent?

Mr. CHAFEE. No, Mr. President, I did not say 13.33. I said 10.13.

There is an ad that someone gave me. But that is not what I read from Mr. LONG. I thought I heard the Senator say something about 3.33.

Mr. CHAFEE. If I may just complete my remarks, then I shall yield the floor. The Senator may have the floor when I finish.

It seems to me, Mr. President—let us set aside the arguments about revenue, the arguments about taxing tax-exempt bonds. That is not before the Senate this afternoon. We are solely discussing equity. Equity is clearly on the side of the measure that was adopted in the Finance Committee and is a part of this legislation.

Mr. MELCHER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MELCHER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, did I hear the Senator refer to an advertisement to buy tax-exempt bonds at 13.33 percent?

Mr. CHAFEE. No, Mr. President, I did not say 13.33. I said 10.13.

There is an ad that someone gave me. But that is not what I read from Mr. LONG. I thought I heard the Senator say something about 3.33.

Mr. CHAFEE. I believe the Reader's Digest will show I said 10.13. But someone put on my desk 13.75 tax-free municipal bonds, interest income
Mr. LONG. My thought would be that if the Senator is going to advise someone to buy tax-exempt bonds at 13.33 percent, he had better advise them that there is a very severe question of what we are going to do here under this amendment is have equity, to have fairness. That is what we are striving for in this very modest part of the bill that we are discussing for a question now.

I shall be glad to yield for a question.

Mr. D’AMATO. Mr. President, if indeed we are talking about $5 million over 7 years, why would we want to set up a system that way? Indeed, would make municipal revenue bonds less attractive and would cost far more to local government than would be gained? If we are talking about the appearance of equity, I would agree with my distinguished colleague friend from Rhode Island. But this part of the bill does not do a thing in terms of dealing with those people who have millions in income and who pay no taxes.

It simply misses the mark. It is an asterisk that does not raise revenue, but it is an asterisk that creates the appearance of equity. It really is a sham.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, I just say in winding up that what it seems we are trying to do is create an incentive to purchase tax-exempt bonds, an incentive that does not exist today, that the inequity we are talking about could arise. I do not think we want that, Mr. President. I think we want to achieve the greatest possible degree of equity. If somebody whose income is locked into certain forms, as I mentioned—to a pension, or a working person, a person over 65 who has to continue to work—that person does not have the ability to pay income tax free. A person who is earning $25,000 by continuing to work over the age of 65 draws social security. That social security will be totally taxable.

So what we are doing under the amendment that is being proposed here are the afternoon is usually the working person or the person who is not rich enough, who does not have enough flexibility in his or her income to shift around to take advantage of an incentive which would otherwise be there, a chink of light that has been spon-sored by the proponents this afternoon. I am prepared to vote, Mr. President.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, the Senate from Louisiana made it very clear that the revenue implications here are only an asterisk’s worth. When you are only down to an asterisk, you are not talking about much.

Mr. D’AMATO. Will the Senator yield for a question on that point?

Mr. CHAFEE. If I may just finish.

So, if it is only an asterisk’s worth, which is a new term—have to get used to that; I have trouble even pronouncing it—the effect of the amendments on his hometown or his bond market, his community, is that it will be absolutely uninfluenced.

My point is that that is not the concern. The concern is to go here under this amendment is have equity, to have fairness. That is what we are striving for in this very modest part of amount of income from State and municipal bonds would be counted against the zero bracket amount.

That has the effect of taxing the State and municipal bonds. Keep in mind that when the court in the Pollock case said that it was unconstitutional to levy an income tax on the income from State and municipal bonds, they said it was unconstitutional that it placed on the power of the State to finance itself by borrowing money. I do not care whether you are taxing the interest under this amendment or whether you are taxing it through the zero bracket amount. However you get at it, you are placing a burden on the income of those tax-exempt bonds. It does not make any difference whether you tax them directly or indirectly. The burden is still there, and that is what the Senator seeks to do with his amendment. There is no doubt about it; he is seeking to do exactly what the Pollock case said.

Mr. President, that stems from the old case of McCulloch against Maryland where Chief Justice Marshall held that the power to tax is the power to destroy, and that if you let the Federal Government tax the States, it can destroy the State government. It would be just like permitting the State to tax the Federal Government. That would permit those who created the Government to destroy it.

The States have no right to destroy this Federal Government. That has been decided many years ago and even on battlefields. The States have no power to destroy the Federal Government, and the Federal Government has no power to destroy the State governments. That is the principle the Senator from Rhode Island seeks to violate with his provision. Congress, Mr. President, has not seen fit to go along with that. What we have here is issue before us on the TEFRA bill, and the Senate voted by a clear margin to strike out the proposal that would put the minimum tax on State and municipal bonds. It recognized the same principle which has been upheld by great Justices down through the years, including Justice Charles Evans Hughes, that we do not have the power to do that. And the Congress, Mr. President, has in the main denied the Internal Revenue Service the right to take the States to court to try to prove that they could tax these bonds under the Constitution. Congress has expressly put in the law up to this point that the income from these State and municipal bonds is not taxable, and that it cannot that did not tax these bonds. Congress has also kept the faith that the sponsors of the constitutional amendment permitting the income tax made when they passed that amendment and assured the State legis-latures that it was not their intention to do that, and that they did not do that.
We should not be doing it either, Mr. President.

Now, look at the complexity. We are talking about something that is not going to raise any money at all, no money. Why do this? Under the common sense test, has to put you on a line, maybe two or three lines on your tax return. I would like to illustrate. Every body fills out the same tax return, so here is the line: If you are over 65 years old and you have some social security income, then put in here the amount you are getting from State and municipal bonds. Add your adjusted gross income. Now report half of your social security income. Now subtract $25,000 from that and divide two by two and add that to your taxable income down here. How many lines can you get by with on your income tax return when you start trying to do all this?

Why do you want to get into all that complexity if you are not going to make any money for the Government? If you are going to make some money for the Government, perhaps you might take the view that the end justifies the means.

Let us talk about equity. I have stood here year in and year out and heard people talk about tax expenditures. I heard about this until I was sick of it.

Let us just look at some of the items of tax preference:

Accelerated depreciation on real property. If you want to do something about equity and say these old people cannot get away with any tax break, then why not put this in here? Accelerated depreciation on real property. Why let them get a break on that? Tax these old folks.

Next item: accelerated depreciation on leased personal property. Why not after these old people if they have some of that? Next item: Amortization on certain pollution control facilities. Tax grandpa if he has some of that. He is like the Union: Mining exploration and development costs. Tax grandma if she has some of that. Then circulation and research and experimental expenditures. OK, put that in there and if Uncle Jim has some of that, go after Uncle Jim. Next, reserves for losses on bad debts of financial institutions. All right, go after those people. If old Aunt Susie has some of that, OK, go after her because she is involved in one of these institutions that has a bad debt.

Next, depletion. By all means, if grandma has some income from an oil well, go after her. Do not leave grandma out.

Then we proceed to incentive stock options. If they have some of that, go get them. Intangible drilling costs, go get them. Accelerated cost recovery, go get them.

I would like to ask, why not go get them? In other words, if you are going to go after somebody who is losing a lot of income because they bought a State bond from the State where they live or because they bought a paving bond in a city or the county where they live, if you are going to go after those bond purchasers, why leave out these other people?

I have heard people stand here and defend the oil people. Why leave them out? Why go after somebody who bought a bond in his hometown to help by a fire truck?

It defies imagination, Mr. President. If one wants to do justice and equity, why single these few individuals out for special taxes when they are not going to do it to the rest of them? To be just and to be fair, perhaps you should include all the tax preferences. In fact, they should go in ahead of everything else, because when Congress legislated and looked at this, it thought that if you want to have tax reform, these are the areas you ought to go after first.

So, Mr. President, I hope that the Congress does not get into this mare's nest. It serves no purpose. All it is going to do is make the Government look even worse. Wake up some of those naive Governors and wake up some mayors, most of whom are not yet aware of what is happening here. You wake up Governors, wake up mayors, wake up county commissioners who will say: "My goodness, what in the devil are those people doing in Washington? Go talk to those people."

Mr. D'AMATO. I wonder if the Senator would yield?

Mr. LONG. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. D'AMATO. I wonder if the Senate would consider an amendment that is not tax-exempt, we are talking about tax-exempt bonds, for the first time, could sell bonds? It had a municipal purpose.

What is the difference between the status of those who now have municipal treatment, tax-exempt treatment, and their prior status, under which they could not sell tax-exempt bonds? It is as much as 5 points. And who said bonds were free.

As a result of our action, people who bought those municipal bonds received 5 percent less because they were municipal, and therefore they were tax-free. That meant the municipality, the local taxpayers, paid 5 percent less. It meant that it cost the homeowners, the working people, the taxpayers in the villages and towns and in the fire districts, that much less.

We ask what is the difference between a tax-exempt bond and one that is not tax-exempt, we are talking about driving up the cost of local government billions of dollars.

INTRODUCTION

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the committee bill, which incorporates a very helpful amendment regarding tax-exempt bonds, offered in committee by Senator CHAFEE. The amendment offered by Senator Long would strike that very important provision added in committee. The committee rule does not tax tax-exempt income, but only looks at tax-exempt income in determining whether half of social security benefits will be subject to taxation.

PROVIDING BROKERS A NEW MARKET

Mr. President, the distinguished senior Senator from Louisiana has spoken quite eloquently in favor of his amendment to disregard tax-exempt income for the purpose of tax. When Senator Long talks, people listen. That does not concern me, since the Senator always enlightens us when he speaks on matters of tax policy. What concerns me is that when E. F. Hutton talks, people also listen. And E. F. Hutton has a reason. And I tell you, Senator Long talks people listen.

Next item: accelerated depreciation on real property.

Accelerated depreciation on leased personal property. Why not after these old people if they have some of that? Next item: Amortization on certain pollution control facilities. Tax grandpa if he has some of that. He is like the Union: Mining exploration and development costs. Tax grandma if she has some of that. Then circulation and research and experimental expenditures. OK, put that in there and if Uncle Jim has some of that, go after Uncle Jim. Next, reserves for losses on bad debts of financial institutions. All right, go after those people. If old Aunt Susie has some of that, OK, go after her because she is involved in one of these institutions that has a bad debt.

Next, depletion. By all means, if grandma has some income from an oil well, go after her. Do not leave grandma out.

Then we proceed to incentive stock options. If they have some of that, go get them. Intangible drilling costs, go get them. Accelerated cost recovery, go get them.

I would like to ask, why not go get them? In other words, if you are going to go after somebody who is losing a lot of income because they bought a State bond from the State where they $250,000 threshold, he must include half of his benefits in income. As a result, S. 1 will increase his tax liability by $1,328. But if the pending amendment is adopted, he can avoid including any of his social security benefits in income, by shifting one-third of his investments from top-rated, taxable, 10-percent corporate bonds, into top-rated, tax-exempt, municipal bonds yielding 7 percent. If he does that, his cash interest income will be $27,000, clearly over the threshold. But his interest income would be only $20,000, clearly under the threshold. Thus, his benefits will escape taxation completely.

Moreover, his income tax liability on his interest income will drop, by an amount just about equal to his reduced yield from shifting to tax-exempt bonds. In fact, he will be short about $226, before taking into account the fact that he has excluded all of his social security benefits from taxation. That is where the real benefit is, Mr. President. At a cost of $226, he will have saved $1,328 in taxes on half of his benefits. That, Mr. President, alters the investment picture considerably.

A NEW INCENTIVE TO INVEST IN TAX-EXEMPT BONDS

Today, he would lose $226 by making this investment in municipal bonds. With the adoption of the Long amendment and S. 1, he will gain $1,102 by making the investment. That $1,328 difference, Mr. President, is the tax on half of his social security benefits we are supposedly in the process of enacting. But for our hypothetical taxpayer, that tax is only a voluntary tax, not a mandatory tax. People will certainly listen when E. F. Hutton tells them about this investment opportunity. However, it is not all.

We may not be able to beat it, but we can prevent it, by voting against the pending amendment.

S. 1 MUST BE FAIR TO ALL TAXPAYERS

Mr. President, I believe there is a compelling case for rejecting the Long amendment. If the tax revision we are in the process of enacting is to be fair, it must be a mandatory tax for all similarly situated taxpayers. It cannot be mandatory for those with illiquid investments, or taxable pension or trust income, and a voluntary tax for those with the ability and inclination to convert a small portion of their current taxable income into tax-exempt income, solely to stay below the threshold and escape the taxation of benefit.

I would like to make several additional points to clarify what we are doing, and not doing, if we reject the Long amendment in favor of the committee bill.

S. 1 DOES NOT TAX TAX-EXEMPT BONDS

First, we are in no way taxing tax-exempt income. We are only taxing half of social security benefits regardless of how much tax-exempt income the taxpayer may have. A taxpayer with $1 million of tax-exempt interest income and an $8,000 social security benefit will pay only on one-half of his benefits, no more and no less.

We are not, in any way, encouraging upon the tax-exempt status of State and municipal bond interest, simply by providing an incentive for purposes of this act.

As we know, State and municipal bonds are not sacrosanct, or totally immune from Federal taxation, only the interest on the bonds is exempt from income taxation. Let me give an example of a tax-exempt investor. The tax law where the bonds get no special treatment. The fair market value of municipal bonds is includable in a taxpayer's estate for Federal estate tax purposes and this is well established.

In my view, the mere reference in S. 1 to tax-exempt income, only for purposes of determining whether another source of income should be taxed, is plainly not an encouragement on any legitimate historical, or constitutional concern bond issuers may have.

S. 1 REFLECTS A COMPROMISE RULE ON TAX-EXEMPT INVESTMENTS

Finally, I should point out that we are not depriving the bond issuers, bond markets, or investment houses of a new source of customers for tax-exempt bonds. Many of the advocates of the Long amendment will concede that a tax-exempt amendment will not take away any incentive that exists under current law. They will admit that the purpose of the committee rule is simply to be neutral, that is, to avoid creating an incentive to purchase tax-exempt bonds that does not exist today.

But the fact is, I must admit that the committee rule is imperfect, and actually results in the creation of a slight incentive to purchase tax-exempt bonds not present under current law.

The reason for this is that the committee rule, for reasons of administrative convenience, only takes into account the stated yield of tax-exempt obligations, and not their taxable equivalent yield.

For our hypothetical taxpayer in the 30-percent tax bracket, $7,000 of tax-exempt interest is equivalent to $10,000 of taxable interest, after taxes. To preserve absolute neutrality with respect to current law, we would need to take into account the taxable equivalent yield of $10,000, rather than $7,000, in calculating whether half of that taxpayer's social security benefits will be taxable. Because the committee rule looks only at the stated yield of $7,000, and not the taxable equivalent yield of $10,000, there will still be a new incentive for some social security recipients to invest in tax-exempt bonds. In the example I gave previously, there is the difference between a investor losing $226 each year from an investment in the tax-exempt bonds under current law, and the same investor gaining $328 by the investment, after passage of S. 1, with the committee's rule on tax-exempt bonds.

Mr. President, in short, there is no justification for the pending amendment which would only contribute to the ability of some taxpayers to completely escape the tax consequences of the social security benefit we have now decided to tax. That seems self-evident to me.

I have listened to a good deal of discussion about how unfair the Chafee amendment is. I just do not understand why anyone at this point is interested in facts—it has been a long bill, and I hope people are still interested in facts—that the Chafee amendment as it is in this bill will still provide a substantial tax incentive for social security recipients to invest in tax-exempt bonds.

There is going to be an incentive. Why is that? It is because the committee bill contains the compromise rule adopted for reasons of administrative convenience—namely, that the rule includes only the stated yield, the tax-exempt investments, and not the tax equivalent yield.

That is to say, for the typical taxpayer in the 30-percent bracket, the 7-percent interest tax free they get on a municipal bond is the equivalent of 10 percent on a nontaxable bond. In other words, in the case of a $100,000 denomination investment, they are getting $7,000 of tax-exempt interest or $10,000 equivalent in taxable interest. This is because the committee rule includes only the $7,000. Therefore, there is a substantial tax incentive.

Under Senator Chafee's amendment in this bill, the taxpayer with $30,000 of taxable interest income and $10,000 of social security benefits will have $31,207 after enactment of S. 1. By shifting one-third of this investment from 10-percent taxable bonds to equivalent tax-exempt bonds yielding 7 percent, the taxpayer's income would be $31,535. So the result would be an incentive to shift the tax-exempt worth $326 each year.
Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, in contrast, under current law, the same taxpayer suffers a $226 loss by making the same investment shift into tax-exempt bonds.

Mr. President, the hour grows late. I shall not belabor the Senate any longer with facts. I trust that they speak for themselves.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I will not delay the debate. I ask unanimous consent to print the Record as follows:

THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF INCLUDING TAX-EXEMPT INCOME IN THE SOCIAL SECURITY BASE

This memorandum deals with the constitutionality of certain provisions of Section 131 of the Social Security Amendments of 1969 which seek to include interest on tax-exempt obligations in the base for determining the amount of an individual’s social security taxes. The argument is based upon the premise that Congress has the constitutional authority to modify or remove the exemption from Federal income tax of interest on state and local obligations currently contained in Section 103(a) of the Code. This conclusion is supported by the clear language of the 16th Amendment, by the fact that such a tax would be nondiscriminatory, and by the clear unassailable authority of the Supreme Court to levy on taxpayers other than state and local governments, by the fact that the individual income tax is a tax upon a taxpaying person rather than an item of particular source of income and by a long line of Supreme Court opinions culminating in Alabama v. King and Boozer. A fortiori, Congress has the authority to include tax exempt income in the social security base solely for purposes of determining the amount of a taxpayer’s other taxable income that is subject to tax.

BACKGROUND

The exemption for Federal income tax purposes of interest on State and local obligations has a legal, political and economic history which so far has resulted in legislative continuance of an exemption first enacted by the Constitutional Convention. A Congress ability to impose an income tax on the interest of state and local bonds were originally strong, resulting in the 1913 legislation; but these doubts have effectively disappeared in the intervening years.

In Pollock v. Farmers Loan and Trust Company the Supreme Court held in 1895 that such a tax would be nondiscriminatory because the imposition of a tax on bonds constituted an encroachment on one of the sovereign powers of a State in violation of the principle set forth in McCulloch v. Maryland. Under this principle, it was held that to preserve the framework of the Federal system, the Federal and State and local governments must have a reciprocal immunity from taxation. Adoption of the 16th Amendment in 1913, which empowered the Federal government to levy taxes on income “from whatever source derived,” would seem to have neutralized the effect of Pollock, were it not for the constitutional doubts that these middle-income people have a State or municipal bond investor. They wish to get rid of it. I ask for the yeas and nays, Mr. President.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays were ordered.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. On this question the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.
The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. Goldwater) and the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Mathias) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CRANSTON. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. Hollings) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. Kennedy) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Coburn). Are there any other Senators wishing to be recorded on this vote?

The result was announced—yeas 44, nays 52, as follows:

YEAS—44

the same subject. So I want to have the amendments on the same subject. I would have to, unless the Senator changes the unanimous-consent request, interpose an objection.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, could I inquire of the Senator how short he would have to agree that we might entertain debate on any such amendment?

Mr. HEINZ. Twenty minutes, equally divided, would be ample.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I add to the unanimous-consent amendment dealing with health care and an amendment by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania dealing with health care, each with 20 minutes, equally divided.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, reserving the right to object —

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana reserves the right to object.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I should think that there are others of these amendments we could agree to a time limit. There are others that we just are not familiar with, I gain the impression that at least one of these amendments involves a large amount of money and is not a simple matter.

Under the circumstances, Mr. President, not being familiar with what I am being asked to agree to, I would have to object. But I say to the majority leader that my impression is that if he starts out his request right off the top of his head a certain amount of could agree to a time limit very easily. When we know more about what else he has in mind, we might be able to go along with that. But, at the moment, I simply could not agree to a 20-minute time limit on something that I believe might be a very significant amendment involving a very large amount of money.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I understand the concern expressed by the Senator from Louisiana and I, indeed, shall present him with a certain amount of the Armstrong amendment of last night with the condition that there be a large amount of money and is a difficult matter to deal with. I hope that something might be worked out so that we could get a time limitation on a Dole–Heinz–Specter amendment, or some combination thereof.

Perhaps I should revise my unanimous-consent request to provide a time limitation on the first five amendments to be dealt with—that is, the two Quayle amendments, the two Pressler amendments, and the Armstrong amendment—of 10 minutes, equally divided, with no amendments to the amendments being in order, and then we will reserve the balance of the remainder of my time.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I do not know whether the sponsors of the health care amendment, for example, want to go along with it, but the thought occurs to this Senator that we could have that certain amount of time for the amendment and a time certain to vote, and if we get to that certain time and we have not voted on the amendment, it would just have to go by the board. That would be all right with the Senator from Louisiana. Unless we have some kind of arrangements to protect people—we do not know what is in the amendment—we would simply not be in a position to give economic consideration to this point.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I do understand that.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the majority leader, can there be no other amendments and then we could move on?

Mr. BAKER. I tried that but it did not work. I not only admire and agree with the Senator from Kentucky, but —

Mr. FORD. I like the admiration part.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator add my other amendment which would require no more than 10 minutes? I believe Senator Dole has the language.

Mr. BAKER. A new request. I ask unanimous consent that on two amendments to be offered by Mr. Quayle, one dealing with unemployment and the other dealing with unemployment training, there be a time limitation of 20 minutes equally divided, with no amendments to be in order; first, that on two Pressler amendments there be a time limitation of 20 minutes equally divided, with no amendments in the second degree being in order, and finally on the Armstrong prospective coverage of nonprofit organizations amendment there be 20 minutes equally divided, with no amendments to be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LONG. Will the Senate state that request again?

Mr. BAKER. Yes. It is for a time limitation of two Quayle amendments, two Pressler amendments, one Armstrong amendment, and the Levin amendment with 10 minutes equally divided. I have not reiterated the request that no other amendments be in order, only that no amendments to these amendments be in order, and I have not included the time for final passage. I would like to do that as soon as I can.

Mr. LONG. So the Senator is asking for a time agreement on four amendments?

Mr. BAKER. No. There will be six amendments.

Mr. LONG. Two Quayle amendments and—is it one or two Pressler amendments?

Mr. BAKER. Yes.

Mr. President, I put that request. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, even though those are short time limitations, let me urge Senators to proceed with this. This probably does not appeal to anybody else but me, but I have already told the Speaker that we are going to hand him a bill at 4:30, at 5:30, and at 6:30. I am afraid to call him back again. We need to get this thing done. Someone indeed does want to appoint conference tonight and go to conference. It is important to do that if we want to get out of here tomorrow. We dare not go over. I urge Senators to handle these matters as quickly as they can.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 834

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, this amendment is cosponsored by the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. Dominguez). Both the chairman and the ranking member are fully acquainted with this amendment. I do not intend to reiterate the merits of the amendment. I am not going to be an objection to the amendment. If there will be discussion, I will rebut the statements that will be made by the either the chairman or the ranking minority leader.

In regard to the time, I will reserve the remainder of my time.
not want him to say he will accept it and then forget about it.

Mr. DOLE. I will not do that.

Mr. QUAYLE. We have worked very hard to try to poll those people interested in this issue, and I believe we have a fairly unanimous consensus on this amendment, accommodating all during the time that we have worked on it.

If the chairman is willing to accept it, I am willing to yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I want to be sure that we do not get ourselves into a new program. I am sure the House will scrutinize it very, very carefully, and I would suggest that we take the amendment and see what happens.

Mr. QUAYLE. This is not a really new program. The next amendment will be a new program and is a little more complicated.

With that understanding, Mr. President, I am willing to yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DOLE. I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Indiana (Mr. QUAYLE) proposed an unprinted amendment numbered 134.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 234, after line 23, insert the following new subsection:

"(B) The term 'Federal supplemental compensation' means only compensation paid to individuals under this Act for weeks beginning after March 31, 1983.

"(3) The appropriate State agency shall take the option of receiving a reemployment voucher, authorizing the Secretary to pay to the employer of each employee who is a recipient having a voucher issued under this section, the amount of payments made to the employer under a voucher with respect to the employment of any individual who—

(a) will not result in the displacement of currently employed workers (including partial displacement such as the reduction in the hours of nonovertime work or wages or employment benefits); or

(b) will not result in the replacement by such employer of an individual recently received regular compensation (including allowances for dependents) payable to an individual with respect to the benefit year (as determined under State law) on the basis of an individual who was an individual most recently received regular compensation, or

(c) the applicable limit specified in section 602 (c) (2) (A) (ii), multiplies by the average weekly benefit amount of the individual (as determined for the purpose of section 202 (b) (1) (C) of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970) for his benefit year.

"(4) The term 'State agency' means the agency administering the provisions under title III of the Social Security Act.

"AMENDMENTS TO INTERNAL REVENUE CODE Sec. 406(a). Sec. 280C of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding after subsection (c) the following new subsection:

"(D) RISE FOR REEMPLOYMENT VOUCHERS.—

No deductions shall be allowed for that portion of the wages or salaries paid or incurred for the taxable year which is equal to the amount of payments made under a voucher under section 607 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982.

"(b) Sec. 445 of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(D) DENTAL OR TARGETED JOBS CREDIT.—

No credit shall be allowed under this section to any taxpayer with respect to any eligible individual for any period for which payments are made under a voucher issued under section 607 of the Federal Supplemental Compensation Act of 1982.

Mr. QUAYLE. Mr. President, this amendment deals with a reemployment voucher to allow the recipients of Federal supplemental compensation the option of receiving a reemployment voucher.
The way this program would work is if the recipient decided to receive this voucher instead of the unemployment compensation, he would be able to receive a voucher to get hired, so be it. The voucher may be used by the employer to satisfy any obligations to the Treasury under the unemployment withholding, FICA or FUTA.

The voucher idea and the voucher system have been around a long time. Nobody really knows how this program is going to work. I cannot tell exactly how it is going to work. The only thing I can tell my colleagues is that this extension lasts through September 30 of this year. I say let us give it a chance. It is going to go, and I direct to the attention of the Senator who has a high degree of long-term unemployment, because it is going to go only to the recipients of FSC compensation. Those people will have the voluntary option to turn this into a voucher. It will, in fact, give a person who has been searching for a job for 26 weeks or as long as 39 weeks an additional attraction for an employer to hire him.

There is no doubt that this program, in fact, will be of assistance to the employer as well as the employer. The voucher is, for all practical purposes, as good as a cash or wage subsidy but certainly does leave a clear audit trail to prevent abuse. The benefits that the employers gain would begin within 1 month of the date the individual is hired and would be used by the employer in quarterly installments. Unlike the tax credit this body is quite familiar with, it does not require the employer to make special claims on his tax form.

There has been a lot of discussion on voluntary tax credits, that there is the possibility of substitution. This amendment prohibits substitution. It can be used by nonprofit organizations, State and local governments, as well as private businesses. It is a new approach to promoting jobs for the long-term unemployed.

The administration, whom we have worked with on this amendment, is generally supportive of it. As I said, it is a new idea. We do not have any exact criteria for how many people are going to use the voucher system, how many people are going to be hired. What I am saying is let us give it a chance; let us try it.

Let us try to use a little bit of creativity in dealing with the long-term unemployed. It is optional. If, in fact, they want to use their unemployment compensation in the form of a voucher to get hired, so be it. The better off they are going to be, the better off the country is going to be.

As I understand it, the amendment includes protections against the displacement of current workers and retroactively substituting unemployment—about 30 hours per week.

Mr. President, I do have a few reservations about this proposal. For one thing, I am concerned that the availability of the voucher may cause some businesses to put off hiring individuals unless the voucher is available. Firms may also simply fill existing vacancies with these voucher holders and no new jobs will be created.

So there are some drawbacks. However, the program is temporary one and could be viewed as a demonstration project. I also understand that the proposal has the basic support of the interested departments—Labor, OMB, and Treasury.

Therefore, it begins an experimental program, one the administration has testified on. The Senator from Kansas (Mr. STEVENS) we have some ideas, I have some ideas, other Senators have some different ideas. This is just one idea to deal with a very narrow issue. Federal supplemental compensation, to allow an option to the beneficiary to turn that unemployment compensation into a voucher.

As I said, Mr. President, we have worked with Treasury, been in communication with the Department of Labor and OMB, and they are supportive of this amendment. We have had some work on it. I have some ideas, other Senators have some different ideas. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. Dole. Mr. President, to begin with, this is an amendment I know the Senator from Indiana has done a great deal of work on in committee. We have worked on it and in committee.

The amendment establishes an employment voucher program to be used by recipients of Federal supplemental compensation. The proposal is a modification of the administration's tax credit plan and is a modification of the Senator's earlier cash voucher proposal.

The voucher would be optional with the FSC recipient and would be equal to 75 percent of the individual's FSC entitlement. The employer of the FSC recipient would then apply the voucher to his Federal employment tax obligations—social security payroll tax, the Federal unemployment tax, or wage withholding. The vouchers would be processed by the IRS and could not be redeemed for cash. The program would be in place for 10 months—approximately 4 months beyond the anticipated expiration date of the FSC program.
Sen. PRESSLER. Madam President, this amendment provides that the earnings test will be phased out for blind disability recipients just as for retirees. This bill already provides that, between 1990 and 1994, we will phase out the earnings test for retirees. We would like to help blind disability recipients in that phaseout, as a matter of fairness. I would hope that my colleagues will support me in this effort.

The argument in favor of this amendment is much the same as the argument in favor of my amendment regarding the earnings offset. We have given blind disability beneficiaries the same earnings test as retirees, so we should give them the same treatment as far as the phaseout of the earnings test. This action is a good idea because it acts as a work incentive. I would also like to point out that if blind persons do find work as a result of the incentive provided by this amendment, they will be contributing money to the social security trust fund through their payroll taxes. These contributions will, of course, help to offset any additional costs to the trust fund caused by phasing out the earnings test.

My colleagues Senators Randolph and Jepsen are copromoters of this amendment.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Madam President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. PRESSLER. I yield to my distinguished colleague who has done so much work for the blind in West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Madam President, sometimes at the close of the day when perhaps the sense of quiet rather than turbulence comes across this historic Chamber there is one or more amendments that come to the attention of those of us who are present that deserves our careful study and strong support. This is one of those worthwhile amendments.

The bill is a tribute to the United States of America. We know of contributions made by the blinded veterans during the conflicts in which they have served in our Armed Forces to preserve and defend our security against off time foreign and fierce foes.

The blind can work in the marketplace. They are entrepreneurs in the products they sell.

At the present time in one program as a result of the Randolph-Sheppard Act there are approximately 4,000 blind individuals, men and women, who are entrepreneurs. These citizens operate vending facilities established in Federal buildings throughout the United States, including Federal agencies, in county facilities, and in local facilities. The average annual income of these vendors is $15,000 per year. These operators return to the Federal Government in taxes each year about eight times the amount of money it would cost the Federal Government to run the program. Because of the success of the blind in gainful employment they have by their experience in handling the public with skill given to American industry the impetus to establish opportunities for the blind in businesses throughout the United States of America.

The blind certainly have proved themselves as individuals, both men and women, who can give to the American purchasing public that service which in a sense in anticipated here by further aid to the blind in reference to the accountability of funds which they have earned and which in my sense the tax may be lessened upon them.

I commend my colleague from South Dakota who introduced this amendment, and I ask him the following question.

Does this amendment have the support of the National Federation for the Blind?

Mr. PRESSLER. Yes; the National Federation for the Blind does support it.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The National Federation for the Blind does support it?

Mr. PRESSLER. Yes, indeed.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The National Federation for the Blind had such an endorsement.

I hope our colleagues will give to this segment of America, a productive segment, the opportunity to feel that they can prepare themselves, they can earn, they can sell, they can be an active part of the American system.

I thank my colleague.

Mr. PRESSLER. I thank the Senator from West Virginia who authored the original legislation regarding disability benefits for the blind and who is known nationally for his work with the blind.

Mr. EXON. Madam President, I believe that this amendment is much the same as the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota and so eloquently described by the Senator from West Virginia.

I just wish to ask, has this been cleared with the managers on both sides? If so, could we expedite the procedure?

Mr. PRESSLER. Madam President, I am going to discuss the amendment very briefly. I am prepared to accept the amendment but I wish to explain some of the negatives even in this case. It will just take a minute.

Mr. EXON. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JEPSEN. Madam President, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota, Mr. Pressler. Instituting a phasewout of the earnings limit for the blind is an idea which makes sense.

Over the years, Congress has attempted to build incentives into the various Federal programs. Clearly, it is in the best interests of the blind to be working rather than sitting at home collecting disability payments. Many would like to do this but are constrained because of the meager disability program. This occurs in much the same way as retirees are... constrained from working under the current retirement test. In the long run, approval of the Pressler amendment will improve the quality of life for thousands of blind people and, I believe, help to strengthen the social security system. After all, a working person contributing to the social security system has to be better than a nonworking person collecting disability.

The Pressler amendment will not require anyone to work. It simply creates a strong incentive for those who can work, and who want to work, to do so. I urge my colleagues to support the Pressler amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Madam President, the Social Security Act contains a strict definition of disability. It is based on not only the severity of the disabling condition, but also the individual’s ability to work.

"Disability" is defined as the inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of a medically determinable physical or mental impairment that has lasted, or is expected to last, at least 12 months or is expected to result in death.

If an individual is disabled within the meaning of the law is done on a sequential basis—with work activity, severity of impairment, and vocational factors assessed in that order.

The Pressler amendments would—in my opinion—make this distinction—for blind beneficiaries only alter the very first, and perhaps most important, criteria used for determining disability—the "substantial gainful activity" test.

If an individual is earning more than the SSA level—$300 monthly in general, $550 monthly for the blind—he is evidently able to engage in substantial work. In such cases, he will be found not disabled and thus not eligible for DI benefits, without consideration of any other medical or vocational factors.

Already the blind are preferentially treated with a higher SSA level, which happens to be tied to the earnings limitation under the retirement test.

According to the Social Security Administration, in 1995 when the retirement test is eliminated under the committee bill, the SSA limit for the blind would be completely eliminated.

The result would be that beginning in 1995 anyone who is blind would, regardless of income, education and skill, be eligible for benefits. At the extreme, a well-paid doctor or attorney would be eligible for DI benefits. Few of us would find that to be appropriate.

Madam President, the Senator from Kansas first wants to compliment the distinguished senior Senator from West Virginia, for almost a lifetime of dedication in this area. The Senator from Kansas has learned a lot from the distinguished Senator from West Virginia. I have tried to be helpful in areas that pertain to the blind and handicapped, and certainly he has been the pioneer in this body for the last 30 to 40 years.

I have discussed this amendment in great detail with the Senator from South Dakota. The Senator from Kansas is willing to accept the amendment.

I did want the Record to show it is a departure from the treatment of other disabilities. It could discriminate against other seriously disabled persons. However, it would be hard to defeat the amendment if an effort were made, so I am willing to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. RANDOLPH. Does the Senator yield to me for a comment before he speaks? Am I a cosponsor of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. PRESSLER. Yes, the Senator is. Mr. RANDOLPH. I would like to say to the able manager (Mr. DOLE) I think he has done an almost magnificent job, regardless of my opposition to certain amendments which he has fostered during the consideration of this bill.

It is not in any cursory fashion that I express appreciation for the handicapped and the disabled throughout this country for his efforts in well-reasoned measures in Congress and also in other ways to assist the handicapped and the disabled.

I realize, I say to the Senator from Kansas, that in a sense this is a departure in which the underlying sentiment is compassion, understanding and, perhaps, for the moment let us think of the needs of the blind as we bring such legislation to fruition.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I certainly appreciate his comments. Again I appreciate the spirit of the amendment. I want the Record to reflect that it is a departure from the substantial gainful activity test. But I am prepared to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I move adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JEPSEN). Is all time yielded back? The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from South Dakota.

The amendment (UP No. 135) was agreed to.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.
tant and necessary step, and I would hope that those who have supported it be held accountable.

My colleagues, Senators Matsunaga, Jeffs, Thurmond, and Randolph, have agreed to cosponsor this amendment.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas was asked to clarify that the Senate understood before they acted on the previous amendment, which was accepted, and on this amendment, that it is a departure from the treatment of other disabilities. It is a liberalization of the eligibility standard for blind social security disability insurance beneficiaries. In particular, it would phase out the substantial gainful activity criteria for blind beneficiaries.

This amendment would cost about $100 million a year, a total of about $9.5 billion over the next ten years and would have a long-range cost. I do not know whether you can equate dollars with physical disability, particularly severe physical disability, such as blindness. However, I would restate for the record that this would further liberalize the treatment of the blind. This amendment would allow the blind to earn more than the SGA level of $550 monthly, with each $1 in excess of that amount reducing benefits by 50 cents, instead of having excess earnings cause ineligibility. They would be treated like retired beneficiaries, subject to the earnings test.

I think it is a judgment the Senate has to make. Again, it is one of those areas where if we fail to look at the total picture and try to separate the blind from other severely disabled persons, it would be difficult to oppose the amendment. The Senator is prepared—does the Senator want a voice vote on this?

Mr. PRESSLER. I would like to briefly respond if I may.

I thank the chairman of the Finance Committee and the staff for their comments. Let me say I believe the chairman's costs are assuming that every blind person who is eligible will earn the maximum benefit. This is not the case. CBO has not been able to give an estimate of the cost of this amendment, because they are unable to calculate, with certainty, the number of those working blind with excess earnings because of blindness. They would continue to treat the disability rolls under this amendment. At the very least, this action would allow 30,000 people to qualify for some reduced level of benefits. I would point out, however, that there are currently 120,000 blind persons drawing full disability benefits. With the change that I am proposing, these recipients will be given the incentive to work without fear that they will lose all their disability benefits. The reduction in benefits that will result from this incentive measure should help to offset the cost of any new beneficiaries added to the rolls.

I think that is a point that should be considered here.

Second, it is true that blind disability recipients are treated differently than other disability recipients, but they are not treated unfairly. The current system only goes halfway in giving them the same earnings test as retirees, and that is the real problem.

Retirees can earn up to $550 per month, and for every $2 that they earn over that amount, they lose $1 in benefits. However, when blind people earn $550 or more, they lose all benefits. I am only arguing for fairness. This body has already voted to give blind disability recipients a different earnings limit than other disability beneficiaries. What we should now do is correct an inequity that already exists within that system, which is that the blind have the same earnings limit as retirees, but not the same earnings offset. If we are going to give the blind the best of these, we should give them the other.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, as I have indicated to the Senator previously, again this is a departure from present policies. It is a liberalization, and I cannot in good conscience support the amendment because I think that is the view shared by the ranking minority member, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. PRESSLER. Mr. President, on this I would ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the Senator from South Dakota would be willing to have a voice vote.

Mr. PRESSLER. I would like to ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. DOLE. Let me explain it again. The Senator from Kansas would be perfectly willing if the Senator prevails on a voice vote, but I am not certain I could guarantee that if we had a record vote.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, who has the floor?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas has the floor. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I would suggest to my colleague who offered the amendment for himself and others, and responding to what I think is the understanding of those who sponsor the amendment to have a voice vote.

Mr. PRESSLER. I will be happy with a voice vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment (UP No. 136) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I want to make it clear that I voted against the amendment. I personally cannot agree with it, but I was willing to let the matter be decided on a voice vote, and I am not complaining about the matter.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the next amendment in order is the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. Senator Armstrong. This is the last amendment with a time agreement and we have agreed to move amendments from Senator Hart and Senator Specter and final passage. We also have an amendment by Senator Levin, which will be a record vote.

UP AMENDMENT NO. 137.

(Purpose: To cover only new hires of nonprofit organizations which are now not covered by social security)

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 137.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 66, strike lines 22-24 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(Sec. 102. (a) Section 210(a)(8)(B) of the Social Security Act Is amended by inserting the following phrase after "of such Code":

"by an individual who has been continuously in the employ of such organization since December 31, 1983 (and, for this purpose, an individual who returns to the performance of such service shall nevertheless be considered upon such return as having been continuously in the employ of such organization, regardless of whether the period of such separation began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, if the period of such separation does not exceed 365 days))."

Strike line 37, strike lines 1-3 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(b)(1) Section 3121(b)(8)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code is amended by inserting the following phrase after "under section 501(a)":"

"by an individual who has been continuously in the employ of such organization since December 31, 1983 (and, for this purpose, an individual who returns to the performance of such service shall nevertheless be considered upon such return as having been continuously in the employ of such organization, regardless of whether the period of such separation began before, on, or after December 31, 1983, if the period of such separation does not exceed 365 days))."

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, I am going to take only a couple of minutes to explain this amendment, but I hope my colleagues will not take the brevity of my argument in any way as an indication of the crucial significance of the issue which I seek to raise.

As my colleagues know, the current law provides social security coverage to nonprofit organizations on an optional basis unless the organization af-
The bill that comes before us today contains the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform that nonprofit organizations should be covered under social security beginning January 1, 1984. This proposal affects about 200,000 nonprofit organizations, with about 675,000 employees. It will substantially increase their cost and lead to the reduction in social services.

I believe that the principle involved here, that is of affording mandatory social security coverage to nonprofit organizations, is a reasonable one. I do not, however, believe it is reasonable to do it in an abrupt and drastic fashion; that is to simply say without warning that 9 months from today all of these organizations, without any opportunity to adjust their own pension planning, without any opportunity to find new sources of funds, without any opportunity except just suddenly comply, is not fair, in my opinion.

The effect of it is going to be that some of these organizations will not have the funds to comply and, therefore, will simply have to fulfill this new requirement by reducing the services that they provide. Very often when we think of nonprofit organizations we think of large foundations, the giant foundations which are wealthy and which have tremendous resources that have great endowments. Some of these may be affected.

But the ones I am concerned about are not these but the small ones, like the little shelter house in Denver, Colorado, the shelter house that has a staff of five and, in all likelihood, will have to lay off one of those five persons in order to pay the additional costs that are imposed under the bill that comes to us from the committee.

There are many other similar examples that have been brought to my attention. The Alcoholism Council of Antelope Valley, in California opted out of social security 4 years ago in order to expand the services they provide. The council, I am told, will have to lay off several employees and with such a small staff already they may have to shut down the operation.

As one thinks about the justice of requiring these nonprofit organizations to suddenly reduce their operations without warning, it is well to keep in mind the economic environment in which they are already operating, and that is one of the declining resources. This is the situation that these, just as it has affected all of the private sector.

So, at a time when resources are tight, when needs are growing, to say that we are going to force them on a date certain, an early date certain just 9 months from now, to take such a step seems to me to be unfair. If that is unfair, and if the principle of covering nonprofit organizations is a reasonable one, what is a good way out?

In my opinion, a good way out is to apply this same phase-in process to nonprofits that was suggested by the committee for Federal employees. We have adopted an amendment which drops the Federal employees out of the bill altogether and whether or not that will be sustained in conference I have no way to know. But the recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and the recommendation of the Senate Finance Committee was to cover Federal employees on the basis of new hires; that is, as they come on, cover them, phase them in.

The rationale for this is very simple. It was to give the Federal Government a chance to make its adjustments for it was possible to impose an undue burden by requiring that everybody be covered by social security on a short timetable.

So that is all this amendment does. It says that nonprofit organizations should have the same consideration that we seek to afford to Federal employees if, in fact, Federal employees are to be covered at all.

Mr. President, with that word of explanation, I urge my colleagues to vote for the amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I will just take a minute. This amendment was offered in the committee. The vote was 4-11. Not that that mandates how Senators vote on the Senate floor.

But the 1983-89 revenue loss in this proposal is about $5.2 billion, out of the $12.5 billion we hope to raise with this provision.

This proposal was considered and rejected in committee by a vote of 4 to 11.

I think it is important to note that already 85 percent of all nonprofit employees have opted to be covered by social security. The provision would just bring in the remaining 15 percent and treat them the same as the rest of private sector employees who are already covered.

I am not persuaded by the argument that we should treat nonprofits the same way we do Federal employees. Social Security coverage has been expanded repeatedly over the years to a variety of private sector employees. Each time, coverage was extended to the new group on a mandatory, current employee basis.

In addition, private sector pension plans should be better able to adjust to coverage—they are often offered as part of the Federal Service Retirement System, for example.

I might add that many of the people employed in nonprofit organizations want to be covered by social security, but the choice was taken away by the organization itself, without the consent of employees.

In testimony we received in the Finance Committee, we were reminded that many of the nonprofit employees that are now not covered or that are opting out of social security are hospitals, for example, whose employees who would prefer to be a part of the social security system. People who are not under an agency's pension rights; frequently they do not have disability protection.
While we cannot pretend that beginning to pay the social security tax will be easy for employees and employers, I am convinced that the benefits work and the result will make their coverage worthwhile.

We cannot ignore the needs and the purposes of the social security system either. As the American Nurses Association testified, working people in the low- to middle-income range are willing to share their fair share of responsibility for the solvency of the system. In their words, “the system provides enormous social benefits for which all members of society should bear a responsibility.”

In my view, I do not quarrel with the Senator from Colorado. He has performed outstanding service. But I do not know where we would get the $5.2 billion if the amendment is adopted. So I hope we reject the amendment.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, may I again echo the statement of the distinguished chairman. We fully appreciate the concerns of the Senator from Colorado. The years and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. Stevens. I announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. Mathias) is necessarily absent.

Mr. BYRD. I announce that the Senator from California (Mr. Cranston), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Glenn), the Senator from Virginia (Mr. Hollings) and the Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Stennis) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber wishing to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 26, nays 69, as follows:

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Not at all. The statement just would not apply universally.

Mr. GOLDBURGER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this be a 10-minute vote. We are just going to spend the whole night voting.

Mr. BYRD. I do not want to object to the request of the distinguished Senator, but I do not believe we can at this time limit our vote to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If all time has been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Colorado. The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. The amendment adds the following language in 5.1. Purpose: To pledge the full faith and credit of the United States Government in support of the obligation to pay accrued benefits under the civil service retirement system.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 66, at the end of line 18, add the following: “The full faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged hereby in support of the payment of said accrued entitlements.”

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, section 101(l) of the bill before us provides:

Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal Retirement System of current and retired Federal employees and their families.

This amendment adds the following statement, that “The full faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged hereby in support of the payment of said accrued entitlements.”

Mr. President, this statement of intent will hopefully reassure Federal employees of our intent to protect their accrued benefits. It is similar to language which was offered by the distinguished Senator from New York (Mr. MOYNIHAN) in committee. It is all different, different, somewhat from that language but its intent is the same. It is a reassurance the Federal employees, current Federal employees and retirees of our intent to protect fully their accrued benefits.

I understand it is agreeable to the floor manager of the bill, my friend from Kansas, and to the Senate from Louisiana.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, this amendment would simply buttress the language included in § 1 offered by Senator MOYNIHAN to reassure civil service retirees and employees that this bill not in any way alter the civil service retirement system. It is clearly not our intention to dismantle the civil service retirement system or otherwise erode the value of the protection provided by the system to present participants. I support the amendment, although it may not be as important an amendment now that the Long amendment has passed. But I am certainly willing to accept the amendment. I know of no objection on the other side. In fact, as I have indicated, Senator MOYNIHAN initially included the same language in § 1.
Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be added as a cosponsor to the Levin amendment. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Is all time yielded back?

Mr. LEVIN. I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan.

The amendment (UP No. 138) was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEVIN. I move that on this appeal the motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to shall not be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment was agreed to.

UP AMENDMENT No. 139

(Purpose: To provide health care coverage for the unemployed)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I send an unprinted amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE) proposes an unprinted amendment numbered 139.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of title III add the following new section:

HEALTH SERVICES FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

Sec. 308. (a) Title XX of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 308. (a) Title XX of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"(B) no coverage may be provided for the first six weeks during which an individual is eligible for compensation (referred to in subsection (a)(2)(A)) for which such individual is eligible and no such deductible or coinsurance may be imposed until after such first six weeks, and no such deductible or coinsurance may be imposed until after such first six weeks.

"(C) no coverage may be provided to any individual unless such individual is enrolled in a group health plan of the employing entity for the duration of the program.

"(D) no coverage may be provided with respect to any services provided prior to June 1, 1983, or with respect to services provided for an individual prior to the time such individual is determined to be eligible under such program; and

"(E) no coverage may be provided for any medical assistance under the State plan for medical assistance under title XIX.

"(2)(1) Services provided under this section shall include only inpatient hospital services, including those provided in health clinics but not including those provided in nursing care facilities, and pre-existing and post-partum care. No drugs or biologicals shall be included within the covered services described in the proceeding sentence unless provided as part of inpatient hospitalization.

"(2) The State shall determine the amount, duration, and scope of the covered services described in subsection (1) which shall be included under the program, but in no event shall the amount, duration, or scope of such services under the program established under this section exceed the amount, duration, or scope of such services included under the State plan for medical assistance for individuals described in section 1902(a)(10)(A).

"(3) Services may be provided through varying arrangements made with providers by the State, but no such arrangement may provide benefits more generous than those provided under the State plan for medical assistance for individuals described in section 1902(a)(10)(A).

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, what I want to discuss just for a very few moments is the amendment I have just offered. This I would hope to withdraw the amendment.

Earlier this evening when the distinguished Senate majority leader (Mr. Baker) was proposing a unanimous-consent request, we came to an area where there was some agreement and conditions of the coverage required under subparagraph (B) during any qualified open period shall be at least as favorable to the employee as the terms and conditions offered by the group health plan under any other opportunity for the employee to commence or change coverage under such plan.

It involved a very important program that I had hoped to address in this bill. It is health benefits for the unemployed.

The Senator from Kansas, the Senator from Minnesota, the Senator from Pennsylvania—a member of our committee, and Senator Spectra, who has had an interest in this matter for some time—Senator Ribiczy, and many others have been trying to come up with some package that we could properly present and for which we could have rather widespread support.

I have met with White House officials; I have met with HHS officials. We have spent a lot of time at the staff level trying to come up with some package that we thought we could sustain on the Senate floor this evening.

I want to make it clear that I intend to try to do something about health benefits for the unemployed, but I am convinced that without administration support, this would not be the right vehicle.

In addition, I have made some inquires on the House side, and they have indicated that they prefer we not attach such an amendment to this legislation. But I do intend to propose legislation in this area as soon as possible—in fact, tomorrow.

I hope that Senators who have an interest in either the legislation on which we have been working together or some separate legislation, if they do not already have their own legislation, might join as cosponsors.

The loss of health benefits by those who have lost their jobs is a serious issue and one that should be addressed by our committee.

As I have indicated, we considered offering this proposal as an amendment to S. 1, but I honestly believe that this program was too small so that those who are interested can comment and make suggestions as to how we might improve this proposal. Our proposal is not the only way to proceed. It is just one option, but one that we believe makes some sense.

The point is that we have a problem, which I hope will be short-lived, but it is one that must be dealt with. We cannot postpone it. Someone might say that we should postpone it to June, July, or August. We will still have the problem, and in the meantime, hundreds of thousands of people are without health coverage. It is a matter of great urgency, and we should face it at the earliest possible time.

GENERAL CONCEPT OF PROPOSAL TO COVER THE UNEMPLOYED

Under the proposal, title XX of the Social Security Act would be amended to provide certain unemployed workers and their immediate families with services, physician services, except for nursing home care, and prenatal and post-partum care. Coverage under the State administered program would be voluntary on the part of unemployed workers and their dependents. States could require payment of an enrollment premium for such coverage.

States would be entitled to Federal matching payments. The costs of health benefits for enrolled unemployed workers and their dependents up to a maximum payment amount for each State determined by a special allocation formula. The allocation formula takes into account State insured unemployment rates—determined on the basis of a 3-month moving average—at or above 4 percent could elect to continue to receive Federal matching funds. The program would end on May 31, 1985, with any remaining funds remaining available for 6 months to finance program benefits for those still on the rolls.

PUBLIC SECTOR PROVISION

Program eligibility: Unemployed workers, and their immediate family members, are entitled to receive benefits under the State unemployment compensation system and who were enrolled in an employer or other group health benefit plan when they lost their jobs, would be eligible to enroll in the program. Entitlement to unemployment compensation means entitlement to receipt of regular State unemployment benefits, Federal supplemental program benefits or benefits provided under the extended benefits program.

This provision would allow States to provide for an individual who had received Federal supplemental benefits in the past and those who would again receive these benefits as a result of the FSC extension contained in S. 1. So those who have, as of the date of enactment, exhausted regular unemployment compensation benefits and extended benefits, but had received FSC benefits, would be eligible. This could cover people who had received benefits as far back as December 1979.

For those who elect to enroll, coverage under the program would begin no sooner than 6 weeks following the week in which the unemployed worker is first entitled to unemployment compensation benefits and has applied to enroll in the unemployment program. States could at their option, establish a longer waiting period before coverage first begins.

Coverage under the program would end no later than 6 months following the end of the period in which the unemployed worker is no longer entitled to compensation benefits or for a lesser period at the option of the State, or 1 month after reemployment, whichever occurs first.

Eligible workers would have to satisfy the State agency administering the program that they, and, if appropriate, their dependents, were enrolled in an employer or other group health benefits plan at the time they lost their jobs. States will rely upon the best available evidence of such previous enrollment, and may, upon their election, satisfy such requirement by obtaining a declaration from the worker of such previous enrollment.

Federal program benefits would be limited to inpatient hospital services; emergency outpatient hospital services; physician services, including those provided in health clinics and hospital outpatient departments, but excluding those provided in connection with nursing home care; and prenatal and post-partum care, which may be provided by a hospital, physician, clinic, or nurse-midwife.

No coverage is available for prescription drugs or biologicals, except those provided on an inpatient hospital basis.

States may determine the amount, duration and scope of covered services. However, in no case may the benefits offered under this program exceed those offered under the State's medicaid program for the categorically needy.

States would be allowed to provide for cost-effective financing and delivery structures, and to contract with specific providers for the provision of covered services to the enrolled population. State's electing this option would be limited to contracting with providers eligible to serve the States medicaid population.

Payment could only be made for services provided on or after the date the State begins participation in the program and only on behalf of eligible enrollees.

Premiums: The plan permits the State to establish a premium for health care coverage equal to an amount no greater than 8 percent of the individual's weekly UC benefit. Separate premium schedules could be established for self-only and family coverage.

Patient cost sharing: The proposal would permit a State to impose cost sharing—that is deductible and coinsurance requirements—after public hearings for which adequate notice and opportunity for public participation have been provided. Cost-sharing requirements could not, on the average, exceed 10 percent of the State's average monthly UC benefit. Further, no cost sharing could be required for prenatal or post-partum care.

The proposal would permit deductibles and coinsurance to be applied on a differential basis with respect to the target population, services provided, provider arrangements and the coverage period.

The proposal would require that all premium and cost-sharing revenues... must be used to offset the State share of program benefit costs, to provide covered services to eligible individuals, or to reduce the cost sharing requirements placed on eligible individuals.

Reimbursement: The proposal would require States to utilize the same reimbursement mechanisms currently utilized under their Medicaid programs. The proposal, within that limit, choose to use a variety of arrangements, including capitation, as long as no arrangement is more generous than those provided to their Medicaid categorically eligible. Providers would be required to accept the program's payments or the full fee for covered services except for any required cost-sharing amounts.

Administration: State unemployment offices would be responsible for determining program eligibility.

Upon initial application for unemployment compensation benefits, or after enactment for those already on the unemployment compensation rolls, a worker would be informed of his potential eligibility for health benefits under the open enrollment opportunity. The worker could elect to apply for enrollment in his own coverage, his spouse or parent and under the State-administered program. He would then be allowed a 4-week period in which to elect or decline coverage under the State program. Once covered, an individual could disenroll out of the program at any time. However, once out he could not reenter until he again became eligible for a new benefit year as defined under the State unemployment compensation program.

The State unemployment compensation office would inform the individual concerning the date of eligibility, and the actuarial value of the benefits provided. Premium payments, at the option of the State, could be deducted from the individual's unemployment compensation. Alternatively, the State would be permitted to establish some other collection mechanism. The administration of the health benefits provisions under this program would be the responsibility of the State agency established or designated to administer the State's Medicaid program.

Federal/State funding: Under the program, $750 million in Federal matching funds would be authorized for the initial period beginning June 1, 1983, and $750 million for the 12-month period beginning June 1, 1984.

All States would be entitled to Federal matching payments to finance the program through September 1983. Beginning on October 1, 1983, only those States with insured unemployment rates, based on an average of the preceding 3 months, equal to or exceeding 4 percent could elect to participate. Any State making such election after September 30, 1983, would be guaranteed participation in the program for at least 6 months, not to go beyond May 31, 1985, regardless of any change in its insured unemployment rate.

A State participating in the program would be entitled to Federal matching payments for the costs of services provided to unemployed workers and their families. The Federal share would be determined by the allocation formula. Funds would be allocated at the beginning of each program year although the States would not be provided the money in a lump sum at that time. Funds would be expended in administratively titling to a cap as they are under the State's Medicaid program.

At the end of the second year, individual State fund allocation balances remaining would be available for 6 months to expend on already enrolled beneficiaries whose coverage periods have not expired.

The Federal matching rate would be 80 percent for States with insured unemployment rates below 5 percent, and 95 percent for States with IUR's equal to or greater than 5 percent, during the initial 4-month and any 6-month period beginning after September 30, 1983. The matching rate would remain stable for a participation period unless the rate was 80 percent and the State's IUR rose to 9 percent or greater, based on a 3-month moving average; that case the Federal matching rate would be increased from 80 to 95 percent for the remainder of the period.

Any State which experiences a break in program participation because their IUR falls below 4 percent based on a 3-month moving average, would be required to stop enrolling eligible individuals. Federal matching at the rate in effect at the time of the break in participation will continue to be provided for services to enrollees until their State determined individual coverage period expires, but in no case beyond November 30.

Under the program, $150 million would be authorized for the 12-month period beginning June 1, 1983 and $150 million for the 12-month period beginning June 1, 1984 to cover the costs of program administration. Up to $70 million would be allocated each year to each State by the Department of Health and Human Services to cover the costs incurred by the State's Medicaid agency in administering this program. $50 million in each year would be allocated by the Department of Labor to the State unemployment programs for their administrative costs. All States participating in the program would be required to report to the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) by March 1, 1984 on the program's implementation and impact on the target population. A final report due in January of 1986 would be required of all States that participate in the program after September 30, 1983.

Benefit dollars allocation formula: The Secretaries of HHS is directed to allot amounts appropriated under the act for services for any year among the States as follows:

First, one-half on the basis of the number of insured unemployed in each State to the total number of insured unemployed in all States;

Second, one-half on the basis of the number of persons unemployed for 26 weeks or more in each State to the total number of such persons in all States.

Allotments are to be determined on the basis of the most recent 12-month period, preceding the month of the determination, for which adequate data are available.

PRIVATE SECTOR PROVISION

Special open enrollment provision: Under the proposal, employer-sponsored—and other qualified group—health benefit plans would be subject to a loss of 60 percent of the deduction for employer-provided health care costs if they fail to provide an open enrollment opportunity for persons to change from self-only to family coverage or to commence coverage for himself and his family. By providing these opportunities to certain workers, we are attempting to ensure that when a worker or a worker's family loses, or will lose, group coverage because the second worker in the family is laid off or involuntarily separated from his job—other than for cause. The provision would permit such open enrollment for a 1-month period following the date of notification to the employer of the second worker's eligibility for receipt of unemployment compensation. Since the determining event, namely, job loss, is unrelated to the health status of either the dependent or the laid-off worker, virtually no adverse selection should develop for the employer of the dependent person.

Coordination of benefits: Any benefits for which an individual or family is eligible under the new health benefit programs for the unemployed would not be reduced to the extent that support or payments for items and services are, or could be, made under any other group health insurance plan, public program providing benefits to such individual or family member, or by any third party. An assignment of rights, to any support or payments for medical care from any third party must be made at the time coverage is elected.

Mr. President, I understand that other Senators want to make comments of emphasis. I believe that some Members may desire to pursue this matter, notwithstanding the comments of the Senator from Kansas. I again indicate that we are serious about this proposal. It is a need that should be met. There will be hearings at the earliest possible time. I am certain that what I have outlined in a brief fashion could be improved.

I do not believe we should give the American public the idea that we do not view health benefits for the unemployed as a very serious issue—to consider a solution to this problem in such a hasty fashion does not do justice to the complexities of this issue.
That is why I hope we might get some agreement tonight that we would have hearings.

Let there be no mistake about my intentions. I am working out a solution, but I think all the parties involved should have an opportunity to comment. That is the purpose of public hearings.

Adoption of this amendment this evening means the House has had no opportunity to review any aspect of the proposed program, and are likely to object to its consideration at this time. We should have an opportunity to work something out that is amenable to both sides—a late-night, last-minute conference is not the place to do that. I have a commitment from the administration to work with us closely in drafting a proposal. I think we should give them this opportunity.

I did discuss this matter with some who will be House conferees, and I have indicated to them on this floor that is not unjustified in this bill, because the House is still in the process of trying to put together a package. They have not had sufficient hearings.

As I indicated earlier, I have been unable to receive a commitment from the administration that they will try to work with us on developing a comprehensive proposal.

And we will await that assistance and if it is not forthcoming we will proceed with hearings, and I am certain we will have the opportunity then to hear administration witnesses and others.

Mr. President, having made that statement, and I know others may wish to comment, I am happy to yield to the floor.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, will the Senate yield without losing his right to the floor?

Mr. DOLE. I yield.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I might say I am intimately familiar with the amendment the Senator from Kansas has sent to the desk. It represents the work of about 2 or 3 months of concerted effort on the part of my colleagues from Pennsylvania, Senator SPECTER, my colleague from Minnesota, Senator DURENBERGER, and myself, together with the Senator from Kansas, Senator DOLE.

It is in many respects quite similar to the bill proposed by Senator SPECTER and myself a week or so ago. It is somewhat similar in concept, slightly less expensive in terms of cost.

It is my understanding that, and if the Senator from Kansas will yield, his amendment, would cost roughly $900 million a year. Is that correct?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator is correct.

Mr. HEINZ. I happen to think we need a program such as this. I am pleased the Senator from Kansas has indicated his interest and a commitment to moving ahead in this area.

I think the amendment he has sent to the desk, although he intends to retrieve it shortly, is responsible in every respect. It will meet the pressing medical needs of the jobless and their families who cannot obtain affordable health insurance coverage. The Senator from Kansas made the point that perhaps this is not Cadillac coverage in terms of the benefit package, but let me assure him it will provide a very meaningful package of health benefits for people who right now have no benefits at all.

In my home State of Pennsylvania we have 716,000 Pennsylvanians who are unemployed and in most cases, they have no access to affordable health insurance. Pennsylvania is reeling from layoffs in steel, mining, textile and related industries. My State is fast approaching an insured unemployment rate of 8 percent.

It is also my understanding that States particularly hard hit in terms of unemployment would get a little bit more of a break under this proposal. Such States only will have to come up with 5 percent matching funds to participate in this program. This program is maybe 95 percent of the health cost, as I understand it, 100 percent of the administrative cost. Is the Senator from Pennsylvania correct in that regard?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. HEINZ. I have listened carefully to the Senator from Kansas and hope to have his attention shortly because I am concerned about the extent to which we vote.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, does the Senator care to yield until the Senator from Kansas returns?

Mr. HEINZ. I will yield without losing my right to the floor.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I will get the attention of the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. HEINZ. I wish to say this before I yield.

Mr. DURENBERGER. All right.

Mr. HEINZ. I hope irrespective of what the Senator from Kansas does here tonight, that the administration, which has not been very forthcoming in their support for what I believe is an essential legislative initiative, will realize there are a group of Republican Senators in this Chamber who are very committed to doing something in this area. We would rather do something with them than without them. We do not want to get the hopes of unemployed persons dashed by Presidential veto.

If that is the road that we are forced to go down, then each will choose our own paths. I know where I will be compelled to go, which is toward making sure that constituents are not left out in the cold freezing without a home, and without access to health care services.

I do hope the administration will listen carefully and look at tonight's debate; because unless we do something soon, we are going to cause an irreparable amount of harm.

I am happy to yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. DURENBERGER. I thank my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, let me begin by expressing my agreement that Senators from Pennsylvania for their broad efforts in the area of the problems that face the unemployed in this country and to thank our colleague, the chairman of the Finance Committee, for his efforts and for introducing this amendment.

Let me just start with the comments that the Senator from Pennsylvania made about being forthcoming.

Look around the Chamber. Not only are the galleries empty but the Chamber is also. I imagine that when Senators and Congressmen return to their States, with the hundreds of thousands of unemployed persons, the problem of the plight of the unemployed flow readily from their lips. That is why it is unfortunate that there are only a few Senators here to discuss this very, very important issue.

It is also unfortunate that no one has endeavored to address the subject before now. Unemployment has been with us for a long time, and the lack of health care coverage for persons who are unemployed and their families has been with us for a long time.

I presume that one of the reasons health care coverage is a more difficult problem for people today than it has been in the past is that health care costs have risen so high. The senior Senator from Pennsylvania, because of his long commitment to health care policy issues, recognizes that finally Congress is addressing the role that individuals play, the role the insurance companies play, the role that doctors, hospitals, and the Government through its Medicare and Medicaid programs have to play in doing something about the high cost of health care.

I happen to think that despite the fact that only 2 or 3 months have been spent on the specifics of this bill, it is an excellent piece of legislation. Were it not for the fact that we are amending this particular piece of legislation and the problems that were referred to by the Senator from Kansas, I would strongly recommend it as a very good program that will provide health care for unemployed Americans and their families.

The reason it is a particularly good amendment and the reason that I intend, as a chairman of the Senate Finance Committee's Health Subcommittee, to start hearings on this subject, whether the administration is forthcoming or not, and why I intend, as I am sure the Senator from Pennsylvania does, to press the chairman of this committee to report out a bill within the next several months is very simply that this amendment proposes to build health care for unemployed off of the very same principles that have guided employers in establishing health plans for their employees.

Seventy-five percent of the work force secures health insurance coverage through their place of employment.

The work setting has proven to be an excellent access point for families all over this country for health insurance. It is the employers of this country who have developed innovative approaches to health care, to insurance protection, to multiple choice of health plans, to wellness classes, to rewards for preventive health care, to coverage for hospitalization, surgery, preadmission testing, and utilization review. All of this grew out of the medicaid system but because of the inability to pay to cover hospitalization, surgery, and utilization review. Employer-based health insurance has its advantages. But it has disadvantages too, the major one being that when an employee loses his or her job, he or she also loses health insurance coverage. The CBO estimates that nearly 10 million Americans now have health insurance coverage because the family breadwinners have lost their jobs.

For many, the loss of adequate health insurance is the most unnerving consequence of unemployment and the purchase of clothes, appliances, or an automobile. But if a child needs surgery, there's no postponing that. And without health insurance, the costs associated with a major illness can be staggering.

The program that is being offered tonight and that will hopefully be back in the Chamber within a matter of months, is designed to ease the health insurance gap caused by unemployment.

It is not intended to be a final solution and it is not intended to be national health insurance. It is a stopgap measure designed for a particularly acute problem. It is a very good blend of public and private initiatives, and it achieves what I think is a balanced solu-

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield briefly at that point for a question?

Mr. DURENBERGER. I will yield for a question.

Mr. RIEGLE. I share the Senator's concern, as he knows, on this issue, and I feel as deeply about it as he does, as others who have spoken.

I am wondering why it is—I know it was designed only for the unemployed, and it is scheduled for a phaseout in 2 years—after our country has pulled itself out of this recession.

As the chairman has indicated, we are not putting these people into any kind of a medicaid program or welfare program. We are simply suggesting that States use their fiscal intermediary responsibility that they already have in the medicaid program to do the buying of health care coverage for persons who are unemployed.

of the Finance Committee has, and the Senators from Pennsylvania. But I just do not know how we justify the fact that there are people out there right this minute who desperately need this kind of response from us and in the short term it is very difficult for us to promise a great deal of relief via the employment route.

