If you’re blind or have low vision

If you’re blind, we have special rules that allow you to receive benefits when you are unable to work.

We pay benefits to people who are blind under two programs: the Social Security Disability Insurance program and the Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program. The medical rules we use to decide whether you are blind are the same for each program. Other rules are different. We explain the different rules for each program below.

You can get disability benefits if you’re blind

You may qualify for Social Security or SSI disability benefits if you’re blind. We consider you to be blind if your vision can’t be corrected to better than 20/200 in your better eye or if your visual field is 20 degrees or less in your better eye for a period that lasted or is expected to last at least 12 months.

You can get disability benefits even if you’re not blind

If your vision doesn’t meet Social Security’s definition of blindness, you may still qualify for disability benefits if your vision problems alone, or combined with other health problems, prevent you from working. For Social Security disability benefits, you must also have worked long enough in a job where you paid Social Security taxes. For SSI payments based on disability and blindness, you need not have worked, but your income and resources must be under certain dollar limits.

How you qualify for Social Security disability benefits

When you work and pay Social Security taxes, you earn credits that count toward future Social Security benefits.

If you’re blind, you can earn credits anytime during your working years. Credits for your work after you become blind can be used to qualify you for benefits if you don’t have enough credits at the time you become blind.

Also, if you don’t have enough credits to get Social Security disability benefits based on your own earnings, you may be able to get benefits based on the earnings of one of your parents or your spouse.
For more information about Social Security disability benefits, contact us to get Disability Benefits (Publication No. 05-10029). This booklet also is available in Braille and other formats.

Disability freeze

There is a special rule that may help you get higher retirement or disability benefits someday. You can use this rule if you are blind but aren’t getting disability benefits now because you are still working. If your earnings are lower because of your blindness, we can exclude those years when we calculate your Social Security retirement or disability benefit in the future. Because Social Security benefits are based on your average lifetime earnings, your benefit will be higher if we don’t count those years. We call this rule a “disability freeze.” Contact us if you want to file for this “freeze.”

You can get SSI disability payments

SSI payments are based on need. Your income and resources must be less than certain dollar limits. The income limits vary from one state to another. You need not have worked under Social Security to qualify for SSI. Ask your local Social Security office about the income limits in your state and contact us for Supplemental Security Income (SSI) (Publication No. 05-11000). This booklet is also available in Braille and other formats.

You can work while receiving benefits

Rules, called “work incentives,” make it easier for people receiving disability benefits to work. People getting Social Security disability benefits can continue to receive their benefits when they work as long as their earnings are not more than an amount set by law. If you’re receiving Social Security disability benefits and you’re blind, you can earn as much as $1,950 a month in 2017. This is higher than the earnings limit of $1,170 a month that applies to disabled workers who aren’t blind. The earnings limits usually change each year.

Additionally, if you’re blind and self-employed, we don’t evaluate the time you spend working in your business as we do for people who aren’t blind. This means you can be doing a lot of work for your business, but still receive disability benefits, as long as your net profit averages $1,950 or less a month in 2017.
Work figured differently after age 55

If you are age 55 or older, and blind, we use determination rules about work for you that are different from the rules we use for people who aren’t blind. After age 55, even if your earnings exceed $1,950 a month in 2017, benefits are only suspended, not terminated, if the work you’re doing requires a lower level of skill and ability than what you did before you reached 55. We’ll pay you disability benefits for any month your earnings fall below this limit.

Different work incentives apply to people getting SSI.

For more information about all the work incentives for people who receive either Social Security disability or SSI disability, contact us and ask for Working While Disabled — How We Can Help (Publication No. 05-10095). This booklet is also available in Braille and other formats.
