

Zach Martin

Direction of Operations National Disability Rights Network

Zach Martin is the Deputy Director of Special Projects for the National Disability Rights Network. NDRN is the membership association of the federally mandated nationwide network of protection and advocacy agencies (P&As). These agencies provide free legally based advocacy to people with disabilities who have been discriminated against on the basis of disability. Mr. Martin's areas of expertise include: Community Monitoring, Abuse and Neglect Investigation, data management, and data analytics. Mr. Martin supports all NDRN initiatives in these areas, including: arranging and delivering trainings for P&As. Zach has spent the past 2 decades supporting individual advocacy, engaging in systemic advocacy, and community monitoring in the National Capitol region. Before coming to NDRN, he worked specifically in the areas of person directed supports and with self-advocates to expand voting opportunities in Washington, D.C.