But so far as this Senator is concerned, my concern is twofold: One, it may be a well-thought-out plan, but it has been thought out by a few people like myself and Senator HEINZ and a few others, and I do not know that we are necessarily the best thinkers in this country.

On the other hand, I would say that when we do go to the American people with a plan, I want to be able to indicate to them that the plan is a commitment, a national commitment, to build a program providing for health care for the unemployed. I think we ought to be totally confident that this is the best kind of a program we put together.

We should have a plan we are totally confident with. We should not come back next fall and start tinkering with it, or next year and start playing with it.

It is for that reason I feel we should take a little time and work to improve this plan.

Those who have been unemployed for 1 year, for 2 years or even longer need our assistance now. Last week the Senate passed the jobs bill. Now we have the opportunity to lend another helping hand to the unemployed by giving them the peace of mind that comes with health coverage. I urge my colleagues to work with us in furthering this matter for the past several days, and it is apparent from the text of Senator DOLE's speech that it could have gone either through an advocacy approach, an amendment to this bill, or simply a limited move forward and, as he has indicated, a withdrawal.

But my sense of the situation is that the unemployed—who are without health benefits have been asked to wait the bill. The statistics have already been outlined, and Senator HEINZ has stated the statistic in Pennsylvania is several hundred thousand.

Senator HEINZ and I have collaborated for the past several months on a health program, and its importance was emphasized to us when we were in Midland, Pa., about a month ago. We had a high school auditorium full of people who emphasized that health insurance was their No. 1 concern, even above the rising cost of fuel and the unemployment problem generally.

In that context, we have been pressing Senator DOLE to try to come forward with an amendment which would be attached to this bill at this time.

One of the difficulties is to attract the attention of the administration, and I think we have to some extent attracted their attention at this time. But my thought is we ought to proceed to move on this amendment now.

I ask the distinguished Senator from Kansas if we do not press an amendment and press it to a vote, how soon can we have the meeting which the White House officials have stated they would be willing to undertake? I also ask whether such a meeting can be accomplished this week?

Mr. DOLE. The Senator from Kansas is willing to meet this week. If we can dispose of this bill tonight and go to conference tomorrow we can meet as early as Friday, and the Senator from Kansas and I think the Senator from Minnesota, who is chairman of the subcommittee, are certainly willing to commence hearings soon after we return. The Senator from Kansas may be tied up on withholding, but I ask a sucht the Senator from Minnesota would commit to that kind of timetable and if we could meet on Friday with the administration officials.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas will be in town Friday and certainly will be willing to arrange a meeting with the appropriate officials. I understand Secretary Heckler has made a number of calls today. I am sure able to make a commitment, I think she has indicated an interest in us not moving ahead tonight, but at least some commitment that she would be helpful.

Mr. DURENBERGER. Mr. President, I was only responding to the question of the Senator from Pennsylvania as far as this Senator is concerned it would include everybody who has an interest. There may come a time when we will have to visit privately with the administration, as you will understand.

But I have no pride of authorship. I think there is a need that must be served. So the Senator from Kansas believes this is the best way to proceed. We believe we have a good idea. The Senator from Michigan has good ideas. The Senator from Pennsylvania has good ideas. But it may take some refinement. Obviously, it will take some hearings. Bringing in the private sector, the public sector, the administration officials, and others.

The answer is yes.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, during consideration of this bill, I offered an amendment that was adopted that amends the title of this bill dealing with unemployment insurance benefits. It amends the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970, and I introduced it because of my concern over recent happenings across the country; the amendment will correct an inequity that exists in the program.

It is my concern that, Mr. President, individuals are being denied their extended unemployment benefits for up to 1 month because they were hospitalized or were serving on jury duty. This is because they were not engaged in an active search for work as required by law.

The amendment that I am offering today amends the provision of the extended benefits program that requires an active search for work to allow an individual who is hospitalized or serving on jury duty to continue to collect his or her unemployment benefits and not be terminated for 1 month. Although we should encourage unemployed individuals to seek work wherever they can find it, we should not penalize those who are clearly unable to search for work. This legislation would go a long way toward correcting this inequity.

My amendment will allow States to provide coverage under the extended benefits program to the extent that it is provided by the States in the regular State program. It is a modification of legislation introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Conklin of New York and in the Senate by Senator Tsongas, and I urge the conferees on this bill to include this amendment in the conference agreement.

Mr. President, I rise in support of Senators Heinz and Doles proposal that provides health insurance for the unemployed. Because of sharply rising unemployment in the United States, growing numbers of workers and their families have lost their employer-based health insurance and their employers' contributions toward the costs of such important protection. Although the loss of employer provided group health insurance is not a new phenomenon, the absolute number of workers who have lost their jobs and the duration of such unemployment is unprecedented in modern times and makes the matter of particular national concern.

In February of 1983, the national unemployment rate was 10.4 percent. Though slightly lower than last year's figures, which reflected the largest number of unemployed workers since 1940, the number of unemployed persons remains at an astronomically high 11,490,000. Compounding this problem, is the increase in the duration of unemployment. In 1981, the average duration of joblessness for an unemployed worker remained unemployed for 12 weeks, in 1982 this figure increased to 18 weeks, and this year that figure has risen to 19 weeks. Since those who are unemployed for a short period of time generally do not lose health benefits, this increased duration of employment is of vital concern to me. A study in 1975 indicated that 50-60 percent of unemployed workers lost their health insurance for 22 weeks mainly due to the duration of unemployment.

Exacerbating this problem is the lack of continued employer contributions toward the cost of health premiums. Although by 1980, 29 States required group health plans to allow an employee to continue insurance after leaving a job, none mandated that employers continue any contribution to the cost. As a result, workers are forced to finance continuation or conversion of their group policy on their own. However, the costs of doing so are invariably too much for the individual who is out of work can afford. In addition, usually existing public health care programs are unavailable to the unemployed, since they are targeted toward other specific population groups. For example, Medicare is limited to the aged and the disabled. State Medicaid programs have eligibility requirements which preclude most unemployed workers and families from obtaining benefits, and the Veterans' Administration can assist only selected numbers of those who lose employment-based health benefits.

The burden of providing the much needed health care services has fallen mainly on our public hospitals and community clinics. Last week in the jobs bill we added some needed funds for prenatal care for the unemployed but that was hardly enough to plug the hole in the dike. The projected slow economic recovery gives no hope for our Nation's unemployed. We must give them the continued health care provided in this proposal.

I am pleased that this amendment gives special attention to health needs of pregnant women and children—the most vulnerable in society. By providing for pre- and post-natal care, we can assure some protection at this most crucial juncture of life. Although I would have preferred that no level of matching funds be required of the States, the formula used is sensitive to the needs of pregnant women and children in the States with the greatest fiscal burden and human need.

I am pleased to cosponsor the Dole/Heinz amendment to provide a means of health insurance to the unemployed and their dependents. While this proposal is more modest than what I would have liked, it is important to get assistance out to the millions of unemployed now. Those without care tonight cannot wait any longer for help. I am sorry we will not be voting on this amendment tonight, I appreciate the commitment of the chairman of the Finance Committee that we will act on this matter shortly.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield so I may ask the Chair a question?

Mr. DOLE. Yes.

Mr. PRYOR. How long have we been on this amendment, Mr. President?

The PRESIDENT. Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, just speaking for this Senator, I thought we were all going to try to pass this bill tonight. I enjoy hearing all of my colleagues and I think they are very eloquent. I would only suggest, if we are going to have hearings on this issue, and a lot of us are interested in that, that we do it some morning at 9 a.m. rather than 9 p.m. That is just a modest suggestion. I would just like to urge, if we are going to vote on this, that we vote on it. If we are not, let us withdraw it. Is that a proper suggestion?

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, I join with that. I think we have been here long enough. Maybe we should just vote on this. Why not stay a little longer and vote?

Mr. DeCONCINI. Mr. President, it really troubles me—I do not know about the rest of you—but we are only a few months into the 98th session of Congress. We have an employment problem of this bill that is necessary and I would suggest to all the colleagues and I think they are very eloquent. I would only suggest, if we do not pass this whole blasted thing this week that the Nation is going to come to a halt. I do not know about everyone else, but I have a few things I would like to do and I suspect others here would not mind spending a little time with their families or maybe doing some work someplace else.

I think we are looking foolish hanging around here until 11 o'clock at night, night after night, trying to pass a bill that does not have to pass this week.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I hope that Senators will be more tolerant and give us the benefit of a little more of their patience. I believe we are going to go to third reading on this bill shortly. I am pleased the committee chairman is doing the very best he can to bring this matter to a decision. I hope that Senators could just indulge us just a few more minutes. I believe we can resolve these things and be on third reading.

I urge everybody to please be brief, even if they are for amendments. I know that is not very considerate for me to say that because I have already had my say on my amendments.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, we drifted away about 36 hours on withholding. This is at least as relevant. There are people out of work, people that do not have health care coverage.

When the Senator from Kansas offered the amendment, I said I was not going to press it, but I wanted to discuss it, as other Senators do with amendments. Most demand rollcalls. I have not done that. I am going to withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has a right to withdraw the amendment. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we have consumed 37 minutes perhaps now up to 42 minutes, not at the most convenient hour, but there have been many of us who have been waiting for several days to have this amendment heard. I understand that I have a right to offer an amendment if I choose to do so. But, with the assurances that have been made here this evening about a specific timetable, a meeting with the administration on Friday, the commitment to hearings by the subcommittee during the week of April 11, and the commitment by the Senator from Kansas that he will move ahead at an early date with or without administration approval, that is satisfactory to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BAKER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I hope we can finish now. I do not know what other amendments are scheduled, but I think we are close to the end. I urge any Senator who has an amendment to come quickly to the floor and offer it.

Mr. BUMPERS. Third reading.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I do not want to upset anybody over here, because those of us who have to go to conference have some things to do, also.

I understand the Senator from New York, Senator D'Amato, sent word this afternoon about an amendment. Has that been taken care of?

Mr. LONG. It is my understanding that the Senator from New York does wish to make a brief statement, but he is not going to insist on offering his amendment.

Mr. CHILES. Mr. President, we should make sure. If the Senator from New York sent word that he would have something, I think we ought to wait a while for him.

Mr. DOLE. The Senator has the same rights as any other Senator.

Mr. LONG. Might we just take a moment to have someone check with the Senator from New York?

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, we have worked hard to resolve a very difficult problem—how to find the money to save one of our most basic institutions—the social security system. None of the choices are painless, none are particularly pleasant. I have made clear that we are trying to develop a solution in which everyone is asked to share a part of the burden. And I believe that the bill before us is a reasonable attempt to do just that. Everyone is asked to sacrifice a bit. While I do not support each and every change included in the package, I believe that it is probably the best compromise possible—one that is fair to recipients as well as workers paying taxes.

Social security is a vital part of the fabric of our society. It is the best expression of community that we have—with workers willing to pay in because they expect there will be others supporting them when they reach retirement. Over the past 1½ years I have held social security conferences throughout New Jersey for senior citizens—both to lay out the facts about the present crisis and to get reaction to possible suggestions and to involve them in arriving at a solution. The participants in these forums have generally agreed that all citizens—social security recipients and taxpayers—must share the burden of keeping the system solvent in years to come.

And Mr. President, I believe that the reform legislation generally meets the criteria established by participants in these forums for a fair solution. If everyone had refused to make any sacrifice the check would not go out this July. It has seen the need to pitch in will resolve this problem and keep this important life support system going. We will have saved social security.

Mr. President, this legislation is based largely on the recommendations made by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. Both the Senate and the House versions of the reform legislation closely follow the Commission's recommendations. The four major provisions included in the bill are as follows:

First, delaying cost of living adjustments. Beginning this year, the COLA for social security benefits will be delayed by 6 months. Under the current law, COLAs are paid in July; from now on, COLA's will be paid in January.

Second, taxing social security benefits. The bill includes the provision that social security will be subject to regular income tax based on thresholds of $25,000 for single taxpayers and $32,000 for married taxpayers. To determine whether the taxpayer's income exceeds these thresholds, one-half of social security benefits would be added to adjusted gross income. For taxpayers who have already retired, one-half of social security benefits would be subject to income tax.

Third, coverage of nonprofit employees and newly hired Federal employees. The bill extends social security coverage as of January 1, 1983, to all persons who work for nonprofit organizations and to all current members of Congress, the President, Vice President, and the Social Security Commission as well as all new Federal and congressional employees hired after 1983 will be covered by social security as soon as supplementary civil service retirement plan has been developed for them. To alleviate the fears of Federal workers that the current civil service retirement system will go bankrupt, the bill includes a provision which I cosponsored that:

Nothing in this act shall reduce the accrued entitlements to future benefits under the Federal retirement benefit plan for current and retired Federal employees and their families. The full faith and credit of the U.S. Government is pledged hereby in support of the payment of said accrued entitlements.

Fourth, increased payroll taxes. The bill includes a provision to move the scheduled 1985 tax increase to 1984, with a tax credit to offset the increase. In addition, the 1986-87 tax rate would remain as scheduled under present law, part of the 1990 rate would be moved to 1988, and the rate for 1990 and after would remain unchanged.

Mr. President, the bill includes two other major provisions to resolve social security's long-term deficit problem.

The first provision relates to increasing the retirement age. The bill gradually raises the social security retirement age to 66 by the year 2012, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Early-retirement benefits would continue to be available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers, but the benefit reduction for early retirement would be larger. The minimum age for eligibility for medicare benefits would continue to be tied to the age at which unreduced retirement benefits are first available.

The second provision reduces by 5 percent the initial social security benefit level for workers that first become eligible for social security benefits in the year 2000.

Mr. President, as I stated earlier, I do have some strong concerns about some parts of this proposal.

One of my deepest reservations about the reform package relates to taxing social security benefits. The provisions in the bill amount to changing the rules after the fact. People have already made financial and social decisions during their working lives based on the premise that social security benefits would not be taxed. Now we are changing the rules after the fact—for people who have already retired.

If we must to tax benefits, I believe that the fairest way would be by excluding from taxation people who have already retired or who are about to retire—for example, people who are 55 years of age, and older. But given social security's severe fiscal problems, such a proposal was never given serious consideration by the Congress. I offered an even more modest amendment in committee that would only tax social security benefits after the person has received back in benefits all that he or she paid into the system, plus interest. This seems to be the minimal acceptable proposal for taxing benefits; unfortunately, the amendment was also not accepted.
Mr. President, another area of concern to me relates to increasing the retirement age. It seems to me that if we must raise the social security retirement age, we need with major health problems. Under the proposal, beginning in the year 2000, a limited number of workers between the ages of 62 and 66 would have received a new "disability-retirement" benefit if they were unable to work in their current occupation because of poor health.

I believe that it is imperative that we take this step in conjunction with any increase in the social security retirement age. If the retirement age is increased, its inevitability will mean a hardship for many older workers who cannot stay in their jobs because of poor health and also can not qualify for regular disability insurance benefits. These workers should not be shortchanged in any way that will happen in a lot of cases unless steps are taken to protect these workers.

My amendment would have allowed workers to qualify for these benefits if they could demonstrate inability to perform the major occupation they had held in the recent past. Benefits for this program would have been paid the benefits they are entitled to under the current social security law. In effect, these workers would be "held harmless" to the proposed increase in the retirement age and reduction in early retirement benefits.

Mr. President, a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, who testified before the Finance Committee, recommended that the retirement age be raised. In addition, these same recommended a liberalization of the disability program for those aged 62 and above.

It is from the Commission Report:

Disability benefits are now available under somewhat less stringent definitions for those aged 60 to 64. However because some workers, particularly those in physically demanding employment, may not benefit from improvements in mortality and by age 65, they are unable to assume that the disability benefit program will be increased prior to the implementation of this recommendation to take into account the special problem the normal retirement age who are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons.

Mr. President, the Senate bill only raised the retirement age—it did not make improvements to the disability program. Unfortunately, my amendment, which merely followed through on the recommendations made by a majority of the members of the Social Security Commission, was not adopted by the Senate. Instead the Senate has requested that a study be conducted to determine how to best deal with the problem. I am hopeful that a measure similar to mine will be adopted by the Senate Finance Committee. The Senate Finance Committee included a provision that would allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services to scale back or even eliminate social security COLA's if the trust funds are running low.

I oppose this provision. The first and most important reason is that the proposal is unfair to social security recipients; benefits may be cut over time if we are faced with another economic period similar to the past 5 years—high inflation coupled with slow growth.

The second reason why I oppose the provision is that it ties the hands of future Congresses in dealing with potential funding problems. During committee consideration of the social security reform legislation, I offered an amendment which was not adopted that would have allowed the Social Security Administration to borrow from general revenues if the trust funds run out of money. My amendment also required Congress to develop a plan for repayment of the borrowed funds, leaving the decision as to how to repay the funds up to future Congresses. I believe that my approach is fairer than the one adopted by the Senate. A person's benefits should not be arbitrarily cut back without serious congressional debate.

Mr. President, the House did not include a provision for cutting COLA's in future years if the trust funds run low. And I believe that Commission did not recommend cutting COLA's. I hope that the conference realizes the serious mistake that has been made, and I hope they strike this provision from the final bill.

The financing of the social security system is extremely sensitive to the health of the economy. Recently, high unemployment reduced the number of people paying taxes into the trust fund while high inflation caused social security benefits to rise. That combination of high unemployment and inflation has caused a serious, immediate cash-flow problem that needed immediate attention. It is my belief that the legislation changes included in the reform package should be sufficient to solve this cash-flow problem, so long as the economic picture continues to gradually improve.

But some people are afraid that we have not made sufficient changes to keep the system solvent. I believe that the social security system is fundamentally flawed and that the proposals included in this reform package only delay for a few short years the final day of reckoning. I simply do not agree with this assessment. Social security is a sound and durable system that has worked well for the past 45 years, and with these adjustments, should continue to work well for the next 45 years.

Mr. President, it is my belief and my hope that this social security reform package will eliminate the current uncertainty about the future of social security and assure continuation of one of the most significant achievements of the 20th century. As long as we all work together, social security will continue to provide benefits to our children's children. The Congress, through its work on social security, is showing that it can grapple with a very serious issues in a fair and sound way, which should give us confidence as we face the challenges of the 1980's and 1990's.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I wish to voice my strong support for the bill now before the Senate with one significant reservation. H.R. 1900 will implement the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. The Commission was charged with restoring the short- and long-term solvency of the social security system. Its recommendations do not without altering the system's basic financing and benefit provisions, and in a manner which is responsive to the needs of all aspects of American society. Moreover, the reforms in this bill added to the Commission's recommendations add to its responsiveness and long-term soundness.

The importance of social security to its beneficiaries—present and future—cannot be overstated. Monthly social security checks are the primary—if not the only—dependable source of income for millions of Americans. The assurance that they will have a steady stream of income and their families of financial protection in case of their disability, retirement, or death. Obviously, public support for a viable and fair social security system is overwhelming.

The Commission actually was charged with two problems. First was the financing issue; second, the need to restore the public's confidence in the system. Using reasonable economic and demographic assumptions, the Commission put together a package which meets both goals: fiscal and political. The bill before us, which embodies this package, with the exception of the Long amendment, together with amendments proposed by Congressman Pickle, Senator Dole, and Senator Ammstrong, strikes a good balance between the financial needs of social security beneficiaries and the need to limit the burden placed on workers and employers who finance the system through payroll taxes. The passage of this bill will renew the confidence of all Americans in social security.

Mr. President, it is also appropriate to comment on the process which has led to the consideration of this bill. Passage of the 1983 social security... amendments will demonstrate that our democratic political system works and works well. Everyone who cared to participate had been heard, as was the result is a bill which responds to the concerns and the needs of all citizens. Significant differences of opinion have been resolved. Guidance from the President and the leaders of Congress was essential. That result, as was the participation of the nonelected members of the Commission who represented important constituencies.

Equally valuable to the process was the dedication of experts and ordinary citizens. They made these views known to the Commission and to their elected representatives in Congress.

The distinguished chairman of the Committee on Finance, Mr. Dole, deserves the special recognition of the Senate. The Senator from Kansas contributed mightily to the compromise package before us today. In my view, his work, in collaboration with the other members of the Finance Committee, most particularly Senator Armstrong and Senator McGovern, has resulted in a bill which improves upon the work of the Commission, on which he served, and on the measure already passed by the House. I commend the Senator from Kansas for his work and leadership.

Mr. President, in terms of the future solvency of the social security system and the equity of the proposed changes, the package before us was totally sound and deserving of support before the adoption of the Long amendment. That amendment, which destroys the consensus which created this package, effectively strips from the bill the mandatory coverage of future Federal Government employees. That, in turn, means that the solvency of the system is not assured and thus that recipients of benefits will lose any benefits threatened before the end of the 1980's. Moreover, the Long amendment undermines the vital principle of universal coverage.

The Long amendment seriously calls into question the range soundness of the bill. Because of my belief that the conference committee will drop or correct the Long amendment, I remain firmly in support of the bill.

What remains for Congress to address, however, are features of the social security system which may well remain unsound and flawed. These problems relate to the fundamental design of the system and its relationship to the Nation's economy.

Let me briefly discuss these shortcomings. The automatic growth factors built into the social security system trouble me. Benefits of current recipients grow without congressional action. And escalators also will cause the initial benefits of future recipients to increase in real terms well above levels paid today, and well above those that can be supported by today's contributions, even with the modest reductions included in the bill before us. These automatic, uncontrollable increases led, in large part, to the solvency problem addressed by this bill.

My reservations about the automatic benefit increases of the social security system run deeper than simple dismay over the short-run solvency problem they caused. These escalators—what social security and many other Federal programs—pose a threat to the solvency of the Federal Government. The enormity of what we face today are ample proof of that fact. The ability to alter spending programs is a fundamental attribute of free government. The features of the social security system which lead to this unlegislated increases must remove this necessity function. Reform of these escalators must be addressed in the future.

I am also unconvinced that we have dealt adequately with the increasing long-run system costs which stem from the advancing average age of our population. This bill does include a 1-year increase in the retirement age which will take full effect in 30 years. As this change is part of the compromise which includes only such a fine package before us, I simply do not want to press debate on this issue now. Perhaps we should, however, reexamine the merits of having a fixed age of "normal" retirement which does not recognize the inevitable trend of our population over the years.

The present system also fails to recognize the changes which have occurred in the roles women play in society. The benefit structure is based on the assumption that families are composed of a single wage earner and a dependent spouse. This assumption is naive by today's norms, and is becoming increasingly outdated. I would be receptive to reforms in the system which were developed from careful study of the growing frequency with which they live independently or are heads of households. I call on women's groups and other affected parties to come forward with proposals which are designed with an eye sensitive to both costs and benefits.

The final structural problem of the social security system I want to discuss was acknowledged but not addressed by the Commission. The Commission recommend the operations of only two of the system's four trust funds. Nonpolitical experts point out that the long-term deficits facing parts A and B of medicare—the social security system's other two programs—are at least as large as the funding shortage in the combined retirement and disability programs which are addressed by this bill. Title III of this bill phases in a revamped hospital hospital payment system. The theoretical incentives of this system bode well for the future, but are untested. And the system is designed to be "budget neutral" in the near term. Although individual hospitals will experience changing medicare revenues, aggregate Federal spending will not change markedly. This is only a first step toward better health care policies at the Federal, State, and local levels. Such improvements are necessary to slow the growth of health care spending, as well as to preserve the solvency of the medicare trust funds.

In summary, Mr. President. I would like to reiterate my support for this bill. We have addressed the immediate problems before us in a responsible manner. The public health care spending is assured that we are taking action which will yield a solvent and more affordable social security system. But we will not have served our Nation well if we are content to stop with the reforms contained in this bill. The issues which I have identified must be given careful attention.

Mr. DeConcini. Mr. President, I intend to cast my vote today in favor of final passage of S. 1, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983. This is a difficult vote for me to cast because the legislation includes a number of provisions about some elements of the bill. On balance, however, I believe that the legislation should be passed and that it will significantly add to the future stability of the social security system.

Most Americans regard the social security system as the single most important Government program. Originally conceived as a retirement supplement, it has for millions become either the sole or at least the primary source of retirement income. Because social security is so fundamentally important, I am absolutely committed to insuring its financial integrity. And that is precisely what S. 1 does.

As in any piece of major legislation, the many provisions represent compromises between differing points of view and differing interests. On the whole, the legislation succeeds in the dual goals of effectiveness and fairness. With the enactment of S. 1, the future solvency of the social security system will be assured to the foreseeable future.

During the last Congress, the administration proposed solving social security's financial problems by reducing benefits. Indeed, it succeeded in persuading Congress—over my opposition and that of a number of colleagues—to eliminate the minimum benefit. A few months later, Congress reversed itself and decided to find an equitable solution. A National Commission was established to study the problem and propose a legislative solution.

The members of that Commission met for many months, listening to all points of view, and ultimately crafted a compromise proposal which is transmitted to Congress. That document became the starting point for Senate Committee hearings which resulted in the legislation before us today.

It is in order, Mr. President, to congratulate not only the members of that Commission but my colleagues on the Senate Finance Committee, especially its chairman, Senator Dole, and its ranking member, Senator Lott. Whether we agree on every point or not, I doubt if anyone can legitimately accuse S. 1 of fundamental unfairness.

I have been an avid opponent of cuts in social security benefits for the simple reason that too many retired Americans need that income to survive. My opposition to cuts has continued during the Senate deliberations on S. 1. My preference is to balance the books by other means, primarily through the use of deficit-reducing devices and interfund borrowing.

In sum, Mr. President, this legislation is both fair and reasonable. I believe that the present legislation keeps benefits intact and, more importantly, it retains the principle of readjusting benefits to keep pace with inflation. Had I been its sole architect there are things I would have done differently. But, on balance, it should be supported.

(By request of Mr. Long, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the Record)

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it was only in 1977 that Congress last enacted a social security reform bill. A bill, we should all remember, that was to put the system on a firm financial footing for at least the next 50 years. Unfortunately, that reform lasted only 5, not 50, years. And, more unfortunately, there are parallels to that earlier, failed effort in this present legislation.

First of all, this bill relies too heavily on tax increases. In 1977 we enacted the largest tax increase in our history, only to be here a few years later to add on more. Fully two-thirds of the total tax increase enacted this time is due to tax increases.

Mr. President, the problems of social security are not due to people paying too few taxes. Indeed, the average American now pays more in social security taxes than does in Federal income taxes. The maximum social security tax quadrupled in the 1970's, and it will triple again in the 1980's.

Surely, this trend cannot continue. And more assuredly, it cannot continue without seriously erosion our economic and social well-being. The tax increases in this bill will mean fewer jobs during the next few years—perhaps as many as 100,000 to 200,000 jobs according to economic analysts that I have consulted. In addition, it burdens our current and future workers—our children and grandchildren—with the bulk of the financial cost of this compromise. These taxes will be with them for life while chance that the consequences of this delay will only be temporary. And it is this imbalance that has led such groups as the American Association of Retired People and the National Alliance of Senior Citizens To Oppose the Higher Taxes.

Furthermore, Mr. President, this legislation disrupts many of the fundamental principles that are the foundation of our social security program. For example, it begins a means test on current benefits and it taxes benefits for the first time. It also infuses general revenues into the system and thereby erodes the distinction between social security and welfare. And, finally, it increases the retirement age for our future workers. Those who need to or want to retire at our established retirement age will no longer be able to do so without a penalty.

While all of this is bad enough, it is intolerable in view of the fact that a fairer, more equitable system exists.

For the first 2 years now I have advocated a temporary freeze in cost-of-living adjustments as part of a total Government-wide freeze on expenditures. Such a proposal would restore social security solvency and I am sure, from conversations that I have had with retirees, that most people would be willing to give up a bit of their COLA if it insured that the system would survive. Also, such a proposal would slow down wage increases. In basic benefits or the retirement age—it only slows up the increase in benefits. And, finally, it restores some equity between retirees and the workers that now support the system but who do not get automatic COLA's on their wages every year.

Mr. President, it is heartbreaking to see bipartisan agreement on the social security problem. But it does us no good to agree on a set of poor policies. In 1977 we tried to get out of a similar fiscal dilemma by relying on tax increases and failed. For the past 2 years both parties have avoided addressing the root causes of social security's financing problems and we are now only delaying the day of reckoning. Indeed, the bill compromiser's are the best of the worst of all suggestions—massive tax increases that penalize the young, benefit taxes that penalize the retiree, retirement age increases that penalize the blue collar worker, and general revenue funding that penalizes the dignity derived from an insurance program, not welfare.

We certainly can do better than that. We do not need more partisan politics, but we also should not be underestimating our capabilities. We owe more to current retirees, current workers, and future generations than another round of stopgap, short-run remedies. For all these reasons, Mr. President, I oppose this legislation.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, I am obliged to vote against H.R. 1900 the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, because I am convinced that the bill will not solve the social security crisis. First, it raises payroll taxes significantly. We have just completed work on the so-called Jobs bill, which provides almost $5 billion for porkbarrel, make-work projects. If Congress is so concerned about jobs, it raises the payroll tax when the Congressional Budget Office has told us the 1977 payroll tax increase cost $500,000 working men and women their jobs?

The American people cannot stand another round of tax increases. If anything, we should be talking about cutting taxes.

The bill also reduces social security benefits by raising the retirement age, postponing cost of living adjustments, and so forth. The U.S. Government has a commitment to millions of social security beneficiaries—a commitment that should not be broken, the paper we can in Congress, breaking that trust. Any government that cannot keep its commitments cannot maintain its credibility.

This bill does not solve underlying problems. It is merely another bailout, and I predict it will be yet another disaster, just like 1977. The bill does not provide for any long term means of establishing private, fully funded retirement plans to ensure the security of elderly Americans. It does not eliminate the dependence people have on government programs.

Mr. President, my colleagues are aware of what I have tried to do to help solve the social security problem. I offered a comprehensive plan to save Social Security—S. 541—that would have allowed workers to establish for themselves in the private sector an Individual Retirement Security Account—IRSA. These IRA accounts would have accumulated billions of dollars from individuals to draw on when they retire, stimulating the economy by lowering interest rates and creating jobs.
Mr. President, obviously Congress is not yet ready for such a reform. I am pleased that this bill requires the Treasury Secretary to conduct a study of the feasibility of my proposal and to report back to the Senate Finance Committee by July 1, 1984. Perhaps then the value of my proposal will become clearer. Thousands of citizens across America have endorsed my proposal.

Mr. President, I believe in incremental success. I intend to continue to advocate my reform proposal. Progress has been made, and I believe the American people now understand my proposal. I am getting the mail I have received on the subject, not only understand it, but they want it.

One day, Mr. President, Congress will no longer be content to "paper over" the social security problem. It will be obliged to adopt a private retirement system along the lines of my proposal to replace the bankrupt Government-run system we have today. If we begin to take prudent steps now, however, the transition will be smooth and gradual and not a penny of benefits will be lost.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I cannot support H.R. 1900 which is alleged to restore the financial soundness of the old age and survivors' insurance—OASI—program.

The recommendation of the National Commission on Social Security Reform provided a good point from which to begin. The changes made in the House of Representatives gradually raising the retirement age were in the right direction. They reflect current demographic reality but standing alone do not overcome the quick-fix solution contained in the bill being touted as a bipartisan solution to a serious problem.

Mr. President, in my view the fundamental structural deficiencies of social security were not addressed. Instead we further increased the regressive payroll tax; introduced a back door means test in the method by which benefits are taxed; increased the use of general revenues to fund social security and created a break in parity in employer-employee FICA tax contribution.

Mr. President, my colleague Senator Armstrong, a member of the National Commission and chairman of the Subcommittee on Social Security of the Committee on Finance, has indicated that high taxes account for 75 percent of the proposed deficit reduction in the system between now and 1990. That is $126 billion out of the $169 billion total. In the long run, tax increases constitute 91 percent of the Commission's total recommendation.

In 1970, the maximum payroll tax rates quadrupled. Without the Commission's recommendations, they are scheduled to triple again during the 1980's. During the period from 1970 to 1981, pretax wages increased 122 percent. The consumer price index went up 136 percent. Social security benefits rose 205 percent. Such trends make it almost impossible to justify further payroll levies on wage earners who already pay more in social security taxes than Federal income taxes.

It is obvious that higher payroll taxes will have a serious effect on unemployment. As employers also pay social security taxes to what their employees pay, the tax rate increase will raise the cost of employing each worker. These higher labor costs will make the employment of labor relatively more expensive than the employment of capital in the production process. Since labor is now more expensive, employers will tend to reduce the amount of labor they use and increase the amount of capital used. This substitution of capital for labor, due to higher labor costs caused by the increases in social security taxes, will contribute toward increasing unemployment.

Mr. President, the bill provides for the taxation of benefits and thereby penalizes those who save, and rewards those who spend. It penalizes a disabled individual by taxing his benefits if his spouse takes a job to help pay for his special needs, thus raising the family income above the tax threshold. For some individuals now at the earnings limitation level, the combination of taxes and loss of benefits resulting from additional earnings could actually exceed 100 percent of those earnings. This is a strong disincentive for those who otherwise want to continue working to supplement their income.

This provision radically alters the fundamental nature of the system by imposing a means test. Even worse, this particular form of means test vastly overemphasizes the social adequacy function of social security and reduces the individual equity element which is so essential to the credibility and popularity of the system.

Mr. President, the bill further changes the nature of our social security system by its use of general revenues. This is an abrupt deviation from the discipline of a self-contained program, by designing a system which relates benefits more directly to taxes paid by an individual.

Social security benefits rose 205 percent. Such trends make it almost impossible to justify further payroll levies on wage earners who already pay more in social security taxes than Federal income taxes.

Mr. President, I support the social security reform package put together by the Senate Finance Committee. I believe it is a sound package which will go a long way toward restoring our Nation's confidence in this very important program.

It has been a long and sometimes rocky road we have followed to this point, Mr. President. As you will recall, it was only a few short months ago that many in Congress were still trying to convince the American people that there was not a problem. But through the dedication and determination of those people who faithfully served on the National Commission on Social Security Reform, we were able to come up with the basis for this package.

As the legislation has worked its way through the legislative process, I think changes have been made which make this a much stronger package. While there are still a number of changes which I do not personally believe are necessary, I, like so many others, am willing to support those changes in the interest of securing the long-term solvency of the social security system.

I would like to take a few minutes, Mr. President, to speak briefly about some of the changes which I believe are of utmost importance.

Earnings Limit Repeal

During the Senate Finance Committee's deliberations, Senator Armstrong offered an amendment to phase out the social security earnings limitation. I cannot tell my colleagues that I am extremely happy because it is to the future of social security. As my good friend from Colorado knows, I have been working to get the earnings limit repealed since shortly after I was elected to the U.S. Senate. While I would prefer to see the ceiling lifted sooner than the bill specifies, I am pleased that the committee was at least willing to take this important step.

In conjunction with the earnings limit repeal is another important change, and that is the increase in the delayed retirement credit. This, combined with the earnings limit, will be beneficial for disabled widows or widowers and someone who want to continue working to remain in the work force. Although these two provisions have not received the media attention they deserve, I believe that history will show that their value was very significant to the long-term solvency of the social security system.

I commend the Senator from Colorado for his efforts on this issue, and I look forward to working with him in the future on other issues of mutual interest.

DROP OUT YEARS FOR CHILD CARE

Another provision, also recommended by the Senator from Colorado, deals with the increase in the dropout years for child care. I was most pleased to see the committee's acceptance of this proposal, and I commend Senator Armstrong for having the foresight to offer this amendment in committee.

For years, Mr. President, women have suffered significant losses of benefits because of time out of the paid work force during childrearing years. While this increase does not correct all of the inequities in the system, it is a start. I would hope that the committee will continue to consider further changes to remove some of the penalties married couples face with regard to the social security system. I understand that the Committee has agreed to give serious consideration to Senator Cranston's earnings as a single individual, and I think this is an important step. I look forward to studying the committee's recommendations in this area.

WIDOW'S AND DIVORCED SPOUSES BENEFITS

Another important change recommended by the committee deals with improved benefits for disabled widows or widowers and divorced spouses, as well as the ability of divorced spouses to receive benefits despite the retirement decision of the former spouse. Again, both of these changes are extremely important in eliminating some of the provisions in the social security law which discriminate against women.

While it is true that the social security law is "blind" with respect to sex, it is also true that because of the historical makeup of this country's work force, there are certain provisions which impact more heavily on women than on men. Specifically, these are the provisions which deal with widow's benefits and spouses' benefits. I believe these changes are extremely important and will go a long way toward making social security a more equal opportunity program.

FAIL-SAFE/STABILIZER PROVISIONS

Before concluding, Mr. President, I want to point out two additional changes which are recommended by the committee which will perhaps do the most to restore confidence in the social security system: the fail-safe mechanism and the stabilizer provisions.

As my colleagues know, the fail-safe mechanism is intended to prevent the type of situation that forced us into the current reform proposal—changing economic conditions. I cannot tell my colleagues how many times I have been asked by people why this reform package is necessary. After all, they say, in 1983, they were told by President Carter that the system was solvent for the next 75 years.

Well, unfortunately, the social security system is extremely sensitive to a changing economy. Prior to the Carter administration, the thought of prices increasing faster than wages was simply unheard of. The sad fact is, it can and did happen.

The fail-safe mechanism will not prevent prices from rising faster than wages, but it will help the social security system adjust if this continues to occur. Specifically, the Secretary of Health and Human Services will have the authority to reduce cost-of-living adjustments if trust fund reserves fall to dangerously low levels. In addition, the stabilizer provision will also change the way the cost-of-living adjustment is computed if the trust fund reserves fall too low.

Of equal importance, however, is the "catch-up" provision which will allow larger cost-of-living adjustments if the trust fund reserves exceed a certain level. This, Mr. President, will insure that social security beneficiaries will be able to benefit from a strong economy.

Clearly there were some other things which could have been done to further protect trust fund reserves from a changing economy, but as with many of the other changes, these are important first steps. If we did nothing else, we have tried to exercise some restraint in the cost-of-living adjustments, and I think this was extremely important.

I close, Mr. President, by commending all those people who served on the National Commission on Social Security Reform. Theirs was not an easy task. I dare say that at times it appeared impossible. But in the end, what some people said could not be done, has been done—a social security reform package with bipartisan support has been brought to the floor of the Senate and it will be approved. If nothing else, I hope we have sent a signal to the American people that says that when the chips are down, we can join together to resolve a national problem in an honest and responsible manner.

- Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, almost 2 years ago, I began studying the social security program and suggested ways to insure its fiscal soundness and integrity. It became increasingly clear to me, through my work on the Budget Committee, that serious thought and effort needed to be given to controlling the rate of growth of the so-called entitlement programs—particularly the nonmeans tested ones—social security, Medicare, civil service, railroad retirement, veterans benefits and so on. And so the increase is half—43 percent—of all the entitlements combined. Total entitlements that cost $28 billion in 1961 zoomed to $350 billion in 1982—a 1.15 percent growth. I do not criticize the existence of these programs at all. They still vital.

Although it has traditionally been considered close to political suicide to even suggest slowing the growth rate of entitlement programs, I have believed for a long time that if we do not do something, social security will not be around for the children and grandchildren of those people receiving social security today.

How did we get where we are? How did we get to the point where 63 percent of our workers, in a spring 1982 Gallup poll, believe that they will get nothing when they retire? There are several problems unique to the social security system that have caused us to be facing a short-term and long-term crunch. But, while we have many economic problems, the threat of inflation is interwoven in all of them—the social security problems are no exception.

What specific factors have led to social security's funding problems?

First, when the system was in its early years there were many more people paying in per beneficiary drawing benefits. In 1945 there were 42 people paying in for every 1 beneficiary, currently the ratio is 3 to 1. And, when the baby boom generation starts retiring in about 2012, it will bring the ratio down only 2 to 1 by the year 2030.

Second, people are living longer today, and consequently drawing benefits for a longer period of time than they did when the social security program was inaugurated. According to the Commission's report, men live on the average 15 years past retirement, and women 19 years; a lifespan increase of 20 percent over 40 years.

Compounding this problem is the fact that more Americans are opting for retirement before age 65—90 percent of Americans who retire, do so before age 65. Therefore, beneficiaries are drawing benefits sooner, and they are living longer, extending on both ends the period during which they receive benefits.

Third, the average social security recipient gets back $5.60 for every $1 they put into the system. Social security is a pay-as-you-go system and was never intended to be a retirement system where social security taxes would build up in a pension fund for an individual or group to meet their eventual benefits, as it is in private pension funds. Nevertheless, a 5 to 1 payback ratio cannot be maintained while the ratio of workers to retirees declines to 2 to 1.

And last, but certainly not least, the effects of inflation have been devastating to the OASDI trust fund. In 1975, we indexed benefits to the Consumer Price Index (CPI). Certainly the goal of protecting beneficiaries from the effects of inflation is laudable, but we could not have known the historical inflation rates that the nation would be subjected to over the next two decades. The bottom line is that social security benefits have gone up faster than the wages which pay the benefits.

No one would argue that social security recipients are getting rich. My point is simply that when the amount being paid out of the system is increasing at a faster rate than the amount coming in, we are jeopardizing the stability and solvency of the social security system.

About 8 years ago, I prepared a "laundry list" of ideas, consisting of 19 ways to slow the rate of growth of the social security system. I sent out 50,000 copies of my newsletter entitled, "Saving Social Security." Thousands of Minnesotans responded. Most—not all—agreed with most of my ideas. In fact, I received positive responses from all over the country because the Minneapolis Tribune, the Washington Post and many other newspapers published my ideas. I talked about the results of this poll. More recently I held town meetings throughout Minnesota to conduct further surveys on the Commission's proposals as well as some of my own. I ask unanimous consent that the results of my polls and surveys conducted at the town meetings be printed at the end of this testimony.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. The results of my informal surveys taken at the town meetings suggest that both retired and nonretired people understand and approve of some reasonable modifications in the social security system designed to make the system solvent. The survey was taken of about 800 people attending the town meetings in Willmar, Worthington, Rochester, Duluth, and Roseville. I also made the presentation to a group representing the St. Paul Chamber of Commerce and the Metro Senior Federation in Minneapolis.

I presented 12 different proposals at the meetings—five of the Commission's proposals and seven of my own. Of the 12 possible solutions, only 2 were supported by less than half of those responding. I believe this demonstrates that if people are given a chance to review some of the changes in social security without the usual politicking and democracy that accompanies them, they will make thoughtful, reasoned judgments. The dialog was heated at times, to be sure, but generally pretty constructive.

The three approaches taken by the National Commission on Social Security Reform, the House of Representatives, and the Senate demonstrate that others have gotten the same reaction from the folks back home.

I am pleased to see that many of the changes suggested in my 19-point "laundry list" had been included in the social security reform package. The 19 possible changes I suggested were:

- First, limit social security benefits paid to foreigners not living in the United States.
- Second, increase immediately the number of quarters needed to qualify for full social security benefits.
- Third, only allow 1 quarter's credit for 1 quarter's work. A quarter is currently measured as a 3-month period during which a worker earns more than $370. Suppose a worker earns $1,480 (4 times $370) in that quarter. Under present rules a worker gets credit for 4 quarters, even if he does not work at all the rest of the year. I proposed changing this rule, 1 quarter's work should only get 1 quarter's credit.
- Fourth, require all new government employees (Federal, State and local) to pay into social security. This is a proposal that deserves serious consideration and presents an opportunity for Congress to examine the retirement system for Federal employees.
- Fifth, eliminate children's benefits for early retirees. If a worker takes early retirement at 62 and has children under 18, the worker receives benefits and the children receive separate benefits as well. I proposed not allowing the children to get benefits until the retiree is 65, unless he or she retired early for health reasons.
- Sixth, increase the self-employed person's taxes withheld for social security by 2 percent.
- Seventh, give incentives to people to keep working beyond age 65 by increasing benefits each year the person works beyond 65. Specifically, my proposal would give an extra 5 percent (105 percent of the regular social security benefit) if a person retires at 66; at 67 an extra 11 percent (5 percent plus 6 percent); at 68 an extra 18 percent (5 + 6 + 7 percent); at 69 an extra 26 percent (5 + 6 + 7 + 8 percent), and if the worker retires at 70, an extra 35 percent (5 + 6 + 7 + 8 + 9 percent).
- Eighth, raise the offset age to 75. Currently people over 72 who keep working receive benefits no matter how much they earn. People under 72 lose $1 of social security benefits for each $2 of income they earn over $4,600. My proposal would have extended this to anyone under 75.
- Ninth, tax social security payments at the social security recipient has already had to pay into social security ($25,000 for couples).
- Tenth, raise the 65-year-old retirement age to 65 plus 3 months (and the 62 year early retirement age to 62 years plus 3 months).
- Eleventh, raise the retirement age to 65 years plus 6 months.
- Twelfth, lower the cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) to 3 percent less than the inflation rate for 3 years, except for the lowest 25 percent of social security recipients who would continue to receive the full COLA.
- Thirteenth, delay the COLA 3 months to October 1, to coincide with the beginning of the Government's fiscal year.
- Fourteenth, index "endpoints" by one-half of the wage index for 4 years.
- Fifteenth, eliminate survivor benefits for minor children if the remaining parent has income exceeding $25,000.
- Sixteenth, lengthen the benefit computation period by 3 years. Benefits are determined by applying a formula to a worker's average monthly earnings over a certain period of time. In most cases the averaging period is the number of years after 1950 up until the year the person reaches 62 less the 5 lowest years. I proposed dropping only the 2 lowest years rather than the 5 lowest.
- Seventeenth, eliminate parent's benefit when the youngest child is age 6. The child would continue to receive survivor's benefits until he or she is 18, but I proposed eliminating the surplus parent's benefits when the youngest child reaches age 6—not 16. I felt this proposal acknowledged the major increase in the number of women working in outside jobs.
- Eighteenth, expand workers' compensation offset. About 165,000 people now receiving social security disability benefits also receive payments from other Federal programs: veterans compensation, civil service, military disability retirement benefits and black lung benefits. All these benefits are taxed without regard to what other benefits the person is receiving. After February 1981, people eligible for social security disability payments have a "cap" on their total combined benefits equal to 80 percent of their average indexed earnings. I proposed extending this provision to all recipients of social security disability benefits.
- Nineteenth, increase the number of recipients for special quarters in covered employment to be disability-insured to 30 out of 40 quarters. To receive disability benefits, a person must have worked at least 1 quarter for each year of age above 21 and have worked a total of at least 20 of the last 40 quarters. My proposal would require a person to have worked at least 30 of the last 40 quarters in covered employment.

Eight of the nineteen proposals on my "laundry list" were incorporated into the reform package on one form or another. The package as it came out of the Senate Finance Committee agreed to:

- Limit social security benefits paid to foreigners (1);
- Require new Federal Government workers to pay into social security (4);
- Raise the tax rate for the self-employed to 100 percent of the combined employer-employee rate—which I think is actually too much of an increase. That represents a 28-percent increase of the rate the self-employed pay now and I was proposing a more modest increase (6);
- Increase the delayed retirement credit for continuing to work beyond age 65 (7);
- Tax social security benefits if the beneficiary's income (including social security) exceeds $25,000 or a married couple's income exceeds $50,000 (9);
- Raise the retirement age to 66 gradually after the year 2000 (10 and 11);

Lower the COLA or even eliminate it when the OASDI trust fund reserve ratio falls below 20 percent (12);
- Delay the COLA for 6 months (13).

I claim no pride of authorship of any of these proposals. As I began my studies of the financial problems of the social security system more than 2 years ago, I soon realized there were many sane, sensible ideas available that would protect the solvency of the system, without cutting benefits to current recipients of social security benefits.

This social security package is one of the most constructive pieces of legislation that I have participated in since coming to the Senate. I commend the members of the Commission, the members of the House Ways and Means Committee, all the members of the House of Representatives, the members of the Senate Finance Committee, and all those who had a hand in shaping this package. In particular, Senators DOLE, ARMSTRONG, HIXON, and MOYNIHAN deserve our admiration and gratitude for pulling this package together.

Democrats and Republicans alike worked to make this a good package. Because I was one of the first—perhaps the first—to propose meaningful changes in the social security system, I have particular satisfaction with the package.

I think we have a better assurance now that social security will be intact for the children and grandchildren of those now collecting benefits.

| RESULTS OF SOCIAL SECURITY HEARINGS IN MINNESOTA PRESENTED BY SENATOR RUDY BOSCHWITZ—FEBRUARY 1983 | | | | | | | | |

Mr. CRANSTON. Mr. President, the bill before us today represents the combined work of many. The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, the Senator from Kansas (Mr. DOLE), and the Senator from New York (Mr. Moynihan) both served upon the National Commission on Social Security Reform and played an enormously important role in guiding this legislation through the Finance Committee and the Senate. Developing a compromise proposal in an area of many so deeply felt views is an awesome task and the mere fact that the Commission was able to reach a compromise is commendable in and of itself. The Finance Committee's work adhered closely to the basic framework of the Commission's proposal.

Mr. President, I also pay tribute to the distinguished Senator from Louisiana who was chairman of the Finance Committee. Senator Long has contributed significantly to the refining of this proposal and I was pleased to cosponsor his amendment dealing with equitable implementation of the provisions in the legislation relating to coverage of Government workers. As always, the experience and wisdom of the Senator from Louisiana adds immeasurably to the legislation that emerges from the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. President, I want to also recognize the enormous contribution and leadership which has come from the distinguished chairman of the House Rules Committee, Representative Claude Pepper. Representative Pepper has long been the outstanding champion of the needs of older Americans and his support for this proposal has influenced the views of many Members of the Congress.

Mr. President, I intend to vote for H.R. 1900, as amended in the Senate. This is a decision I have not come to lightly. I have had, and I continue to have, grave reservations about certain aspects of this legislation. Certain provisions, if presented to the Senate alone, would not have my support. However, it is a reality of the legislative process that compromises must be reached in order that important goals can be achieved.

At stake here is the confidence of the American people in our ability to assure the continuation of the social security system. Social security affects the lives of every single American, whatever his or her age or walk of life. For older Americans, it is often the lifeline for basic survival. For young workers, it provides the security of knowing that they will be protected in the event of disability and in retirement. Every American has an enormous interest in the continuation and stability of the social security program, and each has an obligation to support the process of restoring this important program to a stable and secure fiscal status.

The legislation before us seeks to spread the burden of stabilizing the social security program between the various segments of the population. While there may be differences as to the exact balance reached, I recognize that this proposal does achieve to a significant degree that important and fundamental purpose.

Mr. President, it is also important to point out what this legislation does not do. It does not alter the fundamental structure of social security or propose its replacement with some other system, as some have recommended. The Commission and the Congress are reaffirming the basic soundness, fairness, and necessity of continuing the social security system. That message needs to be communicated throughout the country.

RAISING THE AGE OF RETIREMENT

Mr. President, I do not intend to take the time of the Senate to discuss each and every provision of the legislation. However, there is one provision that has caused considerable concern—the raising of the age of retirement to 66 after the turn of the century—which I wish to discuss.

Mr. President, on June 26, I introduced legislation, S. 2, the proposed Employment Opportunities for Older Americans Act, which contains a number of provisions to encourage older workers to stay in the work force, particularly in part-time positions. Public opinion polls over the past few years have demonstrated that older workers in overwhelming numbers would generally like to remain in the work force. Demographic data also clearly indicate that in the next century we will be entering a labor scarce era when the contributions of older workers will be greatly needed. I believe that we ought to take every step possible to encourage employers to provide work opportunities for older workers and to encourage older workers to delay retirement. Two issues addressed in S. 2—the increase in the delayed retirement adjustment factor and modification of the earnings limitation test—are included in the legislation before us today and are aimed at encouraging continued work effort by older workers.

My bill focuses on creating incentives and eliminating or reducing disincentives for delayed retirement; it did not, as does the present bill, reduce significantly social security benefits for those who choose or must retire before age 66. I would prefer to follow the approach of S. 2—creating incentives, rather than penalties.

I also think that it is unrealistic and inequitable to raise the age of retirement without taking the necessary steps to assure that the employment opportunities will be available for these older workers and that adequate protections are provided to those individuals who are unable to continue in the work force.

The amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. Bradley), to establish a new disability program for those over age 62 in ill health and aged continues in their prior occupational fields, but not disabled enough to meet the current SSDI totally disabled criterion, would deal with a portion of this problem.

Unfortunately, the Senator from New Jersey did not attach this amendment. It is clear, however, that some type of protection along the lines proposed by the Senator from New Jersey for workers who fall into this category must be developed before the increase in the retirement age is implemented, and the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania to require a study of this matter should be helpful in moving toward the development and enactment in a timely fashion of provisions relating to early retirements forced by ill health.

There are other individuals, particularly older women and minority individuals, who are likely to lack employment opportunities as older workers. We need to take new steps to make sure that all segments of our population will have equal access and opportunity if they are to continue to be employed before retirement age. Unfortunately, the effective date of the increase in the age for full benefits is almost two decades away—longer under the House bill—and there will be ample opportunities to reassess the impact of these provisions and our progress in rectifying these employment opportunities before a new retirement age actually takes effect.

However, I believe that it is in the interests of both our Nation and older workers themselves to begin a process of reevaluating our policies regarding retirement and older workers. Each year thousands of older workers are forced against their wills out of the work force by mandatory retirement policies, age discrimination, and the existence of fiscal disincentives in public and private pension programs. It is time for Congress to foster a new perspective on retirement that would be premised upon a shift from the concept of an abrupt, total withdrawal from the labor force to one of gradual withdrawal where older workers are afforded the opportunity, if they choose, to reduce their work pace, shift to less demanding work roles, or participate in more flexible work schedules. My legislation, S. 2, is designed to encourage this shift and I intend to devote substantial effort to achieving its goals. In the near future, I plan to reintroduce S. 2 in two separate bills so that the provisions which relate to matters within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means and the Human Resources Committee will be separated from those within the jurisdiction of the Finance Committee. If the two aspects of S. 2 in the legislation before us today are enacted, those amendments will be available to assure that both committees will conduct hearings on these separate bills.

COVERAGE OF FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Mr. President, I also have had strong reservations regarding the manner in which the committee bill dealt with Federal employees. The Commission recommended that new Federal employees be brought into the social security system, but also recommended the development of a supplemental civil service retirement program—like that available to private employees covered under the social security— for Federal workers. The Finance Committee bill, however, dealt only with bringing new workers into social security; it provided no assurances that a new supplemental system would be developed or that the interests of private employees—workers in the existing civil service retirement system would be protected.

I was therefore pleased to be an original cosponsor of the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Long) to delay bringing new Federal employees into the social security system until such time as Congress has provided a modified Federal retirement system which coordinates benefits with the social security system and protects the integrity of the Federal retirement system. I was delighted that this amendment was adopted.

CONCLUSION

Mr. President, as I stated at the outset, I will support the social security reform legislation. I have strong reservations about certain aspects of the package but, on balance, the enormous importance of demonstrating to the American people that the social security system will continue overrides the specific shortcomings in the package.

Mr. PERCY. Mr. President, I support the Social Security Amendments of 1983 because they will restore fi-ancial solvency to the social security system and will, in future years, provide the necessary resources to ensure the stability of the system for tomorrow's retirees.

I want to commend all of those who have played a major role in fashioning this bipartisan, compromise package:
Senator Dole, the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Finance;
Senator Moynihan, chairman of the Aging
Committee, on which I have been honored to serve for many years; Senators Meyner and Abraham, and the other members of the Finance Committee.

Putting together this package required making very difficult choices. I am not aware of one Senator that supports each and every provision of the bill There are parts of it that I do not support. Many of my Illinois constituteans have serious concerns about various provisions of the bill. I conducted a special survey of elderly Illinoisans—their concerns are quite evident. But even they as a group do not agree on which measures should be adopted. Given this disagreement on all parts of the bill and the urgency of dealing with the social security financing problem, H.R. 1900 is a fair and rea-sorable compromise which should be supported. The Social Security Amendments of 1983 are a signal for accomfishment for two reasons. First, it will allay the fears of millions of elderly Americans who have been living for 2 years with a social security system teetering on the brink of bankruptcy. H.R. 1900 will insure the timely payment of all social security benefits from 1983 to 1989, the 7-year period for which the National Commission on Social Security Reform has identified a $165 billion deficit.

Second, the Social Security Amendments of 1983 address the long-range deficit expected to occur under the ex-sting system when the baby boom generation begins to retire in the next century. Confronting this problem is even more significant because it has served to undermine the confidence and popularity the social security system has so long enjoyed. Recent polls have shown that three out of four people under age 45 believe the social security system will collapse before they retire. H.R. 1900 will eliminate the long-term deficit within a reasonable range of economic projections through several modifications in the system. Along with the automatic stabilizers included in the bill, these reforms will avert crisis like the one we now face.

H.R. 1900 essentially embodies the recomendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. It is a solution that requires sacrifice on the part of all parties who have a stake in social security—current and future beneficiaries and taxpayers alike.

Contained in the bill are measures which restore the solvency of the system for the foreseeable future with no benefit reductions in current social security benefit levels and no increases in payroll tax rates above those already scheduled in the law. The bill reaffirms the soundness of the basic structure of social security by making balanced and minimal adjustments to provide immediate relief from the short-term financing problems and to restore the long-term solvency of the program.

First, the bill would expand coverage. Newly hired Federal employees, the President, Vice President, Members of Congress the Social Security Commission and employees of non-profit organizations would be covered by social security. State and local governments would no longer be granted the privilege of opting out of the system. To deal with the problem that will exist as long as coverage is not universal, windfalls would be eliminated for people who earn disproportionateately large benefits because of long periods in noncovered employment. To moderate the impact of this provision, the bill would phase in the windfall provision and provide additional guarantees for persons with long periods of covered employment.

Second, the annual cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) of social security benefits would be increased $50 for all beneficiaries in January of 1984. This important COLA would allow the income of all SSI re-ipients to rise by $20 per month beginning in July even though his or her COLA is delayed.

Third, for beneficiaries with high incomes, half of social security benefits would be included in taxable income.
The "notch" resulting under the Commisson's recommendation to tax one-half of benefits for persons with adjusted gross income of $20,000 or more was eliminated by specifying that half of social security benefits be added to an individual's adjusted gross income and his income from tax-exempt obligations to determine whether any of his benefits will be subject to taxation.

Fourth, part of the payroll tax increase now scheduled would be accelerated, as recommended by the National Commission. The 1985 increase in the tax rate would take place in 1984, and part of the 1990 hike would take place in 1988. A direct credit against FICA tax would exactly offset the increase in the employee's tax in 1984 so that the acceleration in the rate increase originally set for 1985 will increase trust funds receips without increasing an employee's tax liability.

Fifth, for the self-employed, the tax rate on self-employed income would be increased so as to equalize his or her contribution to the social security trust funds with the combined contribution paid by workers and their employers. To offset partially the increased tax burden, the bill would provide a tax credit against self-employment taxes equal to 2.9 percent of income in 1984, 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, 2.1 percent for 1987 through 1989, and 2.3 percent in 1990 and thereafter.

Sixth, the bill would raise the age at which full retirement benefits are payable from 65 to 66, by 1 month a year, between 2000 and 2012. Early retirement benefits would continue to be payable at 62.

Seventh, H.R. 1900 would gradually reduce the level of present law benefits payable to people who retire after the turn of the century by about 5 percent. In conjunction with the rest of the bill's provisions, these two changes would eliminate the long-term deficit projected by the National Commission on Social Security Reform.

Eighth, for the elderly who continue to work and who do not now receive an adequate income, it would gradually phase out the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. I have long supported this change and applaud its inclusion in the Senate bill.

Ninth, to further eliminate the disincentive for older persons who wish to continue to work, this bill would provide without further depleting reserves, a vote for maintaining the flow of benefits to today's retirees and a vote for restoring the flow of benefits to those who are forced into early retirement by disability or job loss.

All three of these amendments would have essentially cut benefits beyond the reforms contained in this bill and beyond those needed to meet the estimated deficits in the short-term. They went beyond the commitment I have to my constituents to support measures necessary to put the system back on firm financial footing.

This brings me to my support of the Heinz amendment which would have removed from the Federal unified budget the old age and survivors insurance trust fund (OASI) and the disability insurance (DI) trust fund. I agree with Senator Heinz that this measure is necessary to fully restore confidence in the social security system, to guarantee its independence and to assure that the changes made here today are made for one and one reason only—to restore fiscal solvency to the system so that benefits can continue to be paid. There should be no fear that Congress would use the budget to jack up the backs of the elderly.
Security Act, for the most part, is gender-neutral on its face. In fact, the few remaining gender-based distinctions in the law are eliminated in the House version of H.R. 1900. These distinctions are highly technical and many have already been effectively negated as a result of court actions.

The long-range trend of female work experience occur because the assumptions upon which the act is based no longer hold true in an increasing number of cases. Social security is built on the assumption that a marriage would consist of a breadwinning husband and a homemaker wife. It further assumes that marriages last a lifetime and that a wife will outlive her husband by only a few years at most. These logical assumptions for the late thirties—when fewer than 20 percent of married women worked outside the home, when 1 in 7 marriages ended in divorce, and when life expectancy between men and women varied little. Today, the experiences of more and more women fail to fit the pattern which existed in the thirties.

What we now see is a diversity of patterns, each raising separate issues with respect to social security. The most useful framework for examining the changes made by this legislation is to look at its treatment of women as workers, as divorced spouses, and as widows.

WORKING WOMEN

Female participation in the paid work force has increased dramatically and is continuing to do so. From the standpoint of social security coverage, this trend is helpful in that women are increasingly able to establish independent entitlement to benefits. However, the work patterns of women vary from that of men as many working women drop out of the labor force for some period of time to raise young children. These nonworking years are counted as zero-earnings years for the purpose of determining the average earnings of a social security benefit amounts are based. Currently, up to 5 years of lowest career earnings are dropped before this calculation is made—thereby reducing the impact which low or zero-earnings have in bringing down average earnings levels.

The legislation reported by the Senate Finance Committee allows up to two additional "dropout" years for persons who leave the work force to care for the children who remain at home. A worker must have no earnings during the year in order to take advantage of this new provision. This change will have the effect of increasing the social security benefits of women who are able to pursue their work careers for the purpose of child rearing, recognizing the growing prevalence of this pattern.

DIVORCED SPOUSES

The incidence of divorce has increased since social security first enacted, with the marriages of 1 in 3 women age 26 to 40 expected to end in divorce. Dissolution of a marriage has particularly severe consequences for those women who have spent most of their adult lives working in the home. Without recent training or outside work force experience, these women experience serious difficulty in finding jobs. In addition, they have little time in which to build independence. The Social Security Act does recognize this situation through provisions which allow a divorced spouse to receive benefits based upon the earnings record of a former spouse if the marriage lasted 10 years or longer.

Thus, the current law is helpful, but not without its flaws. Because benefits made available to the divorced spouse are based on the earnings record of the former spouse, the dependent spouse—generally the woman—cannot receive any benefits until the working spouse receives benefits. Take the situation of a divorced couple, both aged 65. The former wife spent most of her adult life as a homemaker and, at age 65, is now unable to find employment. If she has any independent entitlement to social security benefits at all, it is extremely small. Should her former husband choose to continue working until age 68 or 70, she would be unable to receive any benefits based on his record until that time. Alternatively, he may retire at age 65 and subsequently decide to return to work at age 67. If his earnings are high enough, he would not be receiving benefits and the former wife's benefits would be terminated as well.

Although such situations are rare, they do impose substantial hardship and uncertainty upon older divorced women. This legislation addresses this problem by permitting spouses who have been divorced for at least 2 years to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for benefits—even if the benefits are not being collected at that time.

WIDOWS

Approximately 50 percent of men are married and living with their wives, while 52 percent of older women are widows. Currently, 59 percent of individuals 65 and older are women. At the oldest ages, women outnumber men 2 to 1.

Many of these widows have been dependent upon their husbands' incomes and long years of widowhood have often exhausted supplemental resources. On the average, total death benefits left by husbands to widows amount to $12,000 from all sources. It is not surprising therefore to realize that older women living alone are among the poorest groups in our society.

Although changes in the Social Security Act alone cannot be expected to deal with all these serious problems, the legislation under consideration does offer assistance to certain groups of widows and widowers. First, the bill provides for changes in the method of indexing a deceased worker's earnings for purposes of determining a survivor benefit. Under the measure, these earnings would be indexed to reflect economywide wage increases up to the year the worker would have reached age 60 or 2 years before the survivor becomes eligible for benefits—which ever is earlier. This change would provide particular assistance to survivors of workers who die long before their survivors are eligible for benefits. In these situations, surviving spouses now receive a benefit based on outdated wage levels. Under the bill, benefits would be calculated on a basis that more closely reflects current wage levels.

A second group which would benefit from this bill is disabled widows and widowers. In general, surviving spouses are first eligible to receive benefits at age 60 at an actuarially reduced level of 71.5 percent of the deceased worker's full benefit amount. However, disabled widows and widowers are based upon the earnings record of the former spouse, the dependent spouse—generally the woman—cannot receive any benefits until the working spouse receives benefits. Take the situation of a divorced couple, both aged 65. The former wife spent most of her adult life as a homemaker and, at age 65, is now unable to find employment. If she has any independent entitlement to social security benefits at all, it is extremely small. Should her former husband choose to continue working until age 68 or 70, she would be unable to receive any benefits based on his record until that time. Alternatively, he may retire at age 65 and subsequently decide to return to work at age 67. If his earnings are high enough, he would not be receiving benefits and the former wife's benefits would be terminated as well.

Although such situations are rare, they do impose substantial hardship and uncertainty upon older divorced women. This legislation addresses this problem by permitting spouses who have been divorced for at least 2 years to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for benefits—even if the benefits are not being collected at that time.
However, benefits for disabled surviving spouses and disabled divorced survivors are terminated if the individual remarries before age 60, even though they may first become eligible for benefits from age 50 to 59. Benefits are terminated for surviving divorced spouses upon remarriage at any age.

This measure eliminates these distinctions, providing that remarriage after the date of first eligibility for benefits will not result in the termination of benefits.

Obviously, the revisions made by the legislation fall short of meeting the broader expressions of support for preserving the treatment of women under social security. For example, many married women who have worked and paid social security payroll taxes for several years have expressed deep concern that they receive no more in benefits than what is paid into the system. The earnings sharing approach, allowing married couples to combine and divide their earnings records for purposes of establishing social security eligibility, which has received considerable attention as a more far-reaching reform of the system. During earlier consideration of this measure, the Senate adopted an amendment requiring the Secretary of Health and Human Services to prepare an implementation report on earnings sharing. This is an area which will continue to receive attention. I am pleased that my colleague from Kansas, Mr. Dole, has indicated the intentions of the Senate Finance Committee to hold hearings this year on the issue of women and retirement income.

Again, I applaud the efforts of those who have worked hard on behalf of positive improvements in the system.

Mr. ROBERT C. BYRD. Mr. President, I strongly believe that the compromises made by the Senate in support of this legislation after much reflection and despite the fact that I have grave reservations about many of its individual provisions.

This is a compromise bill, arrived at after many days of arduous and occasionally scrimonious debate, deliberation, and negotiation. Like every compromise, it contains its share of bitter pills to swallow.

I, for one, am especially troubled that this legislation will raise the retirement age to 66 in the next century. Raising the retirement age will mean real hardship for many older Americans who simply cannot continue to work until age 66, but who are not so totally disabled that they can qualify for disability benefits under the very stringent disability definition in current law. This provision will particularly hurt blue collar workers, those who work by working with their hands. Many of these people will be forced to retire early at age 62, and will suffer even deeper reductions in their benefits as a penalty. It is my fervent hope that Congress will reconsider this change in future years, and substitute a better alternative for meeting the long-term deficit facing the social security system.

Nor is this the only provision in this bill which we support, were it not part of a larger, bipartisan compromise. I do not like asking older Americans to delay their cost-of-living increase, or to pay taxes on their social security benefits. I do not like asking self-employed Americans to contribute a greater share to social security or asking working Americans and their employers to pay social security tax increases on an accelerated schedule. I wish that none of these provisions were in the legislation.

Despite these serious concerns, I believe that this is a fair and reasonable package, one which meets the test of evenhandedness and balance in the sacrifice it asks of all our citizens to make the social security system whole again. Under this bill, all those who have a stake in social security's future—the 116 million Americans whose taxes support the system, the 38 million beneficiaries who depend upon social security for their livelihoods, and the Members of Congress not now a part of the system—would share in the burden of restoring the system to solvency.

I wish that it were not necessary to ask this group to sacrifice, but what is at stake here is nothing less than the very future of our most important and enduring social program, a system which touches the lives of virtually every American. Today, that system faces a financing crisis of unprecedented magnitude, as well as a crisis in confidence on the part of the American people, whose faith in the system has been deeply shaken by the recurrent crisis surrounding social security in recent years.

We must act decisively to end this crisis of confidence. We owe a debt of gratitude to all of those who worked so hard to bring this compromise bill before us, to the National Commission on Social Security Reform, to all the Members of the Senate and the House who have worked to improve and pass this legislation, and to the many outside individuals and organizations that have contributed to its development.

In passing this legislation, we take the necessary first step to restore the social security system to both short- and long-term solvency. In voting for this bill, we send a clear message to the American people that this Congress has the political will to keep its promises to those Americans who have faithfully paid into social security in the expectation that it would be there for them when they retire.

In sum, I do not like this bill and I wish that it contained provisions for a bankruptcy plan. I have no other choice.

Mr. RIEGLE. Mr. President, I want to take this opportunity to comment on this critical legislation we have been considering over the last few days designed to assure the financial integrity of the social security system. The social security system is one of the most important initiatives undertaken by the Federal Government during this century. By providing a guarantee of basic retirement income for senior Americans, no longer will older workers have to fear retirement. While social security does not provide, nor was it ever intended to provide, a full retirement pension, it does nevertheless supply a basic income, protected against inflation, for retired workers and their families.

This is not welfare, it is investment. Social security benefits are based on contributions made by workers and their employers throughout their working career. Congress has a solemn obligation to assure that social security remains on a sound financial footing, and that is the reason we are acting on the legislation before us today.

Mr. President, I strongly believe that the recommendations of the National Commission of Social Security Reform and the bill before us today are a remarkable achievement in compromise. I am particularly pleased that the provisions contained in this legislation fall upon all sectors of society where all have been asked to sacrifice. Nevertheless, I have strong reservations regarding several of the proposals included in this package. We have made other positive modifications and changes in the future when the political balance of power again shifts in our country. For now, we have succeeded in the struggle to prevent the major cuts which were originally sought by the Reagan administration. That is a major accomplishment.

I did not cosponsor this legislation due to my reservations about several aspects of the package. Mr. vote for final passage does not withdraw those reservations. Further beneficial changes will have to come from future...

S 3769

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, it is with a deep sense of respect and sincerity that I commend my colleagues for their deliberations and hours of work represented in the legislation that the Senate has been considering the past 2 weeks. The members of the Finance Committee have labored very hard to bring the full Senate a bill which the majority could accept.

However, after serious study of the provisions in the measure before us and participation in the debate on the bill, I regret to say that I cannot, in good conscience, support the legislation as the right solution for returning solvency to the social security system. In short, the package relies too heavily on tax increases, particularly in the short-range period between 1983 and 1989, with badly needed structural changes becoming effective much too far into the future.

In looking at the provisions of S. 1, legislative changes have been proposed which are promised to bring $186 billion into the social security trust fund over the next 7 years. The breakdown of how much of the shortfall is financeable through new or accelerated tax increases and how much is a result of true structural reform of the system is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>New taxes</th>
<th>Billion</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>128</td>
<td>40</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

In my opinion, this 3-to-1 ratio is unacceptable as reform. It is unacceptable for three reasons. First, and most obviously, it does not represent a balanced approach to the short-range problem. When I first began contributing to the social security system, taxes were 3 percent on $4,800, today it is 6.7 percent on $35,000 and by 1990 it will be 7.65 percent on $57,000. Special groups, such as employees, the self-employed, the business community, nonprofit organizations, and new Government employees are targeted with particularly onerous tax increases. That is an enormous tax increase for individuals and employees alike to make.

Second, the $128 billion tax increase in this measure cannot be viewed as separate from the tax increases which are already scheduled to take place between now and 1990. Even without the changes proposed under this bill, social security taxes are expected to increase from $206 billion in 1983 to over $400 billion in 1990. Americans will be paying double the social security taxes they now pay in only 7 years. Surely this rapid escalation of taxes should be adequate current revenue to protect our elderly without adding another $128 billion in tax increases, as proposed by this measure. When all of these tax increases are compared to the new $206 billion dollars, worth the structural changes in this bill, the objections that I and many Americans will have to this legislation become much more clearly focused.

Third, and finally, the ratio of tax increases to structural reforms should be objectionable to all because of what history has taught us about the taxing approach in dealing with short-falls in social security. Only 6 years ago, Congress confronted a similar financial picture and selected tax increases as the least painful and most effective prescription. It was hailed as the final cure-all for generations to come. Unfortunately, we now see that this remedy only added to the already heavy burden of our country and didn't keep social security solvent for even the duration of a decade. Surely, anyone can make a mistake once, but it would be sheer folly to hold out this same no-answer to Americans with the promise that it will bring solvency to social security when it so obviously failed in our past.

In my opinion, there is too much danger that we will be back again perhaps in another 6 years or less, to raise taxes even higher all because Congress neglected to address the underlying causes for such repeated short-falls.

In addition to the tax increases, my final objection to the bill before us is that it establishes a dangerous precedent of resorting to the use of general revenues in an effort to shore up social security. The creation of one-time or permanent tax credits in an effort to offset the increases in FICA taxes aimed at workers and select groups is another dead-end approach in trying to solve the problems of the social security system. Basically, we are robbing Peter to pay Paul—only Peter already owes about $1 trillion to the Federal Treasury which is compounding at the rate of $300 billion per year. Social security is a trust fund from which to bail social security out of its present woes. In fact, social security was never intended to become a borrower, but a self-financing insurance for our elderly and disabled. We are on our own ground and do a great disservice to those who are dependent upon the program when we start trying to help social security out by dipping into nonexistent general revenues. I do regret that changes were not adopted to keep the system both solvent and affordable for persons dependent on social security and for future generations.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, social security touches the lives of millions of Americans every day. Some 36 million people, including 172,000 in New Mexico, are now drawing benefits and another 116 million are saving for their retirement. Social security is a desperately needed stabilizer of our economic life and should be preserved for future generations. The Social Security Amendments of 1983, which I now should support if they were not part of the whole package. I have two reservations about the legislation now before us. First, I am concerned that too many additional taxes will delay economic recovery either by adding to inflation or to unemployment levels. This economic recovery has to be our No. 1 priority because it will benefit everyone, both workers and those retirees drawing social security checks. Because of the heavy reliance on taxes to solve the short-term problem, we must avoid any effort to increase them further. I am, therefore, pleased that the Senate proposal to solve the long-term future problems by only a 1-year increase in the retirement age plus a slight reduction in the replacement rate formula—both to be phased in gradually in the next century.

I hope that we can persuade the House that this is a better combination. From the perspective of my own State, raising the retirement age by only 1 year is preferable to the House's increase to age 67 since the life expectancy of some of my constituents is below that age. It is, however, imperative that we take action now to reduce the long-term deficit. Otherwise, we will never restore the confidence that younger workers must have in the program.

INCISION OF FEDERAL WORKERS

While the process of considering this legislation has affected the lives of many Americans, it seems to have produced a new anxiety in another segment of our population. I am referring to the Federal civilian and postal workers. The confusion, anxiety, and uncertainty are considerable and cause my second concern about the bill. I am pleased that the Senate was able to address my concern and provide that new Federal workers must be covered by a supplementary pension plan before they are brought under social security. Despite my reservations about specific parts of this legislation, I have decided that, on balance, it must be supported. I am including for the Record specific parts of the provisions and their budget impact. It must be supported to insure that the social security system does not run dry this summer. The bill restores social security to some degree of stability by providing the $128 billion in new resources between 1983 and 1989. It closes the long-term funding gap in the retirement program. It introduces major reform in the Medicare hospital insurance fund by offering incentives for these institutions to be cost-conscious.
I do not need to remind my colleagues about the severe financial problems we face in the near future in Medicare. Fundamentally, this legislation contains additional unemployment benefits for the long-term jobless which are crucial to the many individuals who have exhausted their current benefits. Without swift passage of this legislation, hundreds of thousands of workers across the Nation will be left without any unemployment benefits. In my own State of New Mexico, 5,000 individuals will be affected immediately. In summary, the welfare of most Americans is affected by this bill and therefore, I must vote for it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the synopsis be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the synopsis was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

The Senate Finance Committee-reported bill would correct the financial problems of the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) program, provide for a prospective reimbursement system in medicare, extend long-term benefits for the unemployed, and provide relief for states which must borrow to pay regular state unemployment benefits.

Social Security (OASDI) Provisions

Coverage of Newly-Hired Federal Employees.—Extend social security coverage to all new federal civilian employees, subject to certain limitations.

Six-Month COLA Delay.—Delay the cost-of-living adjustment by six months from July 1983 to January 1984 in the retirement and disability insurance programs and the supplemental security income (SSI) program. For 1983, the benefit on $25 for individuals and $30 for couples to compensate for the COLA delay.

Emergency COLA Provisions.—Scale back COLA increases when the trust funds are expected to dip below a 20 percent reserve ratio, continue to decline, and interfund borrowing. Provide a benefit adjustment equal to lower of wages or prices if the trust fund reserves dip below a 20 percent level in 1986 and beyond, with a "catch-up" when the reserve ratio returns to 20 percent.

Increase Delayed Retirement Credit.—Gradually increase, between 1990 and 1995, the delayed retirement credit from 3 percent to 8 percent per year.

Increase Social Security Retirement Age.—Gradually raise the social security retirement age from year 2012 to 67, beginning with those who attain age 62 in 2000. Early retirement benefits would continue to be available at age 62 for workers and spouses, but the benefit reduction factors would be larger.

Long-Range Benefit Change.—Reduce initial benefit levels by about 5 percent after the reserves exceed 25 percent.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits.—Reduce social security benefits for recipients who become members of Congress and the President, new federal civilian employees, all current members of Congress and the President, and all employees of non-profit agencies (new federal employees would be brought under Social Security).

Spin-Out of Disability Benefits.—If a supplementary retirement plan is established; non-profit employees would be covered effective January 1984. Prohibit state and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees.

Eliminate "windfall" benefits.—Reduce social security benefits for recipients who become members of Congress and the President, new federal civilian employees, all current

Medicare (HI and SMI) Provisions

Prospective Payment.—Establish a prospective payment system which would set a specific payment for each of 467 diagnoses.

Delay in Part B Premium.—Delay the increase in the Part B (medical insurance) premium from July 1, 1983, to January 1, 1984, to make it consistent with the delay in the social security cost-of-living adjustment.

Increase the hospital insurance tax paid by the self-employed to the combined employer-employee rate of 2.6 percent of covered wages.

Cover employees of non-profit institutions.—Consistent with the extension of Social Security to all OASDI-covered employees of non-profit institutions.

Military Wage Credits.—Reimburse the hospital insurance trust fund for liabilities incurred as a result of providing credit toward medicare coverage based on pre-1975 military service.

Unemployment Compensation Provisions

Long-term benefits.—Extend and restructure the program for benefits for the long-term unemployed (FSC) which expires at the end of 1984. Basic FSC benefits of up to 14 weeks would be available between April 1 and September 30, 1983, depending on a state's insured unemployment rate (New Mexico would receive 10 weeks of benefits, compared to 14 weeks under the current program). Additional FSC benefits of up to 8 weeks would be available to workers who have already exhausted all benefits (New Mexico would receive 4 weeks of benefits, compared to none under current law). Unemployed workers receiving benefits through the program ending September 30, 1983, could continue to receive one-half of the remaining benefits.

Interest on Loans.—Provide relief to states which owe reduced interest revenues to the federal government made to pay regular state unemployment benefits. Make the interest provision permanent, but allow states to maintain special interest rates on the discounted interest rate if the state takes steps to ensure the solvency of the state's unemployment program.

Mr. President, as a result of the work of the National Commission on Social Security Reform and the prompt consideration of the Commission's proposals by the House of Representatives and the Senate Finance Committee, we are today acting on H.R. 1900, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983. All Americans have an interest in this legislation, for social security—in one way or another—affects us all.

The Commission faced a difficult challenge. The President proposed its creation only months after the end of a bitter and prolonged fight regarding the administration's early proposals to cut social security benefits by $88 billion over 5 years. That May 1981 plan would have immediately and permanently raised the retirement age and cut social security retirement and disability benefits. It was met with widespread outrage and protest from the public and the Congress. Several months later, after the President withdrew his social security plan and indicated his intention to separate social security from the politics of reducing the Federal budget, he established the National Commission on Social Security Reform. The National Commission on Social Security Reform was directed to consider the retirement trust fund—the largest of the social security program—faces two separate financing problems. The first, between now and 1990, is largely the result of severe economic troubles. It began with an outburst of inflation in the late 1970s and early 1980s, and it has been further complicated by an OPEC cartel which largely controls the world price of oil and the historic trend of wage growth exceeding price increases reversed itself. It has been exacerbated by historically high real interest rates, housing growth and an unemployment rate rivalling the days of the Great Depression.

The Commission said that the retirement trust fund would begin building substantial reserves in the 1990s and would be unlikely to experience cash flow difficulties again until sometime after the year 2010, a little more than a quarter of a century away. This is the time when the demographics of our society is expected to substantially change as the “baby boom” generation retires.

I regret that we have lost so much time in deliberating the solvency needs of the social security system. The refinancing plan currently before the Senate bears little resemblance to the plan originally proposed by President Reagan in the spring of 1981. This complicated legislation has been brought before the Congress with limited time for consideration, for the need for action is real and urgent. Borrowing authority among social security’s three trust funds has expired, and the savings called for by the National Commission on Social Security Reform cannot be fully realized without relatively quick enactment of legislation to implement its plan.

The second compelling factor guiding our consideration of this legislation today is the issue of fairness. Fairness must be the fundamental principle of any legislation that alters our Nation’s social security system. That characteristic is essential in preserving the integrity upon which the social security program has been built.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform worked very hard to produce a balanced and fair package. Commission members deserve considerable recognition for their efforts. The bill presently before the Senate reflects the Commission’s recommendations. About two-thirds of the bill’s solutions were recommended unanimously from the Commission; the remainder in large part was supported by a majority of its members.

Like others, I want to see the enactment of the approved plan of social security changes which will restore public confidence in the system without unfairly burdening either retirees dependent on their benefits or our Nation’s business and labor force already hard hit by an economic downturn and high unemployment. Any changes in the social security system must be made with a view toward maintaining this public trust between our people and our Government.

The Commission’s refinancing plan contains proposals which I could not support individually. Its enactment will mean larger tax increases for the self-employed than for others. Our farm population is essential to our economic well-being. The Congress has modified the Commission’s proposal to include an income tax credit for these workers, but it will only partially offset the impact of the tax increase. We have amended the bill to provide some assistance to small businesses and expect to be passing legislation to provide relief to our Nation’s farmers. However, as our economy begins to approach recovery from the increased joblessness that taxation concerns me. We may have to reexamine this taxation down the road.

In the future, the plan will place new Federal employees under social security and contain the amendments to provide present and future Federal retirees with benefits they have earned and they deserve. The Congress must continue insuring financing for the present civil service retirement program and enact a responsible plan for new workers entering government service.

The bill will delay this year’s cost-of-living adjustment for beneficiaries by 6 months. Subsequent COLA’s may be reduced, absent congressional action, if there are insufficient trust fund reserves to cover. In addition, the plan will provide for the partial taxation of benefits for a small percentage of social security recipients.

We can only have guarded faith in our ability to foresee America’s future 75 years from now. Using the 75-year actuarial projections of the Social Security Administration, the bill before the Senate would meet social security’s long-term financing needs in the 21st century. Two-thirds of the bill’s actuarial savings would come from proposals that the Commission recommended unanimously, largely to meet the immediate financing needs of the program.

The other combination of proposals—while supported by many Commission members, but not part of the bipartisan refinancing package—were endorsed by the Finance Committee specifically to meet the projected long-term problem. Under the first provision, Social Security benefits would be slightly lower, 5.3 percent, in relation to preretirement earnings than under current law. This change in the replacement rate would still allow for real increases in future benefits. Improvements in our standard of living are carried through to retirement years by wage-indexing in the benefit formula.

The second provision would phase in a 1-year increase in the social security retirement age for full benefits by 1 month yearly, after the year 2000. While early retirement benefits would continue to be available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for disabled workers, the annual reduction would be larger than under current law. The age for Medicare eligibility would also rise with the retirement age for full benefits.

The Commission’s proposal assumes workers will have the health and ability to work and that employment will be available for those who seek it. While we generally speak of age 65 as being the normal retirement age, the social security, more than half of today’s workers are retiring before that age. Analysis by the Social Security Administration and the Department of Labor has shown that a large majority of those people leaving the workplace before age 65 are doing so for health reasons or because they cannot find a job.

For many workers presently seeking early retirement benefits it is not a “voluntary” choice. Ill health, longer periods of unemployment, obsolete skills, and age discrimination push them into retirement. This is why the public was outraged by President Reagan’s 1981 proposal to slash early retirement benefits by 40 percent for Americans approaching age 62. The early retirement penalties of the bill were considered by the Congress. I did not approve those amendments previously by the administration, but the Congress will not be acting responsibly if it raises the retirement age in isolation.

Certain older workers will simply be unable to continue working, particularly those in demanding jobs or those with problems. We must provide a safety net for this segment of the labor force. These workers are often the most dependent on social security retirement protection and their benefits are generally lower than those of other workers. Senator Broidy offered an amendment earlier, which I cosponsored, to establish such a safety net.

For older workers in better health and in less physically demanding types of work, reducing benefits for early retirement may not produce the intended consequences of workers remaining in the labor force longer. The bill does provide some incentives for continuing employment, including the elimination of the earnings test and additional credits for delayed retirement. However, these existent incentives will not be remedied. A change in the retirement age may simply add a source of stress to older individuals who might want to continue working but are plagued by lengthy unemployment, age discrimination, outdated job skills, and relatively poorer health.

As ranking Democratic member of the Special Committee on Aging, I will be working to see that employment problems unique to the older worker are addressed. The goal of increasing employment among this segment of our society will grow in importance as the composition of our population changes. Beyond the issue of social security solvency, as the percentage of older Americans increases relative to our society will grow in importance as the composition of our population changes.

of a homemaker to our society by allowing individuals who leave the labor force to care for a child under the age of 3 to drop up to 2 years of earnings in computing their wage history. Additionally, as recommended by the Nation’s Commission on Social Security Reform, legislation would be improved for surviving, divorced, and disabled spouses.

In the near future, we must further reform social security so that the benefit structure is more reflective of marital partnership. The legislation requires the Department of Health and Human Services to prepare a report by the end of the year on specific ways to implement an earnings sharing concept for the social security program. We need to take action soon, for poverty among the aged has become a women’s issue. Older women represent the fastest growing poverty group in America. We must start now to change our retirement system so that younger women will face far less hardship when they enter the system. They enter the system so that many elderly women today and in the past have had to endure.

I am hopeful that the legislation presently before the Senate will adequately meet the social security system’s financing needs through the year 1990, without imposing undue hardship on any one group. In some part, this will depend on our ability to revitalize our economy. In the first year of the Reagan Presidency, the Congressional Budget Office estimated that the OASDI program would meet its short-term cash-flow problems by interfund borrowing authority among the three trust funds. The CBO estimate was based upon economic assumptions more pessimistic than those upon which the administration’s own tax-cutting and defense-spending plans were premised. As we reexamine the financing needs of the social security system, perhaps it is only appropriate to review these costly programs again.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform unanimously agreed that the Congress, in considering financing options, should not alter the fundamental structure of the social security system or undermine its fundamental principles. The Commission determined that one of the best ways to uphold this commitment was to spread the financing sacrifice around so that the burden of keeping the system solvent would not fall unduly on one group. Just as social security embodies a compact between generations, the bill requires that these generations share in the cost of keeping the system working.

During arguments regarding the Commission’s refinancing package, I will support it. I am aware that some believe the agreement places too much of the financing burden on business and workers, and that elderly citizens have already paid enough. To this argument, I can only say that our Nation has a compact with our aged to maintain their social security benefits. Social security is the primary source of retirement income for a majority of recipients, and for many it is the sole source of support to keep pace with the cost of food, shelter and medical care. The average beneficiary receives approximately $5,000 annually, barely above the poverty level. I do not believe that we can ask people like this to sacrifice beyond what this reform plan requires of them.

Mr. President, I believe this bill is eminently fair and responsible to present recipients of social security. The average beneficiary’s sacrifice would not be undue, and of 3 to drop up to 2 years of earnings in computing their wage history. Additionally, as recommended by the Nation’s Commission on Social Security Reform, legislation would be improved for surviving, divorced, and disabled spouses.

Mr. President, I believe today in support of the Social Security Amendments of 1983, legislation that is vital to the financial solvency of the social security system and all who depend on it for retirement security.

The members of the Bipartisan National Commission on Social Security Reform, appointed by President Reagan in December 1981, deserve commendation for the job they have done in bringing to Congress the package of recommendations which forms the core of this bill. I also wish to pay tribute to the distinguished chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, Bob Dole, to the brilliant and articulate chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, Bill Armstrong, to the distinguished ranking members of the Finance Committee and the Social Security Subcommittee, Senators Long and Moynihan, respectively. I also commend the other distinguished members of the Finance Committee of both parties who have diligently pursued the common objective of restoring financial health to the social security system, both in the immediate future and in decades to come.

Because the individual features of this bill have been described in detail in the Finance Committee report and in the opening statement of the manager of the bill, Senator Dole, I shall not reiterate them here. Instead, I wish to briefly comment on the background, potential objectives of this virtually important legislation.

Mr. President, this bill is not perfect, in my opinion. Indeed, it probably does not satisfy any single Senator or Member of Congress. It is a fragile package whose whole is strengthened by its somewhat imperfect parts which require some reasonable sacrifice by retiree, wage earner, and wage payer alike. My fervent hope is that this legislation adequately addresses, as it is intended to do, both the short and long term financial needs of the social security old age, survivor and dependent insurance (OASDI) program, for that is our legislative task and responsibility in this endeavor.

Mr. President, in the first instance, this bill must effectively address the concerns of the millions of older Americans who presently look to social security for part or all of their retirement income. Some 36 million retired Americans, their dependents persons, and insured dependents count on social security for part or all of their income. These older Americans, widows and widowers, and dependents are fearful that the imminent bankruptcy of the trust fund will cause an interruption of their checks unless corrective action is promptly taken. For those presently receiving social security benefits, this bill provides assurance that their benefits will continue and, beyond that, that there will be no reduction in the current level of benefits.

Mr. President, I believe this bill is eminently fair and responsible to present recipients of social security. The average beneficiary’s sacrifice would not be undue, and of 3 to drop up to 2 years of earnings in computing their wage history. Additionally, as recommended by the Nation’s Commission on Social Security Reform, legislation would be improved for surviving, divorced, and disabled spouses.
years of wage tax contributions. I have received numerous communications from younger workers asking why they should pay higher and higher taxes to support a retirement system with which they have little or no connection. I would like to see people of retirement age in this country be able to even return their investment to them upon retirement, much less guarantee them the lifetime supplemental source of retirement income which their forced participation in the social security system entitles them and their families.

Mr. President, I certainly understand these concerns among young, and even middle-aged, employees and employers alike. That is why it is so vital to the public and to this legislation to accomplish these goals. While I have reservations about the heightened FICA tax burden imposed under this bill, it is clear that some acceleration of already scheduled tax increases is both a practical and necessary means to achieve enactment of this package and restore solvency to the trust fund.

As we move forward with this essential legislation, Mr. President, it is important that Congress recognize and emphasize the purpose and limits of the social security program. Social security was intended to be, at best, only a supplemental retirement income source. Congress must resist the temptation to add new benefits or expand existing benefits beyond levels which can be afforded by those who support the system through employment taxes.

Similarly, it would be unwise and irresponsible for Congress to make social security into another welfare program which would destroy its nature as an earned entitlement. As we know, social security benefits are paid to those who have earned them through tax contributions, rather than being allocated based on need. Several of the provisions of this bill edge toward a needs-based welfare program, a tendency which I feel is ill-advised. Again, however, this legislation must be taken together as a package, and on balance I have concluded that the package is necessary and worthy of support.

Mr. President, I would like to especially take note of two provisions of this bill which I believe are meritorious and needed. First, the bill will phase-out, by 1994, the so-called earnings test, which limits the amount which social security retirees under age 70 can earn from continued employment without suffering a reduction in their social security checks. Consistent with my view of social security as an earned benefit, and also with my belief that our Government policies should not discourage from working those who, regardless of age, are willing and able to do so, I believe elimination of the earnings test is long overdue. As one who has for a number of years either sponsored or cosponsored legislation to do away with this limit on income development for older Americans receiving social security, I only regret that the phaseout does not occur sooner.

Mr. President, I also strongly approve of the provision in this bill which increases benefits for aliens to the amount of their FICA tax contributions plus interest. This concept is similar to that of a bill I have cosponsored with Senator Lugar. It has been strengthened by adoption of the Nickles amendment, which I also cosponsored. The social security system is simply not rich enough to provide overly generous benefits to those who have entered this country illegitimately, or who only worked here for a period of time before returning to their home abroad.

I am also pleased that the State took care of several potential problem areas relating to those who receive deferred compensation through adoption of the Bentzen amendment, which I cosponsored.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I wish to reiterate my support for this legislation, which is the product of much hard work and compromise. The social security program simply must be restored to a sound financial condition, which makes prompt passage of this bill absolutely necessary. That goal of financial solvency must be accomplished in a way that is fair and reasonable to both those who are supporting the social security system through taxes and those who are receiving social security benefits that have been earned. I believe this legislation satisfies these fundamental criteria of fairness and reasonableness, and I hope it will be enacted.

Mr. PELL. Mr. President, I rise to speak concerning final passage of H.R. 1900, the social security reform bill. I voted in favor of this measure, but I would like my colleagues and the people of my State to know the reservations that I had concerning the bill, and the reasons which overcame my reservations and convinced me to vote for this bill.

There is no doubt, Mr. President, that the social security trust fund will be in deep trouble in a short time unless the present law is changed. There is no one that disputes the enormity of the deficit that faces social security in this decade under present law. Expenditures will exceed revenues in this decade by $150 to $200 billion. And there is no one that disputes that social security law must be changed now, this year, in order to prevent that deficit from taking place in a system that is designed to be self-sufficient.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform worked long and hard to arrive at a package of changes for the social security system. Many of the changes proposed by the Commission or adopted by the Senate Finance Committee, however, detract rather than add to the fundamental fairness that should be the hallmark of this bill.

There are three elements of this bill that deeply disturb me. One element is the 6-month delay in the cost-of-living adjustment. A delay of 6 months in this annual adjustment for inflation may seem minor, but for the 65 percent of social security recipients who rely on their benefits as their primary source of income, it works as a cut in income. The 4-percent increase in inflation we have seen in the past year means a 4-percent cut in benefits for the retired, unless their benefits are adjusted. Asking many recipients to wait for another 6 months for their cost-of-living adjustment is asking them to continue surviving with less and less money for food, for heat, and for rent.

Another element of this bill that I find disturbing is the inclusion of new Federal workers. The future of the civil service retirement system is a crucial factor in the fairness of this bill toward Federal employees, yet the future of civil service retirement has been left entirely unclear. This uncertainty, coupled with the administration's proposals for major changes in civil service retirement, place an extraordinary burden on Federal employees. Taken as a whole, these proposals clearly threaten the future of the civil service retirement system. That would be a tragic loss, not only to Government workers, but also to the public which depends on qualified Federal workers for essential services.

The third element which concerns me is the combination of reduced benefits and a higher retirement age that would take place after the year 2000. At the same time that we would reduce benefits for our younger workers, we propose to raise payroll taxes for them. Such a triple blow to today's workers seems unduly harsh. Despite these reservations, Mr. President, I have voted in favor of passage of this bill. I have done so because of my larger concern that the social security system, the basic bridge between Government and retirees, cannot wait for another compromise bill which could be months or years in the making. The expected failure of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, and the last-minute saving of its mission by the hard negotiations and compromises by Commission members, demonstrate the fragility and difficulty of compromise on so sensitive a problem. I believe that the compromise package worked out by the National Commission and reflected in the House and Senate bills before us offers the best possibility for saving social security benefits that we have.

I am not in favor of delaying the COLA. I am not in favor of including Federal workers within social security without agreement on a supplemental or separate retirement system, and I am not in favor of raising the retirement age while lowering benefits and raising taxes. I am in favor of a solution to the social security crisis which can be agreed on by Democrats and Republicans, tax and non-tax filers, and I am not in favor of raising the retirement age while lowering benefits and raising taxes. I am in favor of a solution to the social security crisis which can be agreed on by Democrats and Republicans, tax and non-tax filers, and I am not in favor of raising the retirement age while lowering benefits and raising taxes.

I am not planning to offer an amendment to address this problem, Mr. President. I do hope, however, that the conference that will meet to iron out differences in the House and Senate versions of this legislation will give this problem special consideration. If I may offer some concern, Mr. President, I hope the conference will consider crafting language in the conference report so as to allow the Secretary of Health and Human Services to take into account regional differences and give him or her the authority to make such adjustments in the regional structure as may be necessary to ensure equitable treatment of all States under the DRG legislation.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. TSONGAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. TSONGAS. Could I inquire why we are waiting?

Mr. BAKER. Before we go to third reading, I believe a commitment that all Senators have had an ample opportunity to present amendments. There is one additional Member on this side who may have an amendment, but I am not sure of that. It is the traditional role of the leadership on both sides of the aisle to protect their Members.

Mr. D'AMATO addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, I certainly am sorry to prolong the session. I was going to rise to offer an amendment because I feel very strongly that what we did in accepting the provision which includes income from municipal bonds when calculating taxes to be paid on the portion of social security above the threshold ignores the damage that provision will do.

The results will be devastating to the finances of already hard-pressed local municipalities. There are some people who will put that aside because they want to create the perception of equity, the perception of fairness. So while I will not send that amendment to the desk. If we go home, if we cannot get the tax-exempt interest to calculate tax increases will raise in the minds of bond-market buyers is something that is very important.

I have spoken to three municipal finance officers within the past 20 minutes. Bob Odell, city treasurer of the city of Los Angeles, indicated to me that it is $240 million a year.

we should be proud of ourselves because as we have raised $5 million over 7 years, less than $1 million a year, we can go further.

Delaware is a rare and valuable means to put aside.

Delaware and Washington, D.C. have been given a chance to prove itself, I am afraid the regions within that region. The House has established, and I am not sure of that. It is the traditional role of the leadership on both sides of the aisle to protect their Members.

costs to States and governments totaling $700 million. If you look at the bottom estimate was $240 million. But let us keep this provision in because it causes a perception, it is the asterisk in this bill which produces a perception of unfairness. Thank you, Mr. President. Mr. President, this is not a complicated issue. If you can cut through all the mathematical calculations and threats of constitutional crises, you come down to an issue of simple fairness. If we are about to require that individuals earning income in excess of $25,000—$32,000 for couples—pay income tax on a portion of their social security. That is already in this bill. Also in this bill is a requirement that all income be taken into consideration when calculating the $25,000 threshold—not just taxable income such as wages and pensions, but tax-exempt interest income from investments in municipal and State government bonds.

The purpose of this provision is to preserve fairness and equity in the law. It will help prevent individuals from avoiding tax on their social security benefits simply because they have the flexibility to shift their assets into tax-exempt securities. If we do not preserve the bill the way it is, it will be possible for people earning hundreds of thousands of dollars in tax-free income to also avoid the new tax on one-half of social security benefits, while most other retirees receiving pensions will have to pay the tax.

If we had adopted the Long amendment a few hours ago, we would be creating a brand new incentive for people to invest in tax-exempt bonds. That is a phony argument. It does, however, affect the taxation of social security benefits which we all want to be implemented as fairly as possible. Also, this bill will not affect the municipal bond market. It is strange to hear the critics claim, on one hand, that this provision in the bill raises no revenue for the Treasury, so why bother. And on the other hand, that we are going to dramatically upset the municipal bond market costing State and local governments hundreds of millions of dollars in higher borrowing costs. Which is it? One cannot have it both ways.

The truth is, there will be no effect on the bond market because this is in no way, shape, or form a tax on tax-exempt bonds. The truth is, this provision in the bill is there for simple fairness. It requires that all income be considered when determining the $25,000 threshold at which point a portion of social security benefits becomes taxable. The Senate has made a wise decision in retaining this provision.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any further amendments?

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move we adopt the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there are no further amendments, the question is on agreeing to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read a third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass? The yeas and nays have been ordered and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. I announce that the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS), is necessarily absent.

I further announce that if present and voting, the Senator from Maryland (Mr. MATHIAS), would vote "yes".

So the bill (H.R. 1900) as amended was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill passed.

Mr. RIEGLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments and request a conference with the House of Representatives on the part of the Senate.

The motion, as agreed to, and the President Pro Tempore notified Mr. DOLE, Mr. DANFORTH, Mr. CHAFFEE, Mr. HEINZ, Mr. LOW, Mr. BENTSEN, and Mr. MOYNIHAN are instructed to hold the conference on the part of the Senate.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, the Senator from New York has argued quite eloquently in favor of the amendment submitted by Senator Lows, and defeated earlier today, that this would exclude tax-exempt income from the preliminary determination of the taxability of benefits. The Senator suggests that rejecting the Long amendment will result in higher costs for bond issuers. As my statement earlier today indicated, this would be true, only if one assumes that the starting point for such a calculation of increased costs is not the reality of current law, but a hypothetical law, where the Long amendment, and the bill we are debating tonight were in effect.

In fact, in relation to current law, S. 1 will actually reduce costs for bond issues, because it will create a small incentive to invest in tax-exempt bonds that does not exist today. The Senator from New York would prefer the creation of a larger incentive, but there is no basis to the suggestion that the enactment of S. 1 will actually worsen the position of bond issues.

I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle. I thank the distinguished Senator from Louisiana (Mr. Laro) for his assistance in moving this legislation through the Finance Committee and on the floor. I also want to thank the distinguished Senators from New York (Mr. Moxley), from Pennsylvania (Mr. Heinz), and from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong). These Members served on the National Commission, whose work provided the key to success. The distinguished legislation to deal with the urgent financing problems of social security. Without the assistance of these Members, and of the others who served on the National Commission, we would not have passed this bill.

There is no doubt about it, this is a major legislative achievement. It took a concerted effort on the part of many hard-working, dedicated people to read the agreement that formed the basis of S. 1 and H.R. 1900. The leadership of President Reagan and Speaker O'Neill, as well as our distinguished majority leader, Senator Baker, was of course crucial to our success. But I believe it may be fair to say that if I especially mention Senators Moinihan, Heinz, and Armstrong, because they served both on the National Commission and the Finance Committee as well as here on the floor. Each of them had a major impact on this agreement, and they were there from the beginning. Whatever disagreements we may have had, I congratulate them for their hard work and dedication.

Mr. President, I also want to extend special thanks to my staff and the staff of Members on both sides of the aisle, the joint staff committee staff, the staff of the Social Security Administration, and many many individuals in other agencies who helped us to put this package together.

Most of all, I thank the majority leader and the minority leader for helping us and keeping us moving and, finally, for the successful passage of this landmark legislation.

We will go to conference tomorrow morning at 8:30. It is our hope that we will complete the conference by midafternoon. I should think that with the overwhelming vote of 88 to 9 in favor of the legislation, we might be able to move rather quickly on the conference report.

Mr. Baker. Mr. President, first, let me say to every Senator that I am grateful for their cooperation and understanding in the difficult matter of moving this complex piece of legislation through the Senate in a relatively brief time.

We have spent part of 6 days on this measure, more than 41 hours of debate. We conducted 23 roll call votes all together. We considered 72 amendments, 3 of them were agreed to, 14 were rejected, 1 was tabled, and 4 were withdrawn. That is a considerable legislative undertaking.

I wish especially to congratulate the distinguished managers of the bill: The Chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator Dole, without whose expert guidance and legislative skill this package could not have passed; Senator Long, the ranking minority member, who is so adept and skilled at the legislative procedure that his contribution is always felt and always valuable in the business of facilitating the expression of the will of the entire Senate.

Mr. President, I also pay tribute at this time to the members of the Social Security Commission, the so-called Greenspan Commission. While they were not involved directly in the deliberations on the floor, except to the extent that some Members of the Senate were members of that Commission, their presence was felt every moment during this debate. Their courageous act in initiating recommendations for fundamental changes in the social security system, for the first time in decades, led the way and perhaps made it possible for the House and the Senate to act on these politically explosive matters.

So I especially pay tribute to the members of the Committee for a job well done, and particularly to those Members of the Senate—such as Senator Moinihan, Senator Dole, Senator Armstrong, Senator Heinz, and others— who participated so effectively in the deliberations of the Commission.

Mr. Byrd. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. Byrd. Mr. President, I join the distinguished majority leader in expressing commendation to Mr. Dole and to Mr. Long, who have shown great dedication and who have worked hard in the deliberation of this bill.

I do not like the bill. I wish the problem would just go away. I did not want to vote for the bill. But when confronted with the alternative, the destruction of the social security system, bankruptcy of the social security system, I was left no choice. Undoubtedly, I speak for all Senators on both sides of the aisle.

I also want to express my compliments and my thanks to those on the Commission.

Mr. Byrd. Mr. President, I yield.

Mr. Baker. Mr. President, I join the distinguished majority leader in expressing commendation to Mr. Dole and to Mr. Long, who have shown great dedication and who have worked hard in the deliberation of this bill.

I do not like the bill. I wish the problem would just go away. I did not want to vote for the bill. But when confronted with the alternative, the destruction of the social security system, bankruptcy of the social security system, I was left no choice. Undoubtedly, I speak for all Senators on both sides of the aisle.

I also want to express my compliments and my thanks to those on the Commission.

At this point, I want to thank publicly the majority leader for allowing me to select two members of that Commission from my side of the aisle. He did not have to do that, but he was characteristically fair in the matter. I am proud of the two members I selected—Mr. Moynihan, the ranking minority member of the Social Security Subcommittee of the Committee on Finance, and Lane Kirkland.

I also compliment the Republican Members chosen by Mr. Baker. They performed a difficult task and spent many hours in the effort.

As I say, this is a piece of legislation that I wish we had not had to vote on, but we had no choice.

So I compliment and thank all who participated. I think this has been a fine demonstration of bipartisanship on an extremely complex and difficult matter.

Mr. Baker. I thank the minority leader. May I say that without his assistance in facilitating the business of the Senate, even though on occasion he disagreed with the action that was presented to the Senate on particular matters, and had it not been for his cooperation and steadfast determination to see the Senate function as an effective legislative body, we could not have brought this matter to a conclusion. I wish to publicly acknowledge his enormous contribution and the valuable contribution he has made to the business of the Senate in this matter and in many other ways.

Mr. Byrd. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader.
Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that if and when the clerk receives a message from the Senate indicating that that body has passed the bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes, with an amendment or amendments, insisted upon its amendment or amendments and requested a conference with the House, that the House be deemed to have disagreed to the Senate amendment or amendments and agreed to the conference requested by the Senate, and that the Speaker be deemed to have appointed conferees without intervening motion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. Rostenkowski, Pickle, Jacobs, Ford of Tennessee, Shannon, Conable, Duncan, and Archer.

MAKING IN ORDER ON THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1983, OR ANY DAY THEREAFTER, CONSIDERATION OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1900, SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

Mr. Rostenkowski. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order to call up the conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes, on Thursday, March 24, 1983, or any day thereafter, and that all points of order against the conference report or its consideration are hereby waived, and that the conference report be considered as having been read when called up.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983
Title I. Provisions Affecting the Financing of the Social Security System

| 1. Extension of coverage
   a. Federal employees (Section 101 of House bill; section 101 of Senate amendment) | Permanent civilian employees of the Federal government are not covered by social security (OASDI). (Part-time temporary civilian employees and members of the armed forces are covered by social security.) By far the greatest number of Federal employees not covered by social security (2.7 million) participate in the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) on a mandatory basis. Legislative branch employees are not covered by social security, and have the option of not participating in CSRS. Members of Congress, the President and the Vice-President are not covered under social security. As of January 1, 1983, Federal employees are covered under the medicare program and pay the medicare portion of the social security payroll tax.
Presently, the compensation paid to Federal judges—either in Senior (or inactive) status or in retirement—is not considered wages and thus is not subject to social security taxes nor is it considered for purposes of the retirement test. |
House Bill

Provides for coverage under social security of the following groups: (1) all Federal employees hired on or after January 1, 1984, including those with previous periods of Federal Service if the break in Federal service lasted at least 365 days; (2) legislative branch employees on the same basis, as well as current employees of the legislative branch who are not participating in the Civil Service Retirement System as of December 31, 1983; (3) all Members of Congress, the President and the Vice President effective January 1, 1984; (4) all sitting Federal judges, and all executive level and senior executive service political appointees, as of January 1, 1984. Federal judicial salaries would be reported as wages for social security earnings test and payroll tax purposes.

Senate Amendment

Similar to House bill, but would not cover Federal judges and executive level and senior executive service political appointees in service as of December 31, 1983 (except for the Commissioner of Social Security).

The provision also states that "Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement program system of current and retired Federal employees and their families."

1. Extension of coverage—Con.
   b. Employees of nonprofit organizations
      (Section 102 of House bill; section 102 of Senate amendment)

   Participation in the social security system is optional for nonprofit organizations (charitable, religious, and educational). Most such organizations have chosen to participate, but about 15 percent of employees of nonprofit organizations are presently not covered. A nonprofit organization which has elected to participate can file to withdraw from social security after it has been in the system for 8 years, and termination is effective two years after the end of the calendar quarter in which the notice was filed.
Extends social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations as of January 1, 1984. (Terminations of coverage would not be permitted on or after March 31, 1983.) Nonprofit employees age 55 or older affected by this provision would be deemed to be fully insured for social security benefits after acquiring a given number of quarters of coverage, according to the following sliding scale:

Once a government has chosen to join social security, it may withdraw, after 5 years of coverage, by providing the Federal government with two years advance notice of its intent to withdraw. A notice of termination becomes effective at the end of the calendar year two years after the notice is filed. Governments that have withdrawn are not allowed to rejoin. (About 70 percent of all State and local government employees are presently covered by social security.)</td>

House Bill

Prohibits State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees if the termination has not taken effect by the date legislation is enacted. In addition, allows State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

</table>
| 3. Windfall benefits for persons with pensions from noncovered employment (Section 113 of House bill; section 112 of Senate amendment) | Social security benefits are determined through a formula based on average lifetime earnings in jobs covered by social security. The benefit formula is weighted so that persons with low average lifetime earnings receive a proportionally higher rate of return on their contributions to social security than workers with relatively high average lifetime earnings.
Workers with short periods of covered work also receive this advantage, because their few years of earnings are averaged over a 35-year period to determine their average monthly covered earnings on which the benefit is based.
This high rate of return for persons who have spent a short period of time in covered employment is what is often characterized as a “windfall” benefit. |
House Bill

(1) Applies a different benefit formula to workers who are eligible for a pension based wholly or in part on noncovered employment. Under the current formula, benefits are 90% of the first $254 of average monthly earnings, 32% of earnings from $254 to $1,538, and 15% of earnings above $1,538. The new formula applicable to those with pensions from noncovered employment would substitute 61% for the 90% factor. (2) Provides a guarantee that the resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit cannot be more than one-half the amount of the noncovered pension. (3) This provision will be applicable to persons reaching age 60 after December 31, 1983.

Senate Amendment

Similar to House provision, except substitutes a 32% factor in benefit formula, phased in over a 5-year period as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year of first eligibility under OASDI</th>
<th>First factor in formula (percent)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>

</tr>
<tr>
<td>1987</td>
<td>43.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1988 and after</td>
<td>32.0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Provides a guarantee that the resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit cannot be more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was not covered.

Provides further a guarantee that persons with 30 years or more of covered service would not be affected. For persons with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment, the 90% factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below 30 years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision, however. (A year of substantial employment would be a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

The provision provides for periodically recomputing the offset based on changes in the pension rate. The provision also provides that pensions based on noncovered employment of less than a year would not be subject to the offset.

The provision would be effective on January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a noncovered pension and for social security after 1983.

Delays the June 1983 cost-of-living adjustment until December (January 1984 check), and provides all subsequent cost-of-living adjustments in December (January checks). This adjustment would be based on the CPI for the first quarter of 1983 over that for the first quarter of 1982. All subsequent adjustments would be based on the CPI increase from the third quarter of the last year in which a cost-of-living adjustment was provided to the third quarter of the current year. For the December 1983 adjustment only, the 3 percent trigger is waived.

Similar provision except that the general revenue contribution would not replace lost premium revenue.

Also, postpones from July 1, 1983, to January 1, 1984, and to each January thereafter, the effective date of increases in medicare premiums to coincide with the proposed delay in the cost-of-living increases in social security cash benefit payments. Beginning in 1984, a portion of social security and tier I railroad retirement benefits would be included in taxable income for taxpayers whose adjusted gross income combined with 50 percent of their benefits exceeds a base amount. The base amount would be $25,000 for an individual, $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return and zero for married persons filing separate returns. The amount of benefits that could be included in taxable income would be the lesser of one-half of benefits or one-half of the excess of the taxpayers' combined income (AGI + one-half of benefits) over the base amount.

The proceeds from the taxation of benefits, as estimated by the Treasury Department, would be transferred to the appropriate trust funds. An annual report from the Secretary of the Treasury concerning the transfers would be required.

Special rules would be provided to adjust for repayments by individuals of benefits previously received and subsequently determined to be overpayments. Special rules also would be provided for attributing appropriate portions of lump-sum benefit payments to the years for which they had been paid. Benefits subject to tax would include any workmen's compensation receipt of which caused a reduction in disability benefits.

Annual information returns would be filed by the Social Security Administration and the Railroad Retirement Board with the IRS and furnished to individual beneficiaries.

The 50 percent of social security benefits received by non-resident aliens would be subject to the 30 percent withholding tax (or a lower rate if so fixed by treaty) applicable to periodic payments made to such individuals under current law. House Bill Senate Amendment

Beginning in 1984, the OASDHI rates for self-employed persons would be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDHI rate.

Same as House bill.

For 1984, self-employed persons would be allowed a credit (comparable to the credit allowed employers against the FICA tax) against SECA tax equal to 0.3 percent of net self-employment income. In addition, beginning in 1984, self-employed persons would be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984–87, the amount of the credit would be 1.8 percent of net self-employment income. For 1988 and subsequent years, the credit would be 1.9 percent. The SECA tax credit may be directly taken into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

Same as House bill, except that the total credit rate would be 2.9 percent of self-employment income in 1984, 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, 2.1 percent in 1987, 1988, and 1989, and 2.3 percent in 1990 and thereafter.

Appropriations to the trust funds would be based on the full SECA tax rates without regard to the credit allowed against such taxes.

Same as House bill.

Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes. Should the worker die long before retirement age, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible in old-age (or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus, women who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband's unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide wage increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.</td>

| 11. Stabilizer (Section 112 of House bill; section 117 of Senate amendment) | Social security benefits are adjusted automatically every June to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index. Such adjustments are made without regard to the status of the trust fund reserves.
Income to the social security system depends on the level of wages on which social security contributions are made. When increases in prices outrun increases in wages, income to the trust fund falls behind increases in benefit payments. Cash flow problems may then result, depending on whether accumulated fund reserves are sufficient to make up the gap between income and outlays.
There is no mechanism under current law to adjust trust fund outlays and revenues to take account of economic fluctuations. |
<thead>
<tr>
<th>House Bill</th>
<th>Senate Amendment</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Beginning with 1988, if the fund ratio of the combined OASDI Trust Funds as of the beginning of a year is less than 20.0%, the automatic cost-of-living (COLA) adjustment would be based on the lower of the CPI increase or the increase in average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, “catch-up” benefit payments would be made during the following year, as supplements to monthly benefits otherwise payable, to the extent necessary to increase overall benefit levels in order to make up for any losses in inflation protection that result from basing COLA’s on wages rather than prices. Such payments would be made only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32.0%.

Trust fund effect:
Under the alternative II-B assumptions, this provision is estimated to have no trust fund impact in either the short range or the long range. | Similar to House bill, except that the catch-up payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for the cumulative dollar losses that could result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices. Same as House bill. |
Social security benefits are financed by a payroll tax fixed in the law. While benefits are paid out within the first five days of each month, payroll tax revenues are estimated daily by the Treasury, and credited to the trust fund accounts each day.

If at any point revenues from the payroll tax exceed amounts needed for benefit payments, the excess is placed in the trust fund reserve. If revenues fall short of the amount needed, the reserves are drawn on to make up the difference. If the reserves are not adequate to make up the shortfall, under current law the trust funds have no way of making benefit payments on time. (Thus, it is considered critical to have at least one month's benefit payments in reserve at the beginning of each month, and to have enough of a reserve to continue benefit payments through any decline in revenues during the year.) The Board of Trustees is required to report immediately to the Congress if any of the trust funds is unduly small.

Interfund borrowing was authorized during 1982, but this authority terminated at the end of the year.

| a. Fixed Monthly Tax Transfers: Provides for a revision of accounting procedures under which the Treasury would credit to the OASDHI trust funds, at the beginning of each month, the amount of payroll tax revenues estimated to be received during the month. These amounts would be invested by the trust funds as all other trust fund assets are invested; interest will also be paid by the trust funds on amounts transferred to the trust funds in advance of procedures in effect on January 1, 1983. Effective on the first day of the month following enactment. | a. Similar to House provision, except that tax receipts would only be advanced for months the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the balances of the OASDI trust funds are less than 20% of outgo. Also, the interest paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred would be at the rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.
Effective.—On enactment through 1989. |
| b. Interfund borrowing: Authorizes interfund benefit borrowing between the OASI, DI and HI funds for calendar years 1983–87, with provisions for repayment to the lending fund(s) of the principal and interest of all such loans (including amounts borrowed in 1982) at the earliest feasible time but not later than the end of calendar year 1989. Borrowing would be permitted only to the extent there is sufficient balance in the lending fund to meet its own obligations. | b. Similar to House bill, except that (1) interest would be paid monthly to HI on any outstanding loans to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month in which the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent (with no more to be borrowed than would reduce such ratio to 10 percent); (3) in 1983–87, OASDI would repay loans from HI whenever the OASDI fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 15 percent; and (4) in 1988–89, OASDI would repay HI, in 24 equal monthly payments, the loan balance outstanding at the end of 1987 (plus interest on any outstanding loan balance). Faster payment would be authorized.
Similar protections would be provided for the OASI and DI trust funds in the event that HI were to borrow from OASDI. |
c. Managing Trustee Report to the Congress Concerning Trust Fund Shortfalls: Requires the Board of Trustees to report immediately to the Congress whenever it is of the opinion that the amount of any of the trust funds may become unduly small and recommend a specific legislative plan to adjust the inflow and outgo of funds to remedy this shortfall with due regard to the economic situation that created the problem and the amount of time available to act in a prudent manner. It is the intent that such legislative action would be effective only so long as is necessary to restore the fund to solvency.

Senate Amendment

c. Requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to make an annual evaluation of the projected balances in the OASDHI trust funds, taking into account cost-of-living increases. If at the start of any year after 1984 the OASDHI reserve ratio is projected to decline from the start of the next year to the start of the following year and to then be less than 20 percent of a year’s benefits, the Secretary would be required to notify the Congress by the preceding July 1 that action to limit the next COLA will be necessary. If no action is taken, the Secretary would be required to scale back the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline in the reserve ratio. (For years after 1987, the fund ratios only for OASDI would be considered.) Insofar as possible, the limitation of the COLA would be applied to people whose benefits are based on a primary benefit level of more than $250 per month. The determination as to whether a limitation on the cost-of-living increase was necessary would be made only after taking into account all other statutory provisions for assuring adequate funds.

Effective for determinations beginning July 1, 1984.

Trust fund effect:

Under alternative II-B assumptions, this provision is estimated to have no financial impact in either the short range or the long range.

Gradually increases the delayed retirement credit from 3% to 8% per year for persons who attain age 65 between 1990 and 2008. Provides for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund for: (i) The present value of the estimated additional benefits arising from the gratuitous military service wage credits for service before 1957; (ii) the amount of the combined employer-employee OASDI taxes on the gratuitous military service wage credits for service after 1956 and before 1983. In addition, the HI trust fund would be credited with the combined employer-employee HI taxes on gratuitous military wage credits for service after 1965 and before 1983. ### TITLE II. ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO LONG-TERM FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

<thead>

<th>Current Law</th>

</table>
| Adjustments in the normal retirement age (Section 201 of House bill; sections 119 and 120 of Senate amendment) | Normal retirement age (i.e., the age at which full retirement benefits can be received) is age 65. Early retirement benefits are available at age 62 at a rate of 80 percent of the full benefit. Medicare and SSI benefits are also available at age 65. Unreduced retirement benefits are available to workers, spouses, and widows and widowers at age 65. Actuarially reduced benefits are available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers.

In computing social security benefits, a worker's earnings under social security are averaged and a benefit formula is applied to those average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents' and survivors' benefits are based on the worker's PIA.

The formula for a worker who becomes eligible for benefits in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of AIME, plus 32 percent of the AIME from $254 through $1,528, plus 15 percent of the AIME over $1,528.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for the new group of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

The annual adjustment of the benefit formula by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker's prior earnings that are replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older. The annual exempt amount is increased each year according to increases in wages. |

(1) Raises the normal retirement age to 67 in two steps.
   (A) Raises retirement age to 66 by increasing the age for full benefits by two months a year for six years so that provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2005 (66 in 2009).
   (B) Raises retirement age from 66 to 67 by increasing the age for full benefits by two months a year for six years so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2022 (67 in 2027).

(2) Age 62 benefits would be maintained at an ultimate rate of 70 percent of full benefits. (After age for full retirement is changed to 67.) No changes would be made in Medicare or SSI benefits.

(3) Requires the Secretary, by January 1, 1986, to conduct and submit with recommendations to Congress a comprehensive study and analysis of the implications of the change in retirement age for those individuals affected by this change who, because they are engaging in physically demanding employment or because they are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons, may not benefit from improvements in longevity.

(4) Makes no changes in the current law earnings test.

Senate Amendment

(1) Raises the normal retirement age to 66, by increasing the age for full benefits one month a year for 12 years (between 2000 and 2011) so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 66 in 2015. The first age of eligibility for Medicare would shift in tandem with the new retirement age.

(2) Early retirement benefits would continue to be payable at age 62, but at an ultimate rate of 75 percent of full benefits (after age for full retirement is changed to 66.)

(3) Requires the 1987 Social Security Advisory council to study the effect of raising the retirement age and requires recommendations on changes to the DI, SSI and unemployment compensation programs to meet the special needs of older workers. In addition, provides for the appointment, subject to approval by the Chairmen of the Committees on Finance and Ways and Means, of Council representatives of organized labor and experts on the problems of older workers, disability and unemployment and the labor market.

(4) Between 2000 and 2007, gradually reduces initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent for future beneficiaries. The percentage factors in the benefit formula would be reduced by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years, beginning with those first becoming eligible in the year 2000, and would be fully effective for those becoming eligible in 2007. The benefit factor reduction would be phased-in under the following schedule:

| 2. Elimination of Gender-Based Distinctions Under the Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance Program | a. Divorced husbands (Section 311 of House bill) The Social Security Act provides for the payment of benefits to aged divorced wives and aged or disabled surviving divorced wives but benefits are not provided for similarly situated men.

b. Remarriage of Surviving Spouse before age 60 (Section 312 of House bill) Widows and widowers who remarry before age 60 are treated differently with respect to their eligibility for benefits based on their deceased spouses' earnings. A woman may qualify for benefits as a surviving spouse, even though she has remarried, so long as she is not married at the time she applies for benefits. A man, however, under current law loses forever his eligibility as a surviving spouse of his deceased wife worker if he remarries before age 60. Since the decision of Mertz v. Harris (1980), SSA has paid benefits to remarried widowers on the same basis as to remarried widows.

c. Illegitimate Children (Section 313 of House bill) An illegitimate child may be eligible for benefits based upon a man's earnings, without regard to the appropriate State intestate laws, if among other things, the man has been decreed by a court to be the father of the child, or the man is shown by evidence satisfactory to the Secretary to be the father of the child. Similar provisions do not currently apply when an illegitimate child claims a benefit based upon his mother's earnings.

d. Transitional Insured Status (Section 314 of House bill) Certain workers who attained age 72 before 1969 are eligible for social security benefits under transitional insured status provisions which require fewer quarters of coverage than would ordinarily be required. Wives and widows of eligible male workers who reached 72 prior to 1969 also are eligible for benefits under this provision, but husbands and widowers of eligible female workers are not.

e. Equalization of Special Age 72 Benefits under Section 228 (Prouty Benefits) (Section 315 of House bill) Special payments are provided to persons who attained age 72 before 1968 and who have no quarters of coverage and to persons age 72 in 1968 or after who have at least three quarters of coverage for every year after 1966 and before the year of attainment of age 72. However, even though each spouse must meet the same eligibility requirements if he or she were not married, once the eligibility of both is determined, the couple is treated as if the husband were the retired worker and the wife were the dependent. The benefit is allocated so that the husband is paid two-thirds of the benefit and the wife is paid one-third. |

   a. Foreign affiliates of American employers (Section 321 of House bill).

   Work by a U.S. citizen outside the U.S. for a foreign subsidiary of a domestic corporation is covered by social security if the domestic corporation arranges for coverage by entering into a voluntary agreement with the Internal Revenue Service; the agreement applies to all citizens subsequently employed by the subsidiary if their work would be covered if performed in the U.S.

   A “foreign subsidiary” of a domestic corporation is defined as a foreign corporation of which: not less than 20 percent of its voting stock is owned by a domestic corporation; or more than 50 percent of its voting stock is owned by another foreign corporation and at least 20 percent of the latter corporation’s voting stock is owned by a domestic corporation.

   A domestic corporation which has entered into a voluntary agreement providing for social security coverage of U.S. citizens employed by its foreign subsidiary can also elect to include such U.S. citizens in its qualified pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, etc. plans. A similar rule applies to U.S. citizens employed by a domestic corporation’s domestic subsidiary that operates primarily abroad.
Broadens the availability of social security coverage to American citizens working abroad by:
(1) permitting coverage of American citizens working outside the United States for a foreign affiliate of an American employer; and (2) reducing the ownership interest in the foreign affiliate that is required to be held by the American employer from 20 percent to 10 percent (either directly or through one or more entities). These changes would be effective upon enactment.

In addition, coverage would be extended to include employees of American employers and affiliates who are residents of the United States as well as American citizens. (This provision applies generally to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.)

Conforming changes would be made in the provisions relating to the extension of coverage under qualified pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, etc. plans for employees of a domestic corporation's subsidiary.
b. Foreign Earned Income Exclusion (Section 323 of House bill)

U.S. citizens and resident aliens who are not residents of a foreign country for a full year compute their net self-employment income for purposes of social security taxes (SECA) without regard to the foreign earned income exclusion. However, no coverage is provided for these taxable earnings.

U.S. citizens who are residents of a foreign country compute their net self-employment income excluding amounts which are also excluded for income tax purposes by the foreign earned income exclusion.

c. Including elective fringe benefits and nonqualified deferred compensation in the social security wage base (Section 329 of House bill; section 150 of Senate amendment)

Cash or deferred arrangements (Code section 401(k)).—Under a cash or deferred arrangement forming a part of a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf or to receive such amount directly in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the election are treated as employer contributions and are excluded from the employee's taxable income and social security wage base.

Cafeteria plans (Code section 125).—Under a cafeteria plan of an employer, an employee may choose among taxable fringe benefits (including cash) and nontaxable fringe benefits (including a cash or deferred arrangement) offered under the plan. If certain requirements are met, amounts applied toward nontaxable fringe benefits are excluded from the employee's taxable income and generally from the social security wage base.

c. Including elective fringe benefits and nonqualified deferred compensation in the social security wage base—Con.

Tax-sheltered annuities (Code section 403(b)).—Subject to certain limitations, amounts paid by the employer for the purchase of a tax-sheltered annuity for an eligible employee are excluded from the employee's taxable income and social security wage base. Tax-sheltered annuities may be purchased for employees of educational institutions and certain tax-exempt organizations. Tax-sheltered annuities may be purchased pursuant to a salary reduction agreement.

Nonqualified deferred compensation plans.—Amounts deferred under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan generally are taxable when they are paid or when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture, depending upon whether or not the plan is unfunded or funded. However, if the plan is a retirement plan or the amounts are paid on account of retirement, the amounts are generally excludible from FICA and FUTA. These plans may be utilized by (1) taxable employers to provide retirement benefits in excess of those permitted under tax-qualified retirement plans or coverage limited primarily to highly compensated or management employees, (2) tax-exempt employers, and (3) State and local governments.

d. Standby Pay (Section 324 of House bill; section 150 of Senate amendment)

Any payment (other than vacation or sick pay made to an employee after the month in which he or she attains age 62, where the employee did not work for the employer in the period in which such payment is made, is excluded from the definition of wages for both benefit and tax purposes.

Based on the legislative history of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, some bankruptcy courts have considered social security and SSI benefits listed by the debtor to be income for purposes of a Chapter XIII bankruptcy and have ordered SSA in several hundred cases to send all or part of a debtor’s benefit check to the trustee in bankruptcy.

The current maximum monthly SSI benefit is $284.30 for a single person and $426.40 for married couples. Benefits are indexed to the Consumer Price Index (CPI). Cost-of-living increases are provided annually in July if the CPI for the first quarter of the calendar year increases by at least 3 percent over the first quarter of the previous year. Benefits are increased by the same percentage as social security benefits. This occurs through a reference in the SSI law to the social security cost-of-living provision. For example, the current payment level of $284.30 per individual, which became effective July 1982, represents an increase of 7.4 percent (or $19.60 monthly) from the previous July 1981 level of $264.70.
The Federal SSI benefit payment is increased by $20 per month for individuals and $30 per month for couples, effective July 1, 1983.

The next Federal SSI cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) is delayed from July 1983 until January 1984. Federal SSI benefits will be adjusted in January 1984, and every January thereafter, by the same percentage and under the same procedures as OASDI benefits. The provision to pay the lower of the increase in wages or prices, which is applicable to OASDI benefit increases beginning in 1988, would apply to SSI. As with title II, the 1983 COLA, to be paid in January 1984, will be provided even if the CPI increase is less than 3 percent.

2. Adjustment in Federal Pass-Through provisions. (Section 402 of House bill; Section 202 of Senate amendment)

P.L. 94-585, enacted October 21, 1976, established Federal SSI “pass-through” requirements, effective with the cost-of-living increase provided in July 1977. These provisions provide States with two options for meeting the pass-through requirements:

1) Aggregate Spending Level Option.—A State may make State supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period (17 States use this option);

2) Individual Payment Level Option.—A State may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976. (All other States use this measure, except Texas and West Virginia which have no State supplementation program.)

An amendment in P.L. 97-248 allows a State that shifts from the aggregate spending option to the individual payment level option to maintain State supplementation levels in effect in the previous December rather than the levels in December 1976.
States would be allowed the following options in meeting the pass-through requirement:

1. Aggregate Spending Level Option.—Same as present law.

2. Individual Payment Level Option.—Modifies current law (1) by substituting the State supplementary payment levels in effect in March 1983 for those in effect in December 1976 as the levels that States must maintain in complying with the payment level passthrough requirement; and (2) with regard to the $20/$30 increase in the Federal SSI standard in July 1983, by requiring States to pass through only as much as would have been required if the SSI COLA were not changed from July 1983 to January 1984.

States would be allowed the following options in meeting the pass-through requirements:

1. Aggregate Spending Level Option.—Same as present law.

2. Individual Payment Level Option.—Modifies current law to provide that the March 1983 State supplementary payment levels would be an additional option for complying with the payment level passthrough provision rather than a substitute for the December 1976 levels (that is, it would not prohibit a State from reducing levels to December 1976 levels as the House bill would).

1. Extension of Federal Supplemental Compensation (FSC) program (Sections 501-504 of House bill; Sections 401-403 of the Senate Amendment)

Under the current FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, and expires March 31, 1983, additional weeks of Federally financed unemployment compensation benefits are provided to jobless workers who have exhausted all other State and Federal unemployment benefits. The number of weeks of FSC benefits that jobless workers may receive depends on (a) the number of weeks of State unemployment benefits received by each claimant, and (b) the State in which the claimant qualified for or receives the benefits.

As originally enacted, the FSC program, depending upon State insured unemployment rates (IUR), provided a maximum of 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. As amended by provisions contained in the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (P.L. 97–424), beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program provides the following maximum weeks of benefits:

1. 16 weeks in States with a 13 week average insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent;
2. 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
3. 12 weeks in the remaining States that have a 13 week average IUR of at least 4.5 percent;
4. 10 weeks in the remaining States that have a 13 week average IUR from 3.5 percent to 4.4 percent; and
5. 8 weeks for all other States.

The number of weeks of FSC a qualified individual may receive is the lesser of 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits he received or the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in the State in which he qualified for FSC benefits.

To qualify for FSC an individual must have exhausted all State and extended benefits to which he is entitled, and he must meet State and extended benefit qualification requirements. This means he must have worked at least 20 weeks or have the equivalent in wages during the base period.

1 The Insured Unemployment Rate (IUR) is the percentage of workers covered under the State unemployment compensation law who are claiming State unemployment benefits in a particular week. The number of weeks of FSC payable in a State depends upon the average IUR measured over a moving 13 week period.
The FSC program is extended for 6 months, from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983.

Effective April 1, 1983, FSC benefits would be payable as follows:

(a) Basic FSC benefits: Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:
   1. 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
   2. 13 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
   3. 11 weeks in States with average IUR 4.5 to 4.9 percent;
   4. 10 weeks in States with average IUR 3.5 to 4.4 percent;
   5. 8 weeks in all other States.

(b) Additional FSC benefits: Individuals who exhaust FSC on or before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks equal to three-fourths of the basic FSC entitlement payable in the State, up to a maximum of:
   1. 10 weeks in the 14 basic week States (average IUR 6.0 or above)
   2. 8 weeks in the 13 and 11 basic week States (average IUR 4.5 to 5.9)
   3. 6 weeks in the 10 and 8 basic week States (average IUR 4.4 and below)

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits: Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

The FSC program is extended for 6 months from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983.

Effective April 1, 1983, FSC benefits would be payable as follows:

(a) Basic FSC Benefits: Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:
   1. 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
   2. 12 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
   3. 10 weeks in States with average IUR 4.0 to 4.9 percent; and
   4. 8 weeks in all other States.

The maximum number of weeks payable in a State after April 1, 1983 could be no more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number payable on March 27, 1983.

(b) Additional FSC benefits: Individuals who exhaust before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:
   1. 8 weeks in States with IUR at 6 percent and above
   2. 6 weeks in States with IUR at 5 percent to 5.9 percent
   3. 4 weeks in all other States.

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits: Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(d) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted their FSC entitlement on September 30, 1983, when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. Nonprofit employers who had voluntarily covered their employees prior to the 1970 or 1976 amendments and financed benefit costs by the contribution method, and after enactment of the 1970 or 1976 amendments chose to switch to the reimbursement method of financing, were permitted to apply any accumulated balance in their accounts toward costs incurred in the future and paid for on a reimbursement basis. The authority to make such a transfer, however, was available for a limited period of time that expired shortly after enactment of the 1976 and 1970 amendments.</td>

(2) the organization elects to switch to the

Effective upon enactment.
4. Cap on Credit Reduction (Section 412 of Senate Amendment)

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) imposes a Federal unemployment compensation (UC) tax on employers in all States at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally receive a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. States with insufficient State unemployment compensation revenues to meet State unemployment compensation obligations may borrow from the Federal Unemployment Account. If a State defaults on its loans from the Federal account, employers in the State begin to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of at least .3 percent a year. For example, because of overdue Federal UC loans, sixteen States experienced a reduction in the 2.7 credit for tax year 1982.

Specifically, if a Federal UC loan is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State's employers is reduced by .3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional .3 percent (i.e., .6, .9, 1.2 percent, etc). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970's, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975–1980 for States satisfying specific requirements.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan payment conditions, effective from January 1, 1981 to December 31, 1987: (1) interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after April 1, 1982 (except those made for "cash flow" purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and (2) States were allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

In a State that qualifies for the cap, the tax credit reduction is limited to the higher of 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year.
House Bill

No Provision.

Senate Amendment

(a) Makes the credit reduction cap provisions in present law permanent.

(b) A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law to qualify for the full credit reduction cap. The amendment would, however, provide two lower annual credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap: (1) If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.1 percentage points; and (2) If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.2 percentage points.

A substantial change is action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) taken after March 31, 1982, which would increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first interest deferral is requested. Deferral of interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made.

The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities.

Effective upon enactment.
4. Cap on Credit Reduction (Section 412 of Senate Amendment)—Con.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State's total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the automatic credit reductions, a State must demonstrate that:

1. the net solvency of its UC system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
2. there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
3. its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983–1987); and
4. the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983–1987; the comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981).

A State with high unemployment can defer payment of, and extend the payment for, 75 percent of interest charges due in any year. The State must pay one-third of the deferred amount in each of the three years following the fiscal year for which it is due. Interest is charged on the deferred interest. In order to qualify for this deferral and extension of the payment period, the State insured unemployment rate must have equaled or exceeded 7.5 percent during the first 6 months of the preceding calendar year.</td>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
No provision.

(a) Makes the provisions imposing interest on loans to the States permanent.

(b) Allows states to defer 80 percent of the amount due for the fiscal year, effective for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet conditions 1 and 2(A) or 2(B) below to qualify for the deferral:

1. no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency;
2. (A) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) after March 31, 1982, has been taken which would increase revenues and decrease benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested. Deferral of the interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made; or (B) for taxable year 1982, total State UC tax revenues equaled at least 2 percent of total wages covered under the State UC law.

(c) Interest will not be charged against any interest for which payment is deferred under current law deferral provisions or those added by this bill and summarized in (b) above.

(d) Allows a State to delay for up to 9 months the payment of interest due for any calendar year after 1982 during which the average total unemployment rate in the State was 13.5 percent or higher. Interest will not be charged against interest for which payment is delayed.

(e) Allows states to receive a discounted interest rate that would be one percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. This would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

Effective on date of enactment.
6. Average Employer Contribution Rate (Section 413 of Senate amendment)

Present law provides that a state, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable base of $7,000, the ratio of the State's UC tax revenues to the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if the taxable wage base was $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.
House Bill

No provision.

Senate Amendment

Changes the calculations so that all wages instead of just taxable wages are counted in the denominators of the State tax rates and the 2.7 percent. Each State's tax rate on all wages subject to contributions under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) is compared to an estimate of the national percentage of all wages subject to FUTA contributions that 2.7 percent of taxable wages represents. The 2.7 percent factor is calculated as the product of 2.7 percent and the ratio of the Federal taxable wage base ($7,000) and the national average annual covered wage (roughly $16,000).

Effective for taxable years beginning with 1984.

| 3. Effective Date/Transition
a. Phase-in period | Under present law, the section 223 limits are authorized indefinitely; the rate of increase limits will not apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985. |
| b. Calculation of cost-based portion of payment | |
Implementation of the new prospective payment system would be phased in over a 3-year period, starting with each hospital's first cost reporting period beginning on or after October 1, 1983. During year one, 25% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates; 75% of the payment would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year two, 50% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates and 50% on each hospital's cost base. In year three, 75% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates and 25% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year four, 100% of the payment would be determined under the DRG payment methodology. In year five, 100% of the payment would be determined under a national DRG payment methodology.

For the first 2 reporting periods, the calculation of that portion of a hospital's payment which is cost-based would be the lesser of the hospital's payment under the rate of increase limits, without the penalties and bonuses of present law, or the section 223 limits without regard to any exemptions, exceptions or adjustments thereto. For the third reporting period, the calculation of the cost-based portion would be the hospital's payment under the rate of increase limit only.

Similar provision, except that during year one, 25% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (25% national, 75% regional); 75% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year two, 50% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (50% each); 50% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year three, 75% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (75% national, 25% regional); 25% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year four, 100% of the payment would be determined under the national DRG payment methodology.

<td>Medicare payments to hospitals are made according to the lower of actual reasonable costs, the section 223 total cost limits, or the rate of increase limits added by TEFRA. <tr>
<td>b. Services covered</td>
<td>Under current law, services provided to medicare beneficiaries who are inpatients of a hospital are ordinarily billed under part A and reimbursed on a reasonable cost basis. However, some payments for certain non-physician services rendered to inpatients are billed by suppliers of services under part B on a reasonable charge basis.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
The rates for each DRG would be derived from historical Medicare cost data for each hospital. The rates would be updated to fiscal year 1983 by the estimated industry-wide actual increase in hospital costs. The rates would be further updated for fiscal year 1984 by the increase in the market basket plus 1 percentage point. In fiscal year 1984, the DRG rates would be reduced, as may be required, to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement levels that would have applied under the TEFRA legislation.

Effective October 1, 1983, all non-physician services provided in an inpatient setting would be paid only as inpatient hospital services under part A, except as provided below.

The Secretary is given authority to waive these restrictions, and to provide for adjustments in the DRG payment rates, for hospitals which can demonstrate to the Secretary that their practices prior to October 1, 1982, were such that their services were extensively billed independently under part B. Such hospitals could be permitted, by the Secretary, to continue such billing arrangements during the transition period for phasing-in the prospective payment system. Such arrangements would not be recognized once the prospective payment system is fully implemented. The Secretary would estimate, each year, amounts that would have been reimbursed under part B for inpatient hospital services (other than physician services) and include, each year, in the base rate for determining the DRG payment rates an approximation of this amount.

The Secretary may waive these restrictions during the transition period in the case of hospitals that have allowed direct billing under part B so extensively that immediate compliance with such restrictions would threaten the stability of patient care. The Secretary could allow continued payment of part B billings as long as he or she subsequently deducted the total amount for these billings from the payments made under the prospective system to the hospital. If such a waiver is granted, the Secretary, at the end of the transition, may provide for such methods of payment under part A as is appropriate given the organizational structure of the institution.

The Secretary is required to study and report to Congress by the end of 1983 on the method by which capital-related costs can be included under the prospective payment system and on payments with respect to a return on equity.

Expresses the intent of Congress that, in implementing a system for including capital-related costs under a prospective payment system, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after March 1, 1983, may be distinguished and treated differently from projects initiated before such date.

Hospitals or units of hospitals exempted from the prospective payment system would be subject to the section 223 limits (until hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985) and the rate of increase limits applicable under current law.

Similar provision, except the section 223 limits would no longer apply for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.

Psychiatric, long-term care, children's and rehabilitation hospitals would be specifically exempted from the prospective payment system. Upon request of a hospital, rehabilitation and psychiatric units which are distinct parts of acute care hospitals would also be specifically exempted.

Similar provision, except (1) hospitals would not have to request exemptions for distinct parts of rehabilitation or psychiatric units and (2) exemptions of any such hospitals or hospital units would no longer apply when the Secretary determines that adequate data of clinical and statistical significance is available to include these institutions and units under the prospective payment system.

The Secretary would be authorized to provide exceptions and adjustments to take into account the special needs of sole community hospitals.

Payments to sole community hospitals for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, would be on the same basis, as payments to all other providers in the first year of the transition period: 25% of the payment would be based on a blend of national and regional DRG rates (25% national, 75% regional); 75% would be based on each hospital's own cost base. In no case would total medicare payments in those cost reporting years beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be less than the payments made in the preceding year.

   a. Contracts with professional review organizations | Current law (title XI of the Social Security Act) requires the Secretary to enter into contracts for utilization and quality control peer review with professional review organizations (PROs) or other review organizations, including Medicare intermediaries (subject to certain conditions and limitations). |
Effective October 1, 1984, as a condition for receipt of medicare payments, a hospital receiving payments according to the prospective DRG rates would be required to contract with a peer review organization, in the area, designated by the Secretary under Title XI for the review of admissions, discharges, and quality of care with respect to medicare hospital inpatient services. The 12-month waiting period for intermediaries to qualify as review organizations as specified in present law would begin on the date the Secretary enters into contracts or on October 1, 1983, whichever is earlier.

Hospitals receiving payments under the prospective payment system would be required to enter into an agreement with a peer review organization (if such an organization has a contract with the Secretary under title XI for the area in which the hospital is located). The purpose of this contract is to provide for the review of the validity of the diagnostic information provided by such hospitals, the completeness and adequacy of the care provided, the appropriateness of admissions, and the appropriateness of care provided to patients designated by the hospitals as outliers. These reviews would be covered as a hospital cost of care under part A but the PRO would be paid by the Secretary on behalf of the hospital on the basis of a rate per review established by the Secretary. The amount expended will be no less than $25 million a year and will be expended from the trust fund and not subject to appropriations.

   d. Required State programs
For those States which currently have a Medicare waiver, the Secretary would be required to continue the State program if, and for so long as, the conditions described above are met.

The Secretary would be required to approve any State program which meets the following 6 requirements in addition to the conditions indicated above, that the system: (1) is operated directly by the State or an entity designated by State law; (2) is prospective; (3) provides for hospitals to make such reports as the Secretary requires; (4) provides satisfactory assurances that it will not result in admissions practices which will reduce treatment to low income, high cost, or emergency patients; (5) will not reduce payments without 60 days notice to the Secretary and to hospitals; and (6) provides satisfactory assurances that, in the development of its program, the State has consulted with local officials concerning the impact of the program on publicly owned hospitals.

The Secretary would be required to respond to requests from States applying under these 11 conditions within 60 days of the date the request is submitted.

The Secretary would be required, upon request of a State, to modify the terms of an existing demonstration agreement (entered into after August 1982 and in effect as of March 1, 1983—New York and Massachusetts) so that the demonstration project is not required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in such costs.

Similar provision, except provides that such demonstration agreements be modified so that the percentage by which such project is required to maintain a rate of increase in such costs in that State below the national rate of increase be decreased by one-half of one percentage point for the contract year, beginning in 1983, by an additional one-half of one percentage point for the contract year beginning in 1984, and by an additional one-quarter of one percentage point for the contract year beginning in 1985.

No provision.

No provision.

During the 3 cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, for existing State systems, the Secretary must judge their effectiveness on the basis of their rate of increase or inflation in medicare inpatient hospital payments compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments. The State would retain the option to have the test applied on the basis of either aggregate payments per inpatient admission or discharge. After the transition period, this test would not longer apply, and such State systems would be treated in the same fashion as other waivered systems.

If the Secretary determines that the amounts paid over a three-year period under a State system exceed what medicare would have otherwise paid over the same three-year period, the Secretary may reduce subsequent payments to hospitals under the State system by that amount.

COST-OF-LIVING INCREASES TO BE BASED ON EITHER WAGES OR PRICES (WHICHVER IS LOWER) WHEN BALANCE IN OASDI TRUST FUNDS FALLS BELOW SPECIFIED LEVEL

SEC. 112. (a) Section 215(i)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “in which” in subparagraph (B) and all that follows down through the first semicolon in such subparagraph and inserting in lieu thereof “with respect to which the applicable increase percentage is 3 percent or more;”;

(2) by striking out “and” at the end of subparagraph (B);

(3) by redesignating subparagraph (C) as subparagraph (H); and

(4) by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following new subparagraphs:

"(C) the term 'applicable increase percentage' means—

“(i) with respect to a base quarter or cost-of-living computation quarter in any calendar year before 1985, or in any calendar year after 1984 and before 1989 for which the OASDI fund ratio is 15.0 percent or more, or in any calendar year after 1988 for which the OASDI fund ratio is 20.0 percent or more, the CPI increase percentage; and

“(ii) with respect to a base quarter or cost-of-living computation quarter in any calendar year after 1984 and before 1989 for which the OASDI fund ratio is less than 15.0 percent, or in any calendar year after 1988 for which the OASDI fund ratio is less than 20.0 percent, the CPI increase percentage or the wage increase percentage, whichever (with respect to that quarter) is the lower;

“(D) the term 'CPI increase percentage', with respect to a base quarter or cost-of-living computation quarter in any calendar year, means the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the Consumer Price Index for that quarter (as prepared by the Department of Labor) exceeds such index for the most recent prior calendar quarter which was a base quarter under subparagraph (AXii) or, if later, the most recent cost-of-living computation quarter under subparagraph (B);

“(E) the term 'wage increase percentage', with respect to a base quarter or cost-of-living computation quarter in any calendar year, means the percentage (rounded to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent) by which the SSA average wage index for the year immediately preceding such calendar year exceeds such index for the year immediately preceding the most recent prior calendar year which included a base quarter under subparagraph (AXii) or, if later, which included a cost-of-living computation quarter;

“(F) the term 'OASDI fund ratio', with respect to any calendar year, means the ratio of—

“(i) the combined balance in the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund as of the beginning of such year, including the taxes transferred under section 201(a) on the first day of such year and reduced by the outstanding amount of any loan (including interest thereon) theretofore made to either such Fund from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(l), as of the beginning of such year, to “(ii) the total amount which (as estimated by the Secretary) will be paid from the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Fund during such calendar year for all purposes authorized by section 201 (other than payments of interest on, or repayments of, loans from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund under section 201(l)), but excluding any transfer payments between such trust funds and reducing the amount of any transfers to the Railroad Retirement Account by the amount of any transfers into either such trust fund from that Account;

“(G) the term ‘SSA average wage index’, with respect to any calendar year, means the average of the total wages reported to the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate for the preceding calendar year as determined for purposes of subsection (b)(3)(A)(ii); and”,

(b) Section 215(i)(2)(A)(ii) of such Act is amended by striking out “by the same percentage” and all that follows down through the semicolon, in the sentence immediately following subdivision (III), and inserting in lieu thereof “by the applicable increase percentage.”;

(c) Section 215(i) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

“(5)(A) If—

“(i) with respect to any calendar year the ‘applicable increase percentage’ was determined under clause (ii) of paragraph (1)(C) rather than under clause (i) of such paragraph, and the increase becoming effective under paragraph (2) in such year was accordingly determined on the basis of the wage increase percentage rather than the CPI increase percentage (or there was no such increase becoming effective under paragraph (2) in that year because the wage increase percentage was less than 3 percent), and

“(ii) for any subsequent calendar year in which an increase under paragraph (2) becomes effective the OASDI fund ratio is greater than 32.0 percent, then each of the amounts described in subdivisions (I), (II), and (III) of paragraph (2)(A)(ii), as increased under paragraph (2) effective with the month of December in such subsequent calendar year, shall be further increased (effective with such month) by an additional percentage, which shall be determined under subparagraph (B) and shall apply as provided in subparagraph (C).

“(B) The applicable additional percentage by which the amounts described in subdivisions (I), (II), and (III) of paragraph (2)(A)(ii) are to be further increased under subparagraph (A) in the subsequent calendar year involved shall be the amount derived by—

“(i) subtracting (I) the compounded percentage benefit increases that were actually paid under paragraph (2) and this paragraph from (II) the compounded percentage benefit increases that would have been paid if all increases under paragraph (2) had been made on the basis of the CPI increase percentage,

"(ii) dividing the difference by the sum of the compounded percentage in subdivision (I) and 100 percent, and

"(iii) multiplying such quotient by 100 and rounding to the nearest one-tenth of 1 percent, with the compounded increases referred to in subdivisions (I) and (II) being measured—

"(iv) in the case of amounts described in subdivision (I) of paragraph (2)(A)(ii), over the period beginning with the calendar year in which monthly benefits described in such subdivision were first increased on the basis of the wage increase percentage and ending with such subsequent calendar year, and

"(v) in the case of amounts described in subdivisions (II) and (III) of paragraph (2)(A)(ii), over the period beginning with the calendar year in which the individual whose primary insurance amount is increased under such subdivision (II) initially became eligible for an old-age or disability insurance benefit, or died before becoming so eligible, and ending with such subsequent calendar year; except that if the Secretary determines in any case that the application (in accordance with subparagraph (C)) of the additional percentage as computed under the preceding provisions of this subparagraph would cause the OASDI fund ratio to fall below 32.0 percent in the calendar year immediately following such subsequent year, he shall reduce such applicable additional percentage to the extent necessary to ensure that the OASDI fund ratio will remain at or above 32.0 percent through the end of such following year.

"(C) Any applicable additional percentage increase in an amount described in subdivision (I), (II), or (III) of paragraph (2)(A)(ii), made under this paragraph in any calendar year, shall thereafter be treated for all the purposes of this Act as a part of the increase made in such amount under paragraph (2) for that year.

(d)(1) Section 215(i)(2)(C) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iii) The Secretary shall determine and promulgate the OASDI fund ratio and the SSA wage index for each calendar year before November 1 of that year, based upon the most recent data then available, and shall include a statement of such fund ratio and wage index (and of the effect such ratio and the level of such index may have upon benefit increases under this subsection) in any notification made under clause (ii) and any determination published under subparagraph (D)."

(2) Section 215(i)(4) of such Act (as amended by section 111(b)(1) of this Act) is further amended by striking out "section 111(b)(2)" and inserting in lieu thereof "sections 111(b)(2) and 112".

(e) The amendments made by the preceding provisions of this section shall apply with respect to monthly benefits under title II of the Social Security Act for months after December 1984.

(f) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in section 215(i)(1)(F) of the Social Security Act (as added by subsection (a)(4) of this section), the combined balance in the Trust Funds which is to be used in determining the "OASDI fund ratio" with respect to the calendar year 1985 under such section shall be the estimated combined balance in such Funds as of the close of that year (rather than as of its beginning), including the taxes transferred under section 201(a) on the first day of the year following that year.

ELIMINATION OF WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS RECEIVING PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

SEC. 113. (a) Section 215(a) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(7)(A) In the case of an individual whose primary insurance amount would be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection, who—

"(i) attains age 62 after 1985 (except where he or she became entitled to a disability insurance benefit before 1986 and remained so entitled in any of the 12 months immediately preceding his or her attainment of age 62), or

"(ii) would attain age 62 after 1985 and becomes eligible for a disability insurance benefit after 1985, and who first becomes eligible after 1985 for a monthly periodic payment (including a payment determined under subparagraph (C), but excluding a payment under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 or 1937) which is based in whole or in part upon his or her earnings for service which did not constitute 'employment' as defined in section 210 for purposes of this title (hereafter in this paragraph and in subsection (d)(5) referred to as 'noncovered service'), the primary insurance amount of that individual during his or her concurrent entitlement to such monthly periodic payment and to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be computed or recomputed under subparagraph (B) with respect to the initial month in which the individual becomes eligible for such benefits.

"(B)(i) If paragraph (1) of this subsection would apply to such an individual (except for subparagraph (A) of this paragraph), there shall first be computed an amount equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under the preceding paragraphs of this subsection, except that for purposes of such computation the percentage of the individual's average indexed monthly earnings established by subparagraph (A)(i) of paragraph (1) shall be the percent specified in clause (ii). There shall then be computed (without regard to this paragraph) a second amount, which shall be equal to the individual's primary insurance amount under the preceding paragraphs of this subsection, except that such second amount shall be reduced by an amount equal to one-half of the portion of the monthly periodic payment which is attributable to noncovered service performed after 1956 (with such attribution being based on the proportionate number of years of such noncovered service) and to which the individual is entitled (or is deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his or her eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits. The individual's primary insurance amount shall be the larger of the two amounts computed under this subparagraph (before the application of subsection (i)) and shall be deemed to be computed under paragraph (1) of this subsection for the purpose of applying other provisions of this title.
"(ii) For purposes of clause (i), the percent specified in this clause is—

(I) 80.0 percent with respect to individuals who initially become eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits in 1986;

(II) 70.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible in 1987;

(III) 60.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible in 1988;

(IV) 50.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible in 1989; and

(V) 40.0 percent with respect to individuals who so become eligible in 1990 or thereafter.

(C)(i) Any periodic payment which otherwise meets the requirements of subparagraph (A), but which is paid on other than a monthly basis, shall be allocated on a basis equivalent to a monthly payment (as determined by the Secretary), and such equivalent monthly payment shall constitute a monthly periodic payment for purposes of this paragraph.

(ii) In the case of an individual who has elected to receive a periodic payment that has been reduced so as to provide a survivors benefit to any other individual, the payment shall be deemed to be increased (for purposes of any computation under this paragraph or subsection (d)(5)) by the amount of such reduction.

(iii) If an individual to whom subparagraph (A) applies is eligible for a periodic payment beginning with a month that is subsequent to the month in which he or she becomes eligible for old-age or disability insurance benefits, the amount of that payment (for purposes of subparagraph (B)) shall be deemed to be the amount to which he or she is, or is deemed to be, entitled (subject to clauses (i), (ii), and (iv) of this subparagraph) in such subsequent month.

(iv) For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'periodic payment' includes a payment payable in a lump sum if it is a commutation of, or a substitute for, periodic payments.

(D) This paragraph shall not apply in the case of an individual who has 30 years or more of coverage (as defined in paragraph (1)(C)(ii)). In the case of an individual who has more than 24 years of coverage but less than 30 years of coverage (as so defined), the percent specified in the applicable subdivision of subparagraph (B)(ii) shall (if such percent is smaller than the percent specified in whichever of the following clauses applies) be deemed to be—

(i) 80 percent, in the case of an individual who has 29 of such years of coverage;

(ii) 70 percent, in the case of an individual who has 28 of such years;

(iii) 60 percent, in the case of an individual who has 27 of such years; and

(iv) 50 percent, in the case of an individual who has 26 of such years.

(E) This paragraph shall not apply in the case of an individual who on January 1, 1984—

(i) is an employee performing service to which social security coverage is extended on that date solely by reason of the amendments made by section 101 of the Social Security Amendments of 1983; or

"(ii) is an employee of a nonprofit organization which (on December 31, 1983) did not have in effect a waiver certificate under section 3121(k) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and to the employees of which social security coverage is extended on that date solely by reason of the amendments made by section 102 of that Act, unless social security coverage had previously extended to service performed by such individual as an employee of that organization under a waiver certificate which was subsequently (prior to December 31, 1983) terminated."

(b) Section 215(d) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(5) In the case of an individual whose primary insurance amount is not computed under paragraph (1) of subsection (a) by reason of paragraph (4)(B)(ii) of that subsection, who—

"(A) attains age 62 after 1985 (except where he or she became entitled to a disability insurance benefit before 1986, and remained so entitled in any of the 12 months immediately preceding his or her attainment of age 62), or

"(B) would attain age 62 after 1985 and becomes eligible for a disability insurance benefit after 1985, and who first becomes eligible after 1985 for a monthly periodic payment (including a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(C), but excluding a payment under the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974 or 1937) which is based (in whole or in part) upon his or her earnings in noncovered service, the primary insurance amount of such individual during his or her concurrent entitlement to such monthly periodic payment and to old-age or disability insurance benefits shall be the primary insurance amount computed or recomputed under this subsection (without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)) reduced by an amount equal to the smaller of—

"(i) one-half of the primary insurance amount (computed without regard to this paragraph and before the application of subsection (i)), or

"(ii) one-half of the portion of the monthly periodic payment (or payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(C)) which is attributable to noncovered service performed after 1956 (with such attribution being based on the proportionate number of years of such noncovered service) and to which that individual is entitled (or is deemed to be entitled) for the initial month of his or her eligibility for old-age or disability insurance benefits.

This paragraph shall not apply in the case of any individual to whom subsection (a)(7) would not apply by reason of subparagraph (E) or the first sentence of subparagraph (D) thereof.

(c) Section 215(f) of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(9)(A) In the case of an individual who becomes entitled to a periodic payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(A) (including a payment determined under subsection (a)(7)(C)) in a month subsequent to the first month in which he or she becomes entitled to an old-age or disability insurance benefit, and whose primary insurance amount has been computed without regard to either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), such individual's primary insurance amount shall be recomputed, in accordance with either such subsection or subsection (d)(5), as may be applicable, effective with the first month of his or her concurrent entitlement to such benefit and such periodic payment.

"(B) If an individual's primary insurance amount has been computed under subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), and it becomes necessary to recompute that primary insurance amount under this subsection—

"(i) so as to increase the monthly benefit amount payable with respect to such primary insurance amount (except in the case of the individual's death), such increase shall be determined as though such primary insurance amount had initially been computed without regard to subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5), or

"(ii) by reason of the individual's death, such primary insurance amount shall be recomputed without regard to (and as though it had never been computed with regard to) subsection (a)(7) or (d)(5)."

(d) Sections 202(e)(2) and 202(f)(3) of such Act are each amended by striking out "section 215(f)(5) or (6)" wherever it appears and inserting in lieu thereof "section 215(f)(5), 215(f)(6), or 215(f)(9)(B)".

(b) Section 202(w) of such Act is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(6) For purposes of paragraph (1)(A), the 'applicable percentage' is—"(A) 1/12 of 1 percent in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance benefit in any calendar year before 1979;

"(B) 1/4 of 1 percent in the case of an individual who first becomes eligible for an old-age insurance benefit in any calendar year after 1978 and before 1987;

"(1) except as otherwise provided in this subsection, $25,000,

"(2) $32,000, in the case of a joint return, and

"(3) zero, in the case of a taxpayer who—

"(A) is married at the close of the taxable year (within the meaning of section 143) but does not file a joint return for such year, and

"(B) does not live apart from his spouse at all times during the taxable year.

"(d) SOCIAL SECURITY BENEFIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term 'social security benefit' means any amount received by the taxpayer by reason of entitlement to—

"(B) Denial of deduction.—If (but for this subparagraph) any portion of the repayments referred to in subparagraph (A) would have been allowable as a deduction for the taxable year under section 165, such portion shall be allowable as a deduction only to the extent it exceeds the social security benefits received by the taxpayer during the taxable year (and not repaid during such taxable year).

"(3) Workmen's compensation benefits substituted for social security benefits.—For purposes of this section, if, by reason of section 224 of the Social Security Act (or by reason of section 3(a)(1) of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1974), any social security benefit is reduced by reason of the receipt of a benefit under a workmen's compensation act, the term 'social security benefit' includes that portion of such benefit received under the workmen's compensation act which equals such reduction.

PART B—PROVISIONS RELATING TO INTEREST AND CREDIT REDUCTIONS

DEFERRAL OF INTEREST

Sec. 511. (a) Section 1202(b) of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"(8)(A) With respect to interest due under this section on September 30 of 1983, 1984, or 1985 (other than interest previously deferred under paragraph (3)(B)), a State may pay 80 percent of such interest in four annual installments of at least 20 percent beginning with the year after the year in which it is otherwise due, if such State meets the criteria of subparagraph (B). No interest shall accrue on such deferred interest.

"(B) To meet the criteria of this subparagraph a State must—

"(i) have taken no action since October 1, 1982, which would reduce its net unemployment tax effort or the net solvency of its unemployment system (as determined for purposes of section 3302(f) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954); and

"(ii)(I) have taken an action (as certified by the Secretary of Labor) after March 31, 1982, which would have increased revenue liabilities and decreased benefits under the State's unemployment compensation system (hereinafter referred to as a 'solvency effort') by a combined total of the applicable percentage (as compared to such revenues and benefits as would have been in effect without such State action) for the calendar year for which the deferral is requested; or

"(II) have had, for taxable year 1982, an average unemployment tax rate which was equal to or greater than 2.0 percent of the total of the wages (as determined without any limitation on amount) attributable to such State subject to contribution under the State unemployment compensation law with respect to such taxable years.

In the case of the first year for which there is a deferral (over a 4-year period) of the interest otherwise payable for such year, the applicable percentage shall be 25 percent. In the case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall be 35 percent. In the case of the second such year, the applicable percentage shall be 50 percent.

"(C)(I) The base year is the first year for which deferral under this provision is requested and subsequently granted. The Secretary of Labor shall estimate the unemployment rate for the base year. To determine whether a State meets the requirements of subparagraph (B)(ii)(I), the Secretary of Labor shall determine the percentage by which the benefits and taxes in the base year with the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii)(I) are lower or greater, as the case may be, than such benefits and taxes would have been without the application of such action. In making this determination, the Secretary shall deem the application of the action referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii)(I) to have been effective for the base year to the same extent as such action is effective for the year following the year for which the deferral is sought. Once a deferral is approved under clause (ii)(I) of subparagraph (B) a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so shall result in the State being required to make immediate payment of all deferred interest.

"(ii) Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 or increases after 1984 in the maximum tax rate to 5.4 percent shall not be counted for purposes of meeting the requirement of subparagraph (B).

"(D) In the case of a State which produces a solvency effort of 50 percent, 80 percent, and 90 percent rather than the 25 percent, 35 percent, 50 percent required under subparagraph (B), the interest shall be computed at an interest rate which is 1 percentage point less than the otherwise applicable interest rate.

"(9) Any interest otherwise due from a State on September 30 of a calendar year after 1982 may be deferred (and no interest shall accrue on such deferred interest) for a grace period of not to exceed 9 months if, for the most recent 12-month period for which data are available before the date such interest is otherwise due, the State had an average total unemployment rate of 13.5 percent or greater."

(b) Section 1202(b)(7) of such Act is amended by striking out ", and before January 1, 1988":

(c) Section 1202(b)(3)(C)(i) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking the matter that follows clause (II) and inserting "No interest shall accrue on deferred interest."

TITLE VI—PROSPECTIVE PAYMENTS FOR MEDICARE INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES

MEDICARE PAYMENTS FOR INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES ON THE BASIS OF PROSPECTIVE RATES

Sec. 601. (a)(1) Subsection (a)(1) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

“(D) Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.”.

(2) Subsection (a)(4) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: “Such term does not include costs of approved educational activities, or, with respect to costs incurred in cost reporting periods beginning prior to October 1, 1986, capital related costs, as defined by the Secretary.”.

(3) It is the intent of Congress that, in considering the implementation of a system for including capital-related costs under a prospectively determined payment rate for inpatient hospital services, costs related to capital projects for which expenditures are obligated on or after the effective date of the implementation of such system, may or may not be distinguished and treated differently from costs of projects for which expenditures were obligated before such date.

(b) Section 1886(b) of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking out “Notwithstanding sections 1814(b), but subject to the provisions of sections” in paragraph (1) and inserting in lieu thereof “Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section.”;

(2) by inserting “(other than a subsection (d) hospital, as defined in subsection (d)(1)(B))” in the matter before subparagraph (A) of paragraph (1) after “of a hospital”;

(3) by inserting, in the matter in paragraph (1) following subparagraph (B), “(other than on the basis of a DRG prospective payment rate determined under subsection (d))” after “payable under this title”;

(4) by repealing paragraph (2);

(5) by inserting “and subsection (d) and except as provided in subsection (e)” in paragraph (3)(B) after “subparagraph (A)”;

(6) by inserting “or fiscal year” after “cost reporting period” each place it appears in paragraph (3)(B);

(7) by inserting “before the beginning of the period or year” in paragraph (3)(B) after “estimated by the Secretary”;

(8) by striking out “exceeds” in paragraph (3)(B) and inserting in lieu thereof “will exceed”; and

(9) by amending paragraph (6), effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982, to read as follows:

“(6) In the case of any hospital which becomes subject to the taxes under section 3111 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, with respect to any or all of its employees, for part or all of a cost reporting period, and was not subject to such taxes with respect to any or all of its employees for all or part of the 12-month base cost reporting period referred to in subsection (b)(3)(A)(i), the Secretary shall provide for an adjustment by increasing the base period amount described in such subsection for such hospital by an amount equal to the amount of such taxes which would have been paid or accrued by such hospital for such base period if such hospital had been subject to such taxes for all of such base period with respect to all its employees, minus the amount of any such taxes actually paid or accrued for such base period."

(c)(1) Subsection (c)(1) of such section is amended—
(A) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B),
(B) by striking out the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof; and
(C) by adding at the end the following:
"(D) the Secretary determines that the system will not preclude an eligible organization (as defined in section 1876(b)) from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to the organization's rate of payment for inpatient hospital services; and
"(E) the Secretary determines that the system requires hospitals to meet the requirement of section 1866(a)(1)(G) and the system provides for the exclusion of certain costs in accordance with section 1862(a)(14) (except for such waivers thereof as the Secretary provides by regulation)."

The Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's hospital reimbursement control system is based on a payment methodology other than on the basis of a diagnosis-related group or on the ground that the amount of payments made under this title under such system must be less than the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining payment amounts at no more than a specified percentage increase above the payment amounts in a base period, the State has the option of applying such test (for inpatient hospital services under part A) on an aggregate payment basis or on the basis of the amount of payment per inpatient discharge or admission. If the Secretary determines that the conditions described in subparagraph (C) are based on maintaining aggregate payment amounts below a national average percentage increase in total payments under part A for inpatient hospital services, the Secretary cannot deny the application of a State under this subsection on the ground that the State's rate of increase in such payments for such services must be less than such national average rate of increase."

(2) Subsection (c)(3) of such section is amended—
(A) by striking out "requirement of paragraph (1)(A)" and inserting in lieu thereof "requirements of subparagraphs (A), (D), and (E) of paragraph (1) and, if applicable, the requirements of paragraph (5)"; and
(B) by inserting "(or, if applicable, in paragraph (5))" in subparagraph (B) after "paragraph (1)".

(3) Subsection (c) of such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:
"(4) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—

(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system, and

(B) with respect to that system a waiver of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act has been approved on or before (and which is in effect as of) the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983, pursuant to section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972.

With respect to a State system described in this paragraph, the Secretary shall judge the effectiveness of such system on the basis of its rate of increase or inflation in inpatient hospital payments for individuals under this title, as compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments, with the State retaining the option to have the test applied on the basis of the aggregate payment or payments per inpatient admission or discharge during the three cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, after which such test, at the option of the Secretary, shall no longer apply, and such State systems shall be treated in the same manner as under other waivers.

"(5) The Secretary shall approve the request of a State under paragraph (1) with respect to a hospital reimbursement control system if—

(A) the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), and (E) of paragraph (1) have been met with respect to the system;

(B) the Secretary determines that the system—

(i) is operated directly by the State or by an entity designated pursuant to State law,

(ii) provides for payment of hospitals covered under the system under a methodology (which sets forth exceptions and adjustments, as well as any method for changes in the methodology) by which rates or amounts to be paid for hospital services during a specified period are established under the system prior to the defined rate period, and

(iii) hospitals covered under the system will make such reports (in lieu of cost and other reports, identified by the Secretary, otherwise required under this title) as the Secretary may require in order to properly monitor assurances provided under this subsection;

(C) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that operation of the system will not result in any change in hospital admission practices which result in—

(i) a significant reduction in the proportion of patients (receiving hospital services covered under the system) who have no third-party coverage and who are unable to pay for hospital services,

(ii) a significant reduction in the proportion of individuals admitted to hospitals for inpatient hospital services for which payment is (or is likely to be) less than the anticipated charges for or costs of such services,
(iii) the refusal to admit patients who would be expected to require unusually costly or prolonged treatment for reasons other than those related to the appropriateness of the care available at the hospital, or

(iv) the refusal to provide emergency services to any person who is in need of emergency services if the hospital provides such services;

(D) any change by the State in the system which has the effect of materially reducing payments to hospitals can only take effect upon 60 days notice to the Secretary and to the hospitals the payment to which is likely to be materially affected by the change; and

(E) the State has provided the Secretary with satisfactory assurances that in the development of the system the State has consulted with local governmental officials concerning the impact of the system on public hospitals.

The Secretary shall respond to requests of States under this paragraph within 60 days of the date the request is submitted to the Secretary.

(6) If the Secretary determines that the assurances described in paragraph (1)(C) have not been met with respect to any 36-month period, the Secretary may reduce payments under this title to hospitals under the system in an amount equal to the amount by which the payments under this title under such system for such period exceeded the amount of payments which would otherwise have been made under this title not using such system.

(d) Subsection (d) of such section, as added by section 110 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982, is amended—

(1) by striking out "section 1814(b)" in paragraph (2)(A) and inserting in lieu thereof "subsection (b)"; and

(2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection (j) and transferring and inserting such subsection at the end of section 1814 of the Social Security Act under the following heading:

"ELIMINATION OF LESSER-OF-COST-OR-CHARGES PROVISION".

(e) Such section 1886 is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsections:

"(d)(1) Notwithstanding section 1814(b) but subject to the provisions of section 1813, the amount of the payment with respect to the operating costs of inpatient hospital services (as defined in subsection (a)(4)) of a subsection (d) hospital (as defined in subparagraph (B)) for inpatient hospital discharges in a cost reporting period or in a fiscal year—

(i) beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, is equal to the sum of—

(I) the target percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the hospital's target amount for the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(A), but determined without the application of subsection (a)), and

(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (2) for such discharges;
"(ii) beginning on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1986, is equal to the sum of—

"(I) the target percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the hospital's target amount for the cost reporting period (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(A), but determined without the application of subsection (a)), and

"(II) the DRG percentage (as defined in subparagraph (C)) of the applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under subparagraph (D) for such discharges; or

"(iii) beginning on or after October 1, 1986, is equal to the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges.

(B) As used in this section, the term 'subsection (d) hospital' means a hospital located in one of the fifty States or the District of Columbia other than—

"(i) a psychiatric hospital (as defined in section 1861(f)),

"(ii) a rehabilitation hospital (as defined by the Secretary),

"(iii) a hospital whose inpatients are predominantly individuals under 18 years of age, or

"(iv) a hospital which has an average inpatient length of stay (as determined by the Secretary) of greater than 25 days;

and, in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, does not include a psychiatric or rehabilitation unit of the hospital which is a distinct part of the hospital (as defined by the Secretary).

(C) For purposes of this subsection, for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

"(i) on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1984, the 'target percentage' is 75 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 25 percent;

"(ii) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, the 'target percentage' is 50 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 50 percent; and

"(iii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, the 'target percentage' is 25 percent and the 'DRG percentage' is 75 percent.

(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii)(II), the 'applicable combined adjusted DRG prospective payment rate' for cost reporting periods beginning, or discharges occurring—

"(i) on or after October 1, 1984, and before October 1, 1985, is a combined rate consisting of 25 percent of the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, and 75 percent of the regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges; and

"(ii) on or after October 1, 1985, and before October 1, 1986, is a combined rate consisting of 50 percent of the national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, and 50 percent of the regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, determined under paragraph (3) for such discharges.

(2) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges in each region, for which payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such rate shall be determined for hospitals located in urban or rural areas within the United States or within each such region, respectively, as follows:

"(A) Determining allowable individual hospital costs for base period. — The Secretary shall determine the allowable operating costs per discharge of inpatient hospital services for the hospital for the most recent cost reporting period for which data are available.

"(B) Updating for fiscal year 1984. — The Secretary shall update each amount determined under subparagraph (A) for fiscal year 1984 by—

"(i) updating for fiscal year 1983 by the estimated average rate of change of hospital costs industry-wide between the cost reporting period used under such subparagraph and fiscal year 1983 and the most recent case-mix data available, and

"(ii) projecting for fiscal year 1984 by the applicable percentage increase (as defined in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for fiscal year 1984.

"(C) Standardizing amounts. — The Secretary shall standardize the amount updated under subparagraph (B) for each hospital by—

"(i) excluding an estimate of indirect medical education costs,

"(ii) adjusting for variations among hospitals by area and region in the average hospital wage level, and

"(iii) adjusting for variations in case mix among hospitals.

"(D) Computing urban and rural averages. — The Secretary shall compute an average of the standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (C) for the United States and for each region—

"(i) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in an urban area within the United States or that region, respectively, and

"(ii) for all subsection (d) hospitals located in a rural area within the United States or that region, respectively.

For purposes of this subsection, the term 'region' means one of the nine census divisions, comprising the fifty States and the District of Columbia, established by the Bureau of the Census for statistical and reporting purposes; the term 'urban area' means an area within a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area (as defined by the Office of Management and Budget) or within such similar area as the Secretary has recognized under subsection (a) by regulation; and the term 'rural area' means any area outside such an area or similar area.

"(E) Reducing for value of outlier payments. — The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (D) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment rates which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(F) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(G) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS IN THE UNITED STATES AND IN EACH REGION.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish a national DRG prospective payment rate and shall establish a regional DRG prospective payment rate for each region, each of which is equal—

"(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or in that region respectively, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

"(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or that region respectively, to the product of—

"(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (D), reduced under subparagraph (E), and adjusted under subparagraph (F)) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or that region, and

"(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(H) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals' costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the national and regional DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (G) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national average hospital wage level.

"(3) The Secretary shall determine a national adjusted DRG prospective payment rate, for each inpatient hospital discharge in a fiscal year after fiscal year 1984 involving inpatient hospital services of a subsection (d) hospital in the United States, and shall determine a regional adjusted DRG prospective payment rate for such discharges in each region for which payment may be made under part A of this title. Each such rate shall be determined for hospitals located in urban or rural areas within the United States and within each such region, respectively, as follows:

"(A) UPDATING PREVIOUS STANDARDIZED AMOUNTS.—The Secretary shall compute an average standardized amount for hospitals located in an urban area and for hospitals located in a rural area within the the United States and for hospitals located in an urban area and for hospitals located in a rural area within each region, equal to the respective average standardized amount computed for the previous fiscal year under paragraph (2)(D) or under this subparagraph, increased for fiscal year 1985 by the applicable percentage increase under subsection (b)(3)(B), and adjusted for subsequent fiscal years in accordance with the final determination of the Secretary under subsection (e)(4), and adjusted to reflect the most recent case-mix data available.

"(B) REDUCING FOR VALUE OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS.—The Secretary shall reduce each of the average standardized amounts determined under subparagraph (A) by a proportion equal to the proportion (estimated by the Secretary) of the amount of payments under this subsection based on DRG prospective payment amounts which are additional payments described in paragraph (5)(A) (relating to outlier payments).

"(C) MAINTAINING BUDGET NEUTRALITY.—The Secretary shall adjust each of such average standardized amounts as may be required under subsection (e)(1)(B) for that fiscal year.

"(D) COMPUTING DRG-SPECIFIC RATES FOR URBAN AND RURAL HOSPITALS.—For each discharge classified within a diagnosis-related group, the Secretary shall establish for the fiscal year a national DRG prospective payment rate and shall establish a regional DRG prospective payment rate, for each region, each of which is equal—

"(i) for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or that region (respectively), to the product of—
  "(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in an urban area in the United States or that region, and
  "(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group; and

"(ii) for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or that region (respectively), to the product of—
  "(I) the average standardized amount (computed under subparagraph (A), reduced under subparagraph (B), and adjusted under subparagraph (C)) for the fiscal year for hospitals located in a rural area in the United States or that region, and
  "(II) the weighting factor (determined under paragraph (4)(B)) for that diagnosis-related group.

"(E) ADJUSTING FOR DIFFERENT AREA WAGE LEVELS.—The Secretary shall adjust the proportion (as estimated by the Secretary from time to time) of hospitals' costs which are attributable to wages and wage-related costs, of the DRG prospective payment rates computed under subparagraph (D) for area differences in hospital wage levels by a factor (established by the Secretary) reflecting the relative hospital wage level in the geographic area of the hospital compared to the national average hospital wage level.

"(4)(A) The Secretary shall establish a classification of inpatient hospital discharges by diagnosis-related groups and a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges within these groups.

"(B) For each such diagnosis-related group the Secretary shall assign an appropriate weighting factor which reflects the relative hospital resources used with respect to discharges classified within that group compared to discharges classified within other groups.

"(C) The Secretary shall adjust the classifications and weighting factors established under subparagraphs (A) and (B), for discharges in fiscal year 1986 and at least every four fiscal years thereafter to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources.

"(D) The Commission (established under subsection (e)(2)) shall consult with and make recommendations to the Secretary with respect to the need for adjustments under subparagraph (C), based upon its evaluation of scientific evidence with respect to new practices, including the use of new technologies and treatment modalities. The Commission shall report to the Congress with respect to its evaluation of any adjustments made by the Secretary under subparagraph (C).

"(E)(i) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment for a subsection (d) hospital for any discharge in a diagnosis-related group, the length of stay of which exceeds the mean length of stay for discharges within that group by a fixed number of days, or exceeds such mean length of stay by some fixed number of standard deviations, whichever is the fewer number of days.

"(ii) For cases which are not included in clause (i), a subsection (d) hospital may request additional payments in any case where charges, adjusted to cost, exceed a fixed multiple of the applicable DRG prospective payment rate, or exceed such other fixed dollar amount, whichever is greater.

"(iii) The amount of such additional payment under clauses (i) and (ii) shall be determined by the Secretary and shall approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the cutoff point applicable under clause (i) or (ii).

"(iv) The total amount of the additional payments made under this subparagraph for discharges in a fiscal year may not be less than 5 percent nor more than 6 percent of the total payments projected or estimated to be made based on DRG prospective payment rates for discharges in that year.

"(B) The Secretary shall provide for an additional payment amount for subsection (d) hospitals with indirect costs of medical education, in an amount computed in the same manner as the adjustment for such costs under regulations (in effect as of January 1, 1983) under subsection (a)(2), except that in the computation under this subparagraph the Secretary shall use an educational adjustment factor equal to twice the factor provided under such regulations.

"(C)(i) The Secretary shall provide for such exceptions and adjustments to the payment amounts established under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of regional and national referral centers (including those hospitals of 500 or more beds located in rural areas), and of public or other hospitals that serve a significantly disproportionate number of patients who have low income or are entitled to benefits under part A of this title.

"(ii) With respect to a subsection (d) hospital which is a 'sole community hospital', payment under paragraph (I)(A) for any cost reporting period or fiscal year beginning on or after October 1, 1984, shall be determined under the formula provided in clause (i) of that paragraph (except that any reference to paragraph (2) shall be deemed, for this purpose, a reference to paragraph (3)). In the case of a sole community hospital that experiences, in a cost reporting period (beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986) compared to the previous cost reporting period, a decrease of more than 5 percent in its total number of inpatient cases due to circumstances beyond its control, the Secretary shall provide for such adjustment to the payment amounts under this subsection as may be necessary to fully compensate the hospital for the fixed costs it incurs in the period in providing inpatient hospital services, including the reasonable cost of maintaining necessary core staff and services. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term 'sole community hospital' means a hospital that, by reason of factors such as isolated location, weather conditions, travel conditions, or absence of other hospitals (as determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient hospital services reasonably available to individuals in a geographical area who are entitled to benefits under part A.

(iii) The Secretary shall provide by regulation for such other exceptions and adjustments to such payment amounts under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate (including exceptions and adjustments that may be appropriate with respect to hospitals involved extensively in treatment for and research on cancer).

(iv) The Secretary may provide for such adjustments to the payment amounts under this subsection as the Secretary deems appropriate to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii.

(D)(i) The Secretary shall estimate the amount of reimbursement made for services described in section 1862(a)(14) with respect to which payment was made under part B in the base reporting periods referred to in paragraph (2)(A) and with respect to which payment is no longer being made.

(ii) The Secretary shall provide for an adjustment to the payment for subsection (d) hospitals in each fiscal year so as appropriately to reflect the net amount described in clause (i).

(6) The Secretary shall provide for publication in the Federal Register, on or before the September 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1984), of a description of the methodology and data used in computing the adjusted DRG prospective payment rates under this subsection, including any adjustments required under subsection (e)(1)(B).

(7) There shall be no administrative or judicial review under section 1878 or otherwise of—

(A) the determination of the requirement, or the proportional amount, of any adjustment effected pursuant to subsection (e)(1), and

(B) the establishment of diagnosis-related groups, of the methodology for the classification of discharges within such groups, and of the appropriate weighting factors thereof under paragraph (4).

(e)(1)(A) For cost reporting periods of hospitals beginning in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide for such proportional adjustment in the applicable percentage increase (otherwise applicable to the periods under subsection (b)(3)(B)) as may be necessary to assure that—

"(i) the aggregate payment amounts otherwise provided under subsection (d)(1)(A)(i)(II) for that fiscal year for operating costs of inpatient hospital services of hospitals (excluding payments made under section 1866(a)(1)(F)), are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the target percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983 (excluding payments made under section 1866(a)(1)(F));

except that the adjustment made under this subparagraph shall apply only to subsection (d) hospitals and shall not apply for purposes of making computations under subsection (d)(2)(B)(ii) or subsection (d)(3)(A).

"(B) For discharges occurring in fiscal year 1984 or fiscal year 1985, the Secretary shall provide under subsections (d)(2)(F) and (d)(3)(C) for such equal proportional adjustment in each of the average standardized amounts otherwise computed for that fiscal year as may be necessary to assure that—are not greater or less than—

"(ii) the DRG percentage (as defined in subsection (d)(1)(C)) of the payment amounts which would have been payable for such services for those same hospitals for that fiscal year under this section under the law as in effect before the date of the enactment of the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983 (excluding payments made under section 1866(a)(1)(F)).

"(B) The Director of the Congressional Office of Technology Assessment (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Director' and the 'Office', respectively) shall provide for appointment of a Prospective Payment Assessment Commission (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'Commission'), to be composed of independent experts selected by the Director. In addition to carrying out its functions under subsection (d)(4)(D), the Commission shall review the applicable percentage increase factor described in subsection (b)(3)(B) and make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate percentage change which should be effected for hospital inpatient discharges under subsections (b) and (d) for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1986. In making its recommendations, the Commission shall take into account changes in the hospital market-basket described in subsection (b)(3)(B), hospital productivity, technological and scientific advances, the quality of health care provided in hospitals (including the quality and skill level of professional nursing required to maintain quality care), and long-term cost-effectiveness in the provision of inpatient hospital services.

"(B) The Commission, not later than the April 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986), shall report its recommendations to the Secretary on an appropriate change factor which should be used (instead of the applicable percentage increase described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for inpatient hospital services for discharges in that fiscal year.

"(4) Taking into consideration the recommendations of the Commission, the Secretary shall determine for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986) the percentage change which will apply for purposes of this section as the applicable percentage increase (otherwise described in subsection (b)(3)(B)) for discharges in that fiscal year, and which will take into account amounts necessary for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

"(5) The Secretary shall cause to have published for public comment in the Federal Register, not later than—

"(A) the June 1 before each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 1986), the Secretary's proposed determination under paragraph (4) for that fiscal year, and

"(B) the September 1 before such fiscal year after such consideration of public comment on the proposal as is feasible in the time available, the Secretary's final determination under such paragraph for that year.

The Secretary shall include in the publication referred to in subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year the report of the Commission's recommendations submitted under paragraph (3) for that fiscal year.

"(6)(A) The Commission shall consist of 15 individuals. Members of the Commission shall first be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a term of three years, except that the Director may provide initially for such shorter terms as will insure that (on a continuing basis) the terms of no more than seven members expire in any one year.

"(B) The membership of the Commission shall provide expertise and experience in the provision and financing of health care, including but not limited to physicians and registered professional nurses, employers, third party payors, individuals skilled in the conduct and interpretation of biomedical, health services, and health economics research, and individuals having expertise in the research and development of technological and scientific advances in health care. The Director shall seek nominations from a wide range of groups, including but not limited to—

"(i) national organizations representing physicians, including medical specialty organizations and registered professional nurses and other skilled health professionals;

"(ii) national organizations representing hospitals, including teaching hospitals;

"(iii) national organizations representing manufacturers of health care products; and

"(iv) national organizations representing the business community, health benefit programs, labor, and the elderly.

"(C) Subject to such review as the Office deems necessary to assure the efficient administration of the Commission, the Commission may—

"(i) employ and fix the compensation of such personnel (not to exceed 25) as may be necessary to carry out its duties;
“(ii) seek such assistance and support as may be required in the performance of its duties from appropriate Federal departments and agencies;
“(iii) enter into contracts or make other arrangements, as may be necessary for the conduct of the work of the Commission;
“(iv) make advance, progress, and other payments which relate to the work of the Commission;
“(v) provide transportation and subsistence for persons serving without compensation; and “(vi) prescribe such rules and regulations as it deems necessary with respect to the internal organization and operation of the Commission.

“(D) While serving on the business of the Commission (including traveltime), a member of the Commission shall be entitled to compensation at the per diem equivalent of the rate provided for level IV of the Executive Schedule under section 5315 of title 5, United States Code; and while so serving away from home and his regular place of business, a member may be allowed travel expenses, as authorized by the Chairman of the Commission.

“(E) In order to identify medically appropriate patterns of health resources use in accordance with paragraph (2), the Commission shall collect and assess information on medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of hospitalization and on other patient-care data, giving special attention to treatment patterns for conditions which appear to involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not adding to the quality of care provided. In order to assess the safety, efficacy, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing medical and surgical procedures, the Commission shall, in coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, collect and assess factual information, giving special attention to the needs of updating existing diagnosis-related groups, establishing new diagnosis-related groups, and making recommendations on relative weighting factors for such groups to reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in delivering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting and assessing information, the Commission shall—

“(ii) carry out, or award grants or contracts for, original research and experimentation, including clinical research, where existing information is inadequate for the development of useful and valid guidelines by the Commission; and
“(iii) adopt procedures allowing any interested party to submit information with respect to medical and surgical procedures and services (including new practices, such as the use of new technologies and treatment modalities), which information the Commission shall consider in making reports and recommendations to the Secretary and Congress.

“(F) The Commission shall have access to such relevant information and data as may be available from appropriate Federal agencies and shall assure that its activities, especially the conduct of original research and medical studies, are coordinated with the activities of Federal agencies.

"(G)(i) The Office shall report annually to the Congress on the functioning and progress of the Commission and on the status of the assessment of medical procedures and services by the Commission.

"(ii) The Office shall have unrestricted access to all deliberations, records, and data of the Commission, immediately upon its request.

"(iii) In order to carry out its duties under this paragraph, the Office is authorized to expend reasonable and necessary funds as mutually agreed upon by the Office and the Commission. The Office shall be reimbursed for such funds by the Commission from the appropriations made with respect to the Commission.

"(H) The Commission shall be subject to periodic audit by the General Accounting Office.

"(I)(i) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this paragraph.

"(ii) Eighty-five percent of such appropriation shall be payable from the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund, and 15 percent of such appropriation shall be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund.

"(f)(1) The Secretary shall maintain, for a period ending not earlier than September 30, 1988, a system for the reporting of costs of hospitals receiving payments computed under subsection (d).

"(2) If the Secretary determines, based upon information supplied by a utilization and quality control peer review organization under part B of title XI, that a hospital, in order to circumvent the payment method established under subsection (b) or (d) of this section, has taken an action that results in the admission of individuals entitled to benefits under part A unnecessarily, unnecessary multiple admissions of the same such individuals, or other inappropriate medical or other practices with respect to such individuals, the Secretary may—

"(A) deny payment (in whole or in part) under part A with respect to inpatient hospital services provided with respect to such an unnecessary admission (or subsequent admission of the same individual), or

"(B) require the hospital to take other corrective action necessary to prevent or correct the inappropriate practice.

"(3) The provisions of paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of section 1862(d) shall apply to determinations under paragraph (2) of this subsection in the same manner as they apply to determinations made under section 1862(d)(1).

"(g)(1) If the Congress does not enact legislation, after the date of the enactment of this subsection and before October 1, 1986, respecting the payment under this title for capital-related costs for inpatient hospital services, no payment may be made under this title for capital-related costs of capital expenditures (as defined in section 1122(g) and except as provided in section 1122(j)) for inpatient hospital services in a State, which expenditures are obligated after September 30, 1986, unless the State has an agreement with the Secretary under section 1122(b) and under the agreement the State has recommended approval of the capital expenditures.
"(2) The Secretary shall provide that the amount which is allowable, with respect to reasonable costs of inpatient hospital services for which payment may be made under this title, for a return on equity capital for hospitals shall, for cost reporting periods beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this subsection, be equal to amounts otherwise allowable under regulations in effect on March 1, 1983, except that the rate of return to be recognized shall be equal to the average of the rates of interest, for each of the months any part of which is included in the reporting period, on obligations issued for purchase by the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund."

(f) Section 1862(a)(1) of the Social Security Act is amended—

(1) by striking out "(B) or (C)" and inserting in lieu thereof "(B), (C), or (D)";
(2) by striking out "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);
(3) by striking out the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting in lieu thereof a comma and "and"; and
(4) by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) in the case of clinical care items and services provided with the concurrence of the Secretary and with respect to research and experimentation conducted by, or under contract with, the Prospective Payment Assessment Commission or the Secretary, which are not reasonable and necessary to carry out the purposes of section 1886(e)(6)."

(g) In determining whether a hospital is in an urban or rural area for purposes of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall classify any hospital, located in New England as being located in an urban area if such hospital was classified as being located in an urban area under the Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area system of classification in effect in 1979.

Any such waiver shall provide that such billing may continue to be made under part B of such title but that the payments to such hospital under part A of such title shall be reduced by the amount of the billings for such services under part B of such title. If such a waiver is granted, at the end of the waiver period the Secretary may provide for such methods of payments under part A as is appropriate, given the organizational structure of the institution.

REPORTS, EXPERIMENTS, AND DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS

Sec. 603. (a)(1) The Secretary of Health and Human Services (hereinafter in this title referred to as the "Secretary") shall study, develop, and report to the Congress within 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act on the method and proposals for legislation by which capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be included within the prospective payment amounts computed under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act.

(2)(A) The Secretary shall study and report annually to the Congress at the end of each year (beginning with 1984 and ending with 1987) on the impact, of the payment methodology under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act during the previous year, classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, and other payors for inpatient hospital services, and other providers, and, in particular, on the impact of computing DRG prospective payment rates by census division, rather than exclusively on a national basis. Each such report shall include such recommendations for such changes in legislation as the Secretary deems appropriate.

(B) During fiscal year 1984, the Secretary shall begin the collection of data necessary to compute the amount of physician charges attributable, by diagnosis-related groups, to physicians’ services furnished to inpatients of hospitals whose discharges are classified within those groups. The Secretary shall include, in a report to Congress in 1985, recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for determining the amount of the payments for physicians’ services furnished to hospital inpatients based on the DRG type classification of the discharges of those inpatients, and legislative recommendations thereon.

(C) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) for 1985, the Secretary shall include the results of studies on—

(i) the feasibility and impact of eliminating or phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospective payment rates under paragraph (3) of section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act;

(ii) whether and the method under which hospitals, not paid based on amounts determined under such section, can be paid for inpatient hospital services on a prospective basis as under such section;

(iii) the appropriateness of the factors used under paragraph (5)(A) of such section to compensate hospitals for the additional expenses of outlier cases, and the application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or other modifications to the diagnosis-related groups, and the advisability and feasibility of providing for such modifications;

(iv) the feasibility and desirability of applying the payment methodology under such section to payment by all payors for inpatient hospital services; and

(v) the impact of such section on hospital admissions and the feasibility of making a volume adjustment in the DRG prospective payment rates or requiring preadmission certification in order to minimize the incentive to increase admissions.

Such report shall specifically include, with respect to the item described in clause (iv), consideration of the extent of cost-shifting to non-Federal payors and the impact of such cost-shifting on health insurance costs and premiums borne by employers and employees.

(D) In the annual report to Congress under subparagraph (A) for 1986, the Secretary shall include the results of a study examining the overall impact of State systems of hospital payment (either approved under section 1886(c) of the Social Security Act or under a waiver approved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, particularly assessing such systems' impact not only on the medicare program but also on the medicaid program, on payments and premiums under private health insurance plans, and on tax expenditures.

(3)(A) The Secretary shall complete a study and make legislative recommendations to the Congress with respect to an equitable method of reimbursing sole community hospitals which takes into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy.

(B) In addition, the Secretary shall examine ways to coordinate an information transfer between parts A and B of title XVIII of the Social Security Act, particularly with respect to those cases where a denial of coverage is made under part A of such title, and no adjustment is made in the reimbursement to the admitting physician or physicians.

(C) The Secretary shall also report on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs, and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals located in rural areas.

(D) The Secretary shall also report on the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the cost of care to patients financed by both public programs and private payors.

(E) The studies and reports described in this paragraph shall be completed and submitted not later than April 1, 1985.

(4) The Secretary shall complete a study and make recommendations to the Congress, before April 1, 1984, with respect to a method for including hospitals located outside of the fifty States and the District of Columbia under a prospective payment system.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), the amendments made by this title shall not affect the authority of the Secretary to develop, carry out, or continue experiments and demonstration projects.

(2) The Secretary shall provide that, upon the request of a State which has a demonstration project (or upon the request of a party to demonstration project agreement), for payment of hospitals under title XVIII of the Social Security Act approved under section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967 or section 222(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1972, which (A) is in effect as of March 1, 1983, and (B) was entered into after August 1982, the terms of the demonstration agreement shall be modified so that the demonstration project is not required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in medicare hospital costs.

(c) The Secretary shall approve, with appropriate terms and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act—

(1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior Health Services (according to terms and conditions as specified by the Secretary), dated July 2, 1982, for waivers, pursuant to section 222 of the Social Security Amendments of 1972 and section 402(a) of the Social Security Amendments of 1967, of certain requirements of title XVIII of the Social Security Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term care demonstration project, and the application of the Department of Health Services, State of California, dated November 1, 1982, pursuant to section 1115 of the Social Security Act, for the waiver of certain requirements of title XIX of such Act over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a demonstration project for capitated reimbursement for comprehensive long-term care services involving On Lok Senior Health Services.

(d) The Secretary shall conduct demonstrations with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of skilled nursing facilities to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or methods of payment.

EFFECTIVE DATES

SEC. 604. (a)(1) Except as provided in section 602(l) and in paragraph (2), the amendments made by the preceding provisions of this title apply to items and services furnished by or under arrangements with a hospital beginning with its first cost reporting period that begins on or after October 1, 1983. A change in a hospital's cost reporting period that has been made after November 1982 shall be recognized for purposes of this section only if the Secretary finds good cause for that change.

(2) Section 1866(a)(1)(F) of the Social Security Act (as added by section 602(f)(1)(C) of this title), section 1862(a)(4) (as added by section 602(e)(3) of this title) and sections 1886(a)(1)(G) and (H) of such Act (as added by section 602(f)(1)(C) of this title) take effect on October 1, 1983.

(b) The Secretary shall make an appropriate reduction in the payment amount under section 1886(d) of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) for any discharge, if the admission has occurred before a hospital’s first cost reporting period that begins after September 1983, to take into account amounts payable under title XVIII of that Act (as in effect before the date of the enactment of this Act) for items and services furnished before that period.

(c)(1) The Secretary shall cause to be published in the Federal Register a notice of the interim final DRG prospective payment rates established under subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as amended by this title) no later than September 1, 1983, and allow for a period of public comment thereon. Payment on the basis of prospective rates shall become effective on October 1, 1983, without the necessity for consideration of comments received, but the Secretary shall, by notice published in the Federal Register, affirm or modify the amounts by December 31, 1983, after considering those comments.

(2) A modification under paragraph (1) that reduces a prospective payment rate shall apply only to discharges occurring after 30 days after the date the notice of the modification is published in the Federal Register.

(3) Rules to implement subsection (d) of section 1886 of the Social Security Act (as so amended) shall be established in accordance with the procedure described in this subsection.
DELAY IN PROVISION RELATING TO HOSPITAL-BASED SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES

Sec. 605. (a) Section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 is amended by striking out "October 1, 1982" and inserting in lieu thereof "October 1, 1983".

(b) The Secretary of Health and Human Services shall, prior to December 31, 1983, complete a study and report to the Congress with respect to (1) the effect which the implementation of section 102 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 would have on hospital-based skilled nursing facilities, given the differences (if any) in the patient populations served by such facilities and by community-based skilled nursing facilities and (2) the impact on skilled nursing facilities of hospital prospective payment systems, and recommendations concerning payment of skilled nursing facilities.

SHIFT IN MEDICARE PREMIUMS TO COINCIDE WITH COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE

Sec. 606. (a) Section 1839 of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out subsections (a), (b), and (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a)(1) The Secretary shall, during September of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees age 65 and over which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to those enrollees who have attained retirement age will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

"(2) The monthly premium of each individual enrolled under this part for each month after December 1983 shall, except as provided in subsections (b) and (e), be the amount determined under paragraph (3).

"(3) The Secretary shall, during September of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine and promulgate the monthly premium applicable for individuals enrolled under this part for the succeeding calendar year. The monthly premium shall (except as otherwise provided in subsection (e)) be equal to the smaller of—

"(A) the monthly actuarial rate for enrollees age 65 and over, determined according to paragraph (1) of this subsection, for that calendar year, or

"(B) the monthly premium rate most recently promulgated by the Secretary under this paragraph, increased by a percentage determined as follows: The Secretary shall ascertain the primary insurance amount computed under section 215(a)(1), based upon average indexed monthly earnings of $900, that applied to individuals who became eligible for and entitled to old-age insurance benefits on November 1 of the year before the year of the promulgation. He shall increase the monthly premium rate by the same percentage by which that primary insurance amount is increased when, by reason of the law in effect at the time the promulgation is made, it is so computed to apply to those individuals for the following November 1.

Whenever the Secretary promulgates the dollar amount which shall be applicable as the monthly premium for any period, he shall, at the time such promulgation is announced, issue a public statement setting forth the actuarial assumptions and bases employed by him in arriving at the amount of an adequate actuarial rate for enrollees who have attained retirement age as provided in paragraph (1) and the derivation of the dollar amounts specified in this paragraph.

(4) The Secretary shall also, during September of 1983 and of each year thereafter, determine the monthly actuarial rate for disabled enrollees under age 65 which shall be applicable for the succeeding calendar year. Such actuarial rate shall be the amount the Secretary estimates to be necessary so that the aggregate amount for such calendar year with respect to disabled enrollees under age 65 will equal one-half of the total of the benefits and administrative costs which he estimates will be payable from the Federal Supplementary Medical Insurance Trust Fund for services performed and related administrative costs incurred in such calendar year with respect to such enrollees. In calculating the monthly actuarial rate under this paragraph, the Secretary shall include an appropriate amount for a contingency margin.

(3)(A) Section 1839(b) of such Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out “subsection (b), (c), or (g)” and inserting in lieu thereof “subsection (a) or (e)”.

(B) Section 1839(d) of such Act (as so redesignated) is amended by striking out “purposes of subsection (c)” and inserting in lieu thereof “purposes of subsection (b)”.

(D) Section 1818(c) of such Act is amended by striking out “subsection (a) or (e)” of section 1839(d) thereof.

(E) Section 1843(d)(1) of such Act is amended by striking out “without any increase under subsection (c) thereof” and inserting in lieu thereof “without any increase under subsection (b) thereof”.

(F) Section 1844(a)(1) thereof of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out “1839(cX1)” and inserting in lieu thereof “1839(aX1)”; and

(ii) by striking out “1839(cX3) or 1839(g)” and inserting in lieu thereof “1839(aX3) or 1839(e)”.

(G) Section 1844(a)(1)(B) thereof of such Act is amended—

(i) by striking out “1839(cX4)” and inserting in lieu thereof “1839(aX4)”; and

(3) by striking out “for such next year” in the second sentence and inserting in lieu thereof “for that following calendar year”.

(c) The amendments made by this section shall apply to premiums for months beginning with January 1984, and for months after June 1983 and before January 1984—
(1) the monthly premiums under part A and under part B of title XVIII of the Social Security Act for individuals enrolled under each respective part shall be the monthly premium under that part for the month of June 1983, and
(2) the amount of the Government contributions under section 1844(a)(1) of such Act shall be computed on the basis of the actuarially adequate rate which would have been in effect under part B of title XVIII of such Act for such months without regard to the amendments made by this section, but using the amount of the premium in effect for the month of June 1983.

SECTION 1122 AMENDMENTS

SEC. 607. (a) Section 1122(c) of the Social Security Act is amended by striking out “the Federal Hospital Insurance Trust Fund” and inserting “the general fund in the Treasury”.

(2) Section 1861(z)(2) of such Act is amended by striking out “$100,000” and inserting in lieu thereof “$600,000 (or such lesser amount as may be established by the State under section 1122(g)(1) in which the hospital is located)”.
(c) Section 1122 of such Act is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:
“(j) A capital expenditure made by or on behalf of a health care facility shall not be subject to review pursuant to this section if 75 percent of the patients who can reasonably be expected to use the service with respect to which the capital expenditure is made will be individuals enrolled in an eligible organization as defined in section 1876(b), and if the Secretary determines that such capital expenditure is for services and facilities which are needed by such organization in order to operate efficiently and economically and which are not otherwise readily accessible to such organization because—

"(1) the facilities do not provide common services at the same site (as usually provided by the organization),

"(2) the facilities are not available under a contract of reasonable duration,

"(3) full and equal medical staff privileges in the facilities are not available,

"(4) arrangements with such facilities are not administratively feasible, or

"(5) the purchase of such services is more costly than if the organization provided the services directly."

(d) Section 1861(z)(2) of such Act is amended by inserting "(A)" after "(z)" and by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(B) provides that such plan is submitted to the agency designated under section 1122(b), or if no such agency is designated, to the appropriate health planning agency in the State (but this subparagraph shall not apply in the case of a facility exempt from review under section 1122 by reason of section 1122(j));."

The Senate amendment struck out all of the House bill after the enacting clause and inserted a substitute text.

The House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate with an amendment which is a substitute for the House bill and the Senate amendment. SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

1. EXTENSION OF COVERAGE

A. FEDERAL EMPLOYEES

Present law

Permanent civilian employees of the Federal government are not covered by social security (OASDI). (Part-time temporary civilian employees and members of the armed forces are covered by social security.) By far the greatest number of Federal employees not covered by social security (2.7 million) participate in the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) on a mandatory basis. Legislative branch employees are not covered by social security, and have the option of not participating in CSRS. Members of Congress, the President and the Vice-President are not covered under social security. As of January 1, 1983, Federal employees are covered under the medicare program and pay the medicare portion of the social security payroll tax.

Presently, the compensation paid to Federal judges—either in Senior (or inactive) status or in retirement—is not considered wages and thus is not subject to social security taxes nor is it considered for purposes of the retirement test.

House bill

Provides for coverage under social security of the following groups: (1) all Federal employees hired on or after January 1, 1984, including those with previous periods of Federal Service if the break in Federal service lasted at least 365 days; (2) legislative branch employees on the same basis, as well as current employees of the legislative branch who are not participating in the Civil Service Retirement System as of December 31, 1983; (3) all Members of Congress, the President and the Vice President effective January 1, 1984; (4) all sitting Federal judges, and all executive level and senior executive service political appointees, as of January 1, 1984. Federal judicial salaries would be reported as wages for social security earnings test and payroll tax purposes.

Senate amendment

Would cover Federal employees hired on or after January 1, 1984, or upon the enactment of a supplemental Civil Service Retirement System, whichever is later. Members of Congress, the President, Vice President, and the Commissioner of Social Security would be covered as of January 1, 1984.

The provision also states that “Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement to future benefits under the Federal retirement program system of current and retired Federal employees and their families. The full faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged hereby in support of the payment of said accrued entitlements.”

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill, but also includes the Senate provision’s statement “Nothing in this Act shall reduce the accrued entitlement that to future benefits under the Federal retirement program system of current and retired Federal employees and their families.”

I. PROVISIONS AFFECTING THE FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

B. EMPLOYEES OF NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Present law

Participation in the social security system is optional for nonprofit organizations (charitable, religious, and educational). Most such organizations have chosen to participate, but about 15 percent of employees of nonprofit organizations are presently not covered. A nonprofit organization which has elected to participate can file to withdraw from social security after it has been in the system for 8 years, and termination is effective two years after the end of the calendar quarter in which the notice was filed.

House bill

 Extends social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations as of January 1, 1984. (Terminations of coverage would not be permitted on or after March 31, 1983.) Nonprofit employees age 55 or older affected by this provision would be deemed to be fully insured for social security benefits after acquiring a given number of quarters of coverage, according to the following sliding scale:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Age</th>
<th>The number of quarters needed is:</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Age 60 or over</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age 59</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age 58</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age 57</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Age 55-56</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Senate amendment

 Similar to House bill, except that terminations would not be permitted after enactment. Also, does not include special provision deeming persons to be fully insured under liberalized quarter-of-coverage requirements.

Conference agreement

 The Conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. TERMINATION OF COVERAGE BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

Present law

 Participation in social security is optional for State and local governments. Once a government has chosen to join social security, it may withdraw, after 5 years of coverage, by providing the Federal government with two years advance notice of its intent to withdraw. A notice of termination becomes effective at the end of the calendar year two years after the notice is filed. Governments that have withdrawn are not allowed to rejoin. (About 70 percent of all State and local government employees are presently covered by social security.)

House bill

 Prohibits State and local governments from terminating coverage for their employees if the termination has not taken effect by the date legislation is enacted. In addition, allows State and local governments which have withdrawn from the social security system to voluntarily rejoin. Once having rejoined, the governmental entity would be precluded from terminating coverage.

Senate amendment

 Same as House bill.
3. WINDFALL BENEFITS FOR PERSONS WITH PENSIONS FROM NONCOVERED EMPLOYMENT

Present law

Social security benefits are determined through a formula based on average lifetime earnings in jobs covered by social security. The benefit formula is weighted so that persons with low average lifetime earnings receive a proportionally higher rate of return on their contributions to social security than workers with relatively high average lifetime earnings.

Workers with short periods of covered work also receive this advantage, because their few years of earnings are averaged over a 35-year period to determine their average monthly covered earnings on which the benefit is based.

This high rate of return for persons who have spent a short period of time in covered employment is what is often characterized as a "windfall" benefit.

House bill

(1) Applies a different benefit formula to workers who are eligible for a pension based wholly or in part on noncovered employment. Under the current formula, benefits are 90% of the first $254 of average monthly earnings, 32% of earnings from $254 to $1,538, and 15% of earnings above $1,538. The new formula applicable to those with pensions from noncovered employment would substitute 61% for the 90% factor. (2) Provides a guarantee that the resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit cannot be more than one-half the amount of the noncovered pension. (3) This provision will be applicable to persons reaching age 60 after December 31, 1983.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except substitutes a 32% factor in benefit formula, phased in over a 5-year period as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year of first eligibility under OASDI</th>
<th>First factor in formula (percent)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1984</td>
<td>78.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1985</td>
<td>66.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1986</td>
<td>55.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1987</td>
<td>43.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1988 and after</td>
<td>32.0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Provides a guarantee that the resulting reduction in the worker's social security benefit cannot be more than one-third of the portion of the worker's pension based on service which was not covered.

Provides further a guarantee that persons with 30 years or more of covered service would not be affected. For persons with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment, the 90% factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below 30 years of covered employment. This would not reduce benefits by more than the regular windfall provision, however. (A year of substantial employment would be a year in which covered earnings were at least 25 percent of the wage base. For years after 1977, the base used would be the 1977 base with adjustments for increased earnings after that date.)

The provision provides for periodically recomputing the offset based on changes in the pension rate. The provision also provides that pensions based on noncovered employment of less than a year would not be subject to the offset.

The provision would be effective on January 1, 1984, for retired or disabled workers who first become eligible for a noncovered pension and for social security after 1983.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with the following amendments:

1. Substitutes 40 percent as the first bracket formula amount.
2. Phases in this reduction over a 5-year period: 80% in the first year, 70% in the second year, 60% in the third year, 50% in the fourth year, and fully effective in the fifth year.
3. Exempts the following groups:
   a. all current employees newly covered by the bill, i.e. those current Federal employees covered by the bill, and nonprofit employees except those employees whose past employment for a nonprofit organization had been covered, but whose employment for that organization was not covered on December 31, 1983;
   b. those with service which was not covered until 1957;
   c. those with 30 years or more of covered work; in addition, for persons with less than 30 but more than 24 years of substantial social security employment, the 90% factor in the benefit formula would be reduced by 10 percentage points for each year below 30 years of covered employment. (Senate provision); and
   d. those with railroad retirement pensions.
4. Amends the effective date to apply to those first eligible for social security benefits and for government pensions after 1985.

4. DELAY COST-OF-LIVING ADJUSTMENT

Present law

(a) Social security benefits are adjusted automatically every June (July check) to reflect increases in the consumer price index. This cost-of-living adjustment is measured from the average CPI of the first quarter of the previous year in which a benefit increase was provided to the average of the first quarter of the current year. No cost-of-living increase is provided in any year in which the increase in the CPI is less than 3 percent.

House bill

Delays the June 1983 cost-of-living adjustment until December (January 1984 check), and provides all subsequent cost-of-living adjustments in December (January checks). This adjustment would be based on the CPI for the first quarter of 1983 over that for the first quarter of 1982. All subsequent adjustments would be based on the CPI increase from the third quarter of the last year in which a cost-of-living adjustment was provided to the third quarter of the current year. For the December 1983 adjustment only, the 3 percent trigger is waived.
Senate amendment

Same as House bill. (A floor amendment also provides that the OASDI COLA delay be accompanied by a corresponding delay in a 1982 Reconciliation Act provision to round down certain veterans’ pensions.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

(b) The medicare monthly premium for part B physician coverage increases each July 1. (For those people receiving social security cash benefits, the premium is deducted from their checks.)

House bill

Also, postpones from July 1, 1983, to January 1, 1984, and to each January thereafter, the effective date of increases in medicare premiums to coincide with the proposed delay in the cost-of-living increases in social security cash benefit payments. For the six-month period from July 1, 1983 to January 1, 1984, the general revenue contribution would replace the lost premium revenue.

Senate amendment

Similar provision except that the general revenue contribution would not replace lost premium revenue.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. TAXATION OF SOCIAL SECURITY (OASDI) BENEFITS FOR HIGHER-INCOME PERSONS

Present law

Social security benefits and railroad retirement benefits are excluded from gross income for purposes of the Federal income tax.

House bill

Beginning in 1984, a portion of social security and tier I railroad retirement benefits would be included in taxable income for taxpayers whose adjusted gross income combined with 50 percent of their benefits exceeds a base amount. The base amount would be $25,000 for an individual, $32,000 for a married couple filing a joint return and zero for married persons filing separate returns. The amount of benefits that could be included in taxable income would be the lesser of one-half of benefits or one-half of the excess of the taxpayers’ combined income (AGI + one-half of benefits) over the base amount.

The proceeds from the taxation of benefits, as estimated by the Treasury Department, would be transferred to the appropriate trust funds at first of quarter. An annual report from the Secretary of the Treasury concerning the transfers would be required.

Special rules would be provided to adjust for repayments by individuals of benefits previously received and subsequently determined to be overpayments. Special rules also would be provided for attributing appropriate portions of lump-sum benefit payments to the years for which they had been paid. Benefits subject to tax would include any workmen's compensation receipt of which caused a reduction in disability benefits. (Proceeds from the taxation of these benefits would be deposited in either the social security or railroad retirement account.)

Annual information returns would be filed by the Social Security Administration and the Railroad Retirement Board with the IRS and furnished to individual beneficiaries.

The 50 percent of social security benefits received by non-resident aliens would be subject to the 30 percent withholding tax (or a lower rate if so fixed by treaty) applicable to periodic payments made to such individuals under current law. (The IRS would be authorized to disclose to SSA and RRB certain tax return information for purposes of administering this provision.)

Senate amendment

Same as House bill, except that interest on tax-exempt bonds is added to adjusted gross income for the purpose of determining whether an individual's income exceeds the base amount above which a portion of benefits would be subject to tax; transfers to trust funds are made in the middle of the quarter; and that benefits subject to tax do not include certain worker's compensation benefits.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill on timing of transfers to the trust funds and treatment of certain worker's compensation benefits, and the Senate Amendment concerning tax exempt interest.

6. 1984-90 SOCIAL SECURITY TAX RATES AND 1984 CREDIT

House bill

Advances the payroll tax increase scheduled for 1985 to 1984 and part of the increase scheduled for 1990 to 1988, as indicated below:
Senate amendment

Same as House bill.

B. TAX CREDIT FOR 1984 EMPLOYEE FICA TAXES

Present law

No deduction or credit is available for employee FICA taxes.

House bill

A credit of 0.3% of wages would be allowed against 1984 employee FICA taxes to reduce the net FICA rate to 6.70%. Appropriations to Trust Funds would be based on a 7.00% rate. Employee's annual withholding statements (form W-2) would indicate the net amount of FICA tax (i.e., the 6.7% of taxable wages actually deducted from their paychecks).

Senate amendment

Same as House bill except that employee's annual wage statements (Form W-2) would indicate both the gross FICA tax (7.0% of taxable wages) and the FICA credit (0.3% of taxable wages).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. 1984 EMPLOYER FICA TAX CREDIT

Present law

No deduction or credit is available for employer FICA taxes.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Employers who employ no more than 5 employees at any time during 1984 would be allowed a credit against FICA of 0.3% of taxable wages paid during that year. The credit would be limited to $300 per employer. All trades or businesses under common control would be considered to be one employer for the purpose of determining the number of employees.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.
D. TIER I RAILROAD RETIREMENT TAXES

Present law
The rates of the Tier I railroad retirement taxes are the same as the rates of the corresponding FICA taxes.

House bill
Conforming changes would be made in Tier I railroad retirement tax rates and the credit against 1984 employee taxes would be allowed against employee railroad taxes.

Senate amendment
Same as House bill.

7. TAX ON SELF-EMPLOYMENT INCOME

Present law
The Self-Employment Contributions Act (SECA) imposes two taxes (OASDI and HI) on self-employed individuals. Currently, self-employed persons pay an OASDI tax at a rate approximately equal to 75 percent of the combined employer-employee rate and an HI tax at a rate that is 50 percent of the combined employer-employee rate.

No deduction or credit is available for SECA taxes.

House bill
Beginning in 1984, the OASDHI rates for self-employed persons would be equal to the combined employer-employee OASDHI rate. For 1984, self-employed persons would be allowed a credit (comparable to the credit allowed employers against the FICA tax) against SECA tax equal to 0.3 percent of net self-employment income. In addition, beginning in 1984, self-employed persons would be entitled to a permanent credit against SECA tax. For 1984-87, the amount of the credit would be 1.8 percent of net self-employment income. For 1988 and subsequent years, the credit would be 1.9 percent. The SECA tax credit may be directly taken into account in computing SECA liability for a taxable year and estimated tax payments for that year.

Appropriations to the trust funds would be based on the full SECA tax rates without regard to the credit allowed against such taxes.

Senate amendment
Same as House bill, except that the total credit rate would be 2.9 percent of self-employment income in 1984, 2.5 percent in 1985, 2.2 percent in 1986, 2.1 percent in 1987, 1988, and 1989, and 2.3 percent in 1990 and thereafter.

Conference agreement
The Conference agreement provides that:
a. The SECA credits for 1984 through 1989 would be as follows:
   1984: 2.7 percent.
   1985: 2.3 percent.
   1986-89: 2.0 percent.
b. Effective in 1990 and thereafter, the credit would terminate and be replaced with a system designed to achieve parity between employees and the self-employed. Under this system:

1. The base of the self-employment tax would be adjusted downward to reflect the fact that employees do not pay FICA tax on the value of the employer's FICA tax.
2. A deduction would be allowed for income tax purposes, for half of SECA Liability, to allow for the fact that employees do not pay income tax on the value of the employer's FICA tax.

8. CREDIT FOR THE ELDERLY AND DISABILITY INCOME EXCLUSION

A. CREDIT FOR THE ELDERLY

Present law

1. Eligible individuals and credit rate.—Individuals age 65 or over, or under 65 and with income from a public retirement system, are eligible for a credit equal to 15 percent of a base amount.

2. Base amount.—The initial amount of the base is:
   - $2,500—married with one spouse eligible or unmarried.
   - $3,750—married, joint return, both spouses eligible.
   - $1,875—married filing separately.

For individuals under age 65, the initial amount is limited to income from a public retirement system.

The initial amount is reduced by:

1. Pensions or annuities received under Social Security, Railroad Retirement, and certain other pensions and annuities otherwise excluded from gross income, and
2. One-half of the excess of adjusted gross income over:
   - $7,500—single returns.
   - $10,000—married, joint return.
   - $5,000—married, separate return.

This reduction does not apply to individuals under age 65. Instead, the initial amount is reduced by certain amounts of earned income.

House bill

1. Eligible individuals and credit rate.—Same as present law, except that individuals under age 65 are eligible only if they retired with a permanent and total disability and have disability income from a public or private employer on account of that disability.

2. Base amount.—The initial base amount is:
   - $5,000—married with one spouse eligible or unmarried.
   - $7,500—married, joint return, both spouses eligible.
   - $3,750—married filing separately.

For individuals under age 65, the initial amount is limited to disability income.

1. Pensions or annuities received under social security, Railroad Retirement, and certain other pensions and annuities otherwise excluded from gross income (as under present law). In addition, social security and railroad disability benefits also reduce the initial amount.
2. One-half of adjusted gross income over:
   $7,500—single returns.
   $10,000—married, joint return.
   $5,000—married, separate return.

The same rules for reducing the initial amount would apply to all eligible individuals.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with technical amendment.

B. DISABILITY INCOME EXCLUSION

Present law

Amounts received under an employer’s disability income plan generally are includible in gross income to the extent attributable to employer contributions. However, permanently and totally disabled individuals who have retired on disability and are under 65 may exclude such income within certain limits. The excluded amount is limited to $100 per week and is reduced by the excess of adjusted gross income over $15,000.

House bill

The disability income exclusion is repealed. Affected individuals are made eligible for the credit for elderly and disabled persons to the extent of disability income (see above).

Effective date.—The provision applies to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1983.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

10. Benefits for Certain Widows, Divorced, and Disabled Women

A. Benefits for Surviving Divorced or Disabled Spouse Who Remarries

Present law

Current law permits the continuation of benefits for surviving spouses who remarry after age 60. However, benefits for disabled widow(er)s and disabled surviving divorced spouses (payable from age 50 to 60) and for surviving divorced spouses (payable at age 60) are terminated if the individual remarries.

House bill

Allows the continuation of benefits for disabled and surviving divorced spouses upon remarriage if that marriage takes place after the age of first eligibility for benefits. Effective for benefits for months after December 1983.

(No change would be made in the current dual entitlement provision of the law which allows an individual to receive only the highest benefit for which such individual is eligible.)

Senate amendment

Same as House bill.

B. Change in Indexing Deferred Survivor Benefits

Present law

Survivor benefits are based on the amount of benefits that would have been payable to the deceased worker as determined by applying a benefit formula to the worker's earnings in covered employment. Such earnings are indexed to reflect economy-wide wage increases through the second year before the death of the worker. Beginning with the year of death, benefit levels are indexed to price changes.

Should the worker die long before retirement age, the benefit to which the widowed spouse ultimately becomes eligible in old-age (or at disability) is based on outdated wages. Thus, women who become widowed at a relatively young age, but do not become eligible for benefits for many years, are deprived of their husband's unrealized earnings as well as the economy-wide wage increases that may have occurred since the death of their husbands.

House bill

In the case of deferred survivor benefits, continues indexing the worker's earnings to reflect economy-wide wage increases rather than price increases. Such wage indexing would apply through the year the worker would have reached age 60, or two years before the survivor becomes eligible for aged or disabled widow's benefits, whichever is earlier. Effective for newly eligible survivors after December 1984.

Senate amendment

Same as House bill.

C. INDEPENDENT ENTITLEMENT FOR DIVORCED SPOUSES

Present law

A divorced spouse, eligible for benefits at age 62, may not begin to draw social security benefits until the former spouse begins to draw benefits. For some divorced women, this means that they must wait several years beyond their own retirement age (because their former spouse delays retirement or otherwise fails to apply for benefits) before they can begin to draw benefits.

House bill

Allows divorced spouses (who have been divorced for at least 2 years) to draw benefits at age 62 if the former spouse is eligible for retirement benefits, whether or not benefits have been claimed or suspended because of substantial employment. Effective for benefits for months after December 1984.

Senate amendment

Same as House bill except for technical difference.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

D. INCREASED BENEFITS FOR DISABLED WIDOWS

Present law

Social Security benefits for widows and widowers are first payable at age 60. Benefits are payable in full (i.e., 100 percent of the worker's primary insurance amount) at age 65, and at reduced rates at ages 60–64 (i.e., phasing up from 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 60). Benefits are also payable at reduced rates to disabled widows and widowers aged 50–59 (i.e., phasing up from 50 percent of the primary insurance amount at age 50).

House bill

Increases benefits of disabled widow(er)'s age 50–59 to 71.5 percent of the primary insurance amount, the amount to which widow(er)s are entitled at age 60. Effective for benefits for disabled widows and widowers for months after December 1983.

Senate amendment
Same as House bill.

11. STABILIZER

Present law
Social security benefits are adjusted automatically every June to reflect increases in the Consumer Price Index. Such adjustments are made without regard to the status of the trust fund reserves. Income to the social security system depends on the level of wages on which social security contributions are made. When increases in prices outrun increases in wages, income to the trust fund falls behind increases in benefit payments. Cash flow problems may then result, depending on whether accumulated fund reserves are sufficient to make up the gap between income and outlays.

There is no mechanism under current law to adjust trust fund outlays and revenues to take account of economic fluctuations.

House bill
Beginning with 1988, if the fund ratio of the combined OASDI Trust Funds as of the beginning of a year is less than 20.0%, the automatic cost-of-living (COLA) adjustment would be based on the lower of the CPI increase or the increase in average wages. Subsequently, when the balance in the trust funds has risen to at least 32 percent of estimated annual outlays, "catch-up" benefit payments would be made during the following year, as supplements to monthly benefits otherwise payable, to the extent necessary to increase overall benefit levels in order to make up for any losses in inflation protection that result from basing COLA's on wages rather than prices. Such payments would be made only to the extent that sufficient funds are available over those needed to maintain a fund ratio of 32.0%

Senate amendment
Similar to House bill, except that the catch-up payments would supplement monthly benefits otherwise payable to make up for the cumulative dollar losses that could result from basing the adjustment on wages rather than prices.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment to provide that the stabilizer would take effect with respect to the cost-of-living increase payable in January 1985 if the trust funds ratio at the end of 1984 is less 15 percent. Beginning in 1989 the stabilizer would take effect if the trust fund ratio falls below 20 percent.
12. Procedures To Assure Continued Benefit Payments (Fail-Safe)

Present law

a. Social security benefits are financed by a payroll tax fixed in the law. While benefits are paid out within the first five days of each month, payroll tax revenues are estimated daily by the Treasury, and credited to the trust fund accounts each day.

House bill

Fixed Monthly Tax Transfers: Provides for a revision of accounting procedures under which the Treasury would credit to the OASDHI trust funds, at the beginning of each month the amount of payroll tax revenues estimated to be received during the month. These amounts would be invested by the trust funds as all other trust fund assets are invested; interest will also be paid by the trust funds on amounts transferred to the trust funds in advance of procedures in effect on January 1, 1983. Effective on the first day of the month following enactment.

Senate amendment

Similar to House provision, except that tax receipts would only be advanced for months the Secretary of the Treasury determines that the balances of the OASDI trust funds are less than 20% of outgo. Also, the interest paid to the General Treasury on the excess sums so transferred would be at the rate equal to the average 91-day Treasury bill rate during the month, with such interest being payable at the end of each month.

Effective.—On enactment through 1989.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

Present law

b. Interfund borrowing was authorized during 1982, but this authority terminated at the end of the year.

House bill

Interfund borrowing: Authorizes interfund benefit borrowing between the OASI, DI and HI funds for calendar years 1983–87, with provisions for repayment to the lending fund(s) of the principal and interest of all such loans (including amounts borrowed in 1982) at the earliest feasible time but not later than the end of calendar year 1989. Borrowing would be permitted only to the extent there is sufficient balance in the lending fund to meet its own obligations.

Senate amendment

Similar to House bill, except that (1) interest would be paid monthly to HI on any outstanding loans to OASDI; (2) OASDI could not borrow from HI in any month in which the HI trust fund ratio is under 10 percent (with no more to be borrowed than would reduce such ratio to 10 percent); (3) in 1983–87, OASDI would repay loans from HI whenever the OASDI fund ratio at the end of the year exceeds 15 percent; and (4) in 1988–89, OASDI would repay HI, in 24 equal monthly payments, the loan balance outstanding at the end of 1987 (plus interest on any outstanding loan balance). Faster payment would be authorized.

Similar protections would be provided for the OASI and DI trust funds in the event that HI were to borrow from OASDI.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

Present law

c. If at any point revenues from the payroll tax exceed amounts needed for benefit payments, the excess is placed in the trust fund reserve. If revenues fall short of the amount needed, the reserves are drawn on to make up the difference. If the reserves are not adequate to make up the shortfall, under current law the trust funds have no way of making benefit payments on time. (Thus, it is considered critical to have at least one month's benefit payments in reserve at the beginning of each month, and to have enough of a reserve to continue benefit payments through any decline in revenues during the year.) The Board of Trustees is required to report immediately to the Congress if any of the trust funds is unduly small.

House bill

Managing Trustee Report to the Congress Concerning Trust Fund Shortfalls: Requires the Board of Trustees to report immediately to the Congress whenever it is of the opinion that the amount of any of the trust funds may become unduly small and recommend a specific legislative plan to adjust the inflow and outgo of funds to remedy this shortfall with due regard to the economic situation that created the problem and the amount of time available to act in a prudent manner. It is the intent that such legislative action would be effective only so long as is necessary to restore the fund to solvency.

Senate amendment

Requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to make an annual evaluation of the projected balances in the OASDHI trust funds, taking into account cost-of-living increases. If at the start of any year after 1984 the OASDHI reserve ratio is projected to decline from the start of the next year to the start of the following year and to then be less than 20 percent of a year's benefits, the Secretary would be required to notify the Congress by the preceding July 1 that action to limit the next COLA will be necessary. If no action is taken, the Secretary would be required to scale back the COLA to the extent necessary to prevent a decline in the reserve ratio. (For years after 1987, the fund ratios only for OASDI would be considered.)

Insofar as possible, the limitation of the COLA would be applied to people whose benefits are based on a primary benefit level of more than $250 per month. The determination as to whether a limitation on the cost-of-living increase was necessary would be made only after taking into account all other statutory provisions for assuring adequate funds.

Effective for determinations beginning July 1, 1984.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with an amendment under which the Trustee's report to the Congress must provide specific information as to the extent to which benefits would have to be reduced, payroll taxes increased, or some combination thereof, in order to restore the trust fund to solvency.

13. DELAYED RETIREMENT CREDIT

Present law

Persons who delay retiring—and claiming social security benefits—beyond age 65 receive increases in their benefits amounting to 3 percent per year for each year they delay retirement up to age 72.

House bill

Gradually increases the delayed retirement credit from 3 percent to 8 percent per year for persons who attain age 65 between 1990 and 2008. In order to conform to the reduction in the age at which the earnings test no longer applies, lowers the age after which the delayed retirement credit will no longer be given from age 72 to 70 for those who attain age 70 after December 1983.

Senate amendment

Similar to House bill except would first apply to people attaining age 62 in 1990, rather than 65 in 1990, and would be fully phased in by 1995. In addition, would remove the upper age limit on receipt of delayed retirement credits, effective January 1984 (floor amendment).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

14. REIMBURSEMENT TO TRUST FUNDS FOR MILITARY WAGE CREDITS AND UNCASHED OASDI CHECKS

A. MILITARY WAGE CREDITS

Present law

Gratuitous military wage credits are provided to persons who served in the military after September 16, 1940. Although members of the armed forces were compulsorily covered under social security in 1957, wage credits continue to be provided to military personnel in recognition of the value of non-cash compensation received.

The cost of the additional benefits and the administrative expenses arising from these non-contributory wage credits are borne by the General fund on a retroactive reimbursement basis (i.e., the costs are reimbursed only after benefits have been paid).
House bill

Provides for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund for: (i) The present value of the estimated additional benefits arising from the gratuitous military service wage credits for service before 1957; (ii) the amount of the combined employer-employee OASDI taxes on the gratuitous military service wage credits for service after 1956 and before 1983. In addition, the HI trust fund would be credited with the combined employer-employee HI taxes on gratuitous military wage credits for services after 1965 and before 1983. (In the future, the trust funds would be reimbursed on a current basis for such employer-employee taxes on such wage credits for service after 1982.)

Senate amendment

Similar to House bill, except that the lump sum reimbursement for the post 1956 wage credits includes 1983. Also, the initial transfer for pre-1957 military wage credits would be provided through the normal appropriations process.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, except with respect to the appropriation process for pre-1957 military wage credits.

B. UNCASHED OASDI CHECKS

Present law

The trust funds are not credited for any uncashed OASDI benefit checks. Instead, the value of benefit checks which are not cashed remains in the General Fund of the Treasury.

House bill

Provides for a lump-sum payment to the OASDI trust funds from the General Fund representing the amount of uncashed benefit checks which have been issued in the past plus appropriate amounts of interest. In addition, requires the implementation of a procedure under which: (1) the Treasury Department would make it possible to distinguish OASDI checks from other government checks; and (2) the trust funds would be credited on a regular basis with an amount equal to the value of all OASDI benefit checks which have not been negotiated for a period of 6 months.

Senate amendment

Similar to House bill, except that unnegotiated checks are defined to be those outstanding for a period 12 months after issuance, and no interest is payable to the trust funds on unnegotiated checks. Also, transfers to the trust funds would be subject to the annual appropriation process.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill; except for the Senate amendment making the transfers subject to the annual appropriations process.
II. ADDITIONAL PROVISIONS RELATING TO LONG-TERM FINANCING OF THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM

1. ADJUSTMENTS IN THE NORMAL RETIREMENT AGE

Present law

Normal retirement age (i.e., the age at which full retirement benefits can be received) is age 65. Early retirement benefits are available at age 62 at a rate of 80 percent of the full benefit. Medicare and SSI benefits are also available at age 65. Unreduced retirement benefits are available to workers, spouses, and widows and widowers at age 65. Actuarially reduced benefits are available at age 62 for workers and spouses and at age 60 for widows and widowers.

In computing social security benefits, a worker's earnings under social security are averaged and a benefit formula is applied to those average indexed monthly earnings (AIME) to arrive at the initial basic benefit amount called the primary insurance amount (PIA). The PIA is the amount a worker is eligible to receive at 65. Dependents' and survivors' benefits are based on the worker's PIA.

The formula for a worker who becomes eligible for benefits in 1983 is: 90 percent of the first $254 of AIME, plus 32 percent of the AIME from $254 through $1,528, plus 15 percent of the AIME over $1,528.

The two dollar figures in the formula, $254 and $1,528, are raised (indexed) each year to reflect increases in average wages in the economy. Thus, a new formula is created each year for the new group of workers becoming eligible for benefits in that year.

The annual adjustment of the benefit formula by the full amount of the increase in average wages leads to higher initial benefits over time and to replacement rates—the percentage of a worker's prior earnings that are replaced by his social security benefit—that remain at approximately the same level.

Social security beneficiaries under age 70 who work and have earnings are subject to a one dollar reduction in benefits for every two dollars of earnings, when their earnings exceed certain exempt amounts. For 1983, the annual exempt amount is $6,600 for people age 65 and older. The annual exempt amount is increased each year according to increases in wages.

House bill

(1) Raises the normal retirement age to 67 in two steps.

(A) Increases retirement age to 66 by increasing the age for full benefits by two months a year for six years so that provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2005 (66 in 2009).

(B) Raises retirement age from 66 to 67 by increasing the age for full benefits by two months a year for six years so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 62 in 2022 (67 in 2027).

(2) Age 62 benefits would be maintained at an ultimate rate of 70 percent of full benefits. (After age for full retirement is changed to 67.) No changes would be made in Medicare or SSI benefits.
(3) Requires the Secretary, by January 1, 1986, to conduct and submit with recommendations to Congress a comprehensive study and analysis of the implications of the change in retirement age for those individuals affected by this change who, because they are engaging in physically demanding employment or because they are unable to extend their working careers for health reasons, may not benefit from improvements in longevity.

(4) Makes no changes in the current law earnings test.

Senate amendment

(1) Raises the normal retirement age to 66, by increasing the age for full benefits one month a year for 12 years (between 2000 and 2011) so that the provision would be fully effective beginning with those attaining age 66 in 2015. The first age of eligibility for Medicare would shift in tandem with the new retirement age.

(2) Early retirement benefits would continue to be payable at age 62, but at an ultimate rate of 75 percent of full benefits (after age for full retirement is changed to 66.)

(3) Requires the 1987 Social Security Advisory council to study the effect of raising the retirement age and requires recommendations on changes to the DI, SSI and unemployment compensation programs to meet the special needs of older workers. In addition, provides for the appointment, subject to approval by the Chairmen of the Committees on Finance and Ways and Means, of Council representatives of organized labor and experts on the problems of older workers, disability and unemployment and the labor market.

(4) Between 2000 and 2007, gradually reduces initial benefit levels by 5.3 percent for future beneficiaries. The percentage factors in the benefit formula would be reduced by two-thirds of one percent each year for 8 years, beginning with those first becoming eligible in the year 2000, and would be fully effective for those becoming eligible in 2007. The benefit factor reduction would be phased-in under the following schedule:

(5) Gradually phases out, beginning in 1990, the retirement earnings test for people 65 and older. The exempt amount of earnings (as it would be automatically increased by wage trends) would be further increased by $3,000 in 1990 and by a further $3,000 in each of the next four years, with the earnings test (for people 65 and older) completely eliminated in 1995.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House Bill except for a Senate amendment, effective beginning in 1990, to reduce the earnings test offset for those age 65 and older to one dollar for every three dollars earned over the annual exempt amount.

III. MISCELLANEOUS AND TECHNICAL PROVISIONS

1. CASH MANAGEMENT

A. FLOAT ALLOWANCE REVISION

Present law

Social security benefit checks are issued to beneficiaries on the third day of each month. Current Treasury procedures allow a two-day float before trust fund monies are actually transferred to the Treasury in order to pay the checks which have been issued.

House bill

Requires the Secretaries of Treasury and Health and Human Services to conduct a study consisting of two separate investigations. The first concerns the actual average length of time between the issuance of benefit checks and their redemption; the second would deal with the feasibility and desirability of providing for the transfer on a daily basis to the general fund from the appropriate trust fund amounts equal to the amounts of benefit checks which are paid by the Federal Reserve Banks on that day.

The Secretary of the Treasury would be required to promulgate regulations to implement the changes found appropriate by these investigations.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. INTEREST ON LATE STATE DEPOSITS

Present law

The annual interest rate charged on late payments of social security contributions due on the earnings of State and local employees is 6 percent per annum.

House bill

Changes the rate of interest charged on late payments of social security contributions due on the earnings of state and local employees to a rate equal to the average interest rate earned by new special obligations of the trust funds during the period of the delinquency. (Effective with respect to payments due for wages paid after Dec. 31, 1983.)
Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

C. TRUST FUND INVESTMENT PROCEDURES

Current law
Payroll tax revenues which are in excess of the amount necessary to pay current benefits generally must be invested in "special issue" obligations available for purchase only by the trust funds. Such obligations have maturities fixed with due regard for the needs of the trust funds and bear an interest rate equal to the average market yield on all marketable, interest bearing obligations of the U.S. which are not due or callable within 4 years.

House bill
Requires the managing trustee of the Social Security Trust Funds to redeem most current trust fund investments and make all future investments in a new type of Treasury public debt obligation bearing interest at a rate that varies from month to month. For each month, the interest rate on the new type of obligation will be equal to the higher of (1) the average market yield over the preceding month on all public-debt obligations (other than "flower bonds") with maturities of more than 4 years or (2) the average market yield for similar obligations with 4 years or less to maturity.

Requires that annual reports of the Social Security Boards of Trustees to the Congress include a certification by the chief actuary of the Social Security Administration that the reports meet generally accepted standards within the actuarial profession.

Allows the 1983 annual reports to be filed any time before 45 days after enactment.

Senate amendment
Similar to House bill, except that the interest rate to be applied to the social security investments would be the same long-term, special-issue rate used under current law. The redeemed investments and all future funds would be invested in special depository accounts, rather than new special issue obligations.

Also, requires actuarial statement, but does not have to certify the reasonableness of the assumptions and cost estimates underlying the trustee's report (floor amendment).

No provision.

Conference agreement
Both Houses recede with respect to trust fund investment procedures. With respect to the actuarial statement and the delay of the 1983 Trustees’ report, the conference agreement follows the House bill, with an amendment providing that the certification shall not refer to economic assumptions underlying the Trustees’ report.
D. SEPARATE TREATMENT OF TRUST FUND OPERATIONS UNDER UNIFIED BUDGET

Present law

Beginning with 1969, the financial operations of the social security trust funds have been included in the unified budget of the Federal Government.

House bill

Provides for the display of OASI, DI, HI and SMI fund operations as a separate function within the budget. Beginning with fiscal year 1989, these trust fund operations (except for SMI) would be removed from the unified budget.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill except that the trust fund operations would not be removed from the unified budget until fiscal year 1992.

2. ELIMINATION OF GENDER-BASED DISTINCTIONS UNDER THE OLD-AGE, SURVIVORS, AND DISABILITY INSURANCE PROGRAM

Unless otherwise noted, the proposed amendments concerning the elimination of gender-based distinctions would be effective with respect to benefits payable for months after the month of enactment.

A. DIVORCED HUSBANDS

Present law

The Social Security Act provides for the payment of benefits to aged divorced wives and aged or disabled surviving divorced wives but benefits are not provided for similarly situated men.

House bill

Amends the statute to conform to court decisions by providing social security benefits for aged divorced husbands and aged or disabled surviving divorced husbands based on their former wives earnings records. (SSA is currently complying with court decisions.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. REMARRIAGE OF SURVIVING SPOUSE BEFORE AGE 60

Present law

Widows and widowers who remarry before age 60 are treated differently with respect to their eligibility for benefits based on their deceased spouses' earnings. A woman may qualify for benefits as a surviving spouse, even though she has remarried, so long as she is not married at the time she applies for benefits. A man, however, under current law loses forever his eligibility as a surviving spouse of his deceased wife worker if he remarries before age 60. Since the decision of Mertz v. Harris (1980), SSA has paid benefits to remarried widowers on the same basis as to remarried widows.

House bill
Amends the statute to conform to court decisions by making the requirements for widowers' and widows' benefits consistent. (SSA is currently complying with the aforementioned court decisions.)

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN

Present law
An illegitimate child may be eligible for benefits based upon a man's earnings, without regard to the appropriate State intestate laws, if among other things, the man has been decreed by a court to be the father of the child, or the man is shown by evidence satisfactory to the Secretary to be the father of the child. Similar provisions do not currently apply when an illegitimate child claims a benefit based upon his mother's earnings.

House bill
Provides that illegitimate children would be eligible for benefits based on their mother's earnings as they are currently for benefits based on their father's earnings.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

D. TRANSITIONAL INSURED STATUS

Present law
Certain workers who attained age 72 before 1969 are eligible for social security benefits under transitional insured status provisions which require fewer quarters of coverage than would ordinarily be required. Wives and widows of eligible male workers who reached 72 prior to 1969 also are eligible for benefits under this provision, but husbands and widowers of eligible female workers are not.

House bill
Extends to husbands and widowers the transitionally insured status provisions which currently apply to wives and widows.
Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

E. PROUTY BENEFITS

Present law
Special payments are provided to persons who attained age 72 before 1968 and who have no quarters of coverage and to persons age 72 in 1968 or after who have at least three quarters of coverage for every year after 1966 and before the year of attainment of age 72. However, even though each spouse must meet the same eligibility requirements if he or she were not married, once the eligibility of both is determined, the couple is treated as if the husband were the retired worker and the wife were the dependent. The benefit is allocated so that the husband is paid two-thirds of the benefit and the wife is paid one-third.

House bill
Provides that where both husband and wife each qualify for Prouty benefits under Section 228 of the Social Security Act, each would receive a full monthly benefit.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

F. FATHERS’ INSURANCE BENEFITS

Present law
A young wife, widowed mother or surviving divorced mother who has an entitled child under age 16 in her care receives a benefit for both herself and her child based upon the earnings of her husband. Under the law a similarly situated father cannot qualify for benefits based on his retired, disabled, or deceased wife’s earnings.

House bill
Amends the statute to conform to court decisions by providing social security benefits for a father who has in his care an entitled child of his retired, disabled, or deceased wife (or deceased former wife). (SSA is currently complying with the aforementioned court decisions.)

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.
G. EFFECT OF MARRIAGE ON CHILDHOOD DISABILITY AND OTHER DEPENDENTS' OR SURVIVORS' BENEFITS

Present law
When a childhood disability beneficiary is married to another childhood disability beneficiary or to a disabled worker beneficiary, and the disability benefits of one of the beneficiaries is terminated because the beneficiary recovers or engages in substantial work, the continued eligibility of the other spouse depends upon the spouse's sex. A woman's childhood disability benefits end when her husband’s disability benefits end. However, a man's childhood disability benefits are not terminated when his wife's disability benefits end.

House bill
Continues the benefits of a childhood disability beneficiary, regardless of sex, when the beneficiary's spouse is no longer eligible for benefits as a childhood disability beneficiary or disabled worker beneficiary.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

H. EFFECTS OF MARRIAGE ON OTHER DEPENDENTS' OR SURVIVORS' BENEFITS

Present law
If a childhood disability beneficiary or disabled worker beneficiary marries a person receiving certain kinds of social security dependent or survivor benefits, the benefits of each individual continue. If the disabled beneficiary is a male and he recovers or engages in substantial work and his benefits are terminated, his wife's benefits also end. If, however, the disabled beneficiary is a woman, her husband's benefits are not terminated when her disability benefits end.

House bill
Continues social security payments to an individual, regardless of sex, who is receiving dependents' or survivors' benefits, when his or her spouse is no longer eligible for childhood disability benefits or benefits as a disabled worker.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.
I. CREDIT FOR MILITARY SERVICE

Present law

A widow (but not a widower) is permitted, under certain circumstances, to waive the right to a civil service survivor's annuity and receive credit (not otherwise possible) for military service prior to 1957 for purposes of determining eligibility for and the amount of, social security survivors' benefits.

House bill

Allows widowers to exercise the option to waive the right to a civil service survivor's annuity in the same way as is currently permitted for widows.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. COVERAGE

A. FOREIGN AFFILIATES OF AMERICAN EMPLOYERS

Present law

Work by a U.S. citizen outside the U.S. for a foreign subsidiary of a domestic corporation is covered by social security if the domestic corporation arranges for coverage by entering into a voluntary agreement with the Internal Revenue Service; the agreement applies to all citizens subsequently employed by the subsidiary if their work would be covered if performed in the U.S.

A "foreign subsidiary" of a domestic corporation is defined as a foreign corporation of which: not less than 20 percent of its voting stock is owned by a domestic corporation; or more than 50 percent of its voting stock is owned by another foreign corporation and at least 20 percent of the latter corporation's voting stock is owned by a domestic corporation.

A domestic corporation which has entered into a voluntary agreement providing for social security coverage of U.S. citizens employed by its foreign subsidiary can also elect to include such U.S. citizens in its qualified pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, etc. plans. A similar rule applies to U.S. citizens employed by a domestic corporation's domestic subsidiary that operates primarily abroad.

House bill

Broadens the availability of social-security coverage to American citizens working abroad by: (1) permitting coverage of American citizens working outside the United States for a foreign affiliate of an American employer; and (2) reducing the ownership interest in the foreign affiliate that is required to be held by the American employer from 20 percent to 10 percent (either directly or through one or more entities). These changes would be effective upon enactment.
In addition, coverage would be extended to include employees of American employers and affiliates who are residents of the United States as well as American citizens. (This provision applies generally to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.)
Conforming changes would be made in the provisions relating to the extension of coverage under qualified pension, profit-sharing, stock bonus, etc. plans for employees of a domestic corporation's subsidiary.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. FOREIGN EARNED INCOME EXCLUSION

Present law
U.S. citizens and resident aliens who are not residents of a foreign country for a full year compute their net self-employment income for purposes of social security taxes (SECA) without regard to the foreign earned income exclusion. However, no coverage is provided for these taxable earnings.
U.S. citizens who are residents of a foreign country compute their net self-employment income excluding amounts which are also excluded for income tax purposes by the foreign earned income exclusion.

House bill Provides that foreign earned income which is currently subject to social security self-employment tax would be creditable for social security coverage purposes, effective with respect to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1981.
Provides that all net self-employment income would be computed for SECA purposes without regard to the foreign income exclusion, effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. INCLUDING ELECTIVE FRINGE BENEFITS AND NONQUALIFIED DEFERRED COMPENSATION IN THE SOCIAL SECURITY WAGE BASE

Present law
(1) Cash or deferred arrangements (Code section 401(k)).—Under a cash or deferred arrangement forming a part of a qualified profit-sharing or stock bonus plan, a covered employee may elect to have the employer contribute an amount to the plan on the employee's behalf or to receive such amount directly in cash. Amounts contributed to the plan pursuant to the election are treated as employer contributions and are excluded from the employee’s taxable income and social security wage base.

(2) Cafeteria plans (Code section 125).—Under a cafeteria plan of an employer, an employee may choose among various benefits including cash, taxable benefits and nontaxable benefits (including a cash or deferred arrangement) offered under the plan. If certain requirements are met, amounts applied toward nontaxable benefits are excluded from the employee’s taxable income and generally from the social security wage base.

(3) Tax-sheltered annuities (Code section 403(b)).—Subject to certain limitations, amounts paid by the employer for the purchase of a tax-sheltered annuity for an eligible employee are excluded from the employee’s taxable income and social security wage base. Tax-sheltered annuities may be purchased for employees of educational institutions and certain tax-exempt organizations. Tax-sheltered annuities may be purchased pursuant to a salary reduction agreement.

(4) Nonqualified deferred compensation plans.—Amounts deferred under a nonqualified deferred compensation plan generally are taxable when they are paid or when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture, depending upon whether or not the plan is unfunded or funded. However, if the plan is a retirement plan or the amounts are paid on account of retirement, the amounts are generally excludible from FICA and FUTA. These plans may be utilized by (1) taxable employers to provide retirement benefits in excess of those permitted under tax-qualified retirement plans or coverage limited primarily to highly compensated or management employees, (2) tax-exempt employers, and (3) State and local governments.

House bill

(1) An employer’s plan contributions on behalf of an employee under a qualified cash or deferred arrangement would be includible in the social security wage base for tax and coverage purposes to the extent that the employee could have elected to receive cash in lieu of the contribution, effective for remuneration paid after Dec. 31, 1983.

(2) Amounts subject to an employee’s designation under a cafeteria plan would be includible in the social security wage base to the extent that such amounts may be paid to the employee in cash or property or applied to provide a benefit for the employee not excluded from the FICA wage base effective for remuneration paid after Dec. 31, 1983.

(3) Amounts paid by an employer for a tax-sheltered annuity for an employee will be includible in the social security wage base.

(4) No provision.

Senate amendment

(1) Same as House bill.

(2) Same as House bill, except applies only to cafeteria plans which include a cash-or-deferred arrangement as one of the optional fringe benefits.

(3) Any amounts paid by an employer to a tax-sheltered annuity by reason of a salary reduction agreement between the employer and the employee would be includible in the social security wage base.

(4) The amount deferred under a (nonqualified) compensation plan will be includible in the social security wage base as of the later of (1) when the services are performed or (2) when there is no substantial risk of forfeiture of the rights to the amounts. In the case of a governmental plan, a deferred compensation plan will only include certain nonqualified plans of State and local governments.

Conference agreement

(1) The conference agreement generally follows the House bill and the Senate amendment with respect to qualified cash or deferred arrangements. Employer contributions to these arrangements will be taxable for FICA and FUTA purposes whether or not the cash or deferred arrangement is part of a cafeteria plan. A transition rule is provided to exclude certain remuneration paid after the effective date of this provision if paid pursuant to certain elective deferrals made before January 1, 1984 (January 1, 1985, with respect to FUTA taxes).

(2) The conference agreement contains no other provision concerning the inclusion of amounts applied toward nontaxable (for FICA purposes) benefits in a cafeteria plan.

(3) The conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment by providing that employer contributions to a section 403(b) annuity contract would be included in the wage base if made by reason of a salary reduction agreement (whether evidenced by a written agreement or otherwise). For this purpose, the conferees intend that employment arrangements, which under the facts and circumstances are determined to be individually negotiated, would be treated as salary reduction agreements. Of course, the mere fact that only one individual is receiving employer contributions (e.g., where the employer has only a few employees, only one of whom is a member of a class eligible for such contributions) is not, by itself, to be considered proof of individual negotiation.

(4) With respect to nonqualified deferred compensation plans, the conference agreement generally follows the Senate amendment that includes amounts deferred in the employee's FICA and FUTA wage base when services are performed or, if later, when there is a lapse of a substantial risk of forfeiture (within the meaning of sec. 83) of the employee's right to those amounts. As under present law, amounts treated as employer contributions under a State pick-up plan (sec. 414(h)(2)) or amounts deferred under eligible State and local deferred compensation arrangements are includible in the wage base when deferred. The conference agreement provides that any payment to, or on behalf of, an employee or his beneficiary under certain supplemental retirement plans, which provide cost-of-living adjustments to the pension benefits under tax-qualified plans, will not be included in the wage base. Finally, under the conference agreement, in the case of certain agreements, in existence on March 24, 1983, between a nonqualified deferred compensation plan and an individual, the provision would only apply to services performed after December 31, 1983 (December 31, 1984, for FUTA purposes).
D. STANDBY PAY

Present law

Any payment (other than vacation or sick pay made to an employee after the month in which he or she attains age 62, where the employee did not work for the employer in the period in which such payment is made, is excluded from the definition of wages for both benefit and tax purposes.

House bill

Includes in the statutory definition of wages, payments made to an individual with the expectation that he or she will subsequently render services (effective with respect to calendar years beginning after the sixth month after date of enactment).

Senate amendment

Same as House bill, except it would be effective for remuneration paid after 1983.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. CODIFICATION OF ROWAN DECISION WITH RESPECT TO MEALS AND LODGING

Present law

In Rowan Companies, Inc. v. United States, 452 U.S. 247 (1981), the Supreme Court stated that the definition of “wages” for FICA purposes must be interpreted in regulations in the same manner as for income-tax withholding purposes. At issue in Rowan Companies, Inc. was the exclusion, for FICA tax purposes, of employer provided meats and lodging from gross income under code sec. 119.

House bill

With the exception of the value of meals and lodging provided for the convenience of the employer, the determination of whether or not amounts are includible in the social security wage base is to be made without regard to whether such amounts are treated as wages for income tax withholding purposes. In addition, the bill provides that the definition of wages for social security tax and benefit purposes is revised to exclude the value of employer provided meals and lodging if such value is excluded from the employee’s gross income. The provision applies to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Senate amendment

Same as House bill.

F. EXCLUSION OF EMPLOYER PAYMENTS MADE UNDER SIMPLIFIED EMPLOYEE PENSION PLANS

Present law

In 1978, the Internal Revenue Code was amended to exclude from wages for social security tax purposes employer payments to or on behalf of an employee under a simplified employee pension (SEP) plan. However, no corresponding change was made to the Social Security Act definition of covered wages.

House bill
Amends the Social Security Act to exclude in the definition of covered wages for social security coverage purposes employer contributions to a simplified employee pension (SEP) plan. Effective with respect to remuneration paid after December 31, 1983.

Senate amendment
Same as House bill, except also changes definition for FUTA purposes effective January 1, 1985.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

G. DEFINITION OF EMPLOYER FOR WITHHOLDING ON SICK PAY

Present law
Present law includes in the definition of wages for the purpose of social security and railroad retirement taxes, payments made under a sick pay plan to an employee or any of his dependents by a third-party on account of the employee’s illness.

Proposed Treasury regulations would require a third-party payor (for example, an insurance company) to withhold social security or railroad retirement taxes on the sick pay payments they make as if they were paying wages. However, the third-party payor would be permitted to shift responsibility for the employer’s portion of the tax to the last employer for whom the employee worked.

House bill
Provides that, to the extent permitted in regulations, a multi-employer plan which makes sick pay payments will be treated as the agent of the employer for whom services are normally rendered.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

H. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO FUTA WAGE BASE

Present law
The definition of wages subject to tax under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) is similar to the definition of wages subject to FICA.

House bill
No provision.
Senate amendment

The bill amends FUTA to conform to changes made in the FICA wage base by this bill and P.L. 97–123 with respect to elective compensation, standby pay, the Rowan decision, simplified employee pensions, and sick pay (items above).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

I. INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SECURITY AGREEMENTS

Present law

An international Social Security agreement is to establish "methods and conditions for determining under which system [i.e., the foreign system or our own] employment, self-employment, or other service shall result in a period of coverage". However, through an inadvertent drafting error earnings that are intended to be covered under the U.S. system pursuant to an international social security agreement are not covered because U.S. social security taxes cannot be imposed on the earnings.

House bill

Provides for the imposition of social security taxes if an international social security agreement provides for coverage under the U.S. social security system. (Effective for taxable years after the date of enactment.)

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

J. STATE AND LOCAL EMPLOYEE GROUPS IN UTAH

Present law

Utah is permitted to extend social security coverage to specific entities listed in the law as separate coverage groups. The names of some of the entities specifically listed in the law have changed since the provision was enacted.

House bill

Amends the provision in the Social Security Act listing entities for which Utah may arrange social security coverage to provide that coverage would not be affected by a subsequent change in the name of any of the entities.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.
K. EFFECTIVE DATES OF INTERNATIONAL SOCIAL SECURITY AGREEMENTS

Present law
Totalization agreements can only become effective after the expiration of a period during which each House of the Congress has been in session on each of 90 days. (This has been interpreted to mean that both Houses of Congress must be in session on a particular day for it to count in the 90-day calculation.

House bill
Provides that totalization agreements can become effective after the expiration of a period during which only one House of the Congress must be in session on each of 60 days.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. ADDITIONAL AMENDMENTS

A. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS TO THE MAXIMUM FAMILY BENEFIT PROVISIONS

Present law
When children are simultaneously entitled to benefits on the records of two or more workers, the Maximum Family Benefits payable on each record are combined for the purposes of determining the benefits payable to those children. The law contains a limit, however, on the highest possible combined Maximum Family Benefit, sometimes referred to as the super maximum. Whenever the wage base increases (in January of every year), the super maximum is recomputed. In addition, in June of each year the super maximum is increased when the cost-of-living adjustment is made in general benefit levels. Thus, families whose benefits are limited by the super maximum can have their benefits unexpectedly increased or decreased each January when the super maximum is recomputed.

House bill
Provides that after initial entitlement, a family’s super maximum would be adjusted each year when a cost-of-living increase is provided to everyone on the benefit rolls.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.
B. RELAXATION OF INSURED Status REQUIREMENTS FOR CERTAIN WORKERS PREVIOUSLY ENTITLED TO DISABILITY INSURANCE BENEFITS

Present law

Workers who are disabled before age 31 have a lower insured status requirement than older workers. However, such a worker who recovers from his or her disability and subsequently becomes disabled again at age 31 or later may have difficulty establishing entitlement to disability benefits at that time because he or she has not had sufficient time to obtain the necessary 20 quarters of coverage before the subsequent disability.

House bill

Provides that a worker who had a period of disability which began before age 31, recovered, and then became disabled again at age 31 or later would again be insured for disability benefits if he/she had quarters of coverage in half the calendar quarters after age 21 and through the quarter in which the later period of disability began (up to a maximum of 20 out of 40 quarters). Effective generally for applications filed after enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

C. ILLEGITIMATE CHILDREN OF DISABLED BENEFICIARIES—FIRST MONTH OF ENTITLEMENT

Present law

The first month for which certain benefits are paid is delayed from the month during which the individual satisfied the various entitlement conditions to the first month throughout which those conditions were satisfied. This provision does not apply to the benefits of illegitimate children of retired beneficiaries. However, this provision does apply to the illegitimate children of disabled workers.

House bill

Provides social security monthly benefits to the illegitimate child of a disabled worker for a month in which the child satisfied all other entitlement conditions but was not eligible for benefits because the acknowledgment or court decree or order establishing parenthood occurred later than the first day of that month. Effective on enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.
D. ONE-MONTH RETROACTIVITY OF WIDOW'S AND WIDOWER'S BENEFITS

Present law

The payment of retroactive benefits is prohibited if such payment would require the lowering of future benefits.

House bill

Allows an aged widow or widower to receive actuarially reduced benefits for the month in which the insured spouse died, if the application is filed in the following month, even though the retroactive payment would result in lower future monthly benefits than would be the case if benefits were not paid retroactively. Effective for applications filed after the second month following the month of enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

E. CLARIFY THE PROVISION IN SOCIAL SECURITY LAW EXEMPTING BENEFITS UNDER SSA-ADMINISTERED PROGRAMS FROM ASSIGNMENT

Present law

Since 1935, the Social Security Act has prohibited the transfer or assignment of any future social security or SSI benefits payable and further states that no money payable or rights existing under the Act shall be subject to execution, levy, attachment, garnishment, or other legal process, or to the operation of any bankruptcy or insolvency law.

Based on the legislative history of the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, some bankruptcy courts have considered social security and SSI benefits listed by the debtor to be income for purposes of a Chapter XIII bankruptcy and have ordered SSA in several hundred cases to send all or part of a debtor's benefit check to the trustee in bankruptcy.

House bill

Specifically provides that social security and SSI benefits may not be assigned notwithstanding any other provisions of law, including P.L. 95-598, the "Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978". Effective on enactment.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.
F. USE OF DEATH CERTIFICATES TO PREVENT ERRONEOUS BENEFIT PAYMENTS TO DECEASED INDIVIDUALS

Present law

There are currently no well-developed procedures or arrangements to permit SSA to determine on a timely basis when a beneficiary has died.

House bill

Provides authority for the Secretary of HHS to contract with states for death certificate information. This information would be matched with SSA benefit records to help insure that benefit payments are promptly terminated when the beneficiary dies.

Senate amendment

Similar to House except incorporates GAO and SSA comments.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

G. STUDY OF SSA AS AN INDEPENDENT AGENCY

Present law

The Social Security Administration is currently part of the Department of Health and Human Services.

House bill

Authorizes a feasibility and implementation study with respect to establishing SSA as an independent agency. Such study shall include but not be limited to the following points: the feasibility of changing the current status of SSA; how to manage the transition; what authorities would need to be transferred or amended; what programs would be involved; what agency administrative relationships would need to be adjusted, etc. The study would be conducted (in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security) by a panel of administrative experts appointed by the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance, with a report and recommendations to be submitted to the Committees no later than January 1, 1984.

Senate amendment

Similar to the House provision except—

(1) commission would be appointed by the President with advice and consent of the Senate,
(2) report would be due no later than April 1, 1984, and
(3) implementation, not feasibility, of independent SSA, is included in study mandate.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement provides for the following:

In keeping with the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, a study shall be conducted with respect to the establishment of the Social Security Administration as an independent agency under a bipartisan board appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The study shall be conducted by a Commission consisting of experts widely recognized in the fields of government administration, social insurance, and labor relations. The study shall address, analyze and report to the Congress on: how to manage the transition, what authorities would need to be transferred or amended, the program(s) which should be included within the jurisdiction of the new agency, the legal and other relationships of the Social Security Administration with other organizations which would be required as a result of establishing the Social Security Administration as an independent agency, and any other details which may be necessary for the development of appropriate legislation to establish the Social Security Administration as an independent agency.

The study would be conducted (in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security) by a panel of experts appointed by the House Committee on Ways and Means and the Senate Committee on Finance, with a report and recommendations to be submitted to the Committees no later than April 1, 1984.

H. PUBLIC PENSION OFFSET

Present law

Under a provision enacted in 1977, people becoming eligible for a public pension on their own account after November 1982, will generally have the amount of any social security dependents or survivors' benefits reduced dollar-for-dollar on account of that public pension.

Under a provision adopted last year, persons who become eligible for a public pension after November 1982 and before June 1983 who meet a "one-half support" dependency test are exempt from the offset.

House bill

For persons who become eligible for public pension after June 1983, the amount of the public pension used for purposes of the offset against social security benefits would be one-third of the public pension.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill except that the percentage of the public pension to be used for purposes of the offset would be two-thirds.

I. CHILD-CARE DROP OUT YEARS

Present law

In computing a worker's covered earnings history under social security (upon which family benefits are based), up to five years of low earnings are dropped.
House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
The provision would allow up to two additional years to be dropped for persons who leave the workforce to care for a child under 3 in the home. To qualify for a child-care drop year, the worker can have no earnings at all during the year.
Effective for persons first eligible for benefits after 1983.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

J. PUBLIC MEMBERS ON BOARD OF TRUSTEES

Present law
The Board of Trustees of the four social security trust funds (Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Disability Insurance, Hospital Insurance, and Supplemental Medical Insurance) consists of, ex officio, the Secretaries of the Treasury, Health and Human Services, and Labor, with the Secretary of the Treasury serving as the managing trustee. Among other responsibilities, the Board of Trustees is required to report to Congress each year on the operation and status of the trust funds, review the general policies followed in managing the trust funds, and recommend changes in such policies.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Add two public members to the Board of Trustees of the OASDI, HI, and SMI trust funds. The public members would be nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The two public members could not be from the same political party. Trustees would not be considered fiduciaries and would not be personally liable for actions taken in such capacity with respect to the trust funds.
Effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

K. LIMITATION ON BENEFITS TO ALIENS

Present law
There are no citizenship or residence requirements for receiving social security cash benefits (OASDI). Any alien in the U.S.—whether legally or illegally, or as a permanent or temporary resident—is eligible for benefits provided he has engaged in covered employment and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements. Dependents and survivors are also eligible for benefits regardless of their immigration status or that of the insured worker.
House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Limitations would be placed on the payment of benefits to alien workers, their dependents and survivors who reside abroad. Benefits would continue to be paid only under the following conditions:

1. the worker is the citizen of a country with which the United States has a treaty or totalization agreement; and
2. until total benefits paid to the wage earner (after any income taxes paid) and dependents equal social security taxes payable by the wage earner plus interest.

This provision would apply to new eligibles on or after January 1, 1985.
In addition, prohibits the payment of social security benefits to noncitizens who are unable to establish at the time they apply for benefits that they had ever been legally admitted to work in the United States.
Effective for those first eligible after December 1983.
Also, in the case of beneficiaries who are under final orders of exclusion, departure or voluntary departure in lieu of deportation and can be shown by the Attorney General to have earned social security credits during periods of illegal work, those credits would not be used in computing social security benefits, thereby potentially eliminating benefits. (Floor amendment.)

Conferece agreement

The conference agreement would suspend the payment of benefits to any alien receiving benefits as a dependent or survivor of an insured worker (whether or not the worker is a U.S. citizen) when the alien beneficiary has been outside the U.S. for six consecutive calendar months. Alien auxiliary beneficiaries who could prove that they had lived in the U.S. for a total of at least five years during which their relationship with the worker was the same as the relationship upon which eligibility for benefits is based (e.g., spouse, child, parent) would be exempt from the suspension of benefits. Children would be deemed to meet the 5-year residence requirement if the residence requirement could be met by the child's parents.

L. LIMITATION ON PRISONERS BENEFITS

Present law

Persons imprisoned for the conviction of a felony may not receive student benefits (which are being phased out anyway), and are not eligible for disability benefits unless they are participating in a court-approved rehabilitation program. (Dependent benefits are not affected.) Also, impairments resulting from the commission of a crime cannot be the basis for disability benefits and impairments occurring during imprisonment cannot be the basis for disability benefits during the period of imprisonment.
Presently, benefits may continue to be paid to incarcerated felons who are either retired workers, widow or widower beneficiaries, spouses of retired or disabled workers, and to those DI beneficiaries in a court-approved rehabilitation program.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The provision would eliminate all benefits to felons during their period of incarceration. In addition, would prohibit payments to inmates of facilities for the criminally insane (Floor amendment). Benefits of dependents and survivors of incarcerated felons would not be affected.

Effective for benefits paid for the month after enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment, with an amendment providing that the limitation on prisoner's benefits will only extend the provision in current law applying to disability insurance benefits to old age and survivors' insurance benefits.

M. ACCELERATE STATE AND LOCAL DEPOSITS

Present law

Requires the deposit of withheld social security taxes for State and local employees within thirty days after the end of the month in which the applicable wages were paid.

By contrast, the frequency with which deposits of social security taxes and income taxes are made by private employers is determined under regulations issued by Treasury and vary in accordance with the tax liability of the employer. Deposits are required as frequently as every week for employers with large liabilities and as infrequently as every three months for employers with smaller liabilities.

Although State and local governments are now governed by the same rules as private employers with regard to depositing withheld income taxes, deposits of social security taxes continue to be treated differently.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The provision would apply the same social security tax deposit requirements to State and local governments that now apply to private employers.

Effective for deposits required to be made after December 1983.

Conference agreement

Under the conference agreement State and local governments would be required to deposit withheld social security taxes on a bi-weekly (i.e. every two weeks) basis.
N. EXCLUSION FROM SOCIAL SECURITY COVERAGE FOR SERVICES PERFORMED BY MEMBERS OF CERTAIN RELIGIOUS SECTS

Present law

In general, social security (FICA) tax is imposed on every individual who receives wages with respect to employment. In addition, social security tax is imposed on employers who pay wages with respect to employment. There is no exemption, under present law, for employers or employees who are members of religious sects that oppose the social security system. However, present law does provide an exemption from self-employment tax (SECA) for members of religious sects that are conscientiously opposed to the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provision for the care of their dependent members.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The provision will exempt from social security tax wages paid by individuals who are exempt from self-employment taxes because of their religious beliefs to individuals who are members of religious sects that conscientiously oppose the acceptance of private or public insurance and which make provisions for the care of their dependent members. This exemption applies both to the employer and employee portion of social security tax.

The exemption applies only in the case of religious sects that have been in existence at all times since December 31, 1950.

Effective for remuneration paid after 1983.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

O. INCREASE IN FICA AND WITHHOLDING TAX DEPOSIT THRESHOLD

Present law

In general, employers that have $500 or more of undeposited FICA and withholding taxes at the end of any month must deposit those taxes within 15 days after the end of that month. However, employers that have $3,000 or more of undeposited taxes at the end of any eighth-monthly period must deposit those taxes within 3 days after the close of the eighth-monthly period.

House bill

No provision.

Senate bill

Eighth-monthly deposits for any month will not be required until the employer has at least $5,000 of undeposited taxes. Once this $5,000 threshold is reached, the employer will be required to make further eighth-monthly deposits so long as there is $3,000 or more of undeposited taxes at the end of any eighth-monthly period falling within the same month.
The provision is effective for months beginning after December 31, 1983. (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

P. APPLICATION OF COMMON PAYMASTER RULES TO CERTAIN NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS EMPLOYING MEDICAL SCHOOL FACULTY MEMBERS

Present law

Present law generally requires an employer to pay FICA taxes with respect to a given employee only up to the amount of annual wages referred to as the wage base. Thus, if an employee works for more than one employer during the year and if his annual wages exceed the tax base, employer FICA taxes, taking into account all the employers for whom the individual worked, may be paid on amounts in excess of the wage base.

There is a "common paymaster" exception to these general rules which provides that if two or more related corporations concurrently employ the same individual and compensate him through a common paymaster that is one of the corporations, then the common paymaster is considered to be the only employer regardless of the fact that the individual performed services for other related corporations. Under one of the tests provided in regulations, two corporations are related if 30 percent or more of one corporation's employees are concurrently employees of the other corporation.

House bill

No provision.

Senate bill

A State university that employs health care professionals as faculty members at a medical school and a tax-exempt faculty practice plan that employs faculty members of the medical school would be deemed to be related corporations for purposes of the common paymaster rules, provided that 30 percent or more of the employees of the plan are concurrently employed by the medical school. Remuneration that is disbursed by the faculty practice plan to an individual employed by both the plan and the university which, when added to remuneration actually disbursed by the university, exceeds the contribution and benefit base will be deemed to have been actually disbursed by the university as a common paymaster and not to have been disbursed by the faculty practice plan.

The provision is effective on enactment (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
Q. ELECTIVE COVERAGE FOR MINISTERS AS EMPLOYEES

Present law

Under present law, ministers are not employees for social security tax (FICA) purposes. However, ministers generally are subject to the self-employment (SECA) tax.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

The provision allows ministers and their churches to treat services performed by ministers as employment for FICA tax purposes. Remuneration for such services would not be subject to the SECA tax. Once made, this election is irrevocable.

The provision is effective with respect to service performed on or after the first calendar quarter beginning after the date of enactment. (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

R. STUDY OF FEASIBILITY OF IMPLEMENTING SOCIAL SECURITY OPTION ACCOUNTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires an 18-month study by Treasury of a plan to permit workers to have part of their (and their employers') social security taxes allocated to an IRA type account. The designated deposits would be tax deductible. Subsequent social security benefits would be reduced to take IRA deposits into account. (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

S. EARNINGS SHARING IMPLEMENTATION STUDY (SECTION 161 OF SENATE AMENDMENT)

Present law

Earnings are credited for social security purposes to the record of the worker to whom they are paid.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

By January 1, 1984, requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to report to the House Committee on Ways and Means... and the Senate Committee on Finance on proposals that combine earnings of a husband and wife during the period of their marriage and divide them equally for social security benefit purposes. The study will analyze the impact of earnings sharing proposals on social security beneficiaries, and include recommendations (1) to provide adequate protection to particular classes of beneficiaries where necessary and (2) with respect to a feasible time period for implementation. In addition, the study will include cost estimates. (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with an amendment to delay the date to July 1, 1984.

T. CASHING OF CHECKS ISSUED TO DECEASED BENEFICIARIES

Present law

OASDI checks do not include a notice stating that cashing of a check to deceased individuals constitutes a felony.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Requires that all checks issued, and the envelopes in which they are mailed, include a notice that cashing or attempted cashing of a check which was erroneously issued to a deceased person constitutes a felony punishable under section 208 of the Social Security Act. Effective for checks issued for months after December 1983. (Floor amendment.)

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

U. ADMINISTRATIVE REORGANIZATION OF VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION
LOS ANGELES DATA PROCESSING CENTER

Present law

The Veterans' Administration is generally prohibited from reducing the staff at any of its offices by more than 10 percent in any fiscal year without advance notice to the Congress approximately 8 months prior to the beginning of that fiscal year.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Waives the requirements of veterans law (section 210(b)(2)(A) of title 38, USC) in the planned administrative reorganization at the Veterans Administration Los Angeles Data Processing Center involving the transfer of 25 full-time equivalent employees.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.
V. TREASURY STUDY OF INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT SECURITY ACCOUNTS (IRSA)

Present law
No provision.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Treasury would study the feasibility of implementing IRSA’s which would be similar to an IRA. Individuals would establish and fund the IRSA and receive a tax credit limited to 20 percent of the individual’s social security taxes, with a proportionate reduction in Old-Age and Survivors and Disability benefits. The study would be submitted to Congress before July 1, 1984.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows House bill.

W. TREATMENT OF EARNINGS OF DISABLED BLIND INDIVIDUALS

Present law
Blind disabled individuals are regarded as demonstrating the ability to engage in substantial gainful activity if their earnings exceed the exempt amount under the earnings test for individuals age 65 and over.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Provides that no individual who is blind shall be regarded as having demonstrated an ability to engage in substantial gainful activity solely on the basis of earnings; the benefits of such individuals shall be reduced in accordance with the earnings test for individuals age 65 and over. This would be effective for people applying for benefits after enactment.

Under a related amendment, the SGA level for the blind would be phased out as the earnings test is phased out for individuals 65 and older (between 1990 and 1995).

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

X. TRANSITIONAL BENEFITS TO WIDOW(ER)S

Present law
Nondisabled widow(er)s who do not have a child in their care are first eligible for benefits at age 60. If disabled, such widow(er)s are eligible for benefits at age 50 or older. Widow(er)s with a child in care are eligible for benefits regardless of their age.
House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Provide 6 months of benefits to persons widowed between the ages of 55 and 60. The benefit amount would be 71.5 percent of the worker’s primary insurance amount (i.e., unreduced from the benefit payable at age 60). Effective for monthly benefits after date of enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows House bill.

Y. BANKNOTE PAPER SOCIAL SECURITY CARDS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Requires that new and replacement social security cards be issued on banknote-quality paper beginning not later than 193 days after enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate Amendment.

TITLE IV—SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INCOME (SSI) PROVISIONS

1. INCREASE IN FEDERAL BENEFIT STANDARD

Present law
The current maximum monthly SSI benefit is $284.30 for a single person and $426.40 for married couples. Benefits are indexed to the Consumer Price Index (CPI). Cost-of-living increases are provided annually in July if the CPI for the first quarter of the calendar year increases by at least 3 percent over the first quarter of the previous year. Benefits are increased by the same percentage as social security benefits. This occurs through a reference in the SSI law to the social security cost-of-living provision. For example, the current payment level of $284.30 per individual, which became effective July 1982, represents an increase of 7.4 percent (or $19.60 monthly) from the previous July 1981 level of $264.70.

House bill
The Federal SSI benefit payment is increased by $20 per month for individuals and $30 per month for couples, effective July 1, 1983.

The next Federal SSI cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) is delayed from July 1983 until January 1984. Federal SSI benefits will be adjusted in January 1984, and every January thereafter, by the same percentage and under the same procedures as OASDI benefits. The provision to pay the lower of the increase in wages or prices, which is applicable to OASDI benefit increases beginning in 1988, would apply to SSI. As with title II, the 1983 COLA, to be paid in January, 1984, will be provided even if the CPI increase is less than 3 percent.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill, (with technical correction), except that the provision to pay the lower of the increase in wages or prices, which would be applicable to OASDI benefit increases beginning in 1988, would not apply to SSI.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

2. ADJUSTMENT IN FEDERAL PASS-THROUGH PROVISIONS

Present law

P.L. 94-585, enacted October 21, 1976, established Federal SSI "pass-through" requirements, effective with the cost-of-living increase provided in July 1977. These provisions provide States with two options for meeting the pass-through requirements.

(1) Aggregate spending level option.—A State may make State supplementary payments in any current 12-month period that are no less, in the aggregate, than were made in the previous 12-month period (17 States use this option); or

(2) Individual payment level option.—A State may maintain the supplementary payment levels that were in effect for categories of individual recipients in December 1976. (All other States use this measure, except Texas and West Virginia which have no State supplementation program.)

An amendment in P.L. 97-248 allows a State that shifts from the aggregate spending option to the individual payment level option to maintain State supplementation levels in effect in the previous December rather than the levels in December 1976.

House bill

States would be allowed the following options in meeting the pass-through requirement:

(1) Aggregate spending level option.—Same as present law.

(2) Individual payment level option.—Current law is modified (a) by substituting the State supplementary payment levels in effect in March 1983 for those in effect in December 1976 as the levels that States must maintain in complying with the payment level pass-through requirement and, (b) with regard to the $20/$30 increase in the Federal SSI standard in July 1983, by requiring States to pass-through only as much as would have been required if the SSI COLA were not changed from July 1983 to January 1984.

Senate amendment

States would be allowed the following options in meeting the pass-through requirements:

(1) Aggregate spending level option.—Same as present law.
(2) Individual payment level option.—The payment levels that must be maintained would be either (a) those in effect in December 1976, or the previous December, as under current law; or (b) those in effect in March 1983, as provided in the House bill. In other words, the March 1983 supplementary payment levels would be an additional option for complying with the payment level pass-through provision, rather than a substitute for the December 1976 levels as under the House bill.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

3. SSI Eligibility for Temporary Residents of Emergency Shelters for the Homeless

Present law
Under current law, aged, blind or disabled individuals who are residents of private emergency shelters are eligible for SSI. However, such residents of public shelters cannot receive SSI.

House bill
Aged, blind or disabled individuals who are temporary residents of public emergency shelters could receive SSI payments for a period of up to three months during any 12-month period.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

4. Disregarding of Emergency and Other In-Kind Assistance Provided by Nonprofit Organizations

Present law
SSI: In-kind assistance (other than assistance to meet home energy needs) that is provided by a private nonprofit organization to aged, blind, or disabled individuals must generally be counted as income under the SSI program.

AFDC: Under HHS rules, States have the authority to decide whether or not to count in-kind assistance as income under the AFDC program. There is no provision in the AFDC statute (other than in the case of home energy assistance) which specifically provides that authority.

House bill
SSI: Effective upon enactment until September 30, 1984, any support or maintenance assistance provided in-kind by a private nonprofit organization to aged, blind, or disabled individuals must be disregarded under the SSI program, if the State determines that the assistance is provided on the basis of need for such support or maintenance.

AFDC: The AFDC statute would be amended to give States specific authority, at their option, to disregard such assistance in de-terminating AFDC benefits. This would be effective upon enactment until September 30, 1984.

Senate amendment
No provision

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. Notification Regarding SSI

Present law
Currently, there is no statutory requirement that OASDI beneficiaries be contacted and informed of potential eligibility for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) payments. However, since the beginning of the SSI program, the Social Security Administration has undertaken a number of outreach efforts to identify those potentially eligible. SSA routinely provides information about SSI eligibility and takes applications for SSI payments at the time of application for OASDI benefits, if the applicant is potentially eligible for SSI payments. In addition, many State agencies and other private relief groups routinely refer clients to SSA. Presently, about 6.9 percent of elderly social security recipients also receive SSI.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Prior to July 1, 1984, the Secretary of Health and Human Services would be required to notify, on a one-time basis, all elderly OASDI beneficiaries who are potentially eligible, of the availability of SSI and encourage them to contact their district offices. In addition, the provision would require that the same information be included with the notification to OASDI beneficiaries of upcoming eligibility for Supplemental Medical Insurance.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

TITLE V—UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION (UC) PROVISIONS

1. Extension of Federal Supplemental Compensation (FSC) Program

Present law
Under the current FSC program, which became effective on September 12, 1982, and expires March 31, 1983, additional weeks of Federally financed unemployment compensation benefits are provided to jobless workers who have exhausted all other State and Federal unemployment benefits. The number of weeks of FSC benefits that jobless workers may receive depends on (a) the number of weeks of State unemployment benefits received by each claimant, and (b) the State in which the claimant qualified for or receives the benefits.

As originally enacted, the FSC program, depending upon State insured unemployment rates (IUR), provided a maximum of 10, 8, or 6 additional weeks of benefits. As amended by provisions contained in the Surface Transportation Assistance Act of 1982 (P.L. 97-424), beginning with the week of January 9, 1983, the FSC program provides the following maximum weeks of benefits:

1. 16 weeks in States with a 13 week average insured unemployment rate (IUR) of at least 6.0 percent;
2. 14 weeks in States that were triggered on the extended benefits program between June 1, 1982 and January 6, 1983;
3. 12 weeks in the remaining States that have a 13 week average IUR of at least 4.5 percent;
4. 10 weeks in the remaining States that have a 13 week average IUR from 3.5 percent to 4.4 percent; and,
5. 8 weeks in all other States.

The number of weeks of FSC a qualified individual may receive is the lesser of 65 percent of the number of weeks of regular State benefits he received or the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable in the State. In the case of an interstate claim for FSC, the individual is eligible for the lesser of (a) the maximum number of weeks of FSC payable to him in the State in which he receives the benefits or (b) the maximum number of weeks payable to him in the State in which he qualified for FSC benefits.

To qualify for FSC an individual must have exhausted all State and extended benefits to which he is entitled, and he must meet State and extended benefit qualification requirements. This means he must have worked at least 20 weeks or have the equivalent in wages during the base period.

House bill

The FSC program is extended for 6 months, from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983.

Effective April 1, 1983, FSC benefits would be payable as follows:

(a) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:
1. 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
2. 13 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
3. 11 weeks in States with average IUR 4.5 to 4.9 percent;
4. 10 weeks in States with average IUR 3.5 to 4.4 percent;
5. 8 weeks in all other States.

(b) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhaust FSC on or before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks equal to three-fourths of the basic FSC entitlement payable in the State, up to a maximum of:
1. 10 weeks in the 14 basic week States (average IUR 6.0 or above);

1 The Insured Unemployment Rate (IUR) is the percentage of workers covered under the State unemployment compensation law who are claiming State unemployment benefits in a particular week. The number of weeks of FSC payable in a State depends upon the average IUR measured over a moving 13 week period.
(2) 8 weeks in the 13 and 11 basic week States (average IUR 4.5 to 5.9);
(3) 6 weeks in the 10 and 8 basic week States (average IUR 4.4 and below).

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

Section 503 provides for the coordination of the FSC extension with the Trade Readjustment program.

Senate amendment

The FSC program is extended for 6 months from April 1, 1983 through September 30, 1983.

Effective April 1, 1983, FSC benefits would be payable as follows:

(a) Basic FSC Benefits.—Individuals would begin receiving FSC on or after April 1, 1983 could receive up to a maximum of:

   (1) 14 weeks in States with average IUR 6.0 percent and above;
   (2) 12 weeks in States with average IUR 5.0 to 5.9 percent;
   (3) 10 weeks in States with average IUR 4.0 to 4.9 percent;
   (4) 8 weeks in all other States.

The maximum number of weeks payable in a State after April 1, 1983 could be no more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number payable on March 27, 1983.

(b) Additional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who exhaust FSC on or before April 1, 1983 could receive additional weeks of FSC benefits up to a maximum of:

   (1) 8 weeks in States with IUR at 6.0 and above
   (2) 6 weeks in States with IUR at 5.0 to 5.9
   (3) 4 weeks in all other States.

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits.—Individuals who begin receiving FSC before April 1, 1983 and have some FSC entitlement remaining after that date, could also receive additional weeks under (b) above. However, the combination of their remaining basic FSC entitlement received after April 1, 1983, and the additional weeks provided in (b), cannot exceed the maximum number of weeks of basic FSC benefits payable in the State, shown in (a) above.

(d) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—Individuals who have not exhausted their FSC entitlement on September 30, 1983, when the program expires, would be eligible to receive up to 50 percent of their remaining FSC entitlement. No new claimants would be added to the FSC program on or after September 30, 1983.

(e) New Qualification Requirement.—Claimants must have worked 26 weeks or have earned the equivalent in wages during their base period to qualify for FSC. This applies only to claimants becoming eligible for FSC on or after April 1, 1983.

Conference agreement

(a) Basic FSC Benefits.—The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification in the provision under which the maximum number of weeks payable in a State after April 1, 1983 could be no more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number of weeks payable under the FSC law in effect as of March 27, 1983. Under the modification, this provision would apply only in those States where the maximum number of FSC weeks payable for the first week beginning after March 27, 1983 or, if later, the first week FSC benefits provided under this bill are payable was more than 4 weeks less than the maximum number of weeks payable under the FSC law in effect on March 27, 1983.

(b) Additional FSC Benefits.—The conference agreement follows the House bill with the following adjustment: 10 additional weeks would be payable in States with average IUR at 6.0 percent and above; 8 additional weeks would be payable in States with average IUR at 4.0 to 5.9 percent; and, 8 additional weeks would be payable in all other States.

(c) Transitional FSC Benefits.—The conference agreement follows the House bill.

(d) Phaseout FSC Benefits.—The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

(e) New Qualification Requirement.—The conference agreement follows the House bill.

(f) Coordination of FSC and Trade Readjustment Assistance.—The conference agreement follows the House bill.

2. LIMITATION ON DISQUALIFICATION OF FSC CLAIMANTS WHO ENROLL IN TRAINING

Present law

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act provides, as a condition for employers in a State to receive the normal FUTA tax credit, that the State law not deny unemployment compensation to otherwise eligible claimants for any week during which they are attending a training course with the approval of the State agency. Many States frequently disapprove of training, however. In addition, State laws must provide that individuals in approved training must not be denied benefits because they are unavailable for work, are not actively searching for work, or have refused suitable work.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Would prohibit the denial of FSC to any otherwise eligible claimant for any week because: (1) the claimant is attending training or an accredited educational institution on a full-time basis; or (2) because of State law requirements that the claimant must be available for work, actively searching for work, or must not have refused work during the training, unless the State agency determines that the training will not improve the claimant’s employment opportunities.

Effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
3. DEFERRAL OF INTEREST PROVISION

Present law

Present law imposes interest of up to 10 percent per year on Federal unemployment compensation loans obtained by the States after April 1, 1982, except for "cash flow" loans that States repay by the end of the fiscal year in which the loans were obtained. A State with high unemployment can defer payment of, and extend the payment for, 75 percent of interest charges due in any year. The State must pay one-third of the deferred amount in each of the three years following the fiscal year for which it is due. Interest is charged on the deferred interest. In order to qualify for this deferral and extension of the payment period, the State insured unemployment rate must have equaled or exceeded 7.5 percent during the first 6 months of the preceding calendar year.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

(a) The Senate amendment makes the provisions imposing interest on loans to States permanent.

(b) The amendment also allows States to defer 80 percent of the interest due for a fiscal year, effective for interest accrued in fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. The deferred amount would be payable in 4 installments in the succeeding years equal to at least 20 percent of the original amount of interest due. A State would be required to meet conditions 1 and 2(A) or 2(B) below to qualify for the deferral:

(1) no action has been taken to reduce its tax effort or trust fund solvency; and

(2)(A) action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) has been taken after March 31, 1982 which increases revenues and decreases benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first deferral is requested; and, deferral of interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made; or,

(B) for taxable year 1982, total State UC tax revenues equaled at least 2 percent of total wages paid by employers covered under the State UC law.

(c) Interest will not be charged against any interest for which payment is deferred under current law deferral provisions or those added by this bill and summarized in (b) above.

(d) The amendment allows a State to delay for up to nine months the payment of interest due for any calendar year after 1982 during which the average total unemployment rate in the State was 13.5 percent or higher. The average total unemployment rate for a State shall be computed using the 12-month period for which the most recent information is available prior to the month in which the interest is due. Interest will not be charged against interest for which payment is delayed.

(e) The amendment allows States to receive a discounted interest rate that would be one percentage point below the interest rate that would otherwise apply. This would be authorized for interest accrued only for fiscal years 1983, 1984, and 1985. It would be available under the same conditions as the new deferral above, except the required percentage changes in (2) would be higher at 50, 80, and 90 percent, respectively.

For purposes of determining whether a State meets the conditions in (2) above, the Secretary of Labor will provide an estimate of the unemployment rate for the base year, the calendar year in which the deferral is requested. The level of benefits and revenue liabilities will be determined using the State law in effect before passage of the legislation. The estimate of changes as a result of new legislation will be made from the base year in each year for which a deferral is requested. Changes in State law which automatically provide for increases in benefit amounts will be considered as if they were in effect in the base year for purposes of determining the change occurring as a result of new legislation. The Secretary of Labor may use historical growth rates for indexed items if appropriate. Once a deferral is approved, a State must continue to maintain its solvency effort. Failure to do so would result in immediate payment of all deferred interest.

Increases in the taxable wage base from $6,000 to $7,000 after calendar year 1982 and increases in the maximum FUTA tax rate to 5.4 percent after calendar year 1984 will not be counted for purposes of meeting condition (2).

States will not be penalized or rewarded if economic events change from those used in the base year for computing eligibility under conditions (2).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

4. CAP ON CREDIT REDUCTION

Present law

The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) imposes a Federal unemployment compensation (UC) tax on employers in all States at a rate of 3.5 percent on a taxable wage base of $7,000. However, employers in States generally receive a FUTA tax credit of 2.7 percent, resulting in a net Federal tax rate of 0.8 percent. States with insufficient State unemployment compensation revenues to meet State unemployment compensation obligations may borrow from the Federal Unemployment Account. If a State defaults on its loans from the Federal account, employers in the State begin to lose the FUTA tax credit at the rate of at least .3 percent a year. For example, because of overdue Federal UC loans, sixteen States are experiencing a reduction in the 2.7 percent credit for tax year 1982.

Specifically, if a Federal UC loan is not entirely repaid by the State by the second January 1 after the State receives the loan and remains unpaid on the following November 10 of that year, the FUTA tax credit applicable for that year for the State's employers is reduced by .3 percent. For each succeeding year in which the loan remains outstanding, the reduction is at least an additional .3 percent (i.e., .6, .9, 1.2 percent, etc.). Additional offset credit reductions may apply to a State beginning in the second year of repayment if certain criteria are not met. Under legislation enacted in the 1970's, credit reductions were not imposed from 1975–1980 for States satisfying specific requirements.

The 1981 Budget Reconciliation Act made two major changes in loan payment conditions, effective from January 1, 1981 to December 31, 1987: (1) interest of up to 10 percent is charged on loans made after April 1, 1982 (except those made for "cash flow" purposes and repaid by the end of the fiscal year in which they occur); and (2) States were allowed to "cap" the automatic FUTA credit reductions if certain solvency requirements are met.

In a State that qualifies for the cap, the tax credit reduction is limited to the higher of 0.6 percent, or the rate that was in effect for the State for the preceding calendar year.

The cap provisions are designed to give States additional time to make legislative and administrative changes necessary to restore the State trust funds to solvency. These provisions lengthen the repayment period, but do not reduce a State's total liability.

In order to qualify for the cap on the automatic credit reductions a State must demonstrate that:

1. the net solvency of its UI system has not diminished (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
2. there have been no decreases in its unemployment tax effort (effective for taxable years 1981–1987);
3. its average tax rate for the calendar year equals or exceeds its average benefit cost rate for the prior five years (effective for taxable years 1983–1987); and
4. the outstanding loan balance as of September 30 of the tax year in question is not greater than on the third preceding taxable year (effective for taxable years 1983–1987 the comparable year for taxable year 1983, however, is 1981).

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

(a) Makes the credit reduction cap provisions in present law permanent.

(b) A State would still be required to meet all four conditions in present law to qualify for the full credit reduction cap. The amendment would, however, provide two lower annual credit reductions, if a State does not qualify for the total cap:

1. If a State meets the first two present law credit reduction cap conditions and either of the remaining two conditions, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.1 percentage points from what it would have been if the State had not qualified for a cap; and

2. If a State meets the first two credit reduction cap conditions and qualifies for the interest deferral as a result of substantial changes in its unemployment compensation law, the annual credit reduction would be reduced by 0.2 percentage points from what it would have been if the State had not qualified for a cap. A substantial change in action (certified by the Secretary of Labor) taken after March 31, 1982 which increases revenues and decreases benefits by a total of 25 percent in the calendar year immediately following the fiscal year for which the first interest deferral is requested. Deferral of interest due for the years immediately following the year in which the first year change is effective may be received if changes of 35 and 50 percent are made.

The lower credit reductions would be authorized only for taxable years 1983, 1984, and 1985 liabilities. Credits earned during this period would be applied in determining the State's offset credit reduction for years after 1985.

The January 1st of each year for which a State qualifies for a partial limitation on the offset credit reduction will be taken into account for purposes of determining future offset credit reduction. The credit reduction applicable in each subsequent year after the partial limitation is in effect would continue to be reduced by the amount by which the offset credit was reduced.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

5. AVERAGE EMPLOYER CONTRIBUTION RATE

Present law

Present law provides that a State, in the second year in which the offset credit reduction is imposed to repay outstanding loans, may be subject to an additional credit reduction equal to the amount by which the State's average tax rate is lower than 2.7 percent. The average tax rate and the 2.7 percent are computed from the ratio of taxes collected to State and Federal taxable wages, respectively. Taxable wages are determined by the taxable wage base. Any wages above the taxable wage base are therefore not included.

In States where the taxable wage base exceeds the Federal taxable base of $7,000, the ratio of the State's UC tax revenues to the State's taxable wages will be lower than it would be if the taxable wage base was $7,000. This could activate the additional credit reduction in the second year even though these States have relatively higher tax efforts.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Changes the calculations so that all wages instead of just taxable wages are counted in the denominators of the State tax rates and the 2.7 percent. Each State's tax rate on all wages subject to contributions under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) is compared to an estimate of the national percentage of all wages subject to FUTA contributions that 2.7 percent of taxable wages represents. The 2.7 percent factor is calculated as the product of 2.7 percent and the ratio of the Federal taxable wage base ($7,000) and the estimated United States average annual wage in covered employment for the calendar year in which the determination is made.

Effective for taxable years beginning with 1983.
Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

6. Date For Payment of Interest

Present law
Present law requires that interest is due no later than the first day of the next fiscal year. If the next fiscal year falls on a weekend, interest is due in the prior fiscal year. Otherwise, it is due on the first day of the next fiscal year.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Requires payment of interest before the first day of the next fiscal year.
Effective on date of enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

7. Penalty for Failure To Pay Interest

Present law
If a State does not pay interest when it is due, there are no provisions in present law through which the Federal government can penalize the State or enforce the collection of interest charges.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Provides that, if a State fails to pay interest charges when they are due, (a) Federal unemployment compensation and employment service administrative funds will be withheld and (b) the State's unemployment compensation program will lose its Federal certification, which will result in employers in the State losing eligibility for the credit against the Federal unemployment tax.
Effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

8. Treatment of Employees Providing Services to Educational Institutions

Present law
The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) covers employees of educational institutions. FUTA requires States to deny benefits between academic years or terms to certain professional employees working in instructional, research, and principal administrative capacities if they have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term. FUTA gives the States the option of applying the same denial of benefits provision to non-professional employees of educational institutions.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

(a) States would be required to deny benefits between academic years or terms to nonprofessional employees of educational institutions if the employees have a reasonable assurance of returning to work in the next academic year or term;

(b) States would be required to deny benefits between terms to individuals performing services on behalf of an educational institution or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or agency.

The provisions would be effective on or after April 1, 1984. States in which there is no legislative session before that date, however, would be given additional time to comply with this provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment in (a) above that requires States to deny benefits between terms to nonprofessional employees of educational institutions. The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment in (b) above with the modification that it would be optional to the States to extend the between term denial to individuals performing services on behalf of an educational institution or an educational service agency even though not employed by either the institution or the agency.

9. EXTENDED BENEFITS FOR INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE HOSPITALIZED OR ON JURY DUTY

Present law

Present law disqualifies claimants from receiving Extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation if they are not actively seeking work. Moreover, the disqualified claimant must go back to work for at least 4 weeks and earn at least 4 times his weekly benefit amount before he can qualify again for Extended Benefits or Federal Supplemental Compensation.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Permits States to determine weekly eligibility based on availability for work for claimants of Extended Benefits and FSC who are serving on jury duty or are hospitalized for treatment of an emergency or life-threatening condition. A State must treat these individuals in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law.

Effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
10. Option for Voluntary Health Insurance Deduction From Unemployment Benefits

Present law

Section 3304(a)(4) of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act prohibits States from withdrawing money from the State unemployment trust fund for anything except the payment of unemployment compensation benefits or to refund certain taxes erroneously paid by employers.

House bill

Provides States the option of deducting an amount from the unemployment compensation benefits otherwise payable to an individual and using the amount deducted to pay for health insurance, if the individual elects to have such a deduction made from his benefits.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

11. Treatment of Certain Organizations Who Were Retroactively Granted 501(c)(3) Status

Present law

Unemployment insurance coverage was extended to employees of certain nonprofit organizations in 1970 and then extended to employees of generally all nonprofit organizations in 1976. Under the 1970 and 1976 amendments, nonprofit organizations were given the option of financing unemployment benefits paid to their former employees through the State unemployment payroll tax system that applies to private employers (contribution method) or by retroactively reimbursing the State trust fund for the amount of benefits paid to their former employees (reimbursement method).

Nonprofit employers who had voluntarily covered their employees prior to the 1970 or 1976 amendments and financed benefit costs by the contribution method, and after enactment of the 1970 or 1976 amendments chose to switch to the reimbursement method of financing, were permitted to apply any accumulated balance in their accounts toward costs incurred in the future and paid for on a reimbursement basis. The authority to make such a transfer, however, was available for a limited period of time that expired shortly after enactment of the 1976 and 1970 amendments.

House bill

Allows a nonprofit organization that elects to switch from the contribution to the reimbursement method of financing unemployment benefits to apply any accumulated balance in its State unemployment account to costs incurred after it switches to the reimbursement method, under the following conditions:

1. The organization did not elect to switch to the reimbursement method under prior authority because during these periods the organization was treated as a 501(c)(4) organization by the IRS, but the organization has been subsequently determined by the IRS to be a 501(c)(3) organization; and,
(2) the organization elects to switch to the reimbursement method before the earlier of 18 months after such election was first available to it under State law or January 1, 1984.

Senate amendments
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

12. WAIVER OF PENALTY TAX ON WITHDRAWALS FROM INDIVIDUAL RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS (IRA's) BY CERTAIN UNEMPLOYED WORKERS

Present law
An individual generally is subject to a penalty tax equal to 10 percent of any distribution from an individual retirement account (IRA) to the individual for whose benefit the IRA was established if the individual is less than age 59 1/2 when the distribution is made. However, the penalty tax does not apply if the distribution is attributable to the individual's becoming permanently and totally disabled.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
The 10 percent penalty tax would not apply in the case of distributions from an IRA to an individual who has at least 20 quarters of coverage under social security, and who has received, within the preceding 12-month period, regular unemployment compensation under State law, and has exhausted all rights to such compensation in his most recent benefit year. The amendment would apply to withdrawals after the date of enactment.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill.

13. REEMPLOYMENT VOUCHERS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Would permit claimants of Federal Supplemental Compensation (FSC) to offer a voucher equal to 75 percent of their maximum potential FSC benefits to prospective employers in lieu of FSC benefits no later than one month after they become eligible for FSC. If the employer hires the claimant, the State agency will certify the employer’s use of the following portions of the voucher’s face value in payment of Federal employment taxes (FUTA and FICA): (1) 25 percent within the first month of employment; (2) 25 percent in each of the next groups of three months of employment. If a claimant cannot use the voucher or only uses a portion, he would receive the balance of his maximum potential FSC benefits, reduced by the payments made to employer or the amount of FSC he would have received for the period.

The employer must certify that the employment under the voucher meets the following conditions: (1) the employee will be employed for an average of at least 30 hours per week during the payment period; (2) displacement of current employees, including reduced nonovertime hours, will not occur; and (3) the employee will not be hired to fill a vacancy created by laying off or terminating a regular employee.

Also, no “payment” may be made to a claimant’s base year employer.

Effective upon enactment.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

TITLE VI. PROSPECTIVE PAYMENTS FOR MEDICARE
INPATIENT HOSPITAL SERVICES

1. PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT AMOUNT

Present law

Under present law, medicare payment amounts are retrospectively determined based upon a hospital’s reasonable costs, subject to the limits established by TEFRA. Certain reimbursement limits are applied to (1) hospital inpatient operating costs (“section 223” limits) and (2) the rate of increase in inpatient operating costs (this limit expires after fiscal year 1985).

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to determine prospectively a payment amount for each hospital discharge. Hospital cases (discharges) would be classified into “diagnosis related groups” (DRG’s).

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

2. DRG RATES

A. SEPARATE RATES

Present law

No provision.
House bill

Under the House bill, separate payment rates would apply to urban and rural areas in each of the 9 census divisions (the 50 States and the District of Columbia).

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, separate payment rates would apply to urban and rural areas in each of the 4 census regions (the 50 States and the District of Columbia).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

B. TERMINATION OF REGIONAL ADJUSTMENTS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Under the House bill, regional adjustments (i.e., by census divisions) would no longer apply after the fourth year of the program.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, regional adjustments (i.e., by census regions) would no longer apply after the third year of the program.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment as it applies to the 9 census divisions.

3. EFFECTIVE DATE/TRANSITION

A. PHASE-IN PERIOD

Present law

Under present law, the section 223 limits are authorized indefinitely; the rate of increase limits will not apply to hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985.

House bill

Under the House bill, implementation of the new prospective payment system would be phased in over a 3-year period, starting with each hospital's first cost reporting period beginning on or after October 1, 1983. During year one, 25% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates; 75% of the payment would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year two, 50% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates and 50% on each hospital's cost base. In year three, 75% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates and 25% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year four, 100% of the payment would be determined under the DRG payment methodology. In year five, 100% of the payment would be determined under a national DRG payment methodology.
Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except that during year one, 25% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (25% national, 75% regional); 75% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year two, 50% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (50% each); 50% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year three, 75% of the payment would be based on a combination of national and regional DRG rates (75% national, 25% regional); 25% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year four, 100% of the payment would be determined under the national DRG payment methodology.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modifications. Under the agreement, implementation of the prospective payment system would be phased-in over a 3-year period. During year one, 25% of the payment would be based on regional DRG rates; 75% would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year two, 50% of the payment would be based on a blend of national and regional DRG rates (25% national, 75% regional); 50% of the payment would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year three, 75% of the payment would be based on a blend of national and regional DRG rates (50% national, 50% regional); 25% of the payment would be based on each hospital's cost base. In year four, 100% of the payment would be determined under the national DRG payment methodology.

B. CALCULATION OF COST-BASED PORTION OF PAYMENT

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Under the House bill, for the first 2 reporting periods, the calculation of that portion of a hospital's payment which is cost-based would be the lesser of the hospital's payment under the rate of increase limits, without the penalties and bonuses of present law, or the section 223 limits without regard to any exemptions, exceptions or adjustments thereto. For the third reporting period, the calculation of the cost-based portion would be the hospital's payment under the rate of increase limit only.

Senate amendment

Same provision, except the Section 223 limits would not apply.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The managers note that during the phase-in period, some portion of the prospective payment rate will be related to each hospital's own experience in a base cost reporting year. The managers recognize that, in some cases, the Secretary will have to use estimates to adjust some portions of the hospital's base year experience to make it comparable to inpatient operating costs that will be paid under the prospective system—e.g., FICA taxes that would have been paid if the hospital had been in the social security system or the adjustment needed to exclude the nursing differential which is no longer payable. Since the hospital's specific portion of the rate must be determined in advance of the hospital's first fiscal year under the system, the managers expect the Secretary will use the best data available at that time to determine operating costs for the purposes of the phase-in.

C. MAINTENANCE OF COST-REPORTING SYSTEM

Present law
Under present law, hospitals are required to file annual cost reports which are used to determine the amount of each hospital's reasonable cost reimbursement.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to maintain a system of cost reporting during the period of transition to the new prospective payment system and for at least two years after full implementation of the new payment program (at least until the end of fiscal year 1988).

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the House bill. The managers intend that the Secretary consider the needs of the States prior to changing cost-reporting requirements. Many States use the medicaid cost reports for purposes of reimbursement under the medicaid program. It is the managers' intention that extensive cost reports be maintained, at least during the first year of implementation, in order to allow States time to adjust their medicaid reporting requirements.

4. AREA WAGE ADJUSTMENT

Present law
Under present law, an adjustor, using Bureau of Labor Statistics data for hospital wages, is used under current section 223 limits to adjust for area differences in hospital wage levels.

House bill
Under the House bill, DRG rates would be adjusted for area differences in hospital wage levels compared to the national average hospital wage level.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, DRG rates would be adjusted for area differences in hospital wage levels compared to the national or regional average hospital wage levels as appropriate.
Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill.

5. INITIAL PAYMENT LEVEL

A. GENERAL

Present law

Under present law, medicare payments to hospitals are made according to the lower of actual reasonable costs, the section 223 total cost limits, or the rate of increase limits added by TEFRA. The TEFRA rate of increase limits are based on each hospital's historical costs. These costs are updated by the marketbasket of goods and services purchased by hospitals, plus 1 percentage point.

House bill

Under the House bill, the rates for each DRG would be derived from historical medicare cost data for each hospital. The rates would be updated to fiscal year 1983 by the estimated industry-wide actual increase in hospital costs. The rates would be further updated for fiscal year 1984 by the increase in the marketbasket plus 1 percentage point. In fiscal year 1984, the DRG rates would be reduced, as may be required, to achieve budget neutrality in relationship to the reimbursement levels that would have applied under the TEFRA legislation.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

B. SERVICES COVERED

Present law

Under present law, services provided to medicare beneficiaries who are inpatients of a hospital are ordinarily billed under part A and reimbursed on a reasonable cost basis. However, some payments for certain non-physician services rendered to inpatients are billed by suppliers of services under part B on a reasonable charge basis.

House bill

Under the House bill, effective October 1, 1983, all non-physician services provided in an inpatient setting would be paid only as inpatient hospital services under part A, except as provided below.

The Secretary is given authority to waive these restrictions, and to provide for adjustments in the DRG payments rates, for hospitals which can demonstrate to the Secretary that their practices prior to October 1, 1982, were such that their services were extensively billed independently under part B. Such hospitals could be permitted, by the Secretary, to continue such billing arrangements during the transition period for phasing-in the prospective payment system. Such arrangements would not be recognized once the prospective payment system is fully implemented. The Secretary would estimate, each year, amounts that would have been reimbursed under part B for inpatient hospital services (other than physician services) and include, each year, in the base rate for determining the DRG payment rates an approximation of this amount.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment would also provide payment for all non-physician services provided to hospital inpatients, effective October 1, 1983, only as inpatient hospital services, except that the Secretary may waive these restrictions during the transition period in the case of hospitals that have allowed direct billing under part B so extensively that immediate compliance with such restrictions would threaten the stability of patient care. The Secretary could allow continued payment of part B billings as long as he or she subsequently deducted the total amount for these billings from the payments made under the prospective system to the hospital. If such a waiver is granted, the Secretary, at the end of the transition, may provide for such methods of payment under part A as is appropriate given the organizational structure of the institution.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification requiring the Secretary to define, by regulation for this purpose, non-physician services which would be considered in-patient hospital services covered by prospective DRG-based payments.

C. ADJUSTMENTS FOR SOCIAL SECURITY

Present law

Under present law, a downward adjustment is made to a hospital's medicare payment to account for a hospital's withdrawal from the Social Security system.

House bill

Under the House bill, the provision in present law would be repealed.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, the provision also would be repealed. In addition, in setting the initial payment rates, the Secretary would be required to recognize the payroll costs some hospitals will incur as the result of being required to enter the Social Security system, by adjusting base costs for individual hospitals and by adjusting the DRG prospective rates to include these additional costs.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
6. ANNUAL UPDATES

A. ANNUAL INCREASE

Present law
Under present law, the rate of increase limits are updated by the increase in a marketbasket of goods and services purchased by hospitals, plus 1 percentage point.

House bill
Under the House bill, for fiscal year 1985, payment amounts from the previous fiscal year would be increased by the marketbasket, plus 1 percentage point. There would be an overall budget limitation to maintain budget neutrality for fiscal year 1985.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

B. SECRETARY'S DETERMINATION OF ANNUAL INCREASE FACTOR

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, taking into consideration the recommendations of the panel, the Secretary must determine, for each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 1986, the appropriate increase factor.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, taking into consideration the recommendations of the commission, the Secretary must determine, for each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 1986, the increase factor; such factor must assure adequate compensation for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification which requires that the Secretary, in determining the increase factor, must take into account amounts necessary for the efficient and effective delivery of medically appropriate and necessary care of high quality.

C. PUBLICATION OF SECRETARY'S DETERMINATION

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary must publish in the Federal Register (1) not later than the June 1 before each fiscal year beginning with fiscal year 1986, his or her determination of the proposed increase factor and (2) not later than the September 1 before such fiscal year, his or her final determination of the increase factor. The Secretary must include in the publication due by June 1 the report of the panel's recommendations for that fiscal year.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

D. EXPERT PANEL/COMMISSION'S DETERMINATION OF ANNUAL INCREASE FACTOR

Present law
No provision.

House bill
The House bill requires the Secretary to appoint a panel of independent experts to review the increase factor and make recommendations to the Secretary on the appropriate percentage increase for fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 1986. The panel must take into account changes in the marketbasket, hospital productivity, technological and scientific advances, quality of care, and utilization of relatively costly, though effective, methods of care.

Senate amendment
The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except the review of the increase factor and recommendations to the Secretary would be conducted by a commission selected by the Office of Technology Assessment, and would begin with fiscal year 1986.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. EXPERT PANEL/COMMISSION'S REPORT ON ANNUAL INCREASE FACTOR

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the panel must report its recommendations on the increase factor to the Secretary not later than May 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 1986.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the commission must report its recommendations on the increase factor to the Secretary not later than April 1 before the beginning of each fiscal year, beginning with fiscal year 1986.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
7. RECALIBRATION OF DRG'S

A. SECRETARY'S DETERMINATION OF DRG RECALIBRATION

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to establish (and would be permitted from time to time to make changes in) a system of classification of inpatient hospital discharges by DRGs and a methodology for classifying specific hospital discharges within the DRGs. For each DRG, the Secretary would be required to assign (and would be permitted from time to time to recompute) an appropriate weighting factor which reflects the relative hospital resources used for discharges classified within that DRG compared to resources used for discharges classified in other DRGs.

Senate amendment
The Senate amendment contains a similar provision except the Secretary would be required to adjust the classifications and weighting factors at least once every 3 years to reflect changes in treatment patterns, technology, and other factors which may change the relative use of hospital resources.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification requiring the Secretary to adjust the DRG classifications and weighting factors for fiscal year 1986 and subsequently, as necessary, but no less often than once every four years.

B. EXPERT COMMISSION'S DETERMINATION OF DRG RECALIBRATION

Present law
No provision.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the commission would be required to consult with, and make recommendations to, the Secretary with respect to changes in the DRGs, based on its evaluation of scientific evidence with respect to new practices, including the use of new technologies and treatment modalities. The commission must report to Congress its evaluation of any adjustments to the DRGs made by the Secretary.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
8. ATYPICAL CASES/OUTLIERS

A. BASIS FOR OUTLIER PAYMENTS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to make additional payments where the length of stay for any case in a DRG exceeds, by more than 30 days, the average length of stay for cases within the same DRG. In addition, if a case has some other unusual length of stay or unusual cost, the Secretary could provide additional payment amounts.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the Secretary would be required to make additional payments where (1) the length of stay exceeds the mean length of stay by some fixed number of days or (2) by a certain number of standard deviations, whichever is less. Hospitals would be permitted to appeal for additional payments for cases where charges adjusted to costs are equal to or greater than some multiple of the DRG rates or some dollar criterion, whichever is greater.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The managers are equally concerned that adjustments may be required for cases which have an unusually short length of stay or which are significantly less costly than the DRG payment. The Secretary would be required to report on this with recommendations on how to address this issue.

B. PAYMENT LEVELS FOR OUTLIER CASES

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the additional payment amounts per case would be determined by the Secretary.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the amount of additional payments would be determined by the Secretary and approximate the marginal cost of care beyond the outlier cut-off criteria (days or dollar amounts).

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.
C. TOTAL PROPORTION OF OUTLIER PAYMENTS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to provide additional payments for outlier cases amounting to not less than 4 percent of total DRG related payments.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the Secretary would be required to provide additional payments for outlier cases amounting to not less than 5 percent, and not more than 6 percent, of total projected or estimated DRG related payments.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

9. CAPITAL EXPENSES

A. CAPITAL IN GENERAL

Present law
Under present law, medicare reimburses hospitals for the reasonable costs of capital (including depreciation, interest and rent).

House bill
Under the House bill, capital expenses, as defined by the Secretary, would be specifically excluded from the prospective payment proposal and would continue to be reimbursed on a reasonable cost basis.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, capital expenses, as defined by the Secretary, would be specifically excluded from the prospective payment system until October 1, 1986, during which time they would continue to be reimbursed on a reasonable cost basis. After October 1, 1986, such expenses would no longer be excluded.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The managers intend that capital, as defined by the Secretary, includes return on equity. The managers also note that the Secretary is required to complete, within 18 months, a thorough review of the methods by which capital, including return on equity, can be incorporated into the prospective payment system. The managers expect that additional legislation will be enacted by Congress to deal with capital-related issues under the prospective payment system before October 1, 1986. However, if the Secretary has implemented a system of prospective payment for capital without legislative action and the mandatory section 1122 capital planning approval provision has gone into effect, the conferees intend that the Secretary will adjust the prospective payment for capital to reflect a disapproval project under section 1122.

B. RETURN ON EQUITY

Present law

Under present law, medicare reimburses proprietary institutions a return on equity.

House bill

The House bill provides for the phase-out of return on equity for hospitals under the prospective payment system over the three-year transition period during which the cost-based payment is being phased out (75% in the first year, 50% in the second year and 25% in the third year). No payment for a return on equity would be made for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1986.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

Under the conference agreement, effective with respect to cost reporting periods beginning on or after the date of enactment, the rate of return on equity will be reduced from one and one-half times to an amount equal to the rate of interest paid by the Federal Treasury on the assets of the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund.

C. NEW CAPITAL

Present law

No provision.

House bill

The House bill expresses the intent of Congress that, in implementing a system for including capital-related costs under a prospective payment system, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after March 1, 1983, may be distinguished and treated differently from projects initiated before such date.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment expresses the intent of Congress that, in implementing a system for including capital-related costs under a prospective payment system, costs related to capital projects initiated on or after the effective date of the implementation of such system may or may not be distinguished and treated differently from projects initiated before such date.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The managers believe no assurances can be given that, under a new system of paying for capital, projects obligated (as defined by regulations under section 1122) after the date of enactment of this legislation will continue to be paid on a reasonable cost basis.
Present law

Under present law, the Secretary is authorized to exclude from reimbursement to providers certain costs related to capital expenditures that have been disapproved by a section 1122 planning agency.

House bill

Under the House bill, at the end of 3 years, Medicare would not make payment for a new capital project unless the State had a section 1122 capital approval process and the capital expenditures had been recommended by the State under such mechanism.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment changes for cost reporting periods prior to October 1, 1986: (1) the financing of reviews of capital projects from the Hospital Insurance Trust Fund to general revenues; (2) increases the amount of capital projects that is subject to the 1122 approval process from $100,000 to $600,000; (3) exempts from the review process expenditures made by or on behalf of a health care facility where 75 percent of the patients using the services of such facility are enrollees in HMO's or CMP's and such expenditures are for services and facilities needed by such organization to operate efficiently; and (4) requires hospitals to make their overall expenditure plans and capital budgets available to section 1122 agencies.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the provision in the House bill with the following modification: the requirement that Medicare payment for new capital projects be conditional on section 1122 approval would be effective October 1, 1986, only if no legislation were enacted by that date which includes capital-related costs in the prospective reimbursement system. In addition, effective upon enactment: (1) the financing of reviews of capital projects would be made from general revenues; (2) the maximum threshold a State may use for determining which capital projects are subject to the section 1122 review process would be increased from $100,000 to $600,000; States would be permitted to set a lower threshold; (3) in order for a health care facility, where 75 percent of the patients are HMO or CMP enrollees, to be exempt from the section 1122 review process because needed services and facilities are not otherwise readily accessible, the organization must establish that one of the following five conditions is met:

(a) the facilities are geographically dispersed
(b) the facilities are not available under a contract of reasonable duration
(c) full and equal medical staff privileges are not available
(d) the arrangements are not administratively feasible, or
(e) the services are more costly than if provided by the HMO or CMP; and
(4) hospitals would be required to make their overall expenditure plans and capital budgets available to the section 1122 or other appropriate agency.

10. MEDICAL EDUCATION EXPENSES

A. DIRECT COST

Present law
Under present law, medicare reimburses direct medical education expenses, such as the salaries of interns and residents in approved education programs, on the basis of reasonable cost.

House bill
Under the House bill, direct medical expenses for approved educational programs would be specifically excluded from payment determinations under the prospective payment system and would be paid on the basis of reasonable cost.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

B. INDIRECT COST

Present law
Under present law, the section 223 limits provide an adjustment to recognize individual hospital differences in indirect costs due to approved teaching activities.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary is required to provide additional payment amounts under the prospective payment system for hospitals with indirect costs of medical education. The adjustment for such payment amounts would equal twice the section 223 adjustment, provided under regulations, in effect as of Jan. 1, 1983, for such costs.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

11. EXEMPTIONS, EXCEPTIONS, AND ADJUSTMENTS

A. PAYMENTS TO EXEMPTED HOSPITALS AND HOSPITAL UNITS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, hospitals or units of hospitals exempted from the prospective payment system would be subject to the section 223 limits (until hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1985) and the rate of increase limits applicable under current law.
Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except the section 223 limits would no longer apply for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

B. PSYCHIATRIC, LONG-TERM CARE, AND CHILDREN'S HOSPITALS

Present law

Under present law, section 223 limits do not apply to children's hospitals, long-term care hospitals or to rural hospitals with less than 50 beds. In addition, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments to the section 223 limits as he or she deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of psychiatric hospitals.

House bill

Under the House bill, psychiatric, long-term care, children's and rehabilitation hospitals would be specifically exempted from the prospective payment system. Upon request of a hospital, rehabilitation and psychiatric units which are distinct parts of acute care hospitals would also be specifically exempted.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except (1) hospitals would not have to request exemptions for distinct parts of rehabilitation or psychiatric units and (2) exemptions of any such hospitals or hospital units would no longer apply when the Secretary determines that adequate data of clinical and statistical significance is available to include these institutions and units under the prospective payment system.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the provision in the House bill with a modification that deletes the provision which conditions granting of an exemption on the receipt by the Secretary of a request from a hospital.

C. SOLE COMMUNITY HOSPITALS

1. Payments

Present law

Under present law, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments to the section 223 limits as he or she deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of sole community hospitals.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be authorized to provide exceptions and adjustments to take into account the special needs of sole community hospitals.
Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, payments to sole community hospitals for hospital cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, would be on the same basis, as payments to all other providers in the first year of the transition period: 25% of the payment would be based on a blend of national and regional DRG rates (25% national, 75% regional); 75% would be based on each hospital's own cost base. In no case would total medicare payments in those cost reporting years beginning on or after October 1, 1983, and before October 1, 1986, be less than the payments made in the preceding year.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the provision in the Senate bill with modifications: (1) Conforms the basis of payment to the first-year blend of payment rates applicable to other hospitals agreed to by the conferees (item 3a); and (2) where a sole community hospital experiences a change of more than 5 percent in its total volume over a previous year, due to circumstances beyond its control, the Secretary would be required to provide, for 3 years, an adjustment to fully compensate the hospital for the fixed costs it incurs and for the reasonable cost of maintenance of core staff and services.

2. Definition

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Under the House bill, "sole community hospitals" are defined as those that, by reason of factors such as isolated location or absence of other hospitals (as determined by the Secretary), is the sole source of inpatient hospital services reasonably available in a geographical area to part A medicare beneficiaries.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except includes weather and travel conditions in the list of factors defining a sole community hospital.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

D. PUBLIC AND OTHER HOSPITALS

Present law

Under present law, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments to the section 223 limits as he or she deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of public and other hospitals that serve a disproportionate number of low income or part A medicare beneficiaries.
House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to provide exceptions and adjustments, as he or she deems appropriate, to take into account the special needs of public or other hospitals that serve a disproportionately large number of low-income or part A medicare beneficiaries.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except also applies to regional and national referral centers (including very large acute care hospitals in rural areas).

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

E. OTHER PROVIDERS

Present law

Under present law, the Secretary is required to provide exemptions, exceptions, and adjustments to the “section 223” and the rate of increase limits as he or she deems appropriate to take into account the special needs of new hospitals, risk-based health maintenance organizations, hospitals providing atypical or essential services and to take account of extraordinary circumstances beyond a hospital’s control; and for other purposes.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary is required, by regulation, for such exceptions and adjustments as he or she deems appropriate (including those that may be appropriate with respect to public and teaching hospitals and hospitals involved extensively in treatment for, and research on, cancer).

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the provision in the House bill with a modification which deletes the requirement with respect to public and teaching hospitals. The conferees wish to make it clear that this authority permits the Secretary to provide for such exceptions and adjustments as may be appropriate with respect to hospitals experiencing special problems because of their location in a particular census division.

F. ALASKA AND HAWAII

Present law

Under regulation, special adjustments are provided to the section 223 limits for hospitals in Alaska and Hawaii.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary is authorized to provide adjustments to the DRG payment amounts as he or she deems appro-appropriate to take into account the unique circumstances of hospitals located in Alaska and Hawaii.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

G. HOSPITALS IN TERRITORIES, INCLUDING PUERTO RICO

Present law
No provision.

House bill
The House bill exempts from the prospective payment system hospitals located outside the fifty States or the District of Columbia (e.g., the territories, including Puerto Rico).

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill. (See study section.)

12. ADMissions AND QUALITY REVIEW

A. CONTRACTS WITH PROFESSIONAL REVIEW ORGANIZATIONS

Present law
Present law (title XI of the Social Security Act) requires the Secretary to enter into contracts for utilization and quality control peer review with professional review organizations (PROs) or other review organizations, including medicare intermediaries (subject to certain conditions and limitations).

House bill
Under the House bill, effective October 1, 1984, as a condition for receipt of medicare payments, a hospital receiving payments according to the prospective DRG rates would be required to contract with a peer review organization, in the area, designated by the Secretary under Title XI for the review of admissions, discharges, and quality of care with respect to medicare hospital inpatient services. The 12-month waiting period for intermediaries to qualify as review organizations as specified in present law would begin on the date the Secretary enters into contracts or on October 1, 1983, whichever is earlier.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, hospitals receiving payments under the prospective payment system would be required to enter into an agreement with a peer review organization (if such as organization has a contract with the Secretary under title XI for the area in which the hospital is located). The purpose of this contract is to provide for the review of the validity of the diagnostic information provided by such hospitals, the completeness and adequacy of the care provided, the appropriateness of admissions, and the appropriateness of care provided to patients designated by the hospitals as outliers. These reviews would be covered as a hospital cost of care under part A but the PRO would be paid by the Secretary on behalf of the hospital on the basis of a rate per review established by the Secretary. The amount expended will be no less than an amount which reflects the rates per review established in fiscal year 1982 for both direct and administrative costs, adjusted for inflation, and will be expended from the trust fund and not subject to appropriations.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with modifications. Under the agreement, (1) hospitals receiving payments under the prospective payment system would be required from the date of enactment through September 30, 1983, to contract with a professional review organization (PRO), if there is a PRO in the area which has contracted with the Secretary under title XI; (2) such hospitals would be required, on or after October 1, 1984, to contract with a PRO, in the area, designated by the Secretary under title XI as a condition of receiving payments under the medicare program (if the Secretary has not contracted with a PRO in the area such hospitals would not receive payment); (3) the 12-month waiting period for intermediaries to qualify as PROs (as specified in present law) would begin on the date the Secretary enters into contracts or on October 1, 1983, whichever is earlier as in the House bill; (4) where a contract between the Secretary and a PRO is terminated after October 1, 1984, the Secretary would be required to enter into a new contract with a PRO in that area within 6 months of such termination, during which period hospitals would not be penalized because no PRO exists in the area, and (5) the amount expended for review purposes must also be no less than an amount equal to the total expenditures made during 1982 for review costs adjusted for inflation.

B. MONITORING SYSTEM ESTABLISHED BY THE SECRETARY

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to establish a system for monitoring admissions and discharges of both hospitals receiving prospective payment and hospitals reimbursed on a cost basis, utilizing HCFA, medicare intermediaries, professional review organizations/professional standards review organizations, or such other medical review authority, to review admissions and discharge practices and quality of care.

Senate amendment

No provision.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement strikes the provision in the House bill but modifies the review requirements of professional review organizations (PROs) to include review of patterns admissions and discharges and quality of care of hospitals receiving medicare payments.
C. PENALTIES FOR UNACCEPTABLE PRACTICES

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be authorized to take corrective action where hospitals, paid according to the prospective rates or on a cost basis, were determined to be engaged in unacceptable admissions, medical, or other practices. The Secretary would be permitted to disallow part or all of the Medicare payment with respect to an unnecessary or multiple admissions, or to require hospitals to take other corrective action necessary where a provider was determined to have engaged in such practices.

Senate amendment
No provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the provision in the House bill with a modification which authorizes the Secretary to take such corrective action based on the findings of the PRO.

13. PAYMENTS TO HMO'S AND CMP'S

Present law
Current law provides that health maintenance organizations (HMO's) and competitive medical plans (CMP's) may be reimbursed either on the basis of reasonable costs or under a risk-based contract, a payment equal to 95% of the adjusted average per capita cost (AAPCC) for Medicare enrollees in the HMO's area.

House bill
Under the House bill, the proposal would permit, at its election, an HMO or a CMP that receives Medicare payments on a risk basis to choose to have the Secretary directly pay hospitals for inpatient hospital services furnished to Medicare enrollees of the HMO or CMP. The payment amount would be at the DRG rate (or on the basis of reasonable cost, as applicable) and would be deducted from Medicare payments to the HMO or CMP.

Senate amendment
Similar provision.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the provision in the House bill with a technical amendment.
14. STATE COST CONTROL SYSTEMS

A. AUTHORITY UNDER PRE-TEFRA LEGISLATION

Present law

Under present law, the Secretary has authority to establish medicare demonstration projects. There are currently four State-wide medicare demonstrations (MD, NJ, NY, and MA) and one area-wide (Rochester, NY) demonstration.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be expressly authorized to continue to develop, carry out, or maintain medicare experiments and demonstration projects.

Senate amendment

Same as the House bill.

B. AUTHORITY FOR STATE PROGRAMS

Present law

Present law authorizes the Secretary, at the request of a State, to pay for medicare services according to the State's hospital cost control system if such system—

1. applies to substantially all non-acute care hospitals in the State;
2. applies to at least 75% of all inpatient revenues or expenses in the State;
3. provides assurances that payors, hospital employees and patients are treated equitably; and
4. provides assurances that the State’s system will not result in greater medicare expenditures over a three-year period than would otherwise have been made. (To date, no State systems have been approved under this authority).

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be prohibited from (1) denying a State application on the ground that the State’s system is based on a payment methodology other than DRGs, or (2) requiring that medicare expenditures under the State’s system be less than the expenditures which would have been made under the Federal prospective payment system. It includes the 4 requirements in TEFRA for approval of a State system and adds a fifth requirement: if the Secretary determines that the State system will not preclude an HMO or CMP from negotiating directly with hospitals with respect to payment for inpatient hospital services.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains the same provision, except adds a sixth requirement that States must provide for a prohibition on payments under part B for nonphysician services provided to inpatients.
Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with a modification under which the Secretary would be required to issue regulations setting forth the conditions under which States could waive restrictions under State systems relating to payments for certain non-physician services provided to hospital inpatients.

C. CONTINUATION OF CURRENT STATE PROGRAMS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, for those States which currently have a medicare waiver the Secretary would be required to continue the State program if, and for so long as, the conditions described above are met.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

D. REQUIRED STATE PROGRAMS

Present law
No provision.

House bill
Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required to approve any State program which meets the following 6 requirements in addition to the conditions indicated above, that the system: (1) is operated directly by the State or an entity designated by State law; (2) is prospective; (3) provides for hospitals to make such reports as the Secretary requires; (4) provides satisfactory assurances that it will not result in admissions practices which will reduce treatment to low income, high cost, or emergency patients; (5) will not reduce payments without 60 days notice to the Secretary and to hospitals; and (6) provides satisfactory assurances that, in the development of its program, the State has consulted with local officials concerning the impact of the program on publicly owned hospitals.

The Secretary would be required to respond to requests from States applying under these 11 conditions within 60 days of the date the request is submitted.

Senate amendment
Same as the House bill.

E. MODIFICATION OF EXISTING CONTRACTS

Present law
Under current demonstration project agreements between the Secretary and the States of New York and Massachusetts, the States are required to maintain a rate of increase in medicare hospital costs which is 1.5 percent below the national rate of increase in such costs.
House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary would be required, upon request of a State, to modify the terms of an existing demonstration agreement (entered into after August 1982 and in effect as of March 1, 1983—New York and Massachusetts) so that the demonstration project is not required to maintain the rate of increase in medicare hospital costs in that State below the national rate of increase in such costs.

Senate amendment

The Senate amendment contains a similar provision, except provides that such demonstration agreements be modified so that the percentage by which such project is required to maintain a rate of increase in such costs in that State below the national rate of increase be decreased by one-half of one percentage point for the contract year, beginning in 1983, by an additional one-half of 1 percentage point for the contract year beginning in 1984, and by an additional one-quarter of 1 percentage point for the contract year beginning in 1985.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the House bill with a modification permitting either the State or the party to the agreement to request a modification of the contract.

F. JUDGING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF STATE SYSTEMS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

No provision.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, during the 3 cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983, for existing State systems, the Secretary must judge their effectiveness on the basis of their rate of increase or inflation in medicare inpatient hospital payments compared to the national rate of increase or inflation for such payments. The State would retain the option to have the test applied on the basis of either aggregate payments per inpatient admission or discharge. After the transition period, this test would no longer apply, and such State systems would be treated in the same fashion as other waiver systems.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

G. REDUCTION IN PAYMENTS TO HOSPITALS WHICH EXCEED EXPENDITURE LIMITS

Present law

No provision.
House bill
  No provision.

Senate amendment
  Under the Senate amendment, if the Secretary determines that the amounts paid over a three-year period under a State system exceed what medicare would have otherwise paid over the same three-year period, the Secretary may reduce subsequent payments to hospitals under the State system by that amount.

Conference agreement
  The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment. The managers expect that the Secretary will provide a State, at least annually, with such information as is needed to keep the hospitals in a State fully informed, on an estimated or other basis, of the projected potential liabilities that could result if medicare expenditures in the State exceed the medicare expenditures which would have been made in the absence of the State system.

15. ADMINISTRATIVE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW

A. LIMITATION

Present law
  Under present law, a provider may request administrative review of a final decision of a fiscal intermediary by the Provider Reimbursement Review Board (PRRB). A provider may appeal the PRRB decision to Federal court or, where it involves a question of law or regulation which the PRRB does not have the authority to review, the provider may appeal directly to Federal court.

House bill
  Under the House bill, permits administrative and judicial review in all cases except the narrow items necessary to maintain budget neutrality: (1) the level of the payment amount, and (2) the establishment of the DRG classifications.

Senate amendment
  Same as the House bill.

B. VENUE

Present law
  Under present law, an individual provider may bring suit in the judicial district in which it is located or the District of Columbia.
  Groups may bring suit only in the District of Columbia.

House bill
  No provision.

Senate amendment
  The Senate amendment permits action to be brought jointly by several providers in a judicial district in which the greatest number of such providers is located. Any appeals to the PRRB for action for judicial review brought by providers which are under common ownership or control would have to be brought by providers as a group with respect to any matter involving an issue common to such providers.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

16. STUDIES, REPORTS, AND DEMONSTRATIONS

Present law

No provision.

House bill

Under the House bill, the Secretary is required to study and report to Congress on various topics.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, the Secretary is also required to study and report to Congress on various topics.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement requires the Secretary to study and report to Congress on the following:

a. Capital-related costs—the method by which capital-related costs, such as return on net equity, associated with inpatient hospital services can be included in the prospective payment system; due within 18 months after enactment.

b. Skilled nursing facilities (SNFs)—
   1. The impact of hospital prospective payment systems on skilled nursing facilities and recommendations concerning SNFs; due at the end of 1983.
   2. Requires the Secretary to conduct demonstrations with hospitals in areas with critical shortages of SNFs to study the feasibility of providing alternative systems of care or methods of payment.
   3. The effect that the implementation of section 102 of TEFRA would have on hospital-based SNFs, given the differences (if any) in the patient populations served by such facilities and by community-based SNFs; due prior to December 31, 1983.

   c. Impact of the prospective payment methodology—the impact of the prospective payment methodology during the previous year on classes of hospitals, beneficiaries, other payors for inpatient hospital services, other providers, and the impact of computing averages by census division, rather than national averages; must include the Secretary's recommendations for changes in legislation, as appropriate; due annually at the end of each year for 1984 through 1987.

   d. Physician's services to hospital inpatients—during fiscal year 1984, requires the Secretary to begin the collection of data necessary to compute, by DRGs, the amount of physician charges for services furnished to hospital inpatients classified in those DRGs; requires the Secretary to include, in a report to Congress in 1985, recommendations on the advisability and feasibility of providing for the determination of payments based on a DRG-type classification for physician's services furnished to hospital inpatients and legislative recommendations.

e. Urban/rural rates—the feasibility and impact of eliminating or phasing out separate urban and rural DRG prospective payment rates; due at the end of 1985 as part of the 1985 annual report.

f. Prospective payments for hospitals not included in the system—whether, and the method under which, hospitals not paid under the prospective system can be paid on a prospective basis for inpatient services; due at the end of 1985 as part of the 1985 annual report.

g. Payments for outliers/intensity—the appropriateness of the factors used to compensate hospitals for the additional expenses of outlier cases; application of severity of illness, intensity of care, or other modifications to DRG's, and the advisability and feasibility for providing for such modifications; due by the end of 1985 as part of the 1985 annual report.

h. Payments for all payers—the feasibility and desirability of applying a prospective payment methodology to payment by all payers for inpatient hospital services, including consideration of the extent of cost-shifting to non-Federal payers, and the impact of such cost-shifting on health insurance costs and premiums borne by employers and employees; due by January 1, 1985.

i. Impact on admissions—the impact of the prospective payment methodology on hospital admissions and the feasibility of making a volume adjustment in the DRG rates or requiring preadmission certification in order to minimize the incentive to increase admissions; due by the end of 1985 as part of the 1985 annual report.

j. Impact of State systems—the overall impact of State hospital payment systems, approved under either section 1886(c) or other provisions of the Social Security Act, on the medicare and medicaid programs, on payments and premiums under private health insurance plans, and on tax expenditures; due at the end of 1986 as part of the 1986 annual report.

k. Sole community hospitals, information transfer between parts A and B, uncompensated care, and making hospital cost information available—requires the Secretary to study and make legislative recommendations to Congress on an equitable method of reimbursing sole community hospitals, taking into account their unique vulnerability to substantial variations in occupancy; requires the Secretary to examine ways to coordinate an information transfer between parts A and B of medicare, particularly where a denial of coverage is made in the reimbursement to the admitting physician(s); the Secretary also reports on the appropriate treatment of uncompensated care costs and adjustments that might be appropriate for large teaching hospitals; the Secretary also reports on the advisability of having hospitals make available information on the costs of care to patients financed by both public programs and private payors; due prior to April 1, 1985.

l. The territories, including Puerto Rico—requires the Secretary to study and make recommendations to Congress on the method for including hospitals located outside of the 50 States and the District of Columbia under a prospective payment system; due before April 1, 1984.
17. DELAY OF SINGLE REIMBURSEMENT LIMIT FOR SKILLED NURSING FACILITIES (SNFs)

Present law
Under present law, the Secretary is required to establish a single reimbursement limit for both hospital-based and free-standing SNFs to be effective for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
The Senate amendment delays the effective date for the single reimbursement limit for SNFs from cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1982, to cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1983.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

18. ON LOK DEMONSTRATION

Present Law
No provision.

House bill
No provision.

Senate amendment
Under the Senate amendment, the Secretary would be required to approve, with appropriate terms and conditions as defined by the Secretary, within 30 days of enactment: (1) the risk-sharing application of On Lok Senior Health Services (dated July 2, 1982) for waivers of certain medicare requirements over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a long-term demonstration project, and (b) the application of the California Department of Health Services (dated November 1, 1982) for the waiver of certain medicaid requirements over a period of 36 months in order to carry out a demonstration project for capitated reimbursement for comprehensive long-term care services involving On Lok Senior Health Services.

Conference agreement
The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment.

19. APPOINTMENT, MEMBERSHIP AND ACTIVITIES OF THE EXPERT COMMISSION

A. APPOINTMENT

Present law
No provision.
House bill

No similar provision.

Senate amendment

Under the Senate amendment, the Secretary is required to provide for the appointment of a commission of 15 independent experts, selected and appointed by the Director of the Office of Technology Assessment (OTA). Commission members must be appointed no later than April 1, 1984, for a 3-year term, except that the OTA Director may provide initially for shorter terms to insure that the terms of no more than 7 members will expire in one year. Commission members would be eligible for reappointment for no more than 2 consecutive terms.

The commission's membership must provide expertise and experience in the provision and financing of health care including, but not limited to, physicians and registered professional nurses, employers, third-party payors, and individuals skilled in biomedical, health services, health economics research, and individuals having expertise in the research and development of technological and scientific advances in health care. The OTA Director must seek nominations from a wide range of groups including, but not limited to, (a) national organizations representing physicians, including medical specialty organizations and registered professional nurses and other skilled health professionals; (b) national organizations representing hospitals, including teaching hospitals; and (c) national organizations representing the business community, health benefits programs, labor, the elderly and national organizations representing manufacturers of health care products.

The commission may employ such personnel (not to exceed 50) as may be necessary to carry out its duties. Subject to approval by the OTA Director, the commission must appoint one of its staff members as Executive Director. The commission is authorized to seek assistance and support from appropriate Federal departments and agencies as required. Establishes compensation rates for members of the commission, the Executive Director, and staff.

The Commission is authorized to enter into contracts; make advance, progress, and other payments; accept services of voluntary and uncompensated personnel; acquire, hold, and dispose of real and personal property; and prescribe rules and regulations.

The commission is required to have access to relevant information and data available from Federal agencies and to maintain confidentiality of all confidential information. Establishes a Federal Liaison Committee, consisting of delegates from appropriate Federal agencies, to arrange for the acquisition of information, coordinate its activities with those of Federal agencies, and advise the commission on the activities of Federal agencies. The Administrator of HCFA would be chairman of the committee, and the committee would meet not less than 6 times a year.

OTA must report to Congress on the functioning and progress of the commission and the status of assessment of medical procedures and services by the commission. Such reports must be annual for the first 3 years and biannual thereafter, by March 15 of each year.
There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out the activities of the commission and the committee, 85% payable from the HI Trust Fund and 15% from the SMI Trust Fund.

In order to identify medically appropriate patterns of health resources use, the commission of independent experts would be required to collect and assess information, medical and surgical procedures and services, including information on regional variations of medical practice and lengths of hospitalization and on other patient care data, giving special attention to treatment patterns for conditions appearing to involve excessively costly or inappropriate services not adding to the quality of care provided. Requires the commission, in coordination to the extent possible with the Secretary, in order to assess the safety, efficacy, and cost-effectiveness of new and existing medical and surgical procedures, to collect and assess factual information, giving special attention to the needs of updating existing DRGs, establishing new DRGs, and making recommendations on relative DRG weights to reflect appropriate differences in resource consumption in delivering safe, efficacious, and cost-effective care. In collecting and assessing information, the commission must (1) use existing data where possible, collected and assessed either by its own staff or under other arrangements, and (2) carry out, or award grants or contracts for, original research where existing information is inadequate for the development of useful and valid guidelines by the commission.

With the concurrence of the Secretary, payment is permitted under part A or part B of medicare for expenses incurred for clinical care items and services with respect to research and demonstration conducted by the Secretary or the commission.

Conference agreement

The conference agreement follows the Senate amendment with numerous modifications designed to provide greater flexibility in the operation of the Commission, to reduce its maximum staffing from 50 to 25 individuals, and to provide for OTA oversight of the Commission’s administrative activities.

EXPLANATION OF CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1900, SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983

(Mr. CONABLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, it occurs to me that while we are waiting the arrival of the conference report, it might be wise to try to cut down on the time of the body by explaining some of the measures that are in the conference report so that I will not have to repeat my remarks after the papers have arrived. It does seem to me that there is reason for some curiosity about the contents of this historic document.

We are at the end of a long, hard road on social security, and we have before us a conference report which will rescue the system from impending collapse and place it on a sound footing which holds a promise of lasting soundness.

Nobody who voted for this measure when it passed the House before has any reason to vote against the conference report. In my opinion, the conference report represents not only the best of the House measure but improvement of it. I hope my colleagues who voted against it before will reconsider and focus on the improvements that have been made and be a part of this historic moment.

The report is very close to the bill, H.R. 1900, which was passed in this Chamber 2 weeks ago. It would be superfluous to restate all of those provisions. Therefore, I will confine my remarks to significant changes forged in the conference, and the truly major elements of the compromise agreement.

The report differs significantly from the House-passed bill in these respects, and this is not central but it is of interest to the Members. I am sure:

An addition which would stop social security benefits to alien dependents and survivors who have been outside the United States for 6 consecutive months. These persons, in order to receive any benefits, must have for 5 years been residents of this country and had a dependency relationship with the primary beneficiary while they were in this country.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the effect of this proposal is to prevent the addition of dependents after an alien who is otherwise qualified for benefits leaves the country. It does not, of course, take away the benefits from such an alien, but it does prevent him from accruing beneficiary who might go on indefinitely and never have been in the United States at all or had any relationship with him or her during the period of time when they were accruing benefits in this country.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman very much for yielding, and I would say that I think that, of all of the possibilities, this dependent limitation is the major structure reform, and indeed a great deal of progress has been made, and I think every Member of this body does appreciate it.

Mr. CONABLE. It is a good addition.

It addresses one of the leading complaints that many of my colleagues and many of our fellow citizens have lodged against social security and its relationship to aliens.

The conference agreement also eliminates old age and survivor insurance benefits for felons during their period of incarceration. Benefits for dependents and survivors of these prisoners would not be affected, but felons would not receive their benefits during the period of incarceration. Of course, after they leave, if they are entitled to the benefits, they will resume them. In 1980 similar legislation was enacted which applied to disability insurance benefits. This agreement thus provides that OISI and DI payments for incarcerated felons would be treated identically, and I believe that you will find that many of your constituents have been concerned about this particular provision also. It is in fact, in my view, a strengthening of the bill that this was included in the conference.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman. As he knows, the matter he is discussing is of great concern to our constituents.

If I could return to the first matter the gentleman discussed having to do with aliens, as I recall, there were two sets of provisions having to do with social security and aliens, and one of them was the Nichols amendment that has been concerned about this particular provision also. It is in fact, in my view, a strengthening of the bill that this was included in the conference.

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. PEASE. Thank the gentleman for yielding, and I am a part of the conference committee.

Mr. CONABLE. Correct.

Mr. PEASE. Our amendment was imperfect. It was not adopted by the conference committee. I am happy that the Senate and the conference committee have been able to work out good language.

Mr. CONABLE. I appreciate the gentleman's help on this matter, too.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. DAUB. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and I would say that I think that, of all of the possibilities, this dependent limitation is the major structure reform, and indeed a great deal of progress has been made, and I think every Member of this body does appreciate it.

Mr. CONABLE. It is a good addition.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the gentleman. As he knows, the matter he is discussing is of great concern to our constituents.

If I could return to the first matter the gentleman discussed having to do with aliens, as I recall, there were two sets of provisions having to do with social security and aliens, and one of them was the Nichols amendment that would prohibit an individual who is an undocumented alien from receiving any social security benefits if that person paid into the system while in an undocumented status. Could the gentleman tell us what disposition the conference made?

Mr. CONABLE. Yes; that was considered, of course, in the conference committee, and there was considerable resistance on the part of the administration to that proposal only because of fear that it would be extremely difficult to administer.

We are going to have to deal with the problem of illegal aliens, and perhaps in connection with that we can do something further, but that provision was dropped out of the bill primarily for administrative reasons, concern that the Social Security Administration would not be able to handle the administrative problems that such a proposal would bring up.

Mr. FISH. If the gentleman would yield further, I think the Senate amendment is absolutely appalling and I am delighted with the conference result. But I do think it underscores the necessity for this House to act in this session of Congress on the Simpson-Mazzoli Immigration Reform and Control Act.

I thank the gentleman very much.

Mr. CONABLE. I thank my friend for his comments.

Mr. Speaker, although the House bill provided some needed improvements in the treatment of women under the system, and those were the improvements that were included in the original House bill, they were not changed.

Mr. Speaker, rather than take any further time of the House, I understand the papers are now present and I would like to yield back the remainder of my 1 minute, whatever is unused.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has consumed 50 seconds.
Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of March 23, 1983, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the social security trust funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of March 23, 1983, the conference report is considered as having been read.

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Conable) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski).

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, before proceeding to explanation of the conference report, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the conference report currently under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I bring to the floor perhaps the most important piece of legislation this Congress will address—the conference report on social security.

Social security, like no other national issue, binds us all. It is a contract between Government and the Nation—and between one generation and another.

No issue that we face has such broad economic and social implications. No issue carries such political power.

This is not the first time Congress has confronted a crisis in social security financing. This is not the first time that we have learned that the solvency of the social security system...
It subjects to taxation up to one-half of benefits on incomes exceeding $25,000 for singles and $32,000 for couples.

It advances FICA tax increases in 1984 and 1988 while providing an individual income tax credit offset for 1984.

It changes the offsetting income tax credit against the self-employed FICA tax to 2.7 percent in 1984, 2.3 percent in 1985, and 2 percent from 1986 to 1989.

It liberalizes the earnings test by reducing benefits $1 for every $3, rather than the present $2 of outside earnings beginning in 1990.

It tightens restrictions on proliferating income deferral plans that protect compensation from FICA taxes.

It permits benefits to widows or widowers in the month when a spouse dies.

It permits interfund borrowing with special provisions to protect the integrity of the hospital insurance fund.

It advances to the first of each month in pay Treasury Department's payment of estimated revenues to the social security trust funds.

It increases the Federal supplement security income (SSI) benefit by $20 for individuals and $30 for couples, and delays the cost-of-living adjustment for 6 months, both changes effective July 1, 1984.

It extends by 6 months Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) which will provide 8 to 14 weeks of benefits for workers who have exhausted all other State and Federal benefits. Individuals who have already run out of their original FSC benefits are now eligible for between 6 and 10 more weeks of compensation.

It provides Federal tax and interest relief for States whose unemployment trust funds have had to borrow from the Federal Government, but only if substantial steps have been taken in a timely manner to bolster the solvency of their systems.

It phases in a prospective payment system for Medicare over 3 years (as proposed by the Senate), and adjusts for regional differences (as proposed by the House).

The passage of this bill through Congress over the last 2 months is as remarkable as it is monumental. In the face of crisis we have shown that we can rise above partisan differences; that we can withstand enormous pressure from special interest; that we can raise the level of national confidence in Government.

We have reason to be very proud of ourselves tonight. Beyond these doors we may never receive the recognition we have earned. But we know that when we go home, we can.

It is in that spirit that I ask you to support this conference report.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 12 minutes.

Mr. CONABLE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONABLE. The distinguished chairman has done a good job of explaining the entire bill and I am going to limit my further remarks on this matter just to those issues that were changed in the conference.

The report also adds some interesting tax provisions and these were covered in part by the chairman; tax-exempt income is included in the base for determining the Federal social security benefits, self-employment tax credit was increased so that the credit is in 1984, 2.7 percent, 1985, 2.3 percent and in 1986, through 1989, 2 percent.

Now that is a greater help to your self-employed and your farmers. It is as much as the Senate version; it was a compromise figure.

Effective in 1984 and thereafter the credit would terminate and be replaced with a system designed to achieve parity between social security benefits, self-employment and the self-employed. The base of the employment tax was raised slightly downward to reflect the fact that employees do not pay FICA tax on the value of the employer's FICA tax. Deduction would be allowed for income tax purpose for half of the self-employment tax liability in recognition that employers do not pay FICA tax on the value of the employer's FICA tax; and the effect of that, Mr. Speaker is, also to give a better deal to farmers and self-employed after 1990 than they got under the original House bill.

Deferred compensation under section 457 of the Internal Revenue Code will be subject to the FICA tax and certain forms of nonqualified deferred compensation. But provisions with potential impact on cafeteria plans were deleted so that their tax treatment is unchanged from existing law. In other words, if you had deferred compensation under the Tax Act in 1978 adopted cafeteria plans giving a wide range of options to their employees, they need not fear anything that is in this provision.

We have not changed the law with respect to them in ways that might work against the desirability of cafeteria plans.

Finally the conference agreement makes changes in the FUTA tax base to conform with the changes in the FICA tax base. In the medicare title to conform with the new medicare system through the decade and also raises enough revenue to ease the dollar deficit built up in the next century.
rather than the 4 years in the House bill.

I think many people would consider that an improvement. I will not say, Mr. Speaker, that this will save medicare, by itself; we know we will have to be looking for further legislation on medicare in the future. However, this is an important step and a valuable additional reform for the medicare system.

The agreement also would allow the use of State payment systems where such systems have certain requirements and where the State provides assurance that its system will not result in greater medicare expenditures.

I know there were some particular States concerned about that matter.

We agreed to the other body's transitional provision which would require the Secretary to recognize the increased payroll costs some hospitals will incur as a result of being required to enter into the social security system.

This would be accomplished by adjusting medicare payment rates to reflect these additional costs, changes adapted from the other body's bill relating to the supplemental security income would increase Federal benefit standard by $20 per month for individuals and $30 per month for couples and would delay the SSI COLA until January of 1984. The new stabilizer and incidentally this is a very important provision, which would pay the lower of increases in wages or prices applicable to OASDI increases beginning in 1985, would not apply to SSI.

Let me mention that stabilizer with some particularity. Recall that some of us thought this was one of the most important elements in the House bill. It was changed and expanded. The stabilizer now is reduced to 15 percent. You remember it triggered in the lower of wages or prices in 1986, triggered in 1988 whenever the fund got below 20 percent of the expected annual demand. We thought that to pay the lower of the expected annual demand for the period of time from 1985 through 1983. Thereafter it will resume the 29-percent trigger. But in my view this adds to the stability of the system during a period of time when we all knew there might be some possible shortage in the fund.

It should not have the effect of reducing benefits, however, because we expect during that period of time that wages will be involved in some catch up, with the cost-of-living bulge that occurred during the 1970's.

Now, in unemployment compensation the report provides 8 to 14 weeks of basic FSC benefits but it follows the other body's distribution pattern. Additional benefits would be paid to persons who exhausted their current FSC entitlement and allows States to establish voluntary health insurance programs for unemployed persons by having claimants contribute part of their unemployment compensation benefits to pay premium costs if the State elects to do so. That is just another additional option to help people maintain their health insurance if they are unemployed.

It also adds provisions for: First, an FUTA cap relief and interest payment relief for persons who exhausted unemployment compensation loans; second, allowing FSC claimants to continue receiving benefits if they are enrolled in a full-time training program, something they cannot now do; third, changing the basis for computation of certain FUTA credit reductions from taxable wages to all wages; and fourth, denying the Federal payment of State administrative costs and disqualifying a State's UC program if it did not make a timely payment of interest due on UC loans. These departures from the House bill do not, I believe, weaken the legislation in any vital way. In many instances, they improve it.

The report thus includes what all conferences are expected to produce: a set of compromises. Among them are two elements which I believe are of considerable importance, considering the history and politics of social security.

First, the report brings Federal civilian employees, hired after this year, under social security protection. This was an important provision of the other body's bill reducing radical surgery in the other body. Fortunately, there were enough stalwart managers on the part of the House to hold firm.

If they had willed it under pressure, the legislation would have suffered considerable damage.

Federal workers unfortunately have not recognized the fact that social security, because of its broader disability, survivor, and dependent benefits, offers them better overall protection.

It establishes a new social contract between Government and workers in its provisions to close the system's long-range deficit. In recognition of increasing longevity, the package follows the House lead in providing for a gradual increase in the minimum age for maximum benefits in the next century.

In short, workers would still be able to retire at age 62 with benefits actuarially reduced, but only modestly so.

In summary, Mr. Speaker, the conference report evolved only after virtually everyone associated with it gave ground. I think we all relinquished some long cherished objectives in this process. It was painful, but the sacrifice was well worth the effort and the result. The conference report may not be a work of art, but it is a helpful work. And I want to take my hat off to the chairman once again for the work he did, not only in this legislation, but in the conference.

It will do what it was supposed to do. It will save the Nation's basic social insurance system from imminent disaster.

Mr. SAWYER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. SAWYER. I thank the gentleman. I would just like to address one question, as to whether or not payments in retirement other than for life be subject to social security withholding.

Law firms, accounting firms are not big enough in their retirement plans to really underwrite for life. And so, instead, we have a provision which would delay for 10, 20 years, or so on payout. Just a simple question. Even though law firms and certified public accountant firms may have retirement payouts of 10 or 20 years certain, they do not undertake life payouts. Because of that the present legislation is not subject to FICA deduction. Have we addressed that at all in this conference report?

Mr. CONABLE. We did not change the provisions in the House bill which dealt with that issue and for some purposes deferred compensation in the House. But we were fearful of confusion we feared would otherwise result, eliminate the provisions relating to cafeteria plans, a special type of deferred compensation, which could result in the special type of deferred compensation.

Mr. ROSENSTENKOWSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, several years ago when I assumed the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee by the vote of my colleagues, I had the dilemma of requesting that a gentleman take charge of the Subcommittee on Social Security, which at the time, was a very sensitive area in which we were going to try to govern.

I must admit that I had for a long period of time twisted the arm of the gentleman from Texas and I knew how reluctant he had been to the chairmanship that it was in capable hands.

I never realized how aggressive and how persistent an individual trying to do what is best for the social security recipient could be.

JAKE PICKLE, who we all know is probably associated more with social security than any other piece of legislation, has done, in my opinion, one of the most outstanding jobs as a subcommittee chairmen on Ways and Means that any chairman has ever done in the history of our committee.

I want to say to know him is to recognize the qualities of a calm individual, an individual who is totally unemotional, who is prideful about the things that he does, who is reserved in every opinion he utters, and is unfappable in his character. JAKE PICKLE, I do not know what I am going to do for the next 6 months. I will not have a telephone call every morning, every evening, every weekend. I am just going to be lost.
I ask my colleagues to join with me in an expression of appreciation to a man. I think along side of Claude Pepper, who has done more for the senior citizens and for the young people of our country than any individual in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Jake Pickle, for remarks.

Mr. Pickle. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. Conable. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I do not want to use the gentleman's full 15 seconds.

The gentleman is always saying "That dog won't hunt." I think this bill is not a dog and it will hunt. And I think it is largely due to the gentleman. To know him is to love him, friends.

Mr. Pickle. Mr. Speaker, I hasten to thank my friend Chairman Rostenkowski, and my colleague Mr. Conable.

This has been a long, difficult task for all of us and no one person can take credit for this moment. I think this is the House's finest moment. It shows that we can make structural changes in a program even as vital as social security, the most important of all our national domestic programs. A lot of us can take credit.

We hope we have done the right thing. We believe and pray that we could not have put together this type of program without the American people the Congress has acted responsibly on social security.

We retain the long-term provisions of the House bill—which offer the best assurance to America that Congress can and will meet the needs and the challenges of the future. It shows that we can make structural changes in a program even as vital as social security, the most important of all our national domestic programs. A lot of us can take credit.

We hope we have done the right thing. We believe and pray that we could not have put together this type of legislative program.

I thank my chairman, Dan Rostenkowski, who has been steadfast and fair and impartial and who has held this conference in a masterful manner.

I thank the leadership, the Speaker, whose speech a week ago, in support of Senator Pepper's measure, was magnificent and gave us a feeling again that we are approaching this in a bipartisan manner.

And I thank the majority leader and the minority leader for their support. I thank my subcommittee and the Members of the full Ways and Means Committee for their strong support and guidance.

And if I may, Mr. Speaker, I would like to add one other group, and those of us who have been chairmen or subcommittee chairmen know how much we owe to our staffs. My subcommittee staff and the Ways and Means Committee staff have performed in a most professional manner. Our country owes them a great debt of thanks because we cannot know how much they have given.

So I salute you.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I conclude by saying that I think perhaps the most important part of this package is that we have made a structural change by raising the age gradually in the future to 66 and 67, 25 and 40 years down the road. I think America has accepted it.

Tonight we have come of age, and I think we can assure the solvency of this system.

I would like to believe then, Mr. Speaker, that all of us together, as Daniel Webster says to us on the plaque high above our heads, that "we have done something in our time worthy to be remembered."

The conference report we bring to you today represents a good, solid compromise that will give assurance to the American people the Congress has acted responsibly on social security.

We address a multitude of issues in a fair and balanced manner.

And at the same time we have preserved intact the basic structure and purpose of the social security program. As confidence has dwindled in the program in recent years, many individuals and groups have come forward to say that social security no longer works. That is true only if the Congress does not act, and the Congress will not have to face social security financing again anytime soon.

We have addressed a multitude of issues in a fair and balanced manner.

And at the same time we have preserved intact the basic structure and purpose of the social security program. As confidence has dwindled in the program in recent years, many individuals and groups have come forward to say that social security no longer works. That is true only if the Congress does not act, and the Congress has proved in this bill that it can act. Social security is and will remain secure because Congress always will stand ready to deal with whatever problems may come its way.

The bill fundamentally is a financing bill. That is always the toughest. But I am immensely proud of the results of this conference. This has been a particularly hard-fought battle. We began with the assurance to American workers, present and future, that social security will be more secure. Extension of coverage to non profits means that many of our workers who can benefit the most from social security coverage will now be covered. This, too, is a good step forward.

The conference agreement also ends the ability of State or local governments to opt out of social security and establishes a revised formula so that employees who derive a so-called windfall by having only a part of their termination under social security will receive a benefit that is more in accordance with their overall wage level.

The conference agreement contains a one time delay of the cost of living increase from June to December 1983, which will have important savings both in the short and long term.

The agreement for the first time provides for the inclusion of social security benefits in the taxable income of individuals with substantial outside income, whether that income is taxable or not. It makes changes in the tax rates but provides for credits to offset some of the impact of these taxes.

The agreement includes two incentives long sought by various individuals and groups who want to encourage individuals to work longer. In particular, beginning in 1990 it contains an increase in the delayed retirement credit to 8 percent and it liberalizes the earnings test so that instead of offsetting $1 of benefits for every $2 earned, it offsets $1 for every $3 earned.

And, the bill contains key provisions to insure benefit payments. It provides a new accounting procedure so that the reserves in the funds will be highest at the first of each month, when benefits must be paid. It provides for continued interfund borrowing—but with important safeguards to protect lending funds. It provides for a report and recommendations to the Congress for action in case all the other procedures prove inadequate. And it provides for a permanent stabilizer, which will protect the funds during times of high inflation and low wage growth such as we have recently experienced. This stabilizer would stipulate that the COLA would be increased by the lower of the increase in wages or prices if trust fund ratios were 15 percent and declining beginning in 1985, and 18 percent and declining beginning in 1989.

Finally, the bill raises the age from 65 to 67 between 2000 and 2009 and from 66 to 67 between 2017 and 2027. This clearly is the most important and far reaching provision in the bill. I would like to point out that this critical change, which is inevitable given the increases in longevity, does not reduce benefits for any except those who retire early. If they wait, they, too, can receive actuarially equivalent benefits.

The increases in longevity, does not change, which is inevitable given the increases in longevity, does not reduce benefits for any except those who retire early. If they wait, they, too, can receive actuarially equivalent benefits.

Mr. DAUB. Mr. Speaker, I support the social security compromise to rescue the social security system from its financial difficulties. This legisla-

Mr. Speaker, tonight is an historic moment for Congress. A legislative miracle has taken place.

Mr. Speaker, the President's Congress has put together a package of items that individually were unacceptable but together were acceptable because they provided new financial foundation for the social security program. Likewise, this Congress has put together a package many parts of which are unacceptable to individual Members, but as a package it is acceptable.

tients, physicians, and hospitals have little incentive to control costs. Patients pay very little of their hospital expenses. In addition, hospitals are fully reimbursed under Medicare for the costs they incur.

The prospective reimbursement system that has been included in this bill would provide incentives for providers to deliver services more efficiently and control their costs. In addition, reimbursements for the same Medicare service, which often vary dramatically, would be similar. It is important to note that the set payments to hospitals for services will be payment in full and not negotiable. Therefore, promoting efficiency in services, this proposal would cause no increase in costs to the patients.

Mr. Speaker, today is important because it gives the social security system a clean slate—so to speak—with regard to financial operations. Again, I commend the members of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee for their hard work in formulating this compromise in a timely manner. With passage of this social security legislation, our senior citizens can be assured of our continued support and of their financial future. In addition, those who have not retired yet can be assured that the social security system which they continue to pay into will provide them benefits in the years to come.

Mr. ROYBAL. Mr. Speaker, in support of the conference report because its passage is the only way to insure the full and prompt payment of social security benefits to the 36 million current beneficiaries who might otherwise have their benefits interrupted or delayed within the next few months.

I commend the leadership, the responsible members of the Ways and Means Committee and the National Committee on Social Security Reform for their good efforts in bringing passable legislation to the floor within the tight timeframes required. However, I must say that I, like many others, am dissatisfied with many provisions of the final conference report.

Of special concern are the provisions passed by the other House which could unduly damage our relationships with other nations and may cause severe hardships for some U.S. residents and citizens living abroad.

Less than 0.7 percent of all beneficiaries and less than 0.6 percent of all benefit payments are paid to noncitizens outside the United States—yet the provisions inserted by the other body would reduce or prohibit payments to citizens of abroad or noncitizens of nations of the world who will adversely affect our relationship with countries in all five populated continents. These provisions put up unnecessary barriers which could be used by other nations to justify the imposition or significant barriers to the free and uninhibited export of U.S. goods, services and technological expertise to those countries. It can also be expected that some of the affected countries will respond with even harsher treatment of U.S. citizens receiving similar benefits in these countries.

Social security legislation is simply not the place to enact these major changes in trade and immigration/naturalization policy. The Congress will be considering and, hopefully, passing good legislation on both these issues in this Congress. The provisions from the other body set the wrong tone at the beginning of these great debates. They also establish errors in policy which will have to be corrected by the subsequent legislation.

The specific provisions which cause these problems are:

First, section 124 of the other body's bill which, in effect, unilaterally repeals the informal reciprocal understandings for the payment of social security benefits between the United States and 44 countries including Austria, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, Costa Rica, Denmark, El Salvador, Finland, France, Mexico, Panama, the Philippines, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Turkey and the United Kingdom.

Although, under the legislation, the United States could still negotiate a formalized reciprocity agreement with these countries, there would be no practical responsibility of negotiating and implementing agreements with all 44 countries. The provision's effective date of January 1985. In the 5 years since the Social Security Administration was granted authority to conclude such agreements, only three agreements—with Italy, Switzerland and West Germany—have been implemented.

In addition, the provision could permanently prevent any formal or informal reciprocity agreement with some other countries—like Australia—whose income maintenance programs are sufficiently different from the U.S. system so that no formalized agreements could ever be authorized or concluded under the statute.

Second, section 131 of the other body's bill establishes section 6050P(t) of the Internal Revenue Code which could abbreviate provisions in treaties of friendship, commerce and navigation (FCN) with eight countries and might, in the view of several other countries, violate tax treaties they have with the United States.

This new IRC section requires withholding of a nonrefundable income tax of 15 percent of a nonresident alien's social security benefits. Only the English, whose tax treaty with the United States requires that full social security benefits, would be exempted. Since withholding does not apply to U.S. citizens and since the nonresident aliens are required to pay U.S. income taxes on social security benefits even if their income is below the income thresholds, it would trigger the taxation of benefits for U.S. citizens, other countries will object that the United States is breaking the equal treatment traditions by which all citizens of both countries are treated as each country treats its own citizens. Germany, Greece, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands and Nicaragua are likely to object, and the provision may be amended since they may consider that their 27-year-old FCN treaty with the United States protects them from such non-national treatment of their citizens.

Third, an amendment by the Junior Senator from Oklahoma reduces or eliminates payments to residents and U.S. citizens who are dependents of affected noncitizens. It could also lead to a discriminatory review of the eligibility of millions of U.S. citizens and law-abiding noncitizens who are suspected of being illegal immigrants to the United States.

Most of the people who would have their benefits eliminated next January are already aged, disabled or survivor beneficiaries living in the United States. All of them have worked in the United States, paid social security taxes and met the eligibility requirements that are the prerequisites for receipt of any social security benefit.

In the Senate debate, the amendments sponsor stated that this provision would not apply to illegal aliens or beneficiaries given legal status through a general amnesty provision in future immigration legislation. However, the amendment's legislative language specifically requires a noncitizen to prove he/she legally entered the United States with permission to work. Therefore, under the legislative provisions, current legal status might not be enough to permit full payments.

Inclusion of these provisions is unfortunate because: First, they will harm our relationships with substantial numbers of our allies while achieving little in saving money; second, they may lead to similar responses by other countries toward U.S. citizens; and third, they could be detrimental to our efforts to expand U.S. exports.

Other provisions which concern me include the provision to reduce or eliminate the COLA after 1989 if the trust funds' reserves are low. This "fall safe" automatically puts the entire financial burden for solving any future problem on those beneficiaries who are least likely to have the ability for financial sacrifice.

Furthermore, the tax credits for the self-employed are still inadequate and the final formula for reducing "windfall" benefits to civil service annuitants is still too low. We also need to move swiftly to provide current and future civil servants and nonprofit employees with statutory guarantees that they will not unfairly forfeit any rights to benefits currently available to them.

In addition, the bill does not index the income thresholds for the taxation of benefits which, without indexing,
The House and Senate bills and the conference report extend social security coverage on a mandatory basis to all employees of nonprofit organizations. As a result, employees of such organizations who are also employed by a State university of a State which has agreed to provide social security coverage to its employees under section 218 of the Social Security Act would have been, without this amendment, subject to unreimbursable double payment of social security taxes. Although present law prevents double taxation, it is not needed. By mandating a bill—there is no provision which would prevent double taxation where one employer is a nonprofit organization and another employer is an instrument of a State. Indeed, since exempt organizations up to now could voluntarily decide whether or not to participate in social security, such a provision was not needed. By mandating participation in social security, the bill has eliminated the only mechanism to avoid double taxation and created the need to allow exempt organizations to have equivalent relief to that available through a single paymaster system.

The amendment is specifically designed to prevent double taxation where one employer is a State university medical school and the other employer is a related nonprofit organization which also employs faculty members of such medical school. At least 30 percent or more of the organization's employees must also be employed by such medical school.
Under the amendment adopted in the conference report, a State university and nonprofit organization which meet the stated requirements are considered to be related corporations under sections 3102, 3111, and 3121(a)(1) of the code. Furthermore, solely for purposes of sections 3102, 3111, and 3121(a)(1) of the code, a portion of the remuneration actually paid by the nonprofit organization from its own funds and on its own paychecks will be deemed to have been paid by the university. Such remuneration will not be subject to the section 3102 deduction from the employee's wages or to the section 3111 employer tax since employment by a State is not subject to social security taxation under sections 3101, 3102, and 3111 of the code. Such employment is subject to social security coverage only pursuant to section 218 of the Social Security Act and for the purpose of that section, a university or nonprofit organization which is deemed not to receive the benefit of the section 3121(a)(1) of the code, and therefore not to be subject to social security tax, will be treated as paid by the nonprofit organization. Therefore, there is no question that the amendment does not affect the duty of the university to report wages paid to its employees. Any excess amounts paid as an employer tax by the organization will be treated as amounts paid in error. Of course, the organization will be deemed to have sufficient knowledge of the error to be able to correct it with respect to each employee only when the organization has sufficient knowledge to be able to determine the total amount of the excess paid for the entire taxable year. Usually, the organization will have sufficient knowledge in whichever of the following social security reporting periods occurs first during the year: The period in which remuneration to date paid by the university to the employee reaches the wage and contribution base, the period in which the employee permanently terminates employment, or the last reporting period for the calendar year in which the calculation of the employer tax will be the subject of a claim for refund or credit by the nonprofit organization in the social security reporting period in which the organization first has sufficient knowledge of the error to correct it or in the next subsequent period.

Mr. HEPTEL of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, the Social Security Act amendments that we are considering today have been developed at the expense of everyone for the benefit of everyone. We are calling upon the entire country to make sacrifices to a program that is vital to the entire country survives, not just in the short term, but for years to come.

If we did not act today to address the funding crisis that the system faces, the social security trust fund will have difficulty in meeting its obligations by July 1983. Therefore, our first job as Members of Congress in considering this social security reform legislation has been to assure that social security recipients do not experience any interruption in their benefit checks. We all represent countless constituents who rely on this program who must live from one check to the next. Therefore, it is imperative that we act today to pass this program.

The Social Security Act Amendments of 1983 correct all three critical short-term pension problems of the retirement program. First, this legislation will correct the immediate funding crisis that would otherwise place July benefit checks in jeopardy. Second, we are correcting the short-term funding crisis that is expected to cause the trust fund to fall short of its benefit payment needs by between $150 billion and $200 billion by 1990. Finally, we have taken the bold and necessary step of addressing combined effects of several recent years. We recognize that unemployment and a high birth rate of future retirees when the "baby boom" generations of the 1940's and 1950's begin reaching retirement age would again force the system into funding difficulties.

I commend the National Commission, and I commend the Congress—in particular my distinguished chairman, Mr. Proxmire, with whom I had the privilege of working as a member of the Social Security Subcommittee—for developing the comprehensive, bipartisan package that we are voting on today. I am sure that many of my colleagues feel, as I do, that this package could be improved, that certain provisions are objectionable and that certain changes should be made. However, such feelings are inevitable in a process that requires compromise and consensus to accomplish the critical goal of rescuing our social security system.

Despite such objections, however, the provisions of this legislation have been designed so that no one group in this country is asked to make inordinate sacrifices in order to insure the long term financial stability of the system in the short and long term. Instead, all groups must sacrifice a little to accomplish this goal in as fair a manner as possible.

Mr. Speaker, if for no other reason, I support this legislation today because the alternative is totally unacceptable. We have come to what we all hope and believe is the end of a long road. We can now go home knowing that we have faced up to one of the most important and most controversial issues of our time and that the social security system is secure for years to come.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, this conference committee on social security deleted what I believe to be a very unfortunate provision added in the other body. That provision would have denied individual aliens, including undocumented aliens, any social security benefits if that person paid into the social security system while in undocumented status.

Such a provision is unfortunate because it amounts to scapegoating those undocumented aliens who, although they are in this country technically illegally, in fact have been contributors to our economy and our society.

We are talking about individuals who have worked in this country, who answered the job lure which brought them here because of our failure to control our borders. We are penalizing them when they have been doing what any sensible person would do, come to this country and answer the many "help wanted" signs we have posted for them.

The Senate amendment made absolutely no allowance for any equities built up through long residence and commendable contribution to our society. Conceivably, an undocumented man could become a successful businessman in the United States, have a number of American-born children, and hence, American citizen children.
He could be a respected pillar of society. He could, in all probability, have forgotten that he was undocumented. And, he would, after 30 to 40 years of paying taxes in the United States, be penalized upon his retirement.

I believe this is appalling.

The proper way to deal with the undocumented alien population is to pass H.R. 1510, the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983, sponsored by my friend and chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, Congressman from Missouri. That bill, by imposing penalties on employers who knowingly hire undocumented aliens, would end the job lure which brings them to this country. It does not do our Nation proud to have no effective control over our borders, and then penalize those who have come and work for us.

This Senate amendment is perhaps the first sign of something that has worried me and many of those who have worked on the immigration reform bill. If we do not achieve a rational and balanced immigration policy, such as that passed in H.R. 1510, we will be inclined to take dramatic, and I believe improper steps directed against undocumented aliens. I hope that I am wrong and this amendment is an isolated incident. But, whether it is or not, I do not want to take any chances. I want to see the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1983 signed into law.

Mr. CONABLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The Speaker pro tempore moved that the House be in recess until 12 o'clock noon.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Mr. Berman for, with Mr. Denny.
Mr. Goodin for, with Mr. Angell.
Mr. Lantos for, with Mr. Coburn.

The Clerk announced the result of the vote was announced as recorded.
SOCIAL SECURITY ACT AMENDMENTS OF 1983—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, the social security conference report is here. I must tell Senators that I do expect a record vote on this tonight. I have been advised by more than one Senator that there will be such a request and, of course, the request will be honored.

I hope that the Senate can proceed promptly to debate this issue and to dispose of it. The adjournment resolution has been passed. It is now almost 12:10 a.m. I have no desire to cut off Senators or to truncate their remarks or statement of their position, but I do sincerely hope that we shall finish with this and be able to ask the Senate to stand in adjournment.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, I submit a report of the committee of conference on H.R. 1900 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be stated.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 1900) to assure the solvency of the Social Security Trust Funds, to reform the medicare reimbursement of hospitals, to extend the Federal supplemental compensation program, and for other purposes having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by a majority of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report.

(The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the Record of today March 24, 1983.)

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I am pleased that we are able to lay before the Senate the conference report on H.R. 1900, the Social Security Act Amendments of 1983. The House and Senate conferees have been at work full time on this agreement since the Senate passed its version of this legislation, and I believe we have worked out a good agreement. For the benefit of the Members I would just like to outline some of the major features of this package.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Clearly the heart of this legislation is the package of provisions designed to assure the solvency of the social security system over both the short term and the long term. As my colleagues know, the basic features of both the House and Senate bills reflected the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. However, there were some significant differences, and their resolution will be of interest to the Senate.

With regard to revenue provisions, the conference agreement incorporates the national Commission recommendations to tax social security benefits for certain higher income persons, accelerate payroll tax rate increases already scheduled by law between now and 1990, and conform payroll tax rates paid by the self-employed to the combined rates paid by employers and employees. The conferees agreed to the Senate provision to include interest from tax-exempt bonds in the taxpayer's income base solely for purposes of determining whether the taxpayer's income exceeds the threshold for taxing social security benefits. In addition, the conferees agreed to a compromise with regard to the payroll tax credit provided for the self-employed as a partial offset to the higher income tax and payroll tax standpoint. The compromise goes much further than the House bill did in providing relief for the self-employed—the credit will be 2.7 percent of self-employed income in 1984, 2.3 percent in 1985, and 2.0 percent in 1986 through 1989. In 1990 and thereafter, a combined deduction and wage base modification will put the self-employed on the same footing as employers from a combined income tax and payroll tax standpoint. That is a good result, and it should be of greater benefit to the self-employed in the long run.

LONG-RANGE FINANCING

Mr. President, there were major differences between the House and Senate in dealing with the long-term financing problem. While the conference agreement will not satisfy everyone, there was real give-and-take on both sides. The conferees agreed to raise the retirement age to 67 years as in the House bill, rather than 66 as in the Senate bill. And rejected the accompanying benefit adjustments in the Senate bill. The House conferees also could not agree to accept the fail-safe mechanism that could have required cost-of-living adjustments if trust fund reserves fell below a certain level. However, the conferees did agree to move up the stabilizer provision from 1989 to 1985. As Members know, this provision would provide cost-of-living adjustments based on the lower of wage or price. Under the conference agreement, this stabilizer will be triggered by a 15 percent reserve ratio before 1985, and by a 20 percent reserve ratio thereafter.

Finally, with regard to long-range financing, the conferees agreed to modify the earnings limitation beginning in 1989. The change is to reduce benefits by a ratio of 1 to 3 against other income, rather than the 1 to 2 ratio under present law. While this does not do as much as we hoped to eliminate disincentives for the elderly to stay in the work force, it is a significant change in that direction, and welcome one.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

The conferees agreed to extend the Federal supplemental compensation (FSC) program for 6 months (from March 31, 1983 to September 30, 1983). The program will provide additional weeks of benefits for current FSC recipients as well as a redesigned basic tier of benefits.

The conferees agreed to the Senate proposals modifying the cap and interest provisions in current law dealing with State borrowing. A new interest deferment is authorized as well as a reduced interest rate which is available to States taking legislative action to restore the solvency of the State UI programs. Several provisions were adopted making changes in the date interest is paid and clarifying the authority of the Federal Government to collect the interest when due.

The conferees adopted provisions dealing with participation in training programs by FSC recipients. Training will be permitted unless the State agency disapproves such training.

Additionally, for recipients of extended benefits and Federal supplemental compensation, the conference adopted a provision which permits States to determine weekly eligibility for such recipients who are hospitalized or serving on jury duty. A State would be required to treat these recipients in accordance with their own State unemployment compensation law.

MEDICARE PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT

Mr. President, finally I would like to note that the conferees reached a good agreement on a new prospective payment system for medicare. Payment rates would be developed for nine census divisions, with a separate urban and rural rate in each. Payments would be fixed based on classification by "diagnosis related group." This system would be phased in over a 3-year period. Community hospitals would be included in the prospective payment system beginning October 1, 1986, based on a return to equity equal to that earned by the trust fund. Psychiatric, rehabilitation, long-term, and children's hospitals would be exempted from prospective payment, as would institutions in the territories.

Mr. President, all in all this is a good piece of work that I hope our Members will support. We have not, by any means, achieved all we would have liked to achieve—but we have achieved a great deal, considering the urgency and political sensitivity of the problems we faced. Those Members who have a different view of how we ought to have proceeded have had an opportunity to make their views known and they have made a valuable contribution to the debate even when other views have prevailed. But now the time for debate is over, and the time to complete action on this legislation is here. The President is ready to sign the bill—we should not keep him waiting.

Mr. President, as my colleagues are aware, the Senate in its version of the social security financing bill agreed to make coverage of Federal workers contingent on the development of a supplemental retirement system program. That decision was made when the Senate adopted the Long amendment by voice vote. As members also know, the Senate voted overwhelmingly to insure that Federal workers would be covered under social security.

Under the conference agreement, Federal workers will come under social security—that is, new hires—as of January 1, 1984. The requirement proposed by Senator Long that coverage be made contingent on a supplemental retirement system program was rejected by the House conferees, and the Senate conference voted to recede to the House because of that objection. I would like to assure my colleagues who supported the Long amendment, however, that every effort will be made to insure that Federal workers are provided an adequate supplemental retirement system in connection with the requirement that new hires be brought into the social security system. I am sure the Senator from Alaska, Senator Stevans, joins me in this assurance. There is not, and never has been, an intention to leave Federal workers with less than adequate retirement coverage. We will insure that Federal workers are treated fairly and squarely as they are treated now.

We will insure that Federal workers are provided an adequate supplemental retirement system in connection with the requirement that new hires be brought into the social security system. I am sure the Senator from Alaska, Senator Stevans, joins me in this assurance. There is not, and never has been, an intention to leave Federal workers with less than adequate retirement coverage. We will insure that Federal workers are treated fairly and squarely as they are treated now.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, I cannot support the conference committee report on the social security bill because it will permit the transfer of General Treasury funds to the social security system.

I stated in October 1982, more than 3 months prior to issuance of the Social Security Reform Commission's recommendations, that I could not support any legislation that financed social security by merely increasing the national debt.

The concept of social security, when it was established under the Franklin Roosevelt administration, was that it should be a system wholly supported by the contributions of employers and employees. That has been the case up until now.

This legislation calls for an infusion to social security of $48 billion from the General Treasury over the next 7 years. I consider this highly irresponsible and dangerous to the financial stability of our Nation.

Most of social security's financial problems were caused by Congress eagerness to liberalize benefits, relying on rosy assumptions to pay the cost, coupled with the subsequent lack of courage to fund its commitment with taxes, or to reap future unfunded benefits when the optimistic assumptions proved to be erroneous.

What Congress now has done is open the floodgates to future massive infusions of General Treasury funds to social security. The fund will soon be $2 trillion in the red, and it is running up deficits at the rate of $200 billion each year.

Such a procedure can only lead to needlessly high interest rates and reckless Government spending. In the long run it will not save social security but undermine the faith of the people in the money of their government.

We cannot long keep the social security system afloat by bankrupting the Federal Government which has the burden of funding it.

There are other features which make the remainder of the bill a further travesty, but to go further at this time would merely confuse the issue.

I voted to report this bill out of committee for two reasons: that it would be improved on the Senate floor. My vote to send the bill to conference was cast with the forlorn hope that by some miracle the bill might finally be drastically overhauled and reshaped. That has not happened and, therefore, Mr. President, I refuse to vote for fiscal irresponsibility.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I should like to ask my colleague from Louisiana to yield for a question. I listened with great intent to the remarks from my esteemed colleague from Louisiana. When I came to the floor a few moments ago, after essentially wasting time, I had expected that something would come out of the conference that I could vote for.

Let me phrase my question manifold. I voted for the social security measure that came out of the U.S. Senate not because I thought it was a perfect piece of legislation but because I felt that we had to do something constructive to make sure that those citizens of this Nation who rely on social security would be assured that their checks would keep coming.

Could the Senator from Louisiana please explain to this Senator, since he voted for the bill, I assume that there must have been some rather significant change that took place during the conference that has caused the Senator from Louisiana to come back and make the statement that he just made. I would simply advise my colleagues that if my friend and colleague from Louisiana, who I consider most knowledgeable in these matters, finds it impossible to support this conference report, it is going to be most difficult for the Senator from Nebraska to go along with it.

Could the Senator from Louisiana kindly advise me in some more detail than he did in his brief statement as to what happened in the conference report that evidently has caused the Senator from Louisiana to change his mind about support for the measure that passed out of this chamber with an overwhelming vote not very long ago?

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, to be absolutely honest with the Senator, it was not what happened in the conference that made the difference. One of the conference decisions that goes contrary to fiscal responsibility is dropping out the fail-safe amendment that we agreed to in the Senate. I am frank to say to the Senator that I told the Senate conference that if to reach a conference agreement they needed to drop that provision, as far as I was concerned they could go ahead and drop it. I did not have any objection to their dropping the provision in order to get an agreement because I really did not think I was going to be able to vote for the conference report anyway. That was not said for the record, but I wanted to tell the Senators in our own discussions.

The reason I did that was because I have had a chance to think about the bill. When I voted to pass this bill in the Senate and to send it to conference, I was hoping that I could yet find a way to vote for it, that we might shape it in such a fashion that I could. I have doubts about it but, even though my colleague (Mr. Joiner) voted against it when it passed the Senate. He consulted with me before he did that and told me his doubts about the bill, and I told him, frankly, he was probably right and that if I were him I would probably vote against it. Being one of the managers of the bill and a prospective conferee on the matter and hoping that somehow we might yet shape it up to something I could vote for, I voted for the bill to send it to conference just as I voted in the committee to report the bill, with reservations. It was announced in the committee I was voting with reservations.

Mr. President, here is what is wrong with the fail-safe provision in this bill. Once you establish a precedent, as this bill does, that you are going to make up the social security shortfall by just adding it to the Federal debt—once you start doing business that way, from that point forward suppose you did have a situation that your fail-safe amendment was aimed at, that you are not going to have quite enough money to pay the cost-of-living increase. Then, without fail, every time that would happen a Senator would rise on this floor and say:

'Wait a minute, there is no need that these old people should have to settle for anything less than the increase. All we have to do is to add the extra to the national debt and go ahead and pay it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The
Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

Mr. LONG. Representative Archer appeared before the committee and discussed these concerns. Former Representative Joe Waggoner, of Louisiana, who was a Presidential appointee to the Social Security Commission, appeared before the committee and discussed the substance of his minority report. The Senator will find the same problem discussed in his minority report.

I must admit that the full impact of those comments did not dawn on me when they first said it. If the Senator will read the transcript itself, he will see that I was very concerned about the matter, but the full impact did not dawn on me at that time. The more I thought about it, the more I found it necessary to inquire into it, and the more I became concerned about it.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I am very concerned about this, because what the Senator has just said is something we should zero in on.

One of the reasons the social secu-ritv system is in the financial difficulties it is in today is the fact that over the years, a series of amendments to the Senate do, between the senior and junior Senators of the Senate, Is that generally true?

Mr. LONG. I did not dwell on that subject, as one who voted to report it out of the committee with reservations.

Mr. EXON. Were the matters that are now being brought to the attention of the Senate by the Senator from Louisiana brought up in open debate on the floor of the U.S. Senate?
I say that because I notice that Sena-ator Long's colleague, the junior Senator from Louisiana, voted the other way the other night. I thought that was a little strange, because I know of the relationship, and most Members of the Senate do, between the senior and junior Senators from Louisiana. Is it possible that this Senator from Nebraska was not privy to all the information that was available to the junior Senator from Louisiana from his junior colleague?

What I am asking is this: As one Member of the U.S. Senate, did I miss something in the debate on this bill, which the Senator from Louisiana is not bringing up, that I would have

Furthermore, every time a Senator wanted to pay an additional benefit without a tax to pay for it—and in years gone by I have been one of those Senators, back in the times when they had funds in that fund—rising up on the floor and say, "Let's pass a bill this year for $2 million to go into the fund at the Federal Reserve; you computer at the Federal Reserve; you did not vote for it. But then you go on to 1984 and you see these other items, for example providing general fund transfers in lieu of a portion of the self-employment payroll tax. They raise the self-employment tax, but do the people pay all the higher tax? Oh, no. They give them a credit against the General
Treasury for most of that amount.

We had Senators on the floor offering amendments, during the consideration of the bill, to pay for something by providing a tax credit. Where was the tax credit going to come from?
From the General Treasury. There is no real general fund from which to take this. The general fund is $200 billion in debt for the year we are facing now. You cannot pay back the money by adding it to the national debt.

In earlier days we would say, you are printing money, you are issuing print-press money. But it is not a print-ning press any more. They have numbers in these computers, so all you have to do is add a numeral into a computer at the Federal Reserve; you just say, "Let's pay them another $100 billion of benefits, and we'll pay for it by increasing the national debt by an equal amount." All you have done is put an electric impulse in a silicon chip in a computer. Then you say,

"We have $100 billion more in the Social Security Fund."

Once we start down that road, I believe we are in trouble, and that why
I cannot vote for the conference report.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President—
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The
Senator from Nebraska yielded to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Let me ask a further question of the Senator from Louisiana.
Mr. President, if it is true, and I think it is, that the Senator from Louisiana is now saying that he has been very concerned about this and that he now is opposing this, at this very late hour. I don’t know the reasons he has outlined, then that is of grave concern to the Senator from Nebraska; because one thing I think we should not do is to attempt to fool the people of the United States that we are correcting something without relying on the general fund of the social security system from the difficulty it is presently in. If we are not doing that. That is why I am asking the questions I am asking, because I think I am about to cast a rather important vote; and I am not going to vote for this unless I can be convinced that we actually have done something other than the net result of relying on the general fund to bail out the social security system in the near future.

Mr. LONG. I said to the Senator that my reason is that we have not voted against a social security bill in 34 years. But I will vote against this one.

As I say, my reasons do not have much to do with the items that were in conference, or that were dropped in conference. I have been troubled about the matter of general revenue financing throughout.

While the Senator might not have heard much of it in my remarks. I think if he were listening to the Senator from Colorado (Mr. Armstrong) discuss the matter, he would have picked up some of that.

I discussed this matter with one of the more conservative conferences on the House side, and I told him—

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, there is not a member of the Senate. May we have order, so that I can hear the Senator from Louisiana?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. LONG. I told that particular House Member I felt that perhaps I had been derelict in my duty to the Senator because I had not opposed the bill on that basis at an earlier point.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, there is not a member of the Senate. May we have order, so that I can hear the Senator from Louisiana?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. LONG. I told that particular House Member I felt that perhaps I had been derelict in my duty to the Senate because I had not opposed the bill on that basis at an earlier point. He told me not to worry about it. He said he had been opposing it on that basis for months.

He had made the points until he was blue in the face, but he had achieved nothing on the House side, and I should not vote for his reason. The fact that I had not stressed the point prior to this in the Senate.

I do think if I had to do it over again I would have made this point to Senators when the matter was before the Senate. I told him to do it, perhaps I owe the Senator an apology. But at least I am explaining it now, because I do not feel that I can vote for the bill as much as I would like to vote for it, to help solve the financing problems of social security. I do not think this is the way we should do it.

I am just one person who has his own conscience to live with, I cannot vote for this conference report. I explained to the Senator why I could not.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. EXON. I am going to yield the floor in a moment.

I thank my friend from Louisiana, and my line of questioning I think clearly indicated that the Senator from Nebraska was not particularly pleased, that he did not feel he had been given the information he needed, and the ranking minority member on the Finance Committee, The Senator from Louisiana, though, has said it very well. He felt that this is the time to lay it out.

I have great respect for his judgment. I am very pleased that he laid out his concerns at this time which I think is helpful to all of us, and I thank him for his candor.

I yield the floor, Mr. President. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I wish to take just a few minutes to talk about what the Social Security Commission recommended and the conference agreement we have on the Senate floor right now.

We have in this agreement what the Social Security Commission recommended. Some are concerned about the use of general revenues. The bill is just the same tonight as it was last night on general revenues. We did not change a thing in conference pertaining to general revenues.

I do not quarrel with the Senator from Louisiana for indicating his concern about the use of general revenues. But I wish to assure the Senator from Nebraska and others that there is no change in the Senate’s position on that.

There are some general revenues in the package but they were there when the recommendations were made by the Social Security Commission. They were there in the Finance Committee amendment. They were in the Senate amendment last night, and they are in the bill before us tonight. They have not been changed. They have not been increased.

We have also done a great deal in the area of unemployment compensation. We have special provisions for West Virginia, special provisions for Iowa, special provisions for Illinois. And we provide a lot of coverage and benefits that are going to start coming due April 1. We have to pass the bill.

On prospective reimbursement under Medicare, I think we have a good package. The Senator from Minnesota, who was not a member of the conference, was there to help us on that.

We have an alien provision that was not in the House bill. It is not as strong as the one we had in the Senate amendment, but we worked today with Senator Grassley, the Senator from Iowa, who in turn contacted the Senator from Indiana, Senator Lugar, and the Senator from Maine, Senator Mitchell, and now we have an alien provision. We have accommodated the Senator from Hawaii in that provision and he is no longer concerned with the provision in this bill.

We accommodated the Senator from Washington, both Senators from Washington, on the paymaster provision that they thought was very important.

I believe if Senators look at the entire package that someone can find some fault. It is not the way they want it. It is not the way I want it. But I defy anyone who has ever been to a conference to come back and say, “Oh, you got all I wanted.” I preferred raising the retirement age to 66. To get age 66, the Senate bill had to make some changes in the bend points, benefit reduction. I think changing the age to 67 is a benefit reduction. But the House of Representatives was convinced that since it had a vote on that age, they could not go back and say we are going to take 66. I even tried 66½. It seemed like a compromise—we had 66, they had 67. I assumed we split the difference in some of our conferences. So we tried 66½. But they would not buy it. This without any benefit formula changes in the next century.

Mr. LONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DOLE. No; I appreciate that. Mr. LONG. Mr. President, permit me to say to the distinguished chairman of the committee and the chairman of the Senate conference, I hope he understands that nothing I have said about this matter is intended to reflect upon him or any other member of the conference. As the chairman of the conferences, the Senator did his utmost to uphold the Senate position. And although some of us may be disappointed that the Senate did not prevail on more of its provisions, my objection and the reason that I shall vote against the conference report, as the Senator correctly stated, has to do with the initial bill and the general financing phases of it which I simply came to understand better and better as the matter proceeded through the legislative mill. I do not for a moment question the good intentions and the very fine way in which the chairman of the committee has conducted himself, and I think the Senate is indebted to the chairman because he did faithfully defend the Senate position and I think we all are indebted to him for that.

Mr. DOE. No; I appreciate that very much, and coming from the Senator from Louisiana I doubly appreciate it. I appreciate the Senator’s assistance in the conference. I do not suggest that the bill is perfect. The Senator from Louisiana said he has been focusing on the general revenue aspect of the financing package for some time and he is coming down on the side of saying, “Well, I cannot accept it.” That is the principle the Senator from Louisiana has held for a long time.

I want here at the beginning of his speech, I know when President Carter suggested general revenue funding the Senator from Louisiana said no. We had that battle in our committee, and I joined the Senator from Louisiana in opposing such a solution, so I know a little about that.

Some are saying we did not get all we should have on the SECA tax. The Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Nebraska pointed out, that is taking money out of general revenue for tax credits for the self-employed.

The Senator from Missouri worked very hard on that, and he is going to speak on it. He is not perfectly satisfied with what happened. However, let me repeat that we insisted that the House Members vote on that provision because we were told that they had enough votes to come around to our position. But I could not detect that in the vote. It was a rather weak voice vote, and the chairman announced that he prevailed. The chairman can do that from time to time, and he is an outstanding chairman. The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee is a good man.

I believe that under the so-called SECA proposal, we did quite well in the conference agreement. Someone with the House bill would pay a SECA tax under present law of $1,478. The Commission would have raised that to $2,100. The House bill would have said $1,785 and the Finance Committee said $1,665. So the conference agreement results in a $30 difference. I think we have come most of the way.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table be included in the Record.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

Mr. DOLE. So, Mr. President, I know some are distressed because the new Federal hires are included in this bill. But again that was a Commission recommendation. Democrats and Republicans and others said, “OK, if the system is going to work, we are going to bring in new hires.” Maybe we should not have done that, but that was the position of the House, and they are adamantly opposed to it.

I happen to think it is a good provision. I visited again with some of the labor representatives following that decision and I can say that they are not too upset. They gave it a good shot and they lost. Now they are going to try to work out the supplemental plan with the committee of that jurisdiction, which happens not to be the Senate Finance Committee.

So, Mr. President, I believe that having participated in the conference and having been on the Commission, I can tell you honestly that I think everything the Commission recommended is in this bill. In fact, there is some improvement because when we gave up the fail-safe we tightened up the so-called stabilizer. I would like to convey to the Senator from Montana that I tried to hold that line and I did not find one House Member who would take up the battle. But that happens in a lot of conferences.

I hope that my colleagues will take a look at this and decide that this is an opportunity, not a perfect one, but an opportunity, to really believe in the system.” I am not going to stand up and say, as some were saying, “We took care of it for 75 years,” because I know what happened in 1977. We said we would take care of it for 40 years, and 4 or 5 years later we were back saying we ought to do something.

Mr. President, I hope we might adopt the conference report. It has just received an overwhelming vote in the House, 243 to 102. It passed with a greater than 2 to 1 margin and I think that is an indication that it has broad support.

Mr. HEINZ. Mr. President, I rise in support of the conference report on H.R. 1900. This bill will restore solvency to social security. It should insure, under our current economic forecasts, the financial integrity of the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance (OASDI) trust funds for both the rest of this decade and the foreseeable 75-year future. It is a bill which reaffirms the soundness of the basic structure of social security by making only minimal adjustments in the program to restore the program to a sound financial footing.

Mr. President, I am pleased that the Congress has been able to move quickly to enact this legislation and provide beneficiaries and workers, who have feared for the future of the social security system, the reassurance that the system will remain solvent in the future. The most serious problem for social security has not been the short-term financing problem, or the long-term financing problem, but rather the loss of public confidence in the social security system itself. In the last few years, the proportion of the population between 18 and 49 with little or no confidence in the future of social security has increased from just under half to over three-quarters. This massive loss in public confidence threatens the compact across generations that is the basis for the entire social security program. Growing doubts about the future of social security weaken the willingness of workers to support the payroll tax which finances the system.

The bill before us represents a dramatic step toward restoring public confidence in social security. For the first time in more than a decade, with the enactment of this legislation, there will be no projected long-run or short-run financing shortfall in social security. Just as importantly, despite several years of public debate and political stalemate which have preceded this legislation, the Congress has demonstrated this year that it can work responsibly and in a truly bipartisan fashion when necessary to maintain a vitally important public commitment to present and future generations of retired Americans.

This bill also provides adequate financing for social security without placing an undue burden on any single group of beneficiaries or taxpayers. Ultimately there is no painless solution to social security's financing problems, but this bill spreads the burden about as evenly as possible. About a third of the $165 billion in new financing would affect employers and workers, a third would affect other accounts in the budget, and a third would affect beneficiaries. Because the financial burden is broadly shared, they are minimal for any particular group of individuals.

In addition, it is worth noting that despite the urgent need for changes to improve social security financing, the Congress also has taken this opportunity to improve the program as well. There are four provisions in this bill which improve benefits for divorced, widowed, and disabled spouses—improvements that have been long overdue. In addition, there are two provisions which will provide better incentives for older workers in the future who wish to continue working beyond the normal retirement age. The first liberalizes the earnings test somewhat, to improve social security benefits for those who continue earning some income after they begin receiving social security benefits. The second incentive is a gradual increase in the delayed retirement credit so that workers who delay their retirement age to 65 will no longer lose the full actuarial value of their social security benefits as a result.

Mr. President, I think this legislation will provide the necessary tonic for our decaying social security system. On balance, I believe it is a fair and reasonable compromise solution. As in any compromise, however, good proposals were lost in the interest of forging a package which would be acceptable to both Chambers. There were five areas in particular where I feel the Senate was forced to recede with respect to worthy ideas, and I truly regret that we could not come to the floor tonight with legislation that included these provisions from the Senate bill.

Most importantly, the Senate had to recede on its solution to the long-run financing problem. In my judgment, the Senate version was much better than the House provision we accepted which raised the retirement age to 67 by 2027. The provision passed by the Senate involved raising the retirement age to only 66, gradually phasing in the increase between 2000 and 2015. This increase in the retirement age was coupled with an across-the-board 5.3-percent reduction in the basic benefit amount, gradually phasing in the reduction between 2000 and 2008.

Our provision had several advantages. First, the House provision involved only a 1-year increase in the retirement age in recognition of the fact that, though many may want to go beyond what is considered to be 'normal retirement age', there will continue to be workers with poor health, low skill levels, and inconsistent work histories who will be physically unable to work or will be unable to find employment when they are older. The 1-year increase in retirement age would have avoided unfairly penalizing these workers. Second, the combination of these two provisions would have spread the burden of the additional financing across a broader group of individuals, with a less severe effect on any particular group. While the retirement age increase would be a reduction in benefits for retirees only, and a reduction concentrated most heavily on those who take early retirement; the 5.3-percent reduction in the basic benefit would have affected all beneficiaries—retirees, survivors, and the disabled—equally. The combination of the two would have protected survivors and disability beneficiaries without placing an unfair or undue burden on retirees of the future. Third, the combined effect of these provisions would have resulted in a less severe reduction in benefits for any particular beneficiary in the future. While raising the retirement age by 1 year will eventually reduce monthly benefits by 13.3 percent for someone retiring at 65, the combination in the Senate bill would have reduced benefits by only 11.6 percent for someone retiring at age 65.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to insert a table in the RECORD as follows:

1 House provision increases the normal retirement age from 65 to 67 between 2000 and 2008.
2 Senate provision increases the normal retirement age from 65 to 67 between 2000 and 2005, reducing benefits by 5.3 percent gradually phasing in the reduction between 2000 and 2008.

Mr. HEINZ. In short, Mr. President, I believe the Senate had a better long-run financing proposal—one that would have been fairer and more equitable, and unfortunately the House proposal to raise the retirement age to 67 prevailed.

Mr. President, I also regret that the House conference where not willing to accept the Senate provision which would have completely eliminated the earnings limit in social security by 1993. Fortunately, the rate at which social security benefits are reduced for earnings was lowered somewhat in the conference agreement, so that those with earnings just over the $4,600 limit will not face such a large marginal tax rate. But I am concerned that we have not done enough.

The earnings limit, or retirement test, is a powerful factor in forcing older persons who want to work out of the labor force. Many people, in fact, believe that they will lose their entire social security benefits if they earn just over the limit. This discourages people from working is neither good national policy, nor does it conform with the interests and wishes of older persons themselves. We need to change these disincentives if we are going to encourage productive older persons to stay in the workforce, to contribute to our economy, and to continue to meet their own economic needs in independence and dignity. By failing to raise the earnings limit I fear that we have missed an excellent opportunity to provide encouragement to older workers.

I am also disappointed that the House conferees refused to agree to the Senate tax credit for the self-employed. In my judgment, the Senate provision would have reduced the amount of net tax increase for the self-employed resulting from the increase in self-employment social security tax rates. Although I have supported the notion that the self-employed should contribute for their social security benefits at the same rate as the employer-employee, I have also felt very strongly that this adjustment should not significantly raise the tax burden for the self-employed. I am particularly concerned that the net-increase in taxes not be too large in the first few years. Unfortunately, the House provision which was incorporated provides a smaller tax credit in the initial years than the Senate provision. I can only hope that this smaller credit will not result in an excessive and unfair added tax burden for the self-employed.

Mr. President, I must say I also regret that the House conference was unwilling to accept the very limited exemption from social security for employers and employees who are conscientiously opposed to accepting insurance. My amendment, which was incorporated in the Senate bill, would have permitted mostly Amish employees who worked for an Amish employer to avoid paying contributions to social security. While I believe coverage under social security should be universal, I also believe that we should respect the religious convictions of our citizens, and where these convictions conflict with the law, make an effort to exempt them if possible. In this case, the Amish would have waived their right to all social security benefits. The convictions would have placed no burden on their non-Amish neighbors. I think it is shameful that we were unable to make this adjustment in the law, which to the Congress is so minor, and to the Amish so important.

Finally, Mr. President, although I am pleased that the conference agreement would remove the social security trust funds from the unified budget in 1992, I regret that the House conference insisted upon removing the two Medicare trust funds—HI and SMI—along with the OASDI trust funds. The Medicare program is really quite different from the cash benefit programs. First, there is not the inherent relationship between the workers' earnings and the benefits received under Medicare that there is in OASDI. More importantly, the Medicare program faces extremely serious financing problems beginning in the next 2 or 3 years—problems which have not yet been addressed in legislation. It is quite possible that the entire system of financing Medicare will need to be restructured in the near future to assure its financial health. Since this effort will in all likelihood involve spending and revenue decisions quite different from those which will be made for a stable, well-financed retirement system, I believe it was inappropriate for the House to decide to move this program outside the unified budget at this time.

Despite my concerns about these specific elements of the conference agreement, Mr. President, I believe this legislation is, all things considered, a reasonable solution to our pressing social security and Medicare problems. It will meet the financing needs of this program in this decade as long as the economy performs as well as or better than our purposely conservative projections for it. And in the long run, this legislation will resolve the forecasted 75-year deficit in the program. I commend all of my colleagues who have worked so hard to complete this legislation. With its passage tonight we can demonstrate once again to today's younger workers our commitment to preserving the social security system.

Mr. President, I will just say very briefly that when the Senator from Kansas says that this conference report is better than the original provision agreed to by the President, by the majority leader, by the Speaker of the House, and the majority of the members of the Commission on Social Security Reform, he is right. This is better, and it is better for one reason principally which he has referred to and that is that it has a better stabilizer. It is more likely to do the job even than that which the Commission, with the President's concurrence, recommended to this and the other body.

Yes, I know there are probably some things in the bill we would all like a little bit differently. I was the principal architect of the long-term provisions where we had a balance between raising the early and reducing the replacement rate by about 5 percent, and then bringing in much faster the delayed retirement credit and phasing out much faster the retirement test, and I would be dishonest with you if I did not say that our provision was better than the House provision, going from 65 to 67. I think we have a better provision in terms of incentive for people to work because of the delay in retirement credit phasing because of the phaseout of the retirement test.

I think we spread the burden around in terms of slowing the growth of benefits a good deal more evenly, not a great dramatic difference perhaps, but more evenly.

I would have liked to have seen that prevalence of the most of the speedup from S.1, the delayed retirement credit, but what we have in this bill is exactly what was in S.1, the delayed retirement credit.

We have a better provision of the retirement test that was in S.1 but not about what we sent to the House. I regret we lost that but on a balance this bill is a reasonable bill and it complies with about everything the National Commission recommended.

So, Mr. President, I hope my colleagues will join us in supporting this. It is a good start and it is going to do the job, and I guess that is the best we could really ask.

Finally, last observation: I think the Senator from Kansas did a superb job, as did the Senator from Louisiana and the other conferees, Senator DURFORT, Senator CEAFFEE, Senator MOYNIHAN, to name just a few. The Senate conferences rigorously upheld at every opportunity the Senate position. I have never seen a more faithful group of conferees, and we did not lose every battle. We got about halfway in most of these cases.

I think you can always ask to do better but when you go through negotiation you are not going to win them all and we did not.

Well, Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Kansas for yielding and I commend him on his good work.

Mr. DOLE. I yield for a question.

Mr. EXON. I thank my friend. One brief question: Please clarify for me one of the other parts of this which seems to have a great deal of confusion. The House, as I understand it, would not put language in the bill that deleted the payments of social security to illegal aliens. We included that on this side. During the explanation by the chairman of the committee he said something about illegal aliens. As I understand it, we basically came out of conference with the House position that we essentially would continue to make social security payments to illegal aliens. Am I misinformed or is that accurate?

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. DOLE. I will just say to my distinguished colleague there was no House provision on illegal aliens. We did not get everything we wanted in illegal aliens, but they had no provision.

Mr. EXON. I would simply inform my friend from Kansas that one of the Congressmen from my State introduced such a proposal and was turned down in that committee so you would not know about that. But is it not true that we did address that matter on this side and we went to conference and the provision went I would have provided for not paying social security to illegal aliens, and was not that basically eliminated in the conference?

Mr. DOLE. It was modified.

Mr. EXON. That is what I want. Was it just watered down or did we sink the ship.

Mr. DOLE. No, it was modified. The ship did not sink. I must say that even on the Senate side there were different views on illegal aliens. The Senator from Kansas was a strong supporter of the Senate position and we indicated to the House conference we could not go back to the Senate without a substantial provision on illegal aliens. So I contacted the Senator from Iowa, Senator GASSLEY, who has a dominant interest in this, and I understand he contacted some other Senators. He and the other Senators discussed it with staff. He discussed it with Mr. Svahn of HHS, the former Social Security Commissioner, and advised us that he was satisfied with the provision.

Mr. EXON. The Senator does not have to satisfy him, he has to satisfy me.

Mr. DOLE. I understand.

Mr. EXON. That is the reason for the question.
Mr. DOLE. Let me find the committee report language and I will come back to that question. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia. I will yield the floor.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, I ask for the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia is recognized. Before the Senator begins, the Senate will be in order.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. President, no comment. The Senator from West Virginia now speaking is to make it will change a single vote in the Senate. I make, however, this very, very brief statement. My colleagues, I will reaffirm my vote of 1935 for social security. That legislation passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of 372 to 33 on April 19, 1935. The Senate, on June 19, passed the measure by an impressive vote of 77 to 6.

We have all, I believe, studied the subject matter very, very carefully. I think that there has been even more personal attention away from the floor to reading the remarks of my colleagues, to talking with many constituents on this matter, than almost any measure that has been before us in recent months, perhaps in recent years.

I will, Mr. President, vote for the conference report. I believe that we must be realistic in this crucial hour. I believe that, on balance, the Senate will do well—not all of us satisfied, of course—to act as the House of Representatives did. We must act, yes, in the affirmative, forward the bill to the President, which he will sign into law. The President, which he will sign into law.

Now, I heard they did away with the dropout year provision which we put in. This is not going to mean anything to some people, but to a few million mothers who have to take a couple of years off to care for children in the 1990's and the years after the turn of the century, that is going to be important. And there are several million of them. I hated to hear that they had taken that out of the bill. That is an important liberalization of the benefits. But I could swallow that.

I was sorry when I had heard they did away with the liberalization of relief we had granted to small businesses, just letting them deposit their withholding a little later to give them a chance at least to get their feet under them and to have 15 days or so of a little hope of things doing back here in 1985 or 1986 patching up this system.

Again, I do not mind making sacrifices and I am prepared to go home and say to my taxpayers:

Look. I fought to keep the tax increase out of this, but you have got to go for it. We had to do it because we have to put social security on a solvent basis. We have to shore up the system and we have to restore the public faith and credibility in the system. It has not only got to be prudently safe, it has to appear to be safe.

But I cannot say that once the failsafe is gone.

Now, the Senator from Louisiana who put the fail-safe in the bill to the first place and modest about the impact of that. But the fact of the matter is for many of us that was the final centerpiece of this bill, because that said that if the trust fund got in trouble, if our economic projections as a whole are not to be right and little things do go as we thought, that the checks would still go out on time and there would just be a little restraint in the cost-of-living benefit adjustment increase.

And, significantly, in proposing this, the Senator from Colorado held harmless the beneficiaries who receive the smallest monthly amount because the way he structured it we pay 100 percent of the cost-of-living adjustment for the first $250 of basic benefit. And we held harmless the people who might be getting $800, $900, $1,000, $1,200, even $1,400 a month for a couple on social security
Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I would like to point out that the bill that passed last night was not as solid as the bill before us today.

The bill that passed last night was $9.3 billion short in the short run and in long-run deficit 1.2 percent of payroll (almost $3 billion per year for the next 75 years).

The actuaries tell us that these short falls have been eliminated in the conference bill in both the short and long run.

The Senator from Colorado expressed displeasure with the fact that the retirement earnings test is not phased out in the conference report. In fact, the conference report liberalizes the retirement test in 1990—the same date as in the Senate bill. Rather than phasing out the test, the conference report liberalizes the test so that instead of penalizing an elderly worker by $1 in benefits for each $2 they earn, they will have benefits reduced by $1 for each $3 of earnings. This substantially reduced the penalty for working—while admittedly not going as far as we would have liked.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLOWS. Mr. President, my distinguished colleague from Louisiana has referred to the fail-safe. That is the deficit problem. As long as you have deficits, which we will have for many years to come, then the social security payments will be made. That is why we have the fail-safe. That is why the funds being sound and the recipients being soundly paid. We are going to do the latter.

Two years ago, when we raised this question in the Budget Committee, many of the blue ribbon commission and others questioned that the social security trust fund was even in trouble, and we cautioned at that time, Mr. President, that before long we were going to be using general revenues to pay social security benefits. They said, "This is going to happen sometime in the future."

Now the distinguished Senator from Louisiana has shown us that this fear has come true.

He put my statement into the Record on last evening. I am grateful to him.

I want to associate myself with his remarks. We have now not only taxed the benefits but now we have gone into the general revenues to pay benefits. We are on a means tested program.现实上, then, instead of this evening crossing a historic milestone and solving the social security problem, and reestablishing the people's confidence in the solvency of the social security system, on the contrary we are actually now starting to create the problems.

They will learn that it is not only means tested by taxes, but they really are going to the deficit each time benefits are paid.

If we do get in trouble, I say to the Senator from Colorado, in 1985 or 1986, we will just come back to the general fund because the precedent has been set to finance benefits from the deficit.

The only thing we have to fear is the hang up of fear of deficits from our national Congress. We are going on willy-nilly. This social security bill adds $48 billion over a 7-year period of general revenues, about a $7 billion a year in a new spending program, unable to be financed out of the trust fund. Therefore, I will waive the conference rules and thank the Chair.

Mr. DANFORTH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. DANFORTH. Mr. President, I will vote for the conference report. I have supported this bill from the outset. I was one of the original co-sponsors of S. I. I believe this is the only responsible alternative we have.

But I would like to point out the fact that while we have made the effort and have succeeded in holding harmlessly the self-employed, the effect of tax increases on them, we have far from held harmless those who are self-employed. We have provided some credit on income taxes for social security taxes paid. But the net effect of the conference report that is now before the House is that for a self-employed, unmarried person with an income of $15,000, we are increasing the total tax liability of that individual by $217.

For a self-employed, single individual with a $30,000 income, we are increasing individual's net tax liability by $435.

Mr. President, the effect of this will be that when, for these individuals, the social security tax and the income tax liabilities are added up, the individual with a $15,000 income will pay a total of $3,495. And another person with a $30,000 income will pay a total of $9,165 in taxes.

We are landing a haymaker punch at the self-employed people of this country, and the low- or middle-income self-employed people of this country.

Mr. President, who are these individuals? These people constitute the backbone of our country. Most farmers are self-employed individuals. Most farmers are hit by this tremendous increase in tax liability.

We know that the real estate sales people have been particularly interested in the self-employment tax. They are certainly not doing too well in their business these days. Aside from them, the small contractor, the home repair person, the person who owns the corner grocery store, some of the most tenacious people in our society, economically, are going to be hit by a very significant increase in their tax liability.

We in the Senate recognized this problem and did our best to expand the credit that was recommended by the Commission and the credit that was in the House bill. We still would have hit these individuals with a very substantial tax increase. It was my view that we should have held the line in the conference that we should have insisted on the Senator's provision.

We did not do so. We came out with a pretty fair compromise in that we were closer to the Senate position than the House position in the conference. But the effect of this is very substantial on unemployed individuals. I point this out to the Senate because it is my judgment that in the very near future we are going to have to face up to this fact or we are going to be driving even more people who are now on the brink of bankruptcy over that brink.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DANFORTH. I yield.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. I believe the Senator has overestimated this provision. In terms of self employment, I believe the figure in the Senate bill was 3 percent for 1984.

Mr. DANFORTH. The Finance Committee bill was 2.9 percent in 1984 and the conference was 2.7.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. And for 1985 and 1986?

Mr. DANFORTH. I will have to call on the committee staff for that; 2.3 in 1985 and 2.0 in 1986. That is the conference report.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. What was it before?

Mr. DANFORTH. We went down to 2.1 in the Senate.

Mr. MOYNIHAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, the hour is late and I shall be brief. With the indulgence of my friends on the other side of the aisle, I should like to speak to my fellow Democrats on this side.

I wish to point out first of all that this bill passed the U.S. House of Representatives by a margin of 2 1/2 to 1. Among the Democratic majority in that body, it passed 3 to 1. A Democratic leadership has been willing to cooperate in this singular bipartisan effort to save the single most important domestic program our party has ever brought to this Nation. None other than Senator RANDOLPH, if he will forgive the personal statement of his name, who spoke on this floor, was on that floor 50 years ago when this legislation passed. None the less he has passed either body and none is more singularly our heritage to preserve and pass on. By 3 to 1, our fellow Democrats voted for this.

Second, I say to you that this is not one subject matter. This is medicare, this is unemployment insurance. For the first time in history, we add a fourth tier of unemployment benefits for those who have exhausted their final Federal supplemental compensation benefits. The new programs begin when this bill is enacted; the third tier, Federal supplemental benefits, expires March 31. Today is March 24. In 7 days, if we do not pass this, 738,000 working men and the families behind them will have their benefits cut off. We do not only that they continue, but there are 15,000 back for those whose supplemental benefits have already expired.

I say to you, the fail-safe provision which my distinguished friend and my beloved chairman put into this provision was something that we have had the stabilizer, which during the long month at Blair House was replicated for the years 1977-82 the funds would never have been in any difficulty.

The stabilizer says that when the funds drop to a certain proportion of expected outgo during the year, you switch to the lower of price or wage increases for the adjustment in the benefit. That stabilizer, reduced to 15 percent, is moved up to 1985. We have been given the 1984 budget and now we have the Senate a percent from 1985 through 1988, then its flips up to 20 percent and stays that way indefinitely.

I last say that, yes, we have put general revenues into this fund. We have done so for a period of, at a very diminishing rate, 7 years. The men who devised this arrangement in the 1930's expected it to be a one-third-one-third-one-third arrangement by now. We have had a very gentle infusion. And in a very short order, this particular set of funds goes into a major surplus. This last Sunday, in the Washington Post, a respected journalist, Mr. John M. Berry, had a front-page article that went on at some length and which asked what the Federal Government was going to do with the surpluses this legislation would generate beginning in 1990? It is a problem to which the Senator from New Mexico could usefully address himself with more pleasure than with which he deals with the problems of this very moment.

We have a tax problem we have resolved, a long-term problem we have dealt with, with a high order of bipartisan competence. It passed the House of Representatives 2 1/2 to 1 243 to 192. A Democratic measure of Jennings Randolph were on that floor tonight as he was 48 years ago, he would have voted for this bill, would he not, sir?

Mr. RANDOLPH. My friend, I voted for the initial bill 48 years ago. It was a monumental document.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Would you not have voted for it tonight, sir?

Mr. RANDOLPH. I will vote aye! I do so with the inner knowledge that I do right. It is for the people, our citizens of this great and good land!

Mr. MOYNIHAN. You never fail us.

Let us not fail them. They happen to be the American people.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I have just one brief question for my friend from Kansas. One small important part of this bill added as set aside. By a small bipartisan effort, we added a provision to finally, years later, assist widows who find themselves, after 20 or 30 years of raising kids and keeping house suddenly widowed. Because they are not yet 60 and they are not working, they have no social security benefit. The very modest transition benefit of $6 a month for these widows 55 years or older. It costs only $25 million. I have two questions for my friend from Kansas.

One is, Did the House conferes refuse to accept our provision in this manner?

Mr. DOLE. I say to the Senator from Michigan that the House conferes did refuse to accept that provision. I can also say that the record will reflect that on two occasions the Senator from Kansas raised that specific provision and indicated that it was important to the Senator from Michigan. On the last occasion, the chairman of the conference and the chairman of the Social Security Subcommittee, Representative Pickle, promised the conference and everyone there that they would accept this provision or the drop out 30 years. They added by the distinguished Senator from Colorado. However, they promised that, along with other issues dealing with discrimination against women, they would soon be having hearings on the broader issue of the treatment of women under social security.

Mr. LEVIN. The second question is, Can I count on the chairman's support on future efforts in this?

Mr. DOLE. The answer is unequivocally yes.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair. I commend him on his efforts. The problem here is so tragic and so stark, we must step up our efforts to correct it.

Mr. DOLE. Mr. President, I would like to point out to the Senators from Michigan and Colorado, who are concerned about the absence of provisions for women, each of the four equity provisions recommended by the National Commission were adopted. In addition, the conference report included a modification that will provide great relief for older women on social security survivors or dependents benefits who also receive a public pension.

Next July, they would have suffered a $1 for $1 reduction in their benefits on account of their other public pension. The conference report will provide for a one-third disregard of the public pension—elderly spouses and widows and widowers will only have two-thirds of their pensions offset.

Mr. BOSCHWITZ. Mr. President, I wish to ask the Senator from New York a question and I do not ask this question to in any way prejudice the conference report before us. There is a significant difference between the fail-safe and the stabilizer. I point that the fail-safe is measured in terms of going below the reserve. The stabilizer—I do not know where the word...
Mr. DOLE. The Senator is correct in that very technical sense. The stabilizer—the word came from the distinguished Chairman of the President's Commission, Mr. Greenspan. It is triggered by the reserve and the language added by the House Members is that when it goes below 15 percent for this 4-year period, then 20, the trustees are to automatically go to the lesser of the two indices and report in writing to the Congress as to what other, if any, measures are required.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me briefly?

Mr. DOMENICI. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. I want to point out that while I favor the stabilizer provision, it will have absolutely no effect whatsoever on the stability of the fund or the ability of the fund to meet its projected payments during the balance of this decade under either of the two economic scenarios, that is, 2(b) and 3, which were under consideration by the Finance Committee and by the National Commission. It is a worthy provision, it is a useful provision, but it is irrelevant to the question of whether or not we are going to make it through 1985, 1986, and 1987, according to the staff directors of the Commission on Social Security Reform with whom I have discussed this matter tonight.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to the Senator, I understand that very clearly and I think that is why I asked the question, not because that should be the conclusive issue but “stabilizer” somehow sounds like—

Mr. ARMSTRONG. It sounds better than it is.

Mr. DOMENICI (continuing). Fail-safe.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Exactly.

Mr. DOMENICI. The point I was making is they are not the same because as the Senator has indicated, even if you go with the lower of the two, it is not triggered up against preserving a reserve but, rather, triggered up against making a report that you are in trouble, as I understand the bill.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. That is right.

Mr. DOLE. Will the Senator yield briefly?

Mr. DOMENICI. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. DOLE. I do not think the fail-safe is fail-safe either. We can argue semantics all night long, but if you reduce the COLA to zero with the fail-safe and the fund still does not have enough money to pay the checks, it is obviously not fail-safe. This is all sort of a semantic game.

I must also say that the same actuaries being cited tonight for forecasts were the same ones who told us in 1977 that we did not have a thing to worry about for 40 years. Now, if they are the same actuaries the Senator from Colorado is relying on tonight, I think one is the same one I relied on this afternoon. I hope he gave me accurate information when he told me this afternoon that the stabilizer as modified was a good trade. That was his statement to me.

Mr. ARMSTRONG. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, it is not my purpose for a second to dispute the value of the stabilizer provision but only to underscore, as the Senator from New Mexico said, that it has a different function.

I had not intended to get into a detailed explanation of this. But under both economic scenarios where we were within the range of the Commission and the Finance Committee and the Ways and Means Committee and the House and the Senate, it is anticipated that wages will rise more rapidly than prices and since that is the case the so-called stabilizer would have no effect.

Now, if some different set of economic conditions prevail than any were considered, it is conceivable it would have some effect but under the conditions which we deemed as the outer parameters of what we would think about in preparing this bill it would not have any effect. It is, nonetheless, a worthwhile provision.

Let me also emphasize to the Senator—I said it earlier but I want to say it again—that I am not talking about the trust fund will go broke in 1985 or on any other particular date. My bottom line for support of the bill was a reasonable assurance, not an absolute, ironclad guarantee, but the assurance that a trustee would expect a prudent investment. It will reasonably foreseeable circumstances—not every manageable circumstance but just what can be reasonably foreseen by people who see themselves as the trustees of a system that we have got the job done. Last night’s bill did that. In my opinion and in the opinion of experts, there is a significant possibility—I quote, “a significant possibility”—that the bill in its present form will not fulfill that requirement.

I am not willing to take that risk but I do not predict that we are going bankrupt in 1985 or 1986, just that there is a significant possibility that we will not be able to make ends meet and that is good enough for all we have been through.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, having distinguished between the stabilizer and the bailout, I think I will only fair to say that from the standpoint of possibilities, I agree with the distinguished Senator from Kansas with reference to the fail-safe provisions. They are fail-safe with respect to getting down to no COLA at all, and then if you have to go below it, obviously you would be in a state of reserve bankruptcy. The fail-safe only provides for adjusting the cost of living, it did not provide for going below it. So in that respect I did not mean to imply to the contrary, and I indicate in my opinion he is correct in that observation also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. President, if the managers of the bill are prepared to do so, I am prepared to suggest that time has arrived when we should go ahead and put the question to the Senate. Mr. President, I make only these general observations and do so briefly at 1:25 in the morning.

I do not recall in my years in the Senate or ever seeing the United States of America pass a bill that we agreed was perfect. I do not recall one that I have ever seen that I was wholly pleased with. Some I like better than others. But I really do not think it is in the nature of representation that we sometimes achieve perfection.

It is the genius of this system perhaps, though the Republican concept in general, that the very pluralism that puts us here in the place of trust guarantees that there will be an exquisite diversity of opinions and ideas that will result in something that is essentially unsatisfactory in some respect to virtually every Member of Congress.

I acknowledge the reservations, I respect the concerns that Members have about this conference report.

Mr. President, I believe there is a broad and diverse perspective at hand. In the course of our history, there are times when the country demands that we do something—in civil rights, in national defense, in environmental legislation. Whatever it may be, in its own inimitable, unmistakable way, the people of this country gather up and demand that we do something to correct, to innovate or to change the status quo. I believe this is such a decisive moment.

I think the country is telling us to get on with the business of fixing the social security system. I think the country is telling us we have to do all of it tonight. I think they understand that we are going to do the best we can but we will come back for another bite. There will be the major bills. That is the job. That is the resolvable cleanup hitter. There will be the corrections that have to be attended to next month or the month after that or in the next session because, Mr. President, we learn from our experience. This fundamental responsibility to deal with the demand of the Nation to deal with this issue.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S 4095

Mr. President, if the Congress of the United States fails to do so, I believe we will incur the wrath of the Republic. If the bipartisan Commission appointed by the President and the collective leadership of the Congress can subordinate their differences and produce a virtually unanimous report, then surely the country has the right to expect that we will implement it. If the House of Representatives on both sides of the aisle can adopt this imperfect vessel as the best effort of this Congress at this time, then surely we should take account of the responsiveness of the country and our need to attend to the needs of the Nation.

This is not a perfect bill, Mr. President. But we are not a perfect body. This is not the last word to be spoken, Mr. President, but is the first best effort that we can make at this time.

Mr. President, I urge that the wrath of the people of this country will not come down upon the head and shoulders of this Senate for failing to attend to the clear responsibility that the Nation is asking of it.

Mr. DOLE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. DOLE. I thank the distinguished majority leader, and I will just take 1 minute to say as sincerely as I can that every major provision recommended by the Social Security Commission is in this bill, every major provision unchanged, every major provision.

The bill that left the Senate last night was $6.3 billion short in the short run and 0.2 percent of payroll, almost $33 billion a year, in the long run—the next 75 years. The actuaries tell us that the bill we brought back is actuarially sound in the short term and long term.

I am just one member of the Commission, that we have done a lot of work on this proposal. As the majority leader said, it is not perfect. We have 7 years to address the earnings test, for example, if the Congress desires to go further in this area. It does not take effect until 1990. We have a bit of the alien piece too, and that is enough to sustain it. We will be happy to have additional hearings and work in that area. If anything is not quite satisfactory, we have time to make changes.

My point is that every major provision—the taxing of benefits, the COLA adjustment, the acceleration of payroll taxes, the expansion of coverage—this in this case, Federal workers—is almost identical to the recommendations of the bipartisan Commission.

These recommendations were endorsed by the President of the United States, endorsed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, endorsed by the majority leader of the Senate, and endorsed by liberals, conservatives, Republicans, and Democrats all across this country.

I say to my colleagues that I think it would be a tragedy if—just because everything was not perfect and did not suit every Member of this body—we say that we cannot take this package. There is nothing wrong with this package. If you supported the Social Security Commission recommendations, they are in this package, plus a lot of other things, as pointed out by the Senator from Kansas.

We have a massive medicare prospective payment program that I think is a good one. We have an unemployment compensation program in this package. It is essential that it start April 1 of this year, with special provisions for a number of States because they deserve special consideration.

I say to my colleagues that if we failed to do our duty in the conference, then the Senator from Kansas will accept the responsibility, but let us not punish the American people for a shortcoming that may have occurred in the conference. I do not think it occurred. I am certain many could have done better.

I suggest, as the majority leader has, that we adopt the conference report. We are going to meet again on social security. I have never stood on the floor or in public or privately and said this package is going to last for 75 years, but I am convinced that it can last until 1980; and that we can have surpluses in the retirement fund in the 1990's. Let us give it a chance.

Again, I thank my colleagues for tolerating this debate at this late hour, but I think it is essential that we get on with this tonight.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. STEVENS). The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. D'AMATO. Mr. President, although I intend to vote for final passage of this conference report, I do so with great reluctance. In my opinion, this package is unfair: many of its provisions are absurd. There is however, nothing I can do about it.

To vote against this package, therefore, would be irresponsible. The Social Security system must be saved. I will vote "aye," but I feel that I must first express my strong reservations.

As Chief Justice John Marshall said in the 1819 case of McCulloch against Maryland, "[T]he power to tax involves the power to destroy!" Well, we have certainly demonstrated this fact with this bill. This Congress has used it power to tax to destroy the economic well-being of millions of Americans. This Congress may have saved the Social security system, but it has done so at tremendous, unnecessary and burdensome costs. We are not the rich, not by the well-to-do, but by the hard-working middle-class American taxpayer.

Allow me to detail just a few of the more ridiculous provisions of this bill, the few of the onerous requirements imposed by this legislation.

First is the cruel burden this bill imposes on our Nation's philanthropic organizations, the nonprofit charitable organizations which are the very backbone of America's private sector. These organizations exist on shoe-string budgets. The employees—when they are paid—don often live on in- come. Workers. These institutions are barely making ends meet now. Yet here we come, imposing new economic burdens that may force many to close their doors, to cease the good work they now do. Employees may be laid off whose wages are less than their take-home pay substantially reduced. Why is this happening? Because this Congress has ruled that employees of not-for-profit organizations must be included in the social security system now. No phase-in period will be allowed. No transition period will be granted. We will reduce the ability of America's philanthropists to continue their full efforts to help this Nation's poor and needy.

A second example of an unwarranted provision in this legislation is on municipal bonds. I find it most ridiculous. In fact, it is just plain stupid. In order to save the Social Security system, we need to raise tens of billions of dollars. Yet, in an effort to raise a measly $5 million over the next 7 years, we have imposed additional costs on State and local governments that will run anywhere from $240 million to $1 billion each and every year. A letter I received from the Municipal Finance Officers Association estimates the annual cost to States and municipalities at $725 million, nearly 1,000 times more than the annual revenue which will be raised as a result of this just plain silly provision.

You may ask me, to what section of the bill am I referring? I am talking about the requirement that interest on tax-exempt municipal bonds will be included in an individual's gross income when determining whether he or she exceeds the income level at which one-half of the received social security benefits become subject to Federal income taxation. By including tax-exempt interest in this calculation we may push a few individuals over the limit and thus recover a few dollars for the trust fund by taxing their benefits, but the very fear that this provision will place in the hearts and minds of those investors who purchase municipal bonds will drive up interest rates that our municipalities must pay to market their securities. The municipal finance officers with whom I have spoken have estimated this increased interest cost at anywhere from 25 to 30 cents, in other words, at anywhere from one-quarter of 1 percent to 2½ percent in additional interest.

Simply speaking, this is lots of money. And you know as well as I do who will ultimately pay these increased municipal financing costs: None other than the middle-class...
But this is not true. Not all of the self-employed will have to bear the burden of the social security system to do it? Must destroy the civil service retirement system. This may be a quick fix way that new civil service employees can fathom the logic in this provision.

Sometimes the workings of the legislative process boggle the mind. This is one of those times, for this provision can be described as nothing less than incredible.

A major flaw in this legislation is the limits at which social security benefits become taxable: $25,000 for an individual and $32,000 for a couple. We have provided no phase in. We have built in no progressivity. We have simply specified a cutoff. If you are below, even by one dollar, you pay no tax on your benefits. If you are above, whether by one dollar or $1 million, you have half of your benefits taxes. Thus the marginal rate of taxation is highest on the middle class, those with incomes only slightly over the limits. The more you earn, the lower your marginal rate of taxation on social security benefits becomes. I, for one, can simply not fathom the logic in this provision.

Another problem with this bill is the way that new civil service employees have been thrust into the social security system. It may be a system that works well for social security, but what does it do to our civil service retirement system? Again, we have provided no transition. Again, we have no plan on how we will deal with the future. Social security must be saved. Does this mean that we must destroy the civil service retirement system to do it?

The self-employed are also treated cavalierly by this bill. "Raise their taxes, they can afford it" seems to be the philosophy behind it. But this is not true. Not all of the self-employed are doctors, lawyers, or heads of thriving businesses. Most, in fact the vast majority, are hard-working, middle-class American taxpayers barely making ends meet. We have here imposed a vast new burden on the shopkeepers of America, on the skilled artisans of America, and on those individuals who would rather be their own boss than work for another, even if it meant they would have to get by on less money. These are the people whose taxes we have increased with this legislation.

In this bill we have overused our power to tax. We have misused our power to tax. In many cases we have imposed the tax burden inequitably and on the wrong people. We may have saved social security, but at a tremendous and misplaced cost.

At the beginning of my remarks I stated that I would vote for this conference report mainly so as to destroy it. To do otherwise would be irresponsible. There is no other alternative. No one here believes that if we defeated this legislation that Congress would bring forth a better bill. In fact if this conference report is defeated, it will accomplish very well be no bill at all, and this alternative is totally unacceptable.

Thus, Mr. President, with great reluctance, I will vote in favor of this conference report.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, every day this Congress debates legislation of significance to some element of our economy, some segment of our society. The legislation before us today—to preserve the integrity and insure the solvency of social security now and in the future. Before the end of the century and three-quarters of this Nation's population, 110 million workers and 36 million retirees. This is one of the most important measures which this Congress or any Congress will ever consider.

The National Commission on Social Security Reform in late 1982 took a great step toward restoring public confidence in social security by achieving a bipartisan consensus on the dimensions of the financing problems facing the system. Since that time, both the Senate and the House have acted swiftly, and in a bipartisan fashion, to achieve legislative compromise.

The Congress goal has been to guarantee the ultimate stability of social security and the ability of retired workers to maintain a decent standard of living. The Congress goal has been to see that no single segment of our population—the elderly and disabled, today's employers and workers, tomorrow's retirees, solely bear the burden of resolving the system's financial difficulties. The Senate, in adopting all of the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, and acting to eliminate both the short- and long-term deficits projected for social security, has achieved these goals.

But these are not goals which are achieved without pain. I oppose, as do many other Members of Congress, many of this legislation's individual provisions. And I have voted in favor of amendments to make further improvements in it. This legislation contains elements which are abhorrent to advocates for the elderly. It would delay until February 1, 1984, the cost-of-living increase due in July of this year.

This legislation contains elements which are abhorrent to advocates for the Nation's small business men and women. It would increase the tax on the self-employed for both social security and medicare health insurance. It increases taxes to employers and employees in a time of economic recession. And it would include new Federal employees under the social security system beginning in 1984, a change which I voted against.

Why, then, could I vote in favor of final passage of this legislation? For perfect balance, first, of course it could be no social security system. If no action is taken, in just a few months, benefits could no longer be paid out to the Nation's retirees. Every minute of every day, the system goes $17,000 further in the hole. One hour from now, it will be $240 million more in the hole. The National Commission on Social Security Reform has reported that between $150 and $200 billion is necessary to meet our obligations to retirees between now and the end of the decade. To insure payments to future generations of retirees, a long-term deficit of $6 trillion must be closed. This legislation closes both deficits.

The second reason I could support the overall package approved by the Senate Finance Committee is that it asks for a shared sacrifice. It is not a balanced budget, but, overall, it calls for a just division of responsibility to guarantee the viability of social security. The bill before us asks current and future retirees to contribute. It asks the self-employed, current and future retirees, and Federal workers, for the first time, will be asked to contribute to social security. One-third of the revenue needed to shore up social security would come from coverage of new employees, another third from tax increases, another third from a change in benefits for retirees.

Third, the only alternative methods of improving the condition of social security are far worse than those recommended by the Commission and adopted by the Senate Finance Committee.

Some Members of Congress favored reducing social security problems primarily by cutting benefits to the Nation's retirees. I vehemently opposed those efforts. An amendment was offered to delay until 1985 any cost-of-living adjustments to retirees. An amendment was offered to eliminate all Federal employees retiring under the social security system, to decrease whatsoever, and to require beneficiaries to make up the $40 billion loss in benefit cuts. Amendments were offered to immediately advance the age of full retirement under social security from 65 to 68, with a reduction in benefits for those forced to leave the work force before the age of full retirement. I voted against each of those amendments and am pleased that the Senate overwhelmingly disapproved them.

Other Members of Congress favored resolving social security's problems through even higher taxes than those approved by the National Commission on Social Security Reform. If taxes alone were used to meet the long-term deficit, by the year 2035, the combined social security and medicare tax rate would be 28 percent of income. I am pleased that the Congress rejected any efforts to increase taxes beyond the increase already approved by the Commission.

Still others have suggested allowing the social security system to continue to borrow from the trust funds for the medicare health insurance program and Medicare. To do so would bankrupt all three funds by the middle of next year. That is dissolution, not resolution. The Congress could have required coverage under social security of all current Federal employees. Fortunately, it did not.

The committee could have also taxed all social security benefits, as most private pensions are taxed. It did not.

Any other means of addressing social security’s problems would have forced one segment of our society to suffer disproportionately.

The fourth reason I could support this package is that it contains several very beneficial provisions to assist the low-income elderly, to somewhat alleviate the tax burden on employees, and to eliminate disincentives to the employment of elderly individuals who want to work.

The legislation before us would allow an additional payment of $30 to individuals and $300 to couples who, because of low income, qualify for supplemental security income. For the poorest of the elderly, the additional funds will compensate fully for the delay in social security cost-of-living adjustments.

Elderly women who are widows account for two-thirds of all the elderly living below the level of poverty. They are assisted by several provisions in this legislation. Greater benefits are proposed for divorced or disabled widows and widowers who remarry. Divorced spouses for the first time will be able to claim benefits based on their former spouse’s retirement record, even if the former spouse has not yet claimed those benefits.

As I have mentioned, there are many provisions in the social security package which I strongly oppose. During the Senate’s debate, some of these provisions were taken out, some were not. The legislation approved by the Conference Committee would require the inclusion of new Federal employees under social security beginning in 1984. I voted against this change. Senator Lora offered an amendment in the Senate which would have required the Congress to enact a supplemental civil service retirement program before including new Federal employees under social security. Senator Lora’s amendment, I would point out, would have required the immediate inclusion of Members of Congress under social security, even if a supplemental plan was not required. I find that an unreasonable one.

The amendment would have allowed the Congress to determine how the solvency of the civil service retirement program could be affected by this change before mandating coverage of Federal employees. I am deeply disappointed that the Conference Committee rejected this compromise.

Other provisions in the Senate bill would have assisted elderly Americans who work and who are receiving social security benefits. The legislation approved by the Senate would between 1980 and 1984 have eliminated the so-called earnings limitation. Under current law social security benefits are reduced by $1 for every $2 earned in excess of approximately $6,000. Many elderly Americans who have chosen to continue working or who are forced to work because of the inadequacy of their benefits have been needlessly penalized by this earnings limitation. The committee acted wisely in eliminating the earnings test. But this provision, regrettably, was not adopted by the Conference Committee. The conference agreement only to slightly increase the overall amount which could be earned before reducing benefits. Retirees would lose $1 in benefits for every $2 earned above approximately $6,000. This is inadequate.

Despite the conference committee’s decision in this matter, despite all the concerns which I have about individual elements of the social security package, it is my duty, it is the duty of the entire Congress to adopt this legislation to insure the solvency of the social security system now and in the future.

Mr. President, in 1969, an elderly Vermont woman, Mrs. Ida Mae Fuller, received the first social security check ever issued. Social security, the greatest social program devised by this or any other nation, has endured for more than four decades. It was there for Mrs. Fuller during the years during which her relationship to Insure the widow of the social security system now and in the future. And it shall endure for decades to come. That is what this legislation insures.

I applaud the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform for working in a bipartisan fashion to recommend solutions to the problems facing the social security system. And I applaud Members of both parties in the Congress for agreeing to the Commission’s recommendations. This landmark legislation reaffirms and strengthens this Nation’s commitment to those who are elderly today, those who will be elderly tomorrow.

The PREDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, will the chairman of the Finance Committee please respond to my earlier question, which he indicated he would respond to, about the provisions that I understand were knocked out on the payment of social security to aliens? I am not satisfied with the answer.

Mr. DOLE. I have given the material to the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

Mr. President, I will state what the conference agreement does, and then I will ask that we hear from the Senator from Iowa, who participated in those discussions. At this point, however, I wish to satisfy the Senator from Nebraska.

The conference agreement would suspend the payment of benefits to any alien receiving benefits as a dependent or survivor of an insured worker, whether or not the worker is alive. The legislation approved by the Senate would have required coverage under the social security system for all Federal employees. Fortunately, that has been outside the United States for 6 consecutive calendar months. Alien auxiliary beneficiaries who could prove that they had lived in the United States for a total of at least 5 years during which their relationship to the worker was a relationship upon which eligibility for benefits is based—for example, spouse, child, parent—would be exempt from the suspension of benefits. Children would be deemed to meet the 5-year residence requirement if the residence claimed would be met by the child’s parents.

That deals primarily with dependents.

Now I will yield to the Senator from Iowa, who, in addition to the Senator from Nebraska and the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Nunn), had an interest in this matter. Although we did not get all we wanted, I thought we had achieved some of our concerns. I regret that I had not called the Senator from Nebraska personally.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. We had raised these areas of concern in this bill dealing with aliens, and one of the three was taken care of—and even more adequately taken care of than in the bill that passed the Senate.

The one area of illegal aliens suggested by the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Nunn) was dropped by the conference. I hated to have it dropped, but it was dropped because of not having enough support on the House side, because the Representative from Texas (Mr. Pickle) had promised hearings on that point of view. The Republicans and the Democrats on the House side were willing to go along with that promise to have that problem taken care of later.

Then we had a problem of the worker nonresident alien, who we took care of on the Senate side by denying him any income from social security research benefits beyond the amount of money he paid in, plus interest. On that point, I, too, am disappointed that it was not included by the conferences.

However, I want to say of all three problems, probably the one dealing with dependents and survivors is the one that is most costly, and that one has been dealt with, and even dealt with more adequately in the conference report than was dealt with by the provision as it passed the Senate.

So I am one of those—like many others here—who are not totally satisfled with the way the conference committee dealt with my contribution to the package. But here, again, it is something. We have never dealt with these issues before. It is a start, and we hope there will be greater accomplishments down the road.

The omission of provisions on aliens, I am going to support the provisions, because I am not going to let down the 36 million Americans who depend upon social security. Consequently, I am going to support the compromise.

Mr. President, we have finally reached that point when we must make a decision on the fate of the social security system. We are all aware of the hard work and bargaining that shaped this package. Once again, I want to compliment all the individuals who served on the Commission and their staff for their tremendous efforts. Without the foundation laid by the Commission report, I fear we would not now be within the grasp of final passage.

As I have indicated previously, I was disappointed that the original plan, recommended by the National Commission. It left a third of the long-term problem unresolved, and placed far too heavy an emphasis on tax increases. We in the Senate Finance Committee were able to modify and supplement that plan until it was acceptable not only to myself, but to 17 of my colleagues. With further modifications, the bill passed the Senate by an overwhelming 88-to-9 vote.

With the arrival of the conference report, we are at the end of that amending and fine-tuning process. We now have one last vote to cast. From the time the plan left the Commissioners' hands to the present, it has been shaped and amended to achieve the broadest possible support.

In accordance with the resolution, we have moved up the effective date of the so-called COLA stabilizer, and have therefore provided a reasonable fail-safe plan. The Senate Finance Committee had adopted a prudent and fair fail-safe measure with Senator Low's committee amendment, but I can also lend my support to this alternative. Although the Senate had opted for a combination of measures to solve the long-term funding gap, I find the House's version of the retirement age increase to be acceptable.

I am able to support this ultimate plan for several reasons. While it still contains many provisions I could not support in isolation, it is obvious careful consideration has been given to the construction of such a package. I have outlined on numerous occasions those provisions I endorsed, and those which I found difficult to accept. I will not further elaborate on every provision and the merits of each. Suffice it to say that I am willing to vote for this plan in order to signal to every American that we are committed to social security and its preservation.

We have been playing politics with this issue for far too long. We have caused a great deal of fear and uncertainty in the minds of a great many people. We have let down many Americans down with our past efforts in resolving problem areas in social security.

With the passage of this bill we can say to this Nation's elderly: "You will get your benefit checks." To the current working population we can assure them that a plan will be there when it is their turn to collect.

No one is claiming this bill is a perfect plan, but it does meet both the short- and long-term needs in funding, and does so in a manner which causes every individual touched by social security to share in the sacrifices required to return the system to solvency. Those goals have guided my deliberations throughout this long process, and I am therefore able to lend my support to this package.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I came here tonight truly undecided. I spent a few hours looking at the matter, and I think the majority leader is right. We should adopt the conference report. If it does not have everything we want in it, I think we have an ample opportunity to fix it.

I think those who are undecided ought to decide whether or not their precise and specific objection is worth as much as the social security system. That is the balance—a system that has served us well, and it is serving millions of Americans. If you look at it that way, I think you cannot come out with any other way than to say that, with all our efforts, we have come up with something relatively good in terms of trying to save the basic system on which so many people depend. I hope we will adopt the conference report.

Mr. BRADLEY. Mr. President, I know it is late, and I shall be brief.

I ask my colleagues before they cast this vote to think of the senior citizens that they have talked with in the last 2 years. Think of the faces that they have seen, the fear and confusion. Think of the groups. Think of the senior citizens that have given you as a Senator in their belief that indeed you might make it right. Think of the workers that you have talked to in the last couple years, who have seen their taxes go up 363 percent since 1972, and heading higher, who do not believe that you say indeed you think you can get a solution and might actually convince them that social security will be there when they are ready to retire.

Mr. President, social security is the best expression of community that we have in this country today.

This has been a long and painful battle. I hope the Senate tonight, though, will reaffirm the bonds of that community and support this conference report.

Mr. STEMMERG. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate.

Mr. President, let me make clear that we had our first-class debate here tonight. This is like old times. Both sides splendidly presented these major points of great concern and far-reaching consequences.

I stand in my position by just saying that some of these provisions were better, but we have to have a plan that is sound and dependable, and I think the time has come, as the majority leader said, when we have to have it now.

The faults of this bill are human faults because the finest talent collected in modern times on this far-reaching problem.

I am glad to support the bill.

Mr. ABDNOR. Mr. President, today marks another historic moment in the history of the social security program. I commend my colleagues for reaching consensus on this issue. The task was not easy because widely varying views exist on the purpose and objectives of social security. I also extend my heartfelt thanks and gratitude to the members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, whose leadership and courage forged the foundation of the legislation now before us.

In addition, many organizations have made substantive contributions to this legislative effort. Among them are the Employee Benefit Research Institute, American Enterprise Institute, American Association for Retired Persons, Heritage Foundation, Chamber of Commerce, and National Federation of Independent Business. I was impressed with the sound, sensible, and practical suggestions of these groups. Their involvement was constructive and provided valuable ideas.

Besides receiving information from these organizations representing people throughout the Nation, I also received suggestions and comments from hundreds of South Dakota citizens during the past year. Their input was very helpful and revealed to me the concerns and expectations of people of all ages and incomes.

The social security system has been in existence for almost 50 years. The program has survived both social and economic changes, and today resembles only partially the original plan. Our Nation places the elderly in prominence and high regard and has a strong social commitment to assisting disabled, and social security properly addresses those priorities. In the 1980's the need for health care assistance was recognized and Medicare was created to attend to providing elderly and disabled citizens with medical services at reasonable rates. When our economy was subjected to inflation, the Congress benevolently protected social security beneficiaries with cost-of-living adjustments.
None of these major changes is bad; on the contrary, providing income and health security to these citizens strengthens the economic and social framework of the Nation. It speaks well of the integrity of our society. We must underscore, however, whether we as a nation can afford to extend further such generosity and charity. We Members of Congress must seek to answer important and arduous questions about what our economy can provide in the years ahead.

Twice in the past 6 years the social security system has been brought to its knees. Benefit payments have far exceeded contributions for years, the undisputed outcome being trust fund depletion. Before the 1977 corrections were adopted, a wave of insecurity swept over the elderly of America; the same disturbing occurrence is taking place today. I find it ironic that the Congress cannot quell the fears felt by the American public. What have we done, and what can be done to restore the confidence of the people?

We must be realistic. We must be truthful. We must restore this prominent social institution to accommodate our complex needs. Economic and demographic forces are dynamic influences on the financial condition of the social security system, and we owe it to all Americans—both contributors and beneficiaries—to implement policies which are fair to everyone. We cannot ignore the fact that a dollar more in benefits is a dollar more burden to the taxpayer. We must admit there is no "free lunch."

We cannot ignore the fact that the number of persons over the age of 65 is growing twice as fast as the population as a whole. We must accept the fact that in the future fewer workers will be supporting each retiree. Adjusted for inflation, a person retiring in 1960 can expect to receive $73 in benefits for every dollar contributed. Even this figure is expected to reach more than twice the amount in benefits than was paid into the system. No private pension plan gives retirees such an excellent return on investment. Where will the money for benefits come from then?

The answer is easy enough: today's taxpayer; it is just hard to admit. No longer is social security a "pay as you go" system. The initial employee payroll tax was a maximum of $30 per year and ended that way until 1950. Adjusted for inflation, this figure would be about $180 today. But the average worker today is paying over five times that amount—$1,000—in annual payroll taxes. Is it fair for today's workers to endure an ever-increasing tax burden to support our Nation's elderly? Social security taxes were increased dramatically in 1977. In fact, one-fourth of American taxpayers now pay more into social security than they pay in income taxes. Despite these awesome taxes, the trust fund is still going broke. Tragically, young persons sense the futility of their contributions. In 1981, a study indicated 70 percent of persons aged 18 to 29 doubted that their full benefits would be paid.

And, let us remember, the young of today are the elders of tomorrow. Our obligation is no less to the elders of tomorrow than to the elders of today. After social security is put back on a sounder footing by our action today, I recommend that this body continue to pay attention to the issue of retirement security. We have a strong nation comprised of strong people. Let us reevaluate the Government's role in retirement planning.

We are off to a good start already. In 1981 we provided a new incentive to save for retirement. What a great idea it was to allow all Americans to start individual retirement accounts. Millions of workers are also involved in pensions, Keogh plans, annuities and other savings and investment opportunities. In 1950 about 25 percent of all private sector workers participated in private pension plans. That figure is almost double today, and after the turn of the century, over 85 percent of all workers will be eligible for pension benefits. It is encouraging that more and more workers are wisely planning for the future.

The asset and equity base of retired people is solid and growing. Over 70 percent of all retired persons live in owner-occupied houses. In fact, 75 percent of retired homeowners reported no mortgage on their residence. Savings, other financial assets, land and business ownership comprise other major assets owned by retirees. Over half of all social security beneficiaries have other sources of income; one-third have other assets, which exceed their social security payments. The fact is that elderly persons have a secure financial future. Not surprisingly, 80 percent of all eligible workers opt for early retirement.

I mention the importance of regarding social security as a program to augment other retirement planning. The Government cannot provide everything for everyone retiring. For those who have not had the fortune of adequate preparation for retirement, this program offers additional assistance. Not by accident does social security extend a greater share of benefits to lower income households; it does so by design and with the support of the American people. Nothing would do more to insulate the bright outlook for social security than a healthy, growing economy, as our Nation's ability to produce increases, our standard of living increases as well, and as does our capacity to provide more to all facets of our society.

As personal income grows, the payroll tax base grows. Since present taxes are paying for current benefits, our ability to provide those benefits is enhanced.

I am encouraged by the recent trend of Congress to devote more attention to economic matters. We owe it to the American public to adopt Federal laws and fiscal and monetary policies which foster economic incentives and promote ample saving and investment. Through those actions future growth can be sustained.

The historical annual real growth rate of our economy since World War II (1941-1974) averaged 3 percent, but in the last 5 years our performance has fallen far short of that average. If our economy would grow by just 2 percent a year in real terms for 10 years, our wage and salary base would expand by more than $300 billion. Most of the increase would be subject to social security payroll taxes, thereby improving the trust fund substantially.

As our economy recovers from the current recession, let us not forget the harm caused by the unfortunate side effects of inflation. All saving and investment pools—including the social security trust funds—cannot withstand the erosion of value from inflation. Each one percentage point of inflation costs the trust funds an additional $1.5 billion a year. Inflation can also erode the asset base of people saving for retirement. In 1980, elderly people possessed some $4 billion in financial assets. Because inflation was 13.5 percent, most assets earned a negative rate of return; the net result was a depreciation in their financial picture. This uncertainty caused by inflation should not be tolerated in the future.

To insure the long-term solvency of social security, let us strive to maintain fairness to all. If our standard of living rises, let all share in the prosperity; but if economic problems befall America, let no segment of society bear a disproportionate share of the burden.

To protect the financial foundation of social security from economic uncertainties of the future, we must keep the program flexible. The so-called fall safe provision to modify cost-of-living adjustments during periods of trust fund shortfalls is a fair approach to protect both beneficiary and taxpayer. This type of built-in flexibility can only strengthen the system.

I am not only optimistic about the future of America and social security; I am excited. We are rebuilding our economic base today and creating opportunities for tomorrow. Cooperation is the key to a successful future. We can keep our country strong by uniting people of all ages and incomes. Let us keep social security—a cornerstone of income protection—an institution we can rely on. The best way to accomplish this is to promote fairness and equity.

Again, Mr. President, I join my colleagues in supporting the legislation before us. On behalf of all citizens, we are sustaining one of the most worthwhile programs of the U.S. Government.

LEGISLATIVE HISTORY FOR SOCIAL SECURITY

PAYMASTER PROVISION

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I want to commend the conferees for their fine work on this vital legislation, and to comment on one of the Senate amendments which corrects an unintended double taxation which harms uninsured, unreimbursable employers’ share of FICA by the regionalized medical school for the States of Washington, Alaska, Montana, and Idaho.

The House and Senate bills and the conference report extend employees’ social security coverage to all employees of nonprofit organizations. As a result, employees of such organizations who are also employed by a State university of a State which has agreed to provide social security coverage to its employees under section 218 of the Social Security Act would have been, without this amendment, subject to unreimbursable double taxation for the wages of the same individual to all employees of nonprofit organizations. As a result, employees of such organizations who are also employed by a State university of a State which has agreed to provide social security coverage to its employees under section 218 of the Social Security Act would have been, without this amendment, subject to unreimbursable double taxation for the wages of the same individual to all employees of nonprofit organizations. As a result, employees of such organizations who are also employed by a State university of a State which has agreed to provide social security coverage to its employees under section 218 of the Social Security Act would have been, without this amendment, subject to unreimbursable double taxation for the wages of the same individual to all employees of nonprofit organizations.

The amendment adopted in the conference report, a State university and nonprofit organization which meet the stated requirements are considered to be related corporations under section 3121(s) of the Code. Furthermore, solely for purposes of sections 3101 through 3129 of the Code, a portion of the remuneration actually paid by the nonprofit organization from its own funds and on its own paychecks will be deemed to have been paid by the university. Such remuneration will not be subject to the section 3102 deduction from the employee’s wages or to the section 3111 employer tax since employment by a State is not subject to social security taxation under sections 3101, 3102 and 3111 of the Code. Such employment is subject to social security coverage only under the provisions of section 3101, subsection (a) of the Code. The portion of remuneration paid by the related nonprofit organization, which is deemed paid by the university is that portion which, when added to the total amount of remuneration actually paid by the university during the entire calendar year, exceeds the social security wage and contribution base. If the employee by the end of the calendar year has been paid less than the wage and contribution base by the university, that part of the employee’s remuneration paid by the nonprofit organization needed to bring his entire compensation up to the wage and benefit base will retain its character as wages paid by the nonprofit organization and therefore will be subject to the social security tax. Thus, if the employee by the end of the year has been paid an amount equal to or greater than the wage and contribution base by the university, then the entire amount paid by the nonprofit organization will be considered as paid by the university.

The amendment on the Senate floor, the House and conference report wages subject to social security tax. Although present law prevents longitudinal double taxation where one nonprofit organization pays the other for the State or the Federal purposes of section 3111 of the Code, a portion of the remuneration actually paid by the nonprofit organization from its own funds and on its own paychecks will be deemed to have been paid by the university. Such remuneration will not be subject to the section 3102 deduction from the employee’s wages or to the section 3111 employer tax since employment by a State is not subject to social security taxation under sections 3101, 3102 and 3111 of the Code. Such employment is subject to social security coverage only under the provisions of section 3101, subsection (a) of the Code. The portion of remuneration paid by the related nonprofit organization, which is deemed paid by the university is that portion which, when added to the total amount of remuneration actually paid by the university during the entire calendar year, exceeds the social security wage and contribution base. If the employee by the end of the calendar year has been paid less than the wage and contribution base by the university, that part of the employee’s remuneration paid by the nonprofit organization needed to bring his entire compensation up to the wage and benefit base will retain its character as wages paid by the nonprofit organization and therefore will be subject to the social security tax. Thus, if the employee by the end of the year has been paid an amount equal to or greater than the wage and contribution base by the university, then the entire amount paid by the nonprofit organization will be considered as paid by the university.

The determination of whether remuneration paid by the nonprofit organization, when added to remuneration paid by the university under the calendar year, exceeds the wage and contribution base, is intended that social security contributions will be made in full on the base amount or to pay or make a return of social security contributions.

The period in which remuneration to date paid by the university to the employee under the social security reporting period, the period in which the employee permanently terminates employment, or the last reporting period for the calendar year. Any overpayments of the employer tax will be the subject of a claim for refund or credit by the nonprofit organization to the Internal Revenue Service.

Mr. HAWKINS. Mr. President, I want to join my colleagues in praising the 15 members of the National Commission on Social Security Reform, who contributed a great deal of their time and expertise to solving a very grave crisis in our country. In December 1981, President Reagan gathered together these experts to examine the current and long-term financial condition of the social security trust funds, to identify the problems that may threaten long-term solvency of the funds, to analyze solutions to such problems, and to make recommendations to the Federal Government.

An undertaking requires great skill, determination, and, above all, patience. While I do not concur with all their recommendations, I believe they should be commended for successfully accomplishing a mission once thought to be impossible.

I have always been a strong supporter of the social security program because of its spirit and intent. While Florida is the seventh largest State in terms of population, Florida ranks third in the total number of Social Security beneficiaries. In 1981, the total amount paid from retirement, survivors, and disability insurance trust funds was $140 billion. Florida received $8 billion of that amount, making Florida the fourth largest State in terms of social security receipts.

The House and Senate bills and the conference report extend employees’ social security coverage to all employees of nonprofit organizations. As a result, employees of such organizations who are also employed by a State university of a State which has agreed to provide social security coverage to its employees under section 218 of the Social Security Act would have been, without this amendment, subject to unreimbursable double taxation for the wages of the same individual to all employees of nonprofit organizations. voted for H.R. 1900 as amended, reluctantly. This legislation, based on the Commission's recommendations, is a very fragile compromise. Benefit checks are some provisions with which I disagree, it does make many worthwhile reforms. But what really prompted me to vote for this bill was sheer necessity. If Congress did not act immediately to make some changes in the social security program, benefit checks would be delayed indefinitely. This legislation is not perfect but I voted for this legislation because it will preserve and protect the social security system for the time being. Some provisions are absurd but I cannot make the perfect the enemy of the good.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am going to support the conference report on the social security package because it represents the best available hope of insuring the solvency of the system, both in the short and long run, and it contains critically needed provisions for the unemployed.

But as a compromise, it includes elements which, standing alone, I could never support. Raising the retirement age by the 2027 risk imposing significant hardship on those workers who are engaged in strenuous activities. During Senate consideration of this bill, I supported the Bradley amendment which would have taken steps to soften the impact of increasing the retirement age on these workers. The amendment was not adopted. However, between now and the year 2000 when the phase-in will begin over a 6-year period to age 66, the Congress must monitor closely whether the improvements in health care are likely to be reflected in the increased stamina of workers in soliciting of time if increasing the retirement age is a realistic and humane goal.

Further, the tax increases which have been imposed on self-employed individuals, even after taking into account the tax credit designed to ease the burden, stretch to the limit what any small business owner can be expected to absorb. These tax increases, along with those affecting all other workers, only merit consideration when they are part of a package which have as its goal something as important as insuring the solvency of the social security system.

In addition, the coverage of new Federal employees in social security without having first set up a supplementary pension system for them is a precipitous action. Fortunately, this coverage will not begin until 1984, leaving the Congress some time to address this situation in an equitable fashion.

These are just some of the concerns I have about this package. They are troubling. But there is for all of us one overriding concern—saving the social security system. It is primarily for this reason that I am voting for the package.

Some further points. I am pleased to see that this legislation includes an extension of the Federal supplemental compensation program, which provides unemployment benefits on top of both the regular State benefits of 26 weeks and the extended benefits of 13 weeks for which some States are eligible. This program is set to expire on March 31 and is now extended to September 30. In the first week of this session of the Congress I introduced legislation to extend the program until September 30, and I am pleased to see that proposal included as part of the package. Also, this bill contains up to an additional 10 weeks of unemployment benefits for those workers in Michigan who will have exhausted their Federal unemployment benefits by the end of this month. The people of Michigan, who are now enduring the 39th consecutive month of double digit unemployment need this extra assistance.

In addition, I was pleased to see that the conference report retains the amendment that I offered which will do away with the requirement that Michigan pay interest on the interest it owes for loans it has taken out from the Federal unemployment trust fund and on which it has deferred payment. This amendment will save Michigan $11 million over the next four years. At a time of fiscal crisis on the State level, every little bit helps. For the same reason, I was also pleased to see that the package includes a reduction in the rate of interest charged on these loans for those States, like Michigan, which are willing to take extraordinary steps to improve the solvency of their State unemployment compensation programs.

I regret, however, that the conference did not retain two other amendments which picked up issues that were passed by the Senate. The first amendment which I offered with strong bipartisan support, would have given widows between the ages of 55 and 60 a transition social security benefit for 6 months so that they could have a chance to adjust to the death of their spouse and to the requirements of the work force, which they may be entering for the first time in 20 or 30 years after a lifetime of service to their husbands and families. I have been seeking action on this issue for a "widow's gap" since October of 1981, and I am indebted to Eve Bialek, president of the Widows' Organization of Dearborn, Mich., for bringing this issue to my attention. The cost of this amendment was modest and well within the capacity of the current Social Security trust fund. I will be pursuing this issue again during the hearings before the Finance Committee which have been promised on this issue and am pleased that the chairman will be supporting my effort to see that this happens.

The second amendment which I offered but which did not survive the conference pledged the full faith and credit of the United States in support of the payment of accrued benefits under the civil service retirement annuity plans for present Federal employees. Although the bipartisan language was dropped in the conference, I am pleased to see that it gave the Senate conferees' leverage so that they could successfully insist on the language in the original Senate bill which contained new assurances to current and retired Federal employees that the House version lacked.

The conference report on the social security package has many flaws. If I had been able to, I would have done some things differently. But the social security system must be saved, and Federal employees must be preserved one of Franklin D. Roosevelt's crowning achievements. But even more, we have come to grips with a politically explosive issue of great importance to tens of millions of Americans—and we have fashioned a successful compromise acceptable to the majority of the Congress. By doing, we have demonstrated that our system of government deserves the respect and trust of the people it represents.

Mr. President, it is my conviction that the bill before us today is a fair and just compromise. It is very much like the set of recommendations approved by the National Commission on Social Security Reform, on which I have the honor to serve.

No one of the Commissioners was satisfied with every recommendation. No one of my colleagues here today is completely satisfied with every part of this legislation. But the final bill retains the basic elements of a package which the Washington Post has generously described as being "as close to perfect as any social security revision can ever be."

The Commission report did not include a recommendation for solving all of the long-term social security financing problems. That was left to the Congress. The bill that we agreed to in conference raises the retirement age to 67 without cutting benefits as much... as under the Senate version. In fact, whereas under the Senate version benefits would have been reduced by an equal to 0.8 percent of payroll, the final bill limits the benefit reduction to 0.68 percent. This, I would suggest, is a considerable improvement.

I would like to conclude by extending my heartfelt appreciation for the efforts of my colleagues who served with me on the Commission, and especially to the Senator from Kansas for his tireless work on the Commission, in the Finance Committee, and most recently in the Senate Finance Committee. Great many other people have devoted long hours and hard work toward an end that is finally in sight, and while I cannot thank each by name, permit me to extend my sincere gratitude. And to all my colleagues here with me today, I share with you in the pride of a truly historic achievement.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I am pleased to vote for passage of the social security financing bill to implement the essential elements of the recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform. The recent financial problems of the social security system have placed benefit payments in jeopardy. I find it unfortunate that elderly and retired citizens should have to be concerned that their monthly social security checks will not arrive on time. The legislation which the Senate has approved assures that benefits will continue to flow for the rest of this decade and for a long time beyond. It should lay to rest the fears of the people who depend on social security for their livelihood.

The recommendations of the National Commission on Social Security Reform were developed after a year of study. They struck a compromise between conflicting points of view on the proper balance between the level of payroll taxes, the level of benefits, and the role of general revenues. Maintaining the integrity of the package of recommendations, keeping all the essential elements intact, has been crucial to the success of this effort to safeguard social security benefits. In general, my own views on the individual elements of the package have been guided by the need to keep the compromise intact and to work with every provision in the bill, but I thought the package as a whole achieved the very important goal of stabilizing the social security system. Workers and beneficiaries alike have some unpleasant memories of past years, and the cure could be lasting. The system will continue to function and fulfill its unique mission of providing vital benefits to retired workers, widows, orphans, and disabled people.

From a program providing old age benefits to workers in a limited number of job categories, social security has grown to include workers in virtually all jobs, and their spouses, children, and survivors. Benefits have also been provided for those who are unable to work because of a disability, and their families. These benefits are protected from inflation through annual cost-of-living adjustments. With 36 million beneficiaries and over 200 million workers paying payroll taxes to support the system and build their own eligibility for benefits, no other Government program, except the mail, affects the lives of so many citizens. Social security has been a success; it must not be allowed to falter. The legislation approved today will continue to serve the needs of the elderly and the disabled today and tomorrow.

The major provisions of the bill include: Delaying the 1983 cost-of-living adjustment for 6 months, from July to January, with future annual adjustments coming every January; moving up payroll tax increases already scheduled for 1985 and 1990; taxing one-half the benefits of high-income beneficiaries; bringing the new Federal employees and the President, Vice President, current Members of Congress, and congressional staff into the social security system beginning January 1, 1984; and increasing the tax rate on self-employed individuals to equal the combined rate of employees and employers. To offset the tax increase in 1984, a one-time tax credit equal to the increased payroll tax will be given to employees. The bill also includes several provisions which will not have an effect for a decade or more, including phasing out the retirement earning test for people 65 and older beginning in 1990, gradually increasing the credit for delaying retirement beyond the normal retirement age from 3 percent to 8 percent between 1990 and 2010, and gradually increasing the age for full retirement benefits to 67, beginning in the next century.

Mr. President, several features in the legislation provide safety valves if the economy does not do as well as projected and the system again needs some short-term assistance to meet its benefit obligations. An immediate lump-sum cash payment will also be made from the general fund of the Treasury to finance benefits provided for military service before 1957, instead of the annual payments that have been made in the past.

During the Senate debate on this bill a number of amendments were offered. One of the most controversial and difficult issues involved the question of including new Federal employees under the social security system and the related question of a supplemental retirement system for them. The bill before the Senate would have covered new Federal employees under social security, but made no changes in the existing civil service retirement system. As a result, new employees would be paying into both systems and receiving unnecessary duplicate coverage. Of strong and additional concern to me is the future soundness of the civil service retirement system for current employees. Federal employees certainly have as much right to assurances that their retirement benefits will be paid in the future as do social security beneficiaries. The important considerations in my thinking about the amendment to delay putting new employees into the system until a supplemental system could be developed. When this proposal failed, I supported the Long amendment to delay putting new employees in the social security system until a supplemental plan is put into law.

Unfortunately the House version of the social security bill did not include protection similar to the Long amendment and the conference report resolving the differences between the House and Senate bills treated it either. I regret this inaction. Although the social security legislation does not address the concerns of current and future Federal employees about their retirement system in the years to come, Congress must not ignore this issue. I will do my best to see that the concerns of these employees are given all due attention as soon as possible.

Another amendment considered by the Senate dealt with the age for full retirement benefits. The amendment, which was defeated, would have raised the retirement age to 68. I prefer that the age remain as it is in existing law, but I reluctantly accept the age 67 provision in the final bill. In return for raising the age to 67, the conference agreement has deleted a provision which would have slightly reduced the benefits in the future.

Because of the increase in the retirement age, during the Senate debate, I supported the Bradley amendment to establish a special disability program to ease the effect of the increased retirement age on workers who are not healthy enough to continue working. They are not ill enough to qualify for the regular social security disability program. This proposal was defeated.

Current workers will have to pay slightly higher taxes sooner than previously planned and beneficiaries will have to wait a few months for their benefits to catch up with inflation. The prospect of these changes will not be welcomed by workers whose taxes will go up or by those beneficiaries missing their benefit increase in July. However, these sacrifices are not the alternative—which would be the failure of social security to pay its benefits on time. In addition, these changes are accompanied by some improvements in benefits and relief for taxpayers. All in all, I was pleased to support the bill which assures the continuation of the social security system.

Mr. President, there is one aspect of the prospective reimbursement system that I would like to discuss briefly with the manager of the bill and that is the matter of separate urban and rural reimbursement rates.

Mr. President, I understand the bill, it provides a separate reimbursement rate for hospitals located in urban areas—referred to as SMSA’s (Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas) and hospitals located in rural areas often referred to as non-SMSA’s.

The logic underlying that distinction is that the market basket of goods and labor purchased by hospitals in urban areas will be higher than those located in rural areas. Those assumptions have been challenged in some quarters and the conference wisely requested the Secretary of Health and Human Services to question and report back to the Congress on the possibility of a single nationwide reimbursement rate in the future.

My concern is that, in the interim, there may be some extraordinary cases which would result from a rigid adherence to the SMSA/non-SMSA distinction, and would require remedy before we receive the Secretary’s report.

For example, in my own State, Watertown Memorial Hospital faces a problem based upon a fluke of geography. Watertown Memorial is one of two hospitals, located just 12 miles apart, which draw their employees from the Oconomowoc labor market. Under the committee’s bill, the one hospital, which is located just inside the SMSA line, would be reimbursed at the higher urban rate; Watertown Memorial which is located just outside the SMSA line, would be reimbursed at the lower rural rate. Needless to say, both hospitals face the same labor costs.

Thus, instead of properly recognizing and reimbursing higher labor costs as the SMSA/non-SMSA distinctions were meant to do, the system in this case inadvertently hurts one hospital while treating the other hospital properly.

Mr. President, the answer to the Senator’s question is the conferences recognized the fact that it was impossible to fully anticipate every exceptional or extraordinary case. That is why we adopted a House provision, enabling the Secretary, by regulation, to make such adjustments or exceptions that the Secretary deems necessary.

While the Senator recognizes that I am not in a position to judge the merits of the case he has outlined, the Secretary would be given the opportunity to identify different types of adjustments and exceptions.

I was to hope that the Department would use that authority very sparingly. Exceptions criteria should be carefully crafted to assure that hardship cases are given careful consideration without encouraging frivolous appeals by other hospitals.

Mr. PROXMIRE. Mr. President, if the Secretary would yield on that point, I agree completely. This Senator would be the last one to support special interest exemptions to this new reimbursement system. The burden of proof must remain on hospitals to prove their case—clearly, forcefully, convincingly.

My sole concern is that during the transition to this new system that the Secretary have the flexibility to grant hardship exemptions if they are warranted by the facts. I am reassured by the Senator’s comments that this is the case.

I thank the Senator.

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, this social security measure does not please me totally just as it apparently does not please many others. I was opposed to increasing the age of retirement in the Social Security proposals in the Finance Committee. I likewise voiced my disapproval of increasing the retirement age in the conference committee this afternoon.

Nonetheless, this was the best bill we could get and we must pass this legislation in order to insure the solvency of the social security fund so it will be there to pay benefits for millions of current retirees and millions of future retirees.

The House was adamant on many provisions, including the retirement age of 67.

It is my fervent hope that what we have done in this measure will insure the social security fund’s solvency for as long as we can foresee into the next century.

Mr. STENNIS. Mr. President, this bill makes a fair start and a step forward toward necessary reform of our social security system, but it is by no means to the demands of our present industrial economy and the needs of our people generally.

In the course of this debate, I hope that all of us have obtained a fair clearer view of our needs and the requirements of a fair system that can be properly maintained over the years. The debate has shown us that we must continue to have active congressional attention to the problem of the social security system.

We must continue to provide careful scrutiny to the operation of the system so that in the future we do not allow it to come close to the point of collapse as it has now. We cannot just leave it alone now that we have put together this reform package. We must continue to watch it and supervise it carefully. It can be a fiscal miracle, aside as a special function of the Federal budget will help us in this effort.

The Federal Government has an obligation to effectively police the entire social security operation. Effective management, sound administration, and careful surveillance of the entire system are essential. Just as we must prevent and eliminate waste, fraud and abuse, so also must we insist on the best business management of the social security trust funds.

During the course of the debate we have heard differing projections about how much particular provisions of this legislation will cost. In part these figures will depend upon how well the individual management organizations perform. This merely points up the need for Congress to continue its oversight over social security in order to assure that the system remains solvent, that it stands on a sound financial basis, and that it is operation in a responsible manner.

Like most broad, sweeping departments or activities of Government, there are some elements of this measure that I do not favor. However, after a deep study during several months concerning the present shortcomings and conditions of our system, it is clear to me that some drastic changes must be made promptly. We must build the system on a more sound foundation and with adequate financing.

I accept and support the present bill in spite of its objectionable features because it is a new and sounder base for an improved social security system as a whole. It can be improved with proper attention and diligence by our present and future Congresses.

The PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.
